Socially, the Dakota originally consisted of a large number of local groups or bands, and, although there was a certain tendency to encourage marriage outside the band, these divisions were not true gentes, remembered blood relationship, according to Clark, being the only bar to marriage. Personal fitness and popularity determined chieftainship more than heredity, but where descent played any part it was usually from father to son. The tipi might belong to either parent and was obtained by that parent through some ancestor who had had its character revealed in a dream or who had captured it in war. The authority of the chief was limited by the band council, without whose approbation little or nothing could be accomplished. War parties were recruited by individuals who had acquired reputation as successful leaders, while the shamans formulated ceremonial dances and farewells for them. Polygamy was common, the wives occupying different sides of the tipi. Remains of the dead were usually, though not invariably, placed on scaffolds.

Early explorers usually distinguished these people into an Eastern or Forest and a Western or Prairie division. A more complete and accurate classification, one which is also recognized by the people themselves, is the following:

1. Mdewakanton; 2. Wahpeton; 3. Wahpekute; 4. Sisseton; 5. Yankton; 6. Yanktonai; 7. Teton, each of which is again subdivided into bands and subbands. These seven main divisions are often known as "the seven council fires." The first four named together constitute the Isanyati, Santee, or eastern division, of which the Mdewakanton appear to be the original nucleus, and speak one dialect. Their home was in Minnesota prior to the outbreak of 1862. The Yankton and Yanktonai—the latter subdivided into (a) Upper and (b) Hunkpatina or Lower—held the middle territory between L. Traverse and Missouri r. in E. Dakota, and together spoke one dialect, from which the Assiniboin was an offshoot. The great Teton division, with its subdivisions, Upper and Lower Brulé, Oglala, Sans Arcs, Sisasapa or Blackfoot, Miniconjou, Oohenonpa or Two Kettle, Hunkpapa, etc., and comprising together more than half the nation, held the whole tribal territory w. of the Missouri and spoke one dialect.

The following are names of divisions, groups, or bands that are spoken of as pertaining to the Dakota. Some of these have not been identified; others are mere temporary geographical or local bands: Black Tiger, Broken Arrows, Cascarba, Cazazhita, Chanshushka, Chasmuna, Cheokhba, Cheyenne Sioux, Congewichacha, Farmer's band, Fire Lodge, Flandreau Indians, Gens du Large, Grand Saux, Grey Eagle, Horheton, Late Comedu, Lean Bear, Long Sioux, Menostamenton, Micacoupsiba, Minisha, Neeconweegee, Nehogatawonahs, Newstarton, Northern Sioux, Ocatametonets, Ohahkaskatohyante, Oughetgeodaton, Oujatespouitons, Pehiptecila, Pineshow, Psinchaton, Psinoumanitons, Psinoutanhinhintons, Rattling Moccasin, Red Leg's band, Redwood, Shahsweentowahs, Sioux of the Broad Leaf, Sioux of the Des Moyan, Sioux of the East, Sioux of the Meadows, Sioux of the West, Sioux of the Woods, Sioux of the Lakes, Sioux of the River St Peter's, Souon, Star band, Talonapi, Tashunkeetoc, Tateibombu's band, Tatkannai, Ticiitan, Touchouasintons, Traverse de Sioux, Upper Sioux, Waktonila, White Cap Indians, White Eagle band, Wiattachechah.

In 1904 the Dakota were distributed among the following agencies and school superintendencies: Cheyenne River (Miniconjou, Sans Arcs, and Two Kettle), 2,477; Crow Creek (Lower Yanktonai), 1,025; Ft Totten school (Sisseton, Wahpeton, and Pabaksa), 1,013; Riggs Institute (Santee), 279; Ft Peck (Yankton), 1,116; Lower Brulé (Lower Brulé), 470; Pine Ridge (Oglala), 6,690; Rosebud (Brulé, Waglukhe, Lower Brulé, Northern, Two Kettle, and Wazhazha), 4,977; Santee (Santee), 1,075; Sisseton (Sisseton and Wahpeton), 1,908; Standing Rock (Sisasapa, Hunkpapa, and Yanktonai), 3,514; Yankton (Yankton), 1,702; under no agency (Mdewakanton in Minnesota), 929; total, 26,175. Including the Assiniboin the total for those speaking the Dakota language is 28,780. A comparison of these figures with those taken in previous years indicates a gradual decline in numbers, but not so rapid a decrease as among most North American tribes.

Ab-boin-ee Sioux.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 83, 1850. Ab-boin-ug.—Warren in Minn. Hist. Coll., v, 36, 1885 (Chippewa name: 'roasters', from their custom of torturing foes). Abbwoi-nug.—Tanner, Narr., 57, 1830. Ab-oin.—Warren in Minn. Hist. Coll., v, 162, 1885. Aboinug.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 141, 1852. Abwoinug.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 39, 1855. Ba-akush'.—Gatschet, Caddo and Yatassi MS. vocab., B. A. E., 82 (Caddo name). Ba-ra-shūp'-gi-o.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 402, 1862 (Crow name). Bevan-acs.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 70, 1849 (usual Chippewa name; ev misprint for w). Bewanaacs.—Lapham, Blossom and Dousman, Inds. of Wis., 15, 1870. Boin-acs.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff.

Rep., 70, 1849 (French notation of Bwanacs). Boines—Long, Exped. St Peter's R., i, 389, 1824. Bwa^a.—Trumbull, MS. letter to Dorsey, Aug. 25, 1876. Bwanacs.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 74, 1849. Bwoinug.—Tanner, Narr., 316, 1830. Bwoinug.—Ibid., 144. Caa^a.—Dorsey in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., vi, pt. 1, 339, 1890 (Omaha and Ponca, and Pawnee name). Caa^agti.—Dorsey, Dhegiha MS. Dict., B. A. E., 1878 (Omaha name: 'real Dakota'). Ca^aha^a.—Dorsey, Tciwera MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1879 (so called by Iowa, Oto, Missouri, Kansas, and Osage). Ca^aha^a.—David St Cyr in Dorsey, Winn. MS., B. A. E., 1886 (Winnebago name). Chah^ara^arat.—Grinnell, Pawnee Hero Tales, 92, 1889 (Pawnee name). Chi8.—Charlevoix, New France, ed. Shea, iii, 31, 1868. Ciou.—Doc. of 1695 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 611, 1855. Cioux.—Doc. of 1693, ibid., 570. Coupe-gorge.—Blackmore in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., i, 301, 1869 ('cutthroats': so called by the French from their gesture). Coupes-gorges.—Burton, City of Saints, 95, 1862. Cruel.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 348, 1855. Cuouex.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 70, note, 1893. Cutthroats.—Marcy, Army Life on Border, 33, 1866 (given erroneously as the translation of Dakota). Dacota.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 61, 1814. Dacota.—Long, Exped. St Peter's R., ii, 245, 1824. Dacotah.—Howe, Hist. Coll., 357, 1851 (translated 'allied tribes'). Dahcotah.—Tanner, Narr., 18, 1830. Dahcotas.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., ii, 121, 1836. Dahkota.—Parker, Minn. Handbk., 13, 1857. Dahko-tah.—Tanner, Narr., 146, 1830. Dakoais.—Shea, Early Voy., 120, note, 1861 (misprint for Dakotas). Dakotah.—Neill, Hist. Minn., xlv, note, 1858. Dakotas.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 69, 1849. Dakotha.—Smet, Mission de l' Oregon, 264, 1848. Darcota.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 183, 1817. Darcotar.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 30, 1806. Darcotas.—Rafinesque in Marshall, Hist. Ky., i, 28, 1824. Dawta.—Domenech, Deserts of N. Am., ii, 28, 1860. Docota.—Drake, Bk. Inds., vii, 1848. Guerriers.—Jes. Rel. 1658, 21, 1858. Hadovesaves.—Alcedo, Dict. Geog., iii, 213, 1788 (misprint). Hadovessians.—Harris, Coll. Voy. and Trav., ii, 919, 1705 (misprinted from Lahontan). Hand Cutters.—Burton, City of Saints, 124, 1862 (Ute name). I ta hã tski.—Matthews, Ethnogr. Hidatsa, 159, 1877 (Hidatsa name: 'long arrows'). It-ãns-kẽ.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., ii, lxxvix, 1823. Kaipsa.—Wilson in Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., ii, 1888 (Sarsi name). Kiou8.—La Metairie (1682) in French, Hist. Coll. La., ii, 25, 1875. K'odalpa-K'inago.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1057, 1896 ('necklace people': Kiowa name). Lacota.—Morgan in Beach, Ind. Misc., 220, 1877. La-cotahs.—Ruxton, Life in Far West, 112, 1849. La-ko'-ta.—Riggs, Dakota Gram. and Dict., 135, 1851. La Sues.—Croghan (1765), Jour., 38, 1831. Madovessians.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 61, 1814. Ma-ko'-ta.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 402, 1862 (Crow name). mãr-ãn-shõ-bish-kõ.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., ii, lxxix, 1823 (Crow name: 'cutthroats'). Mattagwessawacks.—Sproat, Scenes Sav. Life, 188, 1868. Maudowessies.—McIntosh, Orig. N. Am. Inds., 103, 1853. Minishúpko.—Col. H. L. Scott, infn., 1906 (Crow name, of opprobrious meaning). Naotah.—Featherstonhaugh, Canoe Voy., i, 168, 1847. Nadawessi.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 71, 1849. Na-da-wessy.—Ibid., 70. Nadodowessiou8.—Braekenridge, Views of La., 77, 1815. Nadesis.—Güsfeld, Charte von Nord Am., 1797. Nadiouxiou8.—Long, Exped. St Peter's R., ii, 323, 1824. Nadiouxiou8.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., index, 304, 1861. Nadoeses.—Barcia, Ensayo, 291, 1723. Nadoessi.—Coes and Kingsley, Stand. Nat. Hist., pt. 6, 167, 1883. Nadoessians.—Salverte, Hist. Men, Nat., and Places, i, 66, 1864. Nadoessious.—La Chesnaye (1697) in Margry, Déc., vi, 6, 1886. Nadoenaisi.—Burton, City of Saints, 96, 1862 (Chippewa name: 'enemies'). Nadoenaisioug.—Domenech, Deserts N. Am., ii, 26, 1860. Nadonechiouk.—Ibid. Nadoessiou8.—Blackmore in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., i, 301, 1869 (misprint). Nadoenessis.—Lahontan, New Voy., i, 115, 1703. Nadoenessis.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 8, 1776. Nadouags.—Bacqueville de la Potherie, Hist. Am., ii, 49, 1753. Nadouagssiou8.—Ibid., 147. Nadouaisious.—Ibid., 179. Nadouaissiou8.—Ibid., 62. Nadouagssiou8.—Ibid., 56. Nad8echi8ec.—Charlevoix, New France, iii, 31, 1685. Nadouechiou8.—Rel. of 1660 in Margry, Déc., i, 54, 1876. Nadouechiou8.—Jes. Rel. 1658, 21, 1858. Nadouechi8ec.—Ibid., 1660, 27. Nadoueci8ous.—Ibid., 1670, 98. Nadoueci8.—Ibid., 1670, 97. Nad8e8is.—Shea, Discov. Miss. Val., xxi, 1852. Nadoe8ans.—Hennepin, New Discov., map, 1698. Nadoe8ciou8.—Domenech, Deserts N. Am., ii, 26, 1860. Nadoe8iouack.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 102, 1858. Nadoe8iou8.—Jes. Rel. 1656, 39, 1858. Nadoe8ious.—Ferrot (1689) in Margry, Déc., v, 33, 1883. Nadoe8iou8.—Williamson in Minn. Hist. Coll., i, 297, 1872. Nadoe8ians.—La Salle's Exped. (1679-81), in Margry, Déc., i, 481, 1876. Nadoe8esse.—French map (1710) in Minn. Hist. Coll., ii, 256, 1872. Nadoe8essians.—Niles (1760) in Mass. Hist. Coll., 4th s., v, 541, 1861. Nadoe8essies.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 380, 1862. Nadoe8essians.—La Metairie (1682) in French, Hist. Coll. La., ii, 25, 1875. Nadoe8iou8.—Hennepin (1683) quoted by Shea, Discov., 131, 1852. Nadoe8iou8.—Jes. Rel. 1665, 7, 1858. Nadoe8iou8.—Ibid. 1667, 23. Nadoe8ious.—Ibid. 1670, 99. Nadoe8ious.—Doc. of 1681 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 161, 1855. Nadoe8iss.—Jes. Rel. 1642, 97, 1858. Nadoe8ou8.—Coxe, Carolana, 42, 1741. Nadoe8ou8.—Sanson, map of Can. (1657) in Am. Antiq., i, 233, 1879. Nadoe8ou8.—Hennepin, New Discov., i, 178, 1698 (made equivalent to Issati). Nadoe8sioux.—Du Chesneau (1681) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 153, 1855. Nadoe8sioux.—Doc. (1679), ibid., 795. Nadoe8wessis.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 380, 1862. Nadoe8wessies.—Barcia, Ensayo, 238, 1723. Nadoe8wessians.—Hennepin (1680) in French, Hist. Coll. La., i, 211, 1846. Nã-do-wa-see-wug.—Morgan in N. Am. Rev., 53, 1870. Nadoe8wessis.—Mackenzie, Voy., ix, 1802. Nadoe8wessis.—Maximilian, Trav., 148, 1843. Nadoe8wessious.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 51, 1853. Nadoe8wesse.—Schiller quoted by Neill, Hist. Minn., 89, 1858. Nadoe8wesi.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1067, 1896 ('little snakes,' or 'little enemies': common Algonquian name). Nadoe8wessious.—Kingsley, Stand. Nat. Hist., vi, 167, 1885. Nadoe8wessi.—Rafinesque in Marshall, Hist. Ky., i, 28, 1824. Nadoe8wessiern.—Adelung, Mithridates, iii, 244, 1816. Nadoe8wessies.—Henry, Trav., 46, 1809. Nadoe8wessious.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 348, 1855. Nadoe8wessious.—Henry, Trav., 197, 1809. Nadoe8westeas.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, iii, 80, 1854. Nadoe8wessiou8.—Domenech, Deserts N. Am., ii, 26, 1860. Nadoe8wessians.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Nadoe8wessi.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 70, 1849. Nadoe8wesi.—Le Jeune in Jes. Rel. 1640, 35, 1858. Nadoe8wesi.—Featherstonhaugh, Canoe Voy., i, 223, 1847. Nadoe8wessi.—Ramsey in Minn. Hist. Coll., i, 45, 1872. Nadoe8wessh.—Jones, Ojibway Inds., 129, 1861. Nadoe8wessies.—Snelling, Tales of Northwest, 137, 1830. Nadoe8wesi.—Burton, City of Saints, 95, 1862. Nadoe8wessies.—Umfreville (1790) in Me. Hist. Coll., 6th s., 270, 1859. Nadoe8si.—Maximilian, Trav., 148, 1843. Nadoe8siessies.—Lahontan quoted by Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 72, 1849. Nadoe8wessi.—Drake, Ind. Chron., 186, 1836. Nadoe8wessies.—Richard, Phys. Hist. Mankind, v, 410, 1847. Nadoe8wessies.—Harmon, Jour., 165, 1820 (misprint). Nadoe8wessies.—B. de Lozières, Voy. à la Louisiane, 348, 1802. Nadoe8wessi.—Schoolcraft, Trav., 291, 1821. Nadoe8wessi.—Malley in Proc. A. A. S., xxvi, 352, note, 1877. Nadoe8wessi.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 326, 1862 (Arapaho name: 'cutthroats'). Nadoe8wessi.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1057, 1896 (Arapaho name). Nadoe8wessi.—Ibid. Nadoe8wessi.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 290, 1862 (Cheyenne name, applied to Mde-wakanton, Sisseton, Wahpeton, and Wahpeton). Nadoe8wessi.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E., 1878 (Potawatomi name: 'small snake,' because farther w. than, therefore less to be dreaded). Nadoe8wessi.—Gatschet in Am. Antiq., ii, 78, 1879 (Potawatomi name). Nadoe8wessies.—Umfreville quoted by Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 350, 1862. Nadoe8wessious.—Trumbull in Johnson Cyclop., ii, 1156, 1877. Nadoe8wessi.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 72, 1849. Nadoe8wessious.—Morgan in N.

Am. Rev., 53, 1870. Naudouëssi.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 69, 1849. Naudouissoux.—Raymbault (1642) quoted by Brackett in Smithsonian Rep. 1876, 466, 1877. Naudouisses.—Ibid. Naudowessies.—Brown, West. Gaz., 360, 1817. Naud-o-wa-se.—Warren in Minn. Hist. Coll., v, 280, 1885. Naud-o-wa-se-wug.—Ibid., 72. (Chippewa name: 'like unto addressers'). Naudowasses.—Schuyler et al. (1702) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 979, 1854. Naudowessies.—Carver, Trav., ix, 1778. Naudowesse.—Lewis, Trav., 233, 1809. Naudowessce.—Tanner, Narr., 316, 1830 (Ottawa name: 'roasters'). Naudowessies.—Carver, Trav., 56, 1778. Naudowissies.—Morgan in N. Am. Rev., 53, 1870. Naudussi.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map, 2, 1776. Naudowassies.—Schermerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Coll., 2d s., ii, 12, 1814. Nawdowessie.—Carver, Trav., 59, 1778. Nawdowessnees.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, vi, 34, 1857 (Algonquian nickname: 'our enemies'). Nakotahs.—Nicollet, Rep. on Upper Mississippi, 10, 1843. Nedouessas.—Hennepin quoted by Neill in Minn. Hist. Coll., i, 256, 1872. Noddowessces.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 77, 1815. Nod-o-way-se-wug.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, ii, 139, 1852. Nodowessa.—Linn (1839) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 204, 26th Cong., 1st sess., i, 1840. Nodowessies.—Bradbury, Trav., 41, 1817. Nord ouësts.—Bradford quoted by Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 70, 1849 (evident corruption of Nadouëssiou). Nottawessie.—Adelung, Mithridates, iii, 264, 1816. Nottowessies.—Croghan (1759), Hist. West. Penn., 146, note, 1851. Nuktú-sém.—Gatschet, MS., 1884 (Salish name: 'cut-throats'). Núgtu.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., 371, 1886 (Salish name). Nxtúsum.—Gatschet MS., B. A. E., 1884 (Okinagan name). O-bwah-nug.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 193, 1855 (Chippewa name). Oceti sakowij.—Riggs, Dakota Gram. and Dict., xv, 1851 (own name: 'seven council fires'). Ochente Shakoan.—Long, Exped. St. Peters R., i, 877, 1824. Ochente Shakons.—Cones and Kingsley, Stand. Nat. Hist., pt. 6, 169, 1883. Ocheti Shaowni.—Warren, Dakota Country, 15, 1855. Ohó-hómo.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 8, 1884 ('those on the outside'). Ohó-omó-yo.—Mallery in Proc. A. A. S., xxvi, 352, note, 1877. O-o'-ho-mo-i'-o.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 290, 1862 (Cheyenne name). Oshahak.—Gatschet, MS., 1883 (Fox name). Osheti Shakowin.—Burton, City of Saints, 95, 1862. Otchenti-Chakoang.—Balbi, Atlas Ethnog., 55, 1826. Pain-pe-tse-menay.—Gebow, Sho-sho-nay Vocab., 18, 1868 (Shoshoni name). Pakota.—U. S. Stat., x, 71, 1853 (misprint). Pambizimina.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1057, 1896 ('beheaders': Shoshoni name). Pampe Chyimina.—Burton, City of Saints, 124, 1862 (Ute name: 'hand-cutters'). Pani.—Schuyler et al. (1702) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 979, 1854 (given as French name; confused with Pawnee). Papitsinima.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1057, 1896 ('beheaders': Comanche name). Pishakulk.—Mooney, in'n, 1892 (Yakima name: 'beheaders'). Ponarak.—Jes. Rel. 1656, 39, 1858 (misprint). Poualac.—Mallery in Proc. A. A. S., xxvi, 352, note, 1877. Poualak.—Jes. Rel. 1653, 21, 1858 (Chippewa name; incorrectly transl. 'warriors'). Poualakes.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, iii, 81, 1854. Poualaks.—Boucher (1660) in Margry, Déc., i, 55, 1875. Pouanak.—Tailhan, Perrot Mém., 232, note, 1864. Roasters.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 83, 1850 (Ab-boin-ee Sioux, or). Sáhagi.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E., 1879 (Shawnee name). Saoux.—Schermerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Coll., 2d s., ii, 12, 1814. Saux.—Hurlbert in Jones, Ojebway Inds., 178, 1861. Secoux.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 70, note, 1893. Secoux.—Clark, MS., Codex B, quoted in Lewis and Clark Exped., i, 101, note, 1893. Scieux.—Henry (1801) quoted by Neill in Minn. Hist. Coll., v, 453, 1885. Sciou.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 149, 1858. Scioux.—Doc. (1693) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 570, 1855. Scoux.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 70, note, 1893. Seaux.—Clark, Codex B, quoted in Lewis and Clark Exped., i, 128, note, 1893. Seaux.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 70, note, 1893. Shahan.—Dorsey quoted by Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1057, 1896 (Osage, Kansas, and Oto name). Shánana.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E., 1884 (Kiowa Apache name). Sicoux.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 70, note, 1893. Sieoux.—Ibid. Sieux.—Coxe, Carolina, p. 20, 1741. Siooz.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 8, 1776. Sios.—Alegre, Hist. Comp. Jesus, i, 336, 1841. Siou.—Lamothe Cadillac (1703) in Margry, Déc., v, 329, 1883. Siousse.—Perrot, Mém., 232, 1864. Sioust.—Doc. (1767) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 989, 1856. Sioux.—Morel (1687) in Margry, Déc., v, 32, 1883. Siouxes.—Bacqueville de la Potherie, Hist. Am., iv, 33, 1753. Sioux.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 7, 1806. Sioxes.—Poole, Among the Sioux, 153, 1881. Siroux.—Perrot, Mém., 55, 1864. Sivux.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 128, 1816 (misprint). Siwer.—Balbi, Atlas Ethnog., 55, 1826. Soo.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 30, 1806. Soues.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 70, note, 1893. Soux.—Ibid. Soux.—Ibid. Sous.—Gorrell (1761) in Wis. Hist. Soc. Coll., i, 26, 1855. Soux.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 70, note, 1893. Su.—Gatschet, Kaw vocab., B. A. E., 27, 1878 (Kansa form). Sue.—Croghan (1765), Jour., 88, 1831. Suil.—Ibid., 37. Sun-nun-at.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 357, 1862 (Arikara name). Suoux.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 70, note, 1893. Tsaba'kosh.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1057, 1896 ('cut-throats': Caddo name). Túyétchiské.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 9, 1884 (Comanche name: 'cut-throats'). Wadouissians.—Hennepin quoted by Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 72, 1849. Wanak.—Belcourt (1850-56) in Minn. Hist. Coll., i, 235, 1872 (Chippewa name). Wá-sá-sa-o-no.—Morgan in N. Am. Rev., 52, note, 1870 (Iroquois name). Wá-sá'-seh-o-no.—Morgan, League of Iroquois, 268, 1851 (Seneca name). Yusssáha.—Gatschet, Wyandot MS., B. A. E., 1879 (Wyandot name: 'birds'). Zue.—Croghan (1759), Hist. West. Penn., 146, note, 1851 (given as French form).

Dakota turnip. See Tipsinah.

Daktlawedi. A Tlingit clan belonging to the Wolf phratry. It is found at Tongas, Killisnoo, and among the Chilkat, while the Tsaguedi of Kake is a branch. Daklá-wéti.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 118, 1885. Daq'lawe'di.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Takla-uedi.—Krause, op. cit., 116. Taktla-uedi.—Ibid., 120.

Dakubetede. A group of Athapascan villages formerly on Applegate cr., Oreg. The inhabitants spoke a dialect practically identical with that employed by the Taltushtunted who lived on Gallice cr. not far from them. They were intermarried with the Shasta, who, with the Takilman, were their neighbors. With other insurgent bands they were removed to the Siletz res. in 1856.

Applegate Creek.—Palmer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 464, 1854. Da'-ku-be té'-de.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 235, 1890 (own name). Do-dah-ho.—Gibbs, letter to Hazen, B. A. E., 1856. Etoch-kah-taw-wah.—Palmer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 464, 1854. N'ekite hitelám.—Dorsey, Alsea MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884 (Alsea name: 'people far up the stream'). Spena.—Gibbs, letter to Hazen, 1856, B. A. E. Ts'a-gús-li'-q'wut-me' júné.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 235, 1890 (Naltánnetúnne name).

Dalles Indians. The Chinookan tribes formerly living at The Dalles, Oreg., and on the opposite side of Columbia r. While tribes of other stocks, notably Shabaptian, frequently visited The Dalles during the summer, they were not permanent residents. Of the Chinookan tribes the Wasco were important, and the term is sometimes limited to that tribe. (L. F.)

Dalles.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1855), 622, 1873. Dalles Indians.—White in Ind. Aff. Rep., 204, 1844. Dalles Indians.—Lee and Frost, Oregon, 96, 1844. La Dalle Indians.—M'Vickar, Hist. Exped. Lewis and Clark, II, 386, note, 1842. La Dalles Indians.—Parker, Jour., 140, 1846.

Dance. Nature is prodigal of life and energy. The dance is universal and instinctive. Primarily the dance expresses the joy of biotic exaltation, the exuberance of life and energy; it is the ready physical means of manifesting the emotions of joy and of expressing the exaltation of conscious strength and the ecstasy of successful achievement—the fruitage of well-directed energy. Like modern music, through long development and divergent growth the dance has been adapted to the environment of many and diverse planes of culture and thought; hence it is found among both savage and enlightened peoples in many complex and differing forms and kinds. But the dance of the older time was fraught with symbolism and mystic meaning which it has lost in civilization and enlightenment. It is confined to no one country of the world, to no period of ancient or modern time, and to no plane of human culture.

Strictly interpreted, therefore, the dance seems to constitute an important adjunct rather than the basis of the social, military, religious, and other activities designed to avoid evil and to secure welfare. A contrary view renders a general definition and interpretation of the dance complex and difficult, apparently requiring a detailed description of the various activities of which it became a part. For if the dance is to be regarded as the basis of these activities, then these ceremonies and observances must be defined strictly as normal developments of the dance, a procedure which is plainly erroneous. The truth appears to be that the dance is only an element, not the basis, of the several festivals, rites, and ceremonies performed in accordance with well-defined rules and usages, of which it has become a part. The dance was a powerful impulse to their performance, not the motive of their observance.

Among the Indians N. of Mexico the dance usually consists of rhythmic and not always graceful gestures, attitudes, and movements of the body and limbs, accompanied by steps usually made to accord with the time of some form of music, produced either by the dancer or dancers or by one or more attendant singers. Drums, rattles, and sometimes bone or reed flutes are used to aid the singers. Every kind and class of dance has its own peculiar steps, attitudes, rhythm, figures, song or songs with words and accompanying music, and costumes.

The word or logos of the song or chant in savage and barbaric planes of thought and culture expressed the action of the orenda, or esoteric magic power, regarded as immanent in the rite or ceremony of which the dance was a dominant adjunct and impulse. In the lower planes of thought the dance was inseparable from the song or chant, which not only started and accompanied but also embodied it.

Some dances are peculiar to men and others to women. Some dances are performed by a single dancer, others belong respectively to individuals, like those of the Onthonrontha ('one chants') among the Iroquois; other dances are for all who may wish to take part, the number then being limited only by the space available; still others are for specified classes of persons, members of certain orders, societies, or fraternities. There are, therefore, personal, fraternal, clan or gentile, tribal, and inter-tribal dances; there are also social, erotic, comic, mimic, patriotic, military or warlike, invocative, offertory, and mourning dances, as well as those expressive of gratitude and thanksgiving. Morgan (League of the Iroquois, I, 278, 1904) gives a list of 32 leading dances of the Seneca Iroquois, of which 6 are costume dances, 14 are for both men and women, 11 for men only, and 7 for women only. Three of the costume dances occur in those exclusively for men, and the other 3 in those for both men and women.

In general among the American Indians the heel and the ball of the foot are lifted and then brought down with great force and swiftness in such wise as to produce a resounding concussion. Usually the changes of position of the dancer are slow, but the changes of attitude are sometimes rapid and violent. The women employ several steps, sometimes employed also by the men, among which are the shuffle, the glide, and the hop or leap. Holding both feet together and usually facing the song altar, the women generally take a leap or hop sidewise in advance and then a shorter one in recoil, so that after every two hops the position is slightly advanced. They do not employ the violent steps and forceful attitudes in vogue among the men. They keep the body quite erect, alternately advancing either shoulder slightly, which gives them a peculiar swaying or rocking motion, resembling the waving of a wind-rocked stalk of corn. Indeed, among the Onondaga, Cayuga, and other Iroquois tribes, one of the names for "woman" (wathonwisas, 'she sways or rocks') is a term taken from this rocking or swaying motion.

Among some tribes, when the warriors were absent on a hunting or war expedition, the women performed appropriate dances to insure their safety and success. Among the same people in the dances in which women may take part, these, under the conduct of a leader with one or more aids, form a circle around the song altar (the mat or bench provided for the singer or singers), maintaining an interval of from 2 to 5 feet. Then, outside of this circle the men, under like leadership, form another circle at a suitable distance from that of the women. Then the two circles, which are usually not closed between the leaders and the ends of the circles, move around the song altar from the right to the left in such manner that at all times the heads of the circles of dancers move along a course meeting the advancing sun (their elder brother), whose apparent motion is conversely from the left to the right of the observer. In the Santee Dakota dance a similar movement around the center of the circle from right to left is also observed. Among the Muskogean tribes, however, the two circles move in opposite directions, the men with the course of the sun and the women contrary to it (Bartram). Among the Santee the women may dance only at the meeting of the "medicine" society of which they are members; they alone dance the scalp dance while the warriors sing. Rev. John Eastman says that in dancing the Santee form 3 circles, the innermost composed of men, the middle of children, and the outermost of women. According to Le Page Du Pratz, these circles, among the Natchez, moved in opposite directions, the women turning from left to right, and the men from right to left. This movement of the circles from right to left seems designed to prevent the dancer in the entire course around the song altar from turning his back to the sun.

The Mandan and other Siouan tribes dance in an elaborate ceremony, called the Buffalo dance, to bring game when food is scarce, in accordance with a well-defined ritual. In like manner the Indians of the arid region of the S. W. perform long and intricate ceremonies with the accompaniment of the dance ceremonies which, in the main, are invocations or prayers for rain and bountiful harvests and the creation of life. Among the Iroquois, in the so-called green-corn dance, the shamans urge the people to participate in order to show gratitude for bountiful harvests, the preservation of their lives, and appreciation of the blessings of the expiring year. The ghost dance, the snake dance, the sun dance, the scalp dance, and the calumet dance (q. v.), each performed for one or more purposes, are not developments from the dance, but rather the dance has become only a part of the ritual of each of these important observances, which by metonymy have been called by the name of only a small but conspicuous part or element of the entire ceremony.

Consult Bartram, Travels, 1792; Jesuit Relations, Thwaites ed., I-LXXIII, 1896-1901; Margry, Déc., I-VI, 1875-86; Morgan, League of the Iroquois, 1857, 1904; Laftau, Mœurs des Sauvages, 1724; Le Page Du Pratz, Hist. de la Louisiane, 1758.

(J. N. B. H.)

Danokha (Danoxa). A former Pomo village on the N. shore of Clear lake, Cal.

(S. A. B.)

Dapishul (Dá-pi-shūl, 'high sun'). A former Pomo village in Redwood valley, Mendocino co., Cal.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 155, 1877.

Daquinatino (Caddo: atino 'red'). A tribe of N. E. Texas in 1687, said to be allies of the Caddo, and probably related to them.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 410, 1878. Cf. Daquio, Daycao.

Daquio. One of the bands, mostly Caddoan, who were allies of the Caddo in Texas in 1687 (Margry, Déc., III, 410, 1878). Possibly the same as the Daycao of the narratives of De Soto's expedition of 1542 (Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in Bourne, Narr. De Soto, I, 182, 1904).

Darby's Village. A former Huron village on upper Darby cr., about midway between the present Columbus and Marysville, Ohio.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. clvi, 1899.

Dart sling. See Throwing-stick.

Dasamonquepeuc. An Algonquian village on the coast of Dare co., N. C., opposite Roanoke id., in 1587.

Dasamonquepeuc.—Strachey (ca. 1612), Virginia, 147, 1849. Dasamonquepeuk.—Ibid., 152. Dassamonpeack.—Lane (1586) in Smith (1629), Virginia, I, 91, repr. 1819. Dasamonquepeio.—Hakluyt (1600), Voy., III, 344-345, repr. 1810. Dasamonquepeuk.—Strachey, op. cit., 151. Dasamonquepeuk.—Ibid., 150. Dasamotiqueperc.—Dutch map (1621) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., I, 1856 (misprint). Dassamonpeack.—Lane, op. cit., 92. Dassamopogue.—Smith (1629), Virginia, I, map, repr. 1819. Dessamonpeake.—Morse, N. Am., 159, 1776. Dessamopeak.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, VI, 93, 1857.

Dasoak ('flying'). A clan of the Huron.

Datcho. An unidentified Texan tribe or division hostile to the Caddo in 1687.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878. Cf. Kadohadacho.

Daupom Wintun ('sloping-ground Wintun'). A Wintun tribe formerly living in Cottonwood valley, Shasta co., Cal.

Cottonwoods.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 230, 1877. Daupum Wintun.—Ibid. Valley Indians.—Ibid. Waikemi.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (Yuki name of Cottonwood Creek Wintun; probably the same).

Davis, John. A full-blood Creek, born in the "Old Nation." In the War of 1812, when a boy, he was taken prisoner, and was reared by a white man. He emigrated from Alabama in 1829, and was educated at the Union Mission after reaching Indian Territory. He had good talents, and in early manhood became a valuable helper to the missionaries as interpreter and speaker in public meetings. He was an active worker in 1830, and died about 10 years later. Two daughters survive him, who were educated in the Presbyterian boarding school, one of whom, Susan, wife of John McIntosh, rendered important service to Mrs A. E. W. Robertson in her Creek translations. Davis was joint author with J. Lykens in translating the Gospel of John into Creek, published at the Shawanoe Baptist Mission, Ind. Ter., in 1835, and was also a collaborator with R. M. Loughridge, D. Winslett, and W. S. Robertson in the translation into Creek of two volumes of hymns.—Pilling, Bibliog. Muskhogean Lang., Bull. B. A. E., 1889.

Dawes Commission. See Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes.

Daycao. A territory that lay 10 days' journey beyond the extreme westerly point reached by Moscoso, of De Soto's expedition, in 1542. The name was strictly that of a stream, possibly Trinity r., Texas, and is spoken of also as if designating an Indian "province." See Gentl. of Elvas in Hakluyt Soc. Publ., ix, 138-140, 1851.

Dayoitgao ('there where it issues'). A former Seneca village situated at Squakie hill, on Genesee r., near Mt Morris, N. Y. It received the name Squawkiehah from the fact that 700 Fox (Muskwaki) captives were settled there by the Iroquois in 1681-83. The site was sold by the Seneca in 1825 and relinquished by them in 1827. (J. N. B. H.)

Da-yo-it-gä-o.—Morgan, League Iroq., 435, 1851. Squakie Hill village.—Ibid., 468. Squawkie Hill.—Conover, Kanadesaga and Geneva MS., B. A. E. (= Squawkiehah Ganadahah, 'Squawkiehah village lying high'). Squawkihow.—Cusick, Sketches Six Nations, 20, 1828. Squawky Hill.—Morris treaty (1797) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 820, 1873.

De. The Coyote clans of the Tewa pueblos of San Juan, Tesuque, and San Ildefonso, N. Mex. Those of Tesuque and San Ildefonso are extinct.

Dé-táá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 350, 1896 (táá = 'people').

Deadoses. A small Texan tribe which in the 18th century lived with other tribes on San Xavier r., probably the San Miguel, which joins Little r. and flows into the Brazos about 150 m. from the gulf. In 1767-68 they were said to reside between Navasota and Trinity rs., and in 1771 were mentioned with the Tonkawa, Comanche, Towash (Wichita), and others as northern Texas tribes in contradistinction to the Cocos (Coaque), Karankawa, and others of the coast region. If the Mayeyes were really related to the Tonkawa, as has been asserted, the fact that this tribe is mentioned with them may indicate that the language of the Deadoses resembled that of the Tonkawa. They may have been swept away by the epidemic that raged among the Indians of Texas in 1777-78.

(H. E. B. J. R. S.)

Decoration. See Adornment, Art, Clothing, Ornament.

Deep Creek Spokan. A former Spokan colony that lived 17 m. s. w. of Spokane falls, now Spokane, Wash. The colony was established for farming purposes; pop. about 30 in 1880.—Warner in Ind. Aff. Rep., 67, 1880.

Deep Skins. Apparently a division of the northern Athapascans, as they are mentioned as belonging to a group including the Beaver Hunters, Flatside Dogs (Thlingchadinne), and Slaves.—Smet, Oregon Missions, 164, 1847. *

Defense. See Fortification.

Deformation. See Artificial head deformation.

Degataga. See Stand Watie.

Dekanawida ('two river-currents flowing together.'—Hewitt). An Iroquois prophet, statesman, and lawgiver, who lived probably during the second and third quarters of the 15th century, and who, conjointly with Hiawatha, planned and founded the historical confederation of the five Iroquois tribes. According to a circumstantial tradition, he was born in the vicinity of Kingston, Ontario, Canada, in what then was probably Huron territory. He was reputed to have been one of 7 brothers. Definite tradition gives him rank with the demigods, owing to the masterful orenda or magic power with which he worked tirelessly to overcome the obstacles and difficulties of his task, the astuteness he displayed in negotiation, and the wisdom he exhibited in framing the laws and in establishing the fundamental principles on which they were based and on which rested the entire structure of the Iroquois confederation. Omens foreshadowed his birth, and portents accompanying this event revealed the fact to his virgin mother that Dekanawida would be the source of evil to her people, referring to the destruction of the Huron confederation by that of the Iroquois. Hence at his birth his mother and grandmother, with true womanly patriotism, sought to spare their country woes by attempting to drown the new-born infant by thrusting it through a hole made in the ice covering a neighboring river. Three attempts were made, but in the morning after each attempt the young Dekanawida was found unharmed in the arms of the astonished mother. Thereupon the two women decided that it was decreed that he should live, and so resolved to rear him. Rapidly he grew to man's estate, and then, saying that he must take up his foreordained work, departed southward, first assuring his mother that in the event of his death by violence or sorcery, the otter skin flayed entire which, with the head downward, he had hung in a corner of the lodge, would vomit blood. Dekanawida was probably a Huron by blood, but perhaps an Iroquois by adoption. In the long and tedious negotiations preceding the final establishment of the historical confederation of the five Iroquois tribes, he endeavored to persuade the Erie and the Neuter tribes also to join the confederation; these tribes, so far as known, were always friendly with the Huron people, and their representatives probably knew of Dekanawida's Huron extraction. Many of the constitutional principles, laws, and regulations of the confederation are attributed to him. His chiefship did not belong to the hereditary class, but to the merit class, commonly styled the 'pine-tree chiefs.' Hence, he could forbid the appointment of a successor to his office, and could exclaim, "To others let there be successors, for like them they can advise you. I have established your commonwealth, and none has done what I have." But it is probable that prohibition was attributed to him in later times when the true nature of the merit chiefs had become obscured. Hence it is the peculiar honor of the merit chiefs of to-day not to be condoled officially after death, nor to have successors to their chieftaincies. For these reasons the title Dekanawida does not belong to the roll of 50 federal league chiefships.

(J. N. B. H.)

Dekanisora. An Onondaga chief who came into prominence in the latter part of the 17th century, chiefly through his oratorical powers and his efforts to maintain peace with both the French and the English. He was first mentioned by Charlevoix in 1682 as a member of an embassy from the Iroquois to the French at Montreal. He was also one of the embassy to the French in 1688, which was captured by Adario (Le Rat), and then released by the wily captor under the plea that there had been a mistake, blaming the French for the purpose of widening the breach between them and the Iroquois. Colden (Hist. Five Nat., I, 165, 1755) says Dekanisora was tall and well made, and that he "had for many years the greatest reputation among the Five Nations for speaking, and was generally employed as their speaker in their negotiations with both French and English." His death is supposed to have occurred about 1730, as he was a very old man when he was a member of an embassy at Albany in 1726. (C. T.)

Dekanoagah ('between the rapids,'—Hewitt). A village, inhabited by Seneca, Nanticoke, Conoy, and remnants of other tribes, placed by Gov. Evans (Day, Penn., 391, 1843) in 1707 on Susquehanna r., about 9 m. from Pequehan, the Shawnee village on the E. side of the Susquehanna, just below Conestoga cr., in Lancaster co., Pa.

Dekaury, Choukeka. A chief, eldest of the Winnebago, born about 1730. He was the son of Sabrevoir De Carrie, an officer of the French army in 1699, and Hopoekaw, daughter of a principal Winnebago chief, whom he married in 1729, spoken of by Carver (Travels, 20, 1796) as the queen of the Winnebago. Their son, Choukeka ('Spoon'), was known to the whites as Spoon Dekaury. After having been made chief he became the leader of attacks on the Chippewa during a war with the Winnebago, but he maintained friendly relations with the whites. It was principally through his influence that the treaty of June 3, 1816, at St Louis, Mo., was brought about. He died at Portage, Wis., in the same year, leaving 6 sons and 5 daughters.

Dekaury, Konoka. The eldest son and successor of Choukeka Dekaury, born in 1747. He was named Konoka ('Eldest') Dekaury, and is often mentioned as "Old Dekaury," but is equally well known as Schachipkaka. Before his father's death, in 1816, Konoka had joined a band of Winnebago who took part, in 1813, in the attack led by Proctor on Ft Stephenson, on lower Sandusky r., Ohio, which was gallantly defended by Maj. George Croghan. He fought also in the battle of the Thames, in Canada. He was held for a time, in 1827, as a hostage at Prairie du Chien for the delivery of Red Bird. His band usually encamped at the portage of Wisconsin r., the site of the present Portage, Wis. Mrs Kinzie (Wau-Bun, 89, 1856) describes him as "the most noble, dignified, and venerable of his own or indeed of any other tribe," having a fine Roman countenance, his head bald except for a solitary tuft of long, silvery hair neatly tied and falling back on his shoulders, and exhibiting a demeanor always courteous, while his dress was always neat and unostentatious. An unpleasant peculiarity of his face was an immense hanging under lip. He signed the treaty of Prairie du Chien Aug. 19, 1825, on behalf of the Winnebago, and died on Wisconsin r. Apr. 20, 1836.

Other members of the family, whose name has been variously written DeKauray, DeKauray, Day Kauray, Day Korah, Dacorah, and DeCorrah, were noted. From Choukeka's daughters, who married white men, are descended several well-known families of Wisconsin and Minnesota.

(C. T.)

Delaware. A confederacy, formerly the most important of the Algonquian stock, occupying the entire basin of Delaware r. in E. Pennsylvania and S. E. New York, together with most of New Jersey and Delaware. They called themselves Lenápe or Leni-lenápe, equivalent to 'real men,' or 'native, genuine men'; the English knew them as Delawares, from the name of their principal river; the French called them Loups, 'wolves,' a term probably applied originally to the Mahican on Hudson r., afterward extended to the Munsee division and to the whole group. — To the more remote Algonquian

Morgan as phratries, viz: Munsee, Unami, and Unalachtigo (q. v.), besides which some of the New Jersey bands may have constituted a fourth. Each of these had its own territory and dialect, with more or less separate identity, the Munsee particularly being so far differentiated as frequently to be considered an independent people.

The early traditional history of the Lenápe is contained in their national legend, the Walam Olum (q. v.). When they made their first treaty with Penn., in 1682, the Delawares had their council fire at Shackamaxon, about the present Germantown, suburb of Philadelphia, and under various local names occupied the whole country along the river. To this early period belongs their great chief, Tamenend, from whom the Tammany Society takes its name. The different bands frequently acted separately but regarded themselves as part of one great body. About the year 1720 the Iroquois assumed dominion over them, forbidding them to make war or sales of lands, a condition which lasted until about the opening of the French and Indian war. As the whites, under the sanction of the Iroquois, crowded them out of their ancient homes, the Delawares removed to the Susquehanna, settling at Wyoming and other points about 1742. They soon crossed the mountains to the headwaters of the Allegheny, the first of them having settled upon that stream in 1724. In 1751, by invitation of the Huron, they began to form settlements in E. Ohio, and in a few years the greater part of the Delawares were fixed upon the Muskingum and other streams in E. Ohio, together with the Munsee and Mahican, who had accompanied them from the E., being driven out by the same pressure and afterward consolidating with them. The Delawares, being now within reach of the French and backed by the western tribes, asserted their independence of the Iroquois, and in the subsequent wars up to the treaty of Greenville in 1795 showed themselves the most determined opponents of the advancing whites. The work of the devoted Moravian missionaries in the 17th and 18th centuries forms an important part of the history of these tribes (see Gnadenhuetten, Missions). About the year 1770 the Delawares received permission from the Miami and Piankishaw to occupy the country between the Ohio and White r., in Indiana, where at one time they had 6 villages. In 1789, by permission of the Spanish government, a part of them removed to Missouri, and afterward to Arkansas, together with a band of Shawnee. By 1820 the two bands had found their way to Texas, where the Delawares numbered at tribes they, together with all their cognate tribes along the coast far up into New England, were known as Wapanachki, 'easterners,' or 'eastern land people,' a term which appears also as a specific tribal designation in the form of Abnaki. By virtue of admitted priority of political rank and of occupying the central home territory, from which most of the cognate tribes had diverged, they were accorded by all the Algonquian tribes the respectful title of "grandfather," a recognition accorded by courtesy also by the Huron. The Nanticoke, Conoy, Shawnee, and Mahican claimed close connection with the Delawares and preserved the tradition of a common origin.

JACK HARRY (WAIWAKWAKUMAU, TRAMPING EVERYWHERE) — DELAWARE

The Lenápe, or Delawares proper, were composed of 3 principal tribes, treated by that time probably at least 700. By the year 1835 most of the tribe had been gathered on a reservation in Kansas, from which they removed, in 1867, to Indian Ter. and incorporated with the Cherokee Nation. Another band is affiliated with the Caddo and Wichita in w. Oklahoma, besides which there are a few scattered remnants in the United States, with several hundred in Canada, under the various names of Delawares, Munsee, and Moravians.

It is impossible to get a definite idea of the numbers of the Delawares at any given period, owing to the fact that they have always been closely connected with other tribes, and have hardly formed one compact body since leaving the Atlantic coast. All the estimates of the last century give them and their connected tribes from about 2,400 to 3,000, while the estimates within the present century are much lower. Their present population, including the Munsee, is about 1,900, distributed as follows: Incorporated with Cherokee Nation, Ind. T., 870; Wichita res., Oklahoma, 95; Munsee, with Stockbridges, in Wisconsin, perhaps 260; Munsee, with Chippewa, in Kansas, perhaps 45; "Moravians of the Thames," Ontario, 347; "Munsees of the Thames," Ontario, 122, with Six Nations on Grand r., Ontario, 150.

According to Morgan (Anc. Soc., 171, 1877) the Delawares have 3 clans (called by him gentes), or phratries, divided into 34 subclans, not including 2 subclans now extinct. These clans, which are the same among the Munsee and Mahican, are: (1) Took-seat ('round paw,' 'wolf'). (2) Pokekooungo ('crawling,' 'turtle'). (3) Pullaook ('non-chewing,' 'turkey'). These clans—Wolf, Turtle, and Turkey—are commonly given as synonymous with Munsee, Unami, and Unalachtigo, the 3 divisions of the Delawares, exclusive of the New Jersey branch. According to Brinton they are not clans, but mere totemic emblems of the 3 geographic divisions above named. Of these the Unami held the hereditary chieftainship. The New Jersey branch probably formed a fourth division, but those bands broke up at an early period and became incorporated with the others. Many of them had originally removed from the w. bank of Delaware r. to escape the inroads of the Conestoga. The 3 clans as given by Morgan are treated under the better known geographic names.

The Took-seat, or Wolf clan, has the following 12 subdivisions: (1) Maangreet (big feet); (2) Weesowhetko (yellow tree); (3) Pasakunamon (pulling corn); (4) Weyarnihkato (care enterer, i. e. cave enterer?); (5) Tooshwarkama (across the river); (6) Olumane (vermilion); (7)

Punaryou (dog standing by fireside); (8) Kwineekcha (long body); (9) Moonhararne (digging); (10) Nonharmin (pulling up stream); (11) Longushharkarto (brush log); (12) Mawsootoh (bringing along).

The Pokekooungo, or Turtle clan, has the following 10 subdivisions, 2 others being extinct: (1) Okahoki (ruler); (2) Taikoongoto (high bank shore); (3) Seeharongoto (drawing down hill); (4) Oleharkarmekarto (elector); (5) Maharolukti (brave); (6) Tooshkipakwisi (green leaves); (7) Tungulungsi (smallest turtle); (8) Welunungsi (little turtle); (9) Leekwinai (snapping turtle); (10) Kwisaeesekeeto (deer).

The Pullaook, or Turkey clan, has the following 12 subdivisions: (1) Moharala (big bird); (2) Lelewayou (bird's cry); (3) Mookwungwahoki (eye pain); (4) Mookharmowikarnu (scratch the path); (5) Opinghoki (opossum ground); (6) Muhhowekaken (old shin); (7) Tongonaoto (drift log); (8) Noolamarlarmo (living in water); (9) Muhkrentharne (root digger); (10) Muhkarmhukse (red face); (11) Koowahoke (pine region); (12) Oochukham (ground scratcher).

The divisions of the Munsee, according to Ruttenber, were the Minisink, Waoranec, Waranawonkong, Mamekoting, Wawarsink, and Catskill. He names among the Unami divisions the Navasink, Raritan, Hackensack, Aquackanonk, Tappan, and Haverstraw, all in N. New Jersey, but there were others in Pennsylvania. Among the Unalachtigo divisions in Pennsylvania and Delaware were probably the Neshamini, Shackamaxon, Passayonk, Okahoki, Hickory Indians (?), and Nantuxets. The Gachwechnagechga, or Lehigh Indians, were probably of the Unami division. Among the New Jersey bands not classified are the Yacomanshaghking, Kahansuk, Konekotay, Meletecunk, Matanakons, Eriwonec, Asomoche, Pompton (probably a Munsee division), Rancocas, Tirans, Siconesses (Chiconessex), Sewapoo (perhaps in Delaware), Kechemeche, Mosilian, Axion, Calcefar, Assunpink, Naraticon, and Manta (perhaps a Munsee division). The Nyack band, or village, in Rockland co., N. Y., may have belonged to the Unami. The Papagonk band and the Wysox probably belonged to the Munsee. See also Munsee, Unami, Unalachtigo.

The following were Delaware villages: Achsinnink, Ahasinus (Unami?), Alamingo, Allaquippa, Alleghany, Anderson's Town, Aquackanonk, Au Glaize, Bald Eagle's Nest, Beaversville, Beavertown, Bethlehem (Moravian), Black Hawk, Black Leg's Village, Buckstown, Bullets Town (?), Cashiehtunk (Munsee?), Catawaweshink(?), Chikohoki (Unalachtigo), Chilohocki (?), Chinklacamoose (?), Clis-towaaka, Communipaw (Hackensack), Conemaugh (?), Coshocton, Crossweek-sung, Custaloga's Town, Edgpiilik, Eri-wonec, Frankstown (?), Friedenshuetten (Moravian), Friedensstadt (Moravian), Gekelemukpechuenk, Gnadenhuetten (Moravian), Goshgoshunk, Grapevine Town (?), Greentown (?), Gweghkongh (Unami?), Hespatingh (Unami?), Hick-orytown, Hockhocken, Hogstown (?), Hopocan, Jacob's Cabins (?), Jeromestown (?), Kalbauvane (?), Kanestio, Kanhanghton, Katamoonchink (?), Kicknapawling (?), Kiktheswemud (?), Killbuck's Town, Kishakoquilla, Kiskemeneco, Kiskominitoes (?), Kittaning, Kohhokking, Kus-kuski, Languntinnenk (Moravian), La-wunkhannek (Moravian), Lichtenau (Moravian), Little Munsee Town, Macha-rienkonck (Minisink), Maccoc, Mahon-ing, Mechgachkamic (Unami?), Meg-geckessou (?), Meniolagomeka, Meech-konck (Minisink), Minisink (Minisink), Mohickon John's Town (Mahican?), Munceytown (Munsee), Murdering Town (?), Muskingum, Nain (Moravian), Newcomerstown, New Town, Nyack (Unami), Ostonwackin, Outaunink (Mun-see), Owl's Town, Pakadasank (Mun-see?), Papagonk (?), Passayonk, Passy-cotung (Munsee?), Peckwes (?), Peixtan (Nanticoke?), Pematuning (?), Pequot-tink (Moravian), Playwickey, Pohkopop-hunk, Queenashawakee, Rancocas, Rays-town (?), Remahenonc (Unami?), Roy-mount, Salen (Moravian), Salt Lick, Sawcunk (with Shawnee and Mingo), Sawkin (?), Schepinaikonek (Munsee), Schipston (?), Schoenbrunn (Moravian), Seven Houses, Shackamaxxon, Shamokin (with Seneca and Tutelo), Shannopin, Shenango (with others), Sheshsequin, Shingiss, Skehandowa (with Mahicans and Shawnee), Snakestown (?), Soup-napka (?), Three Legs (?), Tioga (with Munsee and others), Tom's Town, Tulli-has, Tuscarawas, Venango (?), Waka-tomica (with Mingo), Wechquetank (Moravian), Wekeeponall, Welagamika, White Eyes, White Woman, Will's Town (?), Woapikamikunk, Wyalusing, Wyoming, Wysox (?). (J. M.)

Abnaki.—For various forms applied to the Dela-wares, see under Abnaki. Ā-ko-tcā-kā' nēo'.—Hewitt, Mohawk MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 ('one who stammers in his speech': Mohawk name used in derision of the strange tongue. See other forms under Mahican). Ā-ko-tcā-kā-nhā'.—Hewitt, Oneida MS. vocab., B. A. E. (Oneida name). Ā-kots-ha-ka-nen.—Hewitt, Mohawk MS. vocab., B. A. E. (Mohawk form). Ā-ku-tcā-ka' n-hā'.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (Tuscarora form). Ana-kwan'ki.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 508, 1900 (Cherokee name; an attempt at the Algon-quian Wapanagi, 'easterners'). Auquitsaukon.—Stiles (1756) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., vii, 74, 1801. Delawar.—Lords of Trade (1756) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 120, 1856. Delawaras.—Mt Johnson Conference (1755), ibid., vi, 977, 1855.

Delawares.—Lords of Trade (1721), ibid., v, 623, 1855. De Lawarrs.—Watts (1764) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., x, 524, 1871. Delaways.—Cowley (1775) in Arch. of Md., Jour. of Md. Convention, 94, 1892. Deleware.—Glen (1750) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vi, 588, 1855. Deleware.—Campbell (1761) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., ix, 423, 1871. Deleways.—Croghan (1760), ibid., 248. Deluas.—Soc. Geog. Mex., 268, 1870. Dillewars.—Lewis and Clark, Trav., 12, 1806. Lenais.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 127, 1816. Lenalename.—Am. Pion., i, 408, 1842. Lenninapias.—Jefferson (1785?), quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 669, 1855. Lenap.—Raf-inesque, introd. to Marshall, Ky., i, 31, 1824. Lenape.—Heekewelder in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., x, 98, 1823. Lenapegi.—Gatschet, Shawnee MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1879 (Shawnee name). Lenappe.—Boyd, Ind. Local Names, 44, 1885. Lenappys.—Gor-don (1728) quoted by Brinton, Lenape Leg., 33, 1885. Lenawpes.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 65, 1851. Lenelename.—Am. Pion., ii, 189, 1843. Lenel-noppes.—Proud, Penn., ii, 295, 1798. Lenepes.—Gale, Upper Miss., map, 1867. Leni-Lenape.—Nuttall, Jour., 250, 1821. Lenna-lenape.—Drake, Bk. Inds., vii, 1848. Lennape.—ibid., bk. 5, 179. Lennapewi.—Squier quoted in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 28, 1877. Lenni-lappe.—Maximilian, Trav., 39, note, 1843. Lenni-Lenape.—Loskiel (1794) quoted by Barton, New Views, app. 1, 1798. Lenni-Lennape.—Barton, ibid., x. Lenno Lenapees.—Schoolcraft in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Proc., 80, 1844. Lenno Lenapi.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, vi, 573, 1857. Lenno-Lennape.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., ii, 44, 1836. Lenopi.—Easton treaty (1757) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 294, 1856. Lenop-pea.—Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 366, 1816. Leo-nopi.—Thompson in Jefferson, Notes, 283, 1825. Leonopy.—Conference of 1759 quoted by Brinton, Lenape Leg., 34, 1885. Linapis.—Rafinesque, Am. Nations, i, 121, 1836. Linapiwi.—Squier quoted in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 28, 1877. Linnelinopies.—Croghan (1759) quoted by Jefferson, Notes, 142, 1825. Linni linapi.—Rafinesque (1833) quoted by Brinton, Lenape Leg., 162, 1885. Linnilnopies.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 127, 1816. Linnoppe.—McCoey, Ann. Reg. Ind. Aff., 27, 1836. Llenni-lenapés.—Nuttall, Jour., 283, 1821. Loup.—'Wolf,' the name applied by the French to the Delawares, Munsee, and Mahican; for forms see under Mahican. Mochomes.—Yates and Moulton in Rutenber, Tribes Hudson R., 47, 1872 ('Grand-father': title given to the Delawares by those Algonquian tribes claiming descent from them). Nar-wah-ro.—Marcy, Red River, 273, 1854 (Wichita name). Renapi.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., ii, 44, 1836 (given as Swedish form, but properly the form used by the New Jersey branch of the tribe). Renni Renape.—Duponceau in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., vii, note, 1822 (form used in New Jersey and Delaware). Sag-a-na'-gā.—Morgan, League Iroq., 338, 1851 (Iroquois name). Tcā-kā'-nē.—Smith and Hewitt, Mohawk and Onondaga MS. vocabs., B. A. E., 1881 (Mohawk and Onondaga name). Tcā-kā'-nhā'.—Smith and Hewitt, Tuscarora, Cayuga, Seneca, Oneida, and Onondaga MS. vocabs., B. A. E., 1884 (Cayuga, Oneida, and Onondaga name). Tsā-kā'-nhā'-o-nā'.—ibid. (Seneca name). Wapanachki.—For various forms applied to the Delawares see under Abnaki.

Deluge myths. See Mythology.

Descent. See Clan and Gens, Family, Kinship, Social organization.

Des Chutes. A loosely defined Shahap-tian group living formerly on and about Deschutes r., Ore. The term probably included remnants of several tribes. The name has passed out of use, and the In-dians, if any survive, are probably on the Warm Springs res., Ore., under other names. (L. F.)

De Chentes.—Meek in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 10, 1848 (misprint). De Chute river.—Farnham, Trav., 112, 1843. De Chutes.—

Lane in Ind. Aff. Rep., 160, 1850. Des Chutes.—Wilkes in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 417, 1855. Des Chute's River.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 417, 1855. Deshoot.—Palmer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 194, 1855. Deshoots.—Palmer in H. R. Ex. Doc. 93, 34th Cong., 1st sess., 23, 1856. Fall Indians.—Parker, Jour., 137, 1842. Falls Indians.—M'Vickar, Hist. Exped. Lewis and Clark, II, 386, note, 1842.

Deshu. A former Chilkat town at the head of Lynn canal, Alaska.

Dashu.—Emmons in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., III, pl. v, 1903. Decu'.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Deshuhittan ('people of the house at the end of the road'). A Tlingit clan at Killisnoo, Alaska, belonging to the Raven phratry. Formerly they lived at Angun. Dashiton.—Emmons in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., III, pl. xiii, 1903. De'citan.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904 (contracted form of name). Decu'hit tan.—Ibid. Deshitan.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 118, 1885.

Desnedekenade ('people of the great river'). A tribe of the Chipewyan group of the Athapascan family living along the banks of Great Slave r., Athabasca, Canada. There were 122 enumerated at Ft Resolution and 256 at Smith Landing in 1904.

Des-nèdhè-kkè-nadè.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891.

Desnede-yarelottine ('people of the great river below'). An Etchareottine division living on the banks of upper Mackenzie r., British America.

Des-nèdhè-yapè-l'Ottine.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891. Gens du Fort Norman.—Petitot, Dict. Dené-Dindjé, xx, 1876. Tess-cho-tin-nèh.—Ross quoted by Gibbs, MS., B. A. E., 1866. Tpì-kka-Gottinè.—Petitot, Autour, op. cit. ('people on the water').

Dest. A former village, probably Timuquanan, in Florida, lat. 28° 30', near a small lake.—Bartram, Voy., I, map, 1799.

Destcaraguetaga. Named by La Salle (Margry, Déc., II, 149, 1877) with the Mahican, Manhattan, Minisink, and others as a New England tribe in 1681. Unidentified.

Destchetinaye ('tree in a spring of water'). A Coyotero band or clan at San Carlos agency, Ariz., in 1881; considered by Bourke (Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 112, 1890) to be an offshoot of a former clan of which the Tittessenaye also formed part.

Destchin ('red paint'). An Apache band or clan at San Carlos agency and Ft Apache, Ariz., in 1881 (Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 111, 1890); coordinate with the Chie of the Chiricahua and the Theshchini of the Navaho.

Destchin.—Gatschet, Apache MS., B. A. E., 1883. Dis-cheiné.—White, Apache Names of Ind. Tribes, MS., B. A. E.

Detsanayuka (Detsānáyuka, 'bad campers'). A division of the Comanche, formerly called Nokoni ('wanderers'), but on the death of a chief bearing the latter name their designation was changed. In 1847 they were said to number 1,750, in 250 lodges, evidently a gross exaggeration; in 1869 their number was 312, and in 1872 they were reported at 250. Their present population is unknown, as no official account is now taken of the various Comanche divisions.

(J. M.) Detsānáyuka.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1044, 1896. Go-about band.—Sen. Ex. Doc. O, 39th Cong., 1st sess., 4, 1866. Nacanes.—Pénicaut (1712) in Margry, Déc., v, 504, 1883. Nacanne.—Jefferys (1763), Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Naconômes.—Rivera, Dario, leg. 2,602, 1736. Nacunes.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 127, 1816. Na-ko-nies.—Neighbors in Ind. Aff. Rep., 577, 1848. No-co-me.—Leavenworth (1868) in H. R. Misc. Doc. 139, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1870. Noconee.—Neighbors in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1856, 175, 1857. Noconi.—Pimentel, Cuadro Desc., II, 347, 1865 (or Yiuhta, confused with Ute). Noconi Comanches.—Leavenworth in Sen. Ex. Doc. 60, 40th Cong., 2d sess., 3, 1869. No-coo-nees.—Butler in H. R. Doc. 76, 29th Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1847. No'koni.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., xxiii, 300, 1886 (trans. 'movers'). No-ko-nies.—Neighbors in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 127, 1852. People in a Circle.—Butler in H. R. Doc. 76, 29th Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1847. Tist'shinoie'ka.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., xxiii, 299, 1886 (trans. 'bad movers'). Tist'shinoie'ka.—Ibid., 300. Tüxthēnōyika.—Gatschet, Comanche MS., B. A. E., 1893 (trans. 'people removing from place to place'). Wanderers.—Alvord in H. R. Ex. Doc. 240, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 151, 1870.

Devil. See Religion.

Devil's Medicine-man Band. A Sisasapa band; not identified.—Culbertson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1850, 141, 1851.

Deyodshot ('there is a spring' from the neighboring Avon Springs.—Hewitt). A modern Seneca settlement that formerly stood about 2 m. s. e. of the present site of East Avon, on the site of the ancient Seneca settlement of Keinthe. (J. M.)

De-o'-de-sots.—Morgan, League Iroq., 468, 1851. Déyodé's hot.—Hewitt, in fn, 1886 (correct Seneca form). Dyudoosot.—Shea, note in Charlevoix, New France, III, 289, 1868. Gandachioragon.—Jes. Rel. 1672, 24, 1858. Gandachiragou.—Jes. Rel. 1670, 69, 1858. Gannondata.—Denonville (1687) quoted by Morgan, League Iroq., 316, 1851. Gannounata.—Denonville (1687) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 367, 1855. Ganochiaragon.—La Salle (1682) in Margry, Déc., II, 217, 1877. Keint-he.—Greenhalgh (1677) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., III, 251, 1853. Onnenatu.—Belmont (1687) quoted by Conover, Kanadesaga and Geneva MS., B. A. E. Ounne-natu.—Ibid. Saint Jean.—Mission name about 1670. Saint John.—The same. Tanochioragon.—Writer of 1686 in Margry, Déc., II, 99, 1877.

Deyohnegano ('at the cold spring'). (1) A former Seneca village near Caledonia, N. Y.; (2) A former Seneca village on Allegany res., Cattaraugus co., N. Y., near Allegheny r.

Allegany Village.—Morgan, League Iroq., 466, 1851. Cananouagan.—La Tour, map, 1779. Cold Spring Village.—Brown, West. Gaz., 355, 1817. Deonagāno.—Morgan, League Iroq., 466, 1851. Déyo-hne-gā'-no.—Hewitt, in fn, 1886. Dunewangua.—Procter (1791) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 152, 1832.

Deyonogadagana ('two little hills close together'.—Hewitt). An important Seneca village formerly on the w. bank of Genesee r. near Cuylerville, N. Y. The tract was sold by the Indians in 1803.

De-o-nun'-dā-gā-a.—Morgan, League Iroq., 426, 1851. De-yo-nōn-dā-dā-gā'-ā.—Hewitt, in fn, 1886. Little Beard's Town.—Morris deed (1797) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 627, 1832.

Dhatada. One of the four gentes of the Hangashenu subdivision of the Omaha.

The meaning is lost, although Dorsey translates it 'bird.'

Catada.—Dorsey in 31 Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1885; 15th Rep. B. A. E., 226, 1897. Lá'-tá-dá.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 155, 1877.

Dhegiha ('on this side.'—Fletcher). A term employed by J. O. Dorsey to distinguish a group of the Siouan family comprising the Omaha, Ponca, Osage, Kansa, and Quapaw tribes. Dorsey arranged the group in two subdivisions: the Quapaw or Lower Dhegiha, consisting of the Quapaw only; and the Omaha, or Upper Dhegiha, including with the Omaha, the Osage, Kansa, and Ponca. See Chiwere. Cegihia.—Dorsey in 3d Rep. B. A. E., 211, 1885 (Ponca and Omaha name for themselves). Geyaha.—Dorsey, Osage MS., B. A. E., 1883 (name of Osage for themselves). Dge-tú.—Dorsey, Kwapa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1891 (used by the Quapaw in speaking of themselves). Dhegiha.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., 168, 1879. Yegaha.—Dorsey, Kansas MS., B. A. E., 1883 (name of Kansa for themselves on their own land).

Dhigihida. A Ponca gens, divided into the subgenets Sindeagde and Wamitazhi, according to Dorsey. The meaning of the name is lost.

Cixida.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 228, 1897 (trans. 'bird'). De-a-ghe'-ta.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 155, 1877 (trans. 'many people').

Dhiu. Mentioned by Oñate (Doc. Inéd., xvi, 114, 1871) as a pueblo of New Mexico in 1598. Doubtless situated in the Salinas, in the vicinity of Abo, E. of the Río Grande, and in all probability a village of the Piros or the Tigua.

Dictionaries. Dictionaries have been made of at least 63 different North American Indian languages belonging to 19 linguistic families, besides many vocabularies of other languages. Of 122 dictionaries mentioned below more than half are still in manuscript.

Beginning with the Eskimauan family, vocabularies of Greenland Eskimo have been supplied by the labors of Egede (1750), Fabricius (1804), Kleinschmidt (1871), Rink (1877), and Kjer and Rasmussen (1893); of Labrador Eskimo, by Erdmann (1864); of Chiglit (Kopagmiut), by Petitot (1876); and there are collections by Pinart of the Aleutian Fox (Unalaskan Aleut) dialect (1871, MS.), and of that of the Kaniagmiut (1871-72, MS.).

In the Athapascan languages there are the dictionaries of Végreville for the Chipewyan (1853-90, MS.), the three-fold dictionary of Petitot for the Montagnais (Chipewyan), Peau de Lièvre (Kawchodinne), and Loucheux (Kutchin) (1876); of Radloff for the Kenai (Knaikhotana) (1874); of Garrioch (1885) for the Beaver (Tsattine); of Morice for the Tsilkotin (1884, MS.); of Matthews (1890, MS.) and Weber (1905, MS.) for the Navaho; and of Goddard for the Hupa (1904, MS.).

Of the languages of the Algonquian family, the Cree has dictionaries by Watkins (1865), Lacombe (1874), and Végreville (ca. 1800, MS.); the Montagnais, by Silvy (ca. 1678, MS.), Favre (1696, MS.), Laure (1726, MS.), and Lemoine (1901); the Algonkin, 3 by anonymous Jesuit fathers (1661, 1662, 1667, all MS.) and 1 each by André (ca. 1688, MS.), Thavenet (ca. 1815, MS.), and Cuq (1886); the Micmac, by Rand (Micmac-English, 1854, MS., and English-Micmac, 1888); the Malecite-Passamaquoddy, by Demillier (ca. 1840, MS.); the Abnaki, by Rasles (1691, first printed in 1833), Aubéry (1712-15, MS.), Lesueur (ca. 1750, MS.), Nudénans (1760, MS.), Mathevet (ca. 1780, MS.), and Vetromile (1855-75, MS.); the Natick Massachuset, by Trumbull (1903); the Delaware, by Ettwein (ca. 1788, MS.), Dencke (ca. 1820, MS.), Henry (1860, MS.), Zeisberger (1887), and Brinton and Anthony (1888); the Ojibwa (Chippewa), by Belcourt (ca. 1840, MS.), Baraga (1853, new ed. 1878-80), Wilson (1874), and Féard (1890, MS.); the Potawatomi, by Bourassa (ca. 1840, MS.) and Gaillard (ca. 1870, MS.); the Ottawa, by Jaunay (ca. 1740, MS.); the Shawnee, by Gatschet (1894, MS.); the Peoria Illinois, by Gravier (ca. 1710, MS.) and Gatschet (1893, MS.); the Miami Illinois, by Le Boulanger (ca. 1720, MS.); the Menominee, by Krake (1882-89, MS.) and Hoffman (1892); the Blackfoot (Siksika), by Lacombe (1882-83, MS.), Tims (1889), and McLean (1890, MS.).

In the Iroquoian languages there are dictionaries of the Huron (Wyandot), by Le Caron (1616-25, MS.), Sagard (1632, repr. 1865), Brebeuf (ca. 1640, MS.), Chaumonot (ca. 1680, MS.), and Carheil (1744, MS.); of the Iroquois Mohawk, by Bruyas (1862), Marcoux (1844, MS.), and Cuq (1882); of the Iroquois Seneca, by Jesuit fathers (MS.); the Iroquois Onondaga, by Jesuit fathers (printed in 1860); of the Iroquois Tuscarora, by Mrs E. A. Smith (1880-82, MS.) and Hewitt (1886, MS.); besides extended glossaries of the Cherokee, by Gatschet (1881, MS.) and Mooney (1885, MS., and 1900, 19th Rep. B. A. E.).

In the Muskogean languages there are the dictionaries of the Choctaw by Byington (ca. 1865, MS.), Wright (1880), and Rouquette (ca. 1880, MS.); of the Maskoki (Creek), by Robertson (1860-89, MS.) and Loughridge (1882, MS.).

The Siouan family is provided with dictionaries of the Santee Dakota by Riggs (1852, 1890) and Williamson (1871, 1886); of the Yankton Dakota, by Williamson (1871); of the Quapaw, the Biloxi, the Winnebago, and the Dhegiha (Omaha), by Dorsey (1891-95, MS.); of the Hidatsa, by Matthews (1873-74); and of the Kansa, by Bourassa (ca. 1850, MS.).

Other linguistic families are represented by dictionaries or extended glossaries as follows: Natchesan, Natchez lexicon, by Gatschet (1893, MS.); Chitimachan, Shetimasha (Chitimacha), by Gatschet (ca. 1880, MS.); Caddoan, Pawnee, by Dunbar (1880, MS.); Tonkawan, Tonkawa, by Gatschet (ca. 1877, MS.); Kiowan, Kiowa, by Mooney (1900, MS.); Shoshonean, Snake (Shoshoni), by Gebow (1864, 1868), and Comanche, by Rejon (1866); Koluschan, Chilkat, by Everette (ca. 1880, MS.); Chimmesyan, Tsimshian, by Boas (1898, MS.); Salishan, Kalispel by Giorda (1877-79), Twana by Eells (ca. 1880, MS.), and Nisqualli by Gibbs (1863); Chinookan, Chinook by Gibbs (1863) and Boas (1900, MS.), and Chinook jargon by Blanchet (1856), Gibbs (1863), Demers (1871), Gill (1882), Prosch (1888), Tate (1889), Coones (1891), Bulmer (1891, MS.), St Onge (1892, MS.), and Eells (1893, MS.); Kitunahan, Kutenai, by Chamberlain (1891-1905, MS.); Shahaptian, Nez Percé by McBeth (1893, MS.) and Gatschet (1896, MS.); Lutuamian, Klamath by Gatschet (1890); Shastan, Shasta, by Gatschet (1877, MS.); Piman, Cora by Ortega (1732, repr. 1888), Opata by Pimentel (1863), and Tarahumare by Steffel (1791) and Lunholtz (1894, MS.). (w. e.)

Diegueños. A collective name, probably in part synonymous with Comeya, applied by the Spaniards to Indians of the Yuman stock who formerly lived in and around San Diego, Cal., whence the term; it included representatives of many tribes and has no proper ethnic significance; nevertheless it is a firmly established name and is here accepted to include the tribes formerly living about San Diego and extending s. to about lat. 31° 30'. A few Diegueños still live in the neighborhood of San Diego. There are about 400 Indians included under this name as attached to the Mission agency of California, but they are now officially recognized as part of the "Mission Indians." The rancherias formerly occupied by the Diegueños, so far as known, are: Abascal, Awhut, Cajon, Camajal, Campo, Capitan Grande, Cenyowpreskel(?), Cojuat, Coquilt, Corral, Cosoy, Cuyamaca, Ekquall, Focomaes, Gueymura, Hasoomale, Hassasei, Hataam, Hawaii, Honwee Vallecito, Icayme, Inomassi, Inyaha, Kwalwhut, Laguna, La Punta, Lorenzo, Macatati, Maramoydos, Mataguay, Matamo, Matironn, Mattawottis, Melejo, Mesa Chiquita, Mesa Grande, Meti, Nellmole, Nipaguay, Otai, Otat, Pocol, Prickaway, San Felipe, San José, San Luis, Santa Isabel, Sequan, Suahpi, Tacahlay, Tahwie, Tapanque, Toowed, Valle de las Viejas, Wahti, Xamacha, Xana, and Yacum. The Conejos, the Kiliwi, and the Coyotes are mentioned as former Diegueño bands. (H. W. H.)

Daigano.—Palmer in Am. Nat., xi, 736, 1877. Diagano.—Ibid., 743. Diegana.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 361, 1859. Diegeenos.—Whipple, Exp'n from San Diego to the Colorado, 2, 1851. Diegenes.—Sleigh (1873) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 91, 43d Cong., 1st sess., 6, 1874. Diegino.—Burton (1856) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 115, 1857. Diegmions.—Jackson and Kinney, Rep. Miss. Ind., 20, 1883. Dieguinos.—Wozencraft (1852) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 288, 1853. Dieguons.—Whipple (1849) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 100, 1852. Digenes.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 13, 1879. Diogenes.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1902, 595, 1903. Disguino.—Burton (1856) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 127, 1857. Kamia.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1905 (Mohave name; cf. Comeya). Liegeenos.—Whipple, Exp'n from San Diego to the Colorado, 2, 1851 (misprint). Lligunos.—Whipple (1849) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 100, 1852 (misprint).

Digger. Said by Powell to be the English translation of Nuanuints, the name of a small tribe near St George, s. w. Utah. It was the only Paiute tribe practising agriculture, hence the original signification of the name, "digger." In time the name was applied to every tribe known to use roots extensively for food and hence to be "diggers." It thus included very many of the tribes of California, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, and Arizona, tribes speaking widely different languages and embracing perhaps a dozen distinct linguistic stocks. As the root-eaters were supposed to represent a low type of Indian, the term speedily became one of opprobrium. (H. W. H.)

Digging sticks. See Agriculture, Perforated stones.

Dighton Rock. A mass of silicious conglomerate lying in the margin of Taunton r., Bristol co., Mass., on which is an ancient, probably prehistoric, inscription. The length of the face measured at the base is 11½ ft. and the height a little more than 5 ft. The whole face, to within a few inches of the ground, is covered with the inscription, which consists of irregular lines and outline figures, a few having a slight resemblance to runes; others triangular and circular, among which can be distinguished 3 outline faces. The earliest copy was that of Danforth in 1680. Cotton Mather copied a part as early as 1690 and sent a rude woodcut of the entire inscription to the Royal Society of Great Britain in 1712. Copies were also made by Isaac Greenwood in 1730; by Stephen Sewell, of Cambridge, in 1768; by Prof. Winthrop in 1788; by Joseph Gooding in 1790; by Edward A. Kendall in 1807; by Job Gardner in 1812, and one for the Rhode Island Historical Society in 1830. Soon after this the suggestion was made that it was a runic inscription of the Norsemen, and the interest excited by this caused it to be frequently copied and published. The subject, with accompanying figures, was thoroughly discussed by Danish antiquaries, especially by Rafn, in Antiquitates Americanæ (1837). The earlier drawings mentioned above are reproduced by Mallery (10th Rep. B. A. E., pl. xi, 1893). The annexed illustration from a photograph is perhaps the most nearly correct of any published. The opinions advanced in regard to the origin and signification of the inscription vary widely. The members of the French Academy, to whom a copy was sent, judged it to be Punic; Lort, in a paper in Archæologia (London, 1786), expressed the opinion that it was the work of a people from Siberia; Gen. Washington, who saw Winthrop's drawings at Cambridge in 1789, pronounced the inscription similar to those made by the Indians; Davis and Kendall also ascribed it to the Indians, the former thinking it represented an Indian deer hunt. The Danish antiquaries decided that it was the work of the Northmen; Prof. Finn Magnussen interpreted the central portion, assuming it to consist of runes, as meaning that Thorfinn with 151 men took possession of the country; and even Dr De Costa was persuaded that the central part is runic. Buckingham Smith, according to Haven (Proc. Am. Antiq. Soc., Apr. 29, 1863), was inclined to believe it to consist of ciphers used by the Roman Catholic Church. Schoolcraft, although charged with wavering in his opinion, decided without reservation in 1853 that it was entirely Indian. The latter author submitted several drawings of the inscription to an Algonquian chief, who, rejecting a few of the figures near the center, interpreted the remainder as the memorial of a battle between two native tribes. Although this Indian's explanation is considered doubtful, the general conclusion of students in later years, especially after Mallery's discussion, is that the inscription is the work of Indians and belongs to a type found in Pennsylvania and at points in the W.

DIGHTON ROCK, MASS. (LENGTH ABOUT 12 FT)

Following are the more important writings on the subject of Dighton Rock: Antiquitates Americanæ, 1837; Archæologia, viii, 1786; T. Ewbank, N. Am. Rock-writing, 1866; Gravier in Compte-rendu Cong. Internat. des Américanistes, i, 1875; Haven in Proc. Am. Antiq. Soc., Apr. 29, 1863, Oct. 21, 1864, Oct., 1867; Kendall, Trav., 11, 1809; Mallery in 10th Rep. B. A. E., 1893; Mem. Am. Acad. Arts and Sci., ii, pt. 2, 1804, iii, pt. 1, 1809; Philos. Trans. Roy. Soc. Lond., xxviii, 1714; Rau (1) in Am. Antiq., i, 1878; (2) in Mag. Am. Hist., Feb., 1878, Apr., 1879; Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 1851, iv, 1854; Trans. Soc. Antiquaries, Lond., 1732; Winsor, Hist. Am., i, 1884. (c. r.)

Dippers and Ladles. See Receptacles.

Discoidal stones. Prehistoric objects of unknown use (see Problematical objects) whose most typical form is that of a double-convex or double-concave lens. The perimeter is a circle and the sides range from considerably convex through plane to deeply concave. The diameter varies from 1 in. to 8 in., the thickness from one-fourth of an inch to 6 in., very rarely passing these limits; the two dimensions have no definite relation to each other. Some specimens are convex on one face and plane on the other; but when one face is concave the other is also. Of the latter form many have a secondary depression at the center; others have a perforation which is sometimes enlarged until the disk becomes a ring. They are made principally of very hard rock, as quartz, flint, jasper, novaculite, quartzite, porphyry, syenite, and the like, though stone as soft as marble, sandstone, barite, and even steatite was sometimes chosen. No type of relics is more difficult to classify than these disks.

The name first given them, and by which they are still commonly known, is "chunkey stones," from the native name of the game played with analogous disks by southern Indians. But the description of the game, considered in connection with the great variation in size and material of the specimens, shows that only a small percentage of them could have been thus utilized. Culin believes that a limited number may be definitely regarded as chunkey stones. He recognizes three types: (1) perforated (least common); (2) symmetrical, unperforated; (3) asymmetrical, unperforated. A similar diversity is observed in the stones used in the analogous Hawaiian game of maika (24th Rep. B. A. E., 1906). From the smooth, symmetrical, highly polished chunkey stone they merge by insensible gradations into mullers, pestles, mortars, pitted stones, polishing and grinding stones, hammers, sinkers, club heads, and ornaments, for all of which purposes except the last they may have been used in some of their stages, so that no dividing line is possible. They present various styles and degrees of finish. Many retain their natural surface on both sides with the edge worked off by grinding or pecking, the latter marks possibly resulting from use as hammers. The sides may be ground down while the edge remains untouched; or, when made from a thick pebble, the sides may be pecked and the edge ground. Some specimens which are entirely unworked require very close examination to distinguish them from others whose whole surface has been artificially produced. It is possible, however, to arrange a large number of specimens from one locality in a regular series from a roughly chipped disk to a finished product of the highest polish and symmetry. The finest specimens, in greatest numbers, come from the states s. of the Ohio r., and from Arkansas eastward to the Atlantic. The territory within a radius of 100 m. around Chattanooga, Tenn., and for about the same distance around Memphis, is especially rich in them. From s. e. Ohio to central Missouri a considerable number has been found, though few of them are as well wrought as those from the S. Rather rough ones occur along the Delaware r. Beyond the limits indicated the type practically disappears. Discoidal stones corresponding closely with eastern types, save that the faces are rarely concave, are found in the Pueblo country and in the Pacific states. See Chunkey.

Objects of the class here described are referred to by numerous authors, including Fowke (1) Archæol. Hist. Ohio, 1902, (2) in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Jones, Antiq. So. Inds., 1873; Moorehead, Prehist. Impls., 1900; Squier and Davis, Ancient Monuments, 1848; Rau, Archæol. Coll. Nat. Mus., 1876; Thruston, Antiq. Tenn., 1897. (G. F.)

Disease. See Health.

Dishes. Vessels for the preparation and serving of food and other purposes were manufactured by all Indian tribes. While their use as receptacles prescribes a concavity of circular, oval, or oblong outline, there is a great variety of shape, decoration, etc., according to individual taste or tribal custom, and a wide range of material, as stone, shell, bone, ivory, horn, rawhide, bark, wood, gourd, pottery, and basketry.

The vessels for serving food were not used to hold individual portions, for the Indians ate in common; but the little dishes held salt and other condiments, small quantities of delicate foods, etc. The larger dishes contained preparations of corn or other soft vegetables, and the trays and platters were for game, bread, etc., or for mixing or preparing food. In many cases the cooking pot held the common meal, and portions were taken out by means of small dishes and ladles, in which they were cooled and eaten. Some dishes had special uses, as platters, mats, and trays for drying fruits, roasting seeds, etc., and as ceremonial bowls, baskets, etc.

From archeological sites have been collected many examples of dishes. Some made of soapstone were found in several Eastern and Southern states, and in Wyoming and California. Vessels formed of seashells, cut principally from Busycon, and also from Cassis, Strombus, and Fasciolaria, were found in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Arkansas, Georgia, and Florida. Dishes of pottery come from many parts of the United States and some made of wood from Florida.

The Indians in general used dishes of wood, and even where pottery, basketry, and bark were common, wooden vessels were made. Each region supplied suitable woods: A predilection for burl wood and knots was general. The majority of existing wooden vessels were fashioned with iron tools, but before metal was introduced they were excavated by means of fire and stone tools. Eskimo wooden dishes were sometimes cut from a single piece, but they usually had a rim of bent wood fastened to the excavated bottom and were oval in shape. Those of the N. W. coast tribes were boxes of rectangular shape, with scarfed and bent sides attached to the bottom; but the Indians also had excavated dishes carved to represent animal forms in great variety, and small bowls of horn occur. The Salishan tribes made dishes of wood and horn which were elaborately carved. The northern Athapascans as a rule used dishes, platters, and trays of birch bark folded and sewed, but among some tribes the dishes were like those of the Eskimo.

The Chippewa had well-finished wooden dishes of rectangular, oval, or circular shape. The Iroquois made excellent dishes, cups, bowls, etc., of burl wood, and sometimes furnished them with handles. The Plains Indians also used in preference burl or knot wood, and while as a rule their dishes were simple in outline and homely, some specimens were well carved and finished. The Virginia and other Southern Indians cut dishes, often of large size, from soft wood; of these the Cherokee and Choctaw bowls and platters made of tupelo are noteworthy. The Ute made rude oval bowls with projections at the ends, and oblong platters and knot bowls with handles. The Paiute used for dishes the carapace of the box turtle. The Pueblos, while relying mainly on pottery and basketry, had dishes wrought from knots and mountain-sheep horn. The Pima and Papago made oblong trays and shallow platters from mesquite wood. The Hupa of N. California cut large, flat trays from redwood. The tribes of the Santa Barbara region, California, inlaid wooden vessels with mother-of-pearl.

Bark dishes were extensively used by tribes within the birch area and to some extent by all the forest Indians. Those of the S. made great use of gourds.

The Pueblo Indians employed pottery and to some extent basketry for dishes, and the same is true in a lesser degree of some of the Plains and Eastern tribes. Southwestern and Californian Indians made use of basketry almost exclusively. See Bark, Basketry, Bowls, Implements, Pottery, Receptacles, Woodwork.

Consult Goddard in Univ. Cal. Publ., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., I, no. 1, 1903; Holmes in 20th Rep. B. A. E., 1903; Moore in Jour. Acad. Nat. Sci. Phila., x-xii, 1894-1903; Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899; Niblack in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1888, 1890; Swanton in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., v, 1905; Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 1894. (W. H.)

Distancia. One of the villages of the Opatá.—Hrdlicka in Am. Anthropol., vi, 72, 1904.

Ditsakana (Ditsä'kāna, 'sewers'). A Comanche division, the name of which was formerly Widyu ('awl'), but on the death of a chief bearing the same name it was changed to Ditsakana. They were also popularly known as Yamparika, from their habit of eating yampa root. They were estimated to number 356 in 1869, and 200 in 1872, but their present population is unknown, as the Comanche divisions are not officially recognized. (J. M.)

Ditsä'kāna.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1044, 1896. Etsitu'biwat.—Ibid. ('northerners'). Guiyus.—Butcher and Lyendecker, MS. Comanche vocab., B. A. E., 1867. It-chit-a-bud-ah.—Neighbors in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tr., II, 128, 1852. Jupes.—Bol. Soc. Mex., v, 318, 1857. Lamparacks.—Bollaert in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., II, 265, 1850. Lamparack.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 1856. Llamparicas.—Escudero, Noticias Nuevo Mex., 83, 1849. Root Diggers.—Butler in H. R. Doc. 76, 29th Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1847. Root-Eaters.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 522, 1851. Samparicks.—Maximilian, Trav., 510, 1843. Tapparics Comanches.—Alvord in Sen. Ex. Doc. 18, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 23, 1869 (misprint). Teachatzkennas.—Ibid., 36. Teckat Kenna.—McKusker in Sen. Ex. Doc. 40, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 14, 1869. Ted-Ghath-Kennas.—Ibid. Tedchat-kenna.—Ibid. Titsakanai.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., XXIII, 300, 1886 ('the sewing people'). Tupes.—Domenech, Deserts, II, 21, 1860. Widyu.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1044, 1896 ('awl'). Wiini'em.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., XXIII, 300, 1886. Yachakeenees.—Penney in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 101, 1870 (probably the same; Yamparicks also given). Yamhareek.—Ruxton, Life in Far West, 201, 1845. Yamparack.—Burnet in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 230, 1851. Yamparackas.—Penney in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 101, 1870. Yamparecks.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 544, 1878. Yampareekas.—Hazen in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 388, 1870. Yamparicas.—Mayer, Mexico, II, 123, 1853. Yam'pari'ka.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., XXIII, 299, 1886 ('yampa eaters'). Yam-pa-se-cas.—Neighbors in Ind. Aff. Rep., 574, 1848. Yampatéka.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. Am., 384, 1885. Yampaxicas.—Domenech, Deserts, II, 21, 1860. Yamperack.—Drake, Bk. Inds., xii, 1848. Yamperethka.—Battay, Advent., 90, 1875. Yamper-riken.—Leavenworth in H. R. Misc. Doc. 139, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1870. Yam-pe-uc-coes.—Butler in H. R. Doc. 76, 29th Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1847. Yampirica.—Sen. Ex. Doc. O, 39th Cong., 1st sess., 4, 1866. Yam-pir-coes.—Butler in H. R. Doc. 76, 29th Cong., 2d sess., 8, 1847. Yapá.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1044, 1896. Yapainé.—Pimentel, Cuadro Descr., II, 347, 1865. Yapareha.—Ibid. Ya-pá-rés-ká.—Butcher and Lyendecker, Comanche MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1867. Ya-pa-re'ka.—Gatschet, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884. Yapparickoes.—McKusker in Sen. Ex. Doc. 40, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 13, 1869. Yappariko.—Alvord in Sen. Ex. Doc. 18, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 6, 1868.

Diwá'li. See Bowl.

Djahui-gitinai (Djāhui' gītīnā'i, 'seaward Eagles'). A division of the Eagle clan of the Haida. They considered themselves a part of the Gitins of Skidegate, being simply those who lived farthest outward down Skidegate inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. They formed the main part of the Eagle population at Naikun and C. Ball.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 274, 1905.

Dj'aaquig'it'ena'i.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 26, 1889; ibid., 12th Rep., 25, 1898. Tsāagwi'gyit'inai'.—Ibid.

Djahui-hlgahet-kegawai (Djāhui'lgā'xet qē'gawa-i, 'those born on the seaward side of Pebble town'). A subdivision of the Hlgahet-gitinai, of the Haida of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 274, 1905.

Djahui-skwahladagai (Djāhui' sqō'lad-aga-i, 'down-the-inlet Skwahladas'). A division of the Raven clan of the Haida. They were probably once a part of the Skwahladas who lived on the W. coast of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., being distinguished from them by the fact that they lived seaward (djahui) down Skidegate inlet.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 269, 1905.

Djāaqui'sk'uatl'adagā'i.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 26, 1889. Tsāagwisuatl'adegai'.—Ibid., 12th Rep., 25, 1898.

Djestyedje ('long lake'). A former village of the Kansa on Kansas r., near Lawrence, Kans.—Dorsey, Kansa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882.

Djigogiga (Djigogī'ga). A legendary Haida town of the Kasta-kegawai on Copper bay, Moresby id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Djigua (Djī'gua). A legendary Haida town on the N. shore of Cumshewa inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., whence the ancestress of the Djiguahhl-lanas, Kai-ahl-lanas, Kona-kegawai, and Stawas-haidagai is said to have come.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 94, 1905.

Djiguahhl-lanas (Djī'gua at lā'nas, 'Djī'-guatown people'). A prominent division of the Eagle clan of the Haida, so named from a legendary town on the N. side of Cumshewa inlet, whence their ancestress, who was also the ancestress of the Kai-ahl-lanas, Kona-kegawai, and Stawas-hai-dagai, is said to have come. They lived in the town of Kloo.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 273, 1905.

Tsegoatl lá'nas.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 25, 1898.

Djihuagits (Djihuágits, Masset dialect Chawagis, 'always low water'). A Haida town on a creek just s. of Naikun, e. coast of Graham id., N. W. Brit. Col. Anciently it belonged to the Naikun-kegawai, but afterward to the Chawagis-stustae.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 280, 1905.

Djishtangading. A Hupa village at a bend in Trinity r. at the extreme s. end of Hupa valley, Cal., below the mouth of Tishtangatang cr. (P. E. G.)

Djictanadin.—Goddard, Life and Culture of the Hupa, 12, 1903. Pa-tes-oh.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 194, 1853. Pat-sich-oh.—Meyer, Nach dem Sacramento, 282, 1855. Pent-sau-an.—Gibbs, MS., B. A. E., 1852. Pepht-soh.—Gibbs in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 139, 1853. Pétsawan.—Goddard, inf'n, 1903 (Yurok name). Tish-tan'-a-tan.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 73, 1877.

Djus-hade (Djus xade', 'people of Djus island'). A division of the Eagle clan of the Haida, living on an island of the same name at the entrance of Tsooskahli, Queen Charlotte ids., and closely related to the Widja-gitunai, Tohlka-gitunai, and Chets-gitunai. They afterward moved to the mouth of Masset inlet. A branch of the Kuna-lanas received the same name.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 275, 1905. Dzós háedrai'.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 23, 1898.

Dockmackie. A name of the maple-leaved arrowwood (Viburnum acerifolium). The Indians used this plant for external application in tumors, etc. The terminal -ie suggests that the word came from them first to the Dutch, and from these to English-speakers. According to Miss L. S. Chamberlain (Am. Nat., xxxv, 3, 1901), the Delawares smoked dogekumak. W. R. Gerard (Gard. and For., ix, 262, 1896) says it is from a Mahican word meaning 'it is cooling,' which would be related to the Chippewa takaiamagad, 'it is cool.' A Delaware origin is however more probable. (A. F. C.)

Doestoe ('live where there are large falls of water'). A subdivision of Apache under chiefs Chiquito and Disalin in 1875. Does-to'-e.—White, Apache Names of Ind. Tribes, MS., B. A. E.

Dog. A former division of the Foxes.

Dog. See Many Horses.

Dog Creek. A Shuswap village or band on upper Fraser r. below the mouth of Chilcotin r., Brit. Col. Pop. 14 in 1904.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. 2, 72, 1904.

Dogachamus. A name for Cornus circinata, cited by Gerard (Gard. and For., ix, 263, 1896), who states that it is a corruption of damaganatikwanosi, 'pipe-stem bush,' in the Penobscot dialect of Algonquian. The word is also spelled dogackerne. (A. F. C.)

Dogekumak. See Dockmackie.

Dogi. Mentioned by Lederer (Discov., 2, 1672) as a people who inhabited the piedmont region of Virginia before the appearance of the historic tribes in that section. They were extinct at the time of his journey in 1670. Apparently distinct from the Doeg (Nanticoke).

Tacci.—Lederer, op. cit.

Do-gitunai (Dō-gitanā'-i, 'Gitans of the west coast'). A division of the Eagle clan of the Haida. They are said to have branched off from the Mamun-gitunai, and, as the name implies, their towns and camping places were on the w. coast of Queen Charlotte id., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 275, 1905.

Tōgyit'inal'.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 22, 1898.

Dogs. A band or a secret order of the Hidatsa.—Culbertson in Smithson. Rep. 1850, 143, 1851.

Dogs. See Domestication.

Dog Soldiers. See Military societies.

Doguenes. A tribe or division of a tribe met by Cabeza de Vaca about 1527, when they were living on the mainland near the coast, probably in the vicinity of San Antonio bay, Tex. The region was probably occupied by Karankawan people, but the data are too meager to determine the ethnic relations of the Doguenes. See Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 46, 1891. Aguenes.—Cabeza de Vaca (1555), Bandelier trans., 120, 1905. Deaguanes.—Ibid., 79. Deguenes.—Ibid., 123. Doguenes.—Cabeza de Vaca, Smith trans., 137, 1871. Draguanes.—Ibid., 56, ed. 1851.

Dohasan (Dohāsān, 'little bluff'; also Dohá, Doháte, 'bluff'). The hereditary name of a line of chiefs of the Kiowa for nearly a century. It has been borne by at least four members of the family, viz: (1) The first of whom there is remembrance was originally called Pá-dó-gá'-i or Padó-gá, 'White-faced-buffalo-bull,' and this name was afterward changed to Dohá or Doháte. He was a prominent chief. (2) His son was originally called Á'anoñ'te (a word of doubtful etymology), and afterward took his father's name of Doháte, which was changed to Dohásān, 'Little Dohate,' or 'Little-bluff,' for distinction. He became a great chief, ruling over the whole tribe from 1833 until his death on Cimarron r. in 1866, since which time no one has had unquestioned allegiance in the tribe. His portrait was painted in 1834 by Catlin, who calls him Teh-toot-sah, and his name appears in the treaty of 1837 as "To-ho-sa, the Top of the Mountain." (3) His son, whose widow is An-kímā, inherited his father's name, Dohásān. He was also a distinguished warrior, and died about 1894. His scalp shirt and war-bonnet case are in the National Museum. (4) The nephew of the great Dohásin II and cousin of the last mentioned (3) was also called Dohásin, and always wore a silver cross with the name "Tohasan" engraved upon it. He was the author of the Scott calendar and died in 1892. Shortly before his death he changed his name to Dánpá', 'shoulder-blade,' from dán, 'shoulder' (?), leaving only Ankímá's husband (3) to bear the hereditary name, which is now extinct. Dohasan II, the greatest chief in the history of the Kiowa tribe, in 1833 succeeded Á'dá'te, who had been deposed for having allowed his people to be surprised and massacred by the Osage in that year. It was chiefly through his influence that peace was made between the Kiowa and Osage after the massacre referred to, which has never been broken. In 1862, when the Cheyenne, Arapaho, Comanche, Kiowa, and Kiowa Apache were assembled on Arkansas r. to receive annuities, the agent threatened them with punishment if they did not cease their raids. Dohasan listened in perfect silence to the end, when he sprang to his feet, and calling the attention of the agent to the hundreds of tipis in the valley below, replied in a characteristic speech: "The white chief is a fool. He is a coward. His heart is small—not larger than a pebble stone. His men are not strong—too few to contend against my warriors. They are women. There are three chiefs—the white chief, the Spanish chief, and myself. The Spanish chief and myself are men. We do bad toward each other sometimes—stealing horses and taking scalps—but we do not get mad and act the fool. The white chief is a child, and, like a child, gets mad quick. When my young men, to keep their women and children from starving, take from the white man passing through our country, killing and driving away our buffalo, a cup of sugar or coffee, the white chief is angry and threatens to send his soldiers. I have looked for them a long time, but they have not come. He is a coward. His heart is a woman's. I have spoken. Tell the great chief what I have said." In addition to the treaty of 1837 Dohasan was also a signer of the treaty of Ft Atkinson, Ind. T., July 27, 1853, and that of Oct. 18, 1865, on Little Arkansas r., Kansas. See Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 1, 1898.

Dokis Band. A Chippewa band, so named from their chief, residing on a reservation of 30,300 acres at the head of French r., where it leaves L. Nipissing, Ontario. They have a large admixture of French blood, are Roman Catholics, and obtain a livelihood by hunting and fishing and by working in adjacent lumber camps. The band numbered 62 in 1884 and 78 in 1904. (J. M.)

Dolls. Dolls were common among all the American tribes. They were fashioned from stone, wood, clay, skin, dough, corncobs, plants, and rags. Those used merely as playthings were frequently elaborately dressed by the mother in accordance with tribal costumes. Human hair was sometimes fastened to the head and arranged in the tribal style, the face was painted, the eyebrows were marked, and tattoo lines were indicated. Labrets of bone or shell were put in place among the tribes which used these objects, and the doll was further adorned with earrings, bracelets, and necklaces. The Eskimo father carved the small bone or ivory dolls more or less elaborately, and made them stand upright, to the great delight of the children. Among these people there was a festival in which small figures or dolls were used to represent the dead, at which time the people prepared and partook of food in their presence in memory of the time when those represented were living. The corncob and rag dolls were usually of the child's own manufacture. Those made of dough were used in a social ceremony among the Iroquois. Dolls were provided with cradles, clothing, tents, and vessels and utensils of clay.

EASTERN ESKIMO DOLL

WESTERN ESKIMO DOLL

In the S. W. and the extreme N. little figures were made for ceremonies in which mythic ancestors or dead relatives were remembered. Travelers have sometimes mistaken these figures for idols. Among the Hopi these little figures are of soft cottonwood, so cut and painted as to indicate in miniature the elaborate head-dress, decorated face, body, and clothing of those who represent kachinas, or impersonations of ancestral "breath bodies" or spirits of men. These dolls are not worshipped, but are made by the priests in their kivas during the great spring ceremonies as presents for the little girls, to whom they are presented on the morning of the last day of the festival by men personating kachinas (Fewkes). In this way the young become familiar with the complicated and symbolic masks, ornaments, and garments worn during tribal and religious ceremonies. See Amusements, Child life, Games.

HOPÍ KACHINA DOLL OF WOOD (1-4)

HOPÍ DOLL OF CLAY (1-2)

Consult Dorsey and Voth in Field Columb. Mus. Publ., 55 and 66; Fewkes in 17th, 19th, and 21st Reps. B. A. E., and Internat. Archiv. Ethnog., vii, 1894; Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 1898; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899; Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 1894. (A. C. F.)

Dolores (contracted from Span. Nuestra Señora de los Dolores, 'Our Lady of Sorrows'). A mission established among the Pima by Father Kino in 1687, just above Cucurpe on the headwaters of the w. branch of the Río Sonora, in n. w. Sonora, Mexico. According to Venegas it had 2 visitas (probably Remedios and Cocospera) in 1721. Pop. 29 in 1730.

Dolores.—Mange (1699) in Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 352, 1889. Los Dolores.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 347, 1864. Nuestra Señora de los Dolores.—Kino (1694) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., i, 248, 1856.

Dolores. A Spanish Franciscan mission established in California within the site of the city of San Francisco on Oct. 9, 1776. When Gov. Portola, in searching for Monterey, came to the bay of San Francisco, that had remained hidden to all previous explorers, Father Junipero Serra regarded it as a miraculous discovery, for the visitador-general in naming the missions to be established at the havens of the coast had said to the mission president, who was disappointed because the name of the founder of the order was omitted, that if St Francis desired a mission he must show his port. The missionaries impatiently brooked the obstacles that delayed planting a mission at the port that their patron saint had revealed. The site was beside the lagoon of Nuestra Señora de los Dolores, hence the mission of San Francisco de Assisi came to be known as Dolores mission. There were no natives present when the mission was opened. The inhabitants, the Romanan, had been driven from the peninsula by a hostile tribe who burned their rancherias and killed all who did not escape on rafts. When the fugitives returned to find their home occupied by the Spaniards they were disposed to contend for its possession. In the first fight the soldiers fired in the air, in the next they shot a native, upon which the savages begged for peace, but fled when the Spaniards released after a whipping those that they had captured, and were not seen again until spring. The missionaries gradually won their confidence after they returned and in October baptized 17 adults. At the end of 5 years there were 215 converts, and in 1796 they numbered 720. The neophytes when harshly treated could escape easily by water, and after 280 had run away and the soldiers were unable to stay the exodus the head missionary sent out a party of 15 Christian Indians, of whom 7 were slain by the Cuchillones. A priest, Father Fernandez, brought charges against the missionary fathers, and Gov. Borica demanded that they reform their treatment—long tasks, scant rations, and cruel punishments, evidenced by 200 escapes and as many deaths within a year. Although Father Lasuen, the mission president, promised and endeavored to remedy the alleged evils, the Indians continued to run away, and the missionaries, in 1797, sent out another party of neophytes to gather in the lost flock, but the former barely escaped the fate of the preceding party. The Saclan harbored the fugitives and threatened to kill the mission Indians if they continued to work and the soldiers if they interferred. The governor sent a detachment of troops to punish them, and in the fight 2 soldiers were wounded and 7 natives killed. The Cuchian were also attacked and the soldiers returned with 83 of the fugitive Christians. During the decade 1,213 natives were baptized and 1,031 buried, and at the end of the 18th century the neophyte population was 644. The cattle had increased to 8,200 head, and the crop in 1800 was 4,100 bushels, half of it wheat. The land about the mission was sterile, and fields 12 m. distant were planted. The neophytes first dwelt in rude huts of willow poles and tule, but between 1793 and 1798 adobe houses were built for every family and the thatched roofs of the church and mission buildings were replaced with tiles. On looms made by the Indians woolen cloth was produced in quantities sufficient to clothe the converts and blankets were woven for the presidio. In 1796 the manufacture of coarse pottery was begun. In 1820 the neophyte population was 622, but the mortality continued to be greater than in any other mission. In 1830 the population was 219. The sheep fell off to one-fifth of the former number and only a third as much grain was produced as in 1810. The decline was due to the division of the mission when San Rafael was founded in a healthier location in 1817 and San Francisco Solano in 1823. While the baptisms were exceeded only at San José, there were 2,100 deaths at San Francisco Dolores and San Rafael, whither half the neophytes were removed, in the 10 years ending with 1820. Solano, founded with the intention of transferring the entire mission, received half the neophytes of the parent mission, but returned a part when it was constituted an independent establishment. The buildings fell into ruin, except the church, which is still standing as part of the Dolores mission church of San Francisco. The number of neophytes fell to 204 in 1832, and in 1840 there were 89 at San Mateo and about 50 scattered about the district. The civilian administrator found little property in 1834 and soon none was left. The neophytes received nothing; they were never organized in a pueblo, but were apportioned among the settlers and held in servitude against their will. In 1843 the last remnant, 8 aged starvelings, appealed to the Government for help.

The tribes that came first under the influence of the Dolores mission were the Ahwaste, Altahmo, Olhon, Romonan, and Tulomo, all speaking the same language, the Costanoan, as did some other tribes, not so numerous, that lived on or near the thickly peopled shores of San Francisco bay. They subsisted by hunting and fishing. Both sexes often wore their hair short, having the custom of cutting it when afflicted by sorrow or misfortune. Those of the s. allowed their hair to grow and wore the long carefully dressed braids adorned with beads and trinkets wound about the head like a turban. The medicine-men, through their incantations, pretended to be able to bring fish as well as to cure the sick. Of the blubber of stranded whales and of seals they were extremely fond, and they ate nuts, berries, and camas bulbs, and made bread of seeds and acorns. The people who came to the mission from the opposite shore of the bay and the estuary were of lighter hue and more corpulent than the coast Indians. The men went naked, coating themselves with mud on cold mornings; the women wore an apron of sedge or rushes reaching before and behind to the knees and a cloak of the same material over their shoulders. People are said to have married and parted without ceremony, mothers taking their children with them, and men often took whole families of sisters for their wives. These Indians burned their dead.

The following list of rancherias and tribes from which the mission drew its neophytes is adapted from those recorded in the parish books (Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861):

Abmactac, Aenagis, Aeyum, Aleta, Altahmo, Aluenchi, Amutaja, Anamas, Anamon, Anchin, Aramay, Assunta, Atarpe, Cachanegtac, Caprup, Carascan, Cazopo, Chagunte, Chanigtac, Chapugtac, Chayen, Chipisclin, Chipletac, Chiputca, Chuchietac, Chupean, Churmutce, Chutchin, Chynau, Conop, Elarroyde, Flunmuda, Gamchines, Genau, Guanlen, Guloismistac, Halchis, Horocroc, Huimen, Hunctu, Itaes, Joquizara, Josquigard, Juniamue, Juris, Lamsim, Libantone, Livangebra, Livangelva, Luianeglua, Luidneg, Macsinum, Malvaitac, Mitline, Muingpe, Naig, Naigue, Napa, Olestura, Ompivromo, Otoacte, Oturbe, Ousint, Patnetac, Petaluma, Proqueu, Pructaca, Pruristac, Puichon, Purutea, Puycone, Quet, Sadaues, Sagunte, Saraise, Saruntac, Satumuo, Saturaumo, Sica, Sipanum, Siplichiquin, Siscastac, Sitintajac, Sitlintaj, Sittintac, Ssalayme, Ssichitea, Ssipudca, Ssiti, Ssogereate, Ssupichum, Subchiam, Suchui, Sunchaque, Talcen, Tamalo, Tatquinte, Timigtac, Timsin, Titivu, Torose, Totola, Tubisuste, Tuca, Tupuic, Tupainte, Tuzsint, Uchium, Uebure, Ussete, Vagerpe, Vectaca, Yacmui, Yacomui, Zomiomi, Zucigin. The names of the tribes which furnished the early converts were Ahwaste, Bolbone, Chiguau, Cuchilones, Chuscan, Cotejen, Junatca, Karkh, Khulpuni, Olemos, Olhon, Olmolococ, Olpen, Quemelentus, Quirogles, Saclan, Salzon (Suisun), Sanchines, Saucou, Sichican, Uchium, Uquitinac.

See Hittell, Hist. Cal., 1885-97; Bancroft, Hist. Cal., 1886-90; Palou, Life of Serra, 102, 1884.

Domestication. The Indian learned a great deal from and was helped in his efforts by the actions of animals in their wild state. The period of domestication began when he held them in captivity for the gratification of his desires or they became attached to him for mutual benefit. In this process there are gradations:

1. Commensalism begins when food is left for serviceable animals to devour, so that these may give notice of danger or advantage. The coyote is said to reveal the presence of the mountain lion. Small animals are tolerated for their skins and flesh. Plants would be sown to attract such creatures as bees, and tame animals would be regularly fed at later stages.

2. Confinement is represented by such activities as keeping fish and other aquatic animals in ponds; caging birds and carrying off their young, gallinaceous fowl last; tying up dogs or muzzling them; corralling ruminants, and hobbling or tethering wild horses so as to have them near, keep them away from their enemies, or fatten them for eating. The aborigines had no difficulty in breeding some animals in confinement, but few wild birds will thus propagate, and the Indians could obtain those to tame only by robbing nests. Lawson says of the Congaree of North Carolina that "they take storks and cranes before they can fly and breed them as tame and familiar as dung-hill fowls."

3. Keeping animals for their service or produce, as dogs for retrieving game or catching fish, hawks for killing birds; various creatures for their fleece, hides, feathers, flesh, milk, etc., and taming them for amusement and for ceremonial or other purposes, were a later development. Roger Williams says the Narraganset Indians of Rhode Island kept tame hawks about their cabins to frighten small birds from the fields.

4. Actually breaking them to work, training dogs, horses, and cattle for packing, sledding, hauling travois, and, later, for riding, constitutes complete domestication.

In pre-Columbian times the dog was the most perfectly subdued animal of the North Americans, as much so as the llama in w. South America. But other species of mammals, as well as birds, were in different degrees rendered tractable. After the coming of the whites the methods of domesticating animals were perfected, and their uses multiplied. Moreover, horses, sheep, cattle, donkeys, hogs, and poultry were added to the list, and these profoundly modified the manners and customs of many Indian tribes.

Domestication of animals increased the food supply, furnished pets for old and young, aided in raising the Indian above the plane of low savagery, helped him to go about, multiplied his wants, furnished a standard of property and a medium of exchange, took the load from the back of women, and provided more abundant material for economic, artistic, and ceremonial purposes.

Domestication had a different development in each culture area. In the Arctic region the dog was preeminent; it was reared with unremitting care, the women often suckling the puppies; all its life it was trained to the sled. As the dogs were never perfectly tamed, it was no easy task to drive a team of them; yet by the aid of dogs and sleds, in combination with umiaks, the whole polar area of America was exploited by the Eskimo, who found these an excellent means of rapid transit from Asia to the Atlantic. In recent years the successful introduction of the reindeer among the Alaskan tribes has proved a blessing. The Mackenzie-Yukon district is a canoe country, and domestication of the dog was not vigorously prosecuted until the Hudson's Bay Company gave the stimulus. But southward, among the Algonquian and Siouan tribes of the great lakes and the plains, this animal attained its best as a hunter and a beast of burden and traction. It was also reared for food and for ceremonial purposes. Not more than 50 pounds could be borne by one dog, but twice that amount could be moved on a travois. The coming of the horse (q. v.) to the great plains was a boon to the Indian tribes, all of which at once adopted the new instrument of travel and transportation. The horse was apotheosized; it became a standard of value, and fostered a greater diversity of occupations. But the more primitive methods of domestication were still practised throughout the middle region. In the n. Pacific area dogs were trained to hunt; but here and elsewhere this use of the dog was doubtless learned from the whites. Morice writes of the Athapascan tribes of the interior of British Columbia: "Owing to the semi-sedentary state of those Indians and the character of their country, only the dog was ever domesticated among them in the common sense of the word. This had a sort of wolfish aspect, and was small, with pointed, erect ears, and uniformly gray, circumstances which would seem to imply that the domesticating process had remained incomplete. The flesh of those wolf dogs was relished by the employees of the Northwestern and Hudson's Bay companies, who did not generally eat that of those of European descent. In a broader sense, those aborigines also occasionally domesticated and have continued to domesticate other animals, such as black bears, marmots, foxes, etc., which they took when young and kept as pets, tied up to the tent post or free. Such animals, as long as they remained in a state of subjection, were considered as members of the family and regarded as dogs, though often called by the endearing names of 'sons,' 'daughters,' 'grandsons,' etc. Birds were never caged, but might be seen at times hobbling about with the tips of their wings cut."

In the California-Oregon area birds of gay plumage were caged, plucked, and then set free. On Santa Catalina id. birds called large crows by the Spaniards were kept and worshipped, recalling Boscana's story of the Shoshonean condor cult on the adjacent California coast. In the S. W., the desert area, the whole development of domestication is seen. The coyote was allowed to feed about the camps. The Querecho (Vaquero Apache) of Coronado in 1541 had a great number of large dogs which they obliged to carry their baggage when they moved from place to place (see Travois). Some of the Pueblo tribes practised also the caging of eagles, the rearing of turkeys, and, since the coming of the Spaniards, the herding of sheep, goats, burros, and horses. (O. T. M.)

Donacona. A Huron chief found by Jacques Cartier, in 1535, residing with his people at the junction of St Croix and St Lawrence rs., Canada. Although Cartier was well received and kindly treated by this chief, he managed, partly by stratagem and partly by force, to convey the latter aboard his vessel and carry him to France where he soon died. (C. T.)

Donally's Town. A (Creek?) settlement mentioned in 1793 as situated on Flint r., Ga.—Melton in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., II, 372, 1832.

Doosedoowe ('plover,'—Hewitt). A clan of the Iroquois.

Asco.—French writer (1666) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 47, 1855. Doo-ese-doo-wé.—Morgan, League Iroq., 46, 1851 (Seneca form). Nicohes.—French writer (1666), op. cit. Tā-wis-tā-wis.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (Tuscarora name).

Dostlan-lmagai (Dō-sl'an-lmagā'), 'west-coast rear-town people'. A local subdivision of the Stlenga-lanas, one of the larger Haida divisions on the Raven side, who lived on the N. W. coast of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. A small section of them was called Kaihl-lanas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 271, 1905. Dū Hāadē.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., 2d s., II, sec. 2, 124, 1895. TōstlEngil-nagai.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 22, 1898.

Dotame. A tribe of which Lewis and Clark learned from Indian informants. They were said to speak the Comanche language and to number 30 warriors, or 120 souls, in 10 lodges. No traders had been among them; they trafficked usually with the Arikara, were hostile toward the Sioux, but friendly with the Mandan, the Arikara, and with their neighbors. From the use of the name in connection with Cataka (Kiowa Apache) and Nemousin (Comanche), the Dotame are seemingly identifiable with the Kiowa. Detame.—Fisher, New Trav., 26, 1812. Do-ta ma.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 102, 1905. Do-ta-me.—Ibid.

Dotchetonne. An unidentified Texan tribe allied to the Caddo in 1687 (Joutel in Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878). The ending suggests dinne, time, the Athapascan term for 'people,' and hence a possible Apache connection.

Dotle. A Koyukukhotana village on Koyukuk r., Alaska; pop. 12 in 1885.

Dotlekakat.—Allen, Rep. on Alaska, 140, 1887.

Dotuskuti (Dō't!ask!asL, 'those who left the west coast'). A subdivision of the Sagua-lanas, a division of the Eagle clan of the Haida. The name seems to imply that they formerly lived on the W. coast of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., but in historical times they were in the town of Kung, in Naden harbor, with the other Sagua-lanas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 275, 1905.

Doughnut stones. See Perforated stones.

Douglas. The local name for a body of Lower Lilloet between Lilloet and Harrison lakes, Brit. Col.; pop. 76 in 1904.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. II, 74, 1905.

Doustioni. A tribe, formerly living on Red r. of Louisiana, that from its proximity to the Natchitoches and the Yatasi was probably kindred thereto and belonged to the Caddo confederacy. The people are mentioned by Joutel, in 1687, as allies of the Kadohadacho. Pénicaud, in 1712, met them with a party of Natchitoches, and remarks that for the 5 years previous they had been constantly wandering, and living by the chase (Margry, Déc., V, 488). Their warriors at that time numbered about 200. The cause of the abandonment of their village is unknown, but when in 1714 they accepted the invitation of St Denys to settle near the Natchitoches, and seed was given them, they seem to have returned to their agricultural and village life. In 1719 La Harpe speaks of them as numbering 150 and dwelling on an island in Red r. not far distant from the French post among the Natchitoches. If any survive they are merged with the kindred Caddo in Oklahoma. (A. C. F.)

Douesdonqua.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878. Doustiany.—Pénicaud (1712), ibid., V, 498, 1883. Doustionis.—Pénicaud (1713) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., I, 117, 1869.

Dragging-canoe (translation of his Indian name, Tsíyu-gúnsín; known also as Cheucunsene and Kunnesee). A prominent leader of those Cherokee who were hostile to the Americans during the Revolutionary war. He moved with his party to the site of Chickamauga, where he continued to harass the Tennessee settlements until 1782, when the Chickamauga towns were broken up. His people then moved farther down the river and established the "five lower towns," but these also were destroyed in 1794. In accounts of the Creek war Dragging-canoe is mentioned as one of the prominent Cherokee chiefs in alliance with Jackson, and a participant in the last great encounter at Horseshoe Bend.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 54, 63, 97, 1900.

Dramatic representation. Among many tribes ceremonies were dramatic in character. Every religious rite had its dramatic phases or episodes expressive of beliefs, emotions, or desires, but in certain instances the dramatic element dominated and became differentiated from the ceremony. In such cases there were masked and costumed actors with stage setting, effigies, and other properties, and events, historical or mythic, in the cultural history or life of the tribe were represented. The most elaborate of these exhibitions were those of the Pueblo peoples and the tribes of the N. W. coast. Among the Hopi a dramatic representation occurs yearly in March either in the open plaza or in a kiva. The space between the fire and one end of the room is set apart as the stage; at the rear a decorated screen is placed, behind which are men who sound shell trumpets and manipulate the effigies of a plumed serpent, which, at times, are projected through the screen and contend with the actors in front. Marionettes of the Corn-maids are occasionally employed and are skilfully managed; birds walk about and whistle; imitation fields of corn are swept over by serpent effigies, and men representing primal gods struggle with the effigies in an effort to overcome them. The stage setting and personnel are changed for every act, and during the change blankets are held around the fire to darken the kiva.

In the large wooden dwellings of the N. W. myths and legends were dramatized. The performance took place at one end of the house, where concealed openings in the painted wall admitted the actors who personated gods and heroes, and there were devices to give realistic effect to strange and magical scenes. Songs and dances accompanied the dramatic presentation.

Some of the great tribal ceremonies of the inland peoples, while religious in initiative, were social in general character. They portrayed episodes in the past history of the tribe for the instruction of the younger generation. There were societies a part of whose function was to preserve the history of its membership. This was done by means of song and the dramatic representation of the acts the song commemorated.

The Pawnee were remarkable for their skill in sleight-of-hand performances. Seeds were sown, plants grew, blossomed, and yielded fruit; spears were thrust through the body and many other surprising feats performed in the open lodge with no apparent means of concealment. During many dramatic representations, particularly those which took place in the open air, episodes were introduced in which a humorous turn was given to some current event in the tribe. Sometimes clowns appeared and by their antics relieved the tensify of the dramatic presentation. Among the Pueblo Indians these "delight-makers," as Bandelier translates the name of the Koshare of the Queres villagers, constitute a society which performs comedies in the intervals of the public dances. See Ceremony, Dance.

Consult Bandelier, Delight Makers, 1900; Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 1895; Dorsey and Voth in Field Columb. Mus. Publ., Anthropol. ser.; Fewkes (1) in 15th and 19th Reps. B. A. E., 1897, 1900; (2) Proc. Wash. Acad. Sci., 11, 1900; (3) various articles in Am. Anthropol. and Jour. Am. Folklore; Fletcher in Proc. A. A. A. S., XLV, 1896; Matthews in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., VI, 1902; Powell in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 1900; Stevenson in 23d Rep. B. A. E., 1905. (A. C. F.)

Dreams and Visions. Most revelations of what was regarded by the Indians as coming from the supernatural powers were believed to be received in dreams or visions. Through them were bestowed on man magical abilities and the capacity to foresee future events, to control disease, and to become able to fill the office of priest or of leader. It was the common belief of the Indians that these dreams or visions must be sought through the observance of some rite involving more or less personal privation; an exception is found in the Mohave who believe that the dream seeks the individual, coming to him before birth, or during infancy, as well as in mature life. In general the initiation of a man's personal relations to the unseen through dreams and visions took place during the fast which occurred at puberty, and the thing seen at that time became the medium of supernatural help and knowledge, and in some tribes determined his affiliations. It was his sacred object. It had no reference to his kindred, but was strictly personal in its efficacy, and he painted it on his person or his belongings as a prayer for assistance—a call for help in directing his actions. Any dream of ordinary sleep in which this object appeared had meaning for him and its suggestions were heeded. Men with a natural turn of mind toward the mysterious frequently became shamans and leaders in rites which dealt with the occult. Such persons, from the time of their first fast, cultivated their ability to dream and to have visions; the dreams came during natural sleep, the visions during an ecstasy when the man was either wholly or partially unconscious of his surroundings. It was generally believed that such men had power to bring or to avert disaster through direct communication with the unseen.

Many of the elaborate ceremonies observed among the tribes were said to have been received through visions, the actual performance following faithfully in detail the prefiguration of the vision. So, too, many of the shrines and their contents were believed to have been supernaturally bestowed in a vision upon some one person whose descendants were to be the hereditary keepers of the sacred articles. The time for the performance of rites connected with a shrine, and also other ceremonies, frequently depended on an intimation received in a dream.

The dreams of a man filling an important position, as the leader of a war party, were often regarded as significant, especially if he had carried with him some one of the sacred tribal objects as a medium of supernatural communication. This object was supposed to speak to him in dreams and give him directions which would insure safety and success. Forecasting the future was deemed possible by means of artificially induced visions. The skin of a freshly killed animal, or one that had been well soaked for the purpose, was wound around the neck of a man until the gentle pressure on the veins caused insensibility, then in a vision he saw the place toward which his party was going and all that was to take place was prefigured. In some tribes a skin kept for this special purpose was held sacred and used for divining by means of an induced vision. Some Indians employed plants, as the peyote, or mescal button, for like purposes. That the spirit left the body and traveled independently, and was able to discern objects distant both in time and space, was believed by certain tribes; others thought that the vision came to the man as a picture or in the form of a complete dramatic ceremony.

The general belief concerning dreams and visions seems to have been that the mental images seen with closed eyes were not fancies but actual glimpses of the unseen world where dwelt the generic types of all things and where all events that were to take place in the visible world were determined and prefigured.

Consult Fletcher in 22d Rep. B. A. E., 1903; Kroeber in Am. Anthropol., iv, no. 2, 1902; Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896. (A. C. F.)

Dress. See Adornment, Clothing.

Drills and Drilling. The first drill was a development of the primitive awl, a sharp-pointed instrument of bone, stone, or copper which was held in one hand, pressed against the object, and turned back and forth until a hole was bored.

The point was set in a socket of bone or wood. By setting it in a transverse handle increased pressure and leverage were obtained, with increased penetrating power. Artificially perforated objects of bone, fish bones, ivory, pottery, stone, and wood, common to all periods of the world's history, are found in mounds, caves, shell-heaps, and burial places of the Indians.

The holes vary from an eighth to a half inch in diameter, and from a fourth of an inch to 6 in. or more in depth. Shell, bone, and stone were drilled to make beads. Stone pipes with bowl and stem openings of different sizes were common, and whistles were made of stone and bone. Tubes in stone, several inches long, with walls scarcely an eighth of an inch thick, were accurately drilled. The columella of the Busycon shell was bored through for beads. The graceful butterfly-shaped objects found throughout E. United States were perforated with surprising accuracy. It has been said that in prehistoric times the natives bored holes through pearls by means of heated copper spindles. The points of drills were made of copper rolled into a hollow cylinder or of pieces of reed, or of solid metal, stone, shell, or wood. Boring by means of hollow drills was usual among all early races of Europe, Asia, and Africa; it was common also in Mexico, and instances are not rare in the mounds of Ohio and elsewhere in the United States, but in North America solid drill points were generally employed. Grass and bristles were also used as drills, being worked by twirling between the thumb and the index finger. Points of hard stone or metal usually cut by direct contact, but where the points were of wood, dry or wet sand proved more effectual. At times the points were separate from the shafts and were firmly attached to the latter by strings of hide or vegetal fiber. The rapidity with which a drill cuts depends on the velocity of the revolution, the weight and size of its different parts, the hardness of the abrading material and of the object drilled, the diameter of the hole, and its depth. The point used is indicated by the form of the perforation. The frequency with which objects are found bored from both sides is proof that the Indian appreciated the advantage of reducing friction. Progress in the elaboration of drills consisted mainly in heightening speed of revolution.

SINGLE HAND DRILLS

TUBULAR DRILL OF SHEET-COPPER AND SECTION OF BORING

DRILL-POINT OF STONE AND SECTION OF BORING

If the drill-point be of wood much depends on its hardness, for when too hard the wood grinds the sand to powder, while if it be too soft the grains catch at the base of the cavity and cut away the shaft. Only wood of proper texture holds the sand as in a matrix and enables it to cut to the best advantage. The insides of drill holes show by the character of their striae whether the cutting was accomplished by direct pressure or with the aid of sand.

The simplest form of drill was a straight shaft, varying from a fourth to three-fourths of an inch in diameter and from 10 in. to 2 ft in length. This shaft was revolved in alternating directions between the hands, or, when the shaft was held horizontally, it was rolled up and down the thigh with the right hand, the point of the drill being pressed against the object held in the left hand; or at times the object was held between the naked feet while the drill was revolved

SECTION OF BEAD WITH BICONICAL PERFORATION

THE REVOLVING SHAFT DRILL USED BY A HUPA

The strap drill, used both as a fire drill and as a perforator, is an improvement on the shaft drill, both in the number of its revolutions and in the pressure which may be imparted to the shaft. The shaft is kept in position by means of the headpiece of wood, which is held in the teeth. A thong that is wound once round the shaft, one end being held in each hand, is pulled alternately to the right and to the left. The thong was sometimes furnished with hand pieces of bone or bear's teeth to give a firmer grip to the strap. This drill, apparently known to the cave people of France, as it certainly was to the early peoples of Greece, Egypt, and India, has been used by the Greenlanders from early times and is employed also by the Aleut. To a person using the strap drill the jar to the teeth and head is at first quite severe, but much of the disagreeable sensation disappears with use.

STRAP DRILL USED BY ESKIMO OF ALASKA

ESKIMO BOW DRILL SHOWING PARTS

Closely related to the strap drill, but a great improvement over the latter, is the bow drill, which can be revolved with much greater speed. The head piece of the bow drill is held in position with the left hand, while the strap is attached to the two ends of a bow, and after wrapping around the shaft, as with the strap drill, is alternately revolved by a backward and forward motion of the bow.

The pump drill, still employed in the arts, is said to have been known to the Iroquois and is used by the Pueblo Indians.

This drill consists of a shaft which passes through a disk of stone, pottery, or wood, and a crosspiece through which the shaft also runs; to each end of the crosspiece is attached a string or buckskin thong having sufficient play to allow it to cross the top of the shaft and to permit the crosspiece to reach close to the disk. This disk is turned to wind the string about the shaft; this raises the crosspiece. By pressing down the crosspiece after a few turns have been taken, the shaft is made to revolve and the disk receives sufficient impetus to rewind the string, which by successive pressure and release, continues the reciprocal movement necessary to cutting. The speed attained by the pump drill is much greater than with the bow drill or the strap drill, and the right hand is left free to hold the object that is being drilled. The pump drill, although long in common use among the Pueblo Indians, is probably of foreign origin.

USE OF BOW DRILL

BOW DRILL WITH STONE POINT. a, HAND-PIECE

USE OF PUMP DRILL BY A ZUÑI

PUMP DRILL

A remarkable and unique drill was recently used by the Indians of Round valley, Cal., for drilling small holes through hard white shells. Its shaft is of hard wood, the disk taking the place of the crosspiece and the weight of the shaft giving sufficient impetus. The thong of this drill passes over the shaft and through opposite sides of the disk, and is attached to the shaft near the bottom. The disk moves freely up and down the shaft, and the thong is so wrapped that as the string unwinds from the top of the shaft it winds below, and vice versa. This drill revolves little if any faster than the shaft drill, and appears to cut chiefly, but not entirely, with the downward pressure. The use of this drill is apparently confined to a very restricted area. See Shellwork, Stonework.

Consult Hough, Firemaking Apparatus, Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1888; McGuire, A Study of the Primitive Methods of Drilling, Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1894. (J. D. M.)

Dry-painting. An art existing among the Indians, especially those of the S. W., the products of which have been named sand altars, sand pictures or paintings, and sand mosaics by various authors. It is doubtless of aboriginal origin and of great antiquity, but it has come to the knowledge of white people only within the last 25 years. The art has been found among various Pueblo tribes of New Mexico and Arizona, among the wilder Navaho and Apache of the same region, and, in crude form, among the Cheyenne, Arapaho, and Siksika. According to Navaho information, dry-painting was practised also by the Ute and the cliff-dwellers, but the latter may refer to one or more of the Hopi clans that occupied Canyon de Chelly, Arizona, within comparatively recent time (see Asa). There is evidence of a wide extent of the art among the Indians, but it is probable that it has been yet more widely practised in the past, or may even be more widely practised at the present among tribes who have concealed it from civilized men.

So far as can be learned dry-painting has reached its greatest perfection among the Navaho, whose designs are larger, more numerous, and more elaborate than those of any other tribe. These Indians make their pictures almost exclusively in connection with religious ceremonies and draw them of various sizes. Some of their larger pictures, in their great 9 days' ceremonies, are 10 or 12 ft in diameter, and represent, in conventional forms, various gods of their mythology, divine ceremonies, lightning, sunbeams, rainbows, mountains, animals, and plants, having a mythic or traditional significance. Among this people, in order to prepare a groundwork for a sacred picture in the lodge, several young men collect, with ceremonial observances, a quantity of dry sand, which is carried in blankets, thrown on the floor of the lodge, spread over a surface of sufficient size and to the depth of 2 or 3 in., and made smooth and level by means of the broad oaken battens used in weaving. The pigments represent the 5 sacred colors of Navaho mythology—white, blue, yellow, black, and red. For the greater part of the work the white, yellow, and red are made of finely powdered sandstone of these colors; the black of powdered charcoal mixed with a little sandstone to give it stability; and the "blue" (really gray) of black and white mixed. These powders are prepared before the picture is begun and are kept on improvised trays of juniper bark. Sometimes, for certain ornamental parts of the work, more precious pigments than these are used. To apply the pigments the artist picks up a small quantity between his first and second fingers and his opposed thumb and allows it to flow slowly as he moves his hand. When he takes up his pinch of powder, he blows on his fingers to remove aberrant particles and to keep them from falling on the picture out of place. When he makes a mistake he does not brush away the colored powder, but obliterates it by pouring sand on it, then draws the correct design on the new surface. The drawings are begun as near the center as the design will permit, due regard being paid to the points of the compass, which have an established order of precedence in Navaho ceremony. The figures in the periphery of the picture are made last, in order that the operators may not have to step over and thus possibly spoil the finished work. The pictures are drawn according to an exact system, except in certain well-defined cases where the artist is allowed to indulge his fancy. On the other hand, some parts are measured by palms, and not the slightest deviation can be made from the established design. Straight and parallel lines are drawn with the aid of a tightened cord. The naked bodies of the gods are first drawn and then the clothing is put on. The shaman who enacts the part of master of ceremonies does little more than direct and criticize the work. A number of men who have been initiated into the mystery of the ceremony perform the labor, each working on a different part, and often spending many hours on one picture. When it is finished, ceremonies are performed over it, and then with song and ceremony it is obliterated. When no semblance of it remains, the sand of which it was made is gathered in blankets and thrown away at a distance from the lodge. In the ceremonies of the Pueblo Indians a picture is allowed to remain several days, while the Navaho make and destroy a picture in a day. No permanent copies of the dry-paintings are preserved by the Navaho; indeed, until recently they had no means of making such copies. The paintings are not made in the summer, hence their designs must be carried from winter to winter in the fallible memories of men; yet the shamans declare that the pictures have been transmitted unaltered for many generations. Although this declaration may reasonably be doubted, there is some evidence in its favor.

DISK DRILL: CALIFORNIA

During the Sun-dance ceremony of the Cheyenne a dry-painting is made in a lodge to represent the morning star. The field of the painting is of plain sand, and the design is made in a strictly prescribed manner by the use of black, red, yellow, and white dry paint, in order. Dotted lines representing stars form part of the painting, in this case those in white being drawn first because the white stars appear first in the morning. The unbroken lines are roads; the white represents the lodge-maker and his wife, the red line the road of the Cheyenne, the black the trail of the buffalo, and yellow the path of the sun. The dry-painting made by the Arapaho in their Sun-dance ceremony, while of symbolic significance, is of a much simpler character.

The sand pictures of the Hopi differ considerably from those of the Navaho. Some of the best are made in midsummer during the ceremonies of the Antelope society. In making dry-paintings the Hopi chief of the ceremony commonly begins at the periphery and follows the ceremonial circuit of the cardinal points in the use of pigments—first drawing yellow (north), then green or blue (west), then red (south), and finally white (east). The field of the picture, which is always made secretly in kivas among the Hopi, is valley sand sifted on the floor from a basket. These Indians never use cords or other measuring instruments. When the dry-painting is effaced pinches of the sand used in making it are deposited in prescribed places; e. g., a portion of the sand of an Antelope dry-painting is placed in a shrine of each cardinal point by the Snake chief (Fewkes).

See Dorsey in Field Columb. Mus. Publ., Anthropol. ser., iv, 1903, and ix, no. 2, 1905; Voth, ibid., iii, nos. 2, 4, 1901, 1903; Dorsey and Voth, ibid., iii, nos. 1, 3, 1901, 1902; Fewkes in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archæol., iv, 1894, and in various reports of the B. A. E.; Matthews (1) in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 1887, (2) in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., vi, 1902, (3) Navaho Legends, 1897; Stevenson in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 1891.

(W. M.)

Dsihlnaothihlani ('encircled mountain').

A Navaho clan, so named from Dsilnaothil mt., its original home.

Dsilnaocí'ni.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 103, 1890 (misprint). Dsilnaocí'line.—Ibid., 91.
Dsilnaocí'ni.—Ibid. Dsi'naocí'ni.—Matthews, Navaho Leg., 30, 1897.

Dsihlthani ('brow of the mountain').

A Navaho clan.

Biçani.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 104, 1890 (distinct from Bi'tá'ni, 'folded arms'; see Bi'thani). Bi'áni.—Matthews, Navaho Leg., 30, 1897. Dsilçani.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 104, 1890. Dsi'táni.—Matthews, Navaho Leg., 30, 1897.

Dsihtlani ('base of the mountain').

A Navaho clan.

Dsi'tlá'ni.—Matthews, Navaho Leg., 30, 1897. Dsi'tlá'ni.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 103, 1890.

Dtakhikiianpandhatazhi ('does not eat deer and elk'). Given as a subgens of the Ponca gens Nikapashna, but seemingly an error.

Jaqtí ki A'paa' d'atajǐ.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 228, 1897.

Dtedhezehdathazi ('does not eat buffalo tongues'). A subgens of the Ponca gens Washabe. J. O. Dorsey also gives it as a Nikapashna gens, but this is seemingly an error.

Je-feze gataji.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 228, 229, 1897.

Dtepaítazhi ('touch no buffalo head'). A subgens of the Dhatada gens of the Omaha.

Je-da it'aji.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 226, 1897.

Dtepaítazhi ('does not touch a buffalo head or skull'). A subgens of the Washabe gens of the Ponca.

Je-da it'aji.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 229, 1897.

Dtesanhadtadishishan (pertaining to the sacred skin of an albino buffalo cow). Given as a subgens of the Hanga gens of the Omaha, but it is seemingly an error.

Hanga-gti.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 227, 1897 ('real Hanga'). Je-feze gataji.—Ibid. ('do not eat buffalo tongues'). Jesahaja-fica.—Ibid.

Wacabe.—Ibid. ('dark buffalo').

Dtesinde ('buffalo tail'). Given as a subgens of the Washabegens of the Ponca.

Je-feze gataji.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 229, 1897 ('does not eat buffalo tongues'). Je-jinga gataji.—Ibid. ('does not eat a very young buffalo calf'). Je-sinde.—Ibid., 228.

Dtesindeitazhi ('does not touch a buffalo tail'). Given as a subgens of the Ponca gens Nikapashna.

Je-sinde-it'aji.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 228, 1897.

Duahe. Mentioned by Oviedo (Hist. Gen. Indies, III, 628, 1853) as one of the provinces or villages visited by Ayllon in 1520; probably on the South Carolina coast.

Duasno. A former Kawia village on or near the Cahuilla res., s. Cal. (Jackson and Kinney, Rep. Miss. Ind., 18, 1883). Possibly intended for Durazno (Span. 'peach').

Dubois. Mentioned only by McKenney and Hall (Ind. Tribes, III, 79, 1854) in a list of tribes. Possibly intended for Gens des Bois (Hankutchin, Tschantoga, etc.); otherwise unidentified.

Duck Lake. A local name for a band of Okinagan in s. w. British Columbia; pop. 24 in 1901.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1901, pt. II, 166.

Duck tablets. Prehistoric objects of undetermined use, made of wood, bone, and metal, and representing in a conventional manner the figure of a duck. The most typical examples are certain paddle-like objects of wood found by Cushing in excavations at Key Marco, Fla., and connected by him with other similar forms in stone and silver found also in Florida, as well as with various other classes of objects thought to embody the duck motive, such as the bird-stone (q. v.), the banner stone (q. v.), and the calumet (q. v.). Although these tablets were undoubtedly symbolic, the exact significance and manner of use can not

DUCK TABLET
OF WOOD;
FLORIDA;
ABOUT 1-30.
(CUSHING)

be determined, and they are therefore classed with problematical objects (q. v.). See Cushing in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., XXXV, 1897.

(W. H. H.)

Ducoigne, Jean Baptiste. A Kaskaskia chief at the beginning of the 19th century, noted mainly for his firm adherence to the United States and friendship for the whites. Reynolds (Pion. Hist., III, 22, 1887) describes him as a cunning half-blood of considerable talent. In his Memoirs, Gen. W. H. Harrison, who had dealings with Ducoigne, speaks of him as "a gentlemanly man, by no means addicted to drink, and possessing a very strong inclination to live like a white man; indeed has done so as far as his means would allow." Writing to the Secretary of War, he says: "Ducoigne's long and well-proved friendship for the United States has gained him the hatred of all the other chiefs and ought to be an inducement with us to provide as well for his happiness, as for his safety." According to Reynolds, Ducoigne asserted that neither he nor his people had shed the blood of white men. He was a signer of the treaties of Vincennes, Aug. 7 and 13, 1803; by the latter the United States agreed to build a house and inclose 100 acres of land for him. He had two sons, Louis and Jefferson, and a daughter, Ellen, who married a white man and in 1850 was living in Indian Ter. The name of Louis appears on behalf of the Kaskaskia in the treaty of Edwardsville, Ill., Sept. 25, 1818. Ducoigne's death probably occurred shortly before Oct., 1832, as it is stated in the treaty at Castor Hill, of that date, that there should be reserved "to Ellen Ducoigne, the daughter of their late chief," a certain tract of land. The name is perpetuated in that of the town of Duquoin, Perry co., Ill.

(C. T.)

Duel. See Nith songs.

Duezumac. A former Maricopa rancheria about 45 leagues (120 m.) above the mouth of the Rio Gila in s. w. Arizona; visited by Father Sedelmair in 1744.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 366, 1889.

Santa María del Agua Caliente.—Ibid., 367 (probably the same).

Dugh-sokum. Given as the name of a tribe (Mallet in Ind. Aff. Rep., 198, 1877), but really that of the place where Fort Madison, Wash., now stands. (Boulet in letter, Mar. 22, 1886).

Duharhe. A country on the coast of Florida, seen by Lucas Vazquez de Ayllon in 1520, whose people were light in color and had abundant hair. The chief who ruled over this and other provinces was said to have been nourished on a certain food that caused him to grow to a gigantic size.—Barcia, Ensayo, 4, 1723.

Dukes, Joseph. An interpreter, the son of half-blood Choctaw parents, born in the old Choctaw country, in the present Mississippi, in 1811. He attended one of the early mission schools at Mayhew, where he made such progress that he often acted as interpreter for Rev. Cyrus Kingsbury, the pioneer missionary, who never learned the Choctaw language. After the Choctaw had ceded to the United States their lands in the E., he remained in Mississippi for some years, helping Rev. Cyrus Byington prepare a Choctaw grammar and dictionary. In 1851 or 1852 he preached under the direction of Rev. Allen Wright at Wheelock, Ind. Ter., and assisted Mr Wright in translating the Old Testament. When Mr Wright was succeeded by Rev. John Edwards, in 1853, Dukes taught the latter Choctaw and aided him in translation in addition to his preaching. The first draft of the whole of the Old Testament from Genesis to II Kings, as well as of the Psalms, is attributed to him, and he probably translated also some portions of the New Testament. He died in 1861. He was the author of The History of Joseph and His Brethren (Utica, 1831, repr. 1836).—Pilling, Bibliog. Muskh. Lang., Bull. B. A. E., 1889.

Dulastunyi (Dulastūn'yī, 'potsherd place'). A former Cherokee settlement on Nottely r., Cherokee co., N. C., near the Georgia line. A half-breed Cherokee ball captain who formerly lived there, John Butler, or Tsanugásita (Sour John), having been defeated in a ball game, said, in contempt of his men, that they were of no more use than broken pots.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 406, 1900.

Dulchioni. A tribe, probably Caddoan, formerly living in villages on Red r. of Louisiana, 3 leagues below those of the Natchitoches. They were visited by Bienville and St Denys in 1700, when on their journey up Red r. to open trade between the Spanish and French provinces, and by La Harpe in 1719. Further than these brief references little is known of this tribe or of its subsequent fate. (A. C. F.) Dulchanois.—La Harpe (1719) in French, Hist. Coll. La., III, 19, 1861. Dulchinois.—Ibid., 72. Dulchionis.—La Harpe in Margry, Déc., VI, 277, 1886.

Duldulthawaiaime ('village where there are plenty of humming insects'). A former village of the Mishikhwutmetunne on Coquille r., Oreg. Dul-dul' ça-wai'-á-mé.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folklore, III, 232, 1890.

Dull Knife. A chief of a band of Northern Cheyenne who first came into public notice in 1868 when, as one of the representatives of his tribe, he signed the treaty of Ft Laramie, May 10, made by the Northern Cheyenne and Northern Arapahoe with the United States, his name appearing as "Tah-me-la-pash-me, or Dull Knife." In 1875, or early in 1876, Dull Knife's band, numbering about 400 warriors, suddenly attacked Washakie's band of Shoshoni, at that time on Big-horn r. near the mouth of Gray Bull r. In 1876 the Northern Cheyenne, including Dull Knife's band, joined the Sioux under Sitting Bull in their general uprising during this and the following year. They were present at and were participants in the Custer massacre on the Little Bighorn in June, 1876, and according to Chief Gall's statement, at the beginning of the battle the Cheyenne fought Custer's command while the Sioux attacked Reno's force, and after the latter had been driven back, the entire body of warriors turned on Custer's command. On Nov. 25, 1876, the cavalry under Col. Mackenzie attacked Dull Knife's camp at daybreak, destroying 173 lodges and capturing 500 ponies. Although the Indians escaped, with heavy loss, they later surrendered and were moved to Oklahoma and placed with the Southern Cheyenne. Greatly dissatisfied with their new home, an attempt was made by a large party under Dull Knife to escape to the N. in Sept., 1878. They were pursued and a part of them captured and confined at Ft Robinson, Nebr., whence they made a desperate attempt to escape on the night of Jan. 9, 1879, during which most of them, including Dull Knife, were killed. Consult Dunn, Massacres, 1886; Ellis, Ind. Wars, 1892; Ind. Aff. Rep. 1877-79; Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896. See the article Cheyenne. (C. T.)

Durango. A former Tepehuane settlement, now the capital of the Mexican state of the same name.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 318, 1864.

Dustayalunyi (Düstäyalūn'yī, 'where it made a noise, as of thunder or shooting,' apparently referring to a lightning stroke). A former Cherokee settlement about the mouth of Shooting cr., an affluent of Hiwassee r., near Hayesville, Clay co., N. C.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 517, 1900.

Dutch influence. The influence of the Dutch on the Indians n. of Mexico was confined to the period (1609-64) from Hudson's visit to the surrender of New Amsterdam and its dependencies to the English. The region in which this influence was exerted lies between the Susquehanna and Connecticut rs., and between the Atlantic and L. Ontario. Ft Orange, now the city of Albany, was a noted trading post of the Dutch, and there they came in contact with the Iroquoian tribes of the N., in addition to the Algonquian tribes of the S. The harsh conduct of Hudson toward the Indians met by him on Hudson r. was in part responsible for many subsequent conflicts between the Dutch and the natives. The Dutch were agents in furnishing brandy to the Indians of their territory and to the surrounding tribes, thereby undoing much of the good sought to be accomplished by the French authorities. The United Company of the New Netherlands, which exercised the first controlling influence in the region of Hudson r., was succeeded in 1621 by the powerful West India Company, and in 1632 was founded the fort on Connecticut r. where is now the city of Hartford. The trade in furs with the Pequot and other tribes was extensive. Disputes soon occurred that proved detrimental to trade, and De Forest (Hist. Inds. of Conn., 73, 1852) considers that it was the loss of the Dutch trade which induced the Pequot to invite the English of Massachusetts bay to settle in Connecticut, an act that led ultimately to their own destruction. Quarrels between the Dutch of New Amsterdam and the Indians, and the savage conduct of Gov. Kieft in 1642, led to much slaughter of natives during the next 2 years, and stirred up many of the Connecticut tribes against both the English and the Dutch. Some of them had engaged in intriguing, now against one, now against the other party of the whites. Friederici (Indianer und Anglo-Americaner, 16, 1900) takes a more favorable view of the attitude of the Dutch toward the Indians in general than that entertained by many authorities. The Dutch helped the Iroquois confederacy against the northern Algonquian hordes, and the wars thus initiated were in progress when the English conquest took place. They also aided the Mahican against the Mohawk (Ruttenber, Ind. Tribes of Hudson R., 56, 1872) and the Seneca against the Munsee, to whom the Swedes had supplied arms. Many troubles arose from the cupidity of the traders and settlers who sold firearms and liquors to the Indians, regardless of the general policy of the government (Nelson, Inds. of New Jersey, 1894). An interesting relic of Dutch influence is the title "Kora" given by the modern Iroquois of Canada to the governor-general, or to the King of England, a corruption of Corlaer, the name of one of the Dutch governors of New Amsterdam. (A. F. C.)

Dwamish. A small body of Salish near Seattle, Wash., which city was named from a chief of this and the Suquamish tribes. Their proper seat, according to Gibbs, was at the outlet of L. Washington. In 1856 they were removed to the E. shore of Bainbridge id., but owing to the absence of a fishing ground were shortly afterward taken to Holderness point, on the w. side of Elliot bay, which was already a favorite place for fishing. The name, being well known, has been improperly applied collectively to a number of distinct bands in this neighborhood. Their population about 1856 is variously given from 64 to 312. The remnant is incorporated with the Snohomish and others under the Tulalip school, N. W. Wash., altogether numbering 465 in 1904. (J. R. S.)

Dawamish.—Simmons (1856) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 37, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 73, 1857. Dewamish.—Shaw (1856), ibid., 113. Du-a+be'.—McCaw, Puyallup, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885 (Puyallup name). Dugh-dwabsh.—Mallet in Ind. Aff. Rep., 198, 1877. Dwamish.—Maynard (1856) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 37, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 86, 1857. Dwa-mish.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 453, 1854. D'Wamish.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., 1, 436, 1855. Lake Indians.—Page (1856) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 37, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 82, 1857. Neamitch.—Farnham, Travels, 111, 1843. Nee-wam-ish.—Starling in Ind. Aff. Rep., 170, 1852. Nowamish.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., 1, 432, 1855. Nuna-mish.—Starling in Ind. Aff. Rep., 171, 1852. N'Wamish.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., 1, 432, 1855. Port Orchard.—Wilkes, ibid., 435. Tsa-bah-bish.—Maynard (1856) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 37, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 86, 1857. Tsa-bah-bobs.—Ibid., 82. Tsah-bahbish.—Ibid., 86. T'sakbabbish.—Stevens (1856), ibid., 46.

Dwarfs. See Anatomy, Physiology, Popular fallacies.

Dyami (D'ya'-mi). The Eagle clans of the Keresan pueblos of Laguna, Acoma, Santa Ana, Sia, San Felipe, and Cochiti, N. Mex. The Eagle clan of Laguna claims to have come originally from Acoma; that of Acoma forms a phratry with the Soshka (Chaparral-cock) clan, while that of Cochiti is extinct. (F. W. H.)

D'yámi-háno.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 350, 1896 (Sia, San Felipe, and Santa Ana forms; háno = 'people'). D'yámi-hánuch.—Ibid. (Cochiti form). Ti-á'-mi.—Stevenson in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 19, 1894 (Sia form). Tya-me.—Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, iii, 293, 1890 (applied to the clan fetish). Tyame hanutsh.—Bandler, Delight Makers, 181, 1890. Tyámi-háno^{ch}.—Hodge, op. cit. (Laguna form). T'yámi-hánoq^{ch}.—Ibid. (Acoma form).

Dyani (Dya'-ni). The Deer clans of Sia and San Felipe pueblos, N. Mex.; the latter clan is extinct.

D'yáni-hano.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 350, 1896 (háno = 'people'). Tá'ñe.—Stevenson in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 19, 1894.

Dyapige. A prehistoric Tano pueblo s. E. of Lamy, "some distance in the mountains," n. central New Mexico.

Dyap-i-ge.—Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 100, 1892 (Tewa name).

Dye (D'ye). The Gopher clans of the Tewa pueblos of San Juan, Santa Clara, San Ildefonso, and Tesuque, N. Mex.

Dyé-tóá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 351, 1896 (tóá = 'people').

Dyea. A former Chilkat village which became noted subsequently in the time of the Yukon gold excitement, but is now practically dead owing to the building of the Yukon and White Pass railway to Skagway.

Daiyé'.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Dyes and Pigments. Most of the Indian tribes of North America made permanent dyes from organic materials. The demand for these dyes arose when basketry, quillwork, and other textile industries had reached a considerable degree of advancement, and there was need of diversity of color in ornamentation, as well as permanency of color, which pigments alone could not supply.

Dyes.—The California tribes and many others who made baskets were usually satisfied with natural colors. These are the red and black of bark, the white of the grass stems, the pale yellow of peeled rods or rushes, and the brown of root bark. A few dyes were known, however, notably a black or dark gray on splints which had been buried in mud. The Hupa obtained bright yellow from lichens, another color from the roots of the Oregon grape, and a brownish red from alder bark. Most of the tribes of the S. W. use only black for designs on baskets, and, rarely, red dyes. The Hopi, however, have a larger number of native dyes for basketry splints than any other tribe, and the Apache, Walapai, and Havasupai have a number of vegetal dyes that are not used in basketry. The Abnaki and other tribes made fugitive stains from pokeberries and fruits of the blueberry and elder. Lichens, golden-seal, bloodroot, and the bark of the butternut and other trees were also used by the northern and eastern tribes, and in southern regions the prickly pear. The Virginia Indians, according to Hariot, used sumach, a kind of seed, a small root, and the bark of a tree to dye their hair, as well as to color their faces red and to dye mantles of deerskin and the rushes for baskets and mats. The tribes of the N. W. coast employed a number of harmonious vegetal colors in their baskets. Most of the native dyes of the Indians were superseded by others introduced, especially in late years by aniline colors.

Quillwork, formerly widespread, was generally superseded by beadwork, and the native dyes employed in the art have fallen almost into disuse. Some of the N. W. coast tribes, the Eskimo, and the northern Athapascans alone practise quillworking in its purity, but its former range was extensive.

Native vegetal blanket dyes are found in use only among the Chilkat of Alaska, who still retain them in weaving their ceremonial shawls. The Nez Percés and the Navaho formerly used permanent vegetal dyes of pleasing colors for wool. With the latter these dyes have given way so recently to aniline colors that the details of their manufacture have not become lost. The use of dyes required a knowledge of mordants; for this purpose urine was commonly employed by the Navaho, Hopi, and Zuni, besides an impure native alum, and an iron salt mixed with organic acids to produce black. It has been assumed that, since the weaver's art seems to be accultural with the Navaho, the mordant dyes may have been derived from the Pueblos, who, in turn, may have received them from the Spaniards. Matthews, however, controverts the opinion that the Navaho learned the art of weaving from the Pueblos; and indeed there is no reason why the Indians should not have become acquainted with various mordants through the practise of the culinary art or other domestic arts in which fire is employed.

Pigments.—The inorganic colors used by the Indians were mostly derived from iron-bearing minerals, such as ochers and other ores, and stained earths. These furnished various tints, as brown, red, green, blue, yellow, orange, and purple. The search for good colors was assiduously pursued; quarries were opened and a commerce in their products was carried on. White was derived from kaolin, limestone, and gypsum; black from graphite, powdered coal, charcoal, or soot; green and blue from copper ores, phosphate of iron, etc. Pigments were used for facial decoration, red being most prized, for which reason the vermilion of the trader was eagerly adopted, but the intent of face painting was generally totemic or religious and not merely ornamental. Pigments were rubbed into soft tanned skins, giving the effect of dye, and were mixed with various media for painting the wood and leather of boxes, arrows, spears, shields, tipis, robes, parfleche cases, etc. Among the Southwestern tribes in particular pigments were mixed with sand for dry-paintings (q. v.), while pigments of iron earths or kaolin were employed for decorating pottery. In connection with the preparation and use of pigments are grinding slabs and mullers, mortars and pestles, brushes and paint sticks, and a great variety of pouches and pots for carrying or for preserving them. The media for applying the pigments varied with the objects to be decorated and with tribal or personal usage. In general, face paint was mixed with grease or saliva, while the medium for wood or skin was grease or glue. The N. W. coast Indians put grease on their faces before applying the paint. Among some of the Pueblos, at least, an emulsion of fat seeds was made with the pigment, and this was applied by spurring from the mouth. See Adornment, Art, Dry-painting, Mines and Quarries, Ornament, Painting.

Consult Dorsey in Field Columb. Mus. Publ., Anthropol. ser.; Fewkes in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 1898; Goddard, Life and Culture of the Hupa, 1903; Holmes in Am. Anthropol., v, no. 3, 1903; Hough

(1) in Am. Anthropol., xi, May, 1898; (2) in Rep. Nat. Mus., 1900 and 1901; Kroeber in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xviii, pt. 1, 1902; Mason, Aboriginal American Basketry, 1902; Matthews in 3d Rep. B. A. E., 1884; Pepper, Native Navajo Dyes, in Papoose, Feb., 1902; Stephen in Internat. Folk-lore Cong., i, 1898; Wissler in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xviii, pt. 3, 1904. (w. H.)

Dyosyowan ('it is oil-covered.'—Hewitt). An important former Seneca village on Buffalo cr., Erie co., N. Y.

Buffalo.—Kirkland (1788) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., i, 211, 1832. Dyo'-syo-wā'.—Hewitt, ibid., 1857 (Seneca name). Tehosororon.—Treaty of Oct. 22, 1784, in U. S. Ind. Treat., 922, 1873. Teyoheghs-colea.—Kirkland, op. cit.

Dyrnaeskirk. A former Eskimo missionary station on Eriksfjord, s. Greenland.—Crantz, Hist. Greenland, i, map, 1767.

Eagle. Among the many birds held in superstitious and appreciative regard by the aborigines of North America, the eagle, by reason of its majestic, solitary, and mysterious nature, became an especial object of worship. This is expressed in the employment of the eagle by the Indian for religious and esthetic purposes only. The wing-bones were fashioned into whistles to be carried by warriors or used in ceremonies, and the talons formed powerful amulets or fetishes, having secondary value as ornaments; the feathers were, however, of greatest importance. The capture of eagles for their feathers was a hazardous branch of hunting, requiring great skill. Among some tribes eagle-killing was delegated to certain men. Owing to the difficulty of getting within bowshot of the bird, it was often trapped or the eyrie was visited to secure the young. Eagles are still kept in captivity by the Pueblo Indians as in the time of Coronado (14th Rep. B. A. E., 516, 1896). The striking war-bonnet of the Plains tribes was made of eagle feathers and was highly valued, for it is said that one pony was the price of a perfect tail of 12 feathers of the "war eagle," i. e., the white plumes with black tips. Other varieties, with bars across the feathers, are regarded as inferior (Mooney). Warriors of the Plains tribes usually wore the feathers of the golden eagle only, and it is probable that the customs of many tribes prescribed like discriminations as to feathers of different species. Many tribes wore one or more eagle feathers in the hair, and these feathers were often cut, colored, or otherwise decorated with some cognizance of the wearer (see Heraldry). It was the custom of the Pillager Chipewya to allow a warrior who scalped an enemy to wear on his head two eagle feathers, and the act of capturing a wounded prisoner on the battlefield earned the distinction of wearing five. Fans made of the primary feathers of the eagle formed an accessory to the costume of the Sioux and other tribes. Eagle feathers were also attached as ornaments to the buckskin shirts worn by men, and war costumes and paraphernalia, including shields, were ornamented with them. As one of the prominent totemic animals, the eagle gave its name to many clans and religious fraternities. It is probable that nearly every tribe in the United States recognizing clan or gentile organization had an eagle clan or gens at some period in its history.

The eagle held an important place in symbolic art. It was depicted by all the methods of art expression known to the Indian, appearing on pottery, basketry, textiles, beadwork, quillwork, shields, crests, totem poles, house and grave posts, pipes, rattles, and objects pertaining to cult and ceremony. It was also represented in the primitive drama connected with ceremonies. Many tribes possessed eagle deities, as the Kwahu, the eagle kachina of the Hopi of Arizona, and the Eagle god of the Miwok of California.

Among the Haida, passes made with eagle fans were thought to be effectual in conjuring, and this use reappears in many tribes. The wing-bones were often employed as sucking tubes, with which medicine-men pretended to remove disease. The Tlingit and other North Pacific tribes used eagle down for ceremonial sprinkling on the hair, masks, and dance costume; it was also scattered in the air, being blown through a tube or sprinkled by hand. The Pawnee and other Plains tribes as well as the Pueblos also used the down in ceremonies, and it was probably a general custom. Among the Hopi the eagle is generally associated with the Sky god, and its feathers are used with disks to represent the Sun god (Fewkes).

The use of eagle feathers in religion is nowhere better shown than among the Pueblos, when downy plumes are attached to masks, rattles, prayer-sticks (q. v.), and other cult objects entering into ceremonies. For this purpose a great quantity of feathers is yearly required. The Hopi clans claimed the eagle nests in the localities where they formerly resided, and caught in traps or took from the nests eaglets, whose down was used in ceremonies. The eaglets, when required for feathers, have their heads washed; they are killed by pressure on the thorax, and buried with appropriate rites in special cemeteries, in which offerings of small wooden images and bows and arrows are yearly deposited. The interior Salish also are said by Teit to have property in eagles. Near the present Hopi villages there are shrines in which offerings of eagle eggs carved from wood are placed during the winter solstice for the increase of eagles. Among the Zuñi, feathers shed by their captive eagles have special significance, though the feathers are also regularly plucked and form a staple article of trade.

The mythology of almost every tribe is replete with eagle beings, and the widespread thunderbird myth relates in some cases to the eagle. In Hopi myth the Man-eagle is a sky-being who lays aside his plumage after flights in which he spreads devastation, and the hero who slays him is carried to the house in the sky by eagles of several species, each one in its turn bearing him higher. The Man-eagle myth is widely diffused, most tribes regarding this being as a manifestation of either helpful or maleficent power.

See Fewkes, Property Rights in Eagles among the Hopi, Am. Anthropol., II, 690-707, 1900; Hoffman in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Mooney (1) ibid., (2) in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 1900. (W. H.)

Eagle Hills Assiniboin. A band of Assiniboin of 35 lodges living in 1808 between Bear hills and South Saskatchewan r., Assiniboia, Canada.—Henry-Thompson Jour., Coates ed., II, 523, 1897.

Earth lodge. A dwelling partly underground, circular in form, from 30 to 60 ft in diameter, with walls about 6 ft high, on which rested a dome-shaped roof with an opening in the center to afford light within and to permit the egress of smoke. The entrance was a projecting passageway from 6 to 14 ft long. The method of construction was first to draw a circle on the ground and excavate the earth within it from 2 to 4 ft deep. About 1½ ft within the circle were set crotched posts some 8 or 10 ft apart, on which were laid beams. Outside these posts were set others, one end of them braced against the bottom of the bank of earth at the periphery of the circle, and the other end leaning against the beams, forming a close stockade, an opening being left at the E. side for the entrance. Midway between the center of the excavation and the stockade were planted 4, 6, or 8 tall crotched posts, forming an inner circle. In the crotches were laid heavy beams to support the roof. The bark was stripped from all the posts and beams. The roof was formed of long, slender, tapering tree trunks, stripped of bark. The large ends were tied with strings of the inner bark of the elm to the beams at the top of the stockade, and the middle to those resting in the crotches of the inner circle of posts. The slender ends were cut so as to form the circular opening in the center of the roof, 2 or 3 ft in diameter. Outside this framework branches of willow were placed close together across the posts of the wall and the beams of the roof, and bound tightly to each pole, beginning at the ground and continuing upward to the central opening. Over the willow branches a heavy thatch of coarse dried grass was laid, tied in bundles and arranged so that it would shed water. Over the thatch was placed a thick coating of sods, cut so that they could be lapped, and laid like shingles. The wall and roof were afterward carefully tamped with earth and made impervious to rain. The long entrance way was built in the same manner as the lodge, and thatched and sodded at the same time. The grass of the sod continued to grow, and wild flowers brightened the walls and roof of the dwelling. The blackened circle around the central opening in the roof, produced by the heat and smoke, was the only suggestion that the verdant mound was a human abode. Within, the floor was made hard by a series of tappings, in which both water and fire were used. The fireplace was circular in shape and slightly excavated. A curtain of skin hung at the opening from the passageway into the lodge. The outer door was covered with a skin that was stiffened by sticks at the top and bottom, which was turned to one side to give entrance to the passageway. The couches of the occupants were placed around the wall, and frequently were inclosed by reed mats which could be raised or lowered. More than one family sometimes occupied a lodge, and in such case the families took different sides. The back part, opposite the entrance, was reserved for the keeping of sacred objects and the reception of guests. In the winter curtains of skin were hung from the beams of the inner circle of posts, making a smaller room about the fireplace. The shields and weapons of the men were suspended from these inner posts, giving color to the interior of the dwelling, which was always picturesque, whether seen at night, when the fire leaped up and glinted on the polished blackened roof and when at times the lodge was filled with men and women in their gala dress at some social meeting or religious ceremony, or during the day when the shaft of sunlight fell through the central opening over the fireplace, bringing into relief some bit of aboriginal life and leaving the rest of the lodge in deep shadow. Few, if any, large and well-built earth lodges exist at the present day. Even with care a lodge could be made to last only a generation or two.

PAWNEE EARTH LODGE

Ceremonies attended the erection of an earth lodge from the marking of the circle to the putting on of the sods. Both men and women took part in these rites and shared in the labor of building. To cut, haul, and set the heavy posts and beams was the men's task; the binding, thatching, and sodding that of the women.

The earth lodge was used by the Pawnee, Arikara, Omaha, Ponca, Osage, and other tribes. A similar abode was found in the Aleutian ids., on Kodiak id., and in s. w. Alaska. There were habitations among some of the California tribes that had features in common with the earth lodge, and there are evidences of relationship between it, the Navaho hogan, and one form of Pima dwelling.

Among the Pawnee are preserved the most elaborate ceremonies and traditions pertaining to the earth lodge. These tribes are said to have abandoned the grass house of their kindred at some distant period and, under the teaching of aquatic animals, to have learned to construct the earth lodge. According to their ceremonies and legends, not only the animals were concerned with its construction—the badger digging the holes, the beaver sawing the logs, the bears carrying them, and all obeying the directions of the whale—but the stars also exercised authority. The earlier star cult of the people is recognized in the significance attached to the four central posts. Each stood for a star—the Morning and Evening stars, symbols of the male and female cosmic forces, and the North and South stars, the direction of chiefs and the abode of perpetual life. The posts were painted in the symbolic colors of these stars—red, white, black, yellow. During certain ceremonies corn of one of these colors was offered at the foot of the post of that color. In the rituals of the Pawnee the earth lodge is made typical of man's abode on the earth; the floor is the plain, the wall the distant horizon, the dome the arching sky, the central opening the zenith, dwelling place of Tirawa, the invisible power which gives life to all created beings.

The history of the distribution of this kind of dwelling among peoples widely scattered is a problem not yet fully solved. See Grass lodge, Habitations. (A. C. F.)

East Abeika. (Aiabeka, 'unhealthful place'). A former Choctaw town at the mouth of Straight cr., an affluent of the Sukenatcha, in Kemper co., Miss. Called East Abeika to distinguish it from another town of the same name.—Halbert in Miss. Hist. Soc. Publ., vi, 425, 1902. See Abihka. Abeeka.—Romans, Florida, 313, 1775. Aiabeka.—Halbert, op. cit. East Abeika.—Ibid., 309. East Abeika.—West Florida map, ca. 1775.

Eastern Indians. A collective term applied by the early New England writers to all the tribes n. e. of Merrimac r. It is used by Hubbard as early as 1680. These tribes, including the Pennacook, Abnaki, Malecite, and Micmac, were generally in the French interest and hostile to the English. (J. M.)

Eastern Indians.—Form used by most early English writers. Eastward Indians.—Winthrop (1700) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 612, 1854. Estward Indians.—Owaneco (1700), ibid., 614 ("the Nowon-thewog or the Estward Indians").

Eastern Shawnee. A division of the Shawnee now living in Indian Ter. They formerly lived with the Seneca (Mingo) near Lewistown, Ohio, but sold their lands in 1831 and removed with the latter tribe to Kansas. In 1867 they separated from the Seneca and removed to Indian Ter. under the name of Eastern Shawnee. They are now under the Seneca school and numbered 95 in 1904. (J. M.)

East Greenlanders. The Eskimo inhabiting the e. coast of Greenland. They are divided into two groups: The Angmagsalingmiut, inhabiting the fjords about C. Dan; and the southern group, formerly scattered along the coast southward. They have long lived in complete isolation, three-fourths of them in the Angmagsalik district, others farther s. about Iluilek, C. Bille, and Tingmiarmiut. (Nansen, First Crossing of Greenland, i, 321-371, 1890). They have developed some of the peculiar arts of the Eskimo to their highest perfection, especially the use of harpoons with shafts that become detached and float in the water, while the seal swims off with the line and bladder, and of flexible-jointed lances also for killing the struggling animal. The more easily handled double bladder is their invention. They employ the double-bladed paddle altogether, wear skin-tight garments that fit in the waist of the kaiak so closely that no water can enter, and when overturned in the sea they are able to right themselves single handed with the paddle. The ornamental arts of the East Greenlanders are neglected, except among one isolated band in the remote N. E. Their winter houses, made of stones and sod, are long and narrow, with family benches on one side, and can be stretched out to accommodate more people than the square houses of Alaska. The large public buildings of the western tribes they know only by tradition. The East Greenlanders numbered 548, comprising 245 males and 303 females, in 1884, not counting a few scattered families of unknown numbers living N. of 68° (Rink, Eskimo Tribes, 1887). The entire southern group of the East Greenlanders, all the pagan Eskimo of Tingmiarmiut and the other places S. of Angmagsalik, 114 individuals altogether, emigrated between 1887 and 1900 to Kernertok, near C. Farewell.

The villages and settlements of the East Greenlanders, past and present, are as follows: Akernivak, Akorninarmiut, Aluik, Aluk, Amivik, Anarnisok, Angmagsalik, Anoritok, Aputitek, Atangime, Auarkat, Estale, Igdluarsuk, Ikattek, Ikerasak, Iluilek, Imarsivik, Ingmikertok, Inigsalik, Inugsit, Ivimiut, Kangarsik, Kangigdlek, Kemisak, Kernertok, Kialinek, Kikertarsoak, Kinarbik, Koremiut, Kumarmiut, Kutek, Manitsuk, Nanusek, Narsuk, Norajik, Norsit, Nualik, Nunaikit, Okiosorbik, Orkua, Patuterajuit, Pikiutdlek, Sangmisok, Sarkarmiut, Sermiligak, Sermilik, Sivinganek, Sivingarnarsik, Tarsia, Tasiusarsik, Taterat, Tingmiarmiut, Umanak, Umivik, Utorarmiut. (H. W. H.)

Eastman, Charles Alexander (Ohiyesa, 'the Winner'). A Santee Dakota physician and author, born in 1858 near Redwood Falls, Minn. His father was a full-blood Sioux named Many Lightnings, and his mother the half-blood daughter of a well-known army officer. His mother dying soon after his birth, he was reared by his paternal grandmother and an uncle, who after the Minnesota massacre in 1862 fled with the boy into Canada. Here he lived the life of a wild Indian until he was 15 years of age, when his father, who in the meantime had accepted Christianity and civilization, sought him out and brought him home to Flandreau, S. Dak., where a few Sioux families had established themselves as farmers and homesteaders. Ohiyesa was placed in the mission school at Santee, Nebr., where he made such progress in 2 years that he was selected for a more advanced course and sent to Beloit College, Beloit, Wis. After 2 years spent there in the preparatory department he went to Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., thence to Kimball Academy and Dartmouth College, New Hampshire. He was graduated from Dartmouth in 1887, and immediately entered the Boston University school of medicine, receiving the degree of M. D. in 1890. Dr Eastman was then appointed Government physician to the Pine Ridge agency, S. Dak., and served there nearly 3 years, through the ghost-dance disturbance and afterward. In 1893 he went to St Paul, Minn., and entered there on the practice of medicine, also serving for 3 years as traveling secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association among the Indians. Afterward he was attorney for the Sioux at Washington, and later again Government physician at Crow Creek, S. Dak. In 1903 he was appointed by the Office of Indian Affairs to the special work of revising the allotment rolls and selecting permanent family names for the Sioux. His first book, "Indian Boyhood," appeared in 1902, and "Red Hunters and the Animal People" in 1904. He is an occasional contributor to the magazines and lectures frequently on Indian life and history. In 1891 Dr Eastman married Miss Elaine Goodale, of Massachusetts, and they have 6 children. (E. G. E.)

CHARLES ALEXANDER EASTMAN. (HARPER & BROS.)

Eastman, John (Mahpiyawakankidan, 'Sacred Cloud Worshipper'). A Santee Dakota of three-fourths blood, brother of Charles Alexander Eastman, noted as being a college-bred Presbyterian clergyman; born in Mar., 1849, at Shakopee, Minn. His father was Many Lightnings, a full-blood Sioux, who, on becoming a Christian in 1864, took the name of Jacob Eastman. His mother, Mary Nancy Eastman, was the daughter of Capt. Seth Eastman, an American army officer, and maternal granddaughter of Cloudman, a Sioux chief. He continued with his father, except for one year at Beloit College, Wis., until the latter died in 1876. The same year he was ordained as a Presbyterian minister at Flandreau, S. Dak., and installed as pastor of the Indian church of Flandreau township, which had been organized in 1871 and provided by the Presbyterian Mission Board with a building in 1874. Mr Eastman took charge of a Government school and began teaching the youth of the Santee res. in 1878, but resigned this charge in 1885 in order to accept the position of overseer of the band then living in Flandreau township. He retired from this position in 1896 and now devotes much of his attention to the work of his ministry and the cultivation of a small farm purchased some years ago. His church now numbers 96 communicants. In 1874 Mr Eastman married Miss Mary J. Faribault, a half-blood Santee. They are parents of 6 children. Mr Eastman is still active in tribal affairs, and since about 1880 has annually served in the capacity of delegate of his people at Washington.

Eat the Ham. A former Sans Arc band under a medicine-man named Wichashawakan.—Culbertson in Smithson. Rep. 1850, 142, 1851.

Ebahamo. An extinct tribe formerly dwelling on Matagorda bay, Tex. La Salle constructed his Ft St Louis within the territory of this tribe and of the Quelanhubeches, or Karankawa, who probably were a cognate people. Joutel (1687) states in his narrative (French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 134, 1846) that La Salle recorded a vocabulary of their language, which is very different from that of the Cenis (Caddo) and more difficult; that they were neighbors and allies of the latter people and understood some of their words. "At our fort at St Louis bay," he says, "we made some stay to cultivate the friendship of our Bracamos (as the Indian nation that dwells near our fort is called), in order to leave protectors to the people whom we would have to leave in the fort." (A. S. G.)

Apayxam.—Massanet MS. (1690) cited by H. E. Bolton, inf'n, 1906 (same?). Bahamos.—Early writer quoted by Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 24, 1891. Bracamos.—Cavellier (1685) quoted by Shea, Early Voy., 21, 1861. Ebahamo.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 276, 1878. Ebahumo.—Ibid., 300. Hebahamo.—Joutel (1687) in French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 134, 1846. Hebohamos.—Joutel quoted by Gatschet, op. cit.

Ebiamana. An unidentified village in N. Florida about 1565.—De Bry, Brev. Nar., II, map, 1591.

Ebita Poooola Chitto (Ibetap okla chitto, 'fountain-head big people'). A former Choctaw town, noted by Romans, believed to have been situated on the head of Straight cr., in Kemper co., Miss., hence the name.—Halbert in Miss. Hist. Soc. Publ., VI, 425, 1902.

Ebita-poooola-chitto.—West Florida map, ca. 1772. Ebitap-oocoolo-cho.—Romans, Florida, 310, 1775. Ibetap okla chitto.—Halbert, op. cit.

Ebita Poooola Skatane (Ibetap okla iskitini, 'fountain-head little people'). A former Choctaw town on the w. or main prong of Yazoo cr., a N. affluent of Petickia cr., in Kemper co., Miss.—Halbert in Miss. Hist. Soc. Publ., VI, 423, 1902.

Ebeetap Oocoola.—Romans, Florida, 310, 1775. Ibetap okla iskitini.—Halbert, op. cit.

Ecatacari. A rancheria of either the Eudeve or the Nevome of Sonora, Mexico, in the early part of the 18th century. It was probably situated near Matape.—Writer of 1702(?) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., V, 126, 1857.

Echantac. A village, presumably Costanoan, formerly connected with San Juan Bautista mission, Cal.—Engelhardt, Franciscans in Cal., 398, 1897.

Echilat. A former village of the Rumsen division of the Costanoan family situated 12 m. S. E. of San Carlos mission, Cal.

Echilat.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860. San Franciscoquita.—Ibid.

Echojoa. A Mayo settlement on the Rio Mayo, above Santa Cruz, S. W. Sonora, Mexico; pop. 444 in 1900.

Echehóá.—Hardy, Trav. in Mex., 438, 1829. Echojoa.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 356, 1864. Echonova.—Ibid. (Echojoa, or). Hetschojoa.—Kino, map (1702) in Stöcklein, Neue Welt-Bott, 1726.

Echota (corruption of Itsá'ti, meaning unknown). The name of several Cherokee towns. (1) the most important—often distinguished as Great Echota—was on the S. side of Little Tennessee r., a short distance below Citico cr., in Monroe co., Tenn. It was the ancient capital and sacred "peace town" of the nation. At that place there is a large mound. (2) Little Echota was on Santee (Itsá'ti) cr., a head-stream of the Chattahoochee, W. of Clarksville, Ga. (3) New Echota, the capital of the nation for some years before the removal, was established at a spot, originally known as Gánsági, at the junction of Oostanaula and Conasauga rs., in Gordon co., Ga. It was sometimes called Newtown. (4) The old Macedonian mission on Soco cr., of the North Carolina res., is also known to the Cherokee as Itsá'ti, as was also (5) the great Nacoochee mound. See Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 523, 1900.

Choquata.—Mooney, op. cit. (cited as former misprint). Chota.—Doc. of 1799 quoted by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 144, 1887. Chote.—Timberlake, Mem., map, 1765 (on Little Tennessee r.). Chote great.—Bartram, Trav., 371, 1792 (on Tenn. r.).

Echulit. A Tolowa village at a lagoon on the coast about 5 m. N. of Crescent, Cal. (P. E. G.)

E'-teu-lét jùn-né.—Dorsey, MS. Chetco vocab., B. A. E., 1884. E'-teu'-lit.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folklore, III, 236, 1890 (Tututunne named). E'-te'-u'-lit.—

Ibid. (Naltunnetunne name). Te's-qan'-me.—Ibid. (another Naltunnetunne name).

Eclauou. A village of the Utina (Timucua) confederacy in central Florida in the 16th century.—Laudonnière (1564) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., 243, 1869.

Ecochee. A former Cherokee settlement on a head stream of Savannah r., in n. w. South Carolina or n. e. Georgia. It was destroyed during the Revolutionary war. (J. M.)

Ecorce. A band of Nipissing living at Oka, Canada, in 1736. Their totem was the birch. Chauvignerie calls them L'Ecorce, evidently intended for L'Ecorce.

Bark tribe.—Chauvignerie (1736) transl. in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 1053, 1855. L'Ecorce.—Chauvignerie quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 554, 1853.

Eucreuil (French: 'squirrel'). Spoken of as a tribe formerly living between Tadoussac and Hudson bay, Quebec province, Canada; destroyed by the Iroquois in 1661. Probably a Montagnais band living about the headwaters of Three rs., possibly about the lake named Onapichouanon in the Jesuit Relations.

Eseurieux.—Jes. Rel., 20, 1661. L'Eucreuil.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, iii, 79, 1854.

Ecushaw. See Cashaw.

Edelano. An unidentified village on an island in St Johns r., Fla., in the 16th century.—Laudonnière (1564) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., 287, 1869.

Edenshaw (or Edensaw, from a Tlingit word referring to the glacier). The Haida chief best known to the whites. He succeeded early in the 19th century to the chieftainship of the strong Stustas kinship group which centered in the town of Kioosta on the coast of Graham id. opposite North id., Brit. Col. Shortly after 1860, his people having fallen off in numbers, he moved with them to Kung, at the mouth of Naden harbor, where he erected a large house, which is still standing. Through the exercise of his exceptional abilities in trade and in various other ways he became one of the wealthiest of the Haida chiefs. His relations with the whites were always cordial, and it was through his influence that a missionary was sent to Masset. Among other good offices to the whites, he protected the crew of an American vessel when threatened by other natives. He died about 1885. A monument mentioning his kind treatment of the whites stands in Masset. (J. R. S.)

Edgpiilik. A Delaware village in w. New Jersey in 1792.

Edgpiilik.—Brinton, Lenape Leg., 46, 1885. Edgpiilik.—Keane in Stanford, Comp., Cent. and S. Am., 512, 1878.

Edisto. A small tribe, now extinct, which appears to have occupied lower Edisto r., S. C., which derived its name from that of the tribe. The Huguenots of Ribault's colony were kindly welcomed by them in 1562, and the Spaniards for a time had a mission among them. They were included in the Cusabo group, and are mentioned in connection with the Stono, Westo, and Savannah as still living in the region named in 1670, when English colonization began. With the Westo and Stono they were possibly driven out by the Shawnee in 1680. Gatschet thinks it probable that they spoke the Uchean language. See Moon-ey, Siouan Tribes of the East, Bull. B. A. E., 1894.

Adusta.—De Bry, Brev. Nar., ii, map, 1591. Audusta.—Laudonnière (1567) in Hakluyt, Voy., 379, 1600. Edisto.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., ii, 83, 1836. Edisto.—Adair, Hist. Inds., 325, 1775. Edistow.—Harris, Voy. and Trav., i, map, 1705. Orista.—Fontaneda (ca. 1570) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., xx, 16, 1841. Oristanum.—Brigstock (1623) quoted by French, Hist. Coll. La., ii, 186, 1875.

Edjao (°L'djao). A Haida town situated around a hill of the same name, at the e. end of Masset village, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Aoyaku-Inagai, a branch of the Yaku-lanas, and, according to the old men, consisted in later times of about 6 houses, which would have contained nearly a hundred persons. Later it came to be included within the limits of Masset.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 99, 1905.

Hal'ts'au.—Boas, Twelfth Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 23, 1898. Ha-ju hädé.—Krause, Tlinkit-Indianer, 304, 1885 ('people of Edjao'; probably the same).

Edjieretrukenade ('buffalo people'). An Athapascan tribe of the Chipewyan group living along the banks of Buffalo r., Athabasca, Canada.

Edjière-tpou-kiè-nadé.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891 ('buffalo people').

Education. The aborigines of North America had their own systems of education, through which the young were instructed in their coming labors and obligations, embracing not only the whole round of economic pursuits—hunting, fishing, handicraft, agriculture, and household work—but speech, fine art, customs, etiquette, social obligations, and tribal lore. By unconscious absorption and by constant inculcation the boy and girl became the accomplished man and woman. Motives of pride or shame, the stimulus of flattery or disparagement, wrought constantly upon the child, male or female, who was the charge, not of the parents and grandparents alone but of the whole tribe (Heckewelder). Loskiel (p. 139) says the Iroquois are particularly attentive to the education of the young people for the future government of the state, and for this purpose admit a boy, generally the nephew of the principal chief, to the council and solemn feast following it.

The Eskimo were most careful in teaching their girls and boys, setting them difficult problems in canoeing, sledding, and hunting, showing them how to solve them, and asking boys how they would meet a given emergency (see Child life). Everywhere there was the closest association, for education, of parents with children, who learned the names and uses of things in nature. At a tender age they played at serious business, girls attending to household duties, boys following men's pursuits. Children were furnished with appropriate toys; they became little basket makers, weavers, potters, water carriers, cooks, archers, stone workers, watchers of crops and flocks, the range of instruction being limited only by tribal custom. Personal responsibilities were laid on them, and they were stimulated by the tribal law of personal property, which was inviolable. Among the Pueblos cult images and paraphernalia were their playthings, and they early joined the fraternities, looking forward to social duties and initiation. The Apache boy had for pedagogues his father and grandfather, who began early to teach him counting, to run on level ground, then up and down hill, to break branches from trees, to jump into cold water, and to race, the whole training tending to make him skilful, strong, and fearless. The girl was trained in part by her mother, but chiefly by the grandmother, the discipline beginning as soon as the child could control her movements, but never becoming regular or severe. It consisted in rising early, carrying water, helping about the home, cooking, and minding children. At 6 the little girl took her first lessons in basketry with yucca leaves. Later on decorated baskets, saddle-bags, beadwork, and dress were her care.

On the coming of the whites a new era of secular education, designed and undesigned, began. All the natives, young and old, were pupils, and all the whites who came in contact with them were instructors, whether purposely or through the influence of their example and patronage. The undesigned instruction can not be measured, but its effect was profound. The Indian passed at once into the iron age; the stone period, except in ceremony, was moribund. So radical was the change in the eastern tribes that it is difficult now to illustrate their true life in museum collections.

An account of the designed instruction would embrace all attempts to change manners, customs, and motives, to teach reading and writing in the foreign tongue, to acquaint the Indians with new arts and industries, and to impress or force upon them the social organization of their conquerors. The history of this systematic instruction divides itself into the period of (1) discovery and exploration, (2) colonization and settlement, (3) Colonial and Revolutionary times, (4) the growth of the national policy, and (5) the present system.

Parts of the area here considered were discovered and explored by several European nations at dates wide apart. All of them aroused the same wonder at first view, traded their manufactures for Indian products, smoked the pipe of peace, and opened friendly relations. The Norwegians began their acculturation of Greenland in the year 1000. The Spanish pioneers were Ponce de León, Narvaez, Cabeza de Vaca, Marcos de Niza, De Soto, Coronado, Cabrillo, and many others. The French appeared in Canada and in the Mississippi valley, and were followed by the English in Virginia and in New England, the Dutch in New York, the Swedes in New Jersey, the Quakers in Pennsylvania, and the Russians in Alaska. Instruction, designed and undesigned, immediately ensued, teaching the Indians many foreign industrial processes, the bettering of their own, and the adoption of firearms, and metal tools and utensils. Domestic animals (horses, donkeys, cattle, sheep, goats, poultry) and many vegetables found congenial environment. It was through these and other practical lessons that the missionaries and teachers of the early days, who came to Christianize young Indians and bestow on them an education, were more successful instructors than they knew. By the subtle process of suggestion, the inevitable action of mind upon mind, the Indians received incalculable training in all arts and the fashion of living. Failures to accomplish the most cherished object of the missionaries grew out of the great distance which separated the two races, and of the contrary influences of many of the whites who were first on the spot, not from lack of zeal or ability. The Roman Catholic clergy were at first the most efficient agents of direct instruction; besides carrying on their proper missionary work they exerted themselves to mitigate the harsh treatment visited on the Indian. In the 16th century the expedition of Narvaez to Florida was accompanied by Franciscans under Padre Juan Juarez, and the appearance of Cabeza de Vaca in Mexico prompted Fray Marcos de Niza's journey to the stars as far as Zuñi, and of the expedition of Coronado, who left Fray Juan de Padilla and a lay brother in Quivira, on the Kansas plains, as well as a friar and a lay brother at Tiguex and Pecos, respectively, all destined to be killed by the natives. The subsequent history of the S. W. records a series of disasters to the immediate undertakings, but permanent success in practical education.

In 1567 the agricultural education of Indians was tried in Florida by the Jesuit Fray Rogel, who selected lands, procured agricultural implements, and built commodious houses (Shea).

Early in the 17th century Franciscan missions were established among the Apalachee and neighboring tribes, afterward to be abandoned, but forming the first link in the chain of causes which has brought these Indians through their minority under guardianship to mature self-dependence. Concentration for practical instruction was established in California by the Franciscans (see California, Indians of). The results achieved by the missions in the S. W. were chiefly practical and social. Domestic animals, with the art of domestication and industries depending on their products, were permanently acquired. Foreign plants, including wheat, peaches, and grapes, were introduced, gunpowder was adopted in place of the bow, and new practices and customs, good and bad, came into vogue. The early French missions in North America were among (1) the Abnaki in Maine, (2) the Huron in Ontario, Michigan, and Ohio, (3) the Iroquois in New York, (4) the Ottawa in Wisconsin and Michigan, (5) the Illinois in the middle W., and (6) the tribes of Louisiana. Bishop Laval founded a school at Quebec for French and Indian youth, Father de Smet planted the first Catholic mission among the Salish tribes, and Canadian priests visited the natives on Puget sd. and along the coast of Washington.

One of the objects in colonizing Virginia, mentioned in the charter of 1606 and repeated in that of 1621, was to bring the infidels and savages to human civility and a settled and quiet government (Neill). Henrico College was founded in 1618. The council of Jamestown in 1619 voted to educate Indian children in religion, a civil course of life, and in some useful trade. George Thorpe, superintendent of education at Henrico, gave a cheering account of his labors in 1621. Many youths were taken to England to be educated. William and Mary College was founded in 1691, and special provisions were made in the charter of Virginia for the instruction of Indians (Hist. College of William and Mary, 1874). Braxton manor was purchased through the charity of Robert Boyle, the yearly rents and profits being devoted to a boarding-school foundation in William and Mary College. In Maryland no schools were founded, but the settlers and Indians exchanged knowledge of a practical kind. The interesting chapter of Indian education in New England includes, during the 17th century, the offering of their children for instruction, the translation of the Bible (1646-90) into their language by Eliot (see Eliot Bible), the founding of Natick, the appointment of a superintendent of Indians (Daniel Gookin, 1656-86), and the provision for Indian youth in Harvard. The spirit and methods of instruction in the 18th century are revealed in the adoption of Indian children by the colonists (Samson Occum, for example), the founding of Moor's charity school, Bishop Berkeley's gift to Yale, the labors of Eleazer Wheelock (1729), and the founding of Dartmouth College in 1754 (see Fletcher, Ind. Education and Civilization, 1888). In New York and other northern states large sums of money were appropriated for the instruction of Indians, and in Princeton College special provisions were made for their education.

The Moravians, models of thrift and good will, had in their hearts wherever they went the welfare of the aborigines as a private and public burden.

Between 1741 and 1761 began, under Vitus Bering and his successors, the series of lessons given for the acculturation of the Aleut, Eskimo, and Indians of Alaska. Schools were formally opened in Kodiak in 1794, and a little later in Sitka. This chapter in education includes the Russian Company's schools, as well as military, Government, and church schools. Pupils were taught the Russian and English languages, geography, history, arithmetic, geometry, trigonometry, and navigation. Industrial training was compulsory in many cases. Dall (Alaska, 1870) speaks of the great aptness of the Aleuts in receiving instruction. In all areas the voyageur, the trapper, the trader, the missionary, the settler, the school-teacher, and Government authorities were partners in education. The contact, whenever it took place, had its effect in a generation or two. The making of treaties with the Indians afforded an object lesson in practical affairs. Old things passed away whose nature and very existence and structure can be proved now only by impressions on ancient pottery or remains in caverns and graves. The twofold education embraced new dietaries, utensils, and modes of preparing and eating food; new materials and fashions in dress and implements for making clothing; new or modified habitations and their appurtenances and furniture; new productive industries and new methods of quarrying and mining, woodcraft, hunting, trapping, and fishing; the introduction of gunpowder, domestic animals, and foreign handicrafts; the adoption of calendars and clocks, and the habit of steady employment for wages; new social institutions, manners, customs, and fashions, not always for the better; foreign words and jargons for new ideas and activities; new esthetic ideas; changes in the clan and tribal life, and accessions to native beliefs and forms of worship borrowed from the conquerors.

In the Canadian colonies little was done for secular and industrial education by the provincial governments prior to confederation. The Roman Catholic missions inherited from the French, Anglican missions sent from the mother country, the New England Company's missions among the Six Nations and Mohawk, and Methodist schools founded by Lord Elgin and others, as well as those managed by Presbyterians, Baptists, and Congregationalists, all combined common school instruction and training in the practical arts with their special work (see Missions). After the confederation (1867) the subject was taken up systematically and contract schools were established and put into the hands of the Christian denominations. In the older provinces agriculture and other industries had largely taken the place of primitive arts. After the admission of British Columbia, Manitoba, and the Northwest Territory into the Dominion, steps were taken to establish systematic training in those provinces. In 1904 there were 24 industrial, 46 boarding, and 228 day schools in operation. Day schools among the tribes aim to secure the cooperation of parents; the boarding schools especially cultivate industrial training for various bread-winning trades; normal schools and girls' homes have been established to teach self-support under new conditions. Improvement in dwellings has developed a stronger attachment to home, as well as bettered health and raised the moral tone, for when houses are furnished with stoves, beds, tables, chairs, musical instruments, and sewing machines, the tastes of the occupants are elevated and other thoughts stimulated. Indians become individual owners of farms and of flocks and herds and sell the produce; they partake of the benefits of commerce and transportation and acquire thrift. Competition in fairs and exhibitions stimulates proficiency in both the old and the new activities. The purpose of the Canadian government has been to encourage the Indians to emerge from a condition of tutelage and continue voluntarily what they have learned under close supervision. The schools discourage premature marriages and educate the young prospective mothers. Education has made the aborigines law-respecting, prosperous, and contented. Far from being a menace to or a burden upon the commonwealth, they contribute in many ways to its welfare. The able-bodied in the mixed farming districts have become practically self-supporting (Pedley in Can. Ind. Aff. for 1904).

After the establishment of the United States government the following Christian bodies either instituted secular day and boarding schools among the Indians or continued those already in existence, and these schools have borne a large part in Indian education: Roman Catholic and Moravians from colonial times; Friends (Orthodox), 1795; Baptist, 1807; American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, 1810; Episcopal, 1815; Methodist Episcopal, 1816; Presbyterian (North), 1833; Old School Presbyterians, 1837; Methodist Episcopal (South), 1844; Congregational American Missionary Association, 1846; Reformed Dutch, 1857; Presbyterian (South), 1857; Friends (Hickite), 1869; United Presbyterian, 1869; Unitarian, 1886. Miss Alice C. Fletcher affirms that the missionary labors among the Indians have been as largely educational as religious. Until 1870 all Government aid for this object passed through the hands of the missionaries.

On July 12, 1775, a committee on Indian affairs was appointed in the Continental Congress, with Gen. Schuyler as chairman, and in the following year a standing committee was created. Money was voted to support Indian students at Dartmouth and Princeton colleges. After the War Department was created, in 1789, Indian affairs were left in the hands of its Secretary until 1849, when the Department of the Interior was established and the Indian Bureau was transferred thereto. Gen. Knox, Washington's Secretary of War, urged industrial education, and the President was of the same mind. In his message of 1801 President Adams noted the success of continued efforts to introduce among the Indians the implements and practices of husbandry and the household arts.

The first petition of an Indian for schools among his tribe was made by David Folsom, a Choctaw, in 1816. The Ottawa, in their treaty (1817) and in their address to President Monroe (1822), stipulated for industrial and literary education. In 1819 a first appropriation of $10,000 was made by Congress for Indian education, the superintendents and agents to be nominated by the President. In 1823 there were 21 schools receiving Government aid, and the number was increased to 38 in 1825. The first contract school was established on the Tulalip res., Wash., in 1869, but it was not until 1873 that Government schools proper were provided. In the beginning there were only day schools, later boarding schools on the reservations, and finally boarding schools remote from them. The training in all these schools was designed to bring the Indians nearer to civilized life, with a view to ultimate citizenship by enabling them to assimilate the speech, industrial life, family organization, social manners and customs, civil government, knowledge, modes of thinking, and ethical standards of the whites. The change to agriculture and sedentary industries had a profound effect in developing a sense of continuous responsibility. A school was established at Carlisle, Pa., in 1879, by Capt. R. H. Pratt, U. S. A., for the purpose of educating Indian boys and girls by separating them from their tribal life so as to prepare them to live and labor in contact with white people (see Carlisle School). To this end they are taught in the school as far as the high-school grade, and instruction is given in mechanical trades and domestic work. In order to facilitate association with the white population the "outing system" was adopted, by which pupils are permitted to go out during vacations to earn money. Boys and girls are also placed in families where they may work for their board, and perhaps more, and attend school. Thus the young Indians are trained in home life and associate with white children. Contract schools were abandoned June 30, 1900; the religious societies have since taken care of their own schools, and the appropriation for Indian education is applied under the law entirely to Government schools. About 100 students receive higher instruction in Hampton Institute. One of the latest experiments is that of Rev. Sheldon Jackson in connection with the introduction of domesticated reindeer into Alaska. These are allotted to mission and other schools, and instruction in the care and use of them is a part of the training.

The present scheme of education adopted by the Indian Office is to teach the pupils English, arithmetic, geography, and United States history, and also to train them in farming and the care of stock and in trades, as well as gymnastics. This requires the maintenance of day, boarding, and training schools, 253 now in all, with 2,300 employees, involving an annual expenditure of nearly $5,000,000. Some of these Indian schools are models (see Chillico Indian Industrial School). Allotment of land has been the means of sending Indian children to district schools with white children. Indian teachers are being employed and parents are coming to be interested.

While on some reservations there are still Indian children who never saw a school, the great mass have ceased to be indifferent. The results of a century's efforts are immeasurable. Indians now take their places beside whites in many of the industrial pursuits and in the higher walks as well. The best evidence that the Indian is capable of civilization is the list of those who have succeeded. The Government has been stimulated, advised, and aided all along by associations of benevolent men and women who have freely given their time and means for the education and uplifting of the Indians, with various motives, some seeking the preservation of tribal life, arts, and customs, some their extinction. See Carlisle School, Chillico Indian Industrial School, Dutch influence, English influence, French influence, Spanish influence, etc., Governmental policy, Missions.

In addition to the works cited, see Reps. Ind. Aff., especially for 1898 and subsequent years; Bureau of Education Reports for 1870, 339-354; 1871, 402-411; 1872, 405-418; 1873, 469-480; 1874, 506-516; 1875, 519-528; 1878, 281-286; 1879, 278-280; 1880, 372-376; 1886, app. 8 and 657-660; 1888, 999-1004; 1897, 1520-1522; also circulars 3, 1883, 58-73; 4, 34-43; Bulletin 1 of the New Orleans Exposition, 541-544 and 746-754, 1889; Archæologia Americana, 1820-60; Bacon, Laws of Md., 1765; Camden Soc. Publications, I-CIX, 1838-72; Canadian Ind. Aff. Reps.; Catesby, Nat. Hist. Carolina, II, XII, 1743; Eastman, Indian Boyhood, 1902; Doc. Hist. N. Y., I-IV, 1849-51; Fletcher, Indian Education and Civilization, 1888; Hailmann, Education of the Indian, 1904; Hall, Adolescence, 1904; Heckewelder, Narr. of the Mission of the United Brethren, 1820; Jenks, Childhood of Ji-shib', 1900; Hist. College of William and Mary, 1660-1874; La Flesche, The Middle Five, 1900; Loskiel, Hist. of the Mission of the United Brethren, 1794; Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., I-X, 1792-1809; Neill, Hist. Va. Co., 1869; Parkman, Old Régime in Canada; Pratt, Reps. on Carlisle School in An. Rep. Commr. Ind. Aff., especially 20th and 24th; Rawson et al., Rep. of Commissioners on Indian Education in 1844 (Jour. Leg. Assemb. Prov. of Can., VI, 1847); Shea, Catholic Missions, 1855; Smet (1) Oregon Miss., 1845, (2) New Indian Sketches, 1865, (3) Western Missions and Missionaries, 1863; Spencer, Education of the Pueblo Child, 1899; Spotswood, Off. Letters (1710-22), Va. Hist. Soc., I-II, 1882-85; Stevenson, Religious Life of the Zuñi Child, 1887; Stith, Hist. Va., repr. 1865. (O. T. M.)

Eeh. A band or division of the Iru-waitus of Scott valley, Siskiyou co., Cal.; noted by Gibbs as living with the Watsahewa in 1851.

E-eh.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 171, 1853. E-oh.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 171, 1853.

EEKSEN (E'essen). A Salish tribe about Oyster bay, E. coast of Vancouver id., speaking the Comox dialect.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Eel River Indians. A part of the Miami, formerly living in Indiana. Their village was at Thornstown, Boone co., where they had a reservation, which was sold in 1828, the band removing to the Miami res. between the Wabash and Eel rs., in Miami co. They afterward shared the general fortunes of the tribe.

(J. M.)

Eel River Indians.—Knox (1792) in Am. St. Papers, I, 235, 1832. Belrivers.—Brown, West. Gaz., 72, 1817. Elk river tribe.—Ibid., 349 (misprint). Isle-River Indians.—Imlay, West. Ter., 371, 1793 (Eel r., through a corruption of l'Anguille into 'Long-isle'). l'Anguille.—French name of the band and settlement ('The eel'). Long-isle.—Imlay, op. cit. (misrendering of French l'Anguille). Thornton party.—Gale, Upper Miss., 178, 1867. Thornton party.—Wyandot Vil. treaty (proclaimed 1828) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 520, 1873.

Eesteytoch. Given as a tribe on Cascade inlet, Brit. Col.; probably a village group of the Bellacoola.

Ees-tey-toch.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859.

Efaca. A Timucua clan belonging to the Achéha phratry.—Pareja (1612-14) quoted by Gatschet in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., xvii, 492, 1878.

Egan. An Algonquian settlement in Maniwaki township, Ottawa co., Quebec, containing 225 Indians in 1884.

Egedesminde. A missionary station on Davis str., w. Greenland.—Crantz, Hist. Greenland, I, 14, 1767.

Eguiana-cachel ('water-hole of the mountain'). A rancharia, probably Cochimi, connected with Purisima (Cádegomo) mission, Lower California, in the 18th century.—Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., v, 189, 1857.

Egusanna cachel.—Ibid.

Ehartsar. A band of the Crows, one of the four into which Lewis divided the tribe.

E-hârt-sâr.—Lewis, Trav., 175, 1809. Ėh-hâ-tzâ.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., II, lxxxiv, 1823 (Hidatsa name: 'leaf people').

Ehatisaht. A Nootka tribe on Esperanza inlet, w. coast of Vancouver id., Brit. Col.; pop. 101 in 1902, 95 in 1904. Their principal village is Oke. From their waters came the larger part of the supply of dentalium shells extensively used on the Pacific coast as media of exchange.

Ai-tiz-zarts.—Jewitt, Nar., 36, 1849. Aitzarts.—Armstrong, Oregon, 136, 1857. Ayhuttisaht.—Sproat, Sav. Life, 308, 1868. Eh-ah-tis-ah-t.—Can. Ind. Aff., 32, 1875. Ehateset.—Mayne, Brit. Col., 251, 1862. Ehatisaht.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1901, pt. 2, 158. Ėhatisath.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 31, 1890. Ehatt-is-ah-t.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1897, 357.

Ehounae ('one battered it.'—Hewitt). A village of the Tionontati existing in 1640.

Eh8ae.—Jes. Rel. 1641, 69, 1858.—Ehwaæ.—Shea, note in Charlevoix, New France, II, 153, 1866. Saint Pierre et saint Paul.—Jes. Rel. 1640, 95, 1858.

Ehressaronon. The Huron name of a tribe mentioned by Ragueneau in 1640 as living s. of St Lawrence r. (Jes. Rel. 1640, 35, 1858). It can not now be identified with any tribe s. of the St Lawrence. Perhaps Iroquoian, as are some of the tribes mentioned in the same list.

Ehutewa. A Luiseño village formerly in the neighborhood of San Luis Rey mission, s. Cal. (Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 11, 1860). Possibly the same as Hatawa.

Eidenu (perhaps an Eskimo rendering of 'I don't know'). A Kinugumiut coast settlement at C. Prince of Wales.

Ei-dan-noo.—Beechy (1826) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1901. I-den-noo.—Ibid. Wales.—Post-route map, 1903.

Eider (trans. of Igognak, 'eider duck'). An Aleut village on Captain bay, Unalaska, Alaska, at a point of the same name. Pop. 39 in 1830, according to Veniaminoff.

Igognak.—Kotzebue (1816) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1901 ('eider duck'). Igonok.—Coxe, Russ. Discov., 166, 1787. Paystravskoi.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. Alaska, 225, 1875. Pestriakof.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1901 (Russian: 'eider duck'). Pestriakovo.—Sarichef (1792) quoted by Baker, ibid. Pestriakowskoje.—Holmberg, Ethnol. Skizz., map, 1855. Pestryakovskoe.—Veniaminoff, Zapiski, II, 202, 1840.

Eiuake (Ė-in'-a-ke, 'catchers,' or 'soldiers'). A society of the Ikunhukatsi, or All Comrades, in the Piegan tribe; it has been obsolete since about 1860, and perhaps earlier.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 221, 1892.

Eiwhuelit. A division of the Yuit Eskimo on St Lawrence id., Bering sea. Bogoras says "they are plainly a colony from the nearest [Siberian] shore, probably from Indian point." The villages are Chibukak, Chitnak, Kialegak, Kukulak, Puguviliak, and Punuk.

Eiwhue'lit.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 20, 1904 (Chukchi name). Kikhtog'amut.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 15, 1877 ('islanders'). Oomoojeks.—Kelly, Arctic Eskimo in Alaska, II, 1890. Shiwo-kug-mut.—Dall in Proc. A. A. A. S., XXXIV, 377, 1885. Umudjek.—Woolfe in 11th Census, Alaska, 130, 1893.

Ekaentoton. The Huron name of Manitoulin id. and of the Indians (Amikwa) living on it in 1649. It was the ancient home of the Ottawa.

Ekaentoton.—Jes. Rel. 1649, II, 6, 1858. l'Isle de Sainete Marie.—Ibid.

Ekalooaping. A Padlimiut Eskimo settlement in Padli fjord, Baffin land.

Ekalooaping.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 441, 1888.

Ekaluakdjuin. A summer settlement of the Saumingmiut subtribe of the Okomiut Eskimo, n. of Cumberland sd.

Ekaluadjuin.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 439, 1888.

Ekalualuin. A summer settlement of the Akudnirmiut Eskimo on Home bay, Baffin land.

Ekalualuin.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 441, 1888.

Ekaluin. A summer settlement of the Nugumiut Eskimo of Baffin land at the head of Frobisher bay.

Ekaluin.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Ekaluin. A summer settlement of Talirpingmiut Eskimo on the s. shore of Cumberland sd.

Ekaluin.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Ekalukdjuaq. A summer settlement of the Kingua Okomut Eskimo at the head of Cumberland sd.

Ekaludjuag.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Ekaluktaluk. An Eskimo village in the Kuskokwim district, Alaska; pop. 24 in 1893.

Ekaluktalugumiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Ekarenniundi. ('there a tree lies extended.'—Hewitt). A Tionontati village of the Deer clan where the Jesuits had their mission of St Mathias in 1648.

Ekarenniundi.—Garnier (1648) in Charlevoix, New Fr., II, 228, note, 1866. Saint Matthieu.—Jes. Rel. 1640, 95, 1858. Saint Mathias.—Jes. Rel. 1648, 61, 1858.

Ekatopistaks ('half-dead meat'—Morgan); 'the band that have finished packing'—Hayden). A division of the Piegan tribe of the Siksika (q. v.), probably extinct.

e-ka-to'-pi-staks.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 264, 1862. E-ko'-to-pis-taxe.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 171, 1878.

Ekiagian. A village of the Chalone division of the Costanoan family, formerly near Soledad mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860.

Ekilik. A Togiagamiut village on Togiak r., near its mouth, in Alaska. Pop. 192 in 1880; 60 in 1890.

Ekiligamut.—Spurr and Post quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1901. Ikalinkamiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 5, 1893. Ikaliukha.—Petroff, 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884.

Ekiondatsaan. A Huron village in Ontario about 1640.

Ekiondatsaan.—Jes. Rel. 1637, 162, 1858. Ekiondatsaan.—Jes. Rel., III, index, 1858. Khiondaësa-han.—Jes. Rel. 1637, 70, 1858.

Ekoolthah ('bushes-on-hill people'). A Nootka tribe formerly inhabiting the shores of Barclay sd., w. coast of Vancouver id.; pop. 48 in 1879. They have now joined the Seshart.

E-koohlth-ah.—Can. Ind. Aff., 308, 1879. Ekū'-lath.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 31, 1890. Equallett.—Kelley, Oregon, 68, 1830.

Ekquall. A former rancheria, possibly of the Diegueño, under San Miguel de la Frontera mission, in the mountains of w. Lower California, about 30 m. s. of San Diego, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 18, 1860.

Ekuhkahshatin. A Shuswap village on a small branch of Deadman cr., a n. affluent of Thompson r., Brit. Col. Pop., with Skichistan (q. v.), 118 in 1904.

E-kuh-kah'-sha-tin.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1891, sec. II, 44.

Eku. A Nushagamiut village near the mouth of Nushagak r., Alaska. Pop. 112 in 1880; 65 in 1890.

Ekuok.—Lutke (1828) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1901. Eku.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 17, 1884. Yekuk.—11th Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Ekuks. A Squawmish village community on the right bank of Squawmish r., w. Brit. Col.

Ēkuks.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887. Ēk-ūks.—Hall-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Ekupabeka. A Hidatsa band.

Bonnet.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 159, 1877. E-ku'-pä-be-ka.—Ibid.

Elahsa ('village of the great willows'). A former Hidatsa village on the n. bank of Knife r., N. Dak., about 3 m. from Missouri r.

Biddahatsi-Awatiss.—Maximilian, Voy. dans l'int. de l'Am., III, 3, 1843. Elah-Sá.—Maximilian, Trav., 178, 1843. Hidatsa.—Matthews, Ethnog. Hidatsa, 38, 1877 (see Hidatsa).

Elakulsi (E'lākūl'si, referring to ela, 'earth'; or Alagulsa). A Cherokee settlement in N. Georgia about 1800–35. (J. M.) Ailigulsha.—Doc. of 1799 quoted by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 144, 1887.

Elarroyde. A former village; presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Eleidlinottine ('people of the fork'). An Etchareottine tribe at the confluence of Liard and Mackenzie rs., whose territory extends to La Martre, Grandin, and Taché Lakes.

Él'é-idlin-Gottine.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891. Él'e-idlin-ottine.—Petitot in Bull. Soc. d. Geog. Paris, chart, 1875. Gens de la fourche du Mackenzie.—Petitot, Dict. Dènè Dindjé, xx, 1876.

Elephant Mound. A noted effigy mound, 4 m. s. of Wyalusing, Grant co., Wis., first brought to public notice in 1872 through a pencil sketch and brief description by Jared Warner (Smithson. Rep. 1872, 1873). From its massive form and an apparent prolongation of the nose, supposed to be a part of the original mound, giving the tumulus a slight resemblance to an elephant, the name Elephant Mound was applied to it. Although frequently mentioned and illustrated, the figures are copies of Warner's sketch, no reexamination having been made until Nov., 1884, when the Bureau of American Ethnology surveyed and platted the mound; the result of this work appears in its Twelfth Report (91–93, fig. 44, 1894). The immediate situation is a long rectangular depression forming a cul de sac, the level of which is only a few feet above the Mississippi at high water. Although the tract had been cultivated for many years, the mound at the time of the survey distinctly showed the rounded surface, the highest point being at the hip of the effigy, where the height was 4 ft. The measurements were: length, 140 ft; width across the body and to the lower end of the hind leg, 72 ft. At the time of the survey no indication of an elephant-like proboscis was found. After an examination of similar effigies it was determined that this mound was designed to represent a bear, and that the supposed nasal prolongation seen by Warner was accidental, due probably to washed or drifted earth. In addition to the references cited, see Am. Antiq., vi, 178, 1884; Strong (1) in Rep. Wis. Geol. Surv. for

1873-4, (2) in Smithson. Rep. 1876, 431, 1877; Thomas, Catalogue Prehist. Works, Bull. B. A. E., 232, 1891. (C. T.)

Eleunaxciay. A Chumashan village formerly near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 459, 1874.

Elhlateese. The principal village of the Uchucklesit (q. v.) at the head of Uchucklesit harbor, Alberni canal, Vancouver id.; pop. 45 in 1902.—Can. Ind. Aff., 263, 1902.

Eliot Bible. The translation of the Scriptures into the Algonquian language of the Massachuset, made by John Eliot (1604-90), the Apostle to the Indians, was the first Bible printed in America by the English authorities. The first edition of the whole Bible was published at Cambridge, Mass., in 1663, the New Testament having appeared two years before. The books of Genesis and Matthew seem to have been printed in 1655 and a portion of the Psalms in 1658, by which time the translation of the whole Bible was completed. Eliot was the author of other works in the language of the Massachuset, and of books about the language and the natives (Pilling, Bibliog. Algonq. Lang., Bull. B. A. E., 1891). Trumbull's Dictionary of the Eliot Bible, which is not exhaustive, has been published as the Natick Dictionary (Bull. 25, B. A. E., 1903). The Eliot Bible is one of the monuments of missionary endeavor and prescientific study of the Indian tongues. In his linguistic labors Eliot was assisted by his two sons and by several Indians. See Bible translations, Cockenoe. (A. F. C.)

Eljman. A former Chumashan village described as situated near the windmill of La Patera, near Santa Barbara, Cal.

Aljiman.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 459, 1874. Eljiman.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863. Eljman.—Ibid. Eljman.—Bancroft, op. cit. San Marcos.—Taylor, op. cit.

Elks. A mythical people, said by Pidgeon (Traditions of De-coo-dah, 162, 1858), on information said to have been obtained from the Dakota, "to have come from the N., and once held dominion over all this country, from the Mississippi r., E. and N., to the great waters."

Ellijay (from Elätsé, abbr. of Elätséyi, possibly 'green [verdant] earth'). The name of several former Cherokee settlements. One was on the headwaters of Keowee r., S. C.; another was on Ellijay cr. of Little Tennessee r., near the present Franklin, Macon co., N. C.; another about the present Ellijay in Gilmer co., Ga., and a fourth on Ellejey cr. of Little r., near the present Maryville, in Blount co., Tenn.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 517, 1900.

Allagae.—Bartram, Travels, 372, 1792. Eljioy.—Doc. of 1775 quoted by Royce in 5th Report B. A. E., 143, 1887. Ellijay.—Doc of 1793, ibid.

El Morro (Span.: 'the castle'). A prehistoric ruined pueblo, consisting of the remains of two blocks of dwellings, situated on the summit of a rock mesa called El Morro, or Inscription Rock, about 35 m. E. of Zuñi, Valencia co., N. Mex. The pueblo is reputed to be of Zuñi origin, but there is only legendary testimony of this. The peñol is called El Morro on account of its fancied resemblance to a castle from a distance, and Inscription Rock from the occurrence thereon of numerous inscriptions carved by early Spanish explorers. The earliest in date is that of Juan de Oñate in 1605. For description see Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 328, 1892; Coyes, Garcés Diary (1775-76), 1900; Fewkes in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archæol., I, 1890; Hoopes and Broomall in Proc. Del. Co. (Pa.) Inst. of Sci., I, pt. 1, 1905; Lummis, Strange Corners, 164-182, 1892; Simpson, Jour., 121, 1850. (F. W. H.)

El Morro.—Vargas (1692) quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 200, 1889 (applied to the peñol). Heshotayá'hito.—Hodge, inf. n., 1895 ('ruins on top or above': Zuñi name). Hesho-ta Yashtok.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 328, 1892 (given as Zuñi name).

Elochuteka. A former village, probably Seminole, between Hillsboro and Big Withlacoochee rs., Fla.—H. R. Doc. 78, 25th Cong., 2d sess., map, 768-769, 1838.

Elogio. A Papago settlement, probably in Pima co., s. Ariz., with 66 inhabitants in 1858.—Bailey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 208, 1858.

Eloquale. An unidentified village in N. Florida in 1564.—De Bry, Brev. Nar., II, map, 1591.

Eloquence. See Oratory.

Elothet. Given by Kelley (Oregon, 68, 1830) as a Nootka town on Vancouver id. under chief Wickaninish; possibly intended for Ucluelet.

El Paso. A mission established among the Mansos at the present Juarez, Chihuahua, opposite El Paso, Tex., by Fray Garcia de Zuñiga (or de San Francisco) in 1659. The settlement contained also some Piro from Tabira in 1684, and it became prominent as the seat of the New Mexican government during the Pueblo rebellion of 1680-92. (F. W. H.)

Guadalupe del Paso.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 168, 1889. Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe de los Mansos del Paso del Norte.—García (1659) quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 86, 1890. Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe del Paso del Rio del Norte.—MS. of 17th century quoted by Bandelier, ibid., IV, 248, 1892. Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe del Paso.—Villa-Señor, Theatro Am., pt. 2, 422, 1748. Paso.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 83, 1855. Paso del Rio del Norte.—Arch. Santa Fé, MS. quoted by Bancroft, op. cit. Paso del Norte.—Villa-Señor, op. cit., 424.

El Peñon (Span.: 'the large rocky hill or height'). A former small settlement, probably Seminole, on an island 13 leagues N. of Mosquito r., at the entrance of Matanzas r., Fla.

El Penon.—Smyth, Tour in U. S., II, 21, 1784.

Elquis. A Chumashan village w. of Pueblo de las Canoas (San Buenaventura), Ventura co., Cal., in 1542.—Cabrillo, Nar. (1542) in Smith, Colec. Doc. Fla., 181, 1857.

Elskwatawa. See Tenskwatawa.

El Turco. See Turk.

Eluaxcu. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, 1, 459, 1874.

Elwha. A Clallam village at the mouth of the river of the same name in Washington.

Él'-hwa.—Ells, letter, B. A. E., Feb., 1886 (own name). Elkwah.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., 1, 429, 1855. Elwahas.—Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 191, 1871. Elwha.—Swan in Smithson. Cont., xvi, 50, 1869. Iraqua Indians.—Lee and Frost, Oregon, 274, 1844.

Emamoueta. An unidentified tribe placed by Marquette on his map of 1673 w. of the Mississippi, apparently on the lower Arkansas.

Emamseta.—Marquette, map (1673) in Shea, Discov. Miss. Val., 268, 1852.

Emmanuelito. See Manuelito.

Ematlochee (imalla, 'leader'). A former Creek town on Apalachicola r.; exact location unknown.

Emarhe.—Ex. Doc. 425, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 299, 1836. Ematlochees town.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1833), 578, 1837.

Emet. A small tribe met by De León and Manzanet near lower Guadalupe r., Texas, in 1689. They occupied a village with the Cava Indians near the crossing place, apparently about 15 leagues from the French Fort St Louis on Matagorda bay. To the northward they encountered several other Emet "ranchitos." Within a year these Indians appear to have moved farther e., for in 1690 De León encountered them on that side of the Rio Colorado, living with the Cava, Too, and Toaa Indians, their former neighbors. They were perhaps related to the Karankawa. Possibly the Meghty of Joutel are identical. (H. E. B.)

Emat.—De León MS. (1690) in Texas Archives. Emet.—Manzanet (1689) quoted in Tex. Hist. Quar., viii, 214, 1905.

Emistesigo. Known also as Guristerisigo. An Upper Creek chief and noted warrior who came prominently into notice in the latter part of the 18th century. The British being in possession of Savannah, Ga., in June, 1782, Gen. Wayne was dispatched to watch their movements. On May 21, Col. Brown, of the British force, marched out of Savannah to meet, according to appointment, a band of Indians under Emistesigo, but was intercepted and cut to pieces by Wayne. Meanwhile Emistesigo succeeded in traversing the entire state of Georgia without discovery, except by two boys, who were captured and killed. Wayne, who was not anticipating an attack, was completely surprised by the Indians, who captured 2 of his cannon, but succeeded in extricating his troops from their danger, and, after severe fighting, in putting the Creeks to flight. Emistesigo was pierced by bayonets, and 17 of his warriors fell by his side. He was at this time only 30 years of age, and is described as being 6 ft 3 in. in height and weighing 220 pounds.

(C. T.)

Emitahpahksaiyiks ('dogs naked'). A division of the Siksika.

Dogs Naked.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 208, 1892. E'-mi-tah-pahk-sai-yiks.—Ibid.

Emitaks (E'-mi-taks, 'dogs'). A society of the Ikuuhkahtsi, or All Comrades, in the Piegan tribe; it is composed of old men who dress like, and dance with and like, the Issui, though forming a different society.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 221, 1892.

Empress of the Creek Nation. See Bosomworth, Mary.

Emussa (imúsa, 'affluent,' 'tributary'). Mentioned as a Lower Creek town formerly on lower Chattahoochee r., Henry co., Ala., 2 m. above Wikaiva, near the junction of Omussee cr., with 20 inhabitants in 1820. It seems to be equally probable that the settlement, which is not mentioned by early writers, was composed of Yamasi, from whom it derived its name.

Emusas.—Drake, Bk. Inds., vii, 1848. Emusas.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 364, 1822.

Encaguigualcaca. Mentioned by Oñate (Doc. Inéd., xvi, 115, 1871) as a pueblo of the province of Atripuy, in the region of the lower Rio Grande, N. Mex., in 1598.

Encinal (Span.: 'oak grove'). Formerly a summer village of the Lagunas, now a permanently occupied pueblo, situated 6 m. n. w. of Laguna, N. Mex. In 1749 an attempt was made by Father Menchero to establish a mission there for the Navaho, but it was abandoned in the following year. (F. W. H.)

Hapuntika.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Laguna name: 'place of the oaks'). Lespaia.—Ibid. (Acoma name). Pun-ye-kia.—Pradt quoted by Hodge in Am. Anthropol., iv, 346, 1891 (another Laguna name: 'house to the west').

Enecappe. A village on middle St Johns r., Fla., belonging to the Utina (Timucua) confederacy in the 16th century.

Enacapen.—Barcia, Ensayo, 48, 1723 (cacique's name). Enecappe.—Laudonnière (1567) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., 243, 1869. Enecape.—De Bry, Brev. Nar., II, map, 1591. Enecaque.—Laudonnière, op. cit., 305. Eneguape.—Laudonnière, op. cit., 287. Enequaque.—Barcia, op. cit., 72. Helmacape.—Laudonnière, op. cit., 349.

Eneeshur. Shahapian bands, aggregating 1,200 population in 41 mat lodges, found by Lewis and Clark in 1805 on both sides of Columbia r. near the mouth of the Deschutes, in Washington. The term probably refers more specifically to the Tapanash. (L. F.)

Eioestures.—Robertson in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 9, 1848. Eivesteurs.—Robertson, Oregon, 129, 1846. E-ne-churs.—Clark (1806) in Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, III, 342, 1905. E-ne-sher.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., II, map, 1814.

Enesher.—Lewis (1806) in Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, III, 164, 1905. E-nee-shur.—Clark (1895), ibid., 164. E-nee-Shur.—Ibid., 183. E-ne-show.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 417, 1855. E-ne-shur.—Lewis and Clark, op. cit., I, map. Eneshure.—Ibid., II, 472. Enesteurs.—Wilkes, Hist. Oregon, 44, 1845.

Enekelkawa. A former Luisiño village near the site of San Luis Rey mission, s. Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 11, 1860.

Enempa. A Calusa village on the s. w. coast of Florida, about 1570.—Fontaneda Memoir (ca. 1575), Smith trans., 19, 1854.

Enfrenado (Span.: 'bridled'). An Indian village about 40 leagues from C. Santa Helena, in s. South Carolina, visited by Juan Pardo in 1565.—Vandera (1567) in Smith, Collec. Doc. Fla., I, 16, 1857.

English influence. The first English visitors to the coast of Virginia-Carolina were well received by the Indians, whom the early chroniclers, as Hariot, for example, describe as peaceful and amiable people. So, too, were in the beginning the natives of the New England coast, but in 1605 Capt. Weymouth forcibly carried off five Indians, and he soon had many imitators. The good character ascribed by Pastor Cushman in 1620 to the Indians of Plymouth colony was forgotten when theological zeal saw in the aborigines of the New World "the accursed seed of Canaan," which it was the duty of good Christians to exterminate (see Lost Ten Tribes). When the political ambitions of the English colonists were aroused conflicts with the Indians soon occurred, and the former came to regard the latter as the natural enemies of the whites in the onward march of civilization. Unlike the French, they paid little attention to the pride of the Indians, despising the heathen ways and institutions more and more as their power grew and their land hunger increased. With a few noble exceptions, like Roger Williams and John Eliot, the clergy of the English colonies were not nearly so sympathetic toward the natives as were the French missionaries in Acadia and New France. Scotchmen, however, in the S., in the W., in the old provinces of Canada, and in the territories handed over to the Hudson's Bay Company have played a conspicuous part as associates and leaders of the Indians. Even men like Canonius were always suspicious of their English friends, and never really opened their hearts to them. The introduction of rum and brandy among the Indians worked infinite damage. Some of the New England tribes, such as the Pequot, for example, foreseeing perhaps the result of their advent, were inimical to the English from the first, and the extermination of these Indians ensued when the whites were strong enough to accomplish it. It appears, however, that the English colonists paid for most of the land that they took from the Indians (Thomas in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 549, 1899). English influence on tribal government and land tenure was perceptible as early as 1641. The success of deliberately planned educational institutions for the benefit of the Indian during the early periods of American history does not seem to have been proportionate to the hopes and ideals of their founders. Harvard, Dartmouth, and the College of William and Mary all began, in whole or in part, as colleges for Indian youth, but their graduates of aboriginal blood have been few indeed, while they are now all high-class institutions for white men (see Education). The royal charter of Dartmouth College (1769) specifically states that it is to be "for the education and instruction of youths of the Indian tribes in this land," and "for civilizing and Christianizing the children of pagans." That of Harvard looked to "the education of the English and Indian youth in knowledge and godliness." Harvard had during the colonial period one Indian graduate, Caleb Cheeshteaumuck, of whom hardly more than his name is known (see James, English Institutions and the American Indian, 1894). The aim of the English has ever been to transform the aborigines and lift them at once to their own plane. When commissioners visited the Cherokee they induced these to elect an "emperor," with whom treaties could be made. The Friends, from the time of William Penn (1682) down to the present (see Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 193, 1898), seem to have furnished many individuals capable, like the Baptist Roger Williams (1636), of exercising great personal influence over the Indians. The Quakers still continue their work, e. g., among the eastern Cherokee (Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 176, 1900) and the Tlingit of Alaska. The New England Company established for the propagation of the gospel in America (1649), whose operations were transferred to Canada in 1822, carries on at the present time work on the Brantford Iroquois reserve and in other parts of Ontario, at Kuper id., Brit. Col., and elsewhere. Its Mohawk institute, near Brantford, has had a powerful influence among the Iroquois of Ontario. The pagan members of these Indians have recently been investigated by Boyle (Jour. Anthropol. Inst. G. B., n. s., III, 263-273, 1900), who tells us that "all for which Iroquois paganism is indebted to European culture" is the possession of some ideas about God or the Great Spirit and "a few suggestions respecting conduct, based on the Christian code of morals." The constant mingling of the young men with their white neighbors and the going of the young women out to service are nevertheless weakening more and more the old ideas which are doomed "to disappear as a system long before the people die out." That they have survived so long is remarkable.

English influence made itself felt in colonial days in the introduction of improved weapons, tools, etc., which facilitated hunting and fishing and made possible the manufacture with less labor and in greater abundance of ornaments, trinkets, and other articles of trade. The supplying of the Indians with domestic animals also took place at an early period. Spinning wheels and looms were introduced among the Cherokee shortly before the Revolution, and in 1801 the agent reported that at the Cherokee agency the wheel, the loom, and the plow were in pretty general use. The intermarriage of Englishmen and Indians has been greater all over the country than is commonly believed, and importance must consequently be attached to the effects of such intermingling in modifying Indian customs and institutions. Clothing and certain ornaments, and, after these, English beds and other furniture were adopted by many Indians in colonial days, as is now being done by the tribes of the N. Pacific coast.

English influence on the languages of some of the aborigines has been considerable. The word Kinjames, 'King James,' in use among the Canadian Abnaki, testifies to the power of English ideas in the 17th century. The vocabularies of the eastern Algonquian tribes who have come in contact with the English contain other loan-words. Rand's English-Micmac Dictionary (1888) contains, among others, the following: Jak-ass; cheesawa, 'cheese'; koppee, 'coffee'; mulugech, 'milk'; gubulnot, 'governor.' Brinton and Anthony's Lenape-English Dictionary (1889), representing the language of about 1825, has amel, 'hammer'; apel, 'apple'; mbil, 'beer'; mellik, 'milk'; skulin, 'to keep school,' which may be partly from English and partly from German. A Shawnee vocabulary of 1819 has for 'sugar' melassa, which seems to be English 'molasses'; and a Micmac vocabulary of 1800 has blaakeet, 'blanket.' The English 'cheese' has passed into the Nipissing dialect of Algonquian as tchis. The Chinook jargon (q. v.) contained 41 words of English origin in 1804, and 57 in 1863, while in 1894, out of 1,082 words (the total number is 1,402) whose origin is known, Eells cites 570 as English. Of recent years "many words of Indian origin have been dropped, English words having taken their places." In colonial days English doubtless had some influence on the grammatical form and sentence-construction of Indian languages, and this influence still continues: the recent studies by Prince and Speck of the Pequot-Mohegan (Am. Anthropol., n. s., vi, 18-45, 469-476, 1904) contain evidence of this. English influence has made itself felt also in the languages of the N. W. Hill-Tout (Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 18, 1902) observes, concerning certain Salishan tribes, that "the spread and use of English among the Indians is very seriously affecting the purity of the native speech." Even the Athapascan Nahane of N. British Columbia have, according to Morice (Trans. Canad. Inst., 529, 1903), added a few English words to their vocabulary. See also Friederici, Indianer und Anglo-Amerikaner, 1900; MacMahon, The Anglo-Saxon and the North American Indian, 1876; Manypenny, Our Indian Wards, 1880. (A. F. C.)

Englishman. See Sagaminash.

Engraved tablets. See Notched plates.

Engraving. Although extensively employed in pictographic work and in decoration, the engraver's art did not rise to a high degree of artistic excellence among the tribes N. of Mexico. As no definite line can be drawn between the lower forms of relief sculpture and engraving, all ordinary petroglyphs may be classed as engravings, since the work is executed in shallow lines upon smooth rock surfaces (see Pictography). Point work is common on wood, bone, horn, shell, bark, metal, clay, and other surfaces. Each material has its own particular technique, and the designs run the entire gamut of style from graphic to purely conventional representations, and the full range of significance from purely symbolic through esthetic to simply trivial motives.

Perhaps the most artistic and technically perfect examples of engraving are those of the N. W. coast tribes of the present day, executed on slate utensils and on ornaments of metal (Niblack), yet the graphic productions of the Eskimo on ivory, bone, and antler have sometimes a considerable degree of merit (Boas, Hoffman, Murdoch, Nelson, Turner). With both of these peoples the processes employed and the style of representation have probably undergone much change in recent times through contact with white people. The steel point is superior to the point of stone, and this alone would have a marked effect on the execution. The picture writings on bark of many of the northern tribes, executed with bone or other hard points, are good examples of the native engraver's art, although these are not designed either for simply pictorial or for decorative effect. The ancient mound builders were clever engravers, the technical excellence of their work being well illustrated by examples from the mounds and dwelling sites of Ross co., Ohio (Putnam and Willoughby), and by others from the Turner mounds in Hamilton co., Ohio. Shell also was a favorite material for the graver's point, as is illustrated by numerous ornaments recovered from mounds in the middle Mississippi valley.

ANIMAL FIGURES ENGRAVED ON SILVER
BRACELETS; HAIDA

ENGRAVINGS ON OBJECTS OF IVORY; ESKIMO.

ENGRAVING ON A SHELL GORGET FROM A MISSOURI MOUND. (1-4)

In decorating their earthenware the native tribes often used the stylus with excellent effect. The yielding clay afforded a tempting surface, and in some cases considerable skill was shown, especially by the ancient potters of the lower Gulf states, who executed elaborate scroll designs with great precision (Moore, Holmes). The point was used for incising, trailing, and indenting, and among ancient Pueblo potters was sometimes used upon dark-painted surfaces to develop delicate figures in the light color of the underlying paste. Examples of engraving are given by Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 1888; Fewkes in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 1898; Hoffman in Nat. Mus. Rep. 1895, 1897; Holmes (1) in 2d Rep. B. A. E., 1883, (2) in 20th Rep. B. A. E., 1903; Hough in Nat. Mus. Rep., 1901; Moore, various memoirs in Jour. Acad. Nat. Sci. Phila., x-xii, 1894-1903; Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899; Niblack in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1888, 1890; Putnam and Willoughby in Proc. A. A. A. S., xlv, 1896; Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 1894. See Art, Ornament. (w. H. H.)

Enias. A local name for a body of Upper Lillooet on Seton lake, in 1902 reduced to a single individual.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. II, 72, 1902.

Enipeu. A Yurok village on Klamath r., Cal., 15 m. above the mouth.

Enitunne ('people at the base of a plateau'). A village of the Tututni near the mouth of a southern affluent of Rogue r., Oreg.

Eni' tünne'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 236, 1890.

Enitunne. A part of the Mishikwutmetunne in a village on upper Coquille r., Oreg.

Eni' tünne'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 232, 1890.

Enmegahbowh ('The one who stands before his people'). An Indian preacher. He was an Ottawa by birth, but was adopted while young by the Chippewa and was converted to the Methodist faith in Canada, educated at the Methodist mission school at Jacksonville, Ill., and ordained as a preacher with the name of the Rev. John Johnson. In 1839 he accompanied Elder T. B. Kavanaugh to the upper Mississippi, where he was a missionary among the Chippewa for 5 years, when the Methodist church withdrew from that field. In 1852, at Johnson's solicitation, the Episcopal church sent a minister into this section, and a mission and school were established at Gull lake, Minn., in which he served as assistant and interpreter. In 1858 Johnson was admitted by Bishop Kemper to the first order of the Episcopal ministry at Faribault, and in 1859 was left in charge of the mission at Gull lake, where he continued until the Sioux outbreak of 1862, when he alone of the Episcopal missionaries remained in the field. In 1869 the Gull lake mission was removed to the reservation at White Earth, whither Johnson followed and was given charge, bringing into the church a number of his tribesmen and erecting a chapel and parsonage. Here the Rev. Joseph A. Gilfillan, who was assigned to White Earth as an Episcopal missionary in 1873, with Johnson's aid established a school for the training of Indian clergy, and in a few years 9 Chippewa were ordained to the ministry. Johnson was living in 1898, at which time he was spoken of as the "aged Indian pastor and co-worker of Bishop Whipple."

Enmitahin ('cliff's end'). A Yuit Eskimo village of the Nabukak or Nookalit division, N. of East cape, N. E. Siberia; pop. 42 in 8 houses about 1895.

Enmita'hin.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 30, 1904 (Chukchi name).

Eno. A tribe associated with the Adshusheer and Shakori in North Carolina in the 17th century. Mooney thinks it doubtful that the Eno and the Shakori were of Siouan stock, as they seem to have differed in physique and habits from their neighbors, although their alliances were all with Siouan tribes. Little is known of them, as they disappeared from history as tribal bodies about 1720, having been incorporated with the Catawba on the s. or with the Saponi and their confederates on the n., although they still retained their distinct dialect in 1743. The Eno and Shakori are first mentioned by Yardley in 1654, to whom a Tuscarora described, among other tribes of the interior, living next to the Shakori, "a great nation" called Haynoke, by whom the northern advance of the Spaniards was valiantly resisted (Hawks, N. C., II, 19, 1858). The next mention of these two tribes is by Lederer, who heard of them in 1672 as living s. of the Occaneechi about the headwaters of Tar and Neuse rs. The general locality is still indicated in the names of Eno r. and Shocco cr., upper branches of these streams. In 1701 Lawson found the Eno and Shakori confederated and the Adshusheer united with them in the same locality. Their village, which he calls Adshusheer, was on Eno r., about 14 m. E. of the Occaneechi village, which was near the site of the present Hillsboro. This would place the former not far N. E. of Durham, N. C. Eno Will, a Shakori by birth, was at that time, according to Lawson, chief of the three combined tribes, and at this period the Shakori seem to have been the principal tribe. They had some trade with the Tuscarora. Later, about 1714, with the Tutelo, Saponi, Occaneechi, and Keyauwee, together numbering only about 750 souls, they moved toward the settlements. Lawson includes Eno in his list of Tuscarora villages at that date, and as the Eno lived on the Neuse adjoining the Tuscarora, it was natural that they were sometimes classed with them. In 1716 Gov. Spotswood, of Virginia, proposed to settle the Eno, Sara, and Keyauwee at Eno town, on "the very frontiers" of North Carolina; but the project was defeated by North Carolina on the ground that all three tribes were then at war with South Carolina. From the records it can not be determined clearly whether this was the Eno town of Lawson or a more recent village nearer the Albemarle settlements. Owing to the objection made to their settlement in the n., the Eno moved southward into South Carolina. They probably assisted the other tribes of that region in the Yamasi war of 1715. At least a few of the mixed tribe found their way into Virginia with the Saponi, as Byrd speaks of an old Indian, called Shacco Will, living near Nottoway r. in 1733, who offered to guide him to a mine on Eno r. near the old country of the Tuscarora. The name of Shockoe cr., at Richmond, Va., may possibly have been derived from that of the Shakori tribe, while the name of Enoree r. in South Carolina may have a connection with that of the Eno tribe.

Lederer speaks of the Eno village as surrounded by large cultivated fields and as built around a central plaza where the men played a game described as "slinging of stones," in which "they exercise with so much labor and violence and in so great numbers that I have seen the ground wet with the sweat that dropped from their bodies." This was probably the chunky game played with round stones among the Creeks. Lederer agrees with Yardley as to the small size of the Eno, but not as to their bravery, though they were evidently industrious. They raised plentiful crops and "out of their granary supplied all the adjacent parts." "The character thus outlined," says Mooney, "accords more with that of the peaceful Pueblos than with that of any of our eastern tribes and goes far to indicate a different origin." It should be remembered, however, that Lederer is not a leading authority, as it is doubtful if he was ever in North Carolina. The houses of the Eno are said to have been different in some respects from those of their neighbors. Instead of building of bark, as did most Virginia and Carolina tribes, they used interwoven branches or canes and plastered them with mud or clay, like the Quapaw Indians of E. Arkansas. The form was usually round. Near every house was a small oven-shaped structure in which they stored corn and nuts. This was similar to the storehouse of the Cherokee and some other southern tribes. Their government was democratic and patriarchal, the decision of the old men being received with unquestioned obedience. See Mooney, Siouan Tribes of the East, Bull. B. A. E., 1896.

Anoeg.—Strachey (1612), Hist. Va., 48, 1849 (probably identical). Eno.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tr., III, 81, 1854. Eeno.—Adair (1743), Hist. Am. Inds., 224, 1775. Enoe.—Lawson (1709), N. C., 97, 1860. Haynokes.—Yardley (1654) quoted by Hawks, N. C., II, 19, 1858. Enock.—Lederer, Discov., 15, 1672. Oenock.—Ibid.

Enoqua. An unidentified village or tribe mentioned to Joutel, in 1687 (Margry, Déc., III, 410, 1878), while he was staying with the Kadohadacho on Red r. of Louisiana, by the chief of that tribe, as one of his allies.

Enpishemo (from apishimun.—W. J.). According to Bartlett (Dict. Americanisms, 201, 1877), "a word used w. at the Rocky mts. to denote the housings of a saddle, the blanket beneath it, etc." Another form seems to be 'apishamore'. In the Medicine Lodge treaty made with the Comanche, Kiowa, and others in 1867, Fish-e-more appears as the name of one of the signers. (A. F. C.)

Ensenore. A chief of Wingandacoo (Secotan), N. C., previous to 1585, noted as the earliest chief of the E. coast between Hudson r. and St Helena sd. of whom there is any notice. He was the father of Wingina and Granganemco (q. v.), and a firm friend of the English colony on Roanoke id. in 1585-86. While he lived he restrained Wingina from wreaking vengeance on Lane's company for killing some of the natives. His death occurred in 1585 or 1586. (C. T.)

Entubur. A former rancheria, probably of the Papago, visited by Kino and Mange in 1694; situated between Tubutama and Busanic, lat. 31°, N. W. Sonora, Mexico.—Mange (ca. 1701) quoted by Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 258, 1884.

Environment. The natural phenomena that surrounded the aborigines of North America, stimulating and conditioning their life and activities, contrasted greatly with those of the European-Asiatic continent. The differences in the two environments do not lie alone in physical geography and in plant and animal life, but are largely meteorologic, the sun operating on air, land, and water, producing variations in temperature and water supply, and as a result entirely new vegetal and animal forms. The planets and stars also affected cultural development, since lore and mythology were based on them. Within the American continent N. of Mexico there were ethnic environments which set bounds for the tribes and modified their industrial, esthetic, social, intellectual, and religious lives. Omitting the Eskimo, practically all the peoples dwelt in the temperate zone. Few impassable barriers separated the culture areas, as in Asia. In some respects, indeed, the entire region formed one environment, having easy communications N. and S. and few barriers E. and W. The climate zones which Merriam has worked out for the U. S. Department of Agriculture in regard to their animal and vegetal life correspond in a measure with the areas of linguistic families as delimited on Powell's map (see Linguistic families). The environmental factors that determine cultural development of various kinds and degrees are (1) physical geography; (2) climate, to which primitive peoples are especially amenable; (3) predominant plants, animals, and minerals that supply the materials of drink, food, medicines, clothing, ornaments, houses, fuel, furniture and utensils, and the objects of hunting, war, the industrial arts, and activities connected with travel, transportation, and commerce. Twelve ethnic environments may be distinguished. There are cosmopolitan characters common to several, but in each area there is an ensemble of qualities that impressed themselves on their inhabitants and differentiated them.

(1) Arctic.—The characteristics of this environment are an intensely cold climate; about six months day and six months night; predominance of ice and snow; immense archipelagos, and no accessible elevations; good stone for lamps and tools; driftwood, but no timber and little fruit; polar bear, blue fox, aquatic mammals in profusion, migratory birds, and fish, supplying food, clothing, fire, light, and other wants in the exacting climate.

(2) Yukon-Mackenzie.—This is Merriam's transcontinental coniferous belt, separated from the arctic environment by the timber line, but draining into arctic seas. It has poor material resources, and barren grounds here and there. Its saving riches are an abundance of birch, yielding bark utensils, canoes, binding materials, and houses, and of spruce, furnishing textile roots and other necessities; caribou, muskox, bear, red fox, wolf, white rabbit, and other fur-bearing mammals, and porcupines, migrating birds, and fish. Snow necessitates snowshoes of fine mesh, and immense inland waters make portages easy for bark canoes. Into this area came the Athapascan tribes who developed through its resources their special culture.

(3) St Lawrence and Lake region.—This is a transition belt having no distinct lines of separation from the areas on the N. and S. It occupies the entire drainage of the great lakes and includes Manitoba, E. Canada, and N. New England. It was the home of the Iroquois, Abnaki, Chippewa, and their nearest kindred. The climate is boreal. There are a vast expanse of lowlands and numerous extensive inland waters. The natural products are abundant—evergreens, birch, sugar maple, elm, berries, and wild rice in the W.; maize, squash, and beans in the S.; moose, deer, bear, beaver, porcupines, land and water birds in immense flocks, whitefish, and, on the seacoast, marine products in greatest variety and abundance. Canoe travel; pottery scarce.

(4) Atlantic slope.—This area, occupied principally by tribes allied to the Delawares, but also by detached Iroquoian tribes and perhaps some Siouan and Uchean bands, included the region of the fertile piedmont, poor foothills, rich lowlands, bays and rivers abounding in aquatic life, and vast salt meadows. The low mountains were not ethnic barriers, but the differences in physical conditions on the two sides were marked enough to produce separate cultures. Minerals for tools and weapons were present in great variety, and ochers, clays, and some copper were found. Plant life was varied and abundant. Forests of hard wood, birch, elm, maple, and evergreens furnished materials for supplying a great diversity of wants. From the soft wood were made dugout canoes. The dense forest growth rendered foot traveling irksome. Nuts, berries, roots, and maize furnished food; flax and tough pliant woods and bark gave textile materials. The life conditions for economic animals were as varied as possible. Beginning with the shallow marshes and numerous salt-water inlets, furnishing clams, oysters, crabs, cod, mackerel, herring, halibut, shad, sturgeon, and eels, and terrapin, as shell-heaps attest, it terminated in the trout streams of the mountains. There were birds of the air, like the eagle and wild pigeon, ground birds, like the quail and the turkey, and water birds innumerable. Mammals of the water were the muskrat, otter, and beaver; of the land, moose, elk, deer, bear, rabbit, squirrel, raccoon, opossum, and woodchuck. The wide range of latitude necessitated different dwellings for different climates, as the bark tipi, the mat house, and the arbor house. For clothing, garments of hide, rabbit skin, and feathers were used. Stone was abundant for making tools, for flaking or grinding, but neither materials nor motives for artistic work of a high order were present.

(5) Gulf coast.—The Southern states, from Georgia to Texas, were inhabited by Muskogean tribes and several small linguistic families. The characteristics of this area are a climate ranging from temperate to subtropical, with abundant rain, low mountains, and rich river valleys and littoral with varied and profuse mineral, vegetal, and animal resources. The environment yielded a diet of meat, fish, maize, pulse, melons, and fruits. It was favorable to meager dress and furnished materials and incentives for featherwork and beadwork, stonework, earthwork, and pottery. Traveling on foot and in dugout canoes was easy.

(6) Mississippi valley.—This area includes the states of the Middle West beyond the Great Lake divide, extending to the loosely defined boundary of the great plains. Its characteristics in relation to Indian life were varied climate, abundant rainfall, numerous waterways, fertile lands, alternate timber and prairie, and minerals in great variety and abundance, including clay for pottery. The economic plants were soft and hard woods, and plants yielding nuts, berries, fruits, and fiber. The fertile land was favorable to the cultivation of maize and squashes. Animals of the chase were buffalo, deer, small rodents, and wild pigeons and other land birds; but there was a poor fish supply, and the only shellfish were river mussels. This environment developed hunting and agricultural tribes, chiefly of Algonquian lineage, including sedentary tribes that built remarkable mounds.

(7) Plains.—This environment lies between the Rocky mts. and the fertile lands w. of the Mississippi. To the n. it stretches into Athabasca, and it terminates at the s. about the Rio Grande. The tribes were Siouan, Algonquian, Kiowan, Caddoan, and Shoshonean. The Missouri and Arkansas and many tributaries drain the area. The plants were boisd'arc and other hard woods for bows, cedar for lodge poles, willows for beds, the pomme blanche for roots, etc., but there were no fine textile fibers. Dependence on the buffalo and the herbivorous animals associated with it compelled a meat diet, skin clothing and dwellings, a roving life, and industrial arts depending on the flesh, bones, hair, sinew, hide, and horns of those animals. Artistic and symbolic designs were painted on the rawhide, and the myths and tales related largely to the buffalo. Travel was on foot, with or without snowshoes, and transportation was effected by the aid of the dog and travois. The horse afterward wrought profound changes. The social order and habit of semi-nomadic wandering about fixed centers were the direct result of the surroundings and discouraged agriculture or much pottery. No canoes or other craft than the Mandan and Hidatsa skin boats.

(8) North Pacific coast.—From Mt St Elias to the Columbia mouth, lying along the archipelago and cut off from the interior by mountains covered with snow, was the area inhabited by the Tlingit, Haida, Tsimshian, Nootka, and coast Salish. It has a moist, temperate climate, a mountainous coast, with extensive island groups and landlocked waters favorable to canoe travel. The shores are bathed by the warm current of the n. Pacific. The days in different seasons vary greatly in length. The material resources are black slate for carving and good stone for pecking, grinding, and sawing; immense forests of cedar, spruce, and other evergreen trees for houses, canoes, totem-posts, and basketry; mountain goat and big-horn, bear, beaver, birds, and sea food in great variety and in quantities inexhaustible by savages. This environment induced a diet of fish, mixed with berries, clothing of bark and hair, large communal dwellings, exquisite twined and checkered basketry to the discouragement of pottery, carving in wood and stone, and unfettered travel in dugout canoes, which provided opportunity for the full development of the dispersive clan system.

(9) Columbia-Fraser region.—This includes the adjoining basins of these streams and contiguous patches, inhabited principally by Salishan, Shahaptian, and Chinookan tribes. In the s. is a coast destitute of islands. At the headwaters of its rivers it communicates with the areas lying to the e. across the mountains. Rich lands, a mild climate, good minerals for industries, textile plants, excellent forests, and an abundance of edible roots and fruits, fish, mollusks, and waterfowl ready at hand characterize this environment, with skin and wool for clothing. The manifold resources and varied physical features fostered a great variety of activities.

(10) Interior basin.—This is embraced between the Rocky mts. and the Sierras of the United States, terminating in a regular line in the s., and is the home of the great Shoshonean family. It partly coincides with the arid Sonoran area of Merriam, consisting of partial deserts, with rich wooded patches among the mountains. Good stone for various crafts is present. Timber is scarce, but wild seeds are abundant for food, and excellent woods and roots for basketry. Animals available were buffalo, rabbit, deer, antelope, wolf, mountain sheep, and birds, but fish were scarce. The environment made necessary the brush shelter and the cave dwelling. Little pottery was made, but the sinew-backed bow was developed. Traveling was necessarily done on foot, and carrying effected by dogs and women, as there was no transportation by water.

(11) California-Oregon.—This includes s. Oregon and the greater part of California—that embraced in the drainage basins of the Sacramento, San Joaquin, and smaller rivers flowing into the Pacific. The temperature is mild, neither cold in winter nor hot in summer, and the year is divided into wet and dry seasons. The Sierras form a mountain boundary, and mountain groups of some height are obstructions within the area, but the Coast range is low and broken and not a barrier. Obsidian, steatite, and other good stones for the arts were plentiful. There was clay, but no pottery. The region was well but not heavily timbered, consisting of open plains, with hillsides and ranges covered more or less with brush and scattered oaks, many species furnishing acorns for food. The open spaces alternating with the wooded lands yielded grasses and medicinal herbs. Other useful plants were the buckeye, manzanita, nut pine, redwood, and tule in the s. for balsams, baskets, matting, and houses, and edible and textile roots were also found. The animals entering into Indian economy were the deer, rabbit, bear, coyote, squirrel, jaguar, condor, salmon, sturgeon, eel, trout, smelt, mussel, clam, halibut, and other shellfish whose shells furnished media of exchange. This environment was the Caucasus of North America, where 25 linguistic families were assembled. On Merriam's bio-geographic maps, published by the Department of Agriculture, a great variety of life is shown, due to vertical zones of temperature, only the lower of which were inhabited by Indians. The more elevated of these were just as effectual as boundaries as though they were impassable. Owing to the peculiar nature of materials, the arts of this environment were well defined.

(12) Pueblo country. This area includes s. Utah, s. w. Colorado, all of New Mexico and Arizona together with the Mohave desert, and extends southward into Mexico. It embraces the drainage basin of the San Juan in the n., the Rio Grande and the Pecos in the e., and the Colorado in the w. In physiographic character it ranges from semiarid to desert. There are deep canyons, elevated mesas, narrow fertile valleys, broad stretches of plains, and isolated mountain masses. The climate demands little clothing in the lowlands, but on the plateaus the nights are cold and the summer temperature that of Maine. Rain is irregular and periodic, being plentiful for weeks, followed by months of drought; most of the streams are therefore intermittent. Useful minerals are gypsum, obsidian, varieties of quartz, potter's clay, adobe, ochers, lignite, salt, and turquoise. Plant life, except after rains, is comparatively meager, the species giving rise to native industries being chiefly cactus, yucca, cottonwood, greasewood, willow, scrub oak, conifers, and rushes. Maize, beans, and cotton were cultivated from a very early period. Wild animals hunted or trapped were the rabbit, deer, bear, turkey, prairie dog, mountain lion, wildcat, wood-rat, mountain sheep, coyote, and wolf. Dogs were trained, and burros, sheep, goats, and cattle found a congenial home in this area after their introduction by the Spaniards. Travel was formerly done on foot only, and goods had to be carried chiefly on the heads and backs of men and women, there being few navigable waters. This peculiar environment impelled tribes coming into the region to lead the life of the Pueblo. The outskirts of the region were even less favored with resources, hence the Pueblos were brought into conflict with predatory tribes like the Ute, and later the Navaho, the Apache, and the Comanche, who robbed them and constantly threatened to consume what they raised. These conflicts developed the cliff-dwelling as means of protection. Southwest of the region proper are Piman and Yuman tribes and the Mission Indians, dwelling in oases of the desert that extends into Mexico. Here grow mesquite, ironwood, agave, palo verde, cacti in the greatest variety, and, along the water courses, cottonwood and rushes. The people live a life partly sedentary, housed in shelters of brush and grass. The effects of this environment, where the finding of springs was the chief desideratum in the struggle for existence, were to influence social structure and functions, manners and customs, esthetic products and motives, lore and symbolism, and, most of all, creed and cult, which were conditioned by the unending, ever-recurring longing for water.

Consult Morice (1) W. Dénés, 1894, (2) N. Inter. Brit. Col., 1904; Merriam (1) Life Zones, Bull. 20, Biol. Surv. Dept. Agr., (2) N. A. Fauna, ibid., Bull. 3 and 16, (3) Bio-Geo. maps, 1892 and 1893; Powell, Linguistic Families, 7th Rep. B. A. E., 1891; Sargent (1) Distrib. Forest Trees, 10th Census, (2) Trees of N. Am., 1905, (3) Silva N. Am.; Chesnut (1) Poisonous Plants, Bull. 20, Div. Bot. Dept. Agr., (2) Plants used by Inds. Mendocino Co., Cal., Cont. U. S. Nat. Herb., VII, 3, 1902; Elliott, Mammals of N. Am., Fewkes in Internat. Geog. Cong., 1903; Field Columb. Mus. Publ., Zool., II, 1901; McGee, Beginning Agr., Am. Anthropol., VIII, no. 4, 1895; Mason, Influence of Environment, Smithsonian. Rep. 1895, 1896; Barrows, Ethno-botany of Coahuilla Inds., 1900; Miller, N. Am. Land Mammals, Boston Soc. Nat. Hist., XXX, no. 1, 1901; Farrand, Basis of Am. Hist., 1904; Dellenbaugh, North Americans of Yesterday, 1901. (O. T. M.)

Eototo (name of a supernatural being). One of the clans of the Kokop (Wood) phratry of the Hopi.

Eototo winwû.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 554, 1900 (winwû = 'clan'). E-o'-to-to winwû.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 404, 1894.

Epanow. One of the first Indians to be taken across the Atlantic by the English from New England—a member of the party forcibly taken from Marthas Vineyard, Mass., by Capt. Harlow in 1611. He was shown in England as a wonder, and managed to escape from the English on the return voyage by pretending to pilot them to a gold mine. In 1619 he was at the island of Capoge, near C. Cod, and in that year a body of Indians under his guidance attacked Capt. Dormer's men while attempting to land on Marthas Vineyard. Epanow is spoken of as artful and daring. He may be the same as Apannow, a signer of the Plymouth treaty of 1621. See Drake, Inds. N. Am., 72, 1880.

Epiminguia. A tribe formerly living on Mississippi r., 20 leagues above Arkansas r. (Coxe, Carolana, 11, 1741); probably a division of the Quapaw.

Epinette. A Chippewa band which formerly lived on the N. shore of L. Superior, E. of Michipicoton r., Ontario.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 32, 1744.

Episok. An Eskimo settlement in N. W. Greenland.—Kane, Arct. Explor., II, 278, 1856.

Epley's Ruin. A large prehistoric pueblo ruin on the outskirts of Solomonsville, on the Gila, S. E. Ariz. So called from the owner of the ranch on which it is situated.—Fewkes in 22d Rep. B. A. E., 171, 1904.

Erie (Huron: yěñresh, 'it is long-tailed', referring to the eastern puma or panther; Tuscarora, kěñ'räks, 'lion', a modern use, Gallicised into Eri and Ri, whence the locatives Eri'e, Rigué, and Riqué, 'at the place of the panther', are derived. Compare the forms Eriechronon, Eriechronon, and Riquéronon of the Jesuit Relations, signifying 'people of the panther'. It is probable that in Iroquois the puma and the wild-cat originally had generically the same name and that the defining term has remained as the name of the puma or panther). A populous sedentary Iroquoian tribe, inhabiting in the 17th century the territory extending S. from L. Erie probably to Ohio r., E. to the lands of the Conestoga along the E. watershed of Allegheny r. and to those of the Seneca along the line of the W. watershed of Genesee r., and N. to those of the Neutral Nation, probably on a line running eastward from the head of Niagara r. (for the Jesuit Relation for 1640-41 says that the territory of the Erie and their allies joined that of the Neutral Nation at the end of L. Erie), and W. to the W. watershed of L. Erie and Miami r. to Ohio r. Their lands probably adjoined those of the Neutral Nation W. of L. Erie. The Jesuit Relation for 1653, speaking of L. Erie, says that it "was at one time inhabited toward the S. by certain peoples whom we call the Cat Nation; but they were forced to proceed farther inland in order to escape their enemies whom they have toward the W." In this eastward movement of the Erie is probably found an explanation of the emigration of the Awenrehronon (Wenrohonon) to the Huron country in 1639 from the E. border of the lands of the Neutral Nation, although the reason there given is that they had for some unknown reason ruptured their relations with the Neutral Nation, with whom, it is stated, they had been allied, and that, consequently, losing the powerful support of the populous Neutral Nation, the Wenrohonon, were left a prey to their enemies, the Iroquois. But the earlier Jesuit Relation (for 1640-41), referring undoubtedly to this people, says that a certain strange nation, the Awenrehronon, dwelt beyond the Cat Nation, thus placing them at this time E. of the Erie and apparently separate from the Neutral Nation; so that at that time the Wenrohonon may have been either entirely independent or else confederated with the Erie.

Historically little is definitely known of the Erie and their political and social organization, but it may be inferred to have been similar to that of the Hurons. The Jesuit Relations give only a few glimpses of them while describing their last wars with the Iroquois confederation; tradition, however, records the probable fact that the Erie had had many previous wars with these hostile tribes. From the Relations mentioned it is learned that the Erie had many sedentary towns and villages, that they were constituted of several divisions, and that they cultivated the soil and spoke a language resembling that of the Hurons, although it is not stated which of the four or five Huron dialects, usually called "Wendat" (Wyandot) by themselves, was meant. From the same source it is possible to make a rough estimate of the population of the Erie at the period of this final war. At the taking of the Erie town of Riqué in 1654 it is claimed that the defenders numbered between 3,000 and 4,000 combatants, exclusive of women and children; but as it is not likely that all the warriors of the tribe were present, 14,500 would probably be a conservative estimate of the population of the Erie at this period.

The Jesuit Relation for 1655-56 (chap. xi) gives the occasion of the final struggle. Thirty ambassadors of the Cat Nation had been delegated, as was customary, to Sonontouan, the Seneca capital, to renew the existing peace. But through the misfortune of an accident one of the men of the Cat Nation killed a Seneca. This act so incensed the Seneca that they massacred all except 5 of the ambassadors in their hands. These acts kindled the final war between the Erie and the confederated tribes of the Iroquois, especially the Seneca, Cayuga, Oneida, and Onondaga, called by the French the 'upper four tribes', or 'les Iroquis supérieurs'. It is further learned from the Jesuit Relation for 1654 that on the political destruction of their country some Hurons sought asylum among the Erie, and that it was they who were actively fomenting the war that was then striking terror among the Iroquois tribes. The Erie were reputed brave and warlike, employing only bows and poisoned arrows; although the Jesuit Relation for 1656 declares that they were unable to defend one of their palisades against the Iroquois on account of the failure of their munitions, especially powder, which would indicate that they used firearms. It is also said that they "fight like Frenchmen, bravely sustaining the first charge of the Iroquois, who are armed with our muskets, and then falling upon them with a hailstorm of poisoned arrows," discharging 8 or 10 before a musket could be reloaded. Following the rupture of amicable relations between the Erie and the Iroquois tribes in 1653, the former assaulted and burned a Seneca town, pursued an Iroquois war party returning from the region of the great lakes, and cut to pieces its rear guard of 80 picked men, while the Erie scouts had come to the very gates of one of the Iroquois palisaded towns and seized and carried into captivity Annenraes (Annenraos), "one of the greatest captains." All this roused the Iroquois tribes, which raised 1,800 men to chastise the Erie for these losses. A young chief, one of the two leaders of this levy, was converted by Father Simon Le Moine, who chanced to be in the country at the time, and was baptized. These two chiefs dressed as Frenchmen, in order to frighten the Erie by the novelty of their garments. When this army of invaders had surrounded one of the Erie strongholds, the converted chief gently asked the besieged to surrender, lest they be destroyed should they permit an assault, telling them: "The Master of Life fights for us; you will be ruined if you resist him." "Who is this Master of our lives?" the Erie defiantly replied. "We acknowledge none but our arms and hatchets." No quarter was asked or given on either side in this war. After a stubborn resistance the Erie palisade was carried, and the Onondaga "entered the fort and there wrought such carnage among the women and children that blood was knee-deep in certain places." This was at the town of Riqué, which was defended by between 3,000 and 4,000 combatants, exclusive of women and children, and was assailed by about 1,800 Iroquois. This devastating war lasted until about the close of 1656, when the Erie power was broken and the people were destroyed or dispersed or led into captivity. Six hundred surrendered at one time and were led to the Iroquois country to be adopted as one of the constituent people of the Iroquois tribes. The victory at Riqué was won at a great loss to the Iroquois, who were compelled to remain in the enemy's country two months to care for the wounded and to bury the dead.

Only two of the Erie villages are known by name—Riqué and Gentaienton. A portion of the so-called Seneca now living in Indian Ter. are probably descendants of Erie refugees. (J. N. B. H.)

Cat Indians.—Smith quoted by Proud, Penn., II, 300, 1798. Cat Nation.—Cusick (ca. 1824) quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, VI, 148, 1857. Ehriehronons.—Jes. Rel. for 1654, 9, 1858. Erians.—Macleay, N. Y., II, 180, 1829. Erieckronois.—Hennepin, New Discov., map, 1698. Eriechronons.—Jes. Rel. for 1641, 71, 1858. Eriechronon.—Jes. Rel. for 1640, 35, 1858. Erielhonons.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 207, 1854. Erieronons.—Rafinesque, introd. Marshall, Ky., I, 36, 1824. Eries.—Jefferys, Fr. Doms., I, 103, 1760. Eriez.—Esnauts and Rapiily, map, 1777. Erigas.—Evans (1646?) quoted by Barton, New Views, lxxv, 1798. Erriersons.—Lahontan, New Voy., I, 217, 1703. Eves.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 79, 1854 (misprint). Gahkwas.—Ruttenber, Tribes Hudson R., 52, 1872. Gä-quä'-ga-o-no.—Morgan, League Iroq., 41, 1851. Herries.—Browne in Beach, Ind. Misc., 110, 1877. Irrironons.—Day, Penn., 309, 1843. Irrironons.—Harvey quoted by Day, ibid., 311. Kah-Kwah.—Gale, Upper Miss., 37, 1867. Kahquas.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 290, 1853 (Seu-ea name). Kakwas.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 344, 1852. Nation des Chats.—Jes. Rel. for 1660, 17, 1858. Nation du Chat.—Jes. Rel. for 1641, 71, 1858. Pungelika.—Rafinesque, Am. Nat., I, 338, 1836 ('lynx-like'; Delaware name). Rhierrhonons.—Jes. Rel. for 1635, 33, 1858 (probably their Huron name). Rigneronnons.—Jes. Rel. for 1661, 29, 1858 (misprint). Rigueronnons.—Jes. Rel. for 1666, 3, 1858. Riquehronons.—Jes. Rel. for 1660, 7, 1858.

Erigoanna. A tribe living near St Louis (Matagorda) bay, Tex., in 1687, and referred to as at war with the Ebahamo, q. v. (Douay quoted by Shea, Discov. and Expl. Miss., 209, 1852). Not identified, unless the same as the Kohani (q. v.). Probably a Karankawa band.

Eriilite. A mineral, according to Dana (Text-book of Mineral., 426, 1888), "acicular, wool-like crystals of unknown nature occurring in a cavity in the quartz from Herkimer co., N. Y.": from Eric, the name of a lake, and -lite from the Greek λίθος, a stone. The lake was named from one of the peoples of Iroquoian stock. (A. F. C.)

Erio (E-ri'-o). A name given by the Spaniards to the Pomo living at the mouth of Russian r., Sonoma co., Cal.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 194, 1877.

Eriwonec. A former Delaware village on the E. bank of Delaware r., about Old Man's cr., in Salem or Gloucester co., N. J. The village was next above the Asomoche and 5 m. below the Rancocas. In 1648 the population numbered about 200, but had just been at war with the Conestoga.

Armeomeks.—De Laet (ca. 1633) in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., I, 303, 1841. Armewamen.—Shea, note in Alsop, Md., 118, 1880. Armewamus.—Hudde (1663) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., XII, 430, 1877. Aroenemeck.—Beekman (1660), ibid., 300 (settlement). Eriwoneck.—Evelin (ca. 1648) in Proud, Pa., I, 113, 1797. Ermomex.—Van der Donck, map (1656) cited by Brinton, Lenape Leg., 42, 1885. Esewonecks.—Sanford, U. S., cxlvi, 1819.

Erner. A Yurok village on Klamath r., at the mouth of Blue cr., in Del Norte co., N. W. Cal. (A. L. K.)

Ernivwin (Er'niwūin). An Utkiavimut Eskimo summer camp inland from Pt Barrow, Alaska.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 83, 1892.

Ertlerger. A Yurok village on lower Klamath r., at the mouth of the Trinity, opposite Pekwuteu and Weitsups, in Humboldt co., Cal. (A. L. K.)

Erusi (E-rus'-si). A name said by Powers (Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 194, 1877) to have been applied to the Pomo formerly living near Ft Ross, Sonoma co., Cal., by the Pomo living N. of them. The people referred to now live near Stewart's Point and on the Haupt ranch a few miles E. of that place. Powers suggests that the name is a relic of the Russian occupancy, which is probably correct, as it is not an Indian name. (S. A. B.)

Ervipiames. A tribe of central Texas in the 18th century. Domingo Ramón was met by some of them a few leagues W. of Trinity r., not far from the country of the Bidai. They are mentioned in unpublished documents as among the tribes which in company with other northern tribes petitioned for a mission on San Javier r., and they are included among the northern Indians as distinguished from the coast tribes. If they belonged to any of the large recognized divisions in this neighborhood it was probably Tonkawan. (H. E. B.)

Enepiahe.—Joutel, Jour. Voy., 90, 1719. Enepiahe.—Shea, note in Charlevoix, New France, IV, 78, 1870. Enepiahoes.—Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723. Ervipiames.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 2602, 1736. Enepiahoé.—Joutel in Margry, Déc., III, 288, 1878. Hierbiapiames.—Barrios, MS., 1771. Yerbiapiame.—Ramón, MS., Texas Memorias, XVII, 151. Yorbiapians.—Informe de Misiones, ibid., XXVIII, 179, 1762. Yrbiapias.—Bosque (1675) in Nat. Geog. Mag., XIV, 343, 1903. Yrbiapias.—Ibid., 340.

Esachkabuk ('bad leggings'). A Crow band.

Bad Leggings.—Culbertson in Smithsonian Rep. 1850, 144, 1851. E-sach'-ka-buk.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 159, 1877.

Esahateaketarpar ('toward the Santee', from Isanyate 'Santee', ektapa 'toward'). A division of the Brulé Dakota which had Tartonggarsarpar (Tatónka-tsapa, Black Buffalo Bull) for its principal chief in 1804. E-sah-a-te-ake-tar-par.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 34, 1806.

Esbataottine (? 'bighorn people'). A Nahane tribe living in the mountains between Liard and Peace rs., Brit. Col. They are said to be of a very low grade of culture and to practise cannibalism, probably under stress of hunger.

Dounie 'Espa-tpa-Ottiné'.—Petitot, Autour du grand lac des Esclaves, 301, 1891 (= 'goat people'). Esba-t'a-ottiné.—Petitot, Ethnogr. chart in Bull. Soc. de Géogr. Paris, July, 1875 (= 'dwellers among the argali'). Es-pa-to-ti-na.—Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can. for 1887, 202B, 1889. Espa-tpa-Ottiné.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 362, 1891 (trans. 'bighorn people'). Gens des Bois.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 32, 1877 (so called by Hudson bay people). Gens des chèvres.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 301, 1891. Knife Indians.—Campbell quoted by Dawson, op. cit.

Escaba. A former tribe, probably Coahuiltecan, on the lower Rio Grande.

Escabaca-Cascastes.—Fernando del Bosque (1675) in Nat. Geog. Mag., XIV, 340, 1903 (combined with the name of another tribe, the Cascastes, and corrupted). Escabas.—Revillagigedo (1793) quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 611, 1886.

Escambuit. See Assacumbuit.

Escooba (Oski holba, 'cane-like', referring to reed-brakes). A former Choctaw town, noted by Romans; evidently situated a few miles E. or N. E. of Ayanabi, perhaps on or near Petickfa cr., Kemper co., Miss.—Halbert in Miss. Hist. Soc. Publ., vi, 424, 1902.

Escoumains (probably from ashkîmin, or ashkîmin, 'early berry'.—W. J.). A Montagnais band living on a reserve of 97 acres on the s. w. side of Escoumains r., on the N. shore of the St Lawrence, in Saguenay co., Quebec. They numbered 53 in 1884, 43 in 1904.

Escoumains.—Can. Ind. Aff. Rep. for 1884, pt. I, 185, 1885.

Escumawash. A former Chumashan village at San José, about 6 m. from Santa Barbara mission, Cal.—Timeno (1856) quoted by Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 4, 1860.

Esekepkabuk. A band of the Crow tribe adopted from the Sihanapa.

Bad Coup.—Culbertson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1850, 144, 1851. Bad Honors.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 159, 1877.

Ese-kep-ká'-buk.—Ibid.

Eshhulup. The name of "the rancheria of the mission of San Buenaventura," Cal. (Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 4, 1860). The native name usually given to San Buenaventura was Mishkanakan, or Mitskanakan (see Miscanaka).

Eshkebugecoshe ('Flat-mouth', 'Wide-mouth'). A chief of the Pillager Chippewa; born in 1774, died about 1860. He belonged to the Awaasee gens. In his youth Eshkebugecoshe engaged in distant expeditions, lived among the Cree and Assiniboin, and visited in war or peace the tribes of the upper Missouri, spending some time among the Hidatsa. His father, Yellow-hair (Wasonaunequa), was not a chief by descent, but gained ascendancy over the Pillagers through his knowledge of medicine, and it is said that whoever incurred his hatred died mysteriously. The son was different, enjoying the respect of whites as well as Indians throughout his long life. He was much impressed by the prophecies of Tenskwatawa, and through his influence poisoning ceased among the Pillagers, as among other Chippewa. In the later contests with the Sioux for the headwaters of the Mississippi he bore a valiant part. Although his band at Leech lake, Minn., was decimated in the exterminating war, it continued to grow through accessions of the bravest spirits of the eastern villages. When a political agent sought to enlist the Pillagers in the British interest at the beginning of the war of 1812, Flat-mouth returned the proffered wampum belts, saying that he would as soon invite white men to aid him in his wars as take part in a quarrel between the whites. (F. H.)

Eshpeu. A Yurok village on the coast between the mouths of Klamath r. and Redwood cr., at Gold bluff, Cal. The dialect differed slightly from that of the Klamath River Yurok. (A. L. K.)

Esekgawaage. One of the 7 districts of the territory of the Micmac as recognized by themselves. It includes E. Nova Scotia from Canso to Halifax.—Rand, First Micmac Reading Book, 81, 1875.

Eskimaun Family. A linguistic stock of North American aborigines, comprising two well-marked divisions, the Eskimo and the Aleut (q. v.). See Powell in 7th Rep. B. A. E., 71, 1891. (The following synonymy of the family is chronologic.)

> Eskimaux.—Gallatin in Trans. and Coll. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 9, 305, 1836; Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, pt. 1, xcix, 77, 1848; Gallatin in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 401, 1853. = Eskimo.—Berghaus (1845), Physik. Atlas, map 17, 1848; ibid., 1852; Latham, Nat. Hist. Man, 288, 1850 (general remarks on origin and habitat); Buschmann, Spuren der aztek. Sprache, 689, 1859; Latham, Elem. Comp. Philol., 385, 1862; Bancroft, Nat. Races, III, 562, 574, 1882. > Esquimaux.—Priehard, Phys. Hist. Mankind, v, 367-371, 1847 (follows Gallatin); Latham in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 182-191, 1848; Latham, Opuscula, 266-274, 1860. > Eskimo.—Dall in Proc. A. A. S., 266, 1869 (treats of Alaskan Eskimo and Tuskini only); Berghaus, Physik. Atlas, map 72, 1887 (excludes the Aleutian). > Eskimos.—Keane, app. to Stanford's Compend., Cent. and So. Am., 460, 1878 (excludes Aleutian). > Ounangan.—Veniaminoff, Zapiski, II, 1, 1840 (Aleutians only). > Ünigün.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 22, 1877 (Aleuts a division of his Orarian group). > Unangan.—Berghaus, Physik. Atlas, map 72, 1887. > Northern.—Scouler in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., XI, 218, 1841 (includes Ugalentzes of present family). > Haidah.—Scouler, ibid., 224, 1841 (same as his Northern family). > Ugaljachmutzi.—Gallatin in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 402, 1853 (lat. 60°, between Prince Williams sd. and Mt St Elias, perhaps Athapascan). > Aleuten.—Holmberg, Ethnogr. Skizzen, 1855. > Aleutians.—Dall in Proc. A. A. S., 266, 1869; Dall, Alaska, 374, 1870 (in both places a division of his Orarian family). > Aleuts.—Keane, app. to Stanford's Compend., Cent. and So. Am., 460, 1878 (consist of Unalaskans of mainland and of Fox and Shumagin ids., with Akkhas of rest of Aleutian arch.). > Aleut.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, III, 562, 1882 (two dialects, Unalaska and Atkha). > Konjagen.—Holmberg, Ethnogr. Skizzen, 1855 (Island of Konjag or Kadiak). = Orarians.—Dall in Proc. A. A. S., 265, 1869 (group name; includes Innuut, Aleutians, Tuskini); Dall, Alaska, 374, 1870; Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 8, 9, 1877. > Tinneh.—Dall in Proc. A. A. S., 269, 1869 (includes "Ugalensc"). > Innuut.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 9, 1877 ("Major group" of Orarians: treats of Alaska Innuut only); Berghaus, Physik. Atlas, map 72, 1887 (excludes the Aleutians).

Eskimo. A group of American aborigines, forming part of the Eskimaun linguistic stock, which formerly occupied nearly all the coasts and islands of Arctic America from E. Greenland and the N. end of Newfoundland to the westernmost Aleutian ids., even extending to the E. coast of Siberia, a distance of more than 5,000 m. From remains found in Smith sd. it is evident that bands formerly wintered as far N. as lat. 79° and had summer camps up to 82°. At the present time they have receded from this extreme range and in the S. have abandoned the N. shore of the Gulf of St Lawrence, the N. end of Newfoundland, James bay, and the S. shores of Hudson bay, while in Alaska one Eskimo tribe, the Ugalakmiut, has practically become Tlingit through intermarriage. The name Eskimo (in the form

SUKUUK, A KINUGUMIUT ESKIMO OF ALASKA. (NELSON)

Excomminguois) seems to have been first given by Biard in 1611. It is said to come from the Abnaki Esquimauntsic, or from Ashkimeq, the Chippewa equivalent, signifying 'eaters of raw flesh.' They call themselves Inuit, meaning 'people.' The Eskimo constitute physically a distinct type. They are of medium stature, but possess uncommon strength and endurance; their skin is light brownish yellow with a ruddy tint on the exposed parts; their hands and feet are small and well formed; their eyes, like those of other American tribes, have a Mongoloid character, which circumstance has induced many ethnographers to class them with the Asiatic peoples. They are characterized by very broad faces and narrow, high noses; their heads are also exceptionally high. This type is most marked among the tribes E. of Mackenzie r. In disposition the Eskimo may be described as peaceable, cheerful, truthful, and honest, but exceptionally loose in sexual morality.

The Eskimo have permanent settlements, conveniently situated for marking certain hunting and fishing grounds. In summer they hunt caribou, musk-oxen, and various birds; in winter they live principally on sea mammals, particularly the seal. Although their houses differ with the region, they conform in the main to three types: In summer, when they travel, they occupy tents of deer or seal skins stretched on poles. Their winter dwellings are made either in shallow excavations covered with turf and earth laid upon a framework of wood or whale ribs, or they are built of snow. Their clothing is of skins, and their personal adornments are few. Among most tribes, however, the women tattoo their faces, and some Alaskan tribes wear studs in openings through their cheeks. Considering their degree of culture, the Eskimo are excellent draftsmen and carvers, their designs usually consisting either of simple linear incisions or of animal forms executed with much life and freedom. The people about Bering strait make some use of paints.

There has always been extensive intertribal communication. The Eskimo have an exceptional knowledge of the geography of their country. Poetry and music play an important part in their life, especially in connection with their religious observances.

The Eskimaun social organization is exceedingly loose. In general the village is the largest unit, although persons inhabiting a certain geographical area have sometimes taken the name of that area as a more general designation, and it is often convenient for the ethnographer to make a more extended use of this native custom. In matters of government each settlement is entirely independent, and the same might almost besaid for each family, although there are customs and precedents, especially with regard to hunting and fishing, which define the relations existing between them. Although hardly deserving the name of chief, there is usually some advisory head in each settlement whose dictum in certain matters, particularly as to the change of village sites, has much weight, but he has no power to enforce his opinions.

KERLUNGNER, A KINUGUMIUT ESKIMO WOMAN OF ALASKA. (NELSON)

The men engage in hunting and fishing, while all the household duties fall to the lot of the women—they must cook, make and mend clothes, and repair the kaiaks and boat covers, pitch the tents, and dry the fish and meat and stow them away for the winter. In some tribes skin-dressing is done by the men, in others by the women. Monogamy, polygamy, and polyandry are all practised, their occurrence being governed somewhat by the relative proportion of the sexes; but a second marriage is unusual where a man's first wife has borne him children. The execution of law is largely left to the individual, and blood-revenge is universally exacted.

The Eskimo believe in spirits inhabiting animals and inanimate objects. Their chief deity, however, is an old woman who resides in the ocean and may cause storms or withhold seals and other marine animals if any of her tabus are infringed. Her power over these animals arises from the fact that they are sections of her fingers cut off by her father at the time when she first took up her abode in the sea. The chief duty of angakoks, or shamans, is to find who has infringed the tabus and thus brought down the wrath of the supernatural beings and to compel the offender to make atonement by public confession or confession to the angakok. The central Eskimo suppose two spirits to reside in a man's body, one of which stays with it when it dies and may temporarily enter the body of some child, who is then named after the departed, while the other goes to one of several lands of the souls. Some of the lands of souls lie above the earth's surface, some beneath, and the latter are generally more desirable.

Although the theory of Asiatic origin of the Eskimo was long popular, many of their ethnic peculiarities are opposed to such a notion, and recent researches seem to indicate that their movements have rather been from E. to W. They are peculiar as being the only race of American aborigines who certainly had contact with white people before the days of Columbus, for Greenland was occupied during the 10th and 11th centuries by Norwegians, whose expeditions extended even as far as the American mainland.

Later Frobisher and other European navigators encountered Eskimo along the E. coasts, while the Russians discovered and annexed the W. part of their domain. This occupancy in its earlier period proved disastrous to the Aleut (q. v.) in particular, who were harshly dealt with and whose number was greatly reduced during the Russian domination (see Russian influence). The larger portion of the Greenland and Labrador Eskimo have been Christianized by Moravian and Danish missionaries, while the Alaskan representatives of the family have had Russian missionaries among them for more than a century. Those of the central groups, however, owing to the remoteness of their situation, have always been much less affected by outside influences. The Eskimo have proved almost indispensable assistants to Arctic explorers.

The Eskimaun stock embraces two well-marked divisions, the Eskimo proper and the inhabitants of the Aleutian ids., the Aleut. Other divisions are rather geographical than political or dialectic, there being great similarity in language and customs from one end of the Eskimo domain to the other. They can be separated, however, into the following fairly well marked ethnological groups (based on information furnished by Dr Franz Boas):

I. The Greenland Eskimo, subdivided into the East Greenlanders, West Greenlanders, and Ita Eskimo, the last transitional between the Greenland Eskimo proper and the next group.

II. The Eskimo of s. Baffin land and Labrador, embracing the following divisions: Akudnirmiut, Akuliarmiut, Itivimiut, Kaumauangmiut, Kigiktarmiut, Nugumiut, Okomiut, Padlimiut, Sikosuiarmiut, Suhinimiut, Tahagmiut.

III. The Eskimo of Melville penin., North Devon, N. Baffin land, and the N. W. shore of Hudson bay, embracing the Agomiut, Aivilirmiut, Amitormiut, Iglulirmiut, Inuissuitmiut, Kinipetu, Koungmiut, Pilingmiut, Sauniktumiut.

IV. The Sagdlirmiut of Southampton id., now extinct.

V. The Eskimo of Boothia Felix, King William land, and the neighboring mainland. These include the Netchilirmiut, Sinirmiut, Ugjulirmiut, Ukusiksalirmiut.

VI. The Eskimo of Victoria land and Coronation gulf, including the Kangormiut and Kidnelik, which may, perhaps, be one tribe.

VII. The Eskimo between C. Bathurst and Herschel id., including the mouth of Mackenzie r. Provisionally they may be divided into the Kitegareut at C. Bathurst and on Anderson r., the Nageuktor-miut at the mouth of Coppermine r., and the Kopagmiut of Mackenzie r. This group approximates the next very closely.

VIII. The Alaskan Eskimo, embracing all those within the American territory. This group includes the Aglemiut, Chingigmiut, Chnagmiut, Chugachigmiut, Ikogmiut, Imaklimiut, Inguklimiut, Kaialigmiut, Kangmaligmiut, Kaniagmiut, Kaviagmiut, Kevalingamiut, Kiatagmiut, Kinugmiut, Kowagmiut, Kukpaungmiut, Kunmiut, Kuskwogmiut, Mage-miut, Malemiut, Nunatogmiut, Nunivagmiut, Nuwukmiut, Nushagamiut, Selawigmiut, Sidarumiut, Tikeramiut, Togiagmiut, Ugala-kmiut, Unaligmiut, Utukamiut, and Utkiavimiut.

IX. The Yuit of Siberia.

H o l m (1884-85) placed the number of East Greenland Eskimo at 550. The w. coast Greenlanders were given as 10,122 by the Royal Greenland Co. in 1888, and the Ita Eskimo numbered 234 in 1897, giving a total for this group of 10,906. The Eskimo of Labrador were estimated at 1,300 in a recent report by the Government of Newfoundland, and Boas in 1888 gave the number of Eskimo in the central groups as 1,100. According to the census of 1890, there were on the Arctic coast of Alaska from the British border to Norton sd., 2,729 Eskimo; on the s. shore of Norton sd. and in the Yukon valley, 1,439; in Kuskokwim valley, 5,254; in the valley of Nushagak r., 1,952; on the s. coast, 1,670. The Ugala-kmiut of Prince William sd., numbering 154, are reckoned with the Tlingit, but they were originally Eskimo, and for our present purposes are best placed in that category. Adding these, therefore, the total for this group, exclusive of the 968 Aleut, is 13,298. The Yuit of Siberia are estimated by Bogoras at 1,200. The Eskimo proper therefore number about 27,700, and the stock about 28,670.

(H. W. H. J. R. S.)

WESTERN ESKIMO COSTUME. (MURDOCH)

Aguskemaig.—Tanner, Narr., 316, 1880. A'lvayé'ililit.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 11, 1904 (Chukchi: 'those of alien language'). Anda-kpen.—Petitot, Dict. Déné Dindjié, 169, 1876 (Loucheux name: trans. 'ennemis-pieds'). Ara-k'è.—Ibid. (Bastard Loucheux name, same meaning). Enna-k'è.—Ibid. (Peaux de Lièvre name, same meaning). En-na-k'ie.—Ibid. (Slave name: trans. 'steppes-ennemis'). Escoumins.—Jes. Rel., III, index, 1858. Eshkibod.—Baraga, Otchipwe-Eng. Dict., 114, 1880 (Ojibwa: 'those who eat their food raw'). Eskeemoes.—Gordon, Hist. Mem. of N. Am., 117, 1820. Eskima.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 203, 1744. Eskimantsik.—Hervas, Idea dell' Universo, XVII, 87, 1784. Eskima'ntzik.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 9, 1877 (Abnaki name). Eskimauk.—Morse, N. Am., map, 1776. Eskimaux.—Lahontan, New Voy., I, 208, 1703. Eskimeaux.—Jeffreys, French Dom. Am., pt. I, map, 1760. Eskimesi.—Hervas, Idea dell' Universo, XVII, 86, 1784. Eskimo.—Buschmann, Spuren d. Aztek. Spr., 669, 1859. Eskimos.—Hutchins (1770) quoted by Richardson, Arct. Exped., II, 38, 1851. Esquimantsic.—Prichard, Phys. Hist., v, 367, 1847. Esquimau.—Petitot, Dict. Déné Dindjié, 169, 1876. Esquimaux.—Morse, Hist. Am., 126, 1798. Esquimaux Indians.—McKeevor, Voy. Hudson's Bay, 27, 1819. Esquimones.—Hennepin, Cont. of New Discov., 95, 1698. Eusquemays.—Potts (1754) quoted by Boyle, Archæol. Rep. Ont., 1905. Excominiqui.—Jes. Rel. 1612-14, Thwaites ed., II, 67, 1896 (= 'excommunicated'). Excominquois.—Blair in Jes. Rel. 1611, 7, 1858. Huskemaw.—Packard in Am. Natural., XIX, 555, 1885 (name given by a missionary in Labrador). Hus'ky.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 9, 1877 (Hudson bay jargon). Innoit.—Petitot in Bib. Ling. et Ethnol. Am., III, pt. 2, 29, 1876 (sing. Innok). In-nu.—Lyon, Repulse Bay, 40, 1825. Innuées.—Parry, Sec. Voy., 414, 1824. In'nuit.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 9, 1877 (own name). Inuin.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 42, 1892. Inuit.—Bessels in Archiv f. Anthrop., VIII, 107, 1875. Kaladit.—Nansen, Eskimo Life, 13, 1893 (name which the Greenland Eskimo give themselves, said to be a corruption of Danish Skraelling). Kalalik.—Richardson, Polar Regions, 300, 1861. Kalalit.—Keane in Stanford's Compend., 517, 1878. Karaler.—Crantz, Greenland, II, 291, 1820. Karalit.—Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., IX, 233, 1822. Keralite.—Heriot, Travels, 34, 1813. Ki'imilit.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 21, 1904 (from ki'amt, an inhabitant of C. Prince of Wales: Yuit name). Nochways.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 12, 1744 (Algonkin: 'snakes', 'enemies', applied to people of alien race regarded as natural enemies). Nodways.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 12, 1744 ('snakes': Siksika name). Enné.—Petitot, Dict. Déné Dindjié, 169, 1876 (Loucheux name: 'enemies'). Orarians.—Dall in Proc. A. A. S., XVII, 265, 1870. Ot'el'nnu.—Petitot, Dict. Déné Dindjié, 169, 1876 (Montagnais name: trans. 'steppes-ennemis'). Pa-erks.—Hooper, Tents of Tuski, 137, 1853 (Chukchi name for Eskimo of American coast). Payairkets.—Ibid., 103. Ro'é'hilit.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 21, 1904 ('opposite shore people': Yuit name). Seymös.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 340, 1851 (used by sailors of Hudson's Bay Co.'s ships: derived from the Eskimo cry of greeting: Seymo or Teymo). Skraelings.—Schultz in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., XIII, pt. 2, 114, 1895. Skrællingar.—Richardson, Polar Regions, 298, 1861 (Scandinavian name: 'small people'). S Krællings.—Crantz, Greenland, I, 123, 1820 (applied by the Norwegians). Skrællings.—Amer. Hist. Soc., 2d ser., I, Portland, 1869. Skræloingues.—Morse, Hist. Am., 126, 1778. Sückemos.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 340, 1851 (same derivation as Seymös). Ta-kutchi.—Ibid. (Kutchin name: 'ocean people'). Tchiechrone.—Pylæus (ca. 1748) quoted in Am. Antiq., IV, 75, 1881 (German form of Seneca name: 'seal people'). Teiëck-rünä.—Hewitt, inf'n (Seneca name). Ultsehaga.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., i, 408, 1851 (Kenai name: 'slaves').

Ultehna.—Ibid. Uskee-mes.—Ibid., 55. Uskee-mi.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 9, 1877 (Athapaskan name). Uskees.—O'Reilly, Greenland, 59, 1818. Uskimay.—Middleton in Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 189, 1744. Usquemows.—Coats, Geog. of Hudson Bay, 15, 1852. Weashkimek.—Belcourt (before 1853) in Minn. Hist. Coll., i, 226, 1872 (Saulteur name: 'eaters of raw flesh'). Yikirga-ulit.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 21, 1904 (Yuit name).

Eskini. A Maidu village formerly situated on the site of Durham, Butte co., Cal., the people of which are extinct except for a few survivors at Chico. The Maidu creation myth centers about this spot.
 (R. B. D.)

Erskins.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 124, 1850. Es'-kin.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 282, 1877. Eskini.—Curtin, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885.

Eksinaitupiks ('worm people'). A division of the Piegan.

Esk'-sin-ai-tup-iks.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 209, 1892. is-ksi'-na-tup-i.—Hayden, Ethnol. and Philol. Mo. Val., 264, 1862. Worm People.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 225, 1892.

Eskusone. A Micmac village formerly in Cape Breton.—Rand, First Micmac Reading Book, 87, 1875.

Eslanagan. A village, supposed to be of the Chalone division of the Costanoan family, but possibly Esselenian, formerly connected with Soledad mission, Monterey co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860.

Esmischue. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Esnispele. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Esopus (sip 'river,' -us 'small'). A division of the Munsee that lived along the w. bank of Hudson r. in Greene and Ulster cos., N. Y., above the Minisink, who formed the main division. Esopus is the old name of Kingston, which was their principal rendezvous. Under this name were included the Catskill, Mamekoting, Waoranec, Warranawong, and Warsink, sometimes called the five tribes of the Esopus country. They continued to reside about Kingston until some joined the Moravian Munsee and Mahican in Pennsylvania, and others placed themselves under the protection of the Iroquois. About the year 1775 the remnant were at Oquanga, with fragments of other tribes.
 (J. M.)

Esopus.—Smith (1660) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiii, 157, 1881. Aesopus.—Doc. of 1658, ibid., 81. Aosopus.—Writer ca. 1742 in Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. 5, 18, 1848. Esopes.—Doc. of 1665 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiii, 401, 1881. Esopus.—De Laet (1633) quoted by Rittenber, Tribes Hudson R., 72, 1872. Esopuz.—Map ca. 1614 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., i, 1856. Sapes.—Doc. of 1665, ibid., xiii, 399, 1881. Sepus.—Schuyler (1693), ibid., iv, 66, 1854 (settlement). Soopis.—Stoll (1658), ibid., xiii, 77, 1881 (locality). Soopus.—Ibid., 96. Sopes.—Nicolls (1665), ibid., 399. Sopez.—Smith (1659), ibid., 114 (place). Sopus.—Doc. of 1668, ibid., 418. Zopus.—Ingoldsby (1691), ibid., iii, 793, 1853 (settlement).

Espachomy. A village on lower Hudson r., N. Y., near Poughkeepsie, under English protection in 1664.—Albany treaty (1664) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iii, 68, 1853.

Espamichkon. A small tribe n. of the St Lawrence in 1643 (Jes. Rel. 1643, 38, 1858), probably about the headwaters of Saguenay or St Maurice r. Not identified.

Espejos (named from their chief Espejo (Span.: 'mirror')). A branch of the Mescaleros inhabiting the plains of Chihuahua, Mexico, about 1859.—Froebel, Seven Years' Trav., 352, 1859.

Espeminkia. A band, apparently part of the Illinois, mentioned with the Tamara and Tapouaro (Peoria?).—La Salle (1681) in Margry, Déc., ii, 134, 1877.

Esperiez. Given by mistake as the name of one of the Hopi pueblos in 1598.—Onate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., xvi, 137, 1871.

Espiiluma. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Espirito Santo de Zuñiga. A mission established by the Marquis de San Miguel Aguayo, in March or April, 1722, near and under the protection of the newly established fort of Santa Maria de Loreto de la Bahía del Espíritu Santo, commonly called La Bahía, which was built on the site of La Salle's ill-fated Ft St Louis, on Lavaca r., Matagorda bay, Tex., in the territory of the Karankawa. The Spanish mission, of which Fray Agustin Patron was the first missionary, was abandoned before 1726, its priest establishing a new one among the Tamique and Juranames (Aranama), who lived 10 leagues inland, on lower San Antonio r., and in 1749 it was moved upstream opposite the site of the modern Goliad. The presidio of La Bahía was shifted with the mission. In 1768 its population was 300, and to that date there had been 623 baptisms; there were also 1,500 cattle and 100 horses, and it is said once to have had 15,000 cattle. The population, which consisted of Aranama, Tamique, Piguican, Manos de Perro, Kohani, and Karankawa Indians, had dwindled to 116 in 1785 (in which year there were also 3,000 cattle), and to only 33 Indians in 1793. See Bancroft, No. Mex. States, i, 1886; Garrison, Texas, 1903.

Espopolames. A former tribe, probably Coahuiltecan, in the neighborhood of the lower Rio Grande.

Espopolames.—Fernando del Bosque (1675) in Nat. Geog. Mag., xiv, 341, 1903. Isipopolames.—Revillagigedo (1793) quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, i, 611, 1886.

Esqugbaag. Formerly a rancharia, probably of the Sobaipuri, and a visita of the mission of Suamca about 1760-67; situated on or near the Rio San Pedro, near the Arizona-Sonora boundary.

Badz.—Bancroft, No. Mex. States, i, 563, 1884. S. Andrés Esqugbaag.—Ibid.

Esquimalt. The local name for a body of Songish at the s. e. end of Vancouver id., under the Cowichan agency; pop. 15 in 1901, 20 in 1904.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. 2, 66, 1902; pt. 2, 69, 1904.

Esquimaux Point. A Montagnais mission settlement on the n. bank of the St Lawrence, about 20 m. e. of Mingan, Quebec.

Esquimaux Point.—Stearns, Labrador, 271, 1884.
Pointe des Esquimaux.—Hind, Lab. Penin., II, 180, 1863.

Esquipomgole. Defined by Bartlett (Dict. of Americanisms, 202, 1877) as "another name for kinnickinnick, or a mixture of tobacco and cornel bark"; said to be an Indian word, possibly Algonquian. (A. F. C.)

Essanape (Algonq.: asinapā 'stone person'.—W. J.). A tribe located by Lahontan (New Voy., I, 114, 1703) on his "Long r.," identified with Minnesota r. His voyage up this stream is probably fictitious, and so may be the tribe, which was certainly not the Assiniboin, as has been suggested, since these under the name Assimpoual were correctly placed by Lahontan in the region of L. Winnipeg. The tribe, if not imaginary, may have been, as Ramsey supposed, the Santee, known as Isanyati, for the Mdewakanton band dwelt at that time on Minnesota r. Esanapes.—Harris, Coll. Voy. and Trav., II, map, 1765. Esanopes.—Barcia, Ensayo, 291, 1723. Esan-a-pis.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1849, 78, 1850. Essannapes.—Neill in Minn. Hist. Coll., I, 31, 1872. Essenapes.—Vaugondy, map, 1778.

Esselen. A tribe of Californian Indians, constituting the Esselenian family, most of the members of which on the founding of Carmelo mission, near Monterey, in 1770, were brought under civilizing influences, resulting, as was the case with the Indians at all the Californian missions, in their rapid decrease (see Californian Indians, Mission Indians, Missions). A portion of the tribe seems to have been taken to the mission at Soledad, for Arroyo de la Cuesta (MS., B. A. E.) in 1821 says of an Esselen vocabulary obtained by himself, "Huelel language of Soledad; it is from the Esselenes, who are already few." The original territory of the Esselen lay along the coast s. of Monterey, though its exact limits are diversely given. Henshaw (Esselen MS., B. A. E.) states that they lived on the coast s. of Monterey, in the mountains. The Rumsen Indians of the present day at Carmel and Monterey state (Kroeber, MS., Univ. Cal.) that the Esselen originally lived at Agua Caliente (Tassajara springs), which is near the head of Carmel r., in a line between Sur and Soledad. Powell's map (7th Rep. B. A. E.) makes the Esselen territory comprise Sur r., the head of Carmel r., and the country about as far s. as Santa Lucia peak, which is probably approximately correct. In any case the Esselen territory was confined to a limited area and was bordered only by Salinan and Costanoan tribes. La Perouse's statement that it extended more than 20 leagues e. of Monterey is incorrect. Almost nothing is known of the mode of life and practices of the Esselen, but they were certainly similar to those of the neighboring tribes. What little is known in regard to the Esselen language shows it to have been simple and regular and of a type similar to most of the languages of central California, but, notwithstanding a few words in common with Costanoan, of entirely unrelated vocabulary and therefore a distinct stock.

Taylor gives a list of Esselen villages connected with San Carlos mission, namely: Chachat, Coyyo, Fyules, Gilimis, Jappayon, Nennequi, Noptac, Santa Clara, Sapponet, Saccorondo, Tebitiyilat, Triwta, Tushguesta, Xumis, Yampas, and Yanostas. He mentions also Xaseum, 10 leagues from Carmelo, in the sierra, and Pachhepes near Xaseum, among the Esselen. He gives still other names, such as Excellemaks and Eslanagan; but none of the settlements named by him have been proved to be Esselen and not Costanoan. Carmelo Eslenes.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860. Ecclemachs.—Lamanon in La Perouse, Voy., II, 291, 1797. Ecclemachs.—Chamisso quoted by Kotzebue, Voy., III, 49, 1821. Esclenas.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860. Esclenes.—Ibid. Ekklemachs.—Ludewig, Abor. Lang. Am., 68, 1858. Ensenes.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860. Esclen.—Humboldt, Essai Pol., 321, 1811. Esclenes.—Mayer, Mexico, II, 39, 1853. Esclens.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860. Esclenes.—Ibid. Eskelen.—Ludewig, Abor. Lang. Am., 68, 1858. Eslen.—Gallano, Viaje Sutil y Mexicana, 167, 1802. Eslenes.—Ibid., 172. Eslesen.—Henshaw in Am. Anthropol., III, 45, 1890. Excellemaks.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860.

Esselenian Family. A small linguistic stock in w. California, first positively established by Henshaw (Am. Anthropol., III, 45, 1890). At the time of the Spanish settlement, this family, which has become extinct, consisted of a single group, the Esselen, q. v.

=Esselen.—Dixon and Kroeber in Am. Anthropol., n. s., v. no. 1, map, 1903. =Esselenian.—Powell in 7th Rep. B. A. E., 75, 1891. <Salinas.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 85, 1856 (includes Gioloco?, Ruslen, Soledad, Eslen, Carmel, San Antonio, and San Miguel, cited as including Eslen); Latham, Opuscula, 350, 1860.

Estait. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Estale. A former settlement of the southern group of E. Greenland Eskimo.—Meddelelser om Grönland, xxv, 26, 1902.

Estame. A Calusa village on the s. w. coast of Florida, about 1570.—Fontaneda Memoir (ca. 1575), Smith trans., 19, 1854.

Estancia (a Spanish term with many meanings, but here probably signifying 'sojourning or staying place'). A Pima rancheria visited by Anza in 1774; situated 4 leagues s. of the mission of Saric, which was just s. of the Arizona boundary. La Estancia.—Anza quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 389, 1889.

Estatóee. Two former Cherokee settlements, one on Tugaloo r. below the junction of Chattooga and Tallulah rs., in Oconee co., S. C., the other in the n. w. part of Pickens co. The former was generally known as Old Estatóee.

Estalaoe.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. clxi, 1900. Estatóe.—Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1887. Estatóie.—Doc. of 1755 quoted by Royce, ibid., 143. Estotowe.—Bartram, Travels, 372, 1792 (on Tugaloo r.). Estotowe great.—Ibid. (town on another river).

Estero. An unidentified tribe mentioned by Langsdorff (Voy., II, 163, 1814) as inhabiting the coast of California.

Estocoloco. A Chumashan village on one of the northern Santa Barbara ids., Cal., in 1542.—Cabrillo, Narr. (1542) in Smith, Coloc. Doc. Fla., 186, 1857.

Coloco.—Cabrillo, op. cit., 186. Estilocoeco.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 17, 1863.

Estuc. A former Chumashan village near San Marcos, in the vicinity of Santa Barbara, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Estufa. See Kiva.

Etaa. The Turtle clan of the Zuñi of New Mexico. It appears to be extinct.

Etaa-kwe.—Cushing in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 386, 1896 (kwe = 'people').

Etaatthatunne ('people at the cove'). A village of the Tututni of Oregon.

E'-ta-a-t'ça jün'né.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folklore, III, 233, 1890 (Tututni name). E'-ta-a-t'çüt'jünne'.—Ibid. (Naltunnetunne name).

Etatogtine ('people in the air'). A Nahane band or division in the valleys of the Rocky mts. between the Esbataottine and the Tukkuthkutchin, lat. 66°, British America. Their totem is the lynx.

Däbo'-tenä.—Ross quoted by Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can. 1887-88, 200B, 1889. Daha-dinneeh.—Dunn, Hist. Oregon, 79, 1844. Dahadinnes.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 180, 1851. Dahä-dinné.—Richardson quoted by Petitot, Dict. Déné-Dindjé, xx, 1876. Da-ha-dumies.—Hind, Expl. Exped., II, 159, 1860. Dahodinni.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 66, 1856. Daho-tena.—Bancroft, Native Races, I, 149, 1882. Däho'-tenä'.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 33, 1877. Dawhoot-dinneeh.—Franklin, Narr., II, 84, 1824. Ehta-Gottiné.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 362, 1891. Eta-gottiné.—Petitot, Dict. Déné-Dindjé, xx, 1876 (trans. 'mountain people').

Eta-Gottiné.—Petitot, Autour du Grand lac des Esclaves, 301, 1891. Eta-Ottiné.—Petitot, Grand lac des Ours, 66, 1893 (trans. 'Rocky mountain people'). Gens de la montagne.—Petitot, Dict. Déné-Dindjé, xx, 1876. Gens d' En-haut.—Petitot, Autour du Grand lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891.

Gens des Montagnes-Rocheuses.—Petitot, Grand lac des Ours, 66, 1893. Gens en l'air.—Petitot, Autour, op. cit., 262. Hunters.—Prichard, Phys. Hist., v, 377, 1847. Mountain Indian.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 400, 1851. Naha'-dinné.—Ibid., Noh'-ha-i-é. Ibid., II, 7, 1851 (so called by Kutchin).

Sicanees.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 33, 1877 (sometimes so called by traders). Yéta-ottiné.—Petitot, Autour du Grand lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891 (trans. 'dwellers in the air').

Etah. An Ita Eskimo village at C. Ohlsen, on Smith sd., w. Greenland, lat. 78° 20'. See Ita.

Ahipa.—Markham in Trans. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., 9, 1866. Appah.—Kane, Arct. Explor., II, 212, 1856. Etah.—Bessels, Am. Nordpol. Exped., map, 1878. Igita.—Kroeber in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XII, 269, 1900.

Etakmehu. A division of Salish now on Port Madison res., Wash.

Etak-bush.—Mallett in Ind. Aff. Rep., 198, 1877.

Etakmehu.—Boulet, letter, B. A. E., Mar. 22, 1886.

Etakmurs.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 176, 1875.

Etanie. A former Seminole town in Putnam co., Fla., of which Checota Hajo was chief in 1823. There is now a town of Etaniah in the w. part of the county, and also a creek of the same name. See H. R. Ex. Doc. 74 (1823), 19th Cong., 1st sess., 27, 1826.

Etarita. A village of the Wolf clan of the Tionontati, where the Jesuits established the mission of St Jean; destroyed by the Iroquois in 1649.

Etarita.—Parkman, Jes., 403, 1883. Etharita.—Garreau (1648) quoted in Hist. Mag., 1st s., v, 263, 1861. Saint Jean.—Jes. Rel. for 1640, 95, 1858. Saint Jean.—Jes. Rel. for 1648, 61, 1858. St. John's.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 192, 1855.

Etachogottine ('hair people'). A division of the Kawchodinne dwelling n. and e. of Great Bear lake and on Great cape, Mackenzie Ter., Can. Their totem is a white wolf.

Ehta-tchö-Gottiné.—Petitot, Grand lac des Ours, 66, 1893.

Etchaottine. An Etchareottine division living w. and n. w. of Great Slave lake between Liard r. and the divide, along Black, Beaver, and Willow rs., British America. The Bistchongottine and Krayingottine are two of the divisions. Déné Etcha-Ottiné.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 301, 1891. Esclaves.—Ibid. Etcha-Ottiné.—Ibid. Gens du lac la Truite.—Petitot, Dict. Déné-Dindjé, xx, 1876. Slaves proper.—Kennicott, MS. vocab., B. A. E.

Etchareottine ('people dwelling in the shelter'). An Athapaskan tribe occupying the country w. of Great Slave lake and upper Mackenzie r. to the Rocky mts., including the lower Liard valley, British America. Their range extends from Hay r. to Ft Good Hope, and they once lived on the shores of L. Athabasca and in the forests stretching northward to Great Slave lake. They were a timid, pacific people, called 'the peoples sheltered by willows' by the Chipewyan, indicating a riparian fisher folk. Their Cree neighbors, who harried and plundered them and carried them off into bondage, called them Awokanak, 'slaves,' an epithet which in its French and English forms came to be the name under which they are best known. Early in the 18th century they were dispossessed of their home, rich in fish and game, and driven northward to Great Slave lake whither they were still followed by the Cree, known only as Enna, 'the enemy,' a name still mentioned with horror as far as Great Bear lake. On the islands where they took refuge a fresh carnage took place. The Thlingchadinne and Kawchodinne, who speak the same dialect with them and bear a like reputation for timidity, probably comprehended under the name Awokanak by the Cree, began their northerly migration at the same time, probably under the same impulsion (Petitot, La Mer Glaciale, 292, 1887). Petitot found among them a variety of physiognomy that he ascribed to a mixture of races. Many of the males are circumcised in infancy; those who are not are called dogs, not opprobriously, but rather affectionately. The bands or divisions are Eleidlinottine, Etchaottine, Etcheridiegottine, Etchesottine, Klodessottine, and Desnedeyarelottine (Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891). In his monograph on the Dènè-Dindjié, Petitot restricted the term to the Etcheridiegottine, whom he distinguished from the Slaves proper, making the latter a separate tribe with divisions at Hay r., Great Slave lake, Horn mts., the fork of the Mackenzie, and Ft Norman.

A-cha'-o-tin-ne.—Morgan, Consang. and Affin., 289, 1871 (trans. 'people of the lowlands'). Acheotenne.—Morgan in N. Am. Rev., 58, 1870. A-che-to-e-ten-ni.—Ross, MS. notes on Tinne, B. A. E. Acheto-e-Tinne.—Kennicott, MS. vocab., B. A. E. Acheto-tena.—Dall, Alaska, 429, 1870. Achoto-enni.—Pope, MS. Sicanny vocab., B. A. E., 1865. A-tsho-to-ti-na.—Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can., 1887-88, 200 b, 1889. Awokanak.—Petitot, La Mer Glaciale, 293, 1887 ('slaves': Cree name). Brushwood Indians.—Franklin, Journ. to Polar Sea, II, 87, 1824. Cheta-ut-tidinné.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., II, 7, 1851. Danè Esclaves.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 289, 1891. Danites Esclaves.—Ibid., 305. Edchautawoot.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 27, 1852. Edchawtahoot dinneh.—Franklin, Journ. to Polar Sea, 262, 1824. Edchawtahoot tinneh.—Tanner, Narr., 293, 1880. Edchawtahoot.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 19, 1836. Edshawtahoots.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 542, 1853. Esclaves.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891. Etchache-ottiné.—Petitot, Dict. Dènè-Dindjié, xx, 1876. Etsh-tawut-dinni.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 69, 1856 (trans. 'thickwood-men'). Slave Indians.—Hooper, Tents of Tuski, 303, 1853. Slaves.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891 (English form). Slavey.—Ross, MS. notes on Tinne, B. A. E. (so called by fur-traders).

Etcheridiegottine ('people of the rapids'). An Etchareottine division which hunt along Liard r. and neighboring regions to the border of the Etchaottine country near old Ft Halkett, British America. They have intermarried with the Etchaottine and with the Tsattine in the s., and have absorbed their manners and customs and adopted their dialectal forms to such a degree that they have been frequently confounded with the one tribe or the other.

Bastard Beaver Indians.—Ross in Smithson. Rep. 1866, 308, 1872. Beaver.—Franklin, Journ. to Polar Sea, 262, 1824. Erètchi-ottiné.—Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can., 1887-88, 200b, 1889 ('people of the rapids': Kawchodinné name). Etcheri-dié-Gottine.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891. Liards Indians.—Ross quoted by Gibbs, MS., B. A. E. Liard Slaves.—Pope, MS. Sicanny vocab., B. A. E., 1865. Ndu-tchó-ottinné.—Dawson, op. cit. Sceth-tessessay-tinneh.—Ross quoted by Gibbs, MS., B. A. E. ('people of the mountain river'). Slave Indians of Ft. Liard.—Ross, MS. notes on Tinne, B. A. E. Strong bow.—Mackenzie in Mass. Hist. Coll., 2d s., II, 43, 1814. Tsilla-ta-ut' tiné.—Richardson quoted by Petitot, Dict. Dènè-Dindjié, xx, 1876. Tsilla-ta-ut'-tinné.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., II, 6, 1851. Tsillawadoot.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 28, 1852. Tsillawadoot.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 19, 1836. Tsillaw-awdút-dinni.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 69, 1856 (trans.: 'bush-wood-men'). Tsillawdawhoot-dinneh.—Franklin, Journ. to Polar Sea, II, 87, 1824. Tsillawdawhoot Tinneh.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 145, 1882.

Etchesottine ('horn mountain people'). A division of the Etchareottine occupying the country between Great Slave and La Martre lakes, Mackenzie Ter., Can. Franklin erroneously considered them Thlingchadinné.

Deerhorn mountaineers.—Franklin, Narr., II, 181, 1824. Ètè-ches-ottiné.—Petitot in Bull. Soc. de Geog. Paris, chart, 1875. Gens de la montagne la Corne.—Petitot, Dict. Dènè-Dindjié, xx, 1876. Horn Mountain Indians.—Franklin, Narr., 260, 1, 24.

Etheneldeli ('caribou-eaters'). An Athapascan tribe living e. of L. Caribou and L. Athabasca, in the barren grounds which extend to Hudson bay (Petitot, Dict. Dènè-Dindjié, xx, 1876). Franklin (Journ. Polar Seas, II, 241, 1824) placed them between Athabasca and Great Slave lakes and Churchill r.; whence they resorted to Ft Chipewyan. Ross (MS., B. A. E.) makes them a part of the eastern Tinne, their habitat being to the n. and e. of the head of L. Athabasca, extending to the end of Great Slave lake. Rocky r. separates them from the Tatsanottine. In the e. are the barren grounds to which they resort every year to hunt the caribou, which supplies practically all their needs. They were a part of the migrating Chipewyan who descended from the Rocky mts. and advanced eastward from Peace r. to displace the Hudson bay region with the Maskegon and Cree. One of their women who was held in captivity by the Maskegon was astonished at the weapons, utensils, and clothing of European manufacture that she saw among her captors, who told her that they made these articles themselves. Finding at last that they got them in barter for furs at Ft Prince of Wales, she made her escape to the English and told them of her own people on Peace r. who held the choicest furs cheap. The British traders, eager to extend their trade, sent her with a safe conduct to her people, whom she persuaded to migrate to the barren grounds near Hudson bay, where caribou were abundant. They settled around Reindeer, Big, and North Indian lakes, and were called the Northern Indians by the English and the Mangeurs de Cariboux by the Canadian French, while the neighboring tribes called them by the same name that they had given to the English, Men of the Stone House. Hearne saw them in 1769 and Petitot found them there still a century later, numbering 900. About 300 traded at Ft Fond du Lac at the head of L. Athabasca. There were 248 enumerated at Fond du Lac in 1902, and 368 in 1904.

Cariboo eaters.—Ross in Smithson. Rep. 1866, 306, 1872. Eastern Folks.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., II, 5, 1851. Éthen-eldéli.—Petitot, Dict. Déné-Dindjé, xx, 1876. Éthen-eltéli.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891. Ettinetinney.—Ross quoted by Gibbs, MS. notes, B. A. E. ('caribou people'). Gens du Fort-de-pierre.—Petitot, Autour du Grand lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891. Mangeurs de cariboux.—Petitot, Dict. Déné-Dindjé xx, 1876. Michinipicpoets.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 25, 1741 ('people of stone of the great lake': Cree name). Northern Indians.—Ibid. 17. Rising Sun Folks.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., II, 5, 1851. Rising Sun men.—Frichard, Phys. Hist., v, 376, 1847. Sa-essau-dinnéh.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 27, 1852 (trans. 'eastmen'). Sah-sessah tinney.—Ross quoted by Gibbs, MS. notes, B. A. E. (trans. 'eastern people'). Sa-i-sa-dinnéh.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., II, 5, 1851 ('people of the rising sun'). Sawassaw-tinney.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 554, 1878. Saw-cessaw-dinnéh.—Franklin quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 542, 1853. Saw-cessaw-dinnah.—Schoolcraft, ibid., v, 172, 1855. Saw-cessaw-dinnéh.—Franklin, Journ. Polar Sea, II, 241, 1824 (trans. 'Indians from the rising sun,' or 'eastern Indians'). Sawessaw tinney.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 464, 1878. See-issaw-dinni.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 69, 1856 (trans. 'rising-sun-men'). Thé-Ottiné.—Petitot, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1865 ('stone people'). Thé-yé Ottiné.—Petitot in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., 651, 1883. Thé-yé-Ottiné.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 363, 1891 ('people of the stone fort').

Ethics and Morals. It is difficult for a person knowing only one code of morals or manners to appreciate the customs of another who has been reared in the knowledge of a different code; hence it has been common for such a one to conclude that the other has no manners or no morals. Every community has rules adapted to its mode of life and surroundings, and such rules may be found more rigorously observed and demanding greater self-denial among savages than among civilized men. Notwithstanding the differences which necessarily exist between savage and civilized ethics, the two systems must evidently have much in common, for from the days of Columbus to the present travelers have given testimony of customs and manners of Indians, who were still in the barbarous or the savage stage, which displayed a regard for the happiness and well-being of others.

It is often difficult to tell how much of Indian manners and morals may have been derived from white people; but there are still some tribes which have held aloof from the intrusive race and have been little contaminated by it, and we have the testimony of early writers to guide us. The latter may be narrow in their judgment of Indian conduct while they are accurate in describing it.

To discuss the rise of ethics among primitive peoples would lead too far afield; but it is clear from all that is known of the natives of this continent that there existed among them standards of right conduct and character. Both from folklore and other sources we learn of conscience among the Indians and of their dread of its pangs. The Navaho designate conscience by a term which signifies "that standing within me which speaks to me." Abundant evidence might be adduced to show that Indians are often actuated by motives of pure benevolence and do good merely from a generous delight in the act.

Social ethics obtained among all the tribes, and public opinion was the power that compelled the most refractory to obedience. A system of ethics having once taken shape, the desire for the approval of one's associates and the wish to live at peace furnished sufficient incentive for compliance with the less onerous rules. But these motives were not sufficient in matters of graver import. Some tribes had executive bands, which had limited power to punish offenders in certain cases, such as violation of the orders of the tribal council; but among other tribes there was no established power to punish, nor were there even the rudiments of a court of justice. The pagan Indian is destitute of the faith in heaven and hell, which affords a strong incentive to moral life among many of our own people; but he has faith in good and bad luck, and frequently attaches different imaginary punishments to different offenses. Some regard various inanimate objects as the agents of these punishments. "May the cold freeze you!" "May the fire burn you!" "May the waters drown you!" are their imprecations.

When during the tribal hunt runners were sent out to seek a herd of buffalo, they had to give, on their return to camp, their report in the presence of sacred emblems in attestation of the truth of their statement. Scouts must report accurately or meet disgrace. The successful warrior must not claim more than his due; otherwise he would not be permitted to receive the badge of honors rightfully won. The common punishment for lying in many of the tribes was the burning of the liar's tent and property by tribal sanction. Not to keep a promise deliberately given was equivalent to lying. There are many instances of Indians keeping their word even at the risk of death.

Honesty was inculcated in the young and exacted in the tribe. In some communities the rule was limited in its operation to those within the tribe itself, but it was not uncommon to find its obligations extended to allies and to all friendly tribes. As war removed all ethical barriers, pillage was legitimate. The stealing of horses was a common object of war parties, but only from a hostile tribe. When a theft was committed the tribal authorities demanded restitution; the loss of the property taken, flogging, and a degree of social ostracism constituted the punishment of the thief. Instances could be multiplied to show the security of personal effects in a tribe. The Zuñi, for example, on leaving home, close and seal the door with clay, and it remains inviolate. The Nez Percés and many other tribes lean a pole across the door to indicate the absence of the family, and no one molests the dwelling.

Murder within the tribe was always punished, either by exile, by inexorable ostracism and the making of gifts to the kindred of the slain, or by suffering the murderer to become the lawful victim of their vengeance.

Truth, honesty, and the safeguarding of human life were everywhere recognized as essential to the peace and prosperity of a tribe, and social customs enforced their observance; the community could not otherwise keep together, much less hold its own against enemies, for except where tribes were allies, or bound by some friendly tie, they were mutual enemies. An unaccredited stranger was always presumably an enemy.

Adultery was punished. The manner of punishment varied among the tribes, the choice being frequently left to the aggrieved party. Among the Apache it was the common custom to disfigure an erring woman by cutting off her nose.

The care of one's family was regarded as a social duty and was generally observed. This duty sometimes extended to one's relations.

While the young were everywhere taught to show respect to their elders, and while years and experience were supposed to bring wisdom, yet there were tribes among which it was the custom to abandon or to put to death the very old. Where this custom prevailed the conditions of life were generally hard, and the young and active found it difficult to secure food for themselves and their children. As the aged could not take care of themselves, and were an encumbrance to travel, they acquiesced in their fate as a measure of prudence and economy, dying in order that the young might live and the tribe maintain its existence.

The cruel punishment of witchcraft everywhere among the tribes had its ethical side. The witch or wizard was believed to bring sickness or death to members of the community; hence for their security the sorcerer must be put to death. The custom was due to a lack of knowledge of the causes of disease and to mistaken ethics. (A. C. F. W. M.)

Etipsikya (the name of a shrub). A traditional village of the Squash people of the Hopi; situated on the s. side of Rio Colorado Chiquito, on the brink of a canyon, not far from the point where the river is crossed by the Santa Fé Pac. R. R., Arizona.—Stephen and Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 26, 1891.

Etiquette. The interior of most native dwellings was without complete partitions, yet each member of the family had a distinct space, which was as inviolable as a separate apartment inclosed by walls. In this space the personal articles of the occupant were stored in packs and baskets, and here his bed was spread at night. Children played together in their own spaces and ran in and out of that belonging to the mother, but they were forbidden to intrude elsewhere and were never allowed to meddle with anyone's possessions. When more than one family occupied a dwelling, as the earth lodge, the long bark house, or the large wooden structure of the N. W., every family had its well-known limits, within which each member had a place. A space was generally set apart for guests, to which, on entering, a visitor made his way. Among the Plains tribes this place was at the back part of the dwelling, facing the entrance, and the visitor when entering a lodge and going to this place must not pass between his host and the fire. Among many tribes the place of honor was at the w., facing the entrance. If he was a familiar friend, greetings were at once exchanged, but if he had come on a formal mission, he entered in silence, which was unbroken for some little time after he was seated. On such occasions conversation was opened by reference to trivial matters, the serious purpose of the visit not being mentioned until considerable time had elapsed. When a delegation was received, only the older men of the party or of the tribe spoke; the younger members kept silent unless called on to say something. Among all the tribes haste was a mark of ill breeding, particularly during official or ceremonial proceedings. No visitor could leave the dwelling of his host without some parting words to show that his visit was at an end.

Among many tribes etiquette required that when speaking to a person a term of relationship rather than the personal name should be used. An elderly man or woman was usually addressed as grandfather or grandmother, and a similar title was also applied to a man of distinction. Uncle or aunt might be used for persons of about the same age as the speaker, but to a younger man or woman the term of address would signify younger brother or sister. A friendly visitor from outside the tribe was addressed by a term meaning "friend." A member of the tribe, although of a different clan or gens, was spoken to by a term of relationship; among the Iroquois, for example, one of the opposite phratry was greeted as "my father's clansman," or "my cousin."

When the bearer of an invitation entered a lodge, the person invited did not respond if a relative or friend was present, who would accept for him, saying, "Your uncle (or aunt) has heard." Among the Hopi, in entering a kiva, according to Dr Fewkes, one must ask, "Am I welcome?" before his left foot leaves the lowest rung of the ladder. He must always approach the altar on the right and leave it on the left. Among the Zuñi a person, whether friend or stranger, on appearing at a doorway is invited to enter and sit; if at meal time, and often at other times, he is offered food.

Among a number of tribes etiquette required that there should be no direct speech between a woman and her son-in-law, and in some instances a similar restriction was placed on a woman addressing her father-in-law. In many tribes also the names of the dead were not likely to be mentioned, and with some Indians, for a space of time, a word was substituted for the name of a deceased person, especially if the latter were prominent. In some tribes men and women used different forms of speech, and the distinction was carefully observed. A conventional tone was observed by men and women on formal occasions which differed from that employed in everyday life.

Etiquette between the sexes demanded that the man should precede the woman while walking or in entering a lodge "to make the way safe for her." Familiar conversation could take place only between relatives; reserve characterized the general behavior of men and women toward each other.

Respect must be shown to elders in both speech and behavior. No one could be interrupted when speaking or forced to speak when inclined to be silent, nor could personal questions be asked or private matters mentioned. During certain ceremonies no one may speak above a whisper. If it was necessary to pass between a person and the fire permission must be asked, and if one brushed against another, or trod upon his foot, an apology must be made. At meal time, if one could not eat all that had been put upon his dish, he must excuse himself to show that it was through no dislike of the food, and when he had finished he must not push away his dish but return it to the woman, speaking a term of relationship, as mother, aunt, wife, which was equivalent to thanks. Among some tribes, if a cooking vessel had been borrowed, it must be returned with a portion of what had been cooked in it to show the owner the use that had been made of the utensil, and also, in courtesy, to share the food.

There was an etiquette in standing and sitting that was carefully observed by the women. They stood with the feet straight and close together, and if the hands were free, the arms hung down, a little toward the front, the fingers extended and the palms lightly pressed against the dress. Women sat with both feet under them, turned to one side. Men usually sat cross-legged.

The training of children in tribal etiquette and grammatical speech began at an early age, and the strict observance of etiquette and the correct use of language indicated the rank and standing of a man's family. Class distinctions were everywhere more or less observed. On the N. Pacific coast the difference between high caste and low caste was strongly marked. Certain lines of conduct, such as being a too frequent guest, were denounced as of low caste. So, too, among the Haida, it was of low caste to lean backward; one must sit on the forward part of the seat in an alert attitude to observe good form. Lolling in company was considered a mark of bad manners among the tribes; and among the Hopi one would not sit with legs extended during a ceremony. Smoking, whether social or ceremonial, had its etiquette; much form was used in exchanging smoking materials and in passing the pipe in smoking and in returning it. In certain societies, when a feast was served, particular parts of the animal belonged by etiquette to the noted warriors present, and these were presented by the server with ceremonial speech and movements. Among some tribes when a feast was given a pinch of each kind of food was sacrificed in the fire before eating. Ceremonial visitors usually made their approach known according to the local custom. Among some of the Plains tribes the visitors dispatched a runner bearing a little bunch of tobacco to apprise their host of their intended visit; should their coming prove to be ill timed, the tobacco could be returned with an accompanying gift, and the visit would be postponed without any hard feeling. There was much and varied detail in the etiquette of family life, social gatherings, and the ceremonies of the various tribes living N. of Mexico. See Child life, Ethics and Morals, Hospitality, Salutation. (A. C. F.)

Etishoka (E-tish-sho'-ka, 'hill people'). An Hidatsa band.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 159, 1877.

Etiwaw (Catawba: 'pine tree'). A small tribe, now extinct, forming part of the Cusabo group and living about Ashley and Cooper rs., Berkeley co., S. C., extending E. to the present Monk's Corner, where their hunting grounds bordered the Sewee country. The Santee and Congaree were above them. They were never prominent historically, and in Jan., 1715, had a single village with 240 inhabitants (Rivers, Early Hist. S. C., 94, 1874). Nothing is heard of them after the Yamasi war in 1715, until 1751, when they are mentioned as one of the small tribes for which the South Carolina government made peace with the Iroquois. From this time they seem to have become lost to history. Their name is preserved in Eutaw Springs, and in Pine Tree, another name for Camden, S. C.—Mooney, Siouan Tribes of the East, Bull. B. A. E., 1894.

Ashley River Indians.—Williamson, N. C., 1, 201, 1812. Etewaus.—Glen (1751) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vi, 721, 1855. Etiwans.—Rivers, Hist. S. C., 37, 1856. Itawans.—Ibid.

Etleuk. A Squawmish village community on the right bank of Squawmisht r., w. British Columbia.

Ela-a-who.—Brit. Adm. Chart, No. 1917. Ētlē'uq.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Etnataek (perhaps *ā'tanataheg*ⁱ, 'where the fight, battle, or clubbing took place.'—W. J.). Given as the name of an old fortification said to have stood formerly near the Kickapoo village on Sangamon r., Ill. It is supposed to have been built by the Kickapoo and Foxes, who were defeated there by the combined forces of the Ottawa, Potawatomi, and Chippewa.—Long, Exped., 1, 173, 1823.

Etoluk. An Alaskan Eskimo village in the Kuskokwim district; pop. 25 in 1890. Etolugamiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Etotulga. A former Seminole town, 10 m. e. of the old Mickasuky town, in Florida.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 74 (1823), 19th Cong., 1st sess., 26, 1826.

Etowah (properly I'tāwā', of unknown meaning). A Cherokee settlement that existed, until the removal of 1838, on Etowah r., about the present Hightower (a corruption of I'tāwā'), in Forsyth co., Ga. Another settlement of the same name may have been on Hightower cr. of Hiwassee r., in Towns co., Ga.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 522, 1900.

Hightower.—Doc. of 1799 quoted by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 144, 1887. I'tāwā'.—Mooney, op. cit. (Cherokee name.)

Etowah mound. A large artificial mound on the n. bank of Etowah r., 3 m. s. e. of Cartersville, Bartow co., Ga. With 4 or 5 smaller mounds it is on a level bottom in a bend of the stream, the immediate area, covering about 56 acres, flanked on one side by an artificial ditch which extends in a semicircle from a point on the river above to the river below. The large mound, which is a quadrilateral truncated pyramid, 61 ft. high, has a broad roadway ascending the s. side to within 18 or 20 ft. of the top, and was formerly provided with steps made with crossbeams imbedded in the earth, remains of which were visible as late as 1885. The diameters of the base are respectively 380 and 330 ft., and of the top 170 and 176 ft. The area of the base is a little less than 3 acres, and of the top about seven-tenths of an acre. The solid contents of the mound, including the roadway, are about 4,300,000 cu. ft. On the e. side there is a narrow extension from the summit to the base, which appears to have been a sort of refuse slide. The village situated here was possibly the Guaxule of De Soto's chroniclers (1540), and the large mound the one mentioned by Garcilasso de la Vega (Florida, lib. iii, cap. xx, 139, 1723), although Mooney (19th Rep. B. A. E., 520, 1900) is of the opinion that Guaxule was probably about at Nacooche mound in White co.

The earliest description of the Etowah mound in modern times is by Cornelius (Silliman's Am. Jour. Sci. and Art., 1st s., i, 322, 1818). C. C. Jones (Antiq. So. Ind., 136, 1873) and Whittlesey (Smithson. Rep., 624, 1881) also describe and illustrate it. A careful survey of the large mound and group, and a partial exploration of the smaller mounds, were made by the Bureau of American Ethnology and an account thereof was published (5th Rep., 95–105, 1887; 12th Rep., 292, 1894). Cornelius states that "the Cherokees in their late war with the Creeks secured its [the large mound's] summit by pickets and occupied it as a place of protection for hundreds of their women and children." The smallest of the 3 larger mounds, the surrounding space, and 1 or 2 small tumuli have been explored. Parts of 3 or 4 stone images, copper plates with stamped figures bearing some resemblance to Mexican designs, and other copper plates with pieces attached by rivets have been found. Other articles, such as pipes, earthenware, copper celts, stone plates, etc., have also been unearthed. For further information see the works above cited; also Squier and Davis, Ancient Monuments, 1852; Thomas (1) Burial Mounds of the Northern Section,

ETOWAH MOUND, GEORGIA. (HEIGHT, 61 FT.; GREATEST LENGTH OF BASE, 380 FT.)

5th Rep. B. A. E., 1887, (2) Catalogue of Prehistoric Works, Bull. B. A. E., 45, 1891; Holmes in Science, III, 437, 1884. (c. t.)

Etskein. A winter village of the Kwakiutl proper on Havannah channel, w. coast of British Columbia.

Et-se-kin.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 229, 1887.

Ētsi-kin.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 65, 1887.

Etskainah (Ēts-kāi'-nah, 'horns'). A society of the Ikunukhaitsi, or All Comrades, among the Siksika; it is obsolete among the southern Piegan, but still exists with the northern Piegan and the Kainah. It is regarded as having originated with the latter and extended to the other divisions. The Sinopah (Kit-fox) society among the southern Piegan is practically identical with it. The present Etskainah society is said to have taken on some of the functions of the Stumiks (Bulls), now extinct. The members carry a crooked staff and are supposed to have magical powers (Wissler, inf'n, 1906). See Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 221, 1892.

Etsowish - simmegee - itshin ('grizzly-bear standing'). A Kalispel chief in the first half of the 19th century, baptized by Father De Smet about 1842 or 1843 under the name Loyola, by which name he was known to the whites. His early history is not known, but he was distinguished in his later years for his firm adherence to the Roman Catholic religion and his zealous efforts to lead his people to observe the teachings of the missionaries and the services and ordinances of the church. Although strict in repressing disorder, Loyola was highly regarded by his people, who regarded him as a father. He died Apr. 6, 1854, and was succeeded by Victor Alamiken, distinct from Victor of the Flathead (Salish) tribe of about the same period. (c. t.)

Etthaottine ('people who act contrarily'). A Nahane tribe of which one division lives on Francis lake, British Columbia, another in the neighborhood of old Ft Halkett (Hardisty in Smithsonian Rep. 1866, 311, 1872). Their name came from their warlike habits. Ross (MS., B. A. E.) gave their pop. in 1858 as 435.

Bad-people.—Morice, Notes on W. Denés, 16, 1893.

Ētcha-ta-uttinné.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., II, 6, 1851. Ētcha-ottiné.—Petitot, Dict. Déné-Dindjé, xx, 1876 ('people who act contrarily').

Mauvais Monde.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 66, 1856. Netsiley.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 401, 1851. Slavé Indians.—Dall, Alaska, 429, 1870. Wild Nation.—Richardson, op. cit.

Etuck Chukke ('blue wood'). A former Choctaw town near East Abeika, Kemper co., Miss.—Romans, Fla., 309, 1775.

Eudeve. A division of the Opata of Sonora, Mexico, inhabiting the divide of the Rio Sonora and Rio San Miguel, and extending southward from about lat. 30°

30' to the villages of Matape and Nacori on the Rio Matape in lat. 29°, exclusive of Ures, which for the greater part was a Nevome pueblo, although containing some Opata. The language of the Eudeve—also called Heve, Dohme, etc.—is a dialect of the Opata. Like the other Opata, they have almost lost their former customs, religion, and habits, and have become Mexicanized. Population of the division unknown. The villages and settlements that have been mentioned are: Alamos, Bacanora, Batuco, Cucurpe, Matape, Nacori, Opodepe, Robesco, Sacarachi, Sahuaripa,* Soyopa,* Tepusque, Toape,* and Tonichi.* Those marked with an asterisk were settled in part by Nevome. (F. W. H.)

Batucos.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 344, 1864 (used here as a synonym of the language). Cudeves.—Cancio (1768) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., II, 270, 1856 (misprint). Dohema.—Pimentel, Lenguas de Mex., II, 153, 1865 (corruption of dohme, 'man', 'pueblo', 'nation'). Dohme.—Orozco y Berra, op. cit. Egues.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 1352, 1736 (doubtless identical, although mentioned as distinct from Eudeve at leg. 1514). Equi.—Orozco y Berra, op. cit. Eudebe.—Ibid., 63. Eudeva.—Ibid. Eudeve.—Rivera, op. cit., leg. 1514. Hegue.—Orozco y Berra, op. cit. Hequi.—Ibid., 63. Heve.—Ibid., 64.

Eufaula. A former Upper Creek town on Eufaula cr., 5 or 6 m. s. of the present town of Talladega, Ala.

Eufala's.—Campbell (1836) in H. R. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 20, 1838. Eufalee.—Flint, Ind. Wars, 202, 1833. Eufalahatche.—Pickett, Hist. Ala., II, 341, 1851. Eufala Old Town.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. cviii, 1899. Eu-fau-lau-hatche.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 42, 1848. Eufaulies.—Finnelson (1792) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 259, 1832. Euphalau.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., II, 113, 1787. Euphalees.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1797), 70, 1837. Euphale.—Adair, Am. Inds., 278, 1775. Little Eufauly.—Finnelson (1792) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 259, 1832. Little Ufala.—Swan in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Ufala.—H. R. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 142, 1838. Ufauley.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, VI, 371, 1857. Uphaulie towns.—Robertson (1793) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 467, 1832. Upper Eufalla.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1827), 420, 1837. Upper Euphalees.—Ibid. (1797), 68. Upper Ufale.—Bartram, Travels, 462, 1791. Usauleys.—Cherokee council (1792) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 273, 1832. Usawla.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 140, 1836. Usawles.—Harris, Voy. and Trav., II, 385, 1705. Yofale.—Jefferys, French Dom. Am., I, 134, map, 1761. Yofate.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, 7, 1776.

Eufaula. A former Upper Creek town on the w. bank of Tallapoosa r., near the site of the present Dadeville, Tallapoosa co., Ala.

Big Ufala.—Swan in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Eufaula.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. cviii, 1899. Eu-fau-lau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 48, 66, 1848.

Eufaula. A former Lower Creek town on the e. bank of Chattahoochee r., 15 m. below Sawokli, Quitman co., Ga. In 1799 a portion of its inhabitants settled at several points downstream as far as the mouth of Flint r.; the settlements here made also became known as Eufaula.

Eufantees.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 26, 1888. Eufath.—Seagrove (1792) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 311, 1832. Eufale.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. 4, 29, 1848. Eufollahs.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, vi, 469, 1857. Eufowlas.—Woodward, Reminis., 38, 1859. Lower Enfalla.—Robin, Voy., ii, map, 1807. Lower Enfula.—Jesup (1836) in H. R. Doc. 78, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 48, 1838 (misprint). Lower Ufale.—Bartram, Trav., 461, 1791. Nafoli.—Bartram, Voy., Benoist trans., i, map, 1799. Ufalees.—Holmes (1799) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., i, 386, 1832. Ufallahs.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 364, 1822. Ufallays.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. 4, 94, 1848. Ufawlas.—McCall, Hist. Georgia, i, 363, 1811. Ufewles.—Barnard (1793) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., i, 395, 1832. Youfaloo.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 309, 1836. Yufala.—Romans, Florida, i, 280, 1775. Yufalis.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., ii, 26, 1888.

Eufaula. A former Lower Creek town on the w. bank of Chattahoochee r., in Henry co., Ala.

Eufala Town.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. cviii, 1899.

Eufaula. A town of the Creek Nation on the s. side of Deep fork of Canadian r., near Ocmulgee, Ind. T.

Yufala hupáyi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 122, 1884.

Eufaula. Formerly a town, now a city, of the Creek Nation, near the mouth of North fork of Canadian r., on the Mo., Kans. and Tex. R. R., Ind. T.

Yufala.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., ii, 185, 1888.

Eulachon. One of the names of the candle-fish (Thaleichthys pacificus), of the family Salmonidae, closely related to the smelt; from the name of this fish in one of the Chinookan dialects. It is found in the waters of the N. Pacific coast of America and is much used by the Indians of that region for food and the production of grease and oil. Other forms (Christian Union, Mar. 22, 1871) are hoolikan and oolichan, and Irving (Astoria, ii) cites the form uthlecan. (A. F. C.)

Eushtat (E'-ushtat). The principal settlement of the Klamath on lower Williamson r., near lower Klamath lake, Klamath co., Oreg.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., ii, pt. 2, 32, 1890.

Evea. A Comanche chief, prominent between 1772 and 1778. In June, 1772, he went to San Antonio Béxar and ratified a treaty with the governor of Texas. Gov. Ripperdá, referring to this event in a letter of July 4, 1772, called him Evea, "capitan" of the Comanche nation, and in a letter written the next day he referred to him as "Pubea ó Evea, principal capitan" of that tribe. He was apparently still chief in 1778, for Mezières tells of meeting in Texas a party of Comanche under the son of Evea, a chief held in high estimation among his people. (H. E. B.)

Evil Peace. A village seen by De Soto's army in 1539, between Utinama and Cholupaha, Fla.—Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., ii, 130, 1850.

Ewawoos. A Cowichan tribe whose town was Skeltem, 2 m. above Hope, Fraser r., Brit. Col.; pop. 27 in 1904.

Ewahoos.—Can. Ind. Aff., 309, 1879. Ewa-woos.—Ibid., 1901, pt. 2, 158. Ēwā'wus.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1891.

Exchange, media of. Before the arrival of Europeans intertribal trade had resulted almost everywhere in America in the adoption of certain standards of value of which the most important were shell beads and skins. The shell currency of the Atlantic coast consisted of small white and black or purplish beads cut from the valves of quahog and other shells and familiarly known as wampum, q. v. These were very convenient, as they could be strung together in quantities and carried any distance for purposes of trade, in this respect having a decided advantage over skins. In exchange two white beads were equivalent to one black one. During the early colonial period wampum was almost the only currency among white people as well; but inferior, poorly finished kinds, made not only out of shell, but of stone, bone, glass, horn, and even wood, were soon introduced, and in spite of all attempted regulation the value of wampum dropped continually until in 1661 it was declared to be legal tender no longer in Massachusetts, and a year or two later the same fate overtook it in the other New England colonies. In New York it appears to have held on longer, its latest recorded use as currency being in 1693. Holm says, speaking of the Delawares of New Jersey: "In trade they measure those strings [of wampum] by their length," each fathom of them being worth 5 Dutch guilders, reckoning 4 beads for every stiver. "The brown beads are more valued than the others and fetch a higher price; a white bead is of the value of a piece of copper money, but a brown one is worth a piece of silver." Holm quotes another authority, however, to the effect that a white bead was worth one stiver and a black bead two. The latter says also that "their manner of measuring the strings is by the length of their thumbs; from the end of the nail to the first joint makes 6 beads."

On the Pacific coast between S. E. Alaska and N. California shell currency of another kind was employed. This was made from the Dentalium pretiosum (money tooth-shell), a slender univalve found on the w. coasts of Vancouver and Queen Charlotte ids. In the Chinook jargon it was called hiauqua. The principal place where it was obtained is said to have been the territory of a Nootka tribe, the Ehatisaht, in Esperanza inlet, w. coast of Vancouver id., but it was collected as far n. as Quatsino inlet. The method of procuring it is described in one of the earliest accounts of this region, the Narrative of John Jewitt. According to Boas, a block of cedar was split up at one end so that it formed a kind of brush which opened when pushed down into the water and closed when pulled up, thus entangling the shells. These shells were valued in proportion to their individual lengths. In w. Washington the standard of value was 40 to the fathom, and the value fell off rapidly above that number, while very long single shells were worth more than a dollar. A fathom of 40 was formerly equivalent to a slave, according to Gibbs, and in his time would bring $5. In California and on the plateaus farther n. the shells had incised designs. Among the Hupa of California they are decorated by being wrapped spirally with fish skin or snake skin, and in addition usually bear a tuft of red feathers, probably from the woodpecker's crest. The following further description of these is given by Goddard:

"The individual shells are measured and their value determined by the creases on the left hand: The longest known shells were about $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long. One of them would reach from the crease of the last joint of the little finger to the crease on the palm opposite the knuckle joint of the same finger. The value of such a piece in early days was about \$5. Shells of this length were called dīnket. The next smaller shells were called kīkē-tūkātvoi, and measured about $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. They were worth about \$1.50 each. A shell about $1\frac{1}{2}$ in. long was called tcwōlahit. Their value was from 25 to 50 cents. Shells smaller than these were not rated as money and had no decoration. The length of the shells smaller than the first mentioned was determined by applying them to the creases of the middle and other fingers of the left hand.

"This money was strung on strings which reached from the thumb nail to the point of the shoulder. Eleven of the largest size filled such a string and was therefore called mōanala. Twelve shells of the next smaller size composed a string and were called mōananax. Thirteen shells are called mōanatak, and 14 of the smallest shells, called mōanadiñk, was the largest number placed on a string. These strings are approximately 25 in. long. This, as it appears, was the least common multiple of the individual standard lengths.

"Since all hands and arms are not of the same length, it was necessary for the man, when he reached his maturity, to establish the values of the creases on his hand by comparison with money of known length as measured by someone else. He also had a set of lines tattooed on the inside of the left forearm. These lines indicated the length of 5 shells of the several standards. The measures were subdivided, there being lines of mōanala long and mōanalu short, and so on. This was the principal method of estimating the money. The first 5 on the string were measured by holding the tip of the first shell at the thumb nail and drawing the string along the arm and noting the tattooed mark reached by the butt of the fifth shell. In like manner the last and intermediate sets of 5 were measured." This shell money was carried in special elk-horn boxes.

Among the coast tribes n. of Vancouver id., dentalia were not so much in vogue, but were used for ornamental purposes and in trade with the interior Indians. The standard of value among the Kutchakutchin and neighboring tribes consisted of lines of beads 7 ft long joined together at the distance of a foot, and called naki eik ('bead clothing'). The whole naki eik, according to Jones, "is equal to 24 made beaver, and one of the lines is one or more beaver skins, according to the value of the beads."

In central and s. California circular, disk-shaped shell beads were used. Among the Maidu they were counted instead of being measured in strings, although for each 10 beads a stick was laid down as a counter (Dixon). According to Powers the Miwok rated shell beads at \$5 a yard, while the Yokuts valued a string reaching from the point of the middle finger to the elbow at 25 cents. These latter sometimes strung with them a section of bone very white and polished, about $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, which they rated at $12\frac{1}{2}$ cents. The Miwok strung together other shells which Powers believed to be olivella, valuing them at \$1 a yard, as well as fancy marine shells, rated from \$3 to \$10 or \$15 a yard, according to their beauty.

So far inland were these shells carried that dentalia were found among the Dakota, and it is probable that shells from both the Atlantic and the Pacific reached the same tribes.

A more usual standard of value among interior people, however, was the pelt, especially the skin of the beaver. Even on the Atlantic coast it was used from the very earliest times side by side with wampum, and in 1613 the statement is made that it was the basis of all trade between the French of Canada and the Indians. In 1670 (Margry, Déc., 1, 164, 1878) it is learned that a beaver skin was worth a fathom of tobacco, a fourth of a pound of powder, 6 knives, or a portion of little blue beads. According to Hunter it was also the standard of value among the Osage, Kansa, Oto, Omaha, and their neighbors. He adds that 2 good otter skins, from 10 to 12 raccoon, or 4 or 5 wildcat skins were valued at one beaver skin. Here this standard passed out very rapidly with the coming of white men; but in the great fur regions of Canada it remained the basis of value first between French and Indians, and afterward between English and Indians. Up to the present time everything is valued in "skins," meaning beaver skins, but the term has come to have a fixed value of 50 cents in Canadian money.

In former days, before the arrival of the Russians, the unit of value among the Eskimo of the lower Yukon was a full grown land-otter skin, to which was equivalent the skin of the large hair seal. This has now given place to the beaver; and all other skins, furs, and articles of trade are sold as "a skin" and multiples and fractions of "a skin." "In addition to this," says Nelson, "certain small, untanned skins, used for making fur coats or blouses, are tied in lots sufficient to make a coat, and are sold in this way. It requires 4 skins of reindeer fawns, or 40 skins of Parry's marmot or of the muskrat for a coat, and these sets are known by terms designating these bunches." The pelt of a wolf or wolverene is worth several "skins" in trade, while a number of pelts of muskrats or Parry's marmot are required to make the value of "a skin."

Among the northern tribes in the N. Pacific coast area, where dentalia were not so much valued, elk and moose skins seem formerly to have constituted one of the standards of value, although the skins of other animals were no doubt used to some extent as well. In later times all these were replaced by blankets introduced by the Hudson's Bay Company, which were distinguished by points or marks on the edge, woven into their texture, the best being 4-point, the smallest and poorest 1-point. The acknowledged unit of value, at least among the Haida, was a single 2½-point blanket, worth in 1880 a little more than $1.50, but on the coast farther S. it is now rated at about 50 cents. Everything was referred to this unit, according to Dawson, even a large 4-point blanket being said to be worth so many "blankets."

Another standard universal in this region was slaves, and perhaps the remarkable copper plates should also be mentioned, though strictly speaking they were legal tender of varying value which had to be fixed by means of some other standard, such as blankets or slaves. Pieces of cedar bark prepared for roofing sometimes appear as units of value also.

By the interior Salish of British Columbia Indian hemp bark was put up in bundles about 2 ft long and 2 in. in diameter, and tied at both ends, and 6 of these bundles constituted a "package," while dried salmon was generally sold by the "stick," each stick numbering 100 fish (Teit).

In addition to their dentalia the Hupa and the peoples of Klamath r., in N. California, use scalps of woodpeckers. They employ those of both the pileated and smaller woodpecker for this purpose, the present exchange values of which are now $1 and 10 cents, respectively (Goddard). According to Bourke, eagle feathers were an article of commerce with a determinate value among the Pueblo Indians. The Mandan standards were skin corn measures of different dimensions which were kept in the council lodge; and the Arikara measure was a stone mortar. In later years an important unit of value on the great plains was the horse.

The standards among the Hopi and probably other Pueblo tribes were a kind of basket tray, a fixed variety of blue blanket, and turquoise and shell beads.

On the Pacific coast canoes were valued according to the length in fathoms, but among the Hupa, where the length is constant, by their height and breadth, the natives providing themselves with marks on their legs for this particular purpose. Many other long articles seem to have been appraised in the same manner.

Although including the more prominent standards, the foregoing list by no means exhausts their number, for where articles of various kinds were continually bartered, numerous standards of a more or less evanescent nature arose. For a list of comparative valuations in one tribe see Teit, cited below, p. 260. See Beadwork, Commerce, Fur-trade, Horses, Measurements, Shellwork, Wampum.

Consult Bourke, Snake Dance of the Moquis, 1885; Chittenden, Am. Fur Trade, 1902; Dawson, Report on Queen Charlotte Ids., Geol. Surv. of Can., 1880; Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt. 3, 1905; Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 1877; Goddard in Univ. Cal. Publ., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., 1903; Hardesty in Smithsonian. Rep. 1866, 1872; Holm, Descr. New Sweden, 1834; Holmes in 2d Rep. B. A. E., 1883; Hunter, Captivity, 1823; Jewitt, Narrative, 1815; Jones in Smithsonian. Rep. 1866, 1872; Loskiel, Missions, 1794; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899; Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 1877; Teit, Thompson Indians, Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., ii, 1900. (J. R. S.)

Eyak. An Ugalakmiut Eskimo village at the entrance of Prince William sd., Alaska; pop. 94 in 1890, 222 in 1900. Near by is a cannery called Odiak, where 273 people live.

Eyak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1901. Hyacks.—Halleck in Rep. Sec. of War, i, pt. 1, 1869 (probably identical). Ikhak.—Petroff, 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884. Odiak.—Moser (1899), quoted by Baker, op. cit.

Eyeish. A tribe of the Caddo confederacy which spoke a dialect, now practically extinct, very different from the dialects of the other tribes; hence it is probable they were a part of an older confederacy which was incorporated in the Caddo when the latter became dominant. The early home of the tribe was on Eyeish cr. between the Sabine and Neches rs. of Texas. Moscoso led his troops through their country in 1542, encountering herds of buffalo. From the statements of Joutel and Douay, the Eyeish were not on good terms with the tribes w. of them on the Trinity, nor with those on Red r. in the N. at the time the French entered their country late in the 17th century; but, judging from the confusion of names by early writers, it is likely that only some of the subdivisions or villages were represented in the war parties. The mission of Nuestra Señora de los Dolores (q. v.) was established among them by the Franciscans who accompanied Don Domingo Ramon on his tour in 1716-17. They were, however, very little amenable to Spanish influence, for after 50 years of missionary effort, the mission register showed, according to Solis (MS., cited by H. E. Bolton, inf'n, 1906), only 11 baptisms, 7 interments, and 3 marriages performed at the mission, although the tribe had not been backward in receiving material aid from the missionaries. Solis reported in 1768 that this tribe was the worst in Texas—drunken, thievish, licentious, impervious to religious influence, and dangerous to the missionaries. Their villages were not far from the road between the French post at Natchitoches and the Spanish post at Nacogdoches, and the tribe was thus exposed to the contentions of the period and to the ravages of smallpox, measles, and other new diseases introduced by the white race. In the latter part of the 18th century the Eyeish were placed under the jurisdiction of the officials residing at Nacogdoches; in 1779 Mezières stated that there were 20 families of the "Ays" and that they were hated by both Indians and Spaniards (Bolton, op. cit.). In 1785 there were reported to have been 300 "Ahijitos" on Atoyac r., opposite the Nacogdoches (Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 666, 1886). In 1805 Sibley stated that only 20 members of the tribe were then living; but in 1828 (Soc. Geog. Mex., 1870) they were said to number 160 families between Brazos and Colorado rs. These differences in the estimates would seem to indicate that the Eyeish were considerably scattered during this period. Those who survived the vicissitudes which befell the Caddo in the 19th century are with their kindred on the Wichita res. in Oklahoma. Nothing definite is known of their customs and beliefs, which, however, were probably similar to those entertained and practised by other tribes of the confederacy, and no definite knowledge of their divisions and totems has survived. While in New Mexico in 1540-41 Coronado learned from a Plains Indian known as The Turk, probably a Pawnee, of a province or settlement called Ayas, 6 or 7 days' journey distant, at which the Spanish army could obtain provisions on its way to Copala and Quivira. This place may have been imaginary, or the Eyeish people may have been meant. It was The Turk's intention to lead the Spaniards astray, hence locality plays but little part in the identification. (A. C. F.)

Aas.—Villa-Señor, Theatro Am., pt. II, 412, 1748.
Aays.—Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in Hakluyt Soc. Pub., IX, 136, 1851. Aes.—Rivera, Diario y Derrotero, leg. 2165, 1736. Ahiahichi.—Thevenot quoted by Shea, Discov., 268, 1852. Ahijados.—Freytas, Peñalosa (1662), 35, 66, 1882. Ahijitos.—Morfi, MS. Hist. Tejas, bk. 2, ca. 1781-82. Ahijaos.—Freytas, op. cit., 34. Ahyches.—Doc. ca. 1735 in Margry, Déc., VI, 233, 1886. Aiaichi.—Marquette, map (1673) in Shea, Discov., 1852. A'-ic.—Dorsey, Caddo MS., B. A. E., 1882. Aiches.—La Harpe (1716) in Margry, Déc., VI, 193, 1886. Aijados.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 150, 1889. Aijaos.—Ibid., 163. Aijas.—Vetancourt (ca. 1693), Teatro Mex., III, 303, 1871. Ais.—Uhde, Länder, 182, 1861. Aise.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 373, 1822. A'-ish.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 44, 1884. Aix.—Bull. Soc. Geog. Mex., 268, 1870. Aixai.—Sanson, L'Amérique, map 27, 1657. Aixaj.—Linschoten, Descr. l'Amérique, map 1, 1638. Aixaos.—Benavides, Memorial, 85, 1630. Aizes.—Tex. St. Arch., Nacogdoches, 1832. Aliche.—Schermerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., II, 24, 1814. Alich.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 101, 1856. Aliche.—Sibley (1805), Hist. Sketches, 70, 1806. Alickas.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 80, 1854. Alish.—Latham, Essays, 401, 1860. Alishes.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 87, 1814. Apiches.—Shea, Discov., xxxii, 1852 (misprint). Auches.—Garcilasso de la Vega, Fla., 213, 1723 (seemingly the same). Axtaas.—Oñate (1606) cited by Prince, N. Mex., 166, 1883 (possibly identical). Ayache.—Flint, Ind. Wars, 30, 1833. Ayays.—Mota-Padilla, Hist. de la Conq., 164, 1742. Ayax.—Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in Hakluyt Soc. Pub., IX, 115, 1851. Ayche.—La Harpe (1716) in Margry, Déc., VI, 194, 1886. Ayches.—Jefferys (1763), Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Aychis.—Baudry des Lozières, Voy. à la Louisiane, 241, 1802. Ayche.—Gravelin (ca. 1717) quoted by Winsor, Hist. Am., v, 30, note, 1887. Ayes.—Villa-Señor (1748) quoted by Buschmann, Spuren d. azt. Spr., 418, 1854. Ayiches.—La Harpe (1717) in French, Hist. Coll. La., III, 48, 1851. Ayish.—Kennedy, Tex., I, 25, 1841 (the bayou). Ayjadós.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Pap., III, 169, 1890. Ayjaos.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629), Rel., in Land of Sunshine, 46, Dec., 1899. Ays.—Barcia, Ensayo, 322, 1723. Ayses.—Tex. St. Arch., census of 1790. Ayzes.—Ibid. Egeish.—Schermerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., II, 24, 1814 (misprint). Eyesh.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 70, 1806. Eyish.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 81, 1815. Haish.—Ten Kate, Reizen in N. Am., 374, 1885. Hais.—Biedma (1544) in Hakluyt Soc. Pub., IX, 197, 1851. Ha'-ish.—Gatschet, Caddo and Yatassi MS., B. A. E., 42. Hayches.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 410, 1878. Heiche.—Brown, West. Gaz., 214, 1817. Yais.—Soc. Geog. Mex., 504, 1869. Yayecha.—D'Anville, Carte des Isles de l'Amér., 1731.

Fabrics. See Clothing, Cotton, Featherwork, Quillwork, Weaving.

Face. See Anatomy.

Face painting. See Adornment, Ornament, Painting, Tattooing.

Fallacies. See Popular fallacies.

Faluktabunnee. A Choctaw town, mentioned in the treaty of 1805, on the right bank of Tombigbee r., in Choctaw co., Ala.—Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., 1, 749, 1832; Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. cviii, 1899.

Fuketcheepona.—Am. State Papers, op. cit.

Family. There are important material differences in the organization and in the functions of the family as found respectively in savagery, barbarism, and civilization, and even within each of these planes of culture several marked types of the family, differing radically one from another in many characteristic features, exist.

To determine definitely even the main organic features of the family systems in a majority, not to say all, of the Indian tribes N. of Mexico, is not yet possible, owing to lack of material. In communities like those of the Muskogean and the Iroquoian tribes, in which the clan system has been so highly developed, two radically different organic groups of persons exist to which the term family may properly be applied; and within each of these groups a more or less complex system of relationships definitely fixes the status of every person, a status that, acquired by birth or adoption, determines the civil or other rights, immunities, and obligations of the person. Among the Iroquois the ohwachira (the common Iroquoian name for the maternal blood family) was becoming merged into the clan (q.v.), so that in specific cases the two are virtually identical, although in other cases several ohwachira are comprised under one clan. The term ohwachira is common to all the known dialects of the Iroquoian stock. On the other hand there are found in these dialects several different names designating the group called a clan, seemingly indicating the probability that the family as an institution existed long before the development of the clan organization, when the several tribes still had a common history and tradition. But it is not strictly accurate to call an ohwachira a family, or a clan a family. The first and larger group includes the entire body of kindred of some one person, who is usually denominated the propositus.

In view of the rights and obligations of the father's clan to a person, in addition to those inherited from the clan of the mother, it appears that the family group among the Iroquois and Muskogean tribes is composed of the maternal and paternal clans. The clan owes the child of its son certain civil and religious rights, and is bound to the child by obligations which vitally concern the latter's life and welfare, present and future. The youth's equipment for life would not be regarded as complete were the performance of these clan duties neglected. The tutelar of every person is named and made by the members of the paternal clan. The duties just mentioned do not end with the death of the person; if occasioned by war or by murder the loss must be made good by the paternal clan supplying a prisoner or the scalp of an enemy.

Some of the duties and obligations of the clan or clans whose sons have taken wives from a clan stricken by death are to condole with it, prepare the death feasts, provide suitable singers to chant the dirges at the wake lasting one or more nights, guard and care for the body lying in state and prepare it for burial, make the bark burial case or wooden coffin, construct the scaffold or dig the grave, and to perform all the other needful duties due from clans bound together by marriage. It was regarded as unseemly for the stricken clan to do anything but mourn until the body of the dead had been placed in its final resting place and until after the feast of "reassociating with the public," held ten days subsequent to the death of the deceased, at which his property was divided among his heirs and friends. In case of the death of a chief or other noted person the clan mourned for an entire year, scrupulously refraining from taking part in public affairs until the expiration of this period and until after the installation of a successor to the dead officer. During the interim the bereaved clan was represented by the clan or clans bound to it by the ties of marriage and offspring.

These two clans are exogamic groups, entirely distinct before the child's birth, and form two subdivisions of a larger group of kindred—the family—of which any given person, the propositus, is the focal point or point of juncture. Strictly speaking, both clans form incest groups in relation to him. Every member of the community is therefore the point of contact and convergence of two exogamic groups of persons, for in these communities the clan is exogamic; that is to say, each is an incest group in so far as its own members are concerned. Within these clans or exogamic groups the members are governed by rules of a more or less complex system of relationships, which fix absolutely the position and status of everyone in the group, and the clan is thus organized and limited. Those, then, who have common blood with one another, or with a third person, belong to the same family and are kindred. Both of these clans owe the offspring the rights and obligations of kindred, but in differing degrees. Thus a person may be said to have two clans, in some measure—that of his mother and that of his father. Both clans exercise rights and are bound by obligations to the household of which he is a member; both have, moreover, in different measure, the rights and obligations of kinship to him.

The second and smaller group, the fireside or household, includes only the husband, his wife or wives, and their children. Where there are several wives from several different families, this group in its family relations becomes very intricate, but is nevertheless under the rigid control of family law and usage.

It is thus apparent that these two groups of persons are in fact radically distinct, for the lesser group is not merely a portion of the larger. The relative status of the husband and his wife or wives and their children makes this evident.

Custom, tradition, and the common law do not regard the wife or wives of the household as belonging to the clan of the husband. By marriage the wife acquires no right of membership in her husband's clan, but remains a member of her own clan, and, equally important, she transmits to her children the right of membership in her clan; and she acquires no rights of inheritance of property either from her husband or from his clan. On the other hand, the husband acquires no rights from his wife or from her clan, and he, likewise, does not become a member of his wife's clan.

But the fireside, or household, is the product of the union by marriage of two persons of different clans, which does not establish between the husband and wife the mutual rights and obligations arising from blood feud and from inheritance. It is precisely these mutual rights and obligations that are peculiarly characteristic of the relations between clansmen, for they subsist only between persons of common blood, whether acquired by birth or by adoption. Therefore, husband and wife do not belong to the same clan or family.

As there is a law of the clan or exogamic kinship group governing acts and relations as between members of the same clan group, so there are rules and usages governing the household or fireside and defining the rights and obligations belonging to its jurisdiction. The relations of the various members of the fireside are affected by the fact that every member of it is directly subject to the general rule of the clan or higher kinship group—the husband to that of his clan, the wife or wives to those of their respective clans, and the children to those of both parents, but in different kind and degree.

The dominating importance of the family in the social organization of a primitive people is apparent; it is one of the most vital institutions founded by private law and usage. In such a community every member is directly obligated to the family, first of all, for the protection that safeguards his welfare. The members of the family to which he belongs are his advocates and his sureties. In the grim blood feud the family defends him and his cause, even with their lives, if need be, and this care ends not with his death, for if he be murdered the family avenges his murder or exacts payment therefor. In the savage and barbaric ages, even to the beginning of civilization, the community placed reliance largely on the family for the maintenance of order, the redress of wrongs, and the punishment of crime.

Concerned wholly with the intimate relations of private life, family custom and law are administered within the family and by its organs; such customs and laws constitute daily rules of action, which, with their underlying motives, embody the common sense of the community. In a measure they are not within the jurisdiction of public enactment, although in specific cases the violation of family rights and obligations incurs the legal penalties of tribal or public law, and so sometimes family government comes into conflict with public law and welfare. But by the increasing power of tribal or public law through centralization of power and political organization the independence of the family in private feuds, regarded as dangerous to the good order of the community, is gradually limited. And when the family becomes a unit or is absorbed in a higher organization the individual acquires certain rights at the expense of the family—the right of appeal to the higher tribunal is one of these.

The wealth and power of a clan or family depend primarily on the dearth or abundance of its numbers. Hence the loss of a single person is a great loss, and there is need that it be made good by replacing the departed with another or by many others, according to the relative standing and importance of the person to be restored. For example, Aharihon, an Onondaga chieftain of the 17th century, sacrificed 40 men to the shade of his brother to show the great esteem in which he held him. But among the Iroquois the duty of restoring the loss does not devolve directly on the stricken clan or exogamic kinship group, but upon all allied to it by the ties of what is termed hontoñnishon'—i. e., upon those whose fathers are clansmen of the person to be replaced. So the birth or the adoption of many men in a clan or exogamic kinship group is a great advantage to it; for although these men become separated through the obligation of marrying into clans or such groups other than their own, the children of such unions are bound in a measure to the clan or exogamic kinship group of their fathers. This is a principle so well established that the chief matron of the paternal clan or exogamic kinship might oblige these offspring of diverse households (as many as might suffice) to go to war in fulfillment of their obligation, as seemed good to her; or she might stop them if they wished to undertake a war which was not, from its expediency, pleasing to her and her advisers. Therefore this chief matron, having decided that the time was at hand "to raise again the fallen tree" or "to put back on the vacant mat" one of the clan whom death removed, would inform one of the children whose fathers were her clansmen, their hoñthoññi, that it was her desire that he form and lead a war party against their enemies for the purpose of securing a prisoner or a scalp for the purpose named. The person whom she selected was one judged most capable of executing her commission. This was soon accomplished. She enforced and confirmed this commission with a belt of wampum. So powerful was this chief matron of a clan that when the council chiefs did not favor the designs of certain ambitious war chiefs in raising levies for military purposes, fearing that they might injure the best interests of the tribe, one of the surest methods they might employ to frustrate these enterprises was to win the chief matrons of the clans whose clansmen were the fathers of the recruits from the other clans, for these chief matrons had only to interpose their influence and authority to bring to naught the best concerted designs and enterprises of these ambitious war chiefs. This is ample evidence that these women had an influence in some degree exceeding that of the council of the ancients and tribal chiefs.

In the blood feud the paternal kin did not interfere except by counsel; but to avenge the death of a clansman of their father was an obligation. Outlaws were denied family and tribal rights. The renunciation of clan kinship entailed the loss of every right and immunity inhering in kinship. The fundamental concept in the organic structure of the family with its rights, immunities, and obligations is that of protection. To exercise the right of feud was lawful only to avenge the guilty murder of a clansman.

The clan or family was made useful by the tribe as a police organization, through which control was exercised over lawless men who otherwise were beyond restraint. Every clan had jurisdiction over the lives and property of its members, even to the taking of life for cause.

The mutual obligations of kindred subsist between persons who can act for themselves; but there are duties of protection by these toward those who can not act for themselves for any reason whatever, for it is a principle of humanity that they who are legally independent should protect those who are legally dependent. The modern law of guardianship of minors and imbeciles is evidently but a survival and extension of this obligation of protection in the primitive family and clan.

Speaking generally of the tribes of the N.W. coast, Swanton (Am. Anthropol., n. s., vii, no. 4, 1905) says that in addition to the "husband, wife, and children, a household was often increased by a number of relations who lived with the house owner on almost equal terms, several poor relations or protégés who acted as servants, and on the N. Pacific coast as many slaves as the house owner could afford or was able to capture."

In tribes where a clan or gentile organization similar to that of the Iroquoian and the Muskogean tribes does not exist, it is known that the incest groups on the maternal and the paternal sides are largely determined by the system of relationships, which fixes the position and status of every person within an indefinite group, and the incest group is reckoned from each propositus. That is to say, marriage and cohabitation may not subsist between persons related to each other within prescribed limits on both the maternal and paternal sides, although kinship may be recognized as extending beyond the prescribed limit. Among the Klamath these relationships are defined by reciprocal terms defining the relation rather than the persons, just as the term "cousin" is employed between cousins.

In speaking of the fierce, turbulent, and cruel Athapaskan tribes of the valley of the Yukon, Kirkby (Smithson. Rep. 1864, 1865), says: "There is, however, another division among them, of a more interesting and important character than that of the tribes just mentioned. Irrespective of tribe they are divided into three classes, termed, respectively, Chit-sa, Nate-sa, and Tanges-at-sa, faintly representing the aristocracy, the middle classes, and the poorer orders of civilized nations, the former being the most wealthy and the latter the poorest. In one respect, however, they greatly differ, it being the rule for a man not to marry in his own, but to take a wife from either of the other classes. A Chit-sa gentleman will marry a Tanges-at-sa peasant without the least feeling infra dig. The offspring in every case belong to the class of the mother. This arrangement has had a most beneficial effect in allaying the deadly feuds formerly so frequent among them." As no further data are given, it is impossible to say what, if any, was the internal structure and organization of these three exogamic classes, with female descent, mentioned above. Apparently a similar social organization existed among the Natchez, but no detailed information on the subject is available.

See Adoption, Captives, Clan and Gens, Government, Labor, Kinship, Marriage, Slavery, Social organization, Women.

(J. N. B. H.)

Faraon ('Pharaoh'). A tribe of Apache. From references in early Spanish writings to the "Apache hordes of Pharaoh," it is assumed that the name of the Faraon Apache was thus derived. This tribe, no longer known by name, seems to have formed the s. division of the Querecho of Coronado (1541), the Vaqueros of Benavides (1630) and other 17th century writers, and part at least of the Llaneros of more recent times. Their principal range was that part of New Mexico lying between the Rio Grande and the Pecos, although their raids extended beyond this area. Nothing is known of their ethnic relations, but judging from their habitat, they were probably more closely related to the Mescaleros than to any other of the Apache tribes, if indeed they were not a part of them. They made numerous depredations against the Spanish and Pueblo settlements of the Rio Grande in New Mexico, as well as in Chihuahua, and for a time at least their principal rendezvous was the Sandia mts. in the former territory. Several expeditions were led against them by the Spanish authorities, and treaties of peace were made, but these did not prove to be binding. According to Orozco y Berra (Geog., 59, 1864) their divisions were Aneavistas, Jacomis, Orejones, Carlanes, and Cuampes, but of these the Carlanes at least belonged to the Jicarillas.

(F. W. H.)

Apache hords of Pharaoh.—Doc. of 1714 quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 232, 1889. Apaches Faraones.—Autos de guerra (1704) quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, v, 183, 1890. Apaches Faraones.—Bollaert in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., II, 265, 1850. Apaches Pharaones.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 784, 1736. Apaches Taraones.—Bandelier, Gilded Man, 253, 1893 (misprint). Faraona.—Doc. of 1714 quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 180, 1890. Faraon Apaches.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 223, 1889. Faraones.—Villa-Señor, Teatro Am., pt. 2, 416, 1748. Fardones.—Humboldt, Kingd. of N. Sp., II, 238, 1822 (misprint). Farreón Apaches.—Vargas (1694) quoted by Davis, Span. Conq. N. Mex., 396, 1869. Intujen-né.—Escudero, Noticias Estad. de Chihuahua, 212, 1834 (misprint). Pharaona.—Valverde (1720) quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, v, 184, 1890. Pharaones.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 950, 1736. Southern Apaches.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, v, 183, 1890. Taracone.—Villa-Señor, Teatro Am., pt. 2, 416, 1748. Taraones.—Mota-Padilla, Hist. de la Conquista, 516, 1742. Tarracones.—Domenech, Deserts of N. Am., II, 7, 1860. Yuta-jenne.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 59, 1864.

Far Indians. A general term used by English writers about the beginning of the 18th century to designate the Indians of any tribe remote from the English settlements of the N. Atlantic coast. It was applied more especially to the tribes of the upper great lakes and to the Shawnee before their removal from the S. The word occurs also as "Farr." (J. M.)

Farmers Band. A Dakota division, probably of the Mdewakanton, whose habitat was below L. Traverse, Minn. Civilized Farmers.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 100, 1860. Iasica.—Hinman, MS. notes, B. A. E., 1881. Farmers' band.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 68, 1860. New civilized band.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 102, 1860. Saopi.—Gale, Upper Miss., 252, 1867 (probably misprint for Taopi). Taopi's band.—McKusick in Ind. Aff. Rep., 315, 1863.

Farmer's Brother. A Seneca chief, known among his people as Honanyawus, of vulgar meaning, born in 1716, or 1718, or 1732, according to varying authorities; died in 1814 (Drake, Biog. and Hist. Inds., bk. v, 108, 1837; Haines, Am. Indian, 579, 1888). He is often mentioned in connection with Red Jacket, but does not appear to have come into prominence until about 1792. One of his most celebrated speeches was delivered before a council at Genesee r., N. Y., in 1798. He signed the treaties of Genesee, Sept. 15, 1797, and Buffalo cr., June 30, 1802. He espoused the cause of the United States in the war of 1812, and although 80 years of age engaged actively in the strife and was present in the action near Ft George, N. Y., Aug. 17, 1813. He died soon after the battle of Lundy's Lane and was buried with military honors by the fifth regiment of U. S. infantry. Farmer's Brother was always an advocate of peace and more than once prevented his tribe from going on the warpath. (C. T.)

Fasting. A rite widely observed among the Indians and practised both in private and in connection with public ceremonies. The first fast took place at puberty, when the youth was sometimes sent to a sequestered place and remained alone, fasting and praying from 1 to 4 days, or even longer (see Child life). At this time or during similar fasts which followed, he was supposed to see in a dream the object which was to be his special medium of communication with the supernatural. Simple garments or none were worn when fasting. Among some tribes clay was put upon the head, and tears were shed as the appeals were made to the unseen powers. At the conclusion of a long fast the quantity of food taken was regulated for several days. It was not uncommon for an adult to fast, as a prayer for success, when about to enter upon an important enterprise, as war or hunting. Fasting was also a means by which occult power was believed to be acquired; a shaman had to fast frequently in order to be able to fulfill the duties of his office.

Initiation into religious societies was accompanied by fasting, and in some of the great ceremonies all the principal actors were obliged to fast prior to taking part. The length of these fasts varied with the ceremony and the tribe, and ranged from midnight to sunset, or continued 4 days and nights. Fasting generally included abstinence from water as well as food. The reason for fasting has been explained by a Cherokee priest as "a means to spiritualize the human nature and quicken the spiritual vision by abstinence from earthly food." Other tribes have regarded it as a method by which to remove "the smell" of the common world. Occasionally chiefs or leaders have appointed a tribal fast in order to avert threatening disaster. See Feasts.

Consult Dorsey and Voth in Field Columbian Mus. Publ., Anthropol. ser., III, 1900-03; Fewkes (1) in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archæol., IV, 1894, (2) in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 1900; Matthews in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., VI, 1902; Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 1900. (A. C. F.)

Fax. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Feasts. Among all tribes there were feasts, ranging in importance from that of the little child to its playmate up to those which were a part of the great sacred ceremonies. These so-called feasts were never elaborate and were simply served, each portion being ladled from the kettle by the hostess, or by one appointed for the task.

Feasts were held at stated times. On the N. Pacific coast the coming of the salmon was celebrated in a feast of thanksgiving by all the tribes able to secure the fish from inlets or rivers. Farther S. the ripening of acorns and other fruits was similarly observed. The maturing of the maize was the occasion for tribal festivities; at that time the Creeks held their 8-days' ceremony known as the Busk (q. v.), when the new corn was eaten, the new fire kindled, new garments worn, and all past enmities forgiven. In November, when the Eskimo had gathered their winter store, they held a feast, at which time gifts were exchanged; by this a temporary relationship was formed between the giver and taker, which tended to good feeling and fellowship. During the full moon of December the Eskimo held a feast to which the bladders of animals killed during the year were brought. These were "supposed to contain the inuas, or shades of the animals." On the sixth and last day the bladders were taken out to a hole made in the ice, and thrust into the water under the ice. They "were supposed to swim far out to sea and then enter the bodies of unborn animals of their kind, thus becoming reincarnated and rendering game more plentiful" (Nelson). Among the Iroquois a feast was held to keep the medicine alive. Religious ceremonies to insure fruitfulness took place at the planting of the maize, at which time a feast was held.

Feasts were given on the completion of a house, at a marriage, and when a child was named. Feasts in honor of the dead were widely observed. The time which must elapse after a death before the feast could be given varied among the tribes. Among some of the Plains Indians it occurred after 4 days, with the Iroquois after 10 days, and with other tribes after nearly a year. The Eskimo held their memorial feast late in November. The near relatives were the hosts, and the dead were supposed to be present beneath the floor of the dwelling where they enjoyed the festivities in their honor, partaking of the food and water cast there for them, and receiving the clothing put as a gift upon their namesakes. At the feast for the dead held by the tribes on the N. Pacific coast, the spirits of the departed were also supposed to be present, but the portions of food intended for them were passed through the fire and reached them in this manner. The Huron held their ceremonial feast in the fall, when all who had died during the year were disinterred by their kindred, the flesh stripped from the bones, and these wrapped in new robes and laid in the clan burial pit. The feast was one of tribal importance and was accompanied with religious rites.

It was incumbent on an aspirant to tribal honor to give feasts to the chiefs, and one who desired initiation into a society must provide feasts for the society. Respect to chiefs and leading men was expressed by a feast. On such an occasion the host and his family did not eat with their guests; they provided the food and the dishes, but the head chief appointed one of the guests to act as server. At all feasts the host was careful not to include in the food or the dishes used anything that would be tabu to any of his guests; a failure to observe this important point would be considered an insult.

The meetings of secular societies among the Plains tribes, whether the membership was of one or both sexes, were always accompanied with a feast. There was no public invitation, but the herald of the society went to each lodge and gave notice of the meeting. The food was provided by the family at whose lodge the society met, or by certain other duly appointed persons. The preparation for the feast varied in different societies within the same tribe. In some instances the food was brought ready cooked to the lodge, in others it was prepared in the presence of the assembly. The people brought their own eating vessels, for at these feasts one had to eat all that was served to him or take what was left to his home.

In most tribal ceremonies sacred feasts occurred, for which certain prescribed food was prepared and partaken of with special ceremony. Feasts of this kind often took place at the close of a ceremony, rarely at the beginning, although sometimes they marked a particular stage in the proceedings. Among the Iroquois, and perhaps other tribes, the owner feasted his fetish (q. v.), and the ceremony of the calumet (q. v.), according to early writers, was always concluded with a feast, and was usually accompanied by an exchange of presents.

Among the Omaha and cognates there was a gathering called "the fire-place feast." A company of young men or of young women, never of both sexes, met together by invitation of one of their number. When the company took their places around the fire, a space at the w. was left, where a bowl and spoon were placed to represent the presence of Wakan-da, the giver of food.

At every feast of any kind, on any occasion where food was to be eaten, a bit or small portion was first lifted to the zenith, sometimes presented to the four cardinal points, and then dropped upon the earth at the edge of the fire or into the fire. During this act, which was an offering of thanks for the gift of food, every one present remained silent and motionless. See Etiquette, Fasting, Food, Potlatch.

Consult Dorsey and Voth in Field Columbian Mus. Publ., Anthrop. ser., II, 1900-03; Fewkes in 15th, 16th, and 19th Rep. B. A. E., 1897-1900; Fletcher in Publ. Peabody Museum; Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 177, 1884; Hoffman in 7th and 14th Reps. B. A. E., 1891, 1896; Jenks in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 1900; Jesuit Relations, Thwaites ed., I-LXXIII, 1896-1901; Matthews in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., VI, 1902; Mindeleff in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 1898; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 357, 1899. (A. C. F.)

Featherwork. The feathers of birds entered largely into the industries, decorations, war, and worship of the Indians. All common species lent their plumage on occasion, but there were some that were especially sought: in the Arctic regions, water birds during their annual migrations; the eagle everywhere; wild turkeys in their habitat; ravens and flickers on the N. Pacific coast; woodpeckers, meadow larks, crested quail, mallard ducks, jays, blackbirds, and orioles in California; and in the Pueblo region, eagles, hawks, turkeys, and parrots especially. The prominent species in every area were used.

Not willing to depend on the fortunes of the hunt, the Pueblo and Virginia Indians held eagles and turkeys in captivity until such time as their feathers were wanted. Property right in eagles of certain localities were recognized by the Pueblos. In the Arctic regions parkas were made of bird skins sewed together, the feathers forming an excellent barrier against the cold. To the southward the skins of young waterfowl, while covered with down, were sewed together for robes. The historic tribes of the E. cut bird skins into strips and wove them into blankets in the same way that the western tribes used rabbit skins. In the turkey robes described by Capt. John Smith and other early explorers the pretty feathers of these birds were tied in knots to form a network, out of which beautiful patterned cloaks were wrought. Fans and other accessories of dress were made of wings or feathers by the Iroquois and other tribes. The uses of feathers in decoration were numberless. The Western Eskimo sewed little sprays of down into the seams of garments and bags made of intestinal membranes, and the California Indians decorated their exquisite basketry in the same manner. The quills of small birds, split and dyed, were used for beautiful embroidery and basketry in the same way as porcupine quills. For giving directness to the flight of arrows, feathers were usually split so that the halves could be tied or glued to the shaft in two or three. Among the Eskimo and some of the southwestern Indians the feathers were laid on flat. Among California tribes bird scalps were used as money, being both a standard of value and a medium of exchange. The most striking uses of feathers were in connection with social customs and in symbolism. The masks and the bodies of performers in ceremonies of the N. Pacific coast were copiously adorned with down. Feathers worn by the Plains tribes in the hair indicated rank by their kind and number, or by the manner of mounting or notching. The decoration of the stem of the calumet (q. v.) was of feathers, the colors of which depended on the purpose for which the calumet was offered. Whole feathers of eagles were made into war-bonnets, plumes, and long trails for dances and solemnities. In the Pueblo region feathers played an important rôle in symbolism and worship—prayer-sticks, wands, altar decorations, and aspergills were made of them. The downy feather was to the mind of the Indian a kind of bridge between the spirit world and ours. Creation and other myths spring out of feathers.

Feather technic in its highest development belongs to South America, Central America, and Polynesia, but there is continuity in the processes from the N. part of America southward. See Adornment, Art, Clothing, Color symbolism, Eagle, Exchange, Horse, Ornament, Quillwork, Weaving.

Consult Bancroft, Native Races, I-v, 1874-75; Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 1888; Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt. 3, 1905; Goddard in Publ. Univ. Cal., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., I, 1903; Holmes (1) in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 1888, (2) in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Mallery in 10th Rep. B. A. E., 1893; Mason (1) in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1902, 1904, (2) in Smithsonian. Rep. 1886, 1889; Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899; Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 1894; Winship in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896. (O. T. M.)

Features. See Anatomy.

Feju. A prehistoric pueblo of the Tewa at the site of the present town of Abiquiu, on the Rio Chama, Rio Arriba co., N. Mex.

Fe-ju.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 54, 1892. Fe-ju.—Ibid., 55.

Fermentation. Instances are few among the North American tribes of the employment of fermentation for a definite purpose. The phenomena of the "turning" or souring of cooked vegetal food or of ripe fruit must frequently have been observed, but the isolation of a pure culture, the starting and control of its action to furnish a desired product or result, was practically unknown. The rare examples of primitive American brewing and yeast making, however, are instructive as bearing on the development of the knowledge of the process of fermentation. Some Californian tribes prepare manzanita cider by mashing the berries of the Arctostaphylos manzanita, collecting the juice and allowing it to ferment from natural causes—by means of minute organisms, such as yeast and bacteria, which are constantly present in human surroundings and for which the juice of ripened fruit presents a proper medium. This, however, was perhaps not knowingly used as a fermented drink or intoxicant in aboriginal times. A step in advance of this is observed in the preparation of tiswin by the Apache of Arizona; corn is soaked, sprouted, dried, and ground, and this is mixed in water and kept in a warm place to ferment, producing a kind of beer. The fermenting agent is natural, as in the case of the manzanita cider, but the production of malt as a culture for the yeast germs seems to indicate that tiswin is not an Apache invention. The Apache also ferment pine bark by a process more primitive than that employed in the manufacture of tiswin. In the crude fermentations described, the Indians have learned to put their brew in a jar long used for the purpose, and thus retaining in its pores the organisms causing fermentation. What appears to be an approach to the discovery of beer is found in the sour corn gruel made by the Cherokee and other southern tribes, and by the Huron and other tribes of the N. This is a thin gruel of corn meal and water allowed to sour. It was a popular food, and there is no evidence that it had an intoxicating effect. Among the Pueblos is found the highest advance in the process of fermentation—the preparation and preservation of yeast for bread making. This is made by retaining corn meal in the mouth for several hours, when the magma is ejected into the food mass designed to be fermented. By this method the starch of the corn meal is acted on by the ptyalin of the saliva, rendering it a culture medium for the yeast which, once "set," continues its action indefinitely. The Zuñi have discovered that by means of salt and lime this saliva yeast may be preserved for future use. Saliva yeast was known to most beer-drinking agricultural tribes of the Old World; in America it is known to various tribes of s. Mexico and of Central and South America, but so far as known the Pueblos and neighboring tribes are the only ones in northern America acquainted with its use. See Food.

Consult Cushing, Zuñi Breadstuff, The Millstone, ix, x, Indianapolis, 1884-85; Goddard in Univ. of Cal. Publ., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., I, 1903; Hrdlicka, Tesvino among the White River Apaches, Am. Anthropol., vi, 190, 1904. (W. H.)

Fesere. A prehistoric pueblo of the Tewa on a mesa w. or s. of the Rio Chama, near Abiquiu, Rio Arriba co., N. Mex.

Fe-se-re.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 58, 1892.

Fetish (Portuguese: feitiço, 'a charm', 'sorcery', 'enchantment' (whence the English fetish); adjective, 'made by art', 'artificial', 'skilfully contrived'; Latin factitious, 'made by art', 'artful by magic'). Among the American Indians an object, large or small, natural or artificial, regarded as possessing consciousness, volition and immortal life, and especially orenda (q. v.), or magic power, the essential characteristic, which enables the object to accomplish, in addition to those that are usual, abnormal results in a mysterious manner. Apparently in any specific case the distinctive function and sphere of action of the fetish depends largely on the nature of the object which is supposed to contain it. It is the imagined possession of this potent mysterious power that causes an object to be regarded as indispensable to the welfare of its possessor.

In the belief of the Indians, all things are animate and incarnate—men, beasts, lands, waters, rocks, plants, trees, stars, winds, clouds, and night—and all possess volition and immortal life; yet many of these are held in perpetual bondage by weird spells of some mighty enchantment. So, although lakes and seas may writhe in billows, they can not traverse the earth, while brooks and rivers may run and bound over the land, yet even they may be held by the potent magic power of the god of winter. Mountains and hills may throb and quake with pain and grief, but they can not travel over the earth because they are held in thralldom by the powerful spell of some potent enchanter. Thus it is that rocks, trees, roots, 'stocks and stones', bones, the limbs and parts of the body, and the various bodies of nature are verily the living tombs of diverse beings and spirits. Of such is the kingdom of the fetish, for even the least of these may be chosen. Moreover, a fetish is an object which may also represent a vision, a dream, a thought, or an action.

The following extract from Cushing's Zuñi Fetiches (2d Rep. B. A. E., 1883) will show the reputed connection between the object and its quickener, between the object and the thing it represents. In speaking of the Two Sun Children, Cushing says: "Now that the surface of the earth was hardened, even the animals of prey, powerful and like the fathers (gods) themselves, would have devoured the children of men; and the Two thought it was not well that they should all be permitted to live, 'for,' said they, 'alike will the children of men and the children of the animals of prey multiply themselves. The animals of prey are provided with talons and teeth; men are but poor, the finished beings of earth, therefore the weaker.'"

"Whenever they came across the pathway of one of these animals, were he a great mountain lion or but a mere mole, they struck him with the fire of lightning which they carried in their magic shield. Thlu! and instantly he was shriveled and burned into stone.

"Then said they to the animals that they had changed into stone: 'That ye may not be evil unto men, but that ye may be a great good unto them, have we changed you into rock everlasting. By the magic breath of prey, by the heart that shall endure forever within you, shall ye be made to serve instead of to devour mankind.'"

"Thus was the surface of the earth hardened and scorched and many of all kinds of beings changed to stone. Thus, too, it happened that we find, here and there throughout the world, their forms, sometimes large like the beings themselves, sometimes shriveled and distorted. And we often see among the rocks the forms of many beings that live no longer, which shows us that all was different in the 'days of the new.'

"Of these petrifications, which are of course mere concretions or strangely eroded rock forms, the Zuñi say, 'Whomsoever of us may be met with the light of such great good fortune may see (discover, find) them and should treasure them for the sake of the sacred (magic) power which was given them in the days of the new.' " Such is the Zuñi philosophy of the fetish.

FETISH NECKLACE OF HUMAN FINGERS; CHEYENNE.
(BOURKE)

A fetish is acquired by a person, a family, or a people for the purpose of promoting welfare. In return, the fetish requires from its owner worship in the form of prayer, sacrifice, feasts, and protection, and from its votaries it receives ill or good treatment in accordance with the character of its behavior toward them. Some fetishes are regarded as more efficacious than others. The fetish which loses its repute as a promoter of welfare gradually becomes useless and may degenerate into a sacred object—a charm, an amulet, or a talisman—and finally into a mere ornament. Then other fetishes are acquired, to be subjected to the same severe test of efficiency in promoting the well-being of their possessors.

The fetish is clearly segregated from the group of beings called tutelars, or guardian spirits, since it may be bought or sold, loaned or inherited, while, so far as known, the tutelar is never sold, loaned, or, with the Iroquois, inherited.

Among the Santee and the Muskogean and Iroquoian tribes the personal tutelary, having a different origin, is scrupulously discriminated from all those objects and beings which may be called fetishes. The tutelary has a particular name as a class of beings. Rev. John Eastman says that this is true of the Santee, and it is probably true of many other tribes. Some fetishes are inherited from kindred, while others are bought from neighboring tribes at a great price, thus constituting a valuable article of intertribal commerce. It is also acquired by choice for multifarious reasons.

A person may have one or many fetishes. The name fetish is also applied to most of the articles found in the medicine sack of the shaman, the pindikosan of the Chippewa. These are commonly otter, snake, owl, bird, and other skins; roots, bark, and berries of many kinds; potent powders, and a heterogeneous collection of other things employed by the shaman.

A fetish is not a product of a definite phase of religious activity, much less is it the particular prerogative of any plane of human culture; for along with the adoration of the fetish goes the worship of the sun, moon, earth, life, trees, rivers, water, mountains, and storms as the embodiment of as many personalities. It is therefore assign the fetish to the artificial stage of religion sometimes called hecastotheism. The fetish must be carefully distinguished from the tutelary of every person. Among the Iroquois these are known by distinct names, indicative of their functions: ochi-na'k'ën'da' for fetish, and oiäron' for the tutelary.

WHALE FETISH OF WOOD; WESTERN ESKIMO. (MURDOCH)

Mooney says, in describing the fetish, that it may be "a bone, a feather, a carved or painted stick, a stone arrowhead, a curious fossil or concretion, a tuft of hair, a necklace of red berries, the stuffed skin of a lizard, the dried hand of an enemy, a small bag of pounded charcoal mixed with human blood—anything, in fact, which the owner's medicine dream or imagination might suggest, no matter how uncouth or unaccountable, provided it be easily portable and attachable. The fetish might be the inspiration of a dream or the gift of a medicine-man, or even a trophy taken from a slain enemy, or a bird, animal, or reptile; but, however insignificant in itself, it had always, in the owner's mind at least, some symbolic connection with occult power. It might be fastened to the scalp-lock as a pendant, attached to some part of the dress, hung from the bridle bit, concealed between the covers of a shield, or guarded in a special repository in the dwelling. Mothers sometimes tied the fetish to the child's cradle.

WILDCAT FETISH OF THE CHASE; ZÜRI. (CUSHING)

"A fetish noted among the Sioux is described as the image of a little man, which was inclosed in a cylindrical wooden case and enveloped in sacred swan's down (Riggs). A hunting and divining fetish among the Cherokee consisted of a transparent crystal, which its owner kept wrapped up in buckskin in a sacred cave and occasionally fed by rubbing over it the blood of a deer. The Pueblo tribes have numerous war and hunting fetishes of stone, small figurines cut to resemble various predatory animals, with eyes of inlaid turquoise and one or more arrowheads bound at the back or side, and smeared with frequent oblations of blood from the slain game. The protective amulet sometimes took the form of a small figurine of a bird or other animal swift in flight, as the hawk; silent in movement, as the owl; or expert in dodging, as the dragonfly. In all tribes the nature and mysterious origin of the personal fetish or 'medicine' were the secret of the individual owner or of the maker, who, as a rule, revealed it only to one formally chosen as heir to the mystic possession and pledged in turn to the same secrecy."

FETISH OF DRIED BEES IN BOX; WESTERN ESKIMO. (MURDOCH)

Consult Bourque in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Clark, Indian Sign Language, 1885; Cushing, Zuñi Fetishes, 2d Rep. B. A. E., 1883; Jesuit Relations, Thwaites ed., 1896-1901; Lafitau, Mœurs des Sauvages Américains, 1724; Maximilian, Travels, 1843; Müller, Orig. and Growth of Religion, 1879; Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899; Riggs, Gospel Among the Dakotas, 1869.

(J. N. B. H.)

Fetkina. A Chnagmiut village on the N. arm of the Yukon delta, Alaska; pop. 30 in 1880.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 111, 1884.

Fetutlin. A Hankutchin village of 106 people on upper Yukon r., Alaska, near the mouth of Forty-mile cr.—Petroff, 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. David's people.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 62, 1880. Fetoutlin.—Petroff, 10th Census, Alaska, 12, 1884.

Few that Lived (The). A former Yanktonai band under chief Two Bears.—Culbertson in Smithsonian Rep. 1850, 141, 1851.

Fife. An Upper Creek chief, called James or Jim Fife, who flourished in the early years of the 19th century, and whose importance arose chiefly from the aid he rendered Gen. Jackson in the latter's fight with the Creeks, Jan. 22, 1814, on Tallapoosa r. near the mouth of Emuckfau cr., Ala. In this battle, Fife, who had joined Jackson with 200 warriors at Talladega, not only saved Coffee's division from defeat when hard pressed by fearful odds, but turned the tide of battle in favor of Jackson's army. "But for the promptness of Fife and his warriors," says Drake (Ind. Chiefs, 104, 1832), "doubtless the Americans must have retreated." He signed the treaty of Indian Springs, Ga., Feb. 12, 1825, only as representing Talladega, and is not included among "the chiefs and headmen of the Creek nation" who signed the supplementary treaty. (c. t.)

Fife's Village. A former Upper Creek village situated a few miles E. of Talladega, Ala.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. cviii, 1899.

Fightingtown (mistranslation of Walás'-unúl'st'i'q'i, 'place of the plant walás'-unúl'st'i', i. e., 'frog fights with it'). A former Cherokee settlement on Fightingtown cr., near Morganton, Fannin co., Ga.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 545, 1900.

Finhalui (Fin'-hálui, 'high log'). A former Lower Creek town, probably in Georgia, with 187 heads of families in 1832. A swamp bearing the name Finholoway is in Wayne co., Ga., between lower Altamaha and Satilla rs. (A. S. G.)

Fin'-hálui.—Gatschet, Creek, Migr. Leg., I, 130, 1884. High Log.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854.

Finhioven (Fin-hi-öven). A chief of the Kadohadacho in 1771. He guided the Wichita from upper Red r. to Natchitoches, La., and witnessed the treaty made between the latter tribe and the Spanish governors of Louisiana and Texas, Oct. 27, 1771. He is referred to in the manuscript record of this event as "gran casique" of the Kadohadacho. (H. E. B.)

Fire Lodge. One of the former Dakota bands below L. Traverse, Minn.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 102, 1860.

Fire-making. Two methods of making fire were in use among the American aborigines at the time of the discovery. The first method, by flint-and-pyrites (the progenitor of flint-and-steel), was practised by the Eskimo and by the northern Athapascan and Algonquian tribes ranging across the continent from Stikine r. in Alaska to Newfoundland and around the entire Arctic coast, and also throughout New England; as well as by the tribes of the N. Pacific coast. The inference is that this method of fire-making at one time was general in this area, but the observations on which its distribution is based are from widely separated localities in which it is invariably used in connection with fire-making by wood friction. It appears probable that flint-and-pyrites, in view of its distribution in northern Europe, was introduced into America through Scandinavian contact, or is accultural either from Europe or Asia. The flint-and-steel is clearly an introduction of recent times.

The second method, by reciprocating motion of wood on wood and igniting the ground-off particles through heat generated by friction, was widespread in America, where it was the most valued as well as the most effectual process known to the aborigines. The apparatus, in its simplest form, consists of a slender rod or drill and a lower piece or hearth, near the border of which the drill is worked by twisting between the palms, cutting a socket. From the socket a narrow canal is cut in the edge of the hearth, the function of which is to collect the powdered wood ground off by the friction of the drill, as within this wood meal the heat rises to the ignition point. This is the simplest and most widely diffused type of fire-generating apparatus known to uncivilized man. Among the Eskimo and some other tribes the simple two-piece fire drill became a machine by the use of a hand or mouth rest containing a stone, bone, or wood socket for the upper end of the drill, and a cord with two handles or string on a bow for revolving the drill. By these inventions uniform and rapid motion and great pressure were effected, rendering it possible to make fire with inferior wood. The four-part drill consisted of two kinds: (a) The cord drill, which requires the cooperation of two persons in its working, and (b) the bow drill, which enables one person to make fire or to drill bone and ivory. The distribution of these varieties, which are confined to the Eskimo and their neighbors, follows no regular order; they may be used together in the same tribe, or one or the other may be used alone, although the presumption is that the cord drill is the older. The hearth alone embodies two interesting modifications which reflect the environment. In one the canal leads down to a step or projection from the side of the hearth, and in the other the drilling is done on a longitudinal slot in the middle of the hearth, the object in both cases being to prevent the fire from falling into the snow. These features also seem to have an indiscriminate distribution in the area mentioned.

MAKING FIRE WITH SIMPLE ROD DRILL REVOLVED BETWEEN THE HANDS; HUPA

The pump drill has been employed for fire-making only among the Onondaga of Canada, who used it in making sacred fire for the White-dog feast; but the pump drill is of little practical use in fire-making. From the Onondaga also there is an example of the fire plow like that of the Polynesians, in which a stick is held at an angle between the hands and rubbed back and forth along a plane surface, cutting a groove in which the wood meal produced by friction ignites. The appearance of these diverse methods in one tribe, in an area where the simple drill was common, leads to the assumption that they are of recent introduction. There is no other evidence that the fire plow ever existed in the western hemisphere.

The wood selected for the fire drill varied in different localities, the proper kinds and qualities being a matter of acquired knowledge. Thus the weathered roots of the cottonwood were used by the Pueblos; the stems of the yucca by the Apache; the root of the willow by the Hupa and Klamath; cedar by the N. W. coast tribes; elm, maple, and buttonwood by the eastern Indians. In some instances sand was placed in the fire cavity to increase friction; often two men twirled the drill alternately for the purpose of saving labor or when the wood was intractable.

A similar discrimination is observed in the selection of tinder. The Eskimo prized willow catkins; the Indians of the N. W. coast used frayed cedar bark; other tribes used fungi, softened bark, grass, or other ignitable material. Touchwood or punk for preserving fire was obtained from decayed trees, or some form of slow match was prepared from bark. From the striking of a spark to the well-started campfire considerable skill and forethought were required. The glowing coal from the fire drill was usually made to fall into a small heap of easily ignitable material, where it was encouraged by fanning or blowing until actual flame was produced; or the spark with the small kindling was gathered in a bunch of grass or a strip of bark and swung in the air.

Fire-making formed an important feature of a number of ceremonies. New fire was made in the Green-corn ceremony of the Creeks (see Busk), the White-dog feast of the Iroquois, the New-fire and Yaya ceremonies of the Hopi, and among many other tribes in widely separated localities. There are also many legends and myths grouped about the primitive method of obtaining fire at will. The Cherokee and other southern tribes believed that a perpetual fire burned beneath some of the mounds in their country, and the Natchez built their mounds with a view, it is said, of maintaining a perpetual fire. On the introduction of flint-and-steel and matches the art of fire-making by the old methods speedily fell into disuse among most tribes and was perpetuated only for procuring the new fire demanded by religious rites. See Drills and Drilling, Illumination.

Consult Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt. 3, 1905; Hough in Rep. Nat. Mus., 1888 and 1890. (w. H.)

First Christian Party. A division of the Oneida at the period of the removal to Green bay, Wis., and afterward.—Washington treaty (1828) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 621, 1873.

Fish-eating Creek. A Seminole settlement with 32 inhabitants in 1880, situated 5 m. from the mouth of a creek that empties into L. Okeechobee, Manatee co., Fla.—MacCauley in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 478, 1887.

Fish-e-more. See Enpishemo.

Fishhooks. Starting from the simple device of attaching the bait to the end of a line, the progressive order of fishhooks used by the Indians seems to be as follows: (a) The gorge hook, a spike of bone or wood, sharpened at both ends and fastened at its middle to a line, a device used also for catching birds; (b) a spike set obliquely in the end of a pliant shaft; (c) the plain hook; (d) the barbed hook; (e) the barbed hook combined with sinker and lure. This series does not exactly represent stages in invention; the evolution may have been effected by the habits of the different species of fish and their increasing wariness. The material used for hooks by the Indians was wood, bone, shell, stone, and copper. The Mohave employed the recurved spines of certain species of cactus, which are natural hooks.

FISHHOOK AND LINE; HUDSON BAY ESKIMO. (TURNER)

Data on the archeology of the fishhook have been gathered from the Ohio mounds and the shell-heaps of Santa Barbara, Cal., unbarbed hooks of bone having been found on a number of Ohio sites and gorge hooks at Santa Barbara. The fishhook of recent times may be best studied among the N. Pacific tribes and the Eskimo of Alaska. The Makah of Washington have a modified form of the gorge hook, consisting of a sharpened spine of bone attached with a pine-root lash to a whalebone. British Columbian and s. Alaskan tribes used either a simple hook of bent wood having a barb lashed to a point, or a compound hook consisting of a shank of wood, a splint of pine-root lashed at an angle of 45° to its lower end, and a simple or barbed spike of bone, wood, iron, or copper lashed or set on the outer end of the splint. Eskimo hooks consisted frequently of a shank of bone with a curved, sharpened spike of metal set in the lower end, or several spikes were set in, forming a gig. Usually, however, the Eskimo hook had the upper half of its shank made of stone and the lower half of ivory, in which the unbarbed curved spike of metal was set, the parts being fastened together by lashings of split quill. A leader of quill was attached to the hook and a bait of crab carapace was hung above the spike. This is the most complex hook known in aboriginal America.

FISHHOOKS OF WESTERN ESKIMO. (MURDOCH)

BONE FISHHOOK; ARKANSAS; ACTUAL SIZE. (RAU)

Lines and poles varied like the hook with the customs of the fishermen, the habits of the fish, and the environment. The Eskimo used lines of knotted lengths of whalebone quill, hair, or sinew; the N.

Pacific tribes, lines of twisted bark, pine root, and kelp; and other tribes lines of twisted fiber. Short poles or none were used by the Eskimo and N. Pacific tribes. In other regions it is probable that long poles of cane or saplings were used. In some regions, as on the N. W. coast, a trawl, consisting of a series of hooks attached by leaders to a line, was used for taking certain species of fish. The Haida, according to Swanton, made a snap hook, consisting of a hoop of wood, the ends of which were held apart by a wooden peg. This peg was displaced by the fish on taking the bait, and the ends of the hoop snapped together, holding the fish by the jaw. (See Fishing.)

Consult Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 1888; Goddard in Univ. Cal. Publ., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., 1, 1903; Hoffman in 14th Rep. B. A. E. pt 2, 1896; Holmes in 2d Rep. B. A. E., 1883; Mills (1) in Ohio Archaeol. and Hist. Quar., ix, no. 4, 1901, (2) ibid., xv, no. 1, 1906; Moore (1) in Jour. Acad. Nat. Sci. Phila., xi, 1899, (2) ibid., xii, 1903, (3) ibid., xiii, 1905; Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pt 1, 1899; Niblack in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1888, 1890; Palmer in Am. Nat., xii, no. 6, 1878; Putnam in Wheeler Surv. Rep., vii, 1879; Rau in Smithsonian. Cont., xxv, 1884; Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., ii, Anthropol., 1, 1900; Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 1894. (W. H.)

Fishing. At the first coming of the Europeans the waters of this continent were found teeming with food fish, the great abundance of which quickly attracted fleets of fishermen from all civilized parts of the Old World. The list of species living in American waters utilized by the Indians would fill a volume. The abundance or scarcity of this food on the Atlantic coast varied with the season. In spring the fish made their appearance in vast shoals in the spawning beds of the coast and in the bays and rivers. Capt. John Smith relates, in his History of Virginia, early in the 17th century, that on one occasion fish were encountered in such numbers in the Potomac as to impede landing from his boat. The annual spring run of herring above Washington is still almost great enough to warrant the assertion. Fish life varied with locality and season. On the northern and eastern coasts the fish disappeared to a great extent when the waters became cold at the approach of winter, and many northern fishes went to more southerly waters. Among the better known food products furnished by the waters of the country may be mentioned the whale, sea lion, seal, otter, swordfish, sturgeon, porpoise, cod, haddock, halibut, pollock, salmon, trout, herring, shad, perch, bass, mackerel, flounder, eel, plaice, turbot, white-fish, catfish, smelt, pike, dogfish, and all varieties of shellfish. By some tribes, as the Apache, Navaho, and Zuni, fish were tabu as food; but where fish was used at all by the Indians, practically everything edible that came from the water was consumed. The salmon of the Pacific coast are still found in enormous schools, and in the canning industry hundreds of persons are employed. Lobsters and crabs

COPPER FISHHOOK; WISCONSIN; ACTUAL SIZE. (RAU)

WATTLE-WORK FISH TRAP OF THE VIRGINIA INDIANS.
(HARriot, 1585)

CARRYING FISH IN A BASKET;
VIRGINIA INDIANS. (HARriot)

furnished no inconsiderable food supply, while the vast deposits of shells along all tidewater regions, as well as many of the interior rivers, testify to the use made of shellfish by the aborigines; they not only supplied a large part of the daily food of the people but were dried for time of need. Shellfish were dug or taken by hand in wading and by diving. Salmon and herring eggs formed one of the staple articles of diet of the tribes of the N. Pacific coast. To collect herring eggs these tribes laid down under water at low tide a row of hemlock branches, which were held in position with weights; then branches were fastened together, and a float was fixed at one end, bearing the owner's mark. When these boughs were found to be covered with eggs they were taken into a canoe, carried ashore, and elevated on branches of a tree stripped of its smaller limbs, where they were left to dry. When first placed in position the eggs adhered firmly to the boughs, but on taking them down great care had to be exercised, because they were very brittle and were easily knocked off. Those not immediately consumed were put up in the intestines of animals and laid aside for winter use. It is recorded in the Jesuit Relations that many eels came to the mouth of St Lawrence r. and were trapped by the Indians, who made long journeys to get the season's supply.

ALASKAN ESKIMO HARPOON; FORESHAFT AND HEAD.
(MURDOCH)

On the middle and s. Atlantic coast fish are found during the greater portion of, if not throughout, the year, while farther n. fishing is confined more to the spawning seasons and to the months when the waters are free of ice. Experience taught the natives when to expect the coming of the fish and the time when they would depart. In methods of capturing sea food the native had little to learn from the white man, even in killing the whale (which was treated as royal game on the coast of Vancouver id.), the sealion, or the seal, or in taking shellfish in the waters of the ocean and in the smallest streams.

ALASKAN ESKIMO BOX FOR CONTAINING HARPOON HEADS.
(MURDOCH)

Large fish and marine mammals were captured by means of the harpoon, while the smaller ones were taken by the aid of bow and arrow, gigs, net, dull, trap, or weir. Fires or torches were used along the shore or on boats, the gleam of which attracted the game or fish to the surface, when they were easily taken by hand or with a net. Among the Cherokee, Iroquois, and other tribes, fish were drugged with poisonous bark or other parts of plants; in parts of California extensive use was made of soap root and other plants for this purpose. Carved fishhooks (q. v.) of shell and bone have been found in shell-heaps and graves in the interior. In shape these resemble the hooks of metal from Europe, though the natives of the Pacific coast used fishhooks of wood and bone combined, made in so primitive a manner as to indicate aboriginal origin. Another ingenious device employed along the N. Pacific coast for catching fish consisted of a straight pin, sharp at both ends and fastened to a line by the middle; this pin was run through a dead minnow, and, being gorged by another fish, a jerk of the string caused the points to pierce the mouth of the fish, which was then easily taken from the water. Artificial bait, made of stone and bone combined, was used as a lure, and was quite as attractive to fish as is the artificial bait of the civilized fisherman.

ALASKAN ESKIMO
STONE SINKER; 1-2.
(RAU)

Still another ingenious way of catching fish was by "pinching," by means of a split stick, which, like the gig, held the fish fast.

In shallow rivers low walls were built from one side of the stream to the other, having a central opening through which fish were forced into a trap. Brushwood mats were also made, which were moved along like seines, so as to drive the fish into shallow or narrow places, where they were readily taken by the hand or with dipnets. Along the shores of rapid streams men stationed themselves on rocks or staging and speared fish as they passed up or down stream. During winter, when the northern waters were frozen, holes were cut in the ice, and through these fish were shot, speared, or netted.

ALASKAN ESKIMO NET
SINKER. (NELSON)

Probably the most primitive of all methods of fishing, however, by which many salmon were and doubtless are still captured, was that of knocking them on the head with a club. After a great run of fish had subsided, single ones were caught in shallow water by any of the above methods. There are still indications that from an early period a trade existed between the fishing Indians and those of the interior who gained their livelihood by other means. Great supplies of fish were cured by drying in the sun or over fires, and sometimes the product was finely ground and packed in skins or baskets for future use. See Food.

Consult Adair, Hist. Am. Inds., 1775; Boas (1) in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 1888, (2) in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xv, pt. 1, 1901; Dawson, Queen Charlotte Ids., 1880; Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt. 3, 1905; Gatschet in Am. Anthropol., v, 361, 1892; Goddard in Univ. Cal. Publ., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., i, 1903; Jesuit Relations, Thwaites ed., i-LXXIII, 1896-1901; Lawson, Hist. Carolina, 340, 1714, repr. 1860; Lewis and Clark, Orig. Jour., i-VIII, 1904-05; Margry, Découvertes, v, 81, 1883; Morice in Trans. Can. Inst., 1893; Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 1, 1889; Rau, Prehistoric Fishing, 1884; Smith, Hist. Va., repr. 1819. Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 1894. (J. D. M.)

Fiskernaes. An Eskimo settlement and Danish trading post, 90 miles S. of Godthaab, w. Greenland.—Kane, Arct. Explor., i, 21, 1856.

Five Civilized Tribes. A term used both officially and unofficially in modern times to designate collectively the Cherokee, Chickasaw, Choctaw, Creek, and Seminole tribes in Indian Territory, applied on account of the advance made by these tribes toward civilized life and customs. The term appears in the reports of the Indian Office as early as 1876, when the agent reported (p. 61) that each tribe "had a constitutional government, with legislative, judicial, and executive departments, conducted upon the same plan as our State governments, the entire expenses of which are paid out of their own funds."

There was, however, at that date no court with jurisdiction to try cases where an Indian was one party and a citizen of the United States or a corporation was the other, but this lack has since been supplied. Some of the tribes, notably the Cherokee, have had their laws and the acts of their councils printed.

These five tribes differed from most others in the fact that their lands were held not on the same basis as reservations but by patents or deeds in fee simple, with certain restrictions as to alienation and reversion—those conveyed to the Cherokee Nation, Dec. 31, 1838, forever upon condition that they "shall revert to the United States if the said Cherokee Nation becomes extinct or abandons the same"; those to the Choctaw Nation, Mar. 23, 1842, in fee simple to them and their descendants, "to inure to them while they shall exist as a nation, and live on it, liable to no transfer or alienation, except to the United States or with their consent"; those to the Creek tribe, Aug. 11, 1852, "so long as they shall exist as a nation and continue to occupy the coun-

DIPNET OF THE HAIDA.
(NIBLACK)

ALASKAN ESKIMO FISH
SPEAR; I-B.
(MURDOCH)

try hereby conveyed to them." Although the lands were held in fee simple, the right to alienate them except to the United States or with its consent does not appear to have passed to the grantees. The title is defined as a "base, qualified, or determinable fee, with only a possibility of reversion to the United States (U. S. v. Reese, 5 Dill., 405). The right of these tribes to cut, sell, and dispose of their timber, and to permit mining and grazing within the limits of their respective tracts was for a time limited to their own citizens, but this right has been somewhat extended, though the exercise of it is still subject to approval by the proper United States authorities. The title of the Chickasaw Nation to their lands in Indian Ter. was obtained from the Choctaw in accordance with treaties with the United States, while that of the Seminole was obtained from the Creeks, these two tribes being granted their lands on the same basis and with the same title and privileges as the United States granted the lands to the Choctaw and the Creeks. The territory thus assigned to these five tribes within the limits of Indian Ter. amounted to 19,475,614 acres, or about 30,431 sq. m., an area equal to that of South Carolina, and equivalent to 230 acres for each man, woman, and child of the entire population (84,507) of the five tribes.

The treaties of 1866 with the several tribes all provided for the holding of a general council to be composed of delegates from each tribe in Indian Ter., and the Choctaw and Chickasaw treaty also provides that this general council shall elect a delegate to Congress whenever Congress shall authorize the admission into its body of an official who shall represent Indian Ter. Although some of the tribes have made an effort to bring about the results contemplated in these treaty stipulations, nothing effectual in this direction has been accomplished. By act of Congress Feb. 8, 1887, every Indian born in the United States who receives land in allotment and takes up "his residence separate and apart from any tribes of Indians therein and has adopted the habits of civilized life," is declared a citizen of the United States; but the Five Civilized Tribes were excepted from the provisions of this act. By act of Mar. 3, 1901, however, this section was amended by inserting after the words "civilized life" the words "and every Indian in Indian Territory," thus declaring every Indian of that territory to be a citizen of the United States. By act of May 2, 1890, the laws of Arkansas, so far as applicable, were extended over Indian Ter. until Congress should otherwise provide. United States courts and courts of special jurisdiction have also been established in the Territory. By sec. 16 of the act of Mar. 3,

1893, the President was authorized to appoint three commissioners (subsequently changed to five), to negotiate with the five tribes for the allotment in severalty of their lands, thus extinguishing the tribal title thereto. (See Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes.)

On the abolition of slavery the problem of determining the status and relations of the freedmen in the Five Civilized Tribes became a difficult one, though by treaties of 1866 it was agreed that they should be subject to the same laws as the Indians and be entitled to a portion of the land (the rights in this respect differing in the different tribes); but questions respecting other matters, as school privileges, have proved troublesome factors. In some of the tribes negroes have separate schools, and by the act of Congress of June 28, 1898, the freedmen were excluded from participating in the royalties on coal and asphalt, or in the school funds arising therefrom. By the same act and the acts of Mar. 1, 1901, and July 1, 1902, the tribal governments of these tribes were to cease Mar. 4, 1906, but by resolution of Feb. 27, 1906, the time was extended one year. Freedmen are, however, citizens in all the tribes. Consult the articles on the tribes composing the Five Civilized Tribes. (C. T.)

Flakes. The term flake is often used by archeologists synonymously with chip and spall, but it is most commonly applied to the long, thin slivers of flint or other brittle stone designed for use as cutting implements or produced without particular design in the ordinary course of implement making. When systematically made in numbers for use as knives or scrapers or for other purposes, a roughly cylindrical or somewhat conical piece of fine-grained material was selected or made, and the flakes were removed by strokes with a hammer delivered on one of the ends near the margin, the fracture extending the entire length or most of the length of the core and producing a flake, flat or slightly convex on the inside, sharp on the edges, and having an outer surface or back with one or more angles or facets according to the previous contour of the particular part of the original surface of the core removed. The manufacture of flakes for knives, extensively carried on by the ancient Mexicans, is described as being accomplished by abrupt pressure with a wooden implement, one end placed against the shoulder of the operator and the other set upon the core at the proper point. The exact manner of utilizing the flake

FLINT FLAKES FOR USE AS KNIVES.

blades by the northern tribes is not known, but they were probably set in suitable handles as knives, or employed in making small arrowheads, scrapers, and the like. Flakes and chips are produced by identical implements, the latter term being generally applied to the shorter, more abrupt flakes or bits produced in the ordinary work of shaping implements by both percussion and pressure processes. The expression "chipped implements" is however very generally applied to all forms shaped by fracture processes. See Cores, Flaking implements, Hammers, Stonework. (W. H. H.)

Flaking implements. The shaping of stone by fracture processes is one of the earliest as well as one of the most important arts of primitive men. Two distinct classes of processes as well as two widely differing classes of implements are employed. Fracture by percussion is accomplished by means of hammers of stone or other hard material (see Hammers, Stonework), and fracture by pressure employs a number of devices, perhaps the most usual among the northern tribes being bits of hard bone, antler, or ivory, somewhat resembling an awl in shape and often set in handles of wood or other suitable material. These are employed where the edges of the stone under treatment are sharp and rather thin. In using them the edge is firmly placed crosswise on the sharp edge of the brittle stone, or the point is set near the edge, and by a quick movement accompanied with strong pressure the flake is driven off. This operation is rapidly repeated, passing along the outline of the implement, alternating the sides, until the desired form is produced. The pieces under treatment may be held in various ways; for deep notching, which requires strong force, they are often laid flat on a pad of buckskin or other yielding material supported on a stable surface, and the bone point is made to remove the chips by a quick downward movement. Implements of metal are effectual in this particular form of the chipping work. Other devices mentioned by some writers are notched bones and pincers of bone, by means of which the sharp edge of the flint was chipped. For heavier work various contrivances enabling the operator to apply greater force were employed, but these are not well understood. It appears that a punch-like tool of bone or antler was sometimes used, the point being set, at the proper point, on the stone to be fractured, while the other end was struck with a hammer or mallet to remove the flake. For writings on the subject, see Stonework. (W. H. H.)

FLAKER; ALASKAN ESKIMO. THE FLAKING POINT OF HARD BONE IS AT THE LEFT. (MURDOCH)

Flandreau Indians. A part of the Santee who separated from the Mdewakanton and Wahpekute of the Santee agency, Nebr., in 1870, and settled in 1876 at Flandreau, S. Dak.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 27, 1876.

Flandreau Sioux.—Barber in Am. Nat., XVII, 750, 1885.

Flathead. A name applied to several different tribes usually owing to the fact that they were accustomed to flatten the heads of their children artificially. In S. E. United States the Catawba and Choctaw were sometimes designated by the term Flatheads, and the custom extended to nearly all Muskogean tribes as well as to the Natchez and the Tonika. In the N. W. the Chinook of Columbia r., many of the Vancouver id. Indians, and most of the Salish of Puget sd. and British Columbia were addicted to the practice, and the term has been applied to all as a body and to some of the separate divisions. Curiously enough, the people now known in official reports as Flatheads—the Salish proper (q. v.)—never flattened the head. Dawson implies (Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1891, sec. II, 6) that they were so named (Têtes-Plates) by the first Canadian voyageurs because slaves from the coast with deformed heads were among them. For the names of the tribes to which the term has been applied, see Flatheads in the index; consult also Artificial head deformation. (J. R. S.)

Flat-mouth. See Eshkebugecoshé.

Flechazos (Span: 'arrow or dart blows'). A name applied by the Spaniards in the latter part of the 18th century to the upper village of the Tawakoni settlement on the w. side of Brazos r., near Waco, Tex. The one below it was called Quiscat. One or the other of these villages was the Waco village. (H. E. B.)

Flint. Until recently the use of the term flint was restricted to nodular concretions found in chalk beds of Cretaceous age mainly in England, France, and other European countries, but recently obtained from Cretaceous strata in Arkansas and Texas. Although flint is classed as a variety of chalcedony, the name has been extended in popular usage to include various forms of chalcedonic minerals, as chert, hornstone, basanite, jasper, agate, and the like. The principal constituent of all these minerals is silica, and notwithstanding their great dissimilarity the distinctions are due almost entirely to manner of formation and included foreign substances. Such impurities, though they make up a very small percentage of the stone, produce upon exposure to atmospheric influences an infinite variety of coloring and great diversity of texture. The flints as thus defined were extensively employed by the aborigines in the manufacture of chipped implements, and the implements themselves are sometimes referred to as "flints." See Chalcedony, Chert, Quartz, Mines and Quarries. (G. F. W. H. H.)

Flint disks. Flattish objects of circular, elliptical, or almond-like outline produced by chipping away the outer portions of nodules having these approximate forms. The question has been earnestly debated whether these and kindred forms were for any practical or economic use, or whether they had some occult significance as votive offerings. They are very seldom found in graves and infrequently on village sites or about shops where implements were made. Many of them are of the blue nodular hornstone found in s. Illinois, in the vicinity of Wyandotte cave in s. Indiana, and in w. Kentucky and Tennessee, but no record has yet been made of the discovery in large numbers of such disks in any of these localities except the first. The range in size is generally from 3 to 8 in. in length or diameter, though a few exceed the latter dimension. The finest specimen known is from Tennessee; it is almost exactly circular, made of the Stewart co. flint, about 1 in. thick and 9 in. across. Flint disks as well as the more leaf-like blades are usually found in deposits or caches containing numerous nearly identical specimens. See Cache disks and blades, Storage and Caches. (W. H. H.)

FLINT DISK; TENNESSEE.
(DIAM., 9 IN.)

Florida Indians. A term almost as vague as the ancient geographic conception of Florida itself, used (Doc. Col. Hist. N. Y., vi, 243, 1855) to designate Indians who robbed a vessel stranded on the Florida keys in 1741-42. Schoolcraft (Ind. Tribes, vi, 47, 1857) refers to it as a term vaguely applied to the "Apalachian group of tribes." (A. S. G.)

Flowpahhaultin. As small body of Salish of Fraser superintendency, Brit. Col., in 1878.—Can. Ind. Aff., 79, 1878.

Flunmuda. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Focomaes. A Diegueño rancheria represented in the treaty of 1852 at Santa Isabel, s. Cal.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 132, 1857.

Folk-lore. See Mythology.

Fond du Lac. A Chippewa band residing on St Louis r., near Fond du Lac, E. Minnesota. They are now under the White Earth agency, numbering 107 in 1905. (J. M.)

Food. The areas occupied by the Indians may be classed as supplying, predominantly, animal food, vegetal food, and mixed diet. No strict lines separate these classes, so that in regions where it is commonly said that the tribes are meat eaters exclusively, vegetal food is also of importance, and vice versa. Vegetal food stuffs are (1) preagricultural, or the gathering of self-sown fruits, nuts, seeds, and roots; and (2) agricultural, or (a) the raising of root crops, originating in the harvesting of roots of wild plants, and (b) of cereal products, consisting chiefly of maize (q. v.) grown by the majority of the tribes, and wild rice (q. v.) in the area of the upper lakes, where a sort of semiagriculture was practised to some extent. (See Agriculture.)

MONO WOMEN HARVESTING SEEDS. (SANTA FÉ RAILWAY)

Animal food was obtained from the game of the environment, and the settlement and movements of some tribes depended largely on the location or range of animals, such as the buffalo, capable of furnishing an adequate food supply; while on the other hand, the limit of habitat of water animals, as the salmon, tended to restrict the range of other tribes to the places where the supply could be gathered. No pure hunter stage can be found, if it ever existed, for while the capture of animals devolved on the man and the preparation of food on the woman, the latter added to the diet substances derived from the vegetal kingdom. Similarly no purely agricultural stage with exclusively vegetal diet existed, and no aboriginal domestication (q. v.) of animals n. of Mexico is found except in the case of the turkey and the dog.

In general, in the n. portion of the continent the diet was three-fourths animal food; in the s. part it was three-fourths vegetal; while with the tribes of the coast, mountains, lakes, and plains, it varied according to the food supply. The absence of milk food, other than the maternal lactation, to a considerable extent limited the natural increase of population. The food supply also changed with the seasons, causing the diet at different periods of the year to vary in its ratio of animal to vegetal constituents, and another feature depended on religious customs and habits which modified or regulated the food used. For example, the Apache and Navaho will not eat fish or the flesh of the bear or beaver, and other tribes had tabu or totemic animals which, though useful for food, were not eaten (see Tabu). In inhospitable regions, such as that inland from the Texas coast in the 16th century, the natives subsisted on whatsoever they could find. Cabeza de Vaca wrote of the Yguazas: "Their support is principally roots, which require roasting two days; many are very bitter. Occasionally they take deer, and at times take fish; but the quantity is so small and the famine so great, that they eat spiders and the eggs of ants, worms, lizards, salamanders, snakes, and vipers that kill whom they strike; and they eat earth and wood, and all that there is, the dung of deer, and other things that I omit to mention; and I honestly believe that were there stones in that land they would eat them. They save the bones of the fishes they consume, of snakes, and other animals, that they may afterward beat them together and eat the powder." Almost as much may be said of the Maidu of California who, in addition to consuming every edible vegetal product, ate badgers, skunks, wildcats, and mountain lions; practically all birds except the buzzard; yellowjacket larvæ, grasshoppers, locusts, and crickets, and even salmon bones and deer vertebrae (Dixon).

Vegetal food comprised a vast array of the products of plant life, of which roots and seeds were the most valuable. The most important food plant possessed by the Indians was maize (q. v.) which formed and still forms their principal subsistence. Following maize in order of importance came beans, peas, potatoes, squashes, pumpkins, melons, and chile, which were grown in variety. Uncultivated plants also entered into the dietary, as seeds, roots, and flowers of grasses and other plants, or parts of plants used as greens, for flavoring, etc. In numberless cases wild plants have preserved tribes from starvation when cultivated crops failed. In the S. W., cactus and yucca fruits, mesquite beans, and the agave were most important elements of the food supply. As in Mexico, the roasted fleshy leaves and leaf matrix of the agave were prized as sweet, nourishing food (see Mescal). Tuckaho and other fungi were used for food by the eastern Indians; "tuckaho bread" was well known in the S. The n. Pacific tribes made much use of the sweet inner bark of the hemlock and spruce. Savors, flavors, and condiments, as well as sweets, were valued by the Indian, who was also fond of chewing gum. While salt was tabued by the Onondaga and lye substituted by some of the southern Indians, the former was in general use. In some cases salt was made by the evaporation of the water of salt springs; in other localities it was obtained in crystal form from salt lakes and springs, and commerce in this product was widespread. Chile, which is of Mexican origin, became known throughout the S. W., and saffron, an introduced plant, is still in use there to flavor and color food, as are also the yellow flowers of the squash vine. Throughout New England and s. e. Canada sugar was produced by the evaporation of maple sap (see Maple sugar); in the S. W. it was derived from the willow and the agave. In some localities clay was eaten, either alone or mixed with food or taken in connection with wild potatoes to mitigate the griping effect of this acrid tuber. In general, buffalo, the deer family, and fish were the animals most useful for food. Some woodland tribes depended on deer, while the coast and river tribes usually made special use of fish and other products of the waters. Amphibious mammals sustained the Eskimo, while the porcupine is said to have been the chief food animal of the Montagnais. The range of game animals influenced the range of man in America quite as much as the distribution of food plants predetermined his natural diffusion.

Contrary to popular belief the Indians, as a rule, preferred cooked food. The Eskimo, whose name signifies 'eaters of raw flesh', ate uncooked meat only when absence of fuel prohibited cooking, or as a side dish. Vegetal food especially requires the agency of fire to render it fit for human digestion, whereas animal food may be consumed in a raw state, certain parts, as the liver, often being eaten in this way. All the edible portions of the animal were put to use, and in many cases both animal and vegetal substances advanced toward putrefaction were preferred, as salmon eggs which were stored in sand, by the Alaskans, and immature corn in the ear which the Hurons are said to have soaked in water until it became putrid, when soup was made of it.

Among the Pueblo Indians cooking is carried to a remarkable degree of proficiency, approaching in variety and methods the art among civilized peoples. Most tribes knew how to prepare savory and nourishing dishes, some of which have been adopted by civilized peoples (see Hominy, Maize, Samp, Succotash, etc.). The methods of cooking among the meat-eating tribes were, in order of importance, broiling, roasting, and boiling, the last-named process often being that known as "stone boiling." The tribes whose diet was approximately vegetarian practised all the methods.

STONE-BOILING—LIFTING THE HOT STONES INTO THE FOOD BASKET; CALIFORNIA INDIANS. (HOLMES)

STONE-BOILING—REMOVING THE STONES FROM THE BOILING BASKET; CALIFORNIA INDIANS. (HOLMES)

The preparation of maize as food involved almost numberless processes, varying with the tribes. In general, when maize reached the edible stage the ears were roasted in pit ovens, and after the feasting the surplus of roasted ears was dried for future use. The mature grain was milled raw or parched, the meal entering into various mushes, cakes, ponies, wafers, and other bread. The grain was soaked in lye obtained from wood ashes to remove the horny envelope and was then boiled, forming hominy; this in turn was often dried, parched and ground, reparched and reground, making a concentrated food of great nourishing power in small bulk, which was consumed dry or in water as gruel. Pinole, consisting of ground parched corn, forms the favorite food of S. W. desert tribes. The fermentation of corn to make beer was not generally practised, and it is doubtful if the process was known in America before the discovery. A yeast formed by chewing corn has long been known to the Zuñi and Hopi at least, and the former know how to preserve it through the agency of salt. (See Fermentation.)

The Iroquois and other eastern tribes cooked maize with beans, meat, or vegetables. The Pueblos add wood-ash lye to their "paper bread," and prepare their bread and mushes with meat, greens, or oily seeds and nuts, besides using condiments, especially chile.

Vegetal food stuffs were preserved by drying, and among the less sedentary tribes were strung or tied in bundles for facility of transportation or storage. The preservation of maize, mesquite beans, acorns, etc., gave rise to granaries and other storage devices. Animal food, from its perishable character, was often dried or frozen, but at times was preserved by smoking. Dried meat was sometimes pulverized and mixed with berries, grease, etc., forming pemmican (q. v.), valued for use on journeys on account of its keeping properties. Fruits were pulped and dried for preservation. Nuts were often ground before being stored, as were also maize, grass seeds, and the legumes. Tubers were frequently stored in the ground or near the fireplace; the Virginian tribes preserved tubers for winter use in this way. (See Agriculture, Storage.)

Infusions of leaves, roots, etc., of various herbs were drunk by the Indians as medicine (see Black drink), but no stimulating beverage of the character of tea or coffee has been observed. Drinks made from fruit, as cider from manzanita berries, used by the tribes of California, and a beverage made from cactus fruit by the Pima and neighboring tribes of Arizona, are the fermented beverages best known.

In addition to the reports of the Bureau of American Ethnology, consult Barber, Moqui Food Preparation, Am. Nat., xii, 456, 1878; Barrows, Ethnobotany of Coahuilla Inds., 1900; Carr, Food of Certain American Indians and their Method of Preparing It, Proc. Am. Antiq. Soc., x, 155-190, 1895; Cabeza de Vaca, Narr., Smith trans., 1871; Coville, Wokas, A Primitive Food of the Klamath Inds., 1902; Cushing, Zuñi Breadstuffs, The Millstone, ix and x, Indianapolis, 1884-85; Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt. 3, 1905; Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., ix, 1896; Goddard in Univ. Cal. Publ., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., i, 1903; Holm, Descr. New Sweden, 1834; Hough (1) in Am. Anthropol., x, 1897, (2) ibid., xi, 1898; Jenkins, The Moki Bread, Pop. Sci.

Month., Jan., 1900; Jenks in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 1900; Mason (1) Migration and the Food Quest, Smithsonian Rep., 1894, (2) Aboriginal American Zootechny, Am. Anthropol., I, Jan., 1899; Palmer (1) in Am. Nat., XII, 402, 1878, (2) in Rep. Com'r of Agr. 1870, 1871; Payne, Hist. America, I, 376-400, 1892; Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 1877; Sagard-Theodat, Grand Voy., 1632, repr. 1865; Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I-VI, 1851-57; Sturtevant, Indian Corn and the Indian, Am. Nat., XIX, 225, 1885. See also the bibliographies under the articles above cited. (W. H.)

Foolish Dogs. An Hidatsa band according to Culbertson (Smithson. Rep., 1850, 143, 1851), but properly a warrior society.

Footprint sculptures. Among relics of undetermined use and significance left by the vanished tribes are numerous representations of human footprints, often regarded as actual footprints made while the rock material was still plastic. They are sculptured in slabs or masses, generally of sandstone, and show varying degrees of skill in execution. Representations of tracks of men and beasts also occur frequently in pictographs painted and sculptured on rock surfaces (see Track rock). In this connection they probably served to designate particular creatures or beings, the direction of their movements, the number of individuals, etc., but the larger well-sculptured footprints represented in museum collections probably had special significance as the reputed tracks of ancestors, of giants, or monsters, and may have been designed by cunning persons to deceive the uninitiated. The carvings represent sometimes a single footprint and again two or more in association, and are usually shallow, being rarely more than an inch in depth (see Pictography, Problematical objects). Consult Rau in Smithsonian. Cont., XXII, 22, 1876. (W. H. H.)

Foreman, Stephen. A Cherokee who became an active coworker with the Presbyterian missionaries among his people. He received an elementary education at the mission school at Candy's Creek, W. of Cleveland, Tenn., and after pursuing some preparatory studies under Rev. S. A. Worcester at New Echota, Ga., spent a year at Union Theological Seminary in Virginia and another at Princeton, N. J., in the study of theology. He was licensed to preach by the Union Presbytery of Tennessee about Oct. 1, 1833. Foreman is said to have preached with animation and fluency in the Cherokee language. With Mr Worcester he translated the Psalms and a large part of Isaiah into the Cherokee language.—Pilling, Bibliog. Iroq. Lang., Bull. B. A. E., 1888.

Forked Horn. One of the Dakota bands below L. Traverse, Minn.; probably Wahpeton or Sisseton.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 102, 1859.

Forks of the River Men. A band of the Arapaho, q. v.

Fort Ancient. A prehistoric Indian fortification in Warren co., Ohio. It is situated on a headland, from 260 to 280 ft high, which projects from a plateau and overlooks the E. bank of Miami r. The slopes are mostly steep and in several places precipitous. The place is naturally a strong one, the elevated area being flanked by two ravines that approach each other some distance back from the point of the bluff, forming a peninsula of this front part with a narrow isthmus behind it. This divides the fort into two unequal portions, the smaller one embracing the peninsula known as the "Old Fort," the other, known as the "New Fort," extending back and eastwardly on the plateau to a second but wider neck of land. The total area is estimated at about 100 acres.

FORT ANCIENT EMBANKMENT

The wall, which is chiefly of earth, follows closely the zigzag course of the bluff, except where it crosses the level neck of land in the rear of the fort. The work has been often described and figured, the first notice and plan being that given in the "Portfolio" (1809), from which Atwater's plan and description (Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., I, 1820) appear to have been in large part copied. About 20 years later a survey was made by Locke, whose description and plat appear in Trans. Assn. Am. Geologists, I, 1843. Locke's plat was copied by Squier and Davis, and is the one from which most subsequent figures have been taken; it is accurate in the main, but the elements have somewhat changed the configuration in subsequent years, additional ravines having been formed by water breaking through the wall at certain points. Evidences of wearing are observable at some of the ravines crossed by the wall, and a few of the smaller gullies appear to have been worn since the wall was built, although in most cases the adaptation of the wall to the slopes shows that these existed when it was erected. That gaps were left in the wall at the bottom of the few deep ravines that it crosses is evident from the form of the wall at these points, but nothing remains to indicate how these gaps were closed in case of attack. Although the wall is built chiefly of earth (mostly of clay) cast up from an inside ditch, it is partially underlaid at numerous points with stone. The total length of the wall, following all the bends, is 18,712 ft, or a little more than $3\frac{1}{2}$ m.; the height varies from 6 to 10 ft, except across the neck at the back of the fort where it reaches 18 or 19 ft. The solid contents probably do not exceed 3,000,000 cu. ft.

That Ft Ancient, so called, is a work of defense is evident from its character and situation, exhibited especially by the different methods adopted for defending its more vulnerable points. The only level approach was at the rear, which was protected by a high wall. On the x. the points more easily approached are usually narrow, sloping ridges, generally crossed at the upper terminus by a wall of ordinary height, the ridge immediately outside being cut down several feet in order to present a steep slope corresponding to the outer slope of the wall. On the other hand, where similar ridges form approaches from the s., and at some other points, the defenses are formed by raising the wall considerably above the normal height. The most vulnerable point appears to be at the isthmus separating the two forts, where the opposite walls have their nearest approach. Here a short space was undefended, though the ascent is by no means difficult. A short distance e. of the posterior wall of the new fort are two small mounds, a short distance apart, from each of which extends a low wall, or road as Atwater terms it, elevated about 3 ft, running nearly parallel about $\frac{1}{4}$ m., and forming an irregular semicircle about another small mound. A part of the area between these walls was paved with flat stones, remains of which now lie at a depth of 2 ft in the soil. Several small mounds and a number of stone graves which contained human remains were within the fort; these were explored by Moorehead, but nothing of special interest was found except the human remains. The greater portion of the area included in this inclosure is now the property of the State of Ohio and has been made a reservation under the care of the Ohio Archaeological and Historical Society.

The first purchase was made in accordance with an act of the legislature, Apr. 28, 1890, and the second purchase in pursuance of the act of Apr. 16, 1896.

For further information see, in addition to the works cited, Allen, Prehistoric World, 1885; Drake, Pictures of Cincinnati, 1815; Howe, Historical Collections of Ohio, 1898; MacLean, Mound Builders, 1879; Moorehead, Fort Ancient, 1890; Peet in Am. Antiq., Apr., 1878; Shepherd, Antiquities of Ohio, 1887; Thomas in Science, viii, Dec. 10, 1886. (C. T.)

MAP OF FORT ANCIENT, OHIO. (SQUIER AND DAVIS)

Fortification and Defense. The simplest defenses were furnished to the Indians by nature. In the forest regions battles were fought in the shelter of trees, and in stony sections from sheltering rocks. That war was waged and defensive measures were necessary in prehistoric times is shown by the remains of fortifications in the mound area of the United States. These are of different types, the most common being the so-called hill forts, where defensive walls of earth or stone surround a peak or hilltop or skirt a bluff headland, as at Ft Ancient (q. v.), Ohio. There are also circular, square, octagonal, and other inclosures on the lowlands which are generally supposed to have been built for defensive purposes, but they could hardly have been effectual unless stock-aded. There are, or were until recently, earthen embankments and inclosures in New York which, as Squier has shown, mark the sites of palisaded forts similar to those of the Iroquois observed by Champlain and Cartier. These were often polygonal, of double or triple stockades, as that at Hochelaga which Cartier says was of "three courses of rampires, one within another." Some were strengthened by braces and had beams running round them near the top, where stones and other missiles were placed ready to be hurled upon besiegers. The walls of some of these fortifications were 20 ft high. One of the polygonal forts in w. New York, however, was overlooked by a hill from which arrows could easily be shot into the inclosure. Most of the early figures of these forts represent them as having a single entrance between overlapping ends of the stockade; there is one, however (Underhill, News from America, 1638), which shows two overlappings. When first seen by the whites most of the villages from Florida to the Potomac were protected with surrounding stockades, which are represented in De Bry as single with one opening where the ends overlap. The construction of these surrounding palisades was practically the same, whether they inclosed a single house or 50 houses. In some sections a ditch was usually dug, both within and outside of the palisade. A few of the forts in s. New England were square, but the circular form generally prevailed (Willoughby in Am. Anthropol., VIII, no. 1, 1906). The fortress built by King Philip in the swamp at South Kensington, R. I., consisted of a double row of palisades, flanked by a great abatis, outside of which was a deep ditch. At one corner a gap of the length of one log was left as an entrance, the breastwork here being only 4 or 5 ft high; and this passage was defended by a well-constructed blockhouse, whilst the ditch was crossed by a single log which served as a bridge. Stockaded villages were also common as far w. as Wisconsin. Stone walls, which C. C. Jones considered defensive, have been observed on Stone mtn., Mt Yona, and other peaks of n. Georgia. De Soto found strongly fortified villages in his passage through the Gulf states and Arkansas.

Vancouver (Voy., III, 289, 1798) mentions villages on Kupreanof id., situated on the summits of steep, almost inaccessible rocks and fortified with strong platforms of wood laid upon the most elevated part of the rock, which projected at the sides so as to overhang the declivity. At the edge of the platform there was usually a sort of parapet of logs placed one upon another. This type, according to Swanton, was quite common on the N. W. coast. The Skagit tribe, according to Wilkes, combined dwellings and forts, and a similar custom was followed by some of the Haida clans. Wilkes mentions also inclosures 400 ft long, which were constructed of pickets about 30 ft long thrust deep into the ground, the interior being divided into roofed lodges. The Clallam also had a fort of pickets, 150 ft square, roofed over, and divided into compartments for families. No stockades seem to have been used by the Ntlakypamuk, but fortresses or fortified houses were at one time in use in a few places. These defenses, according to Boas, consisted of logs placed lengthwise on the ground one above another and covered with brush and earth, loopholes being left at places between the logs. According to the same authority, some of the stockades of British Columbia were provided with underground passages as a means of escape. It has been a general custom of the Indians of the plains, when in danger of being attacked by a superior force, to dig a pit or pits in the loose, generally sandy soil, throwing the earth around the margin to increase the height of the defense, the bank of a creek or a gully being selected when within reach, as defense of one side only was necessary. Native drawings of some of these defenses are given by Mooney (17th Rep. B. A. E., 271-274, 1898). In the S. W. the cliff-dwellings (q. v.) were places of security, easy of defense. The large compound structures known as pueblos (q. v.), in which the lower stories formerly had few or no wall openings, were fortifications as well as habitations, while in some cases the mesas on which they are built are in themselves well-nigh impregnable. In the drainage area of the Gila and Salado of s. Arizona there were defensive structures, as shown by their massive walls, in which the former inhabitants could take refuge in time of danger. Many of the isolated peaks of s. Arizona, n. Sonora, and Chihuahua contain the remains of stone breastworks and fortifications. See Architecture, Casa Grande, Cliff-dwellings, Habitations, Mounds, Pueblos, War and War discipline.

In addition to the authorities cited, consult Bancroft, Native Races, I, 1886; Bry, Collectiones Peregrinationem, 1590-1634; Jesuit Relations, Thwaites ed., I-LXXIII, 1896-1901; V. Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 1891; C. Mindeleff in 13th and 16th Reps. B. A. E., 1896, 1897; Squier, Antiq. of N. Y., 1851; Squier and Davis, Ancient Monuments, 1848; Thomas in 12th Rep. B. A. E., 1894. (c. r.)

Fort Yukon. A Kutchakutchin village and trading post of 107 inhabitants at the junction of Yukon and Porcupine rs., Alaska.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 62, 1884.

Foskey. See Black drink, Busk.

Fotshou's Village. A summer camp of one of the Taku chiefs of the Tlingit named Gochaí; 24 people were there in 1880.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

Fountain. A band of Upper Lillooet, inhabiting, with the Shuswap, the village of Huhilp, on the E. bank of Fraser r., above Lillooet, Brit. Col.; pop. 205 in 1904.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. II, 73, 1905.

Four Creek Tribes. A collective name for the Yokuts tribes or bands that resided on the four streams tributary to L. Tulare, Cal.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 80, 1853; Henley in Ind. Aff. Rep., 511, 1854.

Four Mile Ruin. A prehistoric ruin on a branch of the Little Colorado, 4 m. from Snowflake, Navajo co., Ariz. The ruin was excavated in 1897 by the Bureau of American Ethnology, the mortuary deposits unearched indicating relations with both Zuñi and Hopi clans. See Fewkes in 22d Rep. B. A. E., 136-164, 1904.

Four Nations. Mentioned with the Kawita and Kasihta as having a conference with the English near the mouth of Apalachicola r., Fla., in 1814 (Hawkins in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 859, 1832). Probably the Oakfuskee, with their 3 villages on the Chattahoochee, were meant.

(A. S. G.)

Fowl Town. A former Seminole town in N. W. Florida, about 12 m. E. of Ft. Scott, on Apalachicola r. at the Georgia boundary, containing about 300 inhabitants in 1820. The name has been given also in the plural as though including more than one town. It is distinct from Tutalosi, also called Fowl Town.

Fowl Town.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. 4, 64, 1848. Fowl Towns.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 364, 1822.

Foxes (trans. in plural of wagosh, 'red fox,' the name of a clan). An Algonquian tribe, so named, according to Fox tradition recorded by Dr. William Jones, because once while some Wagohügí, members of the Fox clan, were hunting, they met the French, who asked who they were; the Indians gave the name of their clan, and ever since the whole tribe has been known by the name of the Fox clan. Their own name for themselves, according to the same authority, is Mësh-kwa'kihügí, 'red-earth people,' because of the kind of earth from which they are supposed to have been created. They were known to the Chippewa and other Algonquian tribes as Utügamig, 'people of the other shore'.

When they first became known to the whites, the Foxes lived in the vicinity of L. Winnebago or along Fox r., Wis. Verwyst (Missionary Labors, 178, 1886) says they were on Wolf r. when Allouez visited them in 1670. As the tribe was intimately related to the Sauk, and the two were probably branches of one original stem, it is probable that the early migrations of the former corresponded somewhat closely with those of the latter. The Sauk came to Wisconsin through the lower Michigan peninsula, their traditional home having been N. of the lakes, and were comparatively newcomers in Wisconsin when they first became known to the French. One of their important villages was for some time on Fox r. The conclusion of Warren (Hist. Ojibways, 95, 1885) that the Foxes early occupied the country along the S. shore of L. Superior and that the incoming Chippewa drove them out, has the general support of Fox tradition. Nevertheless there is no satisfactory historical evidence that the Foxes ever resided farther N. than Fox r. in Wisconsin, and in none of their treaties with the United States have they claimed land N. of Sauk co. This restless and warlike people was the only Algonquian tribe against whom the French waged war. In addition to their disposition to be constantly at strife with their neighbors, they had conceived a hatred of the French because of the aid which the latter gave the Chippewa and others by furnishing firearms, and because they gathered the various tribes for the purpose of destroying the Foxes. The proposal to exterminate them was seriously considered in the French councils, and their destruction would earlier have been attempted but for the pleas interposed by Nicolas Perrot. Their character is briefly described by Charlevoix (Shea trans., v, 305, 1881) when he says they "infested with their robberies and filled with murders not only the neighborhood of the Bay [Green bay], their natural territory, but almost all the routes communicating with the remote colonial posts, as well as those leading from Canada to Louisiana. Except the Sioux, who often joined them, and the Iroquois, with whom they had formed an alliance, . . . all the nations in alliance with us suffered greatly from these hostilities." It was this tribe that in 1712 planned the attack on the fort at Detroit, and but for the timely arrival of friendly Indians and the bravery of the French commandant, Buisson, would undoubtedly have destroyed it. They were almost constantly at war with the Illinois tribes s. of them, and finally succeeded, in conjunction with the Sauk, in driving them from a large part of their country, of which they took possession. From their earliest known history they were almost constantly at war with the Chippewa dwelling n. of them, but usually without decided success, though often aided by the Sioux. It was by the Chippewa, together with the Potawatomi, Menominee, and the French, that their power was finally broken. About 1746, and perhaps for some few years previous, the Foxes lived at the Little Butte des Morts on the w. bank of Fox r., about 37 m. above Green bay. They made it a point, whenever a trader's boat approached, to place a torch upon the bank as a signal for the traders to come ashore and pay the customary tribute, which they exacted from all. To refuse was to incur their displeasure, and robbery would be the mildest penalty inflicted. Incensed at this exaction, Morand, a leading trader, raised a volunteer force of French and Indians, and after inflicting severe punishment on the Foxes in two engagements drove them down Wisconsin r. They settled on the n. bank about 20 m. from the mouth. About 1780, in alliance with the Sioux, they attacked the Chippewa at St Croix falls, where the Foxes were almost annihilated. The remnant incorporated with the Sauk, and although long officially regarded as one, the two tribes have preserved their identity.

FOX CHIEF

According to Dr William Jones (inf'n, 1906) the culture of the Foxes is that of the tribes of the eastern woodlands with some intrusive streaks from the plains. They were acquainted with wild rice, and raised corn, beans, squashes, and tobacco. They lived in villages in summer, the bark house being the type of the warm-weather dwelling; in winter they scattered and dwelt in oval flag-reed lodges. The social organization is rigid and is based on gentes with marriage outside of the gens. The gens and, with some exceptions, the name, followed the father. The Fox gentes are the Bear, Fox, Wolf, Elk, Big Lynx, Buffalo, Swan, Pheasant, Eagle, Sea, Sturgeon, Bass, Thunder, and Bear Potato. The mythology of the Foxes is rich. Beast fable prevails. The deities are many and some have clear definite character. The principal deity is Wisa'kü^a, the culture hero. His brother is Kiyapa'tü^a, or Chipayabosw^a, who presides over the spirit world at the setting of the sun. The belief in a cosmic substance called mīnitōwīwī, or mīnitōwīwīnī, is an essential element in their philosophy. Objects, animate or inanimate, imbued with this substance become the recipients of marked adoration. The Foxes practise many ceremonies, the principal one being the feast festival of the gentes. There is probably no other Algonquian community within the limits of the United States, unless it be that of the Mexican band of Kickapoo in Oklahoma, where a more primitive state of society exists.

Besides being warlike, the Foxes were described by neighboring tribes as stingy, avaricious, thieving, passionate, and quarrelsome; their bravery, however, was proverbial. Like most of the tribes of the region of the great lakes they were polygamists. They were familiar with both dug-out and birch-bark canoes. Spears and clubs were among their weapons of war. Schoolcraft states that a band of warriors seen by him wore headdresses consisting of red-dyed horsehair tied in such manner to the scalplock as to present the shape of the decoration of a Roman helmet. The rest of the head was completely shaved and painted. They wore breech-cloths, moccasins, and leggings, and the upper part of their bodies was painted; often the print of a hand in white clay was marked on the back or shoulder. They bore flags of feathers. Their "coat of arms" is described by Lahontan in heraldic terms: "A meadow sinople, crossed by a winding pale, with two foxes' gules at the two extremities of the river, in chief and point"—in other words, as his figure shows, an oblique mark representing a stream, with a fox at each end on opposite sides. He explains this "coat of arms" as the mark or symbol which, after a victory or successful raid, they paint on trees. (See Owen, Folk-lore of the Musquakie Inds., 1904.)

Guignes estimated them in 1728 at 200 warriors, but most of the estimates before the last half century give them from 1,500 to 2,000 souls. Lewis and Clark estimated them at 300 warriors, or 1,200 souls, in 1805. Since about 1850 the two tribes have been enumerated together. The 345 "Sauk and Fox of Mississippi" still (1905) in Iowa are said to be all Foxes. There are also 82 "Sauk and Fox of Missouri" under the Kickapoo school in Kansas. See Sauk.

(J. M. C. T.)

Be-see'-ke.—Riggs, Dakota Diet., 34, 1852 (Dakota name). Outagamias.—Lapham, Inds. of Wis., 16, 1870 (misprint). Dutagamis.—Lahontan, New Voy., i, 172, 1703 (misprint). Foxers.—Dalton (1783) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., x, 123, 1809. Foxes.—Albany conf. (1737) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vi, 104, 1855. Mecheaukais.—French trader (1766) quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 554, 1853. Mecheoukais.—French trader quoted by Smith, Bonquet's Exped., 69, 1766. Mecheoukais.—Heckewelder quoted by Buchanan, Sketches of N. Am. Inds., 156, 1824. Meskwa'kiag.—Jones in Am. Anthropol., vi, 370, 1904 ('red-earth people'; own name). Messenacks.—Hennepin, New Discov., 230, 1698 (Sioux name). Messeneqz.—Hennepin (1683) quoted by Shea, Discov. Miss. Val., 134, 1852. Miscouaquis.—Coxe, Carolana, map, 1741. Miskwukweyuk.—Jones, Ojibway Inds., 178, 1861 (trans. 'red-earth men'; said to be so called from wearing red blankets). Moshkos.—Loskiel (1794) quoted by Tenber, Tribes Hudson R., 336, 1872 (may be Mascouten). Mus-kwa'-ka-uk.—Morgan, Consang. and Affin., 288, 1871. Muskwake.—Tanner, Narr., 325, 1830. Muskwaki.—McGee in Am. Anthropol., xi, 88, 1898. Musquacki.—Maximilian, Trav., 106, 1843. Mus-quack-ki-uck.—Ibid. Musquakes.—Croghan (1759) quoted by Rupp, West Penn., 146, 1846. Musquakes.—Ibid., app., 332. Musquakies.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 161, note, 1855. Musquakink.—Meigs in Smithsonian, Rep. 1867, 414, 1872. Musquattamias.—Croghan (1765) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 780, 1856. Musquawkee.—Featherstonhaugh, Canoe Voy., ii, 26, 1847. Musquaki.—Army officer (1812) quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 555, 1853. Odagami.—Kelton, Ft. Mackinac, 154, 1884. Odagamaig.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 39, 1855. O-dug-am-eeg.—Warren (1852) in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 33, 1885 (Chippewa name: 'those who live on the opposite side'; from agaming, 'on the other side of the water'; and od, a personal and tribal prefix). Odugamies.—Ibid., 242. O-dug-aumeeeg.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 83, 1850. Onlogamies.—Brackenridge, La., 16, note, 1815 (misprint). Otagamies.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 184, 1855. Otagamis.—Maximilian, Trav., 102, 1843. Osheraca.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 21, 1822 (Winnebago name). Otagamies.—Kendall, Trav., ii, 295, 1809. Otagamies.—Hutchins (1778) quoted by Jefferson, Notes, 144, 1825. Otagamies.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 128, 1816. Otagamies.—Carver, Trav., 105, 1778. Ottar-car-me.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, vii, 93, 1905. Ot-tar-gar-me.—Lewis and Clark, Trav., 30, 1806. Ottigamie.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, ii, 335, 1852. Ottigamies.—Carver, Trav., 39, 1778. Ottiquamies.—Pike, Trav., 30, 1811. Ottogamis.—Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 266, 1816. Ouagoussac.—Jes. Rel. for 1673, quoted by Lapham, Inds. Wis., 4, 1870 (plural of wagosh, 'fox'). Otagami.—Jes. Rel. for 1667, 21, 1858. Otagamie-ock.—Owen, Folk-lore of Musquakie Inds., 18, 1904 ('other side of river people'). Otagamiouek.—Ibid. Otagamy.—Ibid. Otagomies.—Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 32, note, 1885. Otaouagamies.—Hennepin (1683), La., 119, 1698. Otagimis.—Nuttall, Jour., 184, 1821. Otaogamis.—Hennepin, New Discov., 257, 1698. Otagomis.—Coxe, Carolana, 48, 1741. Otaouagamis.—Hennepin, New Discov., 244, 1698. Otagomias.—Coxe, Carolana, map, 1741. Otagamies.—Croghan (1765) quoted in Monthly Am. Jour. Geol., 272, 1831. Otagaumie.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 513, 1878. Otagaumies.—Hutchins (1778) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, vi, 714, 1857. Otagaumias.—Prise de Possession (1671) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 803, 1855. Otagaumias.—Hennepin, New Discov., 98, 1698. Otagaumias.—Prise de Possession (1671) in Margry, Déc., i, 97, 1875. Penard.—Esnauds and Rapilly, map U. S., 1777 (misprint). Quacksis.—Albany conf. (1726) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., v, 791, 1855. Red Fox.—McGee in Am. Anthropol., xi, 88, 1898. Reiners.—Dalton (1783) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., x, 123, 1809. Renais.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, iii, 79, 1854. Renards.—Du Chesneau (1681) in Margry, Déc., ii, 267, 1877. Renars.—Lewis and Clark, Trav., 15, 1806. Renarz.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, vi, 93, 1905. Reynards.—Pike (1806) quoted in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 457, 1855. Skayshurunu.—Gatschet, Wyandot MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1881 ('fox people'; from skayshu, 'the red fox'; Huron name). Skenchiohron.—Jes. Rel. for 1640, 35, 1858 (Huron name). Skukiasagi.—Gatschet, Shawnee MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 (sing. Skuakias; Shawnee name, from M'skuakiasagi). Squaghkies.—Stone, Life of Brant, ii, 4, 1864. Squathegas.—Jour. Maj. Gen. Jno. Sullivan, 300, 1857. Squawkiehah.—Conover, Kanadesaga and Geneva MS., B. A. E. (Seneca name). Squawkihows.—Macaulay, N. Y., ii, 180, 1829 (improperly said to be the Erie). To-che-wah-cco.—Clark (1804) in Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, i, 190, 1904 (Arikara name). Utagamie.—Jones in Am. Anthropol., vi, 370, 1904 (Chippewa name: 'people of the other shore'). Wa'gushag.—Gatschet, Ojibwa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1878 ('foxes'; from wa'gush, 'fox'; a modern Chippewa name). Wakushég.—Gatschet, Potawatomi MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1878 ('foxes'; from wakushé, 'fox'; Potawatomi name, probably recent).

Foxes. An Arikara band.—Culbertson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1850, 143, 1851.

Foxes. A gens or secret order of the Hidatsa, according to Culbertson (Smithsonian. Rep. 1850, 143, 1851), but properly one of the war and dance societies.

Francisco. A Yuma chief. The Tonto Apache who murdered Royse Oatman and most of his family at the Gila bend, Ariz., Mar. 18, 1850, carried off Olive and Mary, the youngest children, 12 and 7 years of age, into slavery, and in 1852 sold them to the Mohave. These Indians treated them better than had the Tonto until a famine came, during which Mary died from starvation and cruelty. Young Lorenzo Oatman, who had escaped after being left for dead, endeavored to interest people in California in the fate of his sisters, but a searching party sent out from Ft. Yuma returned without finding trace of them. Finally Francisco, who happened to be at the fort in Jan., 1856, betrayed knowledge of the lost girls, and, impressed with fear of the troops, said he would bring the surviving captive if he had four blankets and some beads to pay for her. When Francisco came to the village the Mohave denied having Olive, having stained her skin with berries, but she spoke out and told who she was. Francisco then addressed them with such eloquent conviction that they consented to release the girl, and on the day set he brought her to the fort, where she was soon joined by her brother. Owing to his service in saving his tribe from chastisement by the militia, or to the rewards and praise he received from the whites, Francisco was chosen chief. He grew overbearing, but remained friendly to the whites. To this friendship his people attributed the ill luck that befell them in a raid that the river tribes undertook in 1857 against the Maricopa. The latter, reinforced by the Papago, won the battle at Maricopa wells, Ariz. Of 75 Yuma warriors all were slain save 3, and when the day turned against them they are believed to have killed the chief who led them to disaster. (F. H.)

Francis the Prophet. See Hillis Hadjo.

Frankstown. A village, probably of the Delawares, which seems to have been near the site of the present Frankstown, Blair co., Pa., in 1756. (J. M.)

Frankstown.—Pouchot map (1758) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 694, 1858. Franks Town.—Weiser (1748) in Rupp, West. Pa., app. 13, 1846. Franks-town.—Ibid., 20.

Frauds. See Pseudo Indian.

Frederiksdal. A Moravian missionary station in s. Greenland, close to C. Farewell.

Fredericstahl.—Kane, Arct. Explor., i, 453, 1856.

Frederikshaab. A missionary station in s. w. Greenland.—Crantz, Hist. Greenland, i, map, 1767.

French Indians. A term used by early English writers to designate the tribes in the French interest, especially the Abnaki and their congeners on the New England frontier.

French influence. The influence of the French colonists on the Indians began very early. The use of glass beads in barter gave an impetus to the fur trade, and the speedy introduction of other commodities of trade led to long-continued associations with the Iroquoian tribes in particular. The influence of the French missionaries on many of the Indian tribes was marked; for example, the Montagnais and the Huron in the early days. The supply of peltries was increased by furnishing the Indians with firearms, which enabled them to travel with impunity and gave them a superiority over the neighboring tribes which they were not slow to take advantage of; hence almost from the beginning the French settlers and the government of New France came into more or less sympathetic contact with several tribes of the country. This state of affairs arose both from the peaceful efforts of the missionaries and from the desire of the authorities to use the aborigines as a bulwark against the power of the English in North America. To her alliances with the Algonquian tribes of the great lakes and the region s. and e. of them, including New France and Acadia, France owed in great part her strength on this continent, while on the other hand the confederacy of the Iroquois, the natural enemies of the Algonquian peoples, contributed largely to her overthrow. The French character impelled the colonists to see in the Indian a fellow human being, and it is no wonder that the greatest intermixture between the Indian and the European, n. of the Mexican boundary, is represented by the mixed-bloods of Canada and the N. W. and their descendants, who form no small element in the population of these regions of civilized America (see Mixed-bloods). The French recognized the Indian's pride and prejudices, and won his confidence by respecting his institutions and often sharing in his ceremonies. They ruled while seeming to yield. Least of all did they despise the languages of the aborigines, as the rich records of the missionaries abundantly prove. The existence of a large number of mixed-bloods able to speak both their own tongue and French was a distinct advantage to the colonists. The relations between the French and the Acadian Indians, as pictured by Lescarbot, were, to use the word of Friederici, "idyllic," though there is doubtless some exaggeration in these old accounts.

Several words of French origin crept very early into the eastern Algonquian tongues, such as Montagnais, Nascapi, and Micmac, and later a corresponding French element is to be found in the Algonquian languages of the region beyond Montreal (Chamberlain in Canad. Indian, Feb., 1891). The Chippewa vocabulary (Carver, Trav., 421, 1778) contains the word kapotewian, 'coat,' which is the French capote, with the Chippewa radical suffix -waian, 'skin.' In a Missisauqua vocabulary of 1801 appears napané, 'flour.' The French bon jour! in the form boju! is now the salutation in several Algonquian dialects. From (les) anglais is supposed to be derived the word for 'English' in a number of these languages: Micmac aglaseāoo, Montagnais agaleshu, Nipissing aganeshā, formerly angalesha, Chippewa shaganash, Cree akayāsiv, etc. Another example of French influence is the contribution of Canadian French to the Chinook jargon (q. v.). There is also a French element in the modern tales and legends of the Indians of the Canadian Northwest and British Columbia, partly due to missionary teaching, partly to the campfires of the trappers, voyageurs, coureurs de bois, etc. In tales of the n. Pacific coast appears 'Shishé Tlé' (i. e., Jésus Christ), and in some of those of Indians on the e. side of the Rocky mts., 'Mani' (i. e., the Virgin Mary). The French are also the subject of many Indian stories from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Among the Abnaki intermixture began very early. With them the term for mixed-blood is malouidit, 'of (St) Malo,' indicative of the source of the fathers in most of these marriages. The wheat introduced from France was termed maloumenal, 'grains of (St) Malo.' In the 17th century the Abnaki called peas wenutsiminar, 'French seeds.' The Micmac term for apple is wenjoosoon, 'French cranberry.' In the Iroquoian languages an example of French influence is seen in Onontio ('Big Mountain'), the term applied by the Mohawk to the kings of France, which seems to translate Montmagny, the name of Champlain's successor as governor of Canada. Another example, noted by Hewitt, is that the Mohawk of Caughnawaga and other settlements on St Lawrence r. speak far more rapidly than do their brethren on Grand River res., Ontario, and they also have a more copious lexicon of modern terms.

Under the leadership of Mgr. de Laval the clergy of New France made strenuous opposition to the sale of liquor to the Indians, and succeeded in getting Colbert to prohibit the traffic; but the necessities of the political schemes of Frontenac and the fact that the Indians turned to the English and Dutch, from whom they could easily procure rum and brandy, caused the reversal of this policy, against the protests of missionaries and the church. To salve their feelings the matter was referred to the Sorbonne and the University of Toulouse, the former pronouncing against the sale of liquor to the Indians, the latter declaring it permissible. Finally a sort of theoretical prohibition but actual toleration of liquor selling resulted.

Consult Parkman (1) Jesuits in North America, (2) Conspiracy of Pontiac, (3) Pioneers of France in the New World, and other works; Jesuit Relations, Thwaites ed., I-LXXIII, 1896-1901.

(A. F. C.)

Fresnal (Span.: 'ash grove'). A Papago village, probably in Pima co., s. Ariz.; pop. about 250 in 1863.—Poston in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1863, 385, 1864.

Friedenshuetten (German: 'huts of peace'). A village formerly on Susquehanna r. a few miles below Wyalusing, and probably in Wyoming co., Pa. It was established in 1765 by Mahican and Delaware converts under direction of the Moravian missionaries, and seems to have been on the site of an older town. In 1770 the Indians removed to Friedensstadt, in Beaver co. According to Loskiel (Miss. United Breth., pt. 3, 1794) the name Friedenshuetten was also applied to a temporary village adjoining Bethlehem in Northampton co., settled in 1746 by Moravian converts from Shemocomo, who soon afterward removed to Gnadenhuetten in Carbon co. (J. M.)

Friedenshuetten.—Ruttenber, Tribes Hudson R., 198, 1872. Frieden Huetten.—Rupp, Northampton, etc., Cos., 86, 1845. Friedenshuetten.—Loskiel (1794) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 355, 1846. Friedenshuetten.—Loskiel in Day, Penn., 103, 1843.

Friedensstadt (Germ.: 'town of peace'). A village in Beaver co., Pa., probably near the present Darlington, settled in May, 1770, by the Moravian Delawares from Friedenshuetten. In 1773 they removed to Gnadenhuetten and Schoenbrunn on the Muskingum. See Languntentmenk. (J. M.)

Friedensstadt.—Loskiel, Missions, map, 1794. Friedenstadt.—Ibid., pt. 3, 57. Town of Peace.—Ibid.

Friendly Village. The name given by Mackenzie (Voy., 351, 1802) to an Athapaskan village, probably of the Takulli, on upper Salmon r., Brit. Col., on account of his kind treatment there.

Frogtown (trans. of Walási'yí, 'frog place'). A former Cherokee settlement on a creek of the same name, n. of Dahlonga, Lumpkin co., Ga.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 545, 1900.

Fugitive. A former Kaniagmiut Eskimo village at Hobson harbor, Sitkalidak id., near Kodiak, Alaska.—Lisiansky, Voy., 178, 1814.

Furniture. There was little regular furniture among the Indians, as home life was simple and wants were few. The furniture of the tipi differed from that used in the communal dwelling, for the character of the habitation controlled its furnishing. In all classes of habitations seats were generally arranged along the walls. Mats of plaited bark or of woven rushes and skins dressed only on one side were spread as seats, and pillows, formerly having skin cases, were stuffed with feathers, the hair of the deer or elk, in some cases scrapings from the hide, or, as in the S., the long gray Spanish moss, and used as cushions to sit on. Among some tribes a bearskin was the seat of honor. In the pueblo seats were of stone, or were rectangular stools made from a single block of wood, in addition to a masonry bench extending round or partly round the room. In n. California stools were circular in form. In the houses of the N. W. coast long settees were placed facing the fire, against the partitions that marked a family's space in the communal dwelling.

In the earth lodge and similar habitations stationary couches, which served as seats by day and as beds by night, were arranged against the walls. These were made by planting in the floor four tall posts on which were supported two shelves, or bunks, of wattled twigs, on which the bedding was placed. Sometimes both shelves were used as beds, but generally the upper one was used for storing the property of the person to whom the compartment belonged. In the lodges of some tribes, hung on a rod fastened across the two front poles was a reed curtain, which could be rolled up or dropped to give seclusion to the occupant of the berth. Another form of bed consisted of a mat of willows stretched upon a low platform, its tapering ends raised and fastened to tripods which formed head and foot boards. The skin of an animal, as the buffalo bull, killed in winter, was trimmed to fit the bed and served as the mattress, on which robes or blankets were spread as bedding. Pillows such as are described above were used, but in N. California were of wood and were used only in the men's sleeping lodge. Little children occupied cradles (q. v.), which varied in form and ornamentation, but were all constructed on the general plan of a portable box and adapted to the age of the child. Among some tribes a hammock, made by folding a skin about two ropes, was hung between posts and used to swing children to sleep. A crotched stick was thrust slanting into the edge of the fireplace, and from the crotch hung one or more smaller crotched sticks directly over the fire, serving as hooks for kettles in cooking. The household meal was often served on a mat. In the dwellings of the corn-growing Plains Indians the wooden mortar used for pounding maize was set at the right of the entrance and held firmly in place by sinking its pointed base well into the earthen floor. In every habitation a suspended pole or rack was placed near the fire for the drying of moccasins or other clothing. In the Pueblo house the meal trough occupied a corner of the room, and was set at a sufficient distance from the wall to permit the women to kneel comfortably at their work and face the apartment. The trough was of stone and generally contained three metates, varying in coarseness, for hulling, cracking, and mealing the grain. Niches in the walls served as shelves or closets. Utensils varied with the methods of cooking in the different parts of the country; they were baskets, wooden and pottery vessels, and later metal kettles. Household utensils, for cooking, eating, and drinking, were usually kept in or near the space belonging to the housewife, and consisted of baskets, boxes, platters, and bowls of wood or pottery, spoons of horn, wood, gourd, or pottery, and ladles. Some of the household utensils were ornamented with carving or painting, and not infrequently were treasured as heirlooms. Brooms of coarse grass or twigs were used to sweep the floor, and the wing of a bird served as a brush to keep the central fireplace tidy. The Pueblos tied a bunch of coarse grass near the middle, using the butt end for brushing the hair and the other for sweeping the floor. Some of the Plains and Rocky mtn. tribes used a wooden spade-like implement to remove the snow from the ground about the entrance of the lodge, and the Pueblos employed a similar implement for passing bread in and out of the ovens. The Plains tribes stored their food and other articles in packs made of parfleche and ornamented with painted designs; for preserving feathers until needed the Pueblos used wooden receptacles cut from a single stick, usually of cottonwood, and provided with a countersunk lid; on the N. W. coast elaborately carved boxes and trays were made for this purpose.

BED FRAME OF THE CHIPPEWA. (HOFFMAN)

COUCH OF THE PLAINS TRIBES. (MOONEY)

Mural decoration was confined to the Pueblos and the houses on the N. Pacific coast. Frequently in the latter the posts, beams, and doors were carved and painted, as were also the screens, which served several purposes, domestic and ceremonial.

In the lodges of the Plains tribes the ornamented shields, weapons, saddles, bridles, and various accouterments were always hung on the posts within the lodge, and gave color and decorative effect to the otherwise plain interior of the native dwelling. In winter painted or embroidered skins were suspended between the inner circle of posts of the earth lodge and, like an arras, inclosed the space about the fire, adding much to the attractiveness of this picturesque habitation. Among the Eskimo the stone lamp was the essential article of the household. It furnished light and heat and served as a stove for cooking. Such lamps, cut from steatite or basalt, cost much labor, and were handed down from one generation to another. See Boxes and Chests, Dishes, Habitations, Implements.

Consult Boas (1) in Rep. Nat. Mus., 1895, (2) in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 1888; Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt 3, 1905; Dorsey and Voth in Field Columb. Mus. Publ., Anthropol. ser.; J. O. Dorsey in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Goddard in Univ. Cal. Publ., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., i, 1903; Hoffman in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Holm, Descr. New Sweden, 1834; Hough in Rep. Nat. Mus., 1896; Kroeber in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xviii, pt 1, 1902; Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 1891; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899. (A. C. F.)

Fur trade. The fur trade was an important factor in the conquest and settlement of North America by the French and the English. Canada and the great W. and N. W. were long little more to the world than the "Fur Country." Lahontan (New Voy., i, 53, 1703) said: "Canada subsists only upon the trade of skins or furs, three-fourths of which come from the people that live around the great lakes." Long before his time the profit to be gained in the fur traffic with distant tribes encouraged adventurers to make their way to the Mississippi and beyond, while the expenses of not a few ambitious attempts to reach Cathay or Cipangu through a N. W. passage to the South sea were met, not out of royal treasuries, but from presents and articles of barter received from the Indians. The various fur and trading companies established for traffic in the regions W. of the great lakes and in the Hudson bay country exercised a great influence upon the aborigines by bringing into their habitat a class of men, French, English, and Scotch, who would intermarry with them, thus introducing a mixed-blood element into the population. Manitoba, Minnesota, and Wisconsin in particular owe much of their early development to the trader and the mixed-blood. The proximity of hunting grounds to the settlements beyond the Alleghanies favored the free hunter and the single trapper, while the remote regions of the N. W. could best be exploited by the fur companies. The activity of the free trapper and solitary hunter meant the extermination of the Indian where possible. The method of the great fur companies, which had no dreams of empire over a solid white population, rather favored amalgamation with the Indians as the best means of exploiting the country in a material way. The French fur companies of early days, the Hudson's Bay Company (for two centuries ruler of a large part of what is now Canada), the Northwest Company, the American Fur Company (in the initiation of which patriotism played a part), the Missouri Fur Company, the Russian-American Company, the Alaska Commercial Company, and others have influenced the development of civilization in North America. The forts and fur-trading stations of these companies long represented to the Indian tribes the white man and his civilization. That the Hudson's Bay Company abandoned its line of forts on the seacoast and went to the Indian hunting grounds, ultimately taking possession of the vast interior of Canada, was due largely to the competition of rival fur traders, such as the Northwest Company. Intimate contact with Indian tribes was thus forced on rather than initiated by the Hudson's Bay Company. The pioneers of the fur trade were the solitary trappers and buyers, whose successors are the free traders on the upper Mackenzie today. They blazed the way for canoe trips, fur brigades, trading posts, and, finally, settlements. It was often at a portage, where there were falls or rapids in a river, that the early white trader established himself. At such places afterward sprang up towns whose manufactures were developed by means of the water power. The Indian village also often became a trading post and is now transformed into a modern city. Portages and paths that were first used by the Indian and afterward by the fur trader are now changed to canals and highways, but other routes used by fur traders are still, in regions of the far N., only primitive paths. Some, like the grande route from Montreal to the country beyond Hudson bay, are followed by white men for summer travel and pleasure. In the N. W. the fur trade followed the course of all large streams, and in some parts the leading clans derived much of their power from the control of the waterways.

The appearance and disappearance of fur-bearing animals, their retreat from one part of the country to another, influenced the movements of Indian tribes. This is particularly true of the movements of the buffalo (q. v.), though the decrease of other large game was often the compelling motive of tribal migration. The hunt of the buffalo led to certain alliances and unions for the season of the chase among tribes of different stocks, a few of which may have become permanent. Thus the Kutenai, Sarsi, Siksika, and Apsinai have all hunted together on the plains of the Saskatchewan and the upper Missouri. The occasional and finally complete disappearance of the buffalo from these regions has weighed heavily upon the Indian tribes, the buffalo having been to some of them what the bamboo is to the Malay and the palm to the West African, their chief source of food, fuel, clothing, and shelter. The extermination of the wild buffalo caused the discontinuance of the Kiowa sun dance (Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 346, 349, 1898) and affected likewise the ceremonies of other tribes. In several tribes the buffalo dance was an important ceremony and buffalo chiefs seem to have been elected for duty during the hunting season. The importance of the northern hare, whose skin was used to make coats and tipis by certain Indians of the Canadian Northwest, is shown in the designation "Hareskins" for one of the Athapascan tribes (Kawchogottine). The Tsattine, another Athapascan tribe, received their name for a like reason. The Iroquois war against the Neutral nation was partly due to the growing scarcity of beavers in the Iroquois country. The recent inroads of the whites upon the muskox of arctic Canada are having their effect upon the Indian tribes of that region. Bell (Jour. Am. Folk-lore, xvi, 74, 1903) has noted the advance of the free trader on Athabasca r. and lake, giving rise to a barbarous border civilization, like that of the whaler on the shores of Hudson bay and the rancher and miner on the Peace and other mountain streams, which is having its due effect on the natives: "The influx of fur traders into the Mackenzie r. region, and even to Great Bear lake, within the last two years, has, I believe, very much altered the character of the northern Indians." The effect upon the Indians of the s. Atlantic region of the coming of the white trader was early noted by Adair and others. Here, too, the trader not infrequently married into the tribe and became an agent in modifying aboriginal culture, by the introduction of European ideas and institutions.

Before the advent of the Europeans the fur trade had assumed considerable proportions in various parts of the continent (Mason, Rep. Nat. Mus., 586-589, 1894). In the 16th century the Pecos obtained buffalo skins from the Apache and bartered them again with the Zuñi. The people of Acoma obtained deerskins from the Navaho. The trade between Ottawa r. and Hudson bay was well known to the Jesuit missionaries in the beginning of the 17th century. In the time of Lewis and Clark the Arikara obtained furs from other tribes and bartered them with the whites for various articles, and the Skiloot used to get buffalo skins from tribes on the upper Missouri to barter off with other Indian tribes. The Chilkat proper and the Chilkoot even now act as middlemen in the fur trade between the whites and other Indian tribes. The tribes about the mouth of the Columbia were also middlemen, and their commerce influenced the conditions of their social institutions, making possible, perhaps, slavery, the existence of a class of nobles, certain changes in the status of women, etc. The trade in furs between the Eskimo of Alaska and the peoples of extreme n. e. Asia existed long before the advent of Europeans. At Kotzebue sd. there is still held a summer fair (Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 229, 1899). Fur-trading voyages are common in this region.

The development of intertribal commerce among the Plains Indians was much stimulated by the hunt of the buffalo and its material rewards. By inducing the natives to trap and hunt the wild animals of the northern part of the continent on a large scale for the sake of their valuable skins the fur companies stimulated the aboriginal talent in the production and use of snares and other devices, even if they did not improve the morals of the Indians. The introduction of the horse (q. v.) and the gun led to the extermination of the buffalo by Plains Indians and whites. In certain parts of the continent skins were a basis of value—primitive money. A Kutenai, when he draws a beaver, produces a picture, not of the animal, but of its cured skin. With the Eskimo of the Yukon, even before the advent of the Russians, the unit of value was "one skin"; that is, the skin of the full-grown land otter, and of late years this has been replaced by the skin of the beaver (Nelson, op. cit., 232). Skins of sea otters, beavers, and other animals were the basis of the wealth, also, of many tribes of the n. Pacific coast, until the practical extermination of some of these species made necessary a new currency, provided in the blankets of the Hudson's Bay Company, which were preferred to most other substitutes that were offered by white men. Toward the interior the beaver skin was the ruling unit, and to-day in some parts such unit is the skin of the muskrat. Among the Kutenai of s. e. British Columbia the word for a quarter of a dollar is khanko ('muskrat'). English traders reckoned prices in skins and French traders in "plus" (pelus, peaux). Indians counted their wealth in skins, and in the potlatch of some tribes the skin preceded the blanket as a unit of value in the distribution. During the colonial period furs were legal tender in some parts of the country; also at various times and places during the pioneer occupancy of the W. and N. Altogether the fur trade may be considered one of the most important and interesting phases of the intercourse between the Europeans and the North American Indians. See Buffalo, Commerce, Exchange, Trading posts, Trails and Trade routes, Travel and Transportation.

Consult Bryce, Remarkable History of the Hudson's Bay Company, 1900; Chittenden, American Fur Trade of the Far West, 1902; Laut, Story of the Trapper, 1902; Morice, History of Northern British Columbia, 1904; Willson, The Great Company, 1900. (A. F. C.)

Fu Sang. A land e. of China which, according to Chinese annals, was visited in a voyage made by Buddhist monks in the 5th century A. D. Some have sought to identify it with America; there is good reason to believe that Fu Sang was Corea, Japan, Sakhalin, or the Liu-kiu ids., or all of them. Japan has played a part in the myths of the Chinese similar to the garden of the Hesperides in Greek story. DeGuignes was an early propagator of the Fu Sang theory; more recent advocates were C. G. Leland (Fu-Sang, 1875) and Vining (An Inglorious Columbus, 1885). Arguments on the other side have been advanced by W. H. Dall in Science, Nov. 5, 1886; H. Mueller in Verh. d. Berl. Ges. F. Anthr., 1883, and A. F. Chamberlain in Am. Notes and Queries, II, 84, 1888, but the whole matter has been effectually disposed of by the authoritative investigations of Gustav Schlegel, an eminent Chinese scholar, in his Fou-Sang (1892). Schlegel attributes what is not mythical in the Chinese legends to the island of Sakhalin, etc. (A. F. C.)

Fusihatchi (Creek: fu'swa 'forest bird', ha'tchi 'creek,' 'river'). A former Upper Creek town in Macon co., Ala., on the N. bank of lower Tallapoosa r., 2 m. below Huhliwahli. Remains of a walled town were visible from the opposite bank of the river at the close of the 18th century. (A. S. G.)

Foosee-hat-che.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 33, 1848. Foosechatchee.—Hawkins (1813) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 854, 1832. Foosee Hatchee.—Ibid., 848. Fooskahatche.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 380, 1854. Fusahatche.—Bartram, Trav., 461, 1791. Tusehatche.—Barnard (1793) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 386, 1832 (misprint).

Fusualgi. The Forest Bird (?) clan of the Creeks.

Bird.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1878. Fúsualgi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 155, 1884. Tus'-wá.—Morgan, op. cit. (misprint).

Fwaha. The Fire clan of the former pueblo of Pecos, N. Mex.

Fwah.—Hewitt in Am. Anthrop., n. s., VI, 431, 1904. Fwa-ha'.—Hodge, ibid., IX, 350, 1896.

Fyules. A former village in California, said to have been Esselen.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860.

Gaandowanang (Gă'-ân-do-wă-năwăn, 'it is a great tree.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca village on Genesee r., near Cuylerville, N. Y.

Big Tree.—Morris deed (1797) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 627, 1832. Chenondanah.—Johnson (1754) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VI, 899, 1855. Gă'-ân-do-wă-năwăn.—Hewitt, inf'n., 1886 (Seneca name). Gă-un-do'-wă-nă.—Morgan, League Iroq., 463, 1851. Kanvagen.—Pouchot, map (1758) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., X, 694, 1858.

Gabacamani. A rancheria, probably Cochimi, connected with Purisima (Cade-gomo) mission, Lower California, in the 18th century.—Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., v, 190, 1857.

Gabrieleño. A Shoshonean division and dialectic group which formerly occupied all of Los Angeles co., Cal., S. of the San Bernardino mts., with the probable exception of a strip of coast from Santa Monica westward, and Orange co. to Alisos cr.; the territory did not extend very far E. of the Los Angeles co. line. Santa Catalina id. also was occupied by them, and possibly San Nicolas id. The name has been loosely applied by the Spanish inhabitants from the name of the mission of San Gabriel, near Los Angeles, where many were at one time collected. This, in the absence of an appropriate native term, may be accepted as the most convenient designation. Their rancherias were: Acuragna, Ahapchingas, Aleyupkigna, Awigna, Azuesagna, Cahuenga, Chokishgna, Chowigna, Cucumogna, Hahamogna, Harasgna, Houtgna, Hutuegna, Isanthcogna, Kowanga, Mangua, Nacaugna, Okowwinjha, Pascegna, Pasinogna, Pubugna, Pimocagna, Saway-yanga, Sibagna, Sisitanogna, Sonagna, Suangna, Taybipet, Techahet, Tibahagna, and Yangna.

Gabrieleños.—Loew in Ann. Rep. Chief of Eng., pt. III, 542, 1876. Kij.—Hale, Ethnog. and Philol., 222, 1846. Kizh.—Ibid., 569; Gatschet in Rep. Chief of Eng., III, 556, 1876 (trans. 'houses'). Playsanos.—Hoffman in Bull. Essex Inst., XVII, 26, 1885 (seems to be applied to the California Shoshoni living in the lowlands, and especially near the coast in the region of Los Angeles). San Gabriel.—Hale, op. cit., 222. Tobikhars.—Gatschet, op. cit., 556 (said to mean 'settlers,' but probably taken from Tobohar, the mythical first man). Tumangamalum.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n., 1905 (Luiseño name: 'north-erners').

Gachigundae (Gatchigu'nda-i, 'village always moving to and fro'). A Haida town on the N. E. shore of Alliford bay, Moreshy id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., occupied by a socially low branch of the Djahui-skwahladagai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Gachwechnagechga ('islanders.'—Hewitt). The name applied to the Lehigh Indians formerly on Lehigh r., Pa.; so called, according to Pylæus, after the island they occupied.

Gachwechnagechga.—Gatschet in Am. Antiqu., IV, 75, 1881-82. Lecha.—Ibid. Lehigh.—Ibid.

Gadabo (Gă'-dă'-ho', 'sand bank.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca village that occupied the site of Castile, Genesee co., N. Y.

Gă'dă'-ho'.—Hewitt, inf'n., 1856 (Seneca form). Gă-dă'-o'.—Morgan, League Iroq., 435, 1851. Gardeau.—Morris deed (1797) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 627, 1832. Gardow.—Morgan, op. cit., 467. Guardou.—Conover, Kanadega and Geneva MS., B. A. E.

Gadinchin ('rush,' 'reed grass'). Given as a clan of the Pinal Coyotero living in 1881 at San Carlos agency, Ariz.—Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 112, 1890.

Gado (Gadō'). A Haida town said to have stood on the S. side of De la Beche inlet, Moreshy id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. Another town of the same name is said to have stood on the E. side of Lyell id., near the town of Hlkia.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 278, 1905.

Gaedi (Gă'-idi, the name of a fish). A Haida town on the N. E. shore of a small inlet just N. E. of Huston inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It belonged to the Tadjí-lanas, a band of Ninintins.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Gaesigusket (Ga-isiga's-q'elit, 'strait town where no waves come ashore'). A Haida town on Murchison id., at a point opposite Hot Springs id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. So named because it fronted on smooth water. It belonged to the Hagilanas of the Ninintins.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Gagihetnas-hadai (G'egihē't-nas-had'ā'i, 'land-otter house people'). Given by Boas (5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 27, 1889) as the name of a subdivision of the Yaku-lanas, a division of the Raven clan of the Haida in Alaska. It is in reality only a house name belonging to that band. The Gagihet (Gagixī't) is a human being who, in native mythology, has been made insane by land otters. (J. R. S.)

Gahato ('floating branch.'—Hewitt). A village, probably of the Seneca, in Chemung co., N. Y., which was burned by Sullivan in 1779. (J. M.)

Chamong—Pemberton (ca. 1792) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., II, 175, 1810. Chemeney—Ibid., 176. Chemung—Brown (1803), ibid., IX, 120, 1804 (probably the Delaware name). Gahā'to—Morgan, League Iroq., 469, 1851.

Gahayanduk (Gā'hā'yā-yā'n'-dā'k, 'there was a forest, or orchard.'—Hewitt). A Seneca village destroyed by Denonville's expedition in 1687.—Shea, note in Charlevoix, New France, III, 289, 1868.

Gahko ('crane'). A Mahican clan.

Gahliinskun (Gā'li'nskun, 'high up on a point'). A Haida town N. of C. Ball, on the E. coast of Graham id., Brit. Col., occupied by the Naikun-kegawai. Work assigned to it 120 people in 9 houses in 1836–41. A-se-guang, the name given by him, is said to have been applied to some high land back of the town.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 280, 1905.

A se guang—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, V, 489, 1855 (after Work, 1836–41). A-se-quang—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859 (misprint from Work). Gāli'n-skun—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 280, 1905.

Gaiagunkun (Gai'ega'n kun). A Haida town said to have stood near Hot Spring id., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 278, 1905.

Gaitanipitea. Apparently a former settlement of the Pina or of an allied tribe, possibly the Sobaipuri, described as situated on a hill on the W. bank of the Rio San Pedro. Visited by Father Kino in 1697. Probably identical with the ruins known as Santa Cruz, a few miles W. of Tombstone, S. Ariz.

Jaibanipitea.—Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 274, 1884. Santa Cruz de Gaibanipitea.—Bernal (1697) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., I, 277, 1856. Santa Cruz del Cuervo.—Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 274, 1884. Sta. Cruz de Gaibaipitea.—Ibid., 264. Sta. Cruz de Jaibanipitea de Pimas.—Kino (1698), ibid., 290.

Gakhulin ('village on a stream'). One of the 4 Kansa villages in 1820.

Gaqūli.—Dorsey, Kansa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882.

Gakhulinulinbe. A former Kansa village near the head of a S. tributary of Kansas r., on which a trading post was established.

Gaqūli uli'be.—Dorsey, Kansa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882.

Gakpomute ('little turtle'). A Mahican clan.

Galena. The ore of lead occurs in beds, pockets, and in true veins in connection with various geological formations in the United States and in British America, being especially abundant in Illinois and Missouri. The Indians of the Mississippi valley, especially the mound builders, seem to have prized this ore very highly in the form in which it usually occurs—masses of blue-gray, glistening cubical crystals. It was probably valued for its beauty, as was also the yellow crystals of iron pyrites, and possibly had special significance with the mound-building tribes, as it is found among the articles placed upon the sacrificial altars. In some cases the heat of the altar fires has been sufficient to melt part of the ore, but it does not appear that the Indians had learned to make any practical use of the lead. Squier and Davis found 30 pounds of the ore, in pieces varying from 2 ounces to 3 pounds, on an altar in one of the Mound City mounds in Ohio; and it is at times found also on pueblo sites. Galena was sometimes shaped into the simpler forms of ceremonial objects, such as spheres, hemispheres, cones, plummets, and boat-stones (q. v.). Consult Moorehead in The Antiquarian, I, 1897; Rau in Smithsonian Rep. 1872, 1873; Squier and Davis in Smithsonian Cont., I, 1848. (W. H. H.)

Galiano Island. A band of the Penelakut (q. v.) who speak a Cowichan dialect, residing in S. E. Vancouver id.; pop. 32 in 1904.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. II, 69, 1905.

Galilali (Gā'ilālī, 'the houses'; i. e., ancient cave houses). A Tarahumare rancheria in the Sierra Madre, W. Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, inf'n, 1894.

Galisteo. A former Tano pueblo $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. E. of the present hamlet of the same name, and about 22 miles S. of Santa Fé, N. Mex. Identified by Bandler (Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 122, 1892) with the Ximena of Coronado, who visited the village in 1541, when it consisted of 30 houses. Galisteo was the seat of a Franciscan mission perhaps as early as 1617—certainly in 1629—and in 1680 contained 800 neophytes and a fine church; San Cristóbal was a visita at this date. In the revolt of the Pueblos in August of the latter year the Indians of Galisteo killed the resident priest, besides the father custodian of New Mexico, the missionaries of San Marcos and Pecos, who were on their way to give warning, and several colonists. After the remaining Spanish colonists had been driven out of the country the Tano of Galisteo removed to Santa Fé and erected a village on the ruins of the old Palace, but were expelled by Vargas in 1692. In 1706 the town was reestablished with 90 Indians by the governor of the province under the name Nuestra Señora de los Remedios de Galisteo, but it was also called Santa María. It remained an inconsiderable village until between 1782 and 1794, when the inhabitants, decimated by smallpox and by the persistent hostilities of the Comanche, removed to Santo Domingo pueblo, where their descendants still live, preserving the language of their ancestors and in part their tribal autonomy. At one time, according to Bandelier, Galisteo probably had a population of 1,000. In 1712 it numbered 110 souls; in 1748, 50 families, and but 52 souls in 1782 just before its abandonment. (F. W. H.)

Galisteo.—Vaugondy, map Amérique, 1778. Calixto.—Kitchin, map N. A., 1787. Calixto.—Güssefeld, Charte America, 1797. Galasteo.—Mendoza (1742) quoted by Meline, Two Thousand Miles, 213, 1867. Galiste.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., II, 131, 1787. Galisteo.—Zarate Salmeron (ca. 1629) cited by Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 600, 1882. Gallisteo.—Eaton in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 220, 1854. Glistéo.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., XVI, 258, 1871. Jimena.—Mota-Padilla, Hist. de la Conq., 164, 1742. Kimena.—Peet in Am. Antiq., XVI, 354, 1895 (misprint). Nuestra de Señora de los Remedios de Galisteo.—MS. of 1720 quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, V, 194, 1890. San Lucas.—Sosa (1590) in Doc. Inéd., XV, 251, 1871 (identified with Galisteo by Bandelier, Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 101, 1892). Santa Ana.—Oñate (1598), ibid., XVI, 258, 1871 (Glistéo or). Santa Cruz de Galisteo.—Vetancourt, Teatro Mex., III, 322, 1871 (mission name prior to 1706). Santa Maria de Galisteo.—Cuervo (1706) quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 228, 1889 (mission name from 1706). S^{ta} Cruz de Galisteo.—D'Anville, map Amér. Sept., 1746. S^{ta} Maria.—Ibid. S^{ta} Mario.—Jefferys, Amer. Atlas, map 5, 1776. S^t Maria.—D'Anville, map N. A., Bolton ed., 1752. Ta-ge Uing-ge.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 100, 1892 (native name). Ta-ge-uing-ge.—Ibid., III, 125, 1890 (native name). Tage-unge.—Bandelier, Gilded Man, 221, 1893. Tanoque.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 298, 1853 (trans. 'the lower settlement'; native name; but it seemingly means 'Tano village'). Ximena.—Castañeda (ca. 1565) in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 523, 1896. Ximera.—Castañeda in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., IX, 177, 1838.

Gall (Pizi). A chief of the Hunkpapa Teton Sioux, born on Moreau r., S. Dak., in 1840; died at Oak cr., S. Dak., Dec. 5, 1894. He was of humble parentage, but was well brought up, receiving the usual consideration of his people for an orphan, his mother being a poor widow. As a young man he was a warrior of note, and that he was possessed of military genius of high order was shown by the disposition he made of his forces at the battle of the Little Bighorn, June 25, 1876, where he led the Sioux. He was the lieutenant of Sitting Bull, but had the quality of leadership in the field that was lacking in his chief. He fled to Canada with Sitting Bull after the Custer affair, but in 1880 he and Crow Chief withdrew from the Sitting Bull following, leaving the latter with but few people. With his followers he surrendered to Maj. Ilges at Poplar r. camp, Mont., Jan. 1, 1881, and settled as a farmer on Standing Rock res., N. and S. Dak. He denounced Sitting Bull as a coward and a fraud and became a friend to the whites, wielding a potent influence in procuring the submission of the Indians to the plan of the Government for the education of the children. He was a man of noble presence and much esteemed for his candor and sagacity by the whites with whom he came in contact. He was influential in bringing about the ratification of the act of Mar. 2, 1889, the last agreement with the Sioux by which their great reservation was divided into separate reservations and certain portions were ceded to the United States. From 1889 he was a judge of the court of Indian offenses at Standing Rock agency. (J. M. L.)

CHIEF GALL

Galley. A Cherokee settlement of about 12 families in 1819 (Nuttall, Arkansa, 122, 1821), on the Galley hills, in Yell co., Ark., about midway between Danville and Dardenelle. (J. M.)

Gallinomero. A name more usually rendered Kainomero by the Indians to whom it is applied. It was given by the Spaniards of San Rafael mission to the Pomo from the vicinity of Healdsburg and Santa Rosa, Sonoma co., Cal., on the occasion of their being brought into the mission in the early part of the 19th century. The name is now used to designate in particular the few remaining Indians whose former homes were in the Russian r. valley from the vicinity of Healdsburg s. to the southern limit of the territory occupied by the Pomo, or a point about halfway between Santa Rosa and Petaluma. In a still broader sense it is made to include the remainder of the people speaking the same dialect and formerly living about Cloverdale and the upper part of Dry cr. The name is not of Indian origin and its significance is not known.

(S. A. B.)

Cainameros.—Bancroft, Hist. Cal., IV, 71, 1886.
Calajomanes.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 363, 1877.
Canaumanos.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 30, 1860.
Canimauro.—Ibid., June 8, 1860.
Canimares.—Ibid., Feb. 22, 1860. Gal-li-no-me'-ro.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 174, 1877.
Kai-nama.—Wrangell, Ethnogr. Nachr., 80, 1839.
Kai-na-meah.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 102, 1853. Kai-na-me-ro.—Ibid. Kai-no-meahs.—Ibid., 112. Kanamara.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 30, 1860. Kanimares.—Ibid. Kianamaras.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 1864, 119, 1865. Kyanamara.—Ibid., 1856, 257, 1857.

Galpa. A former Tepehuane pueblo and the seat of a mission; situated in central Durango, Mexico, on the headwaters of Rio San Pedro.

S Lúcas de Galpa.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 319, 1864.

Gamacaamanc ('ravine of palms'). A rancheria, probably Cochimí, connected with Purísima (Cadegomo) mission, Lower California, in the 18th century.—Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., v, 189, 1857.

Gamacaamanexa ('mouth of the ravine of palms'). A rancheria, probably Cochimí, connected with Purísima (Cadegomo) mission, Lower California, in the 18th century.—Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s. v, 190, 1857.

Gambling. See Games.

Gamchines. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Games. Indian games may be divided into two general classes: games of chance and games of dexterity. Games of pure skill and calculation, such as chess, are entirely absent. The games of chance fall into one of two categories: (1) games in which implements corresponding with dice are thrown at random to determine a number or numbers, the counts being kept by means of sticks, pebbles, etc., or upon an abacus or counting board or circuit; (2) games in which one or more of the players guess in which of two or more places an odd or particularly marked counter is concealed, success or failure resulting in the gain or loss of counters. The games of dexterity may be designated as (1st) archery in its various modifications; (2d) a game of sliding javelins or darts upon the hard ground or ice; (3d) a game of shooting at a moving target consisting of a netted hoop or a ring; (4th) the game of ball in several highly specialized forms; and (5th) the racing games, more or less interrelated and complicated with the ball games (q. v.). In addition, there is a sub-class, related to the game of shooting at the moving target, of which it is a miniature form, corresponding with the European game of cup-and-ball. Games of all the classes designated are found among all the Indian tribes of North America, and constitute the games, par excellence, of the Indians. The children have a variety of other amusements such as top spinning, mimic fights, and similar imitative sports (see Amusements); but the games first described are played only by men and women, youths and maidens, not by children, and usually at fixed seasons as the accompaniment of certain festivals or religious rites. A well-marked affinity exists between the manifestation of the same game even among the most widely separated tribes; the variations are more in the materials employed, due to environment, than the object or method of plays. Precisely the same games are played by tribes belonging to unrelated linguistic stocks, and in general the variations do not follow the differences in language. At the same time there appears to be a progressive change from what seems to be the older forms of existing games from a center in S. W. United States along lines radiating from the same center southward into Mexico. There is no evidence that any of the games above described were ever imported into America; on the contrary, they appear to be the direct and natural outgrowth of aboriginal American institutions. They show no modification due to white influence other than the decay which characterizes all Indian institutions under existing conditions. It is probable, however, that the wide dissemination of certain games, as, for example, the hand game, is a matter of comparatively recent date, due to wider and less restricted intercourse through the abolition of tribal wars. Playing cards and probably the simple board game, known by the English as merrels, are practically the only games borrowed by the Indians from the whites. On the other hand we have taken lacrosse in the N. and racket in the S., and the Mexicans of the Rio Grande play all the old Indian games under Spanish names. In the dice games, it appears, the original number of dice was four, and that they were made of canes, being the shaftments of arrows painted or burned with marks corresponding with those used to designate the arrows of the four world-quarters. In one of the earliest forms of the guessing game the number of the places of concealment was four, and the implements used in hiding were derived from the four marked arrow shaftments. In general, in all Indian games, the arrow or the bow, or some derivative of them, is found to be the predominant implement, and the conceptions of the four world-quarters the fundamental idea. From this it became apparent that the relation of the games to each other in the same area, and of each to its counterpart among all the tribes, was largely dependent on their common origin in ceremonies from which games produced as amusements were uniformly derived. Back of each game is found a ceremony in which the game was a significant part. The ceremony has commonly disappeared; the game survives as an amusement, but often with traditions and observances which serve to connect it with its original purpose. The ceremonies appear to have been to cure sickness, to cause fertilization and reproduction of plants and animals, and, in the arid region, to produce rain. Gaming implements are among the most significant objects that are placed upon many Hopi altars, and constantly reappear as parts of the masks, headdresses, and other ceremonial adornments of the Indians generally. These observations hold true both of the athletic games as well as of the game of chance. The ball was a sacred object not to be touched with the hand, and has been identified as symbolizing the earth, the sun, or the moon. In the ring-and-pole game, the original form of the ring was a netted hoop derived from the spider web, the emblem of the Earth mother. The performance of the game was bound up with ceremonies of reproduction and fertility. In the kicked-stick and ball-race games of the S. W., the primary object seems to have been to protect the crops against sand storms within the circuit traversed.

Following are brief descriptions of the principal games played by the Indians N. of Mexico:

Arrow games.—A variety of games was played with actual arrows. In one of the commonest, an arrow was tossed with the hand by one of the players and the others then threw at it and endeavored to cause their arrows to fall across it.

Ball games.—The two common ball games which are widely distributed are racket ball, a man's game played with one or two netted bats or rackets, and shinny, commonly played by women.

In addition, women had a game with a double or tied ball which was tossed with long slender rods. In all of these it was not permitted to touch the ball with the hands.

Among the Plains tribes the women played with a small buckskin-covered ball of buffalo hair. (See Ball play.)

Bowl game.—A kind of dice game widely played by women among the Algonquian, Iroquois, Sioux, and other northern tribes. The dice consist of bone disks, or of peach or plum stones, which are tossed in a wooden bowl or a basket. Some California tribes use a large flat basket.

Cat's cradle.—The trick of weaving patterns with string upon the fingers, which we call cat's cradle, is very generally known, but the designs are different and much more intricate.

The Zuñi and Navaho attribute the origin of this amusement to the spider and associate the figures with the spider-web net shield of the war gods.

Children's games.—Indian children play a variety of games, which are practically identical with those played by the children of civilization. They are all mimetic in their character, and have no relation to the ceremonial and divinatory games of their elders, except so far as they may be imitations of them. (See Amusements, Child life.)

Chunkey.—The ring-and-pole game of the Creeks and neighboring tribes, in which a stone ring or disk was employed. From specimens of the stones found in the mounds it is shown that this form of the game had a wide distribution. Stone rings were used until recently in a similar game by some of the tribes on the N. W. coast.

Cup-and-pin game.—An amusement analogous to the cup-and-ball, or bilboquet, of Europe. The game is universal among the Indians, and exists in a great variety of forms, all of which may be referred to the spider-web shield. Among the Dakota the game is called the 'deer-toe game' and played with a string of phalangeal bones which are caught on a needle. The Eskimo use solid bone or ivory objects which are caught in the same way.

ESKIMO CUP-AND-PIN GAME

CUP-AND-PIN GAME

Football.—The game commonly spoken of as football is a ball race, chiefly confined to the S. W., in which a small wooden or stone ball is kicked around a long course, the original object having been the magical protection of the fields against sand storms. The Tarahumare derive their name from this game. Football proper exists among the Eskimo.

Four-stick game.—A game in which 4 marked sticks or billets of two different sizes are hidden under a flat basket, the object being to guess their relative positions.

FOUR-STICK GAME

Hand game.—The commonest and most widely distributed of Indian guessing games. Two (or four) bone or wooden cylinders, one plain and one marked, are held in the hands by one player, the other side guessing in which hand the unmarked cylinder is concealed. The game is commonly counted with sticks and is played to the accompaniment of songs or incantations.

HAND GAME

Hidden-ball game.—The common guessing game of the Southwestern tribes, played with four wooden tubes or cups, under one of which a ball or stick is hidden. The opposing side endeavors to guess where the object is concealed. The four cups or tubes refer to the four world-quarters, and the game is sacred to the war gods.

HIDDEN-BALL GAME

Hoop-and-pole.—A widely distributed athletic game in which a hoop or ring, frequently covered with network, is rolled along the ground and shot at with arrows or javelins, the counts being determined by the way in which the latter fall with reference to the ring. The game exists in a great variety of forms, all more or less related to and associated with ideas of fertility and generation.

HOOP-AND-POLE GAME

Juggling.—Juggling with balls, sometimes made of clay especially for the purpose, is practised by the women of some tribes. They keep two or more in the air at one time, and endeavor to see which can thus maintain them longest.

Kicked stick.—A game of the Southwestern Indians, notably the Zuni, in which two small painted sticks are kicked in a race around a ceremonial circuit inclosing the fields beyond the village.

KICKED STICK GAME

Moccasin game.—A common guessing game of the northern tribes. Four moccasins are commonly employed and a small object, such as a bullet, or a ball of buffalo hair, is hidden in one of them. The opposing side endeavors to guess where it is concealed. The game is counted with sticks, and is clearly a derivative of the hidden-ball game played with wooden tubes.

Patol.—The Spanish or Mexican name of the stick-dice game among the Hopi Indians and some of the Pueblos of the Rio Grande. Derived from the Aztec word patolli, which the old Mexicans are described as having played on a painted mat, using beans as dice.

Snow snake.—A gaming implement, sometimes carved to represent a snake, which is hurled along the ice or frozen ground, the object being to see whose 'snake' will go farthest.

SNOW SNAKES

Stick game.—A common guessing game of the tribes of California and the N. Pacific coast, one that extends entirely across the continent to Canada and the Atlantic. The sticks, probably originally arrow shaftments, are shuffled and divided, the object being to guess in which bundle either the odd or a particularly marked stick is concealed. (See Straw game, below.)

STICK GAME

Stick dice game.—A widely distributed game in which several 2-faced lots are tossed in the air like dice, the counts being kept on a diagram or with sticks. The number of the dice ranges from 3 upward, 4 being the most common.

STICK DICE GAME

Stilts.—Stilt-walking is a children's sport among the Hopi and Shoshoni, and from its existence in Mexico is probably indigenous among the Indians.

Straw, game of.—The name given by early writers to a guessing game played by Huron and other tribes of the Atlantic slope. The implements consisted of fine splints or reeds, and the object of the game was to guess the number, odd or even, when the bundle was divided at random.

Tops.—The top is almost universal as a child's plaything among the Indian tribes of the United States and appears to be indigenous. The common form is a whip top made of horn, bone, stone, or wood, spun on the ice or on frozen ground.

Consult Culin, American Indian Games, 24th Rep. B. A. E., 1906. (s. c.)

Gamgamtelatl. A gens of the Tenaktok, a Kwakiutl tribe.

ǵ'a'mǵ'amtlatl.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 331, 1895.

Gamiskwakoka-winiwag (Kamiskwakwa ku'ka-winiwag, 'men or people of the place of much red cedar.'—Jones). A Chippewa band about Cass lake, near the head of the Mississippi, in Minnesota. Cass Lake band.—Common name. Gamiskwakoka-winiwag.—Gatschet, Ojibwa MS., B. A. E., 1882. Kamiskwāw'ku'ka-winiwag.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1905 (correct Chippewa form).

Ganadoga ('it is a divided village.'—Hewitt). A former Oneida village in Oneida co., N. Y., near Oneida Castle.

Ganadoga. A former Iroquois village on the Canadian shore of L. Ontario, near the site of Toronto.

Ganadoko.—Homann Heirs' map, 1756. Gā-nā'-doque.—Morgan, League Iroq., 473, 1851. Kanadagerea.—Doc. of 1676 in Doc. Col. Hist. N. Y., XIII, 502, 1881.

Ganagweh ('one took it out.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca village about the site of Palmyra, N. Y.

Gā-nā'-gweh.—Morgan, League Iroq., 469, 1851.

Ganahadi ('people of Ganak,' an island somewhere near the s. end of Alaska). A Tlingit division which is said to have moved from below the present town of Port Simpson, Brit. Col., and to have separated into several branches, of which one settled at Tongas, another at Taku, a third at Chilkat, a fourth at Yakutat, and, according to one informant, a fifth at Klawak. (J. R. S.)

Gānaxa'di.—Swanton, inf'n, 1904. Gānaxte'di.—Ibid. Kanāch-ādi.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 120, 1885. Kanach-tēdi.—Ibid., 116.

Ganasarage ('at the place of man-drakes.'—Hewitt). A former Tuscarora village on Canaseraga cr., at the present site of Sullivan, N. Y.

Canaseraga.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 512, note, 1856. Canesraca.—Esnauls and Rapilly, map, 1782. Ganaghsaragey.—Johnson (1762) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 512, 1856. Ganaghsarages.—German Flats conf. (1770), ibid., VIII, 229, 1857. Gā-nā-sā'-ra'-ge.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (Seneca form). Kanadasar.—Johnson (1763) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 582, 1856. Kanassarago.—Canajoharie conf. (1759), ibid., 382.

Ganawagus ('it has a swampy smell.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca village on Genesee r., near Avon, N. Y.

Canawagus.—Deed of 1797 in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 627, 1832. Conewaugus.—Cornplanter (1822) quoted by Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. V, 115, 1848. Gā-nā-wā'-gus.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (Seneca form). Ganowauges.—Morgan, League Iroq., 468, 1851.

Gandasetlagon. A Cayuga village existing about 1670 near Port Hope, Ontario, on the shore of L. Ontario.

Ganadatsiagon.—Vaugondy, map (1753), cited in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 112, 1855. Ganatchesiagon.—Frontenac (1673) in Margry, Dec., I, 233, 1875. Ganatchesiagon.—Frontenac (1673) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 112, 1855 (misprint). Gandaschekiagon.—Frontenac (1674), ibid., 117. Gandasetlagon.—Shea, note in Charlevoix, New France, III, 110, 1868. Gandatsiagon.—Bellin, map, 1755. Ganatschkiagon.—Homann Heirs' map, 1756.

Ganedontwan (Gā'-ne'-don-twān, 'one put hemlock in the fire.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca village on the site of Moscow, N. Y.

Gā-nāh'-dā-on-tweh.—Morgan, League Iroq., 468, 1851.

Ganeraske. An Iroquois village that stood about 1670 at the mouth of Trent r., Ontario, near the n. e. end of L. Ontario.

Ganaraské.—Bellin, map, 1756. Ganeraské.—Frontenac (1673) in Margry, Déc., I, 233, 1875. Ganeroske.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., II, 183, 1787. Gannaraské.—Denonville (1687) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 369, 1855. Gonaraské.—Homann Heirs' map, 1756. Quandarosque.—Crepuy, map, ca. 1755.

Gangasco (from shingascu, 'level, wet, and grassy ground.'—Heckewelder). A village of the Powhatan confederacy formerly near the present Eastville, Northampton co., Va. It was the most important village on the lowest part of the E. shore in 1722. The inhabitants, who were of the Accomac or the Accohanoc tribe, were known as Gingaskins and remained there until they were driven off in 1833, being then much mixed with negroes.

(J. M.)

Gangascoe.—Beverly, Va., 199, 1722. Gingaskins.—Wise in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 36, 1855 (name used for the band).

Ganneious. A former Iroquois village on the N. shore of L. Ontario, on the present site of Nanpsee, Ontario.

Ganciou.—Lotter, map, ca. 1770. Gancydoes.—Esnauteurs and Rapilly, map, 1777. Ganeidos.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., II, 183, 1787. Ganeious.—Frontenac (1673) in Margry, Déc., I, 233, 1875. Ganejou.—Homann Heirs' map, 1756. Ganeousse.—Lahontan (1773), New Voy., I, 32, 1735. Ganeyont.—Parkman, Frontenac, 140, 1883. Ganneious.—Denonville (1687) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 362, 1855. Gannejouts.—Bellin, map, 1755. Ganneous.—Hennepin, New Discov., 101, 1698. Ganneouse.—Lahontan (1703) quoted by Macauley, N. Y., II, 191, 1829. Gonejou.—Crepuy, map, ca. 1755.

Gannentaha ('beside the mountain.'—Hewitt). The Huron form of the name of Onondaga lake, N. Y. In 1656 the French established on its shore, about 5 leagues from Onondaga, a mission, composed of Onondaga, Hurons, and Neutrals, which was called Notre Dame de Ganentaa, from the name of the lake. It was abandoned in 1658 on account of the hostility of the pagan Iroquois.

(J. M.)

Cananda.—Hansen (1700) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IV, 803, 1854. Caneenda.—Bleeker (1701), ibid., 891. Cannenda.—Schuyler (1711), ibid., v, 246, 1855. Ganentaa.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 224, 1855. Ganentaha.—Esnauteurs and Rapilly, map, 1777. Gannentaha.—Macauley, N. Y., I, 113, 1829. Gá-no-dá'-á.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886. Gá-nun-ta'-ah.—Morgan, League Iroq., 471, 1851. Kaneenda.—Bleeker (1701) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IV, 891, 1854. Notre Dame de Ganentaa.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 228, 1855 (French name of mission). St. Mary's.—Ibid.

Ganogeh (Gá-án-no'-ge, 'place of floating oil.'—Hewitt). The principal Cayuga village formerly on the site of Canoga, N. Y.

Canoga.—Macauley, N. Y., II, 177, 1829. Gá-á-no'-ge.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886. Gá-no'-geh.—Morgan, League Iroq., 423, 1851.

Ganondasa ('it is a new town.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca village on the site of Moscow, N. Y.

Canádarágo.—Amherst (1763) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 568, 1856. Canadasago.—Johnson (1763), ibid., 550. Canaderagey.—Johnson Hall conf. (1763), ibid., 556. Gá-no-dá'-sa.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886. Gá-nun-dá'-sa.—Morgan, League Iroq., 435, 1851. Kanadarago.—Johnson (1763) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 576, 1856. Kanaderagey.—Ibid., 582.

Ganosgagong ('among the milkweeds.'—Hewitt). A small Seneca village formerly on the site of Dansville, N. Y.

Gá-nose'-gá-go.—Morgan, League Iroq., 437, 1851. Gá-nos'-gá-goñ.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886. Gá-nus'-gá-go.—Morgan, op. cit., 468. Ganusago.—Johnson (1756) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 92, 1856. Kanuskago.—Ft Johnson conf. (1756), ibid., 57.

Ganowarohare ('skull is fastened to the top of it.'—Hewitt). One of the former principal Oneida towns, situate on Oneida cr., at the site of Vernon, N. Y. At this place the Jesuit mission of St François Xavier was established in 1667. In 1777 it was destroyed by the Indians who had espoused the British cause.

(J. N. B. H.) Cahnowellahella.—Macauley, N. Y., II, 298, 1829. Canawagore.—Guy Park conf. (1775) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VIII, 550, 1857. Canawaroghere.—Johnson Hall conf. (1774), ibid., 476. Canowaloo.—Ibid., VII, 101, note, 1856 (Oneida form). Canowari-ghare.—Guy Park conf., ibid., VIII, 535, 1857. Canowaroghere.—Johnson (1762), ibid., VII, 512, 1856. Canawaroghere.—Johnstown conf. (1774), ibid., VIII, 504, 1857. Gá-no-á-o'-á.—Morgan, League Iroq., chart, 394, 1851 (Cayuga name). Gá-no-á-o-há.—Ibid. (Seneca name). Gá-no-wá-ro-há-re.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (a Seneca form). Gá-no-wá'-lo-hale.—Morgan, League Iroq., chart, 394, 1851 (Oneida name). Gá-no-wá-lo-har'-la.—Ibid. (Mohawk name). Gá-no-wi'-há.—Ibid. (Onondaga name). Kahnonwolo-hale.—Belknap and Morse in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., v, 13, 1806. Kahnwolo-hale.—Macauley, N. Y., II, 298, 1829. Ká-no-wa-no'-há-re.—Morgan, op. cit. (Tuscarora name). Kononwarohare.—Oneida address (1775) in Williams, Vermont, II, 437, 1809. Old Oneida.—Sergeant (1796) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., v, 18, 1806. Onawaraghere.—Johnson (1756) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 101, 1856. Oneida Castle.—Sauthier, map, 1777. Onnosarage Castle.—Ibid. Orisca.—Johnson Hall conf. (1763) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 729, 1856. Oriska.—Sergeant (1796) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., v, 18, 1806. Oriske.—Oneida letter (1776) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VIII, 690, 1857. Tgáno'-eo'-há.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (a Seneca form).

Gantlet. See Captives, Ordeals.

Gaodjaos (Gaodja'os, 'drum village'). A Haida town on the S. shore of Lina id., Bearskin bay, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., occupied by the Hlgaiu-lanas family. It is often referred to in the native stories.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Gao-haidagai ('inlet people'). The name by which the Haida of Masset inlet and of the N. coast of Queen Charlotte ids. generally were known to those farther S.

(J. R. S.)

Gaousge (Gá-on'sage-on, 'place of bass-wood.'—Hewitt). Probably a former Seneca village, located by Morgan on Niagara r., N. Y.

Gá-o-us'-ge.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886. Gá-o-us'-geh.—Morgan, League Iroq., map, 1851.

Gapkalipoua. A Malemiut Eskimo village on Norton bay, Alaska.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850.

Garabato (a Spanish term with various meanings, but here referring to the pictographs). A cave in a gorge on the W. slope of Arroyo Garabato, which drains into the Rio Chico, in the Sierra Nacori, W. of the Rio Casas Grandes, in N. W. Chihuahua, that contains the well-preserved remains of an ancient aboriginal habitation on the walls of which are numerous paintings that give the cave its name. The remains are possibly those of the Tarahumare.—Lumholtz, Unknown Mex., I, 103, 1902.

Garakonthie (Ga-ra'-kón-ti-e', 'Moving Sun'), Daniel. An Onondaga chief during the middle of the 17th century; died at Onondaga, N. Y., in 1676. When the French missionaries fled from Onondaga in 1658, Garakonthie aided them, perhaps secretly, to make their escape, but soon openly became the protector of the Christians and an advocate of peace. In 1661 he induced the Onondaga to send an embassy to Quebec and to return 9 French captives with a view of establishing peace. He accompanied the prisoners to Montreal, where he was well received, and obtained the release of a number of his people. In 1662 he succeeded in temporarily checking the chiefs who wished to make war on the French, and frustrated a plot to kill the missionary Le Moyne. During the war that followed he exercised his authority in protecting the French in his country. He declared himself a convert and was baptized in 1669 in the cathedral at Quebec, receiving the name Daniel. Garakonthie was not only an able, humane leader, but an orator of considerable ability; his strong attachment to the whites lessened his influence with the more warlike element of his tribe, yet when an embassy was to be sent either to the French or to the English, his services were in demand. (c. t.)

Garangula. See Grangula.

Garganwahgah. See Cornplanter.

Garomisopona. A Chumashan village between Goleta and Pt Conception, Cal., in 1542.—Cabrillo, Narr. (1542) in Smith, Colec. Doc. Fla., 183, 1857.

Gash. The winter town of the Sanya-koan (q. v.), a Tlingit clan near C. Fox, s. Alaska. Most of the people have now moved to Ketchikan. (J. R. s.)

Gasins (Gasi'ns, perhaps 'gambling sticks'). A Haida town on the n. w. shore of Lina id., Bearskin bay, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.; occupied by the family Hlgau-ianas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Gaskosada ('it is a waterfall.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca village on Cayuga cr., w. of Lancaster, N. Y.

Falls Village. Morgan, League Iroq., 466, 1851 (common English name). Gá'-sko'-sá-dá'—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886.

Gaspisien (Gaspé is from gachepe, or kéchi, 'the end.'—Vetromile). A name given by early French writers to a part of the Micmac living about Gaspé bay on the Gulf of St Lawrence, Quebec province. Their dialect differs somewhat from that of the other Micmac. They frequently crossed the gulf and made war on the Eskimo and Papinachois. In 1884 the "Micmacs of Gaspé" numbered 71 persons. (J. M.)

Gaspesians.—Lahontan, New Voy., I, 230, 1703 (common English form). Gaspesies.—Hennepin, New Discov., map, 1698.

Gatagetegauning (probably for Kä-tägi'tiganing, 'at the ancient field.'—W. J.). A former Chippewa village on Lac (Vieux) Desert or Gatagetegauning, on the Michigan-Wisconsin state line. The present Vieux Desert Chippewa in Michigan numbered, with the L'Anse band, 668 in 1903.

Ga-ta-gé-te-gaun-ing.—Warren (1852) in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v. 38, 1885. Gete'kitigan.—Baraga Eng.-Ojib. Dict., 185, 1878. Kä'tagi'tiganing.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1905 (correct Chippewa form).

Old Field.—Ibid. Vieux Desert.—Ibid. Vieux Desert band.—La Pointe treaty (1854) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 223, 1873.

Gatga-inans (Gä'tgäina'ns). A Haida town on Hippa id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It is in possession of the family Do-gitinai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 280, 1905.

Gatûñ'wa'li. See Big-mush.

Gaudekan ('bell town'). The principal Huna town, now generally called Huna, in Port Frederick, on the n. shore of Chichagof id., Alaska. Pop. 800 in 1880; 447 (including whites) in 1900.

Gäot'ä'k-än.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Gaud-ah-kan.—Emmons in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., III, pl. xii, 1903. Gaudekän.—Krause, Tlingit Ind., 164, 118, 1885. Koudekan.—Petroff in Tenth Census, Alaska, 31, 1884.

Gawababiganikak (Kawapabikini'kag, 'place of much white earth.'—W. J.). A Chippewa band about White Earth lake, n. w. Minn., officially reported to number 1,735 in 1905.

Gawababiganikak.—Gatschet, Ojibwa MS., B. A. E., 1882. Kawapabikani'kag.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1905. White Earth band.—Common name.

Gawunena. A band of the Arapaho, q. v.

Gayagaanhe (Gä-yä'-gä'-äw'-he', 'its body is inclined.'—Hewitt). The former principal village of the Cayuga, situate near the e. shore of Cayuga lake, 3½ miles s. of Union Springs, N. Y. St Joseph's mission was established there in 1668, and the settlement was destroyed by Gen. Sullivan in 1779. (J. M.)

Cayuga Castle.—Machin, map (1779), cited by Conover, Kanadesaga and Geneva MS., B. A. E. Gä-yä'-ga-an'-ha.—Morgan, League Iroq., 423, 1851. Gä-yä'-gä'-äw'-he'.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886. Goigouin.—See Cayuga. Gwa-u-gweh.—Morgan, League, Iroq., map, 1851. Saint Joseph.—Jes. Rel. for 1670, 63, 1858.

Gayanthwahgeh, Gayehtwägeh, Gayenthwahgh. See Cornplanter.

Gay Head. A village, probably of the Wampanoag, formerly on the w. end of Marthas Vineyard, off the s. e. coast of Massachusetts. It contained 260 souls in 1698, and in 1809 there were still 240 Indian and negro mixed-bloods, who probably represented the entire Indian population of the island. (J. M.)

Gearksutite. A fluorine mineral resembling kaolin, found in Greenland. The word is compounded of arksutite (q. v.) and the Greek γῆ, 'earth.' (A. F. C.)

Geguep. A former Chumashan village near Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Geies (or Geier). One of the non-Caddoan tribes reported by Father Damian Massanet, comisario for the missions of Texas, on the road from Coahuila (probably the presidio rather than the province) to the Tejas (Texas) country in the 18th century.—Dictamen Fiscal, Mexico, Nov. 30, 1716, cited by H. E. Bolton, in fn, 1906.

Gekelemukpechuenk. A Delaware village in Ohio in 1770–73 and the residence of Netawatwees, the principal chief of the tribe. Perhaps identical with White Eyes' town. It was abandoned in 1773 or 1774, the inhabitants removing to Coshocton, on the E. side of the Muskingum, which Netawatwees henceforth made his chief residence.—Loskiel, Missions, 1794.

Gelelemend ('leader'). A Delaware chief, born about 1722; known also as Killbuck, the name borne by his father, one of the best educated Indians of his time. He was chosen on the death of White Eyes, about 1778, to succeed him as acting chief of the nation during the minority of the hereditary sachem of the Turtle or Unami division, having in the council won a reputation for sagacity and discretion. Like his predecessor he strove to maintain friendship with the whites, and was encouraged in this by the Indian agents and military commandants at Pittsburgh, who promised the aid of the American Government in the uplifting and civilization of the Indians if lasting peace could be effected. The war party, led by Hopocan, prevailed, however, in the council. Gelelemend was therefore invited by the officer commanding the garrison to remove with others of the peace party to an island in Allegheny r., where they could be under the protection of the soldiery, but they were not protected from a party of murderous white men that fell upon them when returning from the massacre of nearly 100 Christian Delawares at Gnadenhutten in 1782, when the young chief and all the others except a few were slain. Gelelemend made his escape by swimming, but the documents that William Penn had given to the Indians were destroyed. His services were of value in bringing about a general peace, but the Munsee held him responsible for the misfortunes that had befallen the Delawares, and to escape their vengeance he remained with his family at Pittsburgh long after peace was proclaimed. He joined the Moravian Indians in the end and lived under the protection of the settlement, still sedulously avoiding his vindictive foes. He was baptized by the name of William Henry and lived till Jan., 1811.

Geliac. A former Chumashan village on Patera ranch, near Santa Barbara, Cal. Geliac.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1862. Geliac.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, i, 459, 1874. Gelo.—Ibid.

Génau. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Genega's Band (named from its chief, Genega, 'Dancer'). A Paviotso band formerly living at the mouth of Truckee i., w. Nevada, said to number 290 in 1859. They are no longer recognized under this name.

Dancer band.—Burton, City of Saints, 472, 1862. Ge-nega's band.—Dodge in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 374, 1860. Genega.—Burton, op. cit.

Geneseo (Tyo'nesi'yo', 'there it has fine banks.'—Hewitt). An important Seneca settlement formerly situated about the site of Geneseo, N. Y. In 1750 it contained 40 or more large houses. It was destroyed by Sullivan in 1779.

Genosio.—Ft Johnson conf. (1757) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 254, 1856. Cheneses.—Bouquet (1764) quoted by Rupp, West Penn., app., 147, 1846. Chenese Castle.—Machin (1779) quoted by Conover, MS., B. A. E. Chenessies.—Croghan (1765) quoted by Rupp, West Penn., app., 172, 1846 (band). Chenessios.—Colden (1764) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 609, 1856. Chenissios.—Ibid., 610. Chennesse Castle.—Machin (1779) quoted by Conover, op. cit. Chennussios.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., index, 291, 1861. Chenosio.—Johnson (1759), ibid., vii, 376, 1856. Chenusius.—Watts (1764) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., x, 522, 1871. Chenusios.—Johnson (1763) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 522, 1856. Chenusio.—Johnson (1759), ibid., 379. Chinesee.—Sullivan (1779) quoted by Conover, MS., B. A. E. Chinesse.—Jones (1780) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., viii, 786, 1857. Chinnese.—Pemberton (c. i. 1792) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., ii, 177, 1810. Chinosia.—Ft Johnson conf. (1757) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 264, 1856. Genesee.—Livermore (1779) in N. H. Hist. Soc. Coll., vi, 328, 1850. Genesee.—Knox (1791) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., i, 226, 1832. Genesees.—Mallery in Proc. A. A. S., xxvi, 352, 1877. Gennees.—Goldthwait (1766) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., x, 121, 1809. Genessee.—Machin, map (1779), quoted by Conover, MS., B. A. E. Ginnace.—McKendry (1779) quoted by Conover, ibid. Ischua.—Day, Penn., 644, 1843. Jennessee.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. 5, 111, 1848. Kanonskegon.—Pouchot, map (1758) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 694, 1858. Tsinusios.—Claus (1777), ibid., viii, 702, 1857. Tyo'nesi'yo'.—Hewitt, in fn, 1890 (correct Seneca form). Upper Senecas.—Claus (1777) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., viii, 702, 1857. Zeneschio.—Loskiel (1794) misquoted by Day, Penn., 644, 1843. Zoneschio.—Loskiel, Missions, pt. 3, 32, 1794. Zoneschio.—Ibid., pt. 2, 122. Zonesschio.—Zeisberger (1750) quoted by Conover, MS., B. A. E. Zonne-schio.—Conover, ibid.

Genizaros (Span. transl. of Turkish yeni-cheri (Eng. janizary), lit. 'new troops,' referring to a former body of Turkish infantry largely recruited from compulsory conscripts and converts taken from Christian subjects). A term applied to certain Indians who were purchased or captured from predatory tribes and settled by the Spaniards in villages along the Rio Grande, N. Mex. One of these "pueblos de Genizaros" was established at Abiquiu before 1748; another at Tome, farther down on the Rio Grande, at a subsequent date, and a third apparently at Belen. See Villa-Señor, Theatro Am., 416, 1748; Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Pap., iii, 197, 1890; iv, 54, 1892. (F. W. H.)

Genobey. A large Jumano settlement E. of the Rio Grande, in N. Mex., in 1598.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., xvi, 114, 1871.

Xenopus.—Ibid., 123.

Gens. See Clan and Gens.

Gens de la Sapinière (French: 'people of the fir tree'). A numerous tribe formerly living N. N. W. of L. Superior and trading with the English on Hudson bay. Du Lhut, in 1684, endeavored to draw their trade to the French. They were distinct from the Cree, Chippewa, and Assiniboin, and may have been a part of the Maskegon.—La Chesnaye (1697) in Margry, Déc., vi, 7, 1886.

Gens de Païse (corruption of French Gens du Pais, 'people of the land'; or of Gens du Panse, 'band of the paunch'). Given as a band of Sioux at the Mandan subagency, N. Dak., in 1832 (Ex. Doc. 90, 22d Cong., 1st sess., 63, 1832), but probably intended for the Hidatsa, q. v.

Gens de Pied (French: 'foot people'). A former band of Assiniboin in 33 lodges W. of Eagle hills, Assiniboia, Canada.—Henry (1808) in Coues, New Light, II, 491, 1897.

Foot Assiniboin.—Ibid., 523.

Gens des Lacs (French: 'people of the lakes'). One of the 5 tribes into which Badin (Ann. de la Prop. de la Foi, IV, 536, 1843) in 1830 divided the Sioux nation. What people he includes has not been ascertained, possibly only the Mdewakanton. Prichard (Phys. Hist. Mankind, v, 140, 1847) uses the term Gens du Lac as equivalent to People of the Leaves, and includes the 4 most easterly Dakota tribes, not only the Mdewakanton (the true Gens des Lacs), but the Wahpeton (Leaf villages), Wahpekute (Leaf-shooters), and Sisseton.

Gens du Large (French: 'wandering people'). One of the two divisions of the Dakota, as given by Long (Exp. St. Peters r., I, 380, 1824), comprising the following tribes: Kahra (a Sisseton band), Miakchakesa (Sisseton), Tetoans (Teton), Wahpkakota (Wahpekute), Wahkpatoan (Wahpeton), Yanktoan (Yanktonai), Yanktoan (Yankton). It embraces all the group except the Mdewakanton, his Gens du Lac.

Dacota errans.—Balbi, Atlas Ethnog., 55, 1826.

Roaming Dakotas.—Long, op. cit., I, 380.

Gentaienton ('meadows lying together.'—Hewitt). One of the chief villages of the Erie, q. v. Its location is not known, but the name indicates that it was on a plain.

Gentagega.—Jes. Rel., Thwaites ed., LVIII, 75, 1899.

Gentauehronons.—Ibid., XLII, 197, 1899.

Gentaienton.—Ibid., LXI, 195, 1900. Kentaienton.—Shea, note in Charlevoix, New France, II, 266, 1866.

Gergencesens. A subdivision of the so-called Thamien group of the Costanoan Indians of California.

Gergencesens.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 22, 1860.

Gerguensens.—Ibid. Gerzuensens.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 452, 1874.

German influence. German influence on the aborigines N. of Mexico has made itself felt in three particular regions—among the Eskimo of Labrador and Greenland; among the Delawares, Mahican, and some of the Iroquois in Pennsylvania, New York, and Ontario; and among the Cherokee of South Carolina. In those regions Moravian missionaries have endeavored to convert the natives with considerable success. The Moravian missions in Greenland began in 1721 under Egede. The station of Ny Herrnhut dates from 1734. From the account given by Thompson (Moravian Missions, 211, 1890) the native Christians in Greenland number some 1,500, and their customs and habits have been much changed for the better, especially where the influence of whalers and traders has not been too strong. The Moravian efforts in Labrador began at Hopedale in 1752 under Ehrhardt, but the first successful establishment was made in 1771. The general result has been to modify considerably the dress, implements, habits, and beliefs of the natives, and particularly their sexual morality (Delabarre in Bull. Geog. Soc. Phila., 145–151, 1902). The disappearance of the Eskimo pirates, who once infested the straits of Belleisle, and the general improvement of Arctic navigation have been brought about through the change in Eskimo life and character. Turner observed that some of the Eskimo children of the Labrador missions use the German words for numbers up to 10 in their counting-out games, having caught them from the missionaries. Much of what the Moravians have accomplished in Greenland has been done in spite of the Danish authorities rather than with their cooperation. Moravian missionaries in the 18th century and the early years of the 19th, labored among the Mahican of E. New York (Rauch having begun the work in 1740), among the Delawares and other tribes of Pennsylvania, Zeisberger being "the apostle of the Delawares," and among the Iroquois in parts of Pennsylvania, New York, and Canada (Thompson, op. cit., 267–341). They exercised restraint on the Indians during the French-English and Revolutionary wars, when their converts generally were illtreated by all sorts of white men. According to Thompson (p. 276) the Moravian mission of 1735 to Georgia was the first company from any quarter that reached the shores of America with the express and leading object of evangelizing natives. Their labors began among the Creeks. Moravian missions were established also among the Cherokee (Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 83, 1900). According to some the father of Sequoya, the inventor of the Cherokee alphabet, was a German of the Georgia colony.

(A. F. C.)

Geronimo (Spanish for Jerome, applied by the Mexicans as a nickname; native name Goyathlay, 'one who yawns'). A medicine-man and prophet of the Chiricahua Apache who, in the latter part of the 19th century, acquired notoriety through his opposition to the authorities and by systematic and sensational advertising; born about 1834 at the headwaters of Gila r., N. Mex., near old Ft Tulerosa. His father was Taklishim, 'The Gray One,' who was not a chief, although his father (Geronimo's grandfather) assumed to be a chief without heredity or election. Geronimo's mother was known as Juana. When it was decided, in 1876, in consequence of depredations committed in Sonora, of cant. During 1884-85 he gathered a band of hostiles, who terrorized the inhabitants of s. Arizona and New Mexico, as well as of Sonora and Chihuahua, in Mexico. Gen. Crook proceeded against them with instructions to capture or destroy the chief and his followers. In Mar., 1886, a truce was made, followed by a conference, at which the terms of surrender were agreed on; but Geronimo and his followers having again fled to the Sierra Madre across the Mexican frontier, and Gen. Miles having been placed in command, active operations were renewed and their surrender was ultimately effected in the following August. The entire band, numbering about 340, including Geronimo and Nachi, the hereditary chief, were deported as prisoners of war, first to Florida and later to Alabama, being finally settled at Ft Sill, Okla., where they now reside under military supervision and in prosperous condition, being industrious workers and careful spenders.

(J. M. C. T.)

Gesture language. See Sign language.

Gewauga (Odji'wāgēn', 'it is bitter, salty.'—Hewitt). A Cayuga village on the site of the present Union Springs, town of Springport, on the E. side of Cayuga lake, N. Y. It was destroyed by Sullivan's troops, Sept. 22, 1779.

(J. N. B. H.)

Ge-wā'-ga.—Morgan, League Iroq., 470, 1851. Ge-wau'-ga.—Ibid., 423. Ge-waw'-ga.—Adams in Cayuga Co. Hist. Soc. Coll., no. 7, 176, 1889.

Ghost dance. A ceremonial religious dance connected with the messiah doctrine, which originated among the Paviotso in Nevada about 1888, and spread rapidly among other tribes until it numbered among its adherents nearly all the Indians of the interior basin, from Missouri r. to or beyond the Rockies. The prophet of the religion was a young Paiute Indian, at that time not yet 35 years of age, known among his own people as Wovoka ('Cutter'), and commonly called by the whites Jack Wilson, from having worked in the family of a ranchman named Wilson. Wovoka seems already to have established his reputation as a medicine-man when, about the close of 1888, he was attacked by a dangerous fever. While he was ill an eclipse spread excitement among the Indians, with the result that Wovoka became delirious and imagined that he had been taken into the spirit world, and there received a direct revelation from the God of the Indians. Briefly stated, the revelation was to the effect that a new dispensation was close at hand by which the Indians would be restored to their inheritance and reunited with their departed friends, and that they must prepare for the event by practising the songs and dance ceremonies which the prophet gave them. Within a very short time which the Mexican government complained, to remove the Chiricahua from their reservation on the s. frontier to San Carlos, Ariz., Geronimo and others of the younger chiefs fled into Mexico. He was arrested later when he returned with his band to Ojo Caliente, N. Mex., and tilled the ground in peace on San Carlos res. until the Chiricahua became discontented because the Government would not help them irrigate their lands. In 1882 Geronimo led one of the bands that raided in Sonora and surrendered when surrounded by Gen. George H. Crook's force in the Sierra Madre. He had one of the best farms at San Carlos, when trouble arose in 1884 in consequence of the attempt of the authorities to stop the making of tiswin, the native intoxithe dance spread to the tribes E. of the mountains, where it became known commonly as the Spirit or Ghost dance. The dancers, men and women together, held hands, and moved slowly around in a circle, facing toward the center, keeping time to songs that were sung without any instrumental accompaniment. Hypnotic trances were a common feature of the dance. Among the Sioux in Dakota the excitement, aggravated by local grievances, led to an outbreak in the winter of 1890-91. The principal events in this connection were the killing of Sitting Bull, Dec. 15, 1890, and the massacre at Wounded Knee, Dec. 29. The doctrine has now faded out, and the dance exists only as an occasional social function. In the Crow dance of the Cheyenne and Arapaho, a later development from the Ghost dance proper, the drum is used, and many of the ordinary tribal dances have incorporated Ghost-dance features, including even the hypnotic trances.

GERONIMO

The belief in the coming of a messiah, or deliverer, who shall restore his people to a condition of primitive simplicity and happiness, is probably as universal as the human race, and takes on special emphasis among peoples that have been long subjected to alien domination. In some cases the idea seems to have originated from a myth, but in general it may safely be assumed that it springs from a natural human longing. Both the Quichua of Peru and the Aztec of Mexico, as well as more cultured races, had elaborate messiah traditions, of which the first Spanish invaders were quick to take advantage, representing themselves as the long-expected restorers of ancient happiness. Within the United States nearly every great tribal movement originated in the teaching of some messianic prophet. This is notably true of the Pontiac conspiracy in 1763-64, and of the combination organized by Tecumseh (q. v.) and his brother, the prophet Tenskwatava (q. v.), shortly before the War of 1812. Of similar nature in more recent times is the doctrine formulated on Columbia r. by Smohalla. See Mooney, Ghost Dance Religion, 14th Rep. B. A. E., pt. II, 1896. See Dance, Mythology, Religion. (J. M.)

Ghuacлахatche. A former Upper Creek town on lower Tallapoosa r., Ala., between Kulumi and the Atasi towns.—Bartram, Travels, 461, 1791.

Giants. See Popular fallacies.

Gidanemuk (or Gikidanum). A band of Serranos (q. v.) living on Tejon and neighboring creeks in the Tehachapi mts., s. Cal. The term is that which they apply to themselves. (A. L. K.)

Giguay. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with San Juan Bautista mission, Cal.—Engelhardt, Franciscans in Cal., 398, 1897.

Gila Apache. The name Gila, or Xila, was apparently originally that of an Apache settlement w. of Socorro, in s. w. New Mexico, and as early as 1630 was applied to those Apache residing for part of the time on the extreme headwaters of the Rio Gila in that territory, evidently embracing those later known as Mimbrenos, Mogollones, and Warm Springs (Chiricahua) Apache, and later extended to include the Apache living along the Gila in Arizona. The latter were seemingly the Arivaipa and Chiricahua, or a part of them. There were about 4,000 Indians under this name in 1853, when some of their bands were gathered at Ft Webster, N. Mex., and induced by promise of supplies for a number of years to settle down and begin farming. They kept the peace and made some progress in industry, but were driven back to a life of pillage when the supplies were stopped, the treaty not having been confirmed. They are no longer recognized under this name. The term Gileños has also been employed to designate the Pima residing on the Gila in Arizona. (F. W. H.)

Apaches de Xila.—Benavides, Memorial, 53, 1630. Apaches gileños.—Garcés (1769) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., II, 371, 1856. Apaches jileños.—Escudero, Notic. de Sonora y Sinaloa, 69, 1849. Gileños.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., map, 1861. Gelinos.—Hamy in Bull. Soc. d'Anthrop., de Paris, 788, 1883. Gila Apaches.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 436, 1853. Gilans.—Hughes, Doniphan's Exped., 216, 1848. Gilas.—Rivera, Diario y Derrotero, leg. 950, 1736. Gileñas.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 122, 1861. Gileno.—Adelung and Vater, Mithridates, III, 178, 1816. Gileños.—Arrievita (1791) quoted by Baneroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 388, 1889. Gileños Apaches.—Garcés (1769) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., II, 375, 1856. Southern Apache.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 1871, 191, 1872. Tjuicucjen-ne.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 59, 1861. Tjuicucjen-né.—Escudero, Notic. Estad. de Chihuahua, 212, 1834 (native name). Xileños.—Rudo Ensayo (ca. 1763), Smith ed., 20, 1863. Xileños.—Alegre, Hist. Comp. Jesus, I, 336, 1841. Yabipais Gileños.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 452, 1900.

Gilak. A Magemint settlement near C. Romanzoff, Alaska; pop. 22 in 1890. Gilakhamiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 111, 1893.

Gilimis. A former village, said to have been Esselen, connected with San Carlos mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860.

Gimiels. A band of almost pure Yuma in N. Lower California (Taylor in Browne, Res. Pac. Slope, app., 53-54, 1869). Perhaps the Comeya.

Gipuy. A village occupied by the ancestors of the present Queres of Santo Domingo pueblo, 1½ m. E. of Thornton, on the brink of Arroyo de Galisteo, n. central N. Mex. In consequence of a flood which destroyed a portion of the pueblo, Gipuy was abandoned prior to 1591, and another village bearing the same name was built 4 m. w., nearly on the site of the present Santo Domingo. It was the latter Gipuy that was visited and named Santo Domingo (q. v.) by Castaño de Sosa in 1591; but after 1605 this pueblo was also destroyed by a freshet, the inhabitants moving farther w., where they built another village on the banks of the Rio Grande, naming it Huashpa Tzena. See Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 185-187, 1892.

(F. W. H.)

Gi-pu-i.—Bandler in Ausland, 814, 1882. Gi-pu-y.—Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 22, 185, 1892. Guiperi.—Onate cited by Bandler in Arch. Inst. Bull., I, 18, 1883 (misprint). Guipui.—Onate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., XVI, 102, 1871 (or Santo Domingo). Gui-pu-y.—Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 34, 1890.

Girty's Town. A Shawnee village in 1795 on St Marys r., E. of Celina reservoir, Auglaize co., Ohio. It took its name from Simon Girty, an Indian trader living with the Shawnee. (J. M.)

Gist, George. See Sequoya.

Gitin-gidjats (Gitin-gi'djats, 'servants of the Gitins'). A family of the Eagle clan of the Haida. This family, who are of low social rank and are distributed among the houses of the Gitins of Skidegate, once had a town in connection with the Lana-chaadus, on Shingle bay, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., but people of Kloo enslaved so many of them that they gave up their town and independent family organization, entering the different houses of the Gitins as servants.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 273, 1905.

Gyitingits'ats.—Boas, Twelfth Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 24, 25, 1898. Gyit'ingyits'ats.—Boas, Fifth Rep., ibid., 26, 1889.

Gitinka-lana (Gi'tinq'a-lā'na). A town of the Yagunstan-lnagai of the Haida, on the N. shore of Masset inlet, Brit. Col., where it expands into the inner bay.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Gitins (Gitins). An important subdivision of the Eagle clan of the Haida. Gitins is a synonym for Eagle clan, and the name of the subdivision would naturally have been Hlgaiu-gitinai, but the family was so prominent that, as in a similar case at Masset, it came to be called simply Gitins. This was the subdivision or family that owned the town of Skidegate, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was divided into two principal branches—Nayuuns-haidagai and Nasagas-haidagai. Subordinate branches were the Lagalaigh-lanas and the Gitin-gidjats.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 273, 1905.

Gyit'ins.—Boas, Twelfth Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 24, 1898.

Gitlapshoi ('grassland people'). A division of the Chinook tribe living at Sealand, Pacific co., Wash.

Gi-lā'pō-i.—Boas, Chinook Texts, 260, 1894.

Gituns (Gituns, dialectic variant of Gitins). An important family group of the Haida, living at Masset, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. Its prominence at Masset, like that of the Gitins at Skidegate, was such that no further designation was used. Two principal subdivisions recognized were the Mamun-gitunai and the Undlskadjins-gitunai; inferior divisions were the Tees-gitunai and the Sadjugahl-lanas. (J. R. S.)

Gyit'ins.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 23, 1898. Kitans.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895.

Glacial man. See Antiquity, Archeology.

Glaglahecha ('slovenly ones'). A band of the Sihasapa Teton Sioux, possibly identical with Tizaptan, q. v.

Bad looking ones.—Culbertson in Smithson. Rep. 1850, 141, 1851. Glagla-hecha.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897. Glagla-hetca.—Ibid.

Glaglahecha. A band of the Miniconjou Teton Sioux.

Glagla-heca.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 220, 1897. Glagla-hetca.—Ibid.

Glen-Vowel Band. A band of Kitchikan living on the right bank of upper Skeena r., 4 m. above Hazelton, Brit. Col.; pop. 73 in 1904.—Can. Ind. Aff., 209, 1902; 212, 1904.

Glenaxcuqu. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Glikhikan. A Delaware warrior and orator. He was one of the chief captains of the Delawares, who, in an argument with the French priests in Canada had, in the opinion of the Indians, refuted the Christian doctrine. Thinking to achieve a similar victory and win back to paganism the Christian Delawares, he challenged the Moravian missionaries to a debate in 1769. To the dismay of his admirers he was himself converted to Christianity, and in the following year went to live with the United Brethren. In the Revolutionary war his diplomacy saved the Christian settlements from destruction at the hands of the Hurons under Half-King in 1777, and when the latter, on Sept. 4, 1781, captured him and the German missionaries, their chief interfered to save Glikhikan from the wrath of his Munsee tribesmen who were with the Hurons. Glikhikan was murdered and scalped at Gnadenhuetten on Mar. 8, 1782, by the white savages under Col. David Williamson.

Glooscap. See Nanabozo.

Glue. See Cement.

Gluskap. See Nanabozo.

Gnacsitare. A tribe, supposed to be imaginary, mentioned by Lahontan as living, about 1690, on a long river emptying into the Mississippi in Minnesota, in about the same latitude as Minnesota r. Gnacsitares.—Lahontan, Voyages, I, 119, 1703. Gnacsitaries.—Janson, Stranger in Am., 277, 1807. Gnasitaries.—Coxe, Carolana, 19, 1741. Gnacsitares.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, map, 1744.

Gnadenhuetten (German: 'huts of grace'). The name of several mission villages (5, according to Brinton) established at different periods among the Mahican, Munsee, and Delawares by the Moravian missionaries. The first was settled in 1746 by Moravian Mahican from Shecomeco and Seaticook on the N. side of Mahoning cr., near its junction with the Lehigh, about the present Leighton, Carbon co., Pa. In 1754 it was abandoned for a new village, called New Gnadenhuetten, on the site of Weiss-port, Carbon co., Pa. Delawares and Mahican occupied the village together. Soon after removing here the old village was burned by hostile Indians in 1755, and the new place was for a time deserted. In 1763 the Indians abandoned the settlement for a short time on account of the troubles arising from Pontiac's war. The last and best known village of the name was established on the Muskingum, about the site of the present Gadenhuetten, Tuscarawas co., Ohio, in 1772. Toward the close of the Revolution the inhabitants were removed to Sandusky by the hostile Indians, and on returning to gather their corn were massacred by the Americans in 1782. Consult Heckewelder, Narr., 1820; Howells, Three Villages, 1884; Loskiel, Hist. Miss. United Brethren, 1794. (J. M.)

Gaden Auetten.—Rupp, Northampton, etc., Cos., 220, 1845 (misprint). Gnadenhuetten.—Loskiel, Hist. Miss. United Brethren, pt. 3, 82, 1794. Gua- den Huetten.—Rupp, op. cit., 86 (misprint).

Goasila ('north people'). A Wakashan tribe of Smith inlet, Brit. Col., speaking the Kwakiutl subdialect. The gentes are Gyigyilkam, Sisintlae, and Komkyutis. One of their towns is Waitlas. Pop. 48 in 1901; 36 in 1904.

Gua-shil-la.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859. Guasila.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 53, 1890. Kwashilla.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab., Brit. Col., 117b, 1884. Kwasila.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 226, 1887. Kwawshela.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. 2, 70, 1905. Kwaw-she-lah.—Can. Ind. Aff., 146, 1879. Qoasi-la.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 6, 131, 1887. Quatsinas.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 316, 1868. Quaw-she-lah.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 226, 1887. Quoisillas.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Qusisillas.—Can. Ind. Aff., 113, 1879.

Goch ('wolf'). The name given by the southern Tlingit to one of the two sides or phratrises into which the Tlingit are divided. The northern Tlingit call this phratry Chak, q. v.

Gote.—Swanton, field notes, 1904, B. A. E. Khanukh.—Dall, Alaska, 414, 1870 (the word for petrel is here used erroneously).

Godbout. A trading station of the Montagnais and Nascapee at the mouth of Godbout r., on the St Lawrence, Quebec. In 1904 the Indians there numbered 40, the population having been stationary for 20 years.

Godthaab. The chief Danish residence and Eskimo missionary station on the w. coast of Greenland, about lat. 64°.—Crantz, Hist. Greenland, I, map, 1767.

Goggles. Inventions related to the visor and eyeshade, to reduce the amount of sunlight penetrating the eye. After the long Arctic winter comes the trying season of the low sun which, glancing over the snow and Arctic waters, nearly blinds the hunter and fisher. All northern peoples wear vizors of some kind, but it is not enough that the Eskimo should have his eyes shaded; he must have a device through which the eyes look out of narrow slits or small elliptical holes. Indeed, in many localities the shade and goggles are united. From E. to the farthest W. the Eskimo have succeeded in perfecting such apparatus. The Eskimo and Aleut spend much pains and skill in the manufacture of their goggles. They differ in materials, form, workmanship, method of attachment, and amount of foreign acculturation according to locality and exposure. Goggles or eyeshades were rarely worn by the Indians. In the

WOODEN GOGGLES; HUDSON BAY ESKIMO. (TURNER)

Report of the National Museum for 1894 (pp. 281-306, figs. 15-35) this device is well illustrated. Consult also Boas, Murdoch, Nelson, and Turner in the Reports of the Bureau of American Ethnology. In the writings of Arctic explorers also goggles are mentioned. (O. T. M.)

Gohate. A former Maricopa rancheria on the Rio Gila in s. Arizona; visited by Sedelmair in 1744 (Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 366, 1889). Apparently distinct from Cohate.

Gohlkahin (Go'lkáhin, 'prairie people'). A division of the Jicarillas. See Guhlkaide. (J. M.)

Going Snake (Pnáda-na'ti, signifying that a person is 'going along in company with a snake'). A Cherokee chief, prominent about 1825.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 522, 1900.

Goiogouen (Gwěño' gwě'n', 'place where locusts were taken out of a liquid.'—Hewitt). One of the chief towns of the Cayuga in 1670, and from which the tribe took its name, situated at this time on the e. side of Cayuga lake, on Great Gully brook, about 4 m. s. of the present Union Springs, and 4 leagues from the town of Tiohero (Kiohero), lying at the s. end of Cayuga lake, and 6 leagues from Onnonare, these three being the principal towns of the Cayuga when first known. The inhabitants of Goiogouen were composed in part of Cayuga and in part of adopted captives from the Hurons, the Conestoga, and the Neutral Nation. This town or 'Bourg d'Oïogouen,' in 1668, according to the Jesuit Relation for 1669, contained more than 2,000 souls and could muster more than 300 warriors. While the Cayuga were proud-spirited, the missionaries found them more tractable and less fierce than were the Onondaga and the Oneida. At this town Father de Carheil dedicated the mission of St Joseph on Nov. 9, 1668, and 7 days later witnessed the horrible spectacle of the burning and the eating of a captive Conestoga woman. Archeologic evidence indicates, what is usual in regard to the permanency of Indian village sites, that this town has been removed from site to site within a radius of 10 miles or more.

In 1779 Gen. Sullivan's army found three places named Cayuga; namely, (1) Cayuga Castle, containing about 15 very large houses of squared logs, superior to anything seen before among these Indians; the troops destroyed here 110 acres of corn; (2) Upper Cayuga, containing 14 houses, situated about 1 m. s. of the Castle; (3) East Cayuga, 'Old Town,' containing about 13 houses, situated about 1 m. n. e. from the Castle. In these towns the troops found apples, peaches, potatoes, turnips, onions, pumpkins, squashes, cucumbers, watermelons, and vegetables of various kinds in great abundance. These with other hamlets of the Cayuga were burned and the fruit and vegetables destroyed by the troops, Sept. 23-24, 1779. (J. N. B. H.)

Caiougo.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., index, 1861. Cajouge.—Doc. of 1687, ibid., III, 446, 1853. Cayauge.—Ibid., 480. Cayuga.—Proc. at Johnson Hall (1765), ibid., VII, 737, 1856. Gajuka.—Beauchamp, Hist. N. Y. Iroquois, 162, 1905. Ga'-u-gwa.—Morgan, League Iroq., 159, 1851. Goïogouen.—Jes. Rel. 1668-69, Thwaites ed., LI, 184, 1899. Goïogouin.—Ibid., 1673-74, LVIII, 225, 1899. Goïogwen.—Ibid., 1696, LXV, 25, 1900. Goïog8en.—Ibid., 24. Goyogouh.—Cusick, Sketches, 19, 1828. Goyogouin.—Jes. Rel., index, 1858. Gué-u-gweh.—Morgan, League Iroq., 51, 65, 1851. Gweugweh.—Ibid., 170. Mission de St Joseph.—Jes. Rel., 1670, 63, 1858. Oïogien.—Jes. Rel., Thwaites ed., index, LXXIII, 1901. Oïogoen.—Ibid., 1656-57, XLIII, 185, 1899. Oïogouen.—Ibid., 1655-56, XLII, 99, 1899. Oïogouan.—Ibid., 1656-57, XLIII, 167, 1899. Oïogouen.—Ibid., 1660-61, XLVII, 81, 1899. Oïogouin.—Ibid., 1673-77, LX, 77, 1900. Oïoguen.—Ibid., 1659-61, XLVI, 181, 1899. Oïogwen.—Ibid., 1666-67, L, 197, 1899. Oïog8en.—Ibid., 106. Oïogouen.—Ibid., 1668-69, LI, 172, 1899. Oneyote.—Jes. Rel., index, 1858. Oñen.—Ibid., Oñneoté.—Ibid., 1653, 18 (given as the chief 'bourg' or capital of the Onienhronons, but probably a mistake for Onnontare, q. v.). Oñoen.—Ibid., index. Oñuquens.—Jes. Rel., 1676-77, Thwaites ed., LX, 173, 1900.

Gold. Although gold in the form of nuggets occurs in more than one section of the continent n. of Mexico, the tribes in general were practically without knowledge of its use. In a few cases objects of gold have been obtained from mounds in the Ohio valley, notably in the Turner group, Hamilton co., Ohio, where a small copper pendant was found retaining traces of a thin plating of gold, and bits of the filmy sheet were also found in the débris (Putnam). This plating with thin sheet gold is suggestive of well-known Mexican work, and along with other evidence obtained from mounds in Ross co., Ohio, tends to strengthen the belief that the mound-builders of this region had more or less indirect intercourse with the people of central Mexico. Some rudely shaped and perforated gold beads were found in one of the Etowah mounds in Georgia (Jones), and finds of slight importance are reported from other localities.

The most interesting objects of gold found in connection with native remains come from Florida, and several of these have been published by Kunz. One of the specimens described was obtained from a mound in Orange co.—a flat rectangular pendant notched at the upper end for the attachment of a cord. It was associated with a human skeleton, and had been worn as a pendant in connection with a necklace of glass beads. Its weight is 75½ dwts. A second specimen is a pendant ornament 2¼ in. in length and nearly 1 in. wide, and weighing 61½ dwts. It is convex on one face and flat on the other, and is grooved at the upper end for the attachment of a cord. A third specimen is a disk of thin sheet gold, 3½ in.

in diameter and weighing 19 dwts., with repoussé embellishment about the edge and a circular boss at the center. It was found in a mound in Orange co., and in appearance closely resembles gold ornaments found in large numbers in the Isthmian region. A fourth specimen, also from an Orange co. mound, is a plain disk of thin metal nearly 2½ in. in diameter and having a central perforation. A very interesting object of gold, or rather of gold-silver alloy, was obtained from a mound in Manatee co., s. Fla., and is described by Rau. It is cut from a piece of thin gold plate, and graphically represents the head of a crested bird, probably the ivory-bill woodpecker, the neck being prolonged in a

GOLD PENDANT
FROM A MOUND;
ORANGE CO.,
FLORIDA.
(KUNZ)

GOLD ORNAMENT
FROM A MOUND;
SUMTER CO.,
FLORIDA.
(KUNZ)

GOLD ORNAMENT FROM A MOUND;
ORANGE CO., FLORIDA. (KUNZ)

thin knife-like blade. The conventional treatment of the bird is characteristically Floridian, and the object is almost certainly of native make. The alloy consists of 893 parts of gold to 107 of silver, and may be of Spanish origin, although it is more likely to have been derived from Central America or Mexico.

Although the early Spanish explorers of Florida found some gold in possession of the natives and were led to believe that it had been mined in the mountains to the N., the evidence on this point is unsatisfactory, and it seems highly probable, as stated Sir John Hawkins, that most of the gold observed in Florida had been derived from Spanish vessels wrecked on the coast on their homeward voyage from the gold-producing districts of middle America.

GOLD ORNAMENT FROM A MOUND; MANATEE CO., FLORIDA. LENGTH 9 IN. (RAU)

Consult Cabeza de Vaca, Relation, Smith trans., 1871; Douglas in Proc. A. A. S., xxxviii, 1890; Jones, Antiq. Southern Inds., 1873; Hawkins in Hakluyt, Voyages, III, 615, 1800; Kunz in Am. Antiq., ix, no. 4, 1887; Le Baron in Smithsonian Rep. 1882, 1884; Moore, various memoirs in Jour. Acad. Nat. Sci. Phila., 1894-1905; Putnam in Peabody Mus. Rep., xvi, 1884; Rau in Smithsonian Rep. 1877, 1878; Thomas in 12th Rep. B. A. E., 1894. (W. H. H.)

Golden Lake. A band of Algonkin occupying a reservation on Golden lake, Renfrew co., Ontario, near Ottawa r.; pop. 86 in 1900, 97 in 1904.

Golok. An Eskimo village in the Nushagak district, Alaska; pop. 29 in 1890.

Gologamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Gonaho. A former Tlingit town at the mouth of Alsek r., Alaska. Cf. Guna-chonken.

Goná'xo.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Gun-nah-ho.—Emmons in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., III, 232, 1903.

Gontiel ('broad river'). Given as an Apache clan at San Carlos agency and Ft Apache, Ariz., in 1881 (Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 112, 1890). The name indicates a former habitat on Gila r.

Goolkizzen ('spotted country'). A band of Apache, probably Coyoteris, formerly under chief Nakaidoklini, q. v.—White, Apache Names of Indian Tribes, MS., B. A. E., 1875.

Gorgetts. A term applied to objects worn in some proximate relation with the gorge or throat. They may be suspended from a string or chain encircling the neck, or may be attached to the dress. They may be simple ornaments not differing materially in form or significance from those used to embellish the ears, hair, wrists, or waist, or they may have special significance as symbols, insignia, charms, etc. They may be plain, or embellished with designs, significant, ornamental, or trivial. They may be natural objects selected because of their beauty, or they may be made of any material presenting an attractive appearance. On account of its beauty of color and its probable sacred significance as being a product of the water, shell was a favorite material and the numerous engraved disks obtained from burial mounds in the middle Eastern states are typical pendant gorgets (see Shellwork). Sheet copper was extensively employed by many of the tribes (see Copper), and stone was in universal use. Gorgets may have one or two marginal perforations for suspension, or they may be pierced centrally or otherwise for attachment, against a supporting surface, as illustrated by the pierced tablets much used by the former Eastern tribes. The name gorget is also applied to composite ornaments of various kinds suspended on or fixed against the chest, the showy breast ornament composed of two rows of bone beads or tubes employed by the Plains tribes being a good example (see Adornment). Gorgets are described in various publications on ethnology and archeology, and a somewhat extended discussion of these and allied ornaments and other objects, by Peabody and Moorehead, appears in Bull. II, Dept. of Archaeol., Phillips Acad., 1906. See Pendants, Pierced tablets, Probemematical objects. (W. H. H.)

SHELL GORGET FROM A MOUND; TENNESSEE. (DIAMETER 4 1/4 IN.)

Goshgoshunk ('hogplace.'—Hewitt). A large settlement of the Munsee and Delawares, with perhaps some Seneca, consisting of 3 villages, on Allegheny r. in 1767, about the upper part of Venango co., Pa. It was visited by the missionary Zeisberger in the year named, and in 1768 it became the seat of a Moravian mission.

Goshgoshuensk.—Loskiel (1794) quoted by Rupp, West Pa., app., 356, 1846. Goshgoshuensk.—Loskiel (1765), Hist. United Brethren, pt. 3, 16, 1794. Goshgoshink.—Ibid., map. Goshgoshunk.—Day, Pa., 102, 1843.

Gosiute (from Gossip, their chief, + Ute). A Shoshonean tribe formerly inhabiting Utah w. of Salt and Utah lakes, and E. Nevada. Jacob Forney, superintendent of Indian affairs for Utah, reported in 1858 that he had visited a small tribe called the Go-sha-utes, who lived about 40 m. w. of Salt Lake City. "They are," he says, "without exception, the most miserable looking set of human beings I ever beheld. I gave them some clothing and provisions. They have heretofore subsisted principally on snakes, lizards, roots, etc." Writing in 1861, Burton (City of Saints, 475, 1862) says: "Gosh Yuta, or Gosha Ute, is a small band, once protégés of the Shoshonee, who have the same language and limits. Their principal chief died about 5 years ago, when the tribe was broken up. A body of 60, under a peaceful leader, were settled permanently on the Indian farm at Deep cr., and the remainder wandered 40 to 200 m. w. of Great Salt Lake City. During the late tumults they have lost 50 warriors, and are now reduced to about 200 men. Like the Ghuzw of Arabia, they strengthen themselves by admitting the outcasts of other tribes, and will presently become a mere banditti." The agent in 1866 said they "are peaceable and loyal, striving to obtain their own living by tilling the soil and laboring for the whites whenever an opportunity presents, and producing almost entirely their own living." In 1868 the superintendent at Utah agency wrote of them: "These Indians range between the Great Salt lake and the land of the western Shoshones. Many of them are quite industrious, maintaining themselves in good part by herding stock and other labor for the settlers." It appears that later they cultivated land to some extent, being scattered over the country in spots where springs and streams afforded arable land. It is asserted by some authors that they are a mixture of Shoshoni and Ute. Their language indicates a closer relationship with the Shoshoni proper than with the Ute and Paiute, though they affiliate chiefly with the latter and have largely intermarried with them. According to Powell they numbered 460 in 1873; in 1885 they were said to number 256.

The following are divisions or subtribes: Pagayuats, Pierruiats, Torountogoats, Tuwuirints, and Unkagarits.

Go-sha-utes.—Forney in Ind. Aff. Rep., 212, 1858. Goshee Utes.—Hatch in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1863, 116, 1864. Goshen Utes.—Head, ibid., 1867, 174, 1868. Goship.—ibid., 349, 1866. Goship Shoshones.—Sen. Misc. Doc. 136, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 21, 1870. Go-ship-utes.—Simpson (1859), Rep. of Explor. across Utah, 36, 1876 (so named from Goship, their chief). Goshiss.—U. S. Statutes, XIII, 177, 1866. Goshoots.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 26, 1863. Goshutes.—Simpson, op. cit., 36. Gosh Yuta.—Burton, City of Saints, 475, 1862. Go-si Utes.—Powell in H. R. Misc. Doc. 86, 43d Cong., 1st sess., 6, 1874. Gos-ta Utes.—Huntington (1857) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 29, 37th Cong., 2d sess., 85, 1862. Kusi-Utahs.—Remy and Branchley, Journ. to Great Salt Lake, II, 412, 1861.

Got (Gôt, 'eagle'). One of the two great exogamic phratries or clans of the Haida. A synonym for the term was Gitins, the meaning of which is uncertain. The Masset dialect made these ōt and Gituns, respectively. (J. R. S.)

Gôt.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, passim, 1905. Koot.—Dawson, Queen Charlotte Ids., 134b., 1880.

Gouges. Stone implements resembling celts or adzes, with one face hollowed out, giving a curved edge. Early writers speak of their use as spiles, in some sections, for tapping sugar-maple trees, the sap running through the groove into the vessel placed beneath. Examples grooved for hafting are rare. Held in the hand and struck with a mallet, or hafted after the manner of a hoe or an adz, they would be serviceable for hollowing out wooden canoes, troughs, mortars, and other vessels, especially in connection with charring. The distribution of these implements does not favor the theory of their use in making canoes, as they are most numerous in the N. where these vessels were mostly of birch-bark, and are rare in the S. where the dugout was the prevailing craft. The gouge is of somewhat rare occurrence w. of the Alleghanies. See Adzes, Celts.

STONE GOUGE; NEW YORK. (1-3)

Consult Abbott, Prim. Indus., 1881; Fowke in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Moorehead, Prehist. Impl., 1900; Rau, Archæol. Coll. Nat. Mus., 1876. (G. F.)

Gourds. The shells of gourds were employed by the Indians for storage and carrying, as water jugs, dippers, spoons, and dishes, and for mixing bowls, pottery smoothers, rattles, sounders for the rasping stick, roof-drains, masks, parts of ornaments, and other purposes, and the flowers were used as food, coloring material, and in ceremonies. A number of species and varieties were commonly raised, producing fruit of different shapes and sizes—globose, lenticular, pyriform, and tubular, with necks of varying length and curve, or without necks, but all of value for the general or special purpose for which they were selectively grown. Gourds were sometimes shaped by pressure or bandaging while growing. Wild species were eaten green, or were used as medicine, but these were rarely made into utensils, while the larger and varied gourds, which were early distributed, like corn, from regions to the S. or derived during the historic period from the Old World, adapted themselves more fully to Indian needs. Aside from their use as domestic utensils they were extensively made into rattles, those e. of the Rocky mts. being almost universally of pyriform gourds, while the shape of the Pueblo gourd rattles is globular, lenticular, and pyriform. The Pueblos also made of gourd-shell heads for certain effigies, noses for masks, the bell ends of flageolets, ornaments for paraphernalia, and resonators for the notched rattle; and the Hopi imitate with a gourd trumpet behind a ceremonial altar the supposed sound made by the mythical plumed serpent. Gourd rattles for ceremonial use by various tribes were sometimes painted, burnt, or etched in symbolic designs. A Navaho specimen bears the outlines of several constellations scratched on the surface. Among the Iroquois gourd rattles were the special sacred objects of the medicine societies. The Cherokee, according to Mooney, fastened hollow gourds to tops of long poles set up near their houses so that the black house-martin might build their nests in them and frighten away the crows. Some of the Pueblos have Gourd or Calabash clans. See Dishes, Rattles, Receptacles.

(W. H.)

Government. Government is the basis of the welfare and prosperity of human society. A government is an organic institution formed to secure the establishment of justice by safeguarding rights and enforcing the performance of duties in accordance with the experience and the established customs and rules of conduct of the governed. The superlative measure of justice obtainable by government is found in the care and protection of the young and the aged, the ready assistance rendered to comrades and the unfortunate, the maintenance of peace, the preservation of the equivalency of rights, the recognition of the equality of persons, the liberty of judgment and personal activity, and the substitution of mercy for vengeance in the punishment of crime. Among primitive folk rules of conduct, formulated by common consent or by customs derived from high ancestral usage, are observed, and these are enforced ultimately by corrective punitive measures. But justice is not secured thereby, and so some other method whereby causes in contention may be more promptly adjudicated is devised, and governments are organized.

Among the Indians of North America there are found many planes of culture, every one of which is characterized by widely differing forms of government—from the simplest family group and village community to the most complex confederation of highly organized tribes. In this area there are scores of distinct political governments, all differing widely in degrees of structural complexity. These differences in organization are determined largely by the extent to which the functions of government are discriminated and by the correlative specialization of organs thus made necessary. For most of the tribes of North America a close study and analysis of the social and political organization are wanting, hence the generalizations possible may as yet be applied safely only to those peoples that have been most carefully studied. However, it may be said in general that kinship, real or fictitious, is the basis of government among the Indians of North America, for the fundamental units of the social structure are groups of consanguine kindred, tracing descent of blood through the male or the female line.

The known units of the social and political organization of the North American Indians are the family, the clan or gens, the phratry, the tribe, and the confederation (q. v.). Of these the tribe and the confederation are the only units completely organized. The structures of only two or three confederations are known, and that of the Iroquois is the type example. The confederation of tribes was not usual, because the union of several tribes brought together many conflicting interests which could not be adjusted without sacrifices that appeared to overbalance the benefits of permanent confederation, and because statesmanship of the needed breadth and astuteness was usually wanting. Hence tribal government remains as the prevailing type of social organization in this area. In most tribes the military were carefully discriminated from the civil functions. The civil government was lodged in a chosen body of men usually called chiefs, of whom there were commonly several grades. Usually the chiefs were organized in a council exercising legislative, judicial, and executive functions in matters pertaining to the welfare of the tribe. The civil chief was not by virtue of his office a military leader. Among the Iroquois the civil chief in order to go to war had to resign his civil function during his absence on the warpath.

In tribal society every structural unit has, so far as known, the right to hold a council. The ohwachira (q. v.) can hold a council, the family can hold a council, and the united ohwachira councils with their officers form the council of the clan or gens. The clan or gens has the right to hold a council. The chiefs of the clans and gentes are the tribal chiefs, who form the tribal council; but on occasions of great emergencies a grand council is held, composed of the chiefs and sub-chiefs, the matrons and head warriors of the ohwachira, and the leading men of the tribe. Besides, there is the council of the confederation. So there are family councils, clan councils, gentile councils, tribal councils, and confederation councils, respectively exercising sway in separate and independent jurisdictions.

In some regions nature is so niggard of her bounties to man that savagery and barbarism had not devised means to enable their sons to dwell there in organized political communities; hence here may be found some of the lowest forms of social organization, if such it may be named. Kroeber says: "In general rudeness of culture the California Indians are scarcely above the Eskimo; and whereas the lack of development of the Eskimo on many sides of their nature is reasonably attributable in part to their difficult and limiting environment, the Indians of California inhabit a country naturally as favorable, it would seem, as might be. If the degree of civilization attained by people depends in any large measure on their habitat, as does not seem likely, it might be concluded from the case of the California Indians that natural advantages were an impediment rather than an incentive to progress" (Univ. Cal. Publ., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., 11, no. 3, 81, 1904). This question of the effect of environment on the activities and development of peoples is one still requiring much scientific study.

Dixon (Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt. 3, 1905), in treating of the northern Maidu of California, describes a state of society largely similar to that of the Hupa as noted in general terms by Goddard. Among the Maidu he finds no trace of gentile or totemic grouping. Aside from the village communities there was no definite organization. Every village or group of small villages had a headman or chief (the office being in no case hereditary), who was chosen largely through the aid of the shaman, who was thought to reveal to the electors the choice of the spirits. Mature years and wealth, ability, and generosity were strong recommendations in making a selection. Tenure of office lasted only during good behavior. The functions of the chief were largely advisory, although force of character and ability might in some cases secure a larger measure of respect and obedience. There also appears to have been "a rather indeterminate council, composed of the older members of the Secret Society."

Goddard (Univ. Cal. Publ., Am. Archaeol. and Ethnol., 1, no. 1, 1903) says there were no organization and no formalities in the government of the village or tribe among the Hupa. "Formal councils were unknown, although the chief might, and often did, take the advice of his men in a collected body." Each village had a headman, whose wealth gave him the power of a chief and maintained him in that power, and he was obeyed because from him food was obtained in times of scarcity. If trouble arose, he settled the dispute with money. While the people obeyed him, whatever he had was at their service. "His power descended to his son at his death, if his property also so descended. On the other hand, anyone who, by industry or extraordinary abilities, had acquired more property might obtain the dignity and power." The family and the village communities were the units of the social organization.

According to Powers (Overland Mo., viii, 530, 1872), among the Karok of California the chief exercises no authority beyond his own village, wherein his functions are chiefly advisory. He can state the law or the custom and the facts, and he may give his opinion, but he can hardly pronounce and execute judgment.

Kroeber (op. cit., 83), in speaking of the Indians of California generally, says that the social structure was simple and loose, there being no trace of a gentile organization and that it is hardly correct to speak of tribes. Above the family the only units of organization were the village and the dialect; the common bond was similarity of language or frequency and cordiality of intercourse; in most cases the larger groups were nameless, while the village communities were usually named from localities; the lack of organization generally made the systematic classification of the divisions of any large body of Indians difficult; in population and social life the village approximated a localized clan, but, being the largest political unit, it corresponded in a measure to a tribe. In so simple a condition of society difference of rank naturally found but little scope. The influence of chiefs was small, and no distinct classes of nobles or slaves were known.

Mooney says that the Kiowa government was formerly lodged in a council of chiefs, composed of the presiding chief, the chiefs of the several bands, and the war chiefs. Women had no voice in the government. The Cheyenne have no head chief, but instead have a council composed of 40 chiefs and 4 ex-chiefs.

Some of the tribes, like the Five Civilized Tribes, the eastern Cherokee, and the Seneca of New York, have written constitutions patterned largely after European ideas. That of the Seneca is confirmed by the legislature of New York.

See Chiefs, Clan and Gens, Confederation, Family, Kinship, Social organization, Tribe. (J. N. B. H.)

Governmental policy. The policy of the several governments toward the Indians and their methods of pursuing it were often at variance, and therefore should not be confused. The policy itself may have been just, equitable, and humane, while the method of carrying it into effect by those to whom this duty was intrusted was sometimes unjust, oppressive, and dishonest. The governments, other than those of the United States and the colonies, which have had control of parts of the territory N. of Mexico are Great Britain, France, Spain, Russia, Denmark, Sweden, and the Netherlands. Although the policy adopted by them in their dealings with the Indians differed in some important respects, all agreed in assuming the right of dominion, based on discovery, without regard to the natives. In all the contests between the European nations regarding their claims to territory in the New World the rights of the Indians nowhere were allowed to intervene. The earliest charters, as those to Raleigh and Gilbert, make no allusion to the natives, while most of those of the 17th century call briefly for their Christianization, and efforts to this end were made to some extent in most of the colonies. The questions of most importance in the relations of the whites with the Indians were those relating to the title to the soil. Although each government insisted on the right of dominion in its acquired territory and that of granting the soil, the rights of the original inhabitants were in but few instances entirely disregarded, though they were necessarily to a considerable extent curtailed (Johnson and Graham's lessee v. McIntosh, 8 Wheaton, 583 et seq.). The Indians were admitted to be the rightful occupants of the lands, with right of possession over so much as was necessary for their use; yet the policy of the various governments differed in the extent to which the exercise of this right was conceded. While Spain limited it to the lands actually occupied or in use (Recop. de Leyes de los Reynos de las Indias, I, lib. II, 1774), the United States usually allowed it to the land claimed, whenever the boundaries between the different tribes were duly recognized.

It was the usual policy of the United States and other governments, as well as of the colonies, in dealing with the Indians to treat them as tribes. The Articles of Confederation gave to Congress the "sole and exclusive right and power of regulating the trade and managing all affairs with the Indians" not under State jurisdiction. By the Constitution, the power of Congress in this respect is briefly expressed as follows: "To regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes." The authority to act in this respect must therefore be found in this clause, in that relating to the making of treaties, and in the general powers granted to Congress and the Executive. The term "tribes" in the clause quoted would indicate that the framers of the Constitution contemplated dealing with the Indians as autonomous groups, through treaties; this was the method followed by the United States until it was changed by the act of Mar. 3, 1871, and was that of the colonies and the mother country. The effect of the act cited was to bring under the immediate control of Congress, as specified in art. I, section 8, clause 3, of the Constitution, all transactions with the Indians, and to reduce to simple agreements what before had been accomplished by solemn treaties. Laws were enacted in the various colonies, and also by the United States, forbidding and rendering void the sale of lands by Indians to individuals. By the act of Congress of Feb. 8, 1887, the later policy of the Government, that the Indian tribes should cease to exist as independent communities and be made part of the body politic, found legislative expression. This act permits tribal lands, including reservations, to be divided so as to give to each man, woman, and child of the tribe an individual holding and, after a limited probation, confers citizenship upon the allottees, and makes them subject to the laws of the states or territories within which they live. Previous, however, to this final step intervened the reservation policy. The plan of forming Indian reservations was adopted from the necessity of bringing tribes under the more complete control of the Government and of confining them to definite limits for the better preservation of order, and aimed especially to restrict them to less territory in order that the whites might obtain the use of the residue. This was a most important step in the process of leading the natives to abandon the hunter stage and to depend for their subsistence on agriculture and home industries (see Reservations). The same policy was followed in Canada under both French and English rule, and to some extent by the colonies, and it was inaugurated by the United States in 1786. An incident indicative of one phase of the policy of the colonies in their dealings with and management of the Indians is that Indian captives were held as slaves in some of the colonies, while, under various pretexts, during a period in the history of South Carolina Indians were forced to submit to the same fate. In 1702 the Virginia assembly decreed that no Indian could hold office, be a capable witness, or hunt over patented land; an Indian child was classed as a mulatto, and Indians, like slaves, were liable to be taken on execution for the payment of debt (Hening, Stat. Va., III, 224, 250-252, 298, 333, 447). In 1644 the county courts of Massachusetts were invested with jurisdiction over the Indians in their respective districts (Rec. Mass., II, 134). Through the efforts of John Eliot and Thomas Mayhew many Indians in Massachusetts were brought under religious influence and gathered into towns on lands set apart for them by the General Court in accordance with the act of 1633 (Thomas and Homans, Laws of Colonial and State Govts., 9, 1812). In 1655 the Indians were placed nominally under law and required to pay taxes.

Though the brief rule of the Dutch in New York was marked chiefly by an irregular and vacillating policy in their dealings with their Algonquian neighbors, they established a trading post at Albany in 1615 and entered into treaties with the Iroquois that were never broken. In 1664 New Netherlands passed under English control, and the ill-advised English policy relative to the Indians of the northern districts prevailed until 1765, when, through the efforts of Sir William Johnson, a more satisfactory and practical method of dealing with the Indians, especially as to their territorial rights, was adopted.

Preeminent among the difficulties in the way of carrying out a just, humane, and consistent policy has been and is still the antagonism, born of the ignorance of both races of each other's mode of thought, social ideals and structure, and customs, together with persistent contention about land, one race defending its birthright, the other race ignoring native claims and regarding the territory as vacant. As a result a dual condition has existed—on the one side, a theoretic Government plan, ideal and worthy; on the other, modifications of this plan in compliance with local ignorance and greed. The laws and regulations of the U. S. Government applying to the Indian tribes, with few exceptions, have been framed to conserve their rights. The wars, which have cost much blood and treasure, the enforced removals, the dishonest practices and degrading influences that stain the page of history have all come about in violation of these laws and of solemn compacts of the Government with native tribes. In spite of adverse circumstances the theoretic purpose of the Government policy has slowly made headway. On July 13, 1787, an ordinance was passed by the Continental Congress for the government of the territory of the United States n. w. of the Ohio r., in which article 3 provides: "The utmost good faith shall always be observed toward the Indians; their land and property shall never be taken from them without their consent; and in their property, rights, and liberty they shall never be invaded or disturbed, unless in just and lawful wars authorized by Congress; but laws founded in justice and humanity shall from time to time be made, for preventing wrongs being done to them, and for preserving peace and friendship with them" (U. S. Stat., I, 52, 1854). This ordinance was confirmed by the act of Aug. 7, 1789 (ibid., 50). Acts organizing the following states and territories contain an article reaffirming the above ordinance: Alabama, Colorado, Dakota, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, Oregon, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

The Republic of Texas in its need made solemn treaties which were afterward repudiated; consequently no tribe within its limits could claim tribal lands. When Texas was admitted into the Union it retained its laws and the control of its public lands. The Indian tribes appealed to the U. S. Government for protection, and for their relief they were removed to reservations set apart for them in what was then a part of the Indian Ter., and there the remnant of them are now, holding their lands in severalty, subject to the laws and regulations of Oklahoma.

In 1792 the Russians established a school at Kodiak, and in 1805 one at Sitka, the Government and the church cooperating in behalf of education for the mixed-bloods and natives. When the transfer of Alaska to the United States took place in 1867 the teachers were recalled to Russia and the schools were closed. Within a month the American residents voted to establish schools, but little was accomplished. After 10 years of persistent effort Dr John Eaton, Commissioner of Education, assisted by Dr Sheldon Jackson, secured the first Presidential appeal to Congress for civil government and schools for the "self-supporting natives of the territory." Four years later Congress passed the needed law in which the natives' "right of occupancy" was recognized, the sale of liquor prohibited, and education ordered to be provided for the children of school age "without reference to race." In the following year public schools were opened and some of the mission schools were turned over to the Government. The sufferings of the Eskimo consequent upon the decline of the whaling industry and the killing of the fur animals prompted the introduction of reindeer from Siberia in 1892. In the following year the Government made its first appropriation for the purchase of reindeer. Herds have been placed in charge of some of the schools, and Laplanders were imported to instruct the natives in the care and breeding of reindeer, which have very largely multiplied. Not only has a new vocation thus been opened to the natives, but a valuable means of support has been given to the rapidly increasing population of the territory (see Jackson, Rep. on Introd. of Reindeer, 1904).

On May 22, 1792, the following declaration was made in instructions given to Brig. Gen. Rufus Putnam, who was sent to negotiate with the lately hostile Indians near L. Erie: "That the United States are highly desirous of imparting to all the Indian tribes the blessings of civilization, as the only means of perpetuating them on the earth; that we are willing to be at the expense of teaching them to read and write, to plow and to sow in order to raise their own bread and meat with certainty, as the white people do" (Am. State Papers, I, 235). The first treaty providing for any form of education was made on Dec. 2, 1794, with the Oneida, Tuscarora, and Stockbridge Indians, who had faithfully adhered to the colonies during the Revolution. Two persons were to be employed to instruct them in the "arts of the miller and sawyer" (U. S. Stat., II, 48). The Committee on Indian Affairs reported to the House of Representatives on Jan. 22, 1818, in favor of increasing the number of trading posts and establishing schools on or near the frontier for the education of Indian children as measures that "would be attended with beneficial effects both to the United States and to the Indian tribes" (Am. State Papers, II, 151). In 1819 the first general appropriation ($10,000 a year) for Indian education was made. The maintenance of shops, supported, however, by tribal funds, was one of the means used for industrial training, and many tribes through treaty stipulations supported and still support the schools on their reservations. The money appropriated by the Government for Indian education from 1819 to 1873 was mainly expended with the cooperation of various missionary societies that had established missions. From 1873 to the present time the Government has maintained public schools for the Indians.

About 1875 the Indians began to modify the tribal form of government by depriving chiefs of power and transferring their authority to a representative council, limited in number. The movement met with opposition in some tribes, but was accepted in others as a means of countervailing undue conservatism and giving to the progressive element a voice in the management of tribal affairs. About the same time Congress passed a law prohibiting agents from distributing supplies and ammunition to able-bodied Indians, between 18 and 45 years of age, except after the performance of some service "for the benefit of themselves or the tribe, at a reasonable rate to be fixed by the agent in charge and to an amount equal in value to the supplies to be delivered." The Secretary of the Interior might "by written order except any particular tribe or portion of tribe from the operation of this provision when he deems it proper or expedient" (U. S. Stat., XVIII, 176, 449, 1875).

A court of Indian offenses was instituted in 1882 in order to familiarize the Indian with some of the methods which his white neighbors use in trying and punishing offenders. Though the practice of this court has been crude, it has yet assisted in preparing the Indian to conform to the general customs of the country. The judges are appointed by the Indian bureau to serve one year. No compensation is given. The agents all report faithful service on the part of the Indian judges.

The method of establishing reservations has not been uniform, some having been created by treaty, some by Executive order, and others by act of Congress; but those established by Executive order without an act of Congress were not held to be permanent before the general allotment act of 1887 was passed. The various Indian titles recognized by the Government are (1) the original right of occupancy, alienable to the Government only; (2) the title to reservations, which differs from the original title chiefly in the fact that it is derived from the United States. The tenure since the act of 1887 is the same as before, and the power to alienate or transfer is subject to the same limitation, the absolute title being in the Government. Another class of titles is (3) where reservations have been patented to Indian tribes, as those to the Cherokee, Choctaw, and Creek nations, or where grants made by Spain have been confirmed by treaty, as in the case of the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico. The right of the Indians on reservations to sell timber or to grant mining privileges has been restricted, though it is now being gradually extended.

The policy of the United States in dealing with the Indians has, as a rule, been humane and just. The chief exceptions are: First, that arid or semi-arid lands have been selected for some of the reservations, defeating the effort to change some tribes from the hunter to the agricultural stage and entailing misery and death; second, that the pressure brought to bear by white settlers to eject the Indians from their favorite sections, where they were promised permanent homes, has too often been successful. See Agency system, Dutch influence, Education, English influence, French influence, German influence, Land tenure, Missions, Office of Indian Affairs, Reservations, Russian influence, Spanish influence. (A. C. F.)

Goyathlay. See Geronimo.

Graill. The name of a chief and of a band of Sisseton and Yankton Sioux occupying a village of 627 people on Big Stone lake, 280 m. from the agency in Minnesota in 1836, the other chief being Mazahpah. Graill was probably a Sisseton Sioux. See Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 612, 1853.

Granaries. See Receptacles, Storage.

Grand Bois. A former village, probably of the Potawatomi, about 6 m. s. e. of Geneva, Kane co., Ill.; also known as Shaytee's village.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. cxxv, 1899.

Grande Gueule. See Grangula.

Grand Portage, A Chippewa band formerly at this place, on the n. shore of L. Superior in n. e. Minnesota; mentioned in La Pointe treaty (1854) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 224, 1873.

Grand River Indians. The Iroquois living on Grand r., Ontario. They numbered 3,230 in 1884, 4,050 in 1902, 4,195 in 1904.

Sweke-áka.—Gatschet, Tuscarora MS., B. A. E., 1885 (Tuscarora name).

Grand River Ute. A band of the Yampa. Under Chief Piah they formerly ranged as far e. as Denver, Colo. They numbered 350 in 1873.

Denver Ute.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 246, 1877. Grand River Ute.—Nicolay in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1863, 151, 1864. Pe-ah's band of Utes.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1873, 340, 1874. Piah band.—Barber in Bull. U. S. Geol. Surv. Terr., III, no. 3, 533, 1877.

Grand Saux. Given apparently as equivalent to the Dakota of the plains, as distinguished from "Saux [Sioux] of the wood."—Trumbull, Ind. Wars, 185, 1851.

Grand Soleil (French: 'Great Sun'). The title of a noted Natchez chief, whose individual name is unknown, in the first half of the 18th century. He was a friend of the whites until the French commandant demanded the site of his village, White Apple, situated a few miles s. w. of the present Natchez, Miss., which the Natchez had occupied, as their chief replied, for more years than there were hairs in the governor's peruke. The haughty commandant, Chopart, would not allow them to have even their growing crops until it was agreed to compensate him for the concession. The chief then sent out bundles of sticks to the Natchez villages to indicate, ostensibly, their quota of the promised tribute, but really the number of days that were to elapse before making a concerted attack on the French. The docile and submissive Natchez were not suspected, even though a Natchez woman warned the French officers. On Nov. 30, 1729, the Indians massacred every white person in the settlement, 700 in number, and with his allies the Grand Soleil went on laying waste French plantations in Louisiana until the governor of the French colony assembled a force of French and Choctaw with which he recaptured the fort at Natchez. Then the chief ostensibly agreed to terms of peace that were offered, but in the night he and his people disappeared in different directions. One division he led 180 miles up Red r., where he built a fort and an expedition found him a year later. His warriors sallied out to attack the French, who drove them back into the fort and bombarded them there until the great chief and some others surrendered themselves. The chief was taken to New Orleans and probably executed with most of his warriors, while the women and children who did not die of an epidemic that befell them were transported to Haiti to labor as slaves on the French plantations. The title "Great Sun" was always borne by the head chief of the Natchez to distinguish him from other members of the class of nobles, all of whom were called "Suns."

Grand Traverse. A former settlement of the Chippewa near the site of Flint, Genesee co., Mich.; so named by French traders because at this point was the great ford of Flint r. on the Indian trail from the Saginaw to Detroit. The place became a popular hunting place and camping ground, game and fish being abundant in the neighborhood.

Granganameo. A son of Ensenore and brother of Wingina, chiefs of Wingandacoa (Secotan), N. C., and leading man of the tribe in 1585. He is noted chiefly for the friendly aid shown by him to Amidas and Barlow and to Grenville and the accompanying English sent out by Sir Walter Raleigh in the year named. His residence was on Roanoke id., Albemarle sd. As Wingina was confined to his house by a wound when Amidas and Barlow arrived, Granganameo, as acting sachem, received the adventurers kindly and, according to the account given by them, sent them "commonly every day" deer, rabbits, fish, and sometimes various fruits and vegetables. Unfortunately for the English colonists he died before a year expired. (c. t.)

Grangula (from French grande gueule, 'big mouth'). An Onondaga chief, whose right name was Haaskouan ('His mouth is large'), but who was also known as Otreouati. The governor of Canada equipped an army in 1684 to crush the Five Nations because they interfered with French trade. Sickness among the troops having prevented the expedition, Governor de la Barre crossed L. Ontario to offer peace, which he sought to make conditional on the restoration to French merchants of the trade that the Iroquois had diverted to the English. Grangula, representing the Five Nations, replied defiantly that the Iroquois would trade with English or French as they chose, and would continue to treat as enemies French traders who supplied the Miami, Illinois, Shawnee, and other tribes with arms and ammunition to fight them.

Granite. A term applied to igneous rocks consisting essentially of quartz and orthoclase feldspar, with mica, hornblende, and other accessories. The name, however, is often made to include a variety of siliceous rocks with similar structure, as the coarser gabbros and diabases, gneiss, syenite, etc. These rocks are generally massive in structure, and were much used by the Indian tribes for their heavier implements, such as sledges for quarry work, hammers for breaking up stone and roughing out implements, and for axes, celts, mortars, pestles, mullers, discoidal stones, and the larger varieties of so-called ceremonial objects. On account of the toughness of these rocks they were difficult to fracture or to flake, and were therefore shaped almost exclusively by the pecking and grinding processes. Very generally the natives selected water-worn fragments approximating the form of the implement to be made, so that the minimum of shaping work was necessary. (w. H. H.)

Grape Island. A former Missisauqua settlement, probably in N. Minnesota.—Jones, Hist. Ojeb. Inds., 138, 1861.

Grapevine Town. A former village, perhaps belonging to the Delawares, situated 8 m. up Captina cr., Belmont co., Ohio.—Washington (1770) in Rupp, West Pa., app., 397, 1846.

Graphic art. With the tribes N. of Mexico the arts that may be comprehended under the term graphic are practically identical with the pictorial arts; that is to say, such as represent persons and things in a manner so realistic that the semblance of the original is not entirely lost. Graphic delineations may be (1) simply pictorial; that is, made to gratify the pictorial or esthetic impulse or fancy; (2) trivial, intended to excite mirth, as in caricature and the grotesque; (3) simply decorative, serving to embellish the person or object to which they are applied; (4) simply ideographic, standing for ideas to be expressed, recorded, or conveyed; (5) denotive, including personal names and marks of ownership, distinction, direction, enumeration, etc.; and (6) symbolic, representing some religious, totemic, heraldic, or other occult concept. It is manifest, however, that in very many cases there must be uncertainty as to the motives prompting these graphic representations; and the significance attached to them, even where the tribes using them come directly under observation, is often difficult to determine.

The methods of expression in graphic art are extremely varied, but may be classified as follows: (1) Application of color by means of brushes and hard or soft points or edges, and by developing the form in pulverized pigments (see Dry painting, Painting); (2) engraving, which is accomplished by scratching and pecking with hard points (see Engraving); (3) indenting and stamping where the surfaces are plastic (see Pottery); (4) tattooing, the introduction of coloring matter into designs pricked or cut in the skin (see Tattooing); (5) textile methods, as in weaving, basketry, beadwork, featherwork, and embroidery (see Textile arts); and (6) inlaying, as in mosaic, where small bits of colored material are so set as to form the figures (see Mosaic). The figures are drawn in outline simply, or are filled in with color or other distinctive surfacing. The elaboration or embellishment of sculptured or modeled figures or images of men and beasts by adding details of anatomy, markings, etc., in color or by engraving, thus increasing the realism of the representation, comes also within the realm of the graphic as here defined. In recent times, as the result of contact with the whites, much progress has been made by some of the native tribes in the pictorial art; but the purely aboriginal work, although displaying much rude vigor, shows little advance toward the higher phases of the art. Aboriginally, there was little attempt at effective grouping of the subject save as required in decoration, and light and shade and perspective were entirely unknown. Portraiture and landscape belong apparently to much more advanced stages of culture than have been reached by any of the northern tribes. When the delineations are devoted to the presentation of non-symbolic ideas merely, as in pictography and denotive devices, there is a tendency in frequently recurring use to progressive simplification; the picture as such has no reason to be perpetuated, and this simplification in time reaches a stage where a part takes the place of the whole, or where semblance to the original is entirely lost, the figure becoming the formal sign of an idea. The graphic art of the northern tribes, however, shows no very significant progress in this kind of specialization, unless modern alphabets, like those of the Micmac, or certain inscriptions of somewhat problematical origin, as the Grave Creek Mound tablet (see Grave Creek Mound) and the Davenport tablet (Farquharson), are considered.

Graphic delineations are most extensively employed by the tribes in pictography (q. v.), examples of which, engraved or painted on rock surfaces, are found in nearly every section of the country. Similar work was executed by many of the tribes on dressed skins, on birch-bark, and on objects of wood, ivory, bone, horn, and shell. The delineation of life forms in decorative and symbolic art is hardly less universal than in simple pictography, and is especially exemplified in the work of the more advanced peoples, as the pottery of the mound builders and Pueblos, the utensils and the carvings of the tribes of the N. Pacific coast, and ceremonial costumes, and walls and floors of sacred chambers among various tribes. The graphic work of the Eskimo has a peculiar interest, since it seems to have been somewhat recently superposed upon an earlier system in which simple geometric figures predominated, and is much more prevalent where these people have been for a long time in contact with the whites, and more especially with the Athapascans and other Indian tribes skilled in graphic work (Hoffman). A special feature of the art of the Eskimo is the engraving of hunting scenes and exploits of various kinds on objects of ivory and bone—works paralleled among the Indian tribes in the S. by such examples as the Thruston tablet (Thruston, Holmes), the Davenport tablet (Farquharson), and the battle and hunting scenes of the Plains tribes (Mallery, Mooney).

Skill in graphic work was highly regarded among many of the tribes, and the artist took particular pride in his work, and when especially successful became in a sense professional. Usually decorative designs were executed without pattern or copy, and with much directness. The most intricate patterns, applied to earthenware vessels and other objects, were not sketched out but were drawn at once, and often with remarkable skill. Among the N. W. coast tribes, however, patterns were often cut out of cedar bark and the conventional life forms worked in their handsome blankets and capes were drawn out full size on a pattern board. The native artist did not draw directly from nature, but kept in view rather the presentation of the idea, delineating it in the conventional form common to his tribe. He might have been able to produce a portrait, for example, but the desirability of portraiture does not seem to have occurred to him. He might have delineated a species of animal with accuracy, but was apparently content to suggest the particular subject of his thought in a striking and forcible though conventional manner. See Art, Basketry, Ornament, Painting, Pottery.

Among the numerous authorities to be consulted on this topic are Boas, Cushing, Fewkes, Holmes, Mallery, Mooney, Murdoch, Nelson, J. and M. C. Stevenson, and Turner in Reps. B. A. E.; Boas, Hoffman, Mason, and Niblack in Reps. Nat. Mus.; Dixon, Kroeber, Matthews, Swanton, Wissler, and others in Memoirs and Bulletins Am. Mus. Nat. Hist.; Farquharson in Proc. Davenport Acad. Sci., II, 1877-1880; Grosse, Beginnings of Art, 1897; Haddon, Evolution in Art, 1895; Kroeber in Am. Anthrop., n. s., III, 1901; Moore, various memoirs in Jour. Acad. Nat. Sci. Phila., 1894-1905; Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I-VI, 1851-57; Thruston, Antiq. of Tenn., 1897; various authors in the ethnological and archeological journals.

(W. H. H.)

Grass house. A dwelling having the shape of an old-fashioned beehive, often described by Spanish and French travelers of the 16th and 17th centuries, which was the typical habitation of the Caddoan tribes, except the Pawnee and Arikara. Its construction was begun by drawing a circle on the ground, and on the outline setting a number of crocheted posts, in which beams were laid. Against these, poles were set very closely in a row so as to lean inward; these in turn were laced with willow rods and their tops brought together and securely fastened so as to form a peak. Over this frame a heavy thatch of grass was laid and bound down by slender rods, and at each point where the rods joined an ornamental tuft of grass was tied. Two poles, laid at right angles, jutting out in four projecting points, were fastened to the apex of the roof, and over the center, where they crossed, rose a spire, 2 ft high or more, made of bunches of grass. Four doors, opening to each point of the compass, were formerly made, but now, except when the house is to be used for ceremonial purposes, only two are provided, one on the e. to serve for the morning, and one on the w. to go in and out of when the sun is in that quarter. The fireplace was a circular excavation in the center of the floor, and the smoke found egress through a hole left high up in the roof toward the e. The four projecting beams at the peak pointed toward and were symbolic of the four points of the compass, where were the paths down which the powers descend to help man. The spire typified the abode in the zenith of the mysterious permeating force that animates all nature. The fireplace was accounted sacred; it was never treated lightly even in the daily life of the family. The couches of the occupants were placed against the wall. They consisted of a framework on which was fitted a woven covering of reeds. Upon this robes or rush mats were spread. The grass house is a comely structure. Skill is required to build it, and it has an attractive appearance both without and within. It is adapted to a warm climate only, and is still in use among the Wichita. Temporary dwellings of poles covered with grass were common among the Plains tribes, and similar houses for storage purposes were used by tribes on the coast of Oregon (Boas). See Earth lodge, Habitations.

OMAHA GRASS HOUSE IN PROCESS OF CONSTRUCTION. (MOONEY)

Consult Catlin, No. Am. Inds., i-ii, 1841; Winship, Coronado Exped., 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; G. A. Dorsey, Mythology of the Wichita, 1904; Manzanet Diary in Tex. Hist. Ass'n Quar., ii, 303, 1899. (A. C. F.)

Grasswork. The Indian found the widely diffused grasses of the United States of great value, almost a necessity, and adapted them in numerous ways to his needs. The obvious needs supplied by loose grass were for house building (see Grass house), bedding, for lining caches, etc.; it was also worked into baskets (southern Indians, Hopi, Pima, Tlingit, Aleut, Eskimo), mats, leggings (Ntlakyapamuk), socks, towels (Eskimo), and other articles. The polished yellow or white stems were used by various tribes to ornament basketry, and by the Hupa of California as fringes of garments. Stiff stems were gathered into bundles and used as hair and floor brushes by the Pueblos and cliff-dwellers. Slender, flat grass stems, sometimes dyed, were applied to dressed skins by some tribes with sinew thread for ornamental purposes, just as were porcupine quills (Grinnell).

Grass was generally found useful as tinder; some species furnished excellent fiber for cord, and some were employed as perfumery. The Cheyenne burned grass and mixed the ashes with blood and tallow to produce paint. So far as is known the Indian invented no implements for cutting grass; basketry fans, gathering baskets, etc., were used in harvesting seeds for food. In ceremony grass had an important place. It was a component of various prayer-sticks and wands of the Hopi, and the sacred buffalo skull of some of the Plains tribes was thought to be made to live by stuffing balls of grass into the eye sockets and nose. Sweet grass was also burned to produce consecrating smoke and for lighting the pipe in sacred rites of the Plains Indians. The sod used in the Hako altar of the Pawnee, described by Miss Fletcher (22d Rep. B. A. E., 1903) was in Indian thought a symbol of life and growth. (W. H.)

Grave Creek mound. A noted prehistoric Indian mound, situated near Moundsville, Marshall co., W. Va., at the point where Grave cr. unites with Ohio r. It was visited as early as 1734, as appears from this date cut on a tree growing from its summit, but was first described by

GRAVE CREEK MOUND AND SECTION. (SQUIER AND DAVIS)

Hart in 1797 (Imlay, Topog. Desc. W. Ter. N. Am., 296-304), since which time it has been repeatedly described and figured, attention of scholars having been called to it chiefly by an inscription on a small stone which was reputed to have been found in the mound during its excavation. The mound is conical in form, being probably the largest example of this type in the United States, having a diameter at the base of about 320 ft, a height of 70 ft, and 1,870,000 cu. ft of solid contents. It is symmetrical in form and has a dish-shaped depression in the top. It was excavated in 1838 by the proprietor, who first carried a horizontal drift at the base to the center and a shaft from the top to connect with the drift. Two burial vaults were discovered, one at the base and another 30 ft above, each constructed of logs and covered with stones, which had sunk as the wood decayed, leaving the depression in the summit. Squier and Davis (Anc. Mon., 169, 1848) assert that under the center of the mound there was a slight natural elevation into which the lower vault had been sunk. This vault contained two human skeletons, the upper vault but one. Accompanying the skeletons were 3,000 to 4,000 shell beads, ornaments of mica, several copper bracelets, and various articles of stone, including the inscribed stone mentioned, the inscription on which has received various interpretations. An illustration of this inscription was first published in the Cincinnati Chronicle, Feb. 2, 1839; another in the American Pioneer, II, no. 5, 1843. Rafn, whose tendency was to give a foreign interpretation to Indian inscriptions, inclined to the opinion that the inscribed characters were Anglo-Saxon runes, while Schoolcraft concluded that they belonged to some 8 or 9 different alphabets, as old Greek, Etruscan, etc. A committee of the Ohio Archæological and Historical Society in 1877 reached the following conclusions: "1. The inscription is not necessarily to be regarded as alphabetical. 2. If it is assumed to be alphabetical, it can not be referred to any known language. 3. It is precisely of such a character as would be the result of an ordinary attempt to manufacture an inscription. 4. Its manufacture is within the capacity of any laborer of ordinary intelligence who may have been employed in the work of exploring the mound. 5. At the time of its discovery there was no proper scrutiny of the inscription to determine whether it was of recent manufacture or not. 6. The evidence that it came from the mound is by no means conclusive. 7. Its history is such that the subsequent discovery of unquestioned ancient inscriptions with similar characters would warrant us in concluding that this also is ancient. 8. Until its authenticity is thus fully established, it ought not to be regarded as any evidence of the character, ethnical relationship, or intellectual culture of the builders of the mounds." Whittlesey, in 1872, expressed the belief that the inscription was a forgery.

Consult Clemens in Morton, Crania Americana, 221, 1839; Schoolcraft in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., I, 369-420, 1846; Squier and Davis, Anc. Monuments, 168-170, 1848; Thomas (1) in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 51, 1887; (2) Cat. Prehistoric Works, 222, 1891, with bibliographic references; Whittlesey in Tracts West. Res. Hist. Soc., I, nos. 9 and 33, 1877, and II, no. 44, 1888. (c. t.)

Gray Village. A former Natchez village.

Grays.—Dumont in French, Hist. Coll. La., v, 49, 1853. Gray Village.—Ibid., 48.

Greasy Faces. A band of the Arapaho, q. v.

Great Island Village. A former settlement, probably of the Delawares, on the Susquehanna opposite the present Lock Haven, Clinton co., Pa.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Pa. map, 1899.

Great Mortar (Yayatustenuggee). A Creek chief; an ally of the French in the Seven Years' war. When the English superintendent of Indian affairs called a council of the Creeks with the object of winning them over, he refused the pipe of peace to Great Mortar because the chief had favored the French, and the latter withdrew with his followers, confirmed in his hostility to the British. He received a commission from the French, and after killing or driving out the English traders and settlers took up a position on the border, where he could raid the Georgia settlements, obtaining his arms and supplies from the French fort on Alabama r. Many Creeks and Cherokee joined him there until the Chickasaw surprised the camp and put his warriors to flight. He settled at another place whence he could resume his depredations and continued to ravage the scattered settlements, including Augusta, Ga. In 1761 Col. James Grant, at the head of 2,600 Americans and friendly Indians, brought all the hostiles to terms, and a peace was made which fixed the watershed of the Allegheny mts. as the boundary between the British colonies and the lands of the natives.—Drake, Aborig. Races, 384, 1880.

Great Spirit. See Popular fallacies, Religion.

Great Sun. See Grand Soleil.

Green-corn dance. See Busk.

Greentown. A former Delaware village on the Black fork of Mohican r., near the boundary of Richland and Ashland cos., Ohio. See Treaty of Maumee Rapids (1819) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 204, 1873; Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ohio map, 1899.

Greeting. See Salutation.

Grenadier Squaw's Town. A Shawnee village situated in 1774 on Scippo cr., Pickaway co., Ohio. The name was derived from Grenadier Squaw, a sister of Cornstalk, the Shawnee chief, who made this her home. (J. M.)

Grenadier Squaws T.—Howe, Hist. Coll. Ohio, II, 402, 1896. Squaw Town.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ohio map, 1899.

Grey Eagle Band. One of the Dakota bands below L. Traverse, Minn. (Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 102, 1860), evidently taking its name from the chief; not identified.

Grigras. A French nickname and the only known name of a small tribe already incorporated with the Natchez confederacy in 1720; it was applied because of the frequent occurrence of grigra in their language. There is uncertainty in regard to the language and ethnic relations, but unless affiliated with the Tonica, the tribe was evidently distinct from every other, since, as indicated by the sound grigra, their language possessed an r.

Grigas.—Richebourg (1713) in French, Hist. Coll. La., III, 248, 1851. Grigras.—Le Page du Pratz, Hist. La., II, 222, 1758.

Grinaiches. Mentioned by Baudry de Lozières (Voy. Louisiane, 242, 1802) in a list of tribes with no indication of habitat. Probably a misprint of some well-known tribal name.

Grinding stones. See Abrading implements.

Grizzly Bear Erect. See Etsowish-sim-megce-itshin.

Gros (Les). A Wea village on the Wash in 1718 (Memoir of 1718 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 891, 1855); perhaps in Tippecanoe co., Ind.

Grosse Tête (Fr.: 'big head'). A former Chitimacha village in Louisiana.

Grosse Tête namu.—Gatschet in Trans. Anthrop. Soc. Wash., II, 152, 1883 (namu = 'village').

Gros Ventres (French, 'big bellies') A term applied by the French, and after them by others, to two entirely distinct tribes: (1) the Atsina (q. v.), or Hitunena, a detached band of the Arapaho, and (2) the Hidatsa (q. v.), or Minitarit. In the Lewis and Clark narrative of 1806 the former are distinguished as Minitarees of Fort de Prairie and the latter as Minitarees of the Missouri, although there is no proper warrant for applying the name Minitarit to the Atsina. The two tribes have also been distinguished as Grosventres of the Missouri (Hidatsa) and Grosventres of the Prairie (Atsina). The name as applied to the Atsina originates from the Indian sign by which they are designated in the sign language—a sweeping pass with both hands in front of the abdomen, intended to convey the idea of 'always hungry,' i. e., 'beggars.' A clew to its application to the Hidatsa is given in the statement of Matthews (Hidatsa, 43, 1877) that the Hidatsa formerly tattooed parallel stripes across the chest, and were thus sometimes distinguished in picture writings. The gesture sign to indicate this style of tattooing would be sufficiently similar to that used to designate the Atsina to lead the careless observer to interpret both as "Gros Ventres." The ordinary sign now used by the southern Plains tribes to indicate the Hidatsa is interpreted to mean 'spreading tipis' or 'row of lodges.' (J. M.)

Big-bellies.—Gass, Journal, 76, 1807. Big bellied.—Mackenzie, Voy., LXIV, 1801. Bigbellies.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, 132, 1814. Big Pauch.—Lewis and Clark, Travels, 15, 1807 (misprint). Big Paunch.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 18, 1806. Gos ventres.—De Smet, Letters, 62, 1843. Great Belly Indians.—Writer of 1786 in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., III, 24, 1794. Grosse Ventres.—Brown, West. Gaz., 212, 1817. Gross Vantres.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1804), I, 210, 1904. Grossventers.—Gass, Jour., 76, 1807. Gross Ventres.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, I, 243, 1904. Gross Ventres proper.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 259, 1851 (intended for the Hidatsa). Grosvantres.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, I, 209, 1904. Gros-Ventres.—Saint Pierre (1753) in Margry, Déc., VI, 640, 1886. Gros Ventres of the Missouri.—Hale, Ethnog. and Philol., 220, 1846 (intended for the Hidatsa). Gros-Vents.—Kane, Wanderings of an Artist, 366, 1859. Grovian.—Bonner, Life of Beckwourth, 162, 1856.

Groton. A former Mohegan village about the present Groton, New London, Conn. In 1825 the population was reduced to 50 souls. (J. M.)

Gua. A Chumashan village w. of Pueblo de las Canoas (San Buenaventura), Ventura co., Cal., in 1542. In the Muñoz manuscript of Cabrillo's narration (Smith, Colec. Doc. Fla., 181, 1857) this name is united, probably correctly, with the prefix Quannu, forming Quannugua.

Guacata. An inland Calusa village on L. "Mayaimi," or Okechobee, s. Fla., about 1570. Elsewhere in his memoir Fontaneda refers to it as a distinct but subordinate tribe.

Guacata.—Fontaneda Memoir (ca. 1575), Smith trans., 19, 1854. Guasaca.—Fontaneda in French, Hist. Coll. La., 2d s., II, 245, 1875.

Guacaya. Mentioned by Oviedo (Hist. Gen. Indies, III, 628, 1853) as one of the provinces or villages on or in the general vicinity of the South Carolina coast, visited by Ayllon in 1520.

Guachochic ('place of the blue herons'). A rancheria of "civilized" Tarahumare on the headwaters of Rio Fuerte, about lat. 26° 50', long. 106° 55', in s. Chihuahua, Mexico; entire population 1,147 in 1900. The inhabitants gain a livelihood mainly as servants of the Mexicans.—Lumholtz (1) in Scribner's Mag., XVI, 32, 39, 1894; (2) Unknown Mexico, I, 194, 205, 1902.

Guachoya. A palisaded village, probably of the Quapaw, containing 300 houses in the 16th century, on the w. bank of the Mississippi, apparently a short distance below the mouth of the Arkansas. It was here De Soto died, May 21, 1542.

Guachoa.—Shipp, De Soto and Florida, 432, 1881.

Guachoya.—Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 186, 1850. Guachoyanque.—Biedma (1544) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 107, 1850.

Guadalupe. Mentioned as a Navaho settlement in 1799 (Cortez in Pac. R. R. Rep., III, pt. 3, 119, 1856), but more likely the Spanish name of a locality, as the Navaho are not villagers.

Guadalupe.—Domenech, Deserts of N. A., II, 7, 1860.

Guadalupe. A Papage village about 10 leagues s. of Areitorae, in Sonora, Mexico. Guadalupe.—Box, Adventurers, 264, 1869. Guadalupe-Pa-Page.—Ibid. (i. e., "Papago").

Guadalupe y Ocotan.—A Huichol pueblo near Rio Chapalagana, Jalisco, Mexico. See Lumholtz (1) Huichol Indians, 5, 1898; (2) Unknown Mexico, II, 16, map, 1902.

Guaes. A people of whom Coronado learned in 1542. They evidently lived e. of Quivira, the Wichita country of e. central Kansas, of whose people they were enemies. The name bears a resemblance to Kaws, but as this is the French traders' contraction of Kansa, first applied not earlier than the first quarter of the 19th century, the two peoples were probably not the same, Guas or Guaes being apparently a Wichita or Pawnee name, or a corruption thereof. (F. W. H.) Guaes.—Castañeda (ca. 1560) in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 503, 1896. Guas.—Ibid., 529. Guyas.—Castañeda in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., ix, 194, 1838 (misprint).

Guagejohe.—Given as one of the Comanche divisions, living about 1857 on the plains N. of Texas. Possibly a misprint Spanish form of Kwahari, q. v.

Gua-gé-jó-hé.—Butcher and Lyendecker, MS. Comanche vocab., B. A. E., 1867.

Guaguatu. An unidentified people described early in the 17th century, by the Acoma and Jemez Indians of New Mexico, as resembling the Mexicans in language and dress, and as living in straw-covered houses in a mild country somewhere to the westward of the Navaho, toward the Pacific. The name suggests the pueblo of Awatobi, q. v.

Guaguatu.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629), Rel., in Land of Sunshine, 183, Feb., 1900. Guaputu.—Ibid.

Guahate. A fertile province, probably in the present s. w. Arkansas, heard of by De Soto in 1541 at Quipana as being 8 days s. of that place.—Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 182, 1850.

Guaилоpe. A subdivision of the Varohio in w. Chihuahua, Mexico. They lived with the Chinipa in the pueblo of San Andres Chinipas.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 58, 325, 1864.

Guaionost. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Guaislac. A former Chumashan village near Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Guaiochic ('place of the guajo,' a small variety of mosquito). A small rancharia of the Tarahumare, not far from Norogachic, Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, Unknown Mexico, I, 218, 1902.

Gualala. A name applied by Powers to the Pomo living along Gualala r., in Sonoma co., Cal. The people living along this stream belong to two dialectic groups, one occupying the territory chiefly along the lower course of Russian r., the other that along the immediate coastline w. of Gualala r.; but as Powers' statements are not explicit, it is not possible to say whether the people speaking one or the other of these dialects is meant. The name itself comes undoubtedly from waláli, a name applied to the point at which the waters of any two streams flow together, or at which any stream flows into the ocean. (S. A. B.)

Gua-la-la.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 186, 1877. Walhalla.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 362, 1874.

Guale. The Indian name by which the Spaniards knew the present Amelia id.,

N. coast of Florida, and a part of the adjacent Florida and Georgia coast, in the 16th century. There is strong probability that the tribe in occupancy was that known later as Yamasi. In 1597 the son of the chief of Guale led a revolt against the missions that had been established by the Spanish Franciscans a few years before. There were then on the island at least 3 mission villages—Asao, Asopo, and Ospó. The missions were reestablished in 1605 and may have continued until their destruction by the English and their Indian allies in 1704–06. (J. M.)

Gualdape.—Fontaneda Memoir (ca. 1575), Smith trans., 16, 1854. Guale.—Ibid. Quale.—Fontaneda in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., xx, 16, 1841. Quate.—Fontaneda misquoted by Shipp, De Soto and Fla., 585, 1881.

Gualta. Given by the Yavapai to Fray Francisco Garcés in 1776 as the name of a tribe, possibly in the vicinity of the Rio Colorado.—Garcés, Diary (1775–76), 405, 1900.

Guamua. The Yavapai name of a tribe evidently on or in the vicinity of the Rio Colorado in Arizona or California, in the 18th century.—Garcés (1775–76), Diary, 404, 1900. Cf. Gueymura.

Guamoa.—Cortez (1799) in Pac. R. R. Rep., III, pt. 3, 126, 1856.

Guanabepe. The Yavapai name of a tribe, evidently Yuman, on the lower Colorado in Arizona or California, in the 18th century.

Guanabepe.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 404, 1900. Guanavepe.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 349, 1864 (after Garcés).

Guanacos (Span.: Los Guanacos.) A group of ruined pueblos 8 m. s. of Tempe, in the Salt River valley, Ariz. So named from a number of figurines, resembling the guanaco, found there.—Cushing in Comptre-rendu Internat. Cong. Am., VII, 178, 1890.

Guanecane. Mentioned by Garcilasso de la Vega (Florida, 201, 1723) as a province visited by De Soto's army in 1542. Situated probably in s. w. Arkansas, near Naguatega, q. v.

Guacane.—Shipp, De Soto and Florida, 430, 1881.

Guanipas. A former Coahuila tribe, belonging perhaps to the Coahuiltecan stock.—Revillagigedo (1793) quoted by Orozco y Berra, Geog., 306, 1864.

Guanlen. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Guarungunve ('town of weeping'). A Calusa village on one of the keys of the s. w. coast of Florida, about 1570. Brinton (Floridian Penin., 114, 1859) thinks the word is another name for Old Matcumbe (Metacumbe) key, described by Romans (1775) as one of the last refuges of the Calusa Indians. (J. M.)

Guarungunve.—Fontaneda quoted by Ternaux-Compans, Voy., xx, 10, 1841. Guardgunve.—Fontaneda quoted by French, Hist. Coll. La., 2d s., II, 262, 1875 (misprint). Guarugumbe.—Fontaneda quoted by Ternaux-Compans, op. cit. 32. Guarugunve.—Fontaneda Mem. (ca. 1575), Smith trans., 13, 1854. Guarungunve.—Ibid., 19. Guarunguve.—Fontaneda quoted by Ternaux-Compans, op. cit., 22. Metacumbe.—Present map form for the key. Old Matacombe.—Romans, Fla., app., xxxiv, 1775 (the key; same?).

Guasamota. A Cora pueblo on the upper Río Jesús María, on the e. slope of the Sierra de Nayarit, in the n. part of the territory of Tepic, Mexico (Lumholtz, Unknown Mexico, I, 487; II, 16, map, 1902). Orozco y Berra records it as a Tepehuane settlement.

Guasamota.—Lumholtz, op. cit. Guazamota.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 281, 1864. Santa María Guazamota.—Ibid., 318-319.

Guasas. A tribe mentioned in Spanish narratives and reports on Texas in the latter part of the 18th century as enemies of the "northern Indians," particularly of the Comanche. According to one narrative they were the only people able to defeat the latter. They are described as having lived in permanent villages defended by adobe towers; they called their warriors together by means of drums in time of danger. They were reputed to be of great stature and of remarkable skill in horsemanship. Although many of the things told about them are entirely fabulous, a real tribe appears to be referred to, probably one of those which erected earth lodges. This may have been the Osage (Wasash) or, since an annotator of a letter written by Ripperdá in 1772 enumerates "Guasers" and Osage separately, possibly they were the Kansa or the Pawnee. (J. R. S.)

Guasas.—Prieto, Hist. de Tamaulipas, 137, 1873. Guasers.—Annotator of a letter of Ripperdá, 1772, MS. cited by H. E. Bolton, inf'n, 1906. Guazas.—Report of council at San Antonio in 1778, MS. cited by H. E. Bolton, inf'n, 1906.

Guasco. A province, possibly Caddoan, visited in 1542 by Moscoso, of De Soto's army, who there found much maize; situated probably in s. w. Arkansas or n. w. Louisiana. See Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 199, 1850.

Guasigochic ('a flat'). A small rancharia of the Tarahumare, n. e. of Norogachic, Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, inf'n, 1894.

Guaslaique. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Guatitriti. Mentioned by Oñate in 1598 (Doc. Inéd., xvi, 114, 1871) as a pueblo of the Jemez in New Mexico. It has not been identified with the present native name of any ruins in the vicinity of Jemez. In Oñate's second list of Jemez villages (ibid., 102) Fiapuzi and Triyti are given. Comparison shows the first name to be a misprint of the name of the preceding pueblo mentioned ('Trea'), improperly compounded with a misprint ('puzi') of 'Guati,' the first part of the name Guatitriti; the other pueblo mentioned in the second list ('Triyti') being a corruption of the latter portion ('truti') of the name Guatitriti. (F. W. H.)

Friyti.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 136, 1889 (misprint). Guatitriti.—Columbus Memorial Vol., 155, 1893 (misprint). Trivti.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 207, 1892 (misquoting Oñate). Triyti.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., xvi, 102, 1892.

Guauaenok. A Kwakiutl tribe living on Drury inlet, Brit. Col. The gentes are Gyigyilkam, Kwakowenok, and Kwikoanok. Summer villages are Hohopa and Kunstamish. Pop. 46 in 1885.

Guau'aenok.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 55, 1890. Guau'aenox.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 331, 1895. Kwauaenok.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 228, 1887. Kwā-wa-ai-nuk.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 73, 1887. Kwā-wa-a-nuk.—Ibid. Quai-iunough.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Quai-nu.—Kane, Wand, in N. Am., app., 1859. Quai'aenok.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 130, 1887.

Guaxule. A village, apparently of the Creeks, visited by De Soto in 1540. Coxe seems to locate it near the head of Mobile r.; Shipp places it on the Chattahoochee, and Thomas (12th Rep. B. A. E., 649, 1894) near Cartersville, in Bartow co., Ga. The Spaniards were entertained so well at this place that to the army its name became a synonym for good fortune. See Etowah mound.

Guachoula.—Shipp, De Soto and Florida, 368, 1881. Guachoule.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 520, 1900 (given as an early form). Guachule.—Mooney, Siouan Tribes of the East, 57, 1894. Guasili.—Mooney in 19th Rep., op. cit. Guasula.—Ibid. Guasuli.—Biedma (1544) in Hakluyt Soc. Pub., IX, 182, 1851. Guaxula.—Coxe, Carolana, 23, 1741. Guaxule.—Gentleman of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 147, 1850.

Guaya. A former village of the Calusa confederacy near the s. end of Florida (Fontaneda, ca. 1575, in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., xx, 22, 23, 1841). The village is not given in B. Smith's translation of Fontaneda's narrative.

Guayabas. A Huichol rancharia and religious place, containing a temple; situated about 2½ m. s. w. of San Andres Coamiata, q. v.—Lumholtz, Unknown Mexico, II, 52, 1902.

Temolikitá.—Lumholtz, ibid. ('where trees and flowers are budding': native name).

Guaycones. An unidentified tribe visited by Cabeza de Vaca (Smith trans., 84, 1851) during his sojourn in Texas in 1528-34.

Gualciones.—Barcia, Historiadores, I, 1749.

Guaynamota. A former Cora pueblo and the seat of a mission, situated on the e. bank of Río San Pedro, lat. 22° 30', Jalisco, Mexico.

S. Ignacio Guaynamota.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 280, 1864.

Guayoguaia. Mentioned by Oñate in 1598 (Doc. Inéd., xvi, 114, 1871) as a pueblo of the Jemez in New Mexico. It has not been identified with the present native name of any ruins in the vicinity of Jemez. In Oñate's second list (ibid., 207) Yxcaguayo and Quiamera are mentioned. The names are obviously mis-printed, the latter part of the first name and a misprint of the first part of the other forming "Guayoquia."

Guayotri. Apparently a Tigua pueblo in New Mexico in 1598. Mentioned by Oñate (Doc. Inéd., xvi, 115, 1871) in connection with Puaray. See Tiguex.

Guayusta. A village of the Rumsen division of the Costanoan family, formerly at Pt Pinos, near Monterey, Cal., the inhabitants of which were connected with San Carlos mission.

Guayusta.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860. Point Pinos.—Ibid.

Guazapar. A division of the Tarahumare occupying the village of Guazapares, w. Chihuahua, Mexico. It includes also the Temoris who inhabit the pueblos of Santa María Magdalena, Nuestra Señora del Valle Humbroso, and Cerocahui. The Guazapar dialect is said to resemble more closely the Tarahumare proper than the Varohio. (F. W. H.)

Guazapar.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., map, 1864.

Guazapare.—Ibid., 58.

Guazapares. A village of the Guazapar division of the Tarahumare in the district of Arteaga, w. Chihuahua, Mexico; pop. 542 in 1900.

Guazayepo.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 324, 1864.

Santa Teresa de Guazapares.—Ibid.

Guazarachic. A Tarahumare settlement in the Hidalgo district, Chihuahua, Mexico.

Guasarochic.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 322, 1864.

Guazarachis.—Ibid., 59 (given as Apache, but doubtless Piman).

Guazavas (probably from Opatá guasaca, 'where the (pitahaya) fruit ripens first'.—Rudo Ensayo). A former Coguínachi Opatá pueblo, containing also some Apache, and the seat of a Spanish mission founded in 1645, on Rio Bavispe, about lat. 29° 40', Sonora, Mexico. Its inhabitants numbered 632 in 1678, and 191 in 1730. A new church was built in 1764. The place is now civilized, but 50 Yaqui were settled in and about the town in 1900. (F. W. H.)

Buasdabas.—Ribas (1645) quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 58, 1890.

Goasavas.—de Croix (1769) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., II, 25, 1856.

Guasavas.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 343, 1864.

Guayavas.—Hamilton, Mex. Handbook, 47, 1883.

Guazaca.—Doc. of 1730 quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 505, 1892.

Guazava.—Mange (ca. 1700) quoted by Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 233, 1884.

Huassabas.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 58, 1890.

Huassavas.—Ibid., 56.

San Francisco Guazava.—Rivera (1730) quoted by Bancroft, op. cit., 514.

San Francisco Javier de Guazava.—Zapata (1678), ibid., 246.

Guazave. A subdivision of the Vacoregue, formerly occupying the pueblos of San Pedro Guazave and Tamazula, on Rio Sinaloa, about lat. 25° 45', n. w. Sinaloa, Mexico. The Vacoregue were also sometimes known as Guazave. A Jesuit mission was established among them in 1600, but the natives burned the church and fled. They were brought back, however, and the offenders hanged. Between 1646 and 1649 they again threatened trouble, but they later became Christianized and noted for their faith in the new religion. Orozco y Berra (Geog., 332, 1864) says: "In Guazave were united several factions, and although they were known as Guazaves they speak the Mexican tongue between themselves; this is the civilized language in all parts." (F. W. H.)

Gubo. A former rancharia, probably of the Papago, visited by Father Kino in 1694; situated 13 leagues E. of Sonoita, which was on the Rio Salado de Sonora, just below the Arizona boundary.

Gubo.—Kino (1694) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., I, 252, 1856.

Guvoverde.—Kino (1699) quoted by Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 267, 1884.

Gueguachic. A former Tarahumare settlement in Chihuahua, Mexico.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 322, 1864.

Gueiquesales. A former tribe of s. Texas, probably Coahuiltecan, living near the Manos Prietas, Bocoires, Haeser, Pinanaca, Escaba, Cacasates, Cocobieta, Codame, Contotores, Colorados, Babiamares, and Taimamares. Perhaps identical with the Guisoles, and probably the Susolas of Cabeza de Vaca. (J. R. S.)

Gueiquesales.—Fernando del Bosque (1675) in Nat. Geog. Mag., XIV, 340, 1903.

Gueiquizales.—Revillagigedo MS. (1793) quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 611, 1886.

Guepacomatzi. A former Opatá rancharia n. of Oputo, E. Sonora, Mexico. It was abandoned in the 18th century owing to the hostility of the Apache, Suma, and Jocomé. Not to be confounded with Huepaca.

Guepa Comatzi.—Doc. of 18th cent. quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 525, 1892.

Guerachic. Mentioned as a Tepehuane pueblo on the Upper Rio Fuerte, in the Sierra Madre, Chihuahua, Mexico.

Guerachic.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 324, 1864.

Guerechic.—Ibid., 322 (apparently the same).

Huerachic.—Lumholtz, Unknown Mexico, I, 299, note, 1902.

Guess, George. See Sequoya.

Guetela ('northern people'). A sept of the true Kwakiutl which formerly formed one tribe with the Komoyue, but separated on account of some quarrel. The clans are Maamtagyila, Kukwakum, Gyeksem, Laalaksentaio, and Sisintlae. They now live at Ft Rupert, Brit. Col.

Gué'tela.—Boas in Nat. Mus. Rep., 330, 1895.

Kué'xamut.—Ibid. (= 'fellows of the Kueha').

Guetela. A clan of the Wikeno, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Nat. Mus. Rep., 330, 1895.

Guevavi. A former Sobaipuri settlement and the seat of a Spanish mission established about 1720-32; situated on the w. bank of Rio Santa Cruz, below Tubac, at or near the present Nogales, Arizona-Sonora boundary. In 1750 it was plundered by the Indians and abandoned, but was reoccupied two years later as a mission under the protection of Tubac. In 1760-64 Guevavi contained 111 natives; in 1772, 86, and with its visitas (Calabazas, Jamac, Sonoita, and Tumacacori), 337. It was abandoned before 1784, Tumacacori becoming head of the mission establishment. (F. W. H.)

Genevavi.—Kino, map (1701) in Bancroft. Ariz. and N. Mex., 360, 1889 (misprint). Guazavez.—Writer (ca. 1713) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., v. 175, 1857. Guebavi.—Kino, map (1701) in Stöcklein, Neue Welt-Bott, 74, 1726. Guevavi.—Mange (1699) quoted by Bancroft, op. cit., 358. Guevavi-Gussudac.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 347, 1864. Gusudac.—Rudo Ensayo (1763), 149, 1863 (Pima name: 'great water'). Gusutaqui.—Mange quoted by Bancroft, op. cit., 358. San Felipe de Jesus Guevavi.—Villa-Señor quoted by Bancroft, No. Mex. States, i, 531, 1884. San Miguel.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 384, 1889 (Jesuit name). San Miguel de Guevavi.—Ibid., 362 (probably not so named until 1732). San Rafael.—Ibid., 384 (Jesuit name). Santos Angeles.—Ibid. (Franciscan name). S. Luis Guevavi.—Venegas, Hist. Cal., i, map, 1759.

Guevu. A Calusa village on the s. w. coast of Florida, about 1570.

Gueva.—Fontaneda quoted in Doc. Inéd., v, 539, 1866. Guevu.—Fontaneda Mem. (ca. 1575), Smith trans., 19, 1854.

Gueymura. A tribe speaking the Diegueño dialect, formerly living about Santa Catalina mission, N. Lower California. (Duflot de Mofras, Voy., i, 217, 228, 1844). Cf. Comeya, Guamua, Quilmur.

Gueyniotiteshesgue ('four tribes'). A phratry of the Caughnawaga Iroquois.

Gueza. An Indian settlement in w. South Carolina, probably in the present Edgefield co., visited by Juan Pardo in 1565.—Vandera in Smith, Colec. Doc. Fla., i, 17, 1857.

Guhlaniyi (Gá'laní'yí). A Cherokee and Natchez settlement formerly at the junction of Brasstown cr. with Hiwassee., a short distance above Murphy, Cherokee co., N. C.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 520, 1900.

Guhlga (Gú'tga). A legendary Haida town on the N. shore of Skidegate inlet, just above the present town of Skidegate, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., where there are now works for refining dog-fish oil. No native pretends to say what family occupied this town. (J. R. S.) Gú'tga.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905. Quilhcah.—Deans, Tales from Hidery, 67, 1899.

Guhlkaínde (Gú'tka-i'nde, 'plains people'). A division of the Mescalero Apache who claim as their original habitat the Staked plains region E. of Pecos r., in New Mexico and Texas. See Gohlkahin. (J. M.)

Cuelcajen-né.—Escudero, Not. de Chihuahua, 212, 1834 (probably identical). Gú'tka-i'nde.—Mooney, field notes, B. A. E., 1897. Llaneros.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 59, 1864 (Cuelcajen-ne or).

Guia. An unidentified ruined pueblo on the Rio Grande in the vicinity of Albuquerque, N. Mex.—Loew in Wheeler Survey Rep., vii, 338, 1879.

Guías. A Maricopa rancheria on the Rio Gila, s. Ariz., in 1744.—Sedelmair quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 366, 1889.

Guika. A former Tanos pueblo on the Rio Grande, in the vicinity of Alberquerque, N. Mex.—Loew in Wheeler Survey Rep., vii, 338, 1879.

Gui-k'ati. See Sleeping Wolf.

Guiltoty. A tribe of the Patwin division of the Copehan family, formerly living in Napa co., Cal.; one of the seven which made peace with Gov. Vallejo in 1836.

Guiltoty.—Bancroft, Hist. Cal., iv, 71, 1886. Guilicas.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 30, 1860. Guilucos.—Bancroft, op. cit., 72. Ulucas.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 7, 1861.

Guima. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Guimen. A division of the Olamentke branch of the Moquelumnan family of California, according to Choris and Kotzebue, who state that the people spoke the same language as the Tamal and Sonomi.

Guimen.—Choris, Voy. Pitt., 6, 1822. Guymen.—Chamisso in Kotzebue, Voy., iii, 51, 1821.

Guioamer. A village said to be 40 leagues from St Helena, probably in or near the present Barnwell co., S. C.; visited by Juan Pardo in 1566.—La Vandera (1569) in Smith, Colec. Doc. Fla., i, 16, 1857.

Guipago. See Lone Wolf.

Guismanes. An imaginary province, located in the great plains, in the region of Quivira.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629), Relacion, in Land of Sunshine, 187, 1900.

Guioles. A tribe of Coahuila or Texas, probably Coahuiltecan, noted in a manuscript quoted by Orozco y Berra, Geog., 306, 1864. It may be identical with the Gueiquesales, or with the Quitoles of Cabeza de Vaca.

Gulhildjding (Galtgi'ldjñ, probably 'mussel-chewing town'). A Haida town on the s. shore of Alliford bay, Moresby id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. Another name for this place (or for one near it) was Skama. It was occupied by a low social division of the Djahuiskwahladagai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Sqá'ma.—Ibid. (probably identical with above: 'woman's needle case').

Gull Lake Band. A Chippewa band formerly on Gull lake, on the upper Mississippi, in Cass co., Minn. They sold their lands in 1863. (J. M.)

Gulf Lake reservation.—Washington treaty (1867) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 273, 1873 (misprint). Gull Lake band.—Washington treaty (1863), ibid., 215.

Guloismistac. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Gumisachic ('arroyo'). A Tarahumare rancheria about 20 m. N. E. of Norogachic, Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumboltz, inf'n, 1894.

Gunachonken. Given by Krause as one of the Tlingit social groups living at Yakutat, Alaska, but it is actually only a name for the people of Gonaho (Gó'naxo), q. v., a small town in that neighborhood.

Gō'naxo qoan.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.
Gūnāchokon.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 116, 1885.

Gunakhe. The principal village of the Lakwee, situated on a branch of upper Stikine r., Brit. Col.

Gunasqa'a—Boas, 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 34, 1895.

Gunasquamekook ('long gravel bar joining the island'). A former Passamaquoddy village on the site of St Andrews, New Brunswick, on Passamaquoddy bay. The Indians were dispossessed by the whites and were finally settled at Pleasant Point, Me.—Vetromiie, Abnakis, 55, 1866.

Gunghet-haidagai ('Ninstints people'). A part of the Haida living about the s. end of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. In the Masset dialect their name is Anghethade. The whites formerly called them Ninstints people, from the name by which their chief town was generally known. Their language differs somewhat from that spoken by the Haida farther N. The remnant lives principally at Skidegate. (J. R. S.)

Āngit Hāde.—Harrison in Proc. Royal Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895. Cape St. James tribe.—Poole, Queen Charlotte Ids., 195, 1872. Gā'ñet Xā'idaga i.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 272, 1905. Kunxit.—Swanton, field notes, 1900-1901. Kunxit.—Dawson, Queen Charlotte Ids., 169, 1880 (proper name of the village, Ninstance being the name of the chief).

Gunghet-kegawai (Gā'ñet-qē'gawa-i, 'those born in the Ninstints country'). A subdivision of the Sasaos-kegawai, a division of the Raven clan of the Haida, probably descended from women who had married in the Ninstints country. It is to be distinguished from another and more important division of the same name at Ninstints which belonged to the Eagle clan.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 270, 1905.

Gunghet-kegawai. A subdivision of the Eagle clan of the Haida, belonging, as the name implies, to one of the Ninstints or Gunghet group. They were sometimes called also Gunghet-gitinaí.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 270, 1905.

Gupa. A former Agua Caliente village on the headwaters of San Luis Rey r., s. Cal., better known as Agua Caliente (q. v.). Its inhabitants were removed to Pala res. in 1902.

Agua Caliente.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1902, 175, 1903. Agua Caliente.—Jackson and Kinney, Rep. Miss. Ind., 20, 1883. Gupa.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1905 (own name). Gupa-nga-git-om.—Ibid. (own name: 'Gupa-at-people'). Ha-koo-pin.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 11, 1860. Hakupin.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1905 (Diegueño name). Ko-pa.—Barrows, Ethno-Bot. Coahuilla Ind., 34, 1900 (Kaviana name).

Gusti (Gusti'). A traditional Cherokee settlement on Tennessee r., near Kingston, Roane co., Tenn.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 521, 1900.

Gutgunest-nas-hadai (Gutgunē'st nas-had'ā'i 'owl-house people'). Given by Boas (Fifth Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 26, 1889) as the name of a subdivision of the Yaku-lanas, a division of the Raven clan of the Haida. It is really only a house name belonging to that family. (J. R. S.)

Gutheni (Gat-hi'ni, 'salmon creek'). A former Tlingit town situated N. of Dry bay, Alaska. (J. R. S.)

Gutubur. A Pima rancheria visited by Father Kino in 1694; definite locality unknown.—Kino in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., I, 251, 1856.

Guwisguwi. See Cooweescoowee; Ross (John).

Guyasuta. See Kiasutha.

Gwaeskun (Gwā-iskūn, 'end of island'). Formerly the northernmost Haida town on Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was named from the cape near by and is said to have been owned by the Stustas, but it has long been abandoned.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Gwaidalgaegins (Gwāi-dalga'-igins, 'island that floats along'). A former Haida fort belonging to the Kadusgo-kegawai of Kloo. It was near the mountain called Kinggi, famous in native legend, on Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. (J. R. S.)

Gwalgahi (Gwāl-qā'hī, 'frog place'). A place on Hiwassee r., in the Cherokee country, just above the junction of Peachtree cr., near Murphy, Cherokee co., N. C.; about 1755 the site of a village of refugee Natchez, and later of a Baptist mission.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 521, 1900.

Gwaugweh ('one took out a locust.'—Hewitt). Probably a former Seneca village near Niagara r., N. Y.

Carrying Place Village.—Morgan, League Iroq., 466, 1851. Gwa-u-gueh.—Ibid., map. Gwā-u-gweh.—Ibid., 466.

Gweghkhongh. A village in 1657, probably belonging to the Unami Delawares and apparently situated in N. New Jersey, near Staten id., or in the adjacent part of New York.

Gweghkhongh.—Deed of 1657 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., XIV, 393, 1883. Hweghkhongh.—Ibid.

Gweundus (Gwē'Andas). A subdivision of low social rank of the Hlgahet-gitinaí, a family of the Eagle clan of the Haida.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 274, 1905.

Gwinwah. A former Niska village on Nass r., Brit. Col.

Gu'na.—Swanton, field notes, 1900-01 (name obtained from the Haida). Gwinwah.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 281, 1897.

Gyagyilakya (G'āg'g'ilak'a, 'always wanting to kill people'). A gens of the Tsawatenok, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 331, 1895.

Gyaushk ('gull'). A gens of the Chipewa (q. v.).

Gi-oshk.—Tanner, Narr., 315, 1830. Gyaushk.—Warren in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v. 44, 1885.

Gyazru. The Parrot clan of the Hopi. Gyarzobi.—Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 120, 1891. Gya'-zro.—Stephen, ibid., 39. Gyazru winwū.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 534, 1900 (winwū = 'clan'). Káro.—Voth, Hopi Proper Names, 81, 1905. Karro.—Dorsey and Voth, Mishongnovi Ceremonies, 175, 1902.

Gyegyote (G'ēg'ō'tē, 'descendants of Gyote'). A subdivision of the Lalauitela, a gens of the Tlatlasikoala.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 332, 1895.

Gyekolekoa (G'ēg'ō'lqēoa). A gens of the Koskimo, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 329, 1895.

Gyeksem ('chiefs'). The principal gens in the following Kwakiutl tribes and septs: Koskimo, Nakomgyilisala, Tlatlasikoala, Nakoaktok, Guetela, Walas-kwakiutl, Matilpe, Tenaktak, Hahuamis, and Wiwekae.

G'ē'xsEm.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 329-331, 1895.
G'ē'qsEm.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 53-55, 1890.

Gyeksemsanatl (G'ē'xsEm'sanaL, 'highest chiefs'). A gens of the Koskimo, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 329, 1895.

Gyigyekemae (G'ē'g'Eqemāē, 'chiefs'). A gens of the Tsawatenok, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 331, 1895.

Gyigyilkam ('those who receive first'). A gens, or gentes, having the same name, in the following Kwakiutl tribes and septs: Wikeno, Tlatlasikoala, Goasila, Komoyue sept of the true Kwakiutl, Koeksotenok, Tlauitsis, Ninkish, Awa-tlala, Guauaenok, Hahuamis, Wiwekae sept of the Lekwiltok.

G'ē'īlqam.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 328-331, 1895.
G'ē'īylk'am.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 55, 1890. G'ē'īylk'am.—Ibid. Hamalak-yaue.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 130, 1887 (name of ancestor).

Gyilaktaks (Gyilaxtsā'oks, 'people of the canoe planks'). A Tsimshian family living at Kitzilas, on the N. side of Skeena r., Brit. Col.—Boas in Ztschr. f. Ethnol., 232, 1888.

Gyisgahast (Gyisg'ahā'st, 'grass people'). A Niska division of the Gyispawaduwa clan, living in the town of Kitwinshilk, on Nass r., and a Kitksan division living in the town of Kitzegukla, on Skeenar., Brit. Col.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 49-50, 1895.

Gyiskabenak (Gyisk'ab'Enā'q). A Niska division of the Lakskiyek clan, living in the town of Lakkulzap, on Nass r., Brit. Col.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 49, 1895.

Gyispawaduwa (Gyispawaduwa E'da, 'bear'). One of the four Tsimshian clans.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 49, 50, 1895.

GyispōtawE'da.—Boas in 5th Rep., ibid., 9, 1889.

Gyitgyigyenik (Gyitgyigye'nūn). A Niska division of the Lakyeyo clan, now in the town of Andeguale, on Nass r., Brit. Col.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 49, 1895.

Gyitkadok (Gyitkuk'adō'k). A Niska division of the Kanhada clan, now living in the town of Lakkulzap, at the mouth of Nass r., Brit. Col.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 49, 1895.

Gyitksaktl (Gyitksā'xīl, 'people of the lake shore'). A subdivision of the Kitzilas living in a village on the S. side of Skeena r., Brit. Col.—Boas in Ztschr. f. Ethnol., 232, 1888.

Gyitsaek (Gyits'ā'ek). A Niska division of the Lakskiyek clan living in the town of Kitwinshilk, on Nass r., Brit. Col.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 49, 1895.

Gyitwulnakyel (Gyitwulnakye'ēl). A Niska division of the Lakyeyo clan living in the town of Kitlakdamix, on Nass r., Brit. Col.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 49, 1895.

Gypsum. A mineral (hydrous sulphide of calcium) embracing three principal varieties—gypsum, satin-spar, and selenite—and occurring in both crystallized and massive forms in connection with stratified rocks. The light-colored compact forms are known as alabaster, a name sometimes erroneously applied to certain forms of travertine and stalagmite. Having no considerable degree of hardness, gypsum was not used for implements by the aborigines, but the pleasing colors and translucent effects made the massive forms valuable for ornaments and carvings generally. Selenite, which has the foliate structure, is readily separated into thin sheets and until recent years was used for window lights instead of glass by some of the Pueblo tribes. The same people crush the gypsum and use it as white-wash on the walls of their houses, generally using a piece of sheep skin as a brush. The Plains Indians, according to Mooney, roast the blocks of gypsum and use the resulting powder to clean and whiten dressed skins and to whiten the gummed tips of feathers in decorative work. (W. H. H.)

Gyusiwa. Formerly one of the western group of Jemez pueblos, $\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. of Jemez hot springs, on a slope descending to the river from the E., in Sandoval co., New Mexico. Judging from the extent of the ruins of the village, it at one time contained probably 800 inhabitants. It was the seat of the Spanish mission of San Diego de Jemez, and had a chapel, erected probably previous to 1617, at which date it was the principal Jemez village. The pueblo was abandoned in 1622 on account of the persistent aggressiveness of the Navaho, who had succeeded in scattering the Jemez tribe; but in 1627 Fray Martin de Arvide gathered the scattered members and resettled them in Gyusiwa and Amushungkwa (Patoqua?) pueblos. The latter was deserted prior to 1680, but Gyusiwa was occupied when the pueblos revolted in that year. It was, however, finally abandoned shortly afterward. The walls of the ruined church, in some places 8 feet thick, are still standing. See Bandelier, cited below; Holmes in Am. Anthropol., VII, no. 2, 1905.

(F. W. H.)

Cuunsiora.—Orocoo y Berra in Anales Minis. Fom. Mex., 196, 1882 (evidently the same). Gin-se-ua.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 204, 1892. Quimzique.—Ibid., 205 (misprint of Zarate-Salmeron's Quinzique). Guin-se-ua.—Bandelier in Compte-rendu Internat. Cong. Am., VII, 452, 1890. Quinzigua.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629) quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 600, 1882. Quinzigua.—Vargas quoted by Orocoo y Berra in Anales Minis. Fom. Mex., 196, 1882. Quinsta.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 136, 1889 (misquoting Oñate). Quimzi-qua.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629) Rel., in Land of Sunshine, 183, Feb., 1900. Quimzique.—Zarate-Salmeron quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 127, 1890. Quinzique.—Ibid., IV, 205, 1892. Quiusta.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., XVI, 102, 1871 (probably the same). San Diego.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, I, 23, 27, 1881. San Diego de James.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1867, 213, 1868. San Diego de Jemés.—Alencaster (1805) quoted by Mellé, Two Thousand Miles, 212, 1867. San Diego de Jemez.—Alencaster (1805) quoted by Prince, New Mex., 37, 1883. San Diego de los Emex.—MS. of 1643 quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 206, 1892. San Diego de los Hemes.—Vetancourt, Menolog. Fran., 275, 1871. San Diego de los Temes.—Orocoo y Berra in Anales Minis. Fom. Mex., 255, 1882. S. Diego.—D'Anville, map Am. Sept., 1746.

Gyuungsh. The Oak clan of the former pueblo of Pecos, N. Mex.

Gyuúsh.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 351, 1896 (usually with the suffix -ash, 'people').

Haaiialikyauae (Haai'alik'auaē, 'the shamans'). A gens of the Hahuamis, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 331, 1895.

Haailakyemae ('the shamans'). A gens of the Kwakiutl proper, found among the Komoyue and Matilpe subdivisions.

Haai'lak'emaē—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 330, 1895. Haailakyemae—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 54, 1890. Haialikyauae.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887. Láse.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 54, 1890. Lá'se.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 330, 1895 (sig. 'going through').

Haanatlenok ('the archers'). A gens of the Komoyue, a subdivision of the Kwakiutl.

Há'analénôx.—Boas in Nat. Mus. Rep., 330, 1895. Há'anatlenog.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 54, 1890. Há'natlino.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887.

Haanka Ullah (Hankha aiola, 'wild goose there cries'). A former Choctaw town situated on a long flat-topped ridge between Petickfa cr. and Blackwater cr., Kemper co., Miss. It received its name from a pond of water about 7 acres in extent which was much frequented by wild fowl.—Romans, Florida, 310, 1775; Halbert in Miss. Hist. Soc. Publ., VI, 420, 1902.

Haaskouan. See Grangula.

Haatzé (Queres: 'earth'). A prehistoric pueblo of the Cochiti near the foot of the Sierra San Miguel, above Cochiti pueblo, N. Mex. It is claimed to have been occupied after the abandonment of the Potrero de las Vacas.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 157, 1892.

Haatzé.—Hewett in Am. Anthropol., VI, 638, 1904. Ha-a-tze.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 157, 1892. Rät-je Kama Tse-shu-ma.—Ibid., pl. I, fig. 13. Rä-tya.—Lummis in Scribner's Mag., 98, 1893. Rä-tye Ka-ma Tze-shuma.—Bandelier, op. cit., 159 (='the old houses at the rabbit', in allusion to the rabbit-like outline of the neighboring crest). San Miguel.—Lummis, op. cit.

Habachaca. A clan of the Chulufichi phratry of the ancient Timucua of Florida.—Pareja (ca. 1614) quoted by Gatschet in Am. Philos. Soc. Proc., XVII, 492, 1878.

Habamouk. See Hobomok, Hobomoko.

Habitations. The habitations of the Indians of northern America may be classed as community houses (using the term

ANCIENT CLIFF-DWELLING, MESA VERDE, COLORADO

"community" in the sense of comprising more than one family) and single, or family, dwellings. "The house architecture of the northern tribes is of little importance, in itself considered; but as an outcome of their social condition and for comparison with that of the southern village Indians, is highly important" (Morgan). The typical community houses, as those of the Iroquois tribes, were 50 to 100 ft long by 16 to 18 ft wide, with frame of poles and with sides and triangular roof covered with bark, usually of the elm; the interior was divided into compartments and a smoke hole was left in the roof. A Mahican house, similar in form, 14 by 60 ft. had the sides and roof made of rushes and chestnut bark, with an opening along the top of the roof from end to end. The Mandan circular community house was usually about 40 ft in diameter; it was supported by two series of posts and cross-beams, and the wide roof and sloping sides were covered with willow or brush matting and earth. The fireplace was in the center. Morgan thinks that the oblong, round-roof houses of the Virginia and North Carolina tribes, seen and described by Capt. John Smith and drawn by John White, were of the community order. That some of them housed a number of families is distinctly stated. Morgan includes also in the community class the circular, dome-shaped earth lodges of Sacramento valley and the L-form, tent-shaped, thatched lodges of the higher areas of California; but the leading examples of community houses are the large, sometimes massive, many-celled clusters of stone or adobe in New Mexico and Arizona known as pueblos (q. v.). These dwellings vary in form, some of those built in prehistoric times being semicircular, others oblong, around or inclosing a court or plaza. These buildings were constructed usually in terrace form, the lower having a one-story tier of apartments, the next two stories, and so on to the uppermost tier, which sometimes constituted a seventh story. The masonry consisted usually of small, flat stones laid in adobe mortar and chinked with spalls; but sometimes large balls of adobe were used as building stones, or a double row of wattling was erected and filled in with grout, solidly tamped. By the latter method, known as pisé construction, walls 5 to 7 ft thick were sometimes built (see Adobe, Casa Grande). The outer walls of the lowest story were pierced only by small openings, access to the interior being gained by means of ladders, which could be drawn up, if necessary, and of a hatchway in the roof. It is possible that some of the elaborate structures of Mexico were developed from such hive-like buildings as those of the typical pueblos, the cells increasing in size toward the S., as suggested by Bandelier. Chimneys appear to have been unknown in North America until after contact of the natives with Europeans, the hatchway in the roof serving the double purpose of entrance and flue.

DWELLINGS, PUEBLO OF HANO, ARIZONA

Other forms, some community and others not, are the following: Among the Eskimo, the karmak, or winter residence, for which a pit of the required diameter is dug 5 or 6 ft deep, with a frame of wood or whalebone constructed within 2 or 3 ft above the surface of the ground and covered with a dome-shaped roof of poles or whale ribs, turfed and earthed over.

Entrance is gained by an underground passageway. The temporary hunting lodge of the Labrador Eskimo was sometimes constructed entirely of the ribs and vertebrae of the whale. Another form of Eskimo dwelling is the hemispherical snow house, or iglu, built of blocks of snow laid in spiral courses. The Kaniagmiut build large permanent houses, called barabara by the Russians, which accommodate 3 or 4 families; these are constructed by digging a square pit 2 ft deep, the sides of which are lined with planks that are carried to the required height above the surface and roofed with boards, poles, or whale ribs, thickly covered with grass; in the roof is a smoke hole, and on the eastern side a door. The Tlingit, Haida, and some other tribes build substantial rectangular houses with sides and ends formed of planks and with the fronts elaborately carved and painted with symbolic figures. Directly in front of the house a totem pole is placed, and near by a memorial pole is erected.

ESKIMO HOUSE, EAST CAPE, SIBERIA. (NELSON)

a b

c

SNOW HOUSE OF CENTRAL ESKIMO. a, FRONT VIEW; b, GROUND PLAN; c, SECTION. (BOAS)

These houses are sometimes 40 by 100 ft in the Nootka and Salish region, and are occupied by a number of families. Formerly some of the Haida houses are said to have been built on platforms supported by posts; some of these seen by such early navigators as Vancouver were 25 or 30 ft above ground, access being had by notched logs serving as ladders. Among the N. W. inland tribes, as the Nez Percés, the dwelling was a frame of poles covered with rush matting or with buffalo or elk skins. The houses of the California tribes, some of which are above noted, were rectangular or circular; of the latter, some were conical, others dome-shaped. There was historic and early historic times. Another kind of dwelling, in use in Arkansas before the discovery, was a rectangular structure with two rooms in front and one in the rear; the walls were of upright posts thickly plastered with clay on a sort of wattle.

HAIDA HOUSE WITH TOTEM POLE. (NIBLACK)

also formerly in use in various parts of California, and to some extent on the interior plateaus, a semisubterranean earth-covered lodge known among the Maidu as kūm.

The most primitive abodes were those of the Paiute and the Cocopa, consisting simply of brush shelters for summer,

HOUSE OF NORTHERN CALIFORNIA INDIANS; KLAMATH RIVER. (POWERS)

and for winter of a framework of poles bent together at the top and covered with brush, bark, and earth. Somewhat similar structures are erected by the Pueblos as farm shelters, and more elaborate houses of the same general type are built by the Apache of Arizona. As indicated by archeological researches, the circular wigwam, with sides of bark or mats, built over a shallow excavation in the soil, and with earth thrown against the base, appears to have been the usual form of dwelling in the Ohio valley and the immediate valley of the Mississippi in pre-

APACHE HOUSE OF BRUSH AND CANVAS

HOUSE CONSTRUCTION, MOUND BUILDERS. PLASTERED WATTLE WORK. (THOMAS)

With the exception of the Pueblo structures, buildings of stone or adobe were unknown until recent times.

The dwellings of some of the tribes of the plains, as the Sioux, Arapaho, Comanche, and Kiowa, were generally portable skin tents or tipis, but those of the Omaha,

VILLAGE OF TIPIS; PLAINS INDIANS

Osage, and some others were more substantial (see Earth lodge, Grass lodge). The dwellings of the Omaha, according to Miss Fletcher, "are built by setting carefully selected and prepared posts together in a circle, and binding them firmly with willows, then backing them with dried grass, and covering the entire structure with closely packed sods. The roof is made in the same manner, having an additional support of an inner circle of posts, with crotchets to hold the cross logs which act as beams to the dome-shaped roof. A circular opening in the center serves as a chimney and also to give light to the interior of the dwelling; a sort of sail is rigged and fastened outside of this opening to guide the smoke and prevent the occupants of the lodge. The entrance passage-way, which usually faces eastward, is from 6 to 10 ft long and is built in the same manner as the lodge." An important type is the Wichita grass hut, circular, dome-shaped with conical top.

NAVAHO HOGAN (EARTH LODGE)

PALMETTO HOUSE; LOUISIANA INDIANS

The frame is built somewhat in panels formed by ribs and crossbars; these are covered with grass tied on shingle fashion. These grass lodges vary in diameter from 40 to 50 ft. The early Florida houses, according to Le Moyne's illustrations published by De Bry, were either circular with dome-like roof, or oblong with rounded roof like those of Secotan in North Carolina, as shown in John White's figures. The frame was of poles; the sides and roof were covered with bark, or the latter was sometimes thatched. The Chipewewa usually constructed a conical or hemispherical framework of poles, covered with bark. Formerly caves and rock shelters were used in some sections as abodes, and in the Pueblo region houses were formerly constructed in natural recesses or shelters in the cliffs, whence the designation cliff-dwellings. Similar habitations are still in use to some extent by the Tarahumare of Chihuahua, Mexico. Cavate houses with several rooms were also hewn in the sides of soft volcanic cliffs; so numerous are these in Verde valley, Arizona, and the Jemez plateau, New Mexico, that for miles the cliff face is honey-combed with them. As a rule the women were the builders of the houses where wood was the structural material, but the men assisted with the heavier work. In the Southern states it was a common custom to erect mounds as foundations for council houses, for the chief's dwelling, or for structures designed for other official uses.

The erection of houses, especially those of a permanent character, was usually attended with great ceremony, particularly when the time for dedication came. The construction of the Navaho hogán, for example, was done in accordance with fixed rules, as was the cutting and sewing of the tipi among the Plains tribes, while the new houses erected during the year were usually dedicated with ceremony and feasting. Although the better types of houses were symmetrical and well proportioned, their builders had not learned the use of the square or the plumb-line; the unit of measure was also apparently unknown, and even in the best types of ancient Pueblo masonry the joints of the stonework were not "broken."

The Indian names for some of their structures, as tipi, wigwam, wickiup, hogan, and iglu, have come into use to a greater or less extent by English-speaking people. See Adobe, Archeology, Architecture, Cliff-dwellings, Earth lodge, Fortification and Defense, Grass lodge, Hogan, Kiva, Mounds, Pueblos, Tipi.

WINNEBAGO BARK HOUSE; MINNESOTA. (GILFILLAN)

SECOTA, A TOWN OF THE CAROLINA COAST. (HARIOT)

Consult Boas in Proc. Nat. Mus., XI, 1889; Hrdlicka in Am. Anthropol., v, 385, 1903; vi, 51, 1904; vii, 480, 1905; viii, 39, 1906; De Bry, Brevis Narratio, 1591; Harriot, Virginia, repr. 1874. Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt. 3, 1905; Catlin, Manners and Customs N. A. Inds., 1841; Goddard, Life and Culture of the Hupa, 1903; Bandler in various Papers of the Archaeol. Inst. America; Morgan, Houses and House-life of the American Aborigines, Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iv, 1881; Willoughby in Am. Anthropol., viii, No. 1, 1906; Holm, Deser. New Sweden, 1834; Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i-vi, 1851-57; Dellenbaugh, North Americans of Yesterday, 1901; Matthews, Navaho Legends, 1897; also, the various reports of the B. A. E.: Boas, Murdoch, Nelson, and Turner for the Eskimo; Dorsey for the Omaha; C. and V. Mindeleff for the Navaho and Pueblos; Fewkes for the Pueblos; Hoffman for the Menominee and Chippewa, etc. (C. T.)

Hacanac. Mentioned by the Gentleman of Elvas in 1557 (Hakluyt Soc. Publ., ix, 132, 1851) as a province of which Moscoso was informed in 1542; apparently on the N. E. Texan border. Unidentified.

Hachaath. An extinct Nootka tribe which formerly lived on or N. of Barclay sd., Vancouver id.

A-y-charts.—Jewitt, Narr., 120, 1849. Aytech-arts.—Ibid., 37. Haca'ath.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 32, 1890. Haca'ath.—Ibid., 31.

Hachepiriinu ('young dogs'). A former Arikara band under chief Chinanitu, The Brother.

Ha-če'-pi-ri-i-nu'.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 357, 1862. Young Dogs.—Culbertson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1850, 143, 1851.

Hachimuk. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Hachos (prob. Span.: a fagot or bundle of straw or grass covered with resin). Mentioned as a wild tribe of New Mexico in the 18th century.—Villa-Señor, Theatro Am., pt. 2, 412, 1748.

Hackensack (Ackkinkas-hacky, 'the stream that unites with another in low level ground.'—Heckewelder). A former division of the Unami Delawares, occupying the territory designated by the Indians Ackkinkashacky, embracing the valleys of Hackensack and Passaic rs. in N. New Jersey. Their principal village was Gamoenapa, usually known as Communipaw. They took a prominent part in the events of 1643-44, but subsequently appear as mediators through their chief Oritany (Oratamy, Oratam, etc.), who enjoyed, to a ripe old age, the confidence of his people and the surrounding chieftaincies, as well as that of the whites. The lands of the tribe embraced Jersey City, Hoboken, a part of Staten island, Weehawken, Newark, Passaic, etc. Their number was estimated at 1,000 in 1643, of which 300 were warriors, probably an exaggeration (Ruttenber). (J. M. C. T.)

Ackkinkesacky.—Doc. of 1663 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., XIII, 276, 1881. Ackkinkeshacky.—Treaty of 1645, ibid., 18. Ackkinkes hacky.—Doc. of 1643, ibid., 14. Ackkinkesacky.—Doc. of 1663, ibid., 280. Hacansacke.—Doc. of 1662, ibid., xiv, 512, 1883. Haccinsack.—Doc. ca. 1643, ibid., i, 198, 1856. Hachingshack.—Deed of 1657, ibid., xiv, 394, 1883. Hachkinkeshaky.—Doc. of 1655, ibid., XIII, 55, 1881. Hackensack.—Treaty of 1673, ibid., 476. Hackinckesacky.—Stuyvesant (1663), ibid., 323. Hackinghesacky.—Doc. of 1662, ibid., 218. Hackinghsack.—Deed of 1657, ibid., xiv, 393, 1883. Hackinghsackin.—Doc. of 1660, ibid., 182. Hackinghsakij.—Doc. of 1663, ibid., XIII, 305, 1881. Hackingkesacky.—Doc. of 1663, ibid., 294. Hackingkesacky.—Doc. of 1663, ibid., 289. Hackinghsack.—Report of 1644, ibid., i, 150, 1856. Hackinkasacky.—Treaty of 1660, ibid., XIII, 148, 1881. Hackinkesackingsh.—Doc. of 1660, ibid., 183. Hackinkesacky.—Doc. of 1663, ibid., 294. Hackinckesacky.—Ibid. Hackinsack.—Doc. ca. 1643, ibid., i, 199, 1856. Hackinsagh.—Doc. of 1673, ibid., ii, 606, 1858. Hackquinsack.—Doc. of 1650, ibid., i, 411, 1856. Hacquinsack.—Ibid.

Haddo. See Huddoh.

Hadley Indians. A small body or band, possibly Nipmuc, which, at the time of King Philip's war in 1675, occupied a small fort about a mile above Hatfield, on the W. side of Connecticut r., in Hampshire co., Mass. They abandoned their village to join Philip's forces and thereafter ceased to be known under the name above given. (J. M.)

Hadsapoke's Band (from the name of its chief, "Horse-stopper"). A Paviotso band formerly at Gold canyon, Carson r., W. Nev., said to number 110 in 1859. Had-sa-poke's band.—Dodge in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 373, 1860.

Hadtuitazhi ('touches no green corn husks'). A former subgens of the Hanga gens of the Omaha.

Ha-ju-it-aj'i.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 227, 1897.

Haena. A former Haida town on the E. end of Maude id., Skidegate inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It is said to have been occupied in very early times by the Djahui-skwahladagai, and in recent years it was reoccupied by the west coast Haida, who desired to be nearer the traders, but after a comparatively short occupancy the people moved to Skidegate about 1880. There are said to have been 13 houses, which would indicate a population of about 150. (J. R. S.)

Khina Haadé.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895 (Khina = Haena). New Gold Harbour Village.—Dawson, Queen Charlotte Ids., 168B, 1880. Xa'ina.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Haeser. A former tribe near the lower Rio Grande, living with the Gueiquesales, Manos Prietas, Bocores, Pinanaca, Escaba, Cacastes, Cocobipta, Cocomaque, Codame, Contotores, Colorados, Babiamares, and Taimamares. Probably Coahuiltecan. Siaexer.—Fernando del Bosque (1675) in Nat. Geog. Mag., xiv, 340, 1903. Xaeser.—Ibid., 344.

Hagi (Xā'gí, said to mean 'striped'). A Haida town on or near the largest of the Bolkus ids., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It derived its name from a reef which, in local mythology, was the first land to appear above the waters of the flood, bearing the ancestress of all the Raven people upon it. The town was occupied by a Ninistints division of the same name.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Hagi-lanas (Xāgi-lā'nas, 'people of striped (?) town'). A subdivision of the Haida, belonging to the Raven clan and occupying the town of Hagi, on Hagi id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. From the circumstance attending their supposed origin (see Hagi) the family claimed to be the oldest on the islands, but it is now represented by only two or three individuals. There were two subdivisions, the Huldangats and the Keda-lanas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 268, 1905.

Haglli. A Yuman tribe or division which in 1604-05 occupied 5 rancherias on the lower Rio Colorado, between the Cohuanas (Yuma) and the Halliguamayas, of which latter (identifiable with the Quigiyuma) they apparently formed a part.

Haelli.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 110, 1890. Haglli.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629). Rel., in Land of Sunshine, 106, Jan. 1900. Tlaglii.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 156, 1889.

Hagonchenda. A former Iroquois town, probably belonging to the people of Tequenondahi, and situated in 1535 not far from the junction of Jacques Cartier r. with the St Lawrence. The chief of this town gave a small girl to Cartier on his second voyage, and placed Cartier on his guard against the machinations of the chiefs of the peoples dwelling around Stadacona and elsewhere on the St Lawrence. For this reason Cartier, in his third voyage, in 1540, gave this chief 2 small boys to learn the language, and also a "cloak of Paris red, which cloak was set with yellow and white buttons of Tinne, and small belles." See Cartier, Bref Récit, 67, 1863. (J. N. B. H.)

Hagwilget (Tsimshian: 'well dressed'). The chief village of the Hwotsotenne, on Bulkley r., 3 m. s. e. of Hazelton, Brit. Col.; pop. 500 in 1870, 161 in 1904.

Achwilget.—Horetzky, Canada on Pac., 103, 1874. Ahwilgate.—Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can., 1879-80, 203, 1881. Hagulget.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 563, 1870. Hagwilget.—Can. Ind. Aff. Rep. 1904, pt. 2, 73, 1905. Ha-gwil-két.—Henshaw, MS. note, B. A. E., 1887. Tschah.—Morice in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., map, 1892. Tsitsk.—Can. Ind. Aff., 212, 1902 (Kitsun form).

Hahamatses ('old mats'). A subdivision or sept of the Lekwiltok, a Kwakiutl tribe. They received their name because they were slaves of the Wiwekase sept. Recently they have taken the name of Walitsum, 'the great ones.' Pop. 53 in 1901, 43 in 1904.

Chāhamatses.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887. H'ah'amatses.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 230, 1887. Kahk-ah-mah-tsis.—Can. Ind. Aff., 119, 1880. Kakamatsis.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Qā' qamatsēs.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 55, 1890. Wā'-lit-sum.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., v, sec. II, 65, 1887. Wau-lit-sah-mosk.—Sproat in Can. Ind. Aff., 149, 1879. Waw-lit-sum.—Can. Ind. Aff., 189, 1884. Xā'xamatsēs.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 331, 1895.

Hahamogna. A former Gabrieleño rancheria in Los Angeles co., Cal., at a locality later called Rancho Verdugos.—Ried (1852) quoted by Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860.

Hahas. A former Chumashan village at the principal port of Santa Cruz id., Cal., probably at Prisoners' harbor.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Hahatonwanna ('small village at the falls'). A former Sioux village or division at the Falls of St Anthony, Minn.; mentioned doubtfully by Dorsey (1880). Given by Lewis and Clark in 1804 as a subdivision of the Yankton of the north, of which Mahpeondotak was chief. The name may refer to an incorporated Chipewa band.

Hahatouadeba.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Hah-har-tones.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 99, 1905. Har-har-tones.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 84, 1806. Horheton.—Del'Isle (1701), map in Neill, Hist. Minn., 164, 1858. Horhetton.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Morheton.—La Tour, Am. Sept., map, 1779 (misprint).

Hahekolatl (Hā'hēqoln, descendants of Hakolatl'). A subdivision of the Lalauitlala, a gens of the Tlatlasikoala (q. v.), a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 332, 1895.

Hahuamis. A Kwakiutl tribe living on Wakeman sd., Brit. Col.; pop. 63 in 1901, the last time they were officially reported. They are divided into three gentes: Gyeksem, Gyigiykam, and Haaialikyauae.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 331, 1895.

Ah-knaw-ah-mish.—Can. Ind. Aff., 189, 1884. Ah-know-ah-mish.—Ibid., 314, 1892. Ah-wha-mish.—Ibid., 364, 1897. A-kwa'-amish.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 65. A-qua-mish.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859. Ohachua'mis.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 130, 1887. Ecqua-mish.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. H'ah'uamis.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 228, 1887. Haqua'mis.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 55, 1890. Haxua'mis.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 331, 1895.

Haida (Xā'ida, 'people'). The native and popular name for the Indians of the Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., and the s. end of Prince of Wales id., Alaska, comprising the Skittagetan family (q. v.). By the natives themselves the term may be applied generally to any human being or specifically to one speaking the Haida language. Some authors have improperly restricted the application of the term to the Queen Charlotte islanders, calling the Alaskan Haida, Kaigani (q. v.). Several English variants of this word owe their origin to the fact that a suffix usually accompanies it in the native language, making it Hā'dē in one dialect and Haidaga'i in the other.

On the ground of physical characteristics the Haida, Tlingit, and Tsimshian peoples should be grouped together. Language and social organization indicate still closer affinities between the Haida and Tlingit.

According to their own traditions the oldest Haida towns stood on the E. shore, at Naikun and on the broken coast of they have been reduced in the last 60 years to one-tenth of their former strength. A station of the Hudson's Bay Company was long established at Masset, but is now no longer remunerative. At Skidegate there are works for the extraction of dog-fish oil, which furnish employment to the people during much of the year; but in summer all the Indians from this place and Masset go to the mainland to work in salmon canneries. The Masset people also make many canoes of immense cedars to sell to other coast tribes. The Kaigani still occupy 3 towns, but the population of 2 of them, Kasaan and Klinkwan, is inconsiderable. Neighboring salmon canneries give them work all summer.

Mission stations are maintained by the Methodists at Skidegate, by the Church of England at Masset, and by the Presbyterians at Howkan, Alaska. Nearly all of the people are nominally Christians.

The Haida, Tlingit, and Tsimshian seem to show greater adaptability to civilization and to display less religious conservatism than many of the tribes farther S. They are generally regarded as superior to them by the white settlers, and they certainly showed themselves such in war and in the arts. Of all peoples of the N. W. coast the Haida were the best carvers, painters, and canoe and house builders, and they still earn considerable money by selling carved objects of wood and slate to traders and

HAIDA MAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

Moresby id. Later a portion of the people moved to the W. coast, and between 150 and 200 years ago a still larger section, the Kaigani, drove the Tlingit from part of Prince of Wales id. and settled there. Although it is not impossible that the Queen Charlotte ids. were visited by Spaniards during the 17th century, the first certain account of their discovery is that by Ensign Juan Perez, in the corvette Santiago, in 1774. He named the N. point of the islands Cabo de Santa Margarita. Bodega and Maurelle visited them the year after. In 1786 La Perouse coasted the shores of the islands, and the following year Capt. Dixon spent more than a month around them, and the islands are named from his vessel, the Queen Charlotte. After that time scores of vessels from England and New England resorted to the coast, principally to trade for furs, in which business the earlier voyagers reaped golden harvests. The most important expeditions, as those of which there is some record, were by Capt. Douglas, Capt. Jos. Ingraham of Boston, Capt. Etienne Marchand in the French ship Solide, and Capt. Geo. Vancouver (Dawson, Queen Charlotte Ids., 1880).

The advent of whites was, as usual, disastrous to the natives. They were soon stripped of their valuable furs, and, through smallpox and general immorality, tourists. Standing in the tribe depended more on the possession of property than on ability in war, so that considerable interchange of goods took place and the people became sharp traders. The morals of the people were, however, very loose.

HAIDA WOMAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

Canoes were to the people of this coast what the horse became to the Plains Indians. They were hollowed out of single logs of cedar, and were sometimes very large. Houses were built of huge cedar beams and planks which were worked out with adzes and wedges made anciently of stone, and put together at great feasts called by the whites by the jargon word "potlatch" (q. v.). Each house ordinarily had a single carved pole in the middle of the gable end presented to the beach (see Architecture). Often the end posts in front were also carved and the whole house front painted. The dead were placed in mortuary houses, in boxes on carved poles, or sometimes in caves. Shamans were placed after death in small houses built on prominent points along shore. Among the beliefs of the Haida reincarnation held a prominent place.

An estimate of the Haida population made, according to Dawson, by John Work, between 1836 and 1841, gives a total of 8,328, embracing 1,735 Kaigani and 6,593 Queen Charlotte islanders. Dawson estimated the number of people on the Queen Charlotte ids. in 1880 as between 1,700 and 2,000. An estimate made for the Canadian Department of Indian Affairs in 1888 (Ann. Rep., 317) gives 2,500, but the figures were evidently exaggerated, for when a census of Masset, Skidegate, and Gold Harbor was taken the year after (Ann. Rep., 272) it gave only 637. This, however, left out of consideration the people of New Kloo. In 1894 (Ann. Rep., 280), when these were first added to the list, the entire Haida population was found to be 639. The figures for the year following were 593, but from that time showed an increase and stood at 734 in 1902. In 1904, however, they had suffered a sharp decline to 587. Petroff in 1880-81 reported 788 Kaigani, but this figure may be somewhat too high, since Dall about the same time estimated their number at 300. According to the census of 1890 there were 391, and they are now (1905) estimated at 300. The entire Haida population would thus seem to be about 900.

The Alaskan Haida are called Kaigani. By the Queen Charlotte islanders they are designated Kets-hade (Q'ets xā'dē), which probably means 'people of the strait.' The people of Masset inlet and the N. end of Queen Charlotte ids. generally are called by their southern kinsmen Gao-haidagai (Gao xā'-ida-ga-i), 'inlet people,' and those living around the southern point of the group are called Gunghet-haidagai (G'ā' n̄xet-xā'-ida-ga-i), from the name of one of the most southerly capes in their territory. All of these latter finally settled in the town afterward known to whites as Ninstints, and hence came to be called Ninstints people.

The entire stock is divided into two "sides" or clans—Raven (Hoya) and Eagle (Got)—each of which is subdivided and resubdivided into numerous smaller local groups, as given below. (The braces indicate that the families grouped thereunder were related. Theoretically each clan was descended from one woman.)

RAVEN

Aokeawai.

a. Hlingwainas-hadai.

b. Taolnaas-hadai.

Daiyuhl-lanas (or) Kasta-kegawai.

{ Djahui-skwahladagai.

{ Hlgaiu-lanas.

a. Hlgagilda-kegawai.

{ Kogangas.

{ Skwahladas.

a. Nasto-kegawai.

Hagi-lanas.

a. Huldangats.

b. Keda-lanas.

{ Hlgahetgu-lanas.

a. Kilstlaidjat-taking-galung.

b. Sels.

Stasaos-kegawai.

a. Gunghet-kegawai.

Kadusgo-kegawai.

{ Yaku-lanas.

a. Aoyaku-Inagai.

b. (Alaskan branch.)

1. Kaadnaas-hadai.

2. Yehl-naas-hadai.

3. Skistlainai-hadai.

4. Nakeduts-hadai.

{ Naikun-kegawai.

a. Huados.

Kuna-lanas.

a. Hlielungkun-Inagai.

b. Saguikun-Inagai.

c. Teeskun-Inagai.

d. Yagunkun-Inagai.

Stlenga-lanas.

a. Aostlan-Inagai.

b. Dostlan-Inagai.

1. Kaihl-lanas.

c. Teesstlan-Inagai.

d. Yagunstan-Inagai.

{ Kagiaks-kegawai.

a. Kils-haidagai.

b. Kogahl-lanas.

Tadji-lanas. There were two great divisions of this name, the southern one with a subdivision called—

a. Kaidju-kegawai.

Kas-lanas.

{ Kianusili.

{ Sagangusili.

{ Skidaokao.

Koetas.

a. Hlkaonedis.

b. Huadjinaas-hadai.

c. Nakalas-hadai.

d. Neden-hadai.

e. Chats-hadai.

EAGLE

- Djahui-gitinaï.
 Gitins of Skidegate.
 a. Nayuuns-haidagai.
 b. Nsagas-haidagai.
 c. Lgalaigwahl-lanas.
 d. Gitingidjats.
 Hlgahet-gitinaï.
 a. Djahuilghahet-kegawai.
 b. Yaku-gitinaï.
 c. Hlgahet-kegawai.
 d. Kahlgui-hlgahet-gitinaï.
 e. Gweundus.
 Sagui-gitunai.
 a. Kialdagwuns.
 Djiguaahl-lanas.
 a. Tilduldjitamae.
 Kaiahl-lanas.
 a. Stasaos-lanas.
 Kona-kegawai.
 a. Dagangasels.
 b. Sus-haidagai.
 Stawas-haidagai.
 a. Heda-haidagai.
 b. Kahligua-haidagai.
 c. Sa-haidagai.
 Do-gitunai.
 Gituns (of Masset).
 a. Mamun-gitunai.
 1. Ao-gitunai.
 b. Undlskadjins-gitunai.
 c. Tees-gitunai.
 d. Sadjugahl-lanas.
 Djus-hade.
 Sagua-lanas.
 a. Dotuskustl.
 Chets-gitunai.
 Tohlka-gitunai.
 Widja-gitunai.
 Gunghet-kegawai.
 Saki-kegawai.
 Skidai-lanas.
 Stagi-lanas.
 Lana-chaadus.
 Salendas.
 a. Hlimulnaas-hadai.
 b. Nahawas-hadai.
 Stustas.
 a. Kawas.
 b. Kangguatl-lanas.
 c. Hlielung-keawai.
 d. Hlielung-stustai.
 e. Nekun-stustai.
 f. Chawagis-stustae.
 g. Yadus.
 1. Ildjunai-hadai.
 2. Naalgus-hadai.
 3. Nakons-hadai.
 4. Otkialnaas-hadai.
 5. Otnaas-hadai.
 Chaahl-lanas.
 a. Lanagukunhlin-hadai.
 b. Hotagastlas-hadai.
 c. Skahene-hadai.
 d. Stulnaas-hadai.
 Taahl-lanas (clan uncertain).

The principal towns known to have been occupied by large bodies of people in comparatively recent times, although not always contemporaneously, are the following, the Kaigani towns being marked with an asterisk: Chaahl (on Moresby id.), Cumshewa, Dadens, Gahlinskun, Haena, Hlielung, Howkan, *Kaisun, Kasaan, *Kayung, Kiusta, Klinkwan, *Kloo, Kung, Kweundlas, *Masset, Naikun, Ninintins, Skedans, Skidegate, Sukkwan, *Tigun, Yaku, and Yan. Of these only Howkan, Kasaan, Kayung, Klinkwan, Masset, and Skidegate are now inhabited.

In addition there was formerly an immense number of small towns hardly distinguishable from camps, places that had been occupied as towns at some former time, and mythic or semimythic towns. The following is a partial list of these: Aiodjus, Atana, Atanus, Chaahl (on North id.), Chatchini, Chets, Chuga, Chukeu, Dadjingits, Dahua, Daiyu, Djigogiga, Djigua, Djihuagits, Edjao, Gachigundae, Gado (2 towns), Gaedi, Gaesigusket, Gaigakunkun, Gaodjaos, Gasins, Gatainans, Gitinkalana, Guhlga, Gulhlglidjing, Gwaeskun, Hagi, Heudao, Hlagi, Hlakeguns, Hlgadun, Hlgaedlin, Hlgahet, Hlgai, Hlgaiha, Hlgaiu, Hlgihla-ala, Hlgadun, Hlkia, Hlulu, Hotao, Hotdjihoas, Hoya-gundla, Huados, Kadadjans, Kadusgo, Kae, Kaidju, Kaidjudal, Kaigani, *Kasta, Katana, Kesa, Ket, Kil, Kogaogit, Koga, Kogalskun, Kostunhana, Kundji (2 towns), Kungga, Kungielung, Kunhalas, Kunkia, Kuulana, Lanadagunga, Lanagahlkehoda, Lanahawa (2 towns), Lanahilduns, Lanas-lagai (3 towns), Lanaungsuls, Nagus, Sahldungkun, Sakaedigialas, Sgilgi, Sindaskun, Sindatahla, Singa, Skae, Skaito, Skaos, Skena, Skudus, Stlindagwai, Stunhlai, Sulustins, Ta, Te, Tlginghung, Tlthingus, Tohlka, Widja, Yagun, Yaogus, Yastling, Yatza, Youahnoe(?) (J. R. S.)

Haida.—Dawson, Queen Charlotte Ids., 103B, 1880. Haidah.—Sculter in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., xi, 184, 221, 1841. Hai-dai.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859 (after Work, 1836-41). Hydahs.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, July 19, 1862. Hyder.—Simmons in Ind. Aff. Rep., 190, 1860. Tlaidas.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 176, 1877.

Haiglar. The principal chief of the Catawba about the middle of the 18th century, commonly known to the English colonists as King Haiglar. It is probable that he became chief in 1748, as it is stated in Gov. Glenn's letter of May 21, 1751, to the Albany Conference (N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vi, 722, 1855), that the Catawba king had died a year and a half before that time. This must refer to Haiglar's predecessor. Haiglar, though disposed to peace, offered his services to the governor of South Carolina when war with the Cherokee broke out in 1759. He joined Col. Grant's forces and took an active part in the severe battle of Etchoe (Itseyi), assisting materially in gaining the victory for the whites. He is described as a man of sterling character, just in his dealings and true to his word, acting the part of a father to his people, by whom he was greatly beloved. Seeing that strong drink was injuring them, he sent a written petition to Chief Justice Henley, May 26, 1756, requesting him to put a stop to the sale of spirituous liquors to the members of his tribe. In 1762 the Shawnee waylaid, killed, and scalped him while he was returning from the Waxaw attended by a single servant. Col. Samuel Scott, who was a chief in 1840, and signed the treaty of Mar. 13 in that year with South Carolina, was Haiglar's grandson. (c. t.)

Haim. A body of Salish of Kamloops agency, Brit. Col., numbering 26 in 1885. Ha-im.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1885, 196, 1886.

Haimaaksto (Hai'māxstō). A subdivision of the Tsentzenkaio, a clan of the Walaskwakiutl.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 332, 1895.

Hainai. A tribe of the Caddo confederacy, otherwise known as Inie, or Ioni. After the Spanish occupancy their village was situated 3 leagues w. of the mission of Nacogdoches, in E. Texas; it contained 80 warriors, the same number assigned to the Hainai by Sibley in 1805, who perhaps obtained his information from the same sources. Sibley places their village 20 m. from Natchitoches, La. In manners, customs, and social organization the Hainai do not appear to have differed from the other tribes of the Caddo confederacy (q. v.), whose subsequent fate they have shared. By Sibley and others they are called "Tachies or Texas" (see Texas), as if that term applied to them particularly. The "great nation called Ayano, or Cannohatinno," according to the narrative of the La Salle expedition in 1687, were not the Hainai, as has been sometimes supposed, or any tribe at all, properly speaking. Ayano, or hayano, is merely the Caddo word for 'people,' while Kano-hatino (q. v.) is the Caddo equivalent for 'Red river,' presumably the same stream now so called. The Indians simply informed the explorer that many people lived on Red r., a statement which the French, in their ignorance of the language, construed to contain the definite name and synonym of a powerful tribe. (J. R. S. J. M.)

Aenay.—Linarès (1716) in Margry, Déc., vi, 217, 1886. Agerones.—Davis, Span. Conq. N. Mex., 82, note, 1869. Ahinai.—MS. Census of 1790 in Tex. State Archives. Ainai.—Carver, Trav., map, 1778. Anais.—Soc. Geog. Mex., 504, 1869. Annay.—Linarès (1716) in Margry, Déc., vi, 218, 1886. Ayanais.—Domenech, Deserts N. Am., i, 440, 1860. Ayenai.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 43, 1884. Ayenis.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., i, 190, 1786. Ayennis.—Charlevoix, New France, iv, 80, note, 1870. Aynais.—Mota-Padilla, Hist. de la Conquista, 384, 1742. Aynays.—Rivera, Diario y Derrotero, leg.

2140, 1736. Aynics.—Burnet (1847) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 239, 1851. Ayonai.—Talon quoted by Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 27, 1891. Hainais.—Whipple, Explor. for R. R. to Pac., iii, pt. 3, 76, 1856. Hini.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 373, 1822. Inay.—La Harpe (1716) in Margry, Déc., vi, 193, 1886. Ini.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 101, 1856. Inies.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 504, 1878. Inies.—Sibley (1805), Hist. Sketches, 67, 1806. Innies.—Penicaut (1701) in French, Hist. Coll. La., i, 73, note, 1869. Iondes.—Foote, Tex., i, 299, 1841. Ionees.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 899, 1846. I-on-i.—Sen. Ex. Confid. Doc. 13, 29th Cong., 2d sess., i, 1846. Ionias.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1871, 191, 1872. Ionies.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 894, 1846. Ironeyes.—Edward, Hist. Tex., 92, 1836. Ironies.—Foote, Tex., i, 299, 1841. Jonies.—Parker, Tex., 213, 1856. Youays.—La Harpe (1716) in French, Hist. Coll. La., iii, 47, 1851.

Haines Mission. A missionary post among the Chilcat at Deshu (q. v.), in Portage cove, near the head of Lynn canal, Alaska; pop. (entire) 85 in 1900.

Hair. See Anatomy.

Hair dressing. Many tribes had a distinctive mode of cutting and dressing the hair, and the style occasionally suggested the nickname by which the people were called by other tribes, as, for instance, in the case of the Pawnee, who cut the hair close to the head, except a ridge from the forehead to the crown, where the scalp-lock was parted off in a circle, stiffened with fat and paint, made to stand erect, and curved like a horn, hence the name Pawnee, derived from pariki, 'horn.' The same style of shaving the head and roaching the hair was common among eastern and western tribes, who braided and generally hung the scalp-lock with ornaments. The Dakota and other western tribes parted the hair in the middle from the forehead to the nape of the neck, the line, usually painted red, being broken by the circle that separated the scalp-lock, which was always finely plaited, the long hair on each side, braided and wrapped in strips of beaver or otter skin, hanging down in front over the chest. The Nez Percés of Idaho and neighboring tribes formerly wore the hair long and unconfined, falling loosely over the back and shoulders. In the S. W. among most of the Pueblo men the hair was cut short across the forehead, like a "bang," and knotted behind. The Eskimo wore the hair loose.

COMB OF BONE FROM A VIRGINIA MOUND. (FOWKE)

There was generally a difference in the manner of wearing the hair between the men and women of a tribe, and in some tribes the women dressed their hair differently before and after marriage, as with the Hopi, whose maidens arranged it in a whorl over each ear, symbolizing the flower of the squash, but after marriage wore it in simple braids. Aside from these ordinary modes of hair dressing

WOODEN COMB AND BIRCH-BARK CASE; HUDSON BAY ESKIMO. (TURNER)

there were styles that were totemic and others connected with religious observances or with shamanistic practices. Among the Omaha and some other tribes the child from 4 to 7 years of age formerly had its hair cut in a manner to indicate the totem of its gens; for instance, if the turtle was the totem, all the hair was cut off close, except a short fringe encircling the head, a little tuft being left on the forehead, one at the nape of the neck, and two tufts on each side; the bald crown above the fringe represented the shell of the turtle and the tufts its head, tail, and four legs. Generally speaking, the mode of wearing the hair was in former times not subject to passing fancies or fashions, but was representative of tribal kinship and beliefs.

ZUÑI HAIR-DRESSING. (STEVENSON)

The first cutting of the hair was usually attended with religious rites. Among the Kiowa and other southern Plains tribes a lock from the first clipping of the child's hair was tied to the forelock (Mooney). Among many tribes the hair was believed to be closely connected with a person's life. This was true in a religious sense of the scalp-lock. In some of the rituals used when the hair was first gathered up and cut from the crown of a boy's head the teaching was set forth that this lock represents the life of the child, now placed wholly in the control of the mysterious and supernatural power that alone could will his death. The braided lock worn thereafter was a sign of this dedication and belief, and represented the man's life. On it he wore the ornaments that marked his achievements and honors, and for anyone to touch lightly this lock was regarded as a grave insult. As a war trophy the scalp-lock had a double meaning. It indicated the act of the supernatural power that had decreed the death of the man, and it served as tangible proof of the warrior's prowess in wresting it from the enemy. The scalp, however, was not always the killer or the first striker. The latter had the chief credit, and frequently left others to do the killing and scalping. With the Eastern or timber tribes, the scalp was usually the killer, but this was not so often the case among the Plains Indians. The scalp was frequently left on the battle ground as a sacrifice. Among the Dakota a bit of the captured scalp-lock was preserved for a year, during which period the spirit was supposed to linger near; then, when the great death feast was held, the lock was destroyed and the spirit was freed thereby from its earthly ties (see Scalp). There are many beliefs connected with the hair, all of which are interwoven with the idea that it is mysteriously connected with a person's life and fortune. One can be bewitched and made subservient to the will of a person who becomes possessed of a bit of his hair; consequently combings are usually carefully burned. According to Hrdlicka the Pima, after killing an Apache, purified themselves with smoke from the burnt hair of the victim.

HAIR DRESSING; WESTERN ESKIMO MAN. (MURDOCH)

HEAD OF SEMINOLE MAN. (MACCAULEY)

Personal joy or grief was manifested by the style of dressing the hair (see Mourning). Young men often spend much time over their locks, friends assisting friends in the toilet. The Pueblo and Plains tribes commonly used a stiff brush of spear grass for combing and dressing the hair, while the Eskimo and the N. W. coast tribes used combs. A pointed stick served for parting it and painting the line. These sticks were often carefully wrought, ornamented with embroidery on the handle, and kept in an embroidered case. Perfumes, as well as oils, were used, and wisps of sweet-grass were concealed in the hair of young men to add to their attractions. The Pima and Papago paint or stain the hair when it becomes bleached by the sun (Hrdlicka in Am. Anthropol., VIII, no. 1, 1906), and the former, as well as other tribes of the arid region, often coated the hair completely with river mud to destroy vermin.

Early French travelers in Texas and other Southern states mention a custom of the hostess to hasten to wash the head of a visitor with warm water, as a sign of good will and welcome. Among the Pueblo Indians the washing of the hair with the pounded root of the yucca plant prior to a religious rite was attended with much ceremony, and seems to correspond to the purification observances of the sweat lodge, which always preceded sacred rites among the tribes of the plains. See Adornment. (A. C. F.)

Hairwork. One of the most useful materials known to the Indians of the United States was hair, which, as a textile material, was generally more available than vegetal fibers. Hair was obtained from the dog, buffalo, mountain sheep, mountain goat, moose, deer, reindeer, elk, antelope, opossum, rabbit, beaver, otter, lynx, and other animals, and human hair was also sometimes employed.

In more modern times horsehair was used to stuff balls, drumsticks, dolls, pads, pillows, etc., and tufts of it, frequently dyed, were attached as ornaments to costumes, pouches, harness, ceremonial objects, etc. False hair was worn by the Crows, Assiniboin, Mandan, Mohave, and Yuma; and ceremonial wigs of black wool and bangs of natural or dyed hair, especially horsehair, were made by the Pueblos. Twisted or sometimes braided into cord, hair had a most extensive use, satisfying the multifarious demands for string or rope of great tensile strength, and was combined with other fibers in the warp or weft of textiles and basketry. According to Grinnell cowskin pads stuffed with the hair of elk, antelope, buffalo, or mountain sheep were commonly used instead of saddles by some of the Plains tribes in running buffalo and in war. Bourke (9th Rep. B. A. E., 474, 1892) says that mantles made of votive hair are mentioned as having been in use among the Lower California or southern California tribes in the 18th century, and quotes Parkman (Jesuits in North America, lxxxiv, 1867) to the effect that the Algonquians believed in a female manito who wore a robe made of the hair of her victims, for she caused death. See Adornment, Featherwork, Hair dressing, Quillwork. Consult Holmes in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 25, 37, 1896. (W. H.)

Haisla (Ya-isla). One of the three Kwakiutl dialectic divisions, embracing the Kitamat (Haisla proper) and the Kitlope.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 328, 1895.

Haiwal ('acorn'). A clan of the Tonkawa. (A. S. G.)

Hakan. The Fire clans of the Keresan pueblos of Acoma, Cochiti, Santa Ana, Sia, and San Felipe, N. Mex. That of Acoma is now extinct.

Haka-hanoq^{ch}.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 350, 1896 (Acoma form: hanoqch = 'people').

Hakan-hano.—Ibid. (Santa Ana and Sia form). Ha'-kan-ni.—Stevenson in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 19, 1894 (Sia form). Hakanyi-hano.—Hodge, op. cit. (San Felipe form). Hakanyi-hanuch.—Ibid. (Cochiti form.)

Hakkyaiwal (Hak-kyü'-wül). A Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Hakouchirmiou (probably misprint for Hakouchiriniou). Mentioned by Dobbs (Hudson Bay, 23, 1744), as a tribe, on or near Bourbon (Nelson) r., Brit. Am., at war with the Maskegon. Possibly a division of the Cree or of the Assiniboin.

Halant. A Shuswap village 3 m. below Shuswap lake, Brit. Col.; pop. 152 in 1904.

Halant.—Can. Ind. Aff., 241, 1902. Ha-la-ut.—Ibid., 196, 1885. Kell-a-ut.—Ibid., 188, 1884. Naskantines.—Ibid., 78, 1878. Neskainlith.—Ibid., pt. II, 68, 1902. Niskahnuth.—Ibid., 259, 1882. Niskainlith.—Ibid., map, 1891. South Thompson.—Ibid.

Halchis. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Half Breed Band. Mentioned by Culbertson (Smithson. Rep. 1850, 143, 1851) as a local band of the Cheyenne (q. v.) in 1850, probably named from a chief; or perhaps the Sutaio.

Half-breeds. See Métis, Mixed-bloods.

Half King (Scruiyatha, Seruniyatha, Tanacharison, Tannghrishon, etc.). A Seneca chief; born about 1700; died at the house of John Harris, at the site of Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 1, 1754. He appears to have first come into notice about 1748, at which time he lived at or in the vicinity of Logstown, Pa. (q. v.). According to some statements his residence was in this village, but according to others it was on Little Beaver cr., about 15 m. distant. It was to Half King that most of the official visitors to the Indians of the Ohio region, including Weiser, Gist, Croghan, and Washington, applied for information, advice, and assistance, Logstown being their stopping place for this purpose. He accompanied Washington both on his journey of 1753 and on his expedition of 1754.

Half King claimed that he killed Jumonville, the French officer, during the skirmish at Great Meadows, Pa., May 28, 1754, in revenge of the French, who, he declared, had killed, boiled, and eaten his father; and it was he who had advised Ensign Ward, when summoned by Contracœur, the French officer, to surrender Ft Necessity, at the site of Pittsburg, Pa., to reply that his rank did not invest him with power to do so, thus obtaining delay. Half King was a prominent figure on the Indian side in the treaty with the Virginia commissioners in 1752, and for this and other services was decorated by Gov. Dinwiddie and given the honorary name "Dinwiddie," which, it is said, he adopted with pride. On the advice of Croghan, he with other Indians removed to Aughquick (Oquaga) cr., Pa., in 1754. Half King has been confused with the Huron Half King of Sandusky, Ohio, known also as Pomoacan, also with Schoroyady (Scarouady, etc.), the Oneida Half King, and with Monakatuatha (Monacatoota, etc.). See Drake, Aborig. Races, 531, 1880; Rupp, Hist. West. Pa., 71, 1846; Dinwiddie Papers, i, 148, 1883; Col. Records Pa., v, 358, 1851. (C. T.)

Half King (Petawontakas, Dunquad, Dunquat, Daughquat; Delaware name, Pomoacan). A Huron chief of Sandusky, Ohio, who flourished during the latter part of the Revolutionary war. Under employment by the British he aided the Delawares in their resistance to the encroachment of the white settlements beyond the Allegheny mts., and it was through his intervention that the Moravians of Lichtenau were saved from massacre by the Indians in 1777. According to Loskiel (Missions United Brethren, pt. 3, 127, 1794) he was joined by a large number of warriors, including Hurons, Ottawa, Chippewa, Shawnee, and others, besides some French, and his influence as a disciplinarian was such that he kept this mixed assemblage in good order, permitting no extravagance on their part. Sometimes more than 200 warriors lay all night close to Lichtenau, but they behaved so quietly that they were hardly perceived. Loskiel also says that Half King "was particularly attentive to prevent all drunkenness, knowing that bloodshed and murder would immediately follow." He insisted on the removal of the Christian Indians from the vicinity of Sandusky, believing it to be unsafe for them to remain there; he also protected the Moravians and their converts from maltreatment when the missionaries were sent to Detroit. Under the name Daughquat he signed the treaty of Ft McIntosh, Ohio, Jan. 21, 1785. The treaties of Greenville, Ohio, Aug. 3, 1795; Ft McIntosh, July 4, 1805; Greenville, July

22, 1814, and Spring Wells, Sept. 8, 1815, were signed by Haroenyou (Harowenyou), his son, not by himself; but the name "Dunquad or Half King" is appended to the treaty of Miami Rapids, Ohio, Sept. 29, 1817. (C. T.)

Halfway Town. A former Cherokee settlement on Little Tennessee r., about halfway between Sitiku and Chilhowee, about the boundary of the present Monroe and Loudon cos., E. Tenn.—Timberlake, Mem., map, 1765.

Halkaiktenok (Ha'ix'air'tēnōx, 'killer whale'). A division of the Bellabella.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 328, 1895.

Halona (Hálona Ptiwana, 'middle place of happy fortune', 'middle ant-hill of the world', 'the ant-hill at the navel of the Earth Mother.'—Cushing). A former pueblo of the Zuñi and one of the Seven Cities of Cibola of the early Spanish chroniclers, said to have been situated on both sides of Zuñi r., on and opposite the site of the present Zuñi pueblo, w. N. Mex. Only the mound on the s. side of the stream is now traceable, and a part of this is occupied by modern buildings erected by white people. While there seems to be no question that Halona was inhabited by the Zuñi at the time of Coronado in 1540, it was not mentioned by name until Nov. 9, 1598, when the Zuñi made a vow of obedience and vassalage to Spain at Hawikuh, Halona being designated as Halonagu (Halona-kwin, 'Halona-place'). A Franciscan mission was established there in 1629, but the murder by the Zuñi of their missionary in 1632 impelled the Indians to flee for protection to Thunder mtn., a mesa 3 m. away, where they remained for about 3 years. The mission was rehabilitated some time after 1643, and continued until the Pueblo outbreak of Aug., 1680, when the Zuñi murdered Fray Juan de Bal, the Halona missionary, and burned the church. The Zuñi again fled to Thunder mtn., where they remained until after the reconquest by Diego de Vargas in 1692. Meanwhile the pueblos in the valley, including Halona, had fallen in decay, and none of them was rebuilt. The present village of Zuñi was reared on the n. bank of Zuñi r., partly on the site of Halona, about the close of the 17th century. The population of Halona at the time of the revolt of 1680 was about 1,500, and Matsaki and Kiakima were visitants of its mission. See Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 1889; Bandelier (1) Doc. Hist. Zuñi Tribe, in Jour. Am. Eth. and Arch., iii, 1892, (2) in Arch. Inst. Papers, iii, iv, 1890-92; Cushing, Zuñi Creation Myths, 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Vetancurt in Teatro Am., repr. 1871. (F. W. H.)

Alauna.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map no. 5, 1776. Alena.—Bowles, map Am., 1784. Aloma.—Vargas (1692) quoted in Davis, Span. Conq. of N. Mex., 371, 1869. Alomas.—Mota-Padilla, Hist. de la Conquista (possibly the same; Acoma (q. v.), however, seems more likely). Alona.—Del Isle, Carte Mexique et Floride, 1703; Vetancurt (1693) in Teatro Mex., III, 320, 1871. Alonas.—Rivera, Diario y Derrotero, leg. 950, 1736 (referring to the inhabitants). Ant Hill.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 7, 1901 (Hálonawan, or). Ant Hill of the Middle.—Ibid., 31. Concepcion de Alona.—Vetancurt (1693), Menolog. Fran., 275, 1871 (mission name). Hálonaw.—Cushing in Millstone, IX, 55, Apr. 1884 (Zuñi name). Hálonagu.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., xvi, 133, 1871 (corruption of Hálonakwin, kuin being the locative). Hálonaw.—Cushing in Millstone, IX, 55, Apr. 1884. Hálonaw-itiwana.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 7, 1901. Hálonaw-kue.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, v, 171, 1890 (given as the name of the pueblo; but kue = 'people'). Hálonaw Kuin.—Bandelier, ibid., iv, 337, 1892 (Kuin = locative). Hálonaw-on.—Ibid., 335. Hálonaw-quin.—Bandelier in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archaeol., III, 84, 1892. Hálon-awau.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 260, 1890. Hálonaw-wa.—Cushing in Comptes-rendus Internat. Cong. Am., VII, 156, 1890 (or Hálonaw). Hálonawan.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 7, 1901. La Purificación de la Virgen de Alona.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 337, 1892 (mission name). Middle Ant Hill.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 31, 1901. Middle Ant Hill of the World.—Ibid., 55. Middle Place.—Ibid., 34. Purificación.—D'Anville, map Am. Sept., 1746 (intended for mission name).

Halpadalgi (hálpada 'alligator', algi 'people'). A Creek clan.

Halpadalgi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 155, 1884. Kal-pút-lú.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1877.

Hamalakyauae. An ancestor of a Nímkish gens, after whom it was sometimes called.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 130, 1887.

Hamánao (Xámanáó). A gens of the Quatsino tribe of the Kwakiutl, q. v.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 329, 1895.

Hamechuwa. A former Luiseno village in the neighborhood of San Luis Rey mission, s. Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 11, 1860.

Hameyisath (Ha'mēyisath). A sept of the Seshat, a Nootka tribe.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 32, 1890.

Hami. The Tobacco clans of Sia and San Felipe pueblos, N. Mex.

Háami-háno.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 352, 1896 (Sia form: háno = 'people'). Há-mi.—Stevenson in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 19, 1894 (Sia form). Hámi-hano.—Hodge, op. cit. (San Felipe form).

Hamilton Creek. The local name for a body of Salish of Kamloops-Okanagan agency, Brit. Col.; pop. 38 in 1901 (Can. Ind. Aff. for 1901, pt. II, 166), after which date the name does not occur.

Hamitinwoliyu. A former Nishinam village in the valley of Bear r., Cal.

Hameting-Woleyuh.—Powers in Overland Mo., XII, 22, 1874. Ha'-mi-ting-Wo'-li-yuh.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 316, 1877.

Hammers. Few implements are of so much importance to primitive men as the stone hammer and the several closely allied forms—the sledge, the maul, and the stone-head club, which may be described here rather than under the caption Clubs. All of these implements are employed, like the ordinary club, in striking blows that stun, break, crush, or drive, the only distinction to be drawn between the hafted hammer and the club being that the one carries the weight chiefly in the extremity or head, which is usually of heavier or harder material than the handle, while the other has the weight distributed along the shaft. Although the several implements comprised in this group have many features in common, they are somewhat clearly differentiated in shape and use. All

DISCOIDAL CHIPPING HAMMERS.
a, OHIO; b, CALIFORNIA.
(ABOUT 1-5)

are made of hard, heavy, tough materials, including stone, bone, ivory, antler, shell, and metal. Some are never hafted, while perhaps nearly all on occasion are used unhafted, one or both hands being employed according to the weight of the implement. Haftings vary with the form and use of the object as well as with the region and the people.

PITTED HAMMER. (ABOUT 1-5)

Hammers employed in shaping stone, especially in the more advanced stages of the work, are usually unhafted and are held tightly in the hand for delivering heavy blows, or lightly between the thumb and fingertips for flaking or pecking.

They may be natural pe-

SLEDGE HEADS FROM THE COPPER MINES, MICHIGAN. (ABOUT 1-5)

bles, bowls, or fragments, but by prolonged use they assume definite shapes or are intentionally modified to better fit them for their purpose. Globular and discoidal forms prevail, and the variety employed in pecking and for other light uses often has shallow depressions centrally placed at opposite sides to render the finger hold more secure. The pecking and flaking work is accomplished by strokes with the periphery, which is round or slightly angular in profile to suit the requirements of the particular work.

HEAVY HAMMER; BRITISH COLUMBIA. (LENGTH 6 3/4 IN.)

Hammers intended for breaking, driving, and killing are generally hafted to increase their effectiveness. Sledge hammers, used in mining and quarrying, were usually heavy, often rudely shaped, and the haft was a pliable stick or withe bent around the body of the implement, which was sometimes grooved for the purpose. The fastening was made secure by the application of thongs or rawhide coverings. In the flint quarries and copper mines great numbers of hammers or sledges were required; indeed, it may be said that in and about the ancient copper mines of McCar-golscove, Isle Royale, Mich., there are to be seen tens of thousands of wornout and abandoned sledge heads. In an ancient paint mine in Missouri, recently exposed by the opening of an iron mine, upward of 1,200 rude stone sledges were thrown out by the workmen. Heavy grooved and hafted hammers, resembling somewhat the mining sledges, though much more highly specialized, were in general use among the tribes of the great plains and served an important purpose in breaking up the bones of large game animals, in pounding pemmican, flint, and seeds, in driving tipi pegs, etc.

HEAVY HAMMER OF THE PLAINS TRIBES. (ABOUT 1-8)

A lighter hammer, usually referred to as a war-club, was and is in common use among the western tribes. It is a globular or doubly conical stone, carefully finished and often grooved, the haft being strengthened by binding with rawhide. Closely allied to this weapon is a kind of slung hammer, the roundish stone being held in place at the end of the handle by a covering of rawhide that extends the full length of the haft. These are very effectual implements, and decked with streamers of horsehair and other ornaments have been devoted, at least in recent years, to ceremony and show.

GROOVED STONE HAMMERS. a, NEW MEXICO; b, DAKOTA

BONE MAUL WITH WOODEN HANDLE. (1-6) ESKIMO. (MURDOCH)

Heavy hammers, often tastefully carved, were and are used by the tribes of the N.W. for driving wedges in splitting wood, for driving piles, and for other heavy work; they are usually called mauls, or pile-drivers. Many of the larger specimens have handles or finger holes carved in the stone, while others are provided with handles of wood. The Eskimo also have hammers for various purposes, made of stone, bone, and ivory, with haftings ingeniously attached.

The literature of this topic is voluminous, but much scattered, references to the various kinds of hammers occurring in nearly all works dealing with the archeology and ethnology of N. America. For an extended article on the stone hammer, see McGuire in Am. Anthropologist, IV, no. 4, 1891. (W. H. H.)

Hammonasset. A small band, headed by a chief named Sebequanash ('the man who weeps'), formerly living about Hammonasset r., near Guilford, Middlesex co., Conn. They were probably a part of the Quinnipiac.—De Forest, Hist. Inds. Conn., 52, 1853.

Hamuulik. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Hampasawan ('tented village,' from hampone, 'tent'). A former Zuñi pueblo, the ruins of which are still visible 6 m. w. of the present Zuñi, Valencia co., N. Mex. Regarded by Cushing as probably one of the seven cities of Cibola. See Minde-leff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 83, 1891, and the authors cited below.

Hainpasawan.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. A., 291, 1885 (after Cushing; misprint). Hampasawan.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 6, 1901. Ham-pas-sa-wan.—Cushing in Millstone, IX, 55, 1884. Tented Pueblo.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 6, 1901. Village of the White Flowering Herbs.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 104, 1901 (probably the same).

Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute. A school for negroes and Indians, situated 2 m. from Fort Monroe and Old Point Comfort, Va. Established in 1868 by Gen. S. C. Armstrong for the industrial and agricultural education of freedmen, it was the first school in the United States of a practical industrial nature. After 10 years of success in training and establishing negroes as teachers and farmers, it responded to the call of 14 young Indians, who had been prisoners of war at St Augustine, Fla., for three years, and thus opened its doors to the Indian race. Since then 1,100 Indian girls and boys have had more or less training at Hampton, and to-day five-sixths of those now living are industrious and civilized, working with their own hands for the support of themselves and their families.

The school is not a government institution, but is controlled by a board of 17 trustees, and is entirely nonsectarian in character. It is supported by the income of a partial endowment and by certain government funds distributed by the state of Virginia, but its chief support is derived from the donations of its friends.

The academic course covers a period of 4 years, and includes English branches in both grammar and high school grades.

Normal courses are given in business, agriculture, and the trades, as well as in kindergarten and public school teaching. Agriculture begins in the primary department of the training school, and becomes so important a branch of the academic work that at the end of the course the student is prepared to conduct intelligent farming. In addition to the model farm, dairy, orchards, poultry yards, and experiment garden, the school has a dairy and stock farm of 600 acres a few miles away. The trades taught the boys are carpentry, wood turning, bricklaying, plastering, painting, wheelwrighting, blacksmithing, machine work, steam fitting, tailoring, shoe and harness making, tinsmithing, upholstery, and printing. A large and well equipped trade school, with mechanical-drawing room, offers excellent facilities for the practical instruction given. The domestic-science building and the school kitchens and laundries give opportunity for instruction in all kinds of domestic work, and each girl is required to complete a practical course in every branch of housekeeping, cooking, dairying, and gardening.

The school has about 60 buildings for housing and educating its 900 boarding students. These include a church, library, dormitories, recitation halls, trade school, domestic science and agricultural building, hospital, printing office, greenhouses, barn, workshops, laundry, offices, and dwellings for the officers and teachers. All the young men receive instruction in military tactics, which has proved of great value in instilling habits of promptness, neatness, and obedience.

The Government pays $167 a year for each of its 120 Indian pupils; all expenses in excess of this must be provided by philanthropic friends. The Indians and colored students have separate dormitory buildings, and the pupils of the two races also occupy separate tables in the dining rooms, but work together in classes and shops with mutual good feeling and helpfulness.

The record of Indians returned to their homes is carefully kept. For the year ending in May, 1906, there were 183 doing an excellent grade of work as teachers in schoolroom, shop, or on farms; as doctors, lawyers, or ethnologists; 306 were living civilized lives, setting examples of industry and temperance; 80 were doing fairly well under hard conditions; 28 were doing poorly, and 4 were bad. This gives so large a proportion of satisfactory results that Hampton considers her work for Indians in every way a success.

The school publishes a monthly magazine called The Southern Workman, devoted to the interests of the negro and the Indian. The Indians publish a small paper, Talks and Thoughts, now in its nineteenth year; all its contributors are Indians, and many of the articles are valuable additions to Indian literature and ethnology. (C. M. F.)

Hamtsit (Hámstít, 'having food', named from an ancestor). A Bellacoola division at Talio, Brit. Col.—Boas in 7th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 3, 1891.

Han. An unidentified tribe living on a part of the island of Malhado (Galveston id.), Texas, on which Cabeza de Vaca suffered shipwreck in 1528. The language of the Han differed from that of their neighbors, the Capoque (probably Coaque), but they had customs in common. They possibly formed the westernmost band of the Attacapa. See Cabeza de Vaca, Narr., Smith trans., 82, 1871; Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 34, 1891.

Han ('night'). A Kansa gens. Its sub-gentes are Hannikashinga and Dakanmanvin.

Haⁿ.—Dorsey in Am. Nat., 671, 1885.

Hana ('dog'). A subphratry or gens of the Menominee.—Hoffman in 14th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 1, 42, 1896.

Hanahawunena ('rock men.'—Kroeber). A division of the Northern Arapaho, now practically extinct.

Aanú'hawá.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 956, 1896. Ha'nahawunéna.—Ibid. Ha'anaxawúne'naⁿ.—Kroeber in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XVIII, pt. 1, 6, 1902.

Hanakwa. A former pueblo of the Jemez in New Mexico, the exact site of which is not known.

Ham-a-qua.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 207, 1892. Han-a-kwá.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895.

Hanaya. A former Chumashan village in Mission canyon, near Santa Barbara mission, Cal.

Ha'-na-ya.—Henshaw, Santa Barbara MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884. Janaya.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Hanehewedl (Xanexewét, 'stone by or near the trail'). A village of the Nicola band of the Ntlakypamuk, near Nicola r., 27 m. above Spences Bridge, Brit. Col.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 174, 1900.

Hanga ('leader'). A gens of the Hangashenu division of the Omaha.

Foremost.—Dorsey in Bull. Philos. Soc. Wash., 129, 1880. Hanga.—Dorsey in 3d Rep. B. A. E., 233, 1884. Hunga.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 155, 1877. Hunguh.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., I, 327, 1823. Large Hanga.—Dorsey in Am. Nat., 674, 1885. Medicine.—Morgan, op. cit., 155.

Hangashenu ('young men of the leaders.'—Fletcher). One of the two divisions of the Omaha, composed of the Wezhinshte, Inkesabe, Hanga, Dhatada, and Kanze gens.

Hangaenu.—Dorsey in 3d Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1884; 15th Rep. B. A. E., 226, 1897. Hongashan.—Jackson (1877) quoted by Donaldson in Smithsonian Rep., 1885, pt. 2, 74, 1886. Hon-ga-sha-no.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., I, 325, 1823.

Hangatanga ('large Hanga'). A Kansa gens.

Black eagle.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 156, 1877. Dá-sin'-ja-há-gá.—Ibid. ('Deertail'). Hanga tanga.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897. Hanga utanandji.—Ibid. ('Hanga apart from the rest').

Hūng-ga ni-ka-shing-ga.—Stubbs, Kaw MS. vocab., B. A. E., 25, 1877. Hun-go-tin-ga.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 156, 1877. Ta nika-shing-ga.—Stubbs, op. cit. Ta sindje qaga.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897.

Hanging-maw (Uskwá'li-gá'tá, 'his stomach hangs down'). A prominent Cherokee chief of the Revolutionary period.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 543, 1900.

Hanginihkaishina ('night people'). A subdivision of the Tsihsu division of the Osage. Its subdivisions in turn are Haninihkaishina and Wasape.

Hā'ni'niq'ácin'a.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897. Huinihkaicia.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883. Tse'gañka'.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897. Tsi'ou we'hañje.—Ibid.

Hangka ('leader'). One of the three divisions of the Osage, the last to join the tribe, dividing with the Wazhazhe the right or war side of the camp circle.

Hāñya.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 233, 1897.

Hangkaahutun ('Hangka having wings'). A gens of the Hangka division of the Osage, in two subgentes, Husadtawanun and Husadta.

Eagle people.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883. Hāñ'ya a'hu tūn'.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897. Hu'saqa.—Ibid. ('limbs stretched stiff'). Qūe'i'niq'ácin'a.—Ibid. ('white eagle people').

Hangkaenikashika ('those who became human beings by means of the ancestral animal'). A Quapaw gens.

Ancestral gens.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 229, 1897. Hāñya e'nikaci'ya.—Ibid.

Hangkautadhantsi ('Hangka apart from the rest'). A gens on the Hangka side of the Osage tribal circle.

Hāñya uta'gañsi.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897. Qūe'a'qtsi'niq'ácin'a.—Ibid. ('real eagle people'). War eagle people.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883.

Hangnikashinga ('night people'). A subgens of the Han gens of the Kansa.

Hā'nikaci'ga.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897.

Hanilik. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Haninihkaishina ('night people proper'). A subdivision of the Haninihkaishina division of the Osage.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897.

Hankutchin ('river people'). A Kutchin tribe on upper Yukon r. below Klondike r., Alaska. They make baskets of tamarack roots with hair and porcupine quills tastefully woven into them. When these are used for cooking, the water is boiled by putting red-hot stones into them. The Hankutchin are noted for their skill in catching large salmon. Gibbs stated that 60 hunters visited Ft Yukon in 1854. They still trade at that post. Subdivisions are Katshikotin, Takon, and Tsitoklinotin. Villages are Fetutlin, Johnnys, Nuklako, Tadush, and Tutonehokutchin.

Ai-ya.—Schwata, Rep. on Alaska, 82, 1885. Ai-ya-na.—Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can., 200-B, 1887. An-Kutchin.—Whympier, Alaska, 223, 1868. Au Kutchins.—Raymond quoted by Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1869, 593, 1870. Ayans.—Schwata in Century Mag., 821, Sept. 1885. Gens de Bois.—Dall in Proc. A. A. A. S., XVIII, 271, 1870. Gens-define.—Raymond quoted by Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1869, 593, 1870. Gens de Fou.—Hardisty in Smithsonian. Rep., 1866, 311, 1872. Gens de Foux.—Whympier in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., 233, 1868. Gens des Bois.—Raymond in Sen. Ex. Doc. 12, 42d Cong., 1st sess., 34, 1871. Gens des faux.—Petroff, Alaska, 160, 1884. Hai-ankutchin.—Dall in Proc. A. A. A. S., XXXIV, 376, 1886. Han-kutchi.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 396, 1851. Han-kutchin.—Dall in Proc. A. A. A. S., XVIII, 271, 1870. Hān-Kutchin.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 31, 1877. Han-kutchin.—Petitot, Dict. Déné-Dindjé, xx, 1876. Hong-Kutchin.—Jones in Smithsonian. Rep., 1866, 321, 1872. Hun-koo-chin.—Hardisty, ibid., 311. Hun-Kutchin.—Raymond in Sen. Ex. Doc. 12, 42d Cong., 1st sess., 34, 1871. Hūn'kutchin.—Ross, MS. notes on Tinne, B. A. E. (trans.: 'people of the river country'). Lower Gens de fou.—Ibid. Wood people.—Dall in Proc. A. A. A. S., XVIII, 271, 1870.

Hannakallal. A tribe or band, probably Athapascan, numbering 600 in 1804, and dwellings of the 'Luckkarso' (Kosotshe) on the Pacific coast; possibly the Khainanaitetunne or the Henaggi.

Hannakalals.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., II, 119, 1814. Hannakallah.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 571, 1853. Han-na-kal-lal.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 117, 1905.

Hano (contracted from Anopi, 'eastern people'.—Fewkes). The easternmost pueblo of Tusayan, N. E. Ariz., and familiarly spoken of as one of the Hopi villages; it is, however, occupied by Tewa people, whose ancestors, early in the 18th century, migrated from the upper Rio Grande, in New Mexico, principally from an ancient pueblo known as Tsawarii, above the present town of Santa Cruz, where the hamlet of La Puebla now stands (Hodge). The Hano people have largely intermarried with the Hopi. In 1782 the population was 110 families; in 1893 it numbered 163 individuals, including 23 husbands of Hano women. In addition, there were 16 Hano people living in the Hopi pueblos. The clans represented at Hano are the Ke (Bear), Kun (Corn), Sa (Tobacco), Tenyo (Pine), Okuwa (Cloud), Nang (Earth), Kachina, and Tang (Sun). Formerly there were also the Kapulo (Crane), Pe (Timber), Kopeli (Pink conch), Pohulo (Herb), Kuyanwe (Turquoise ear pendant), Ku (Stone), and Ta (Grass) clans, but these have become extinct since the Hano people settled in Tusayan. Consult Fewkes (1) in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 636, 1898; (2) in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 612, 1900; (3) in Am. Anthropol., VII, 162, 1894; Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 62, 1891. Hāno.—Gatschet in Wheeler Surv. Rep., VII, 412, 1879. Hānoki.—Ibid. Hānom.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. A. E., 259, 1885 (Hopi name for the people). Hā-no-me.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 7, 1884 (Hopi name for the people). Hānomuh.—Stephen and Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 36, 1891. Hāno.—Ten Broeck in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, map, 24-25, 87, 1854. Hāro.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 515, 1878. Iano.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 19, 1863. Jano.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 394, 1900. Janogualpa.—Garcés quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 137, 395, 1889 (Hano and Walpi combined). Koyōshūta.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Acoma name). Na-ai-ci-kin.—Stephen, MS., B. A. E., 1887 (Navaho name: 'foreign bear people's house'). Nah-shah-shai.—Eaton in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 220, 1854 (Navaho name). Tano.—Ward quoted by Donaldson, Moqui Pueblo Inds., 14, 1893. Tanoí.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Isleta name). Tanoquevi.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 519, 1853. Tanoquibi.—Calhoun quoted by Donaldson, Moqui Pueblo Inds., 14, 1893. Tanos.—Villa-Señor, Theatre Am., pt. 2, 425, 1748. Tanus.—Escudero, Noticias de Chihuahua, 231, 1834. Taucos.—Cortez (1799) in Whipple, Pac. R. R. Rep., III, pt. 3, 121, 1856. Té-é-wún-ná.—Whipple, ibid., 13, 1856 (Zuni name). Teh-wa.—Stephen in Donaldson, Moqui Pueblo Inds., 14, 1893. Tewa.—Popular but incorrect name for the pueblo (see Tewa). Tewe.—Shipley in Ind. Aff. Rep., 310, 1891. Towas.—Davis, El Gringo, 115, 1857.

Hanocoucouaij. A village on the E. coast of Florida, N. of C. Cañaveral, in the 16th century.—De Bry, Brev. Nar., II, map, 1591.

Hantiwi. A Shastan tribe or band formerly living in Warm Spring valley, Modoc co., Cal.

Han-te'-wa.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 267, 1877.

Hanut Cochiti (hanut, 'above', + Cochiti, q. v.). The sixth town successively occupied by the people of Cochiti; situated about 12 m. N. W. of Cochiti pueblo, in the Potrero Viejo, N. Mex.

Há-nut Cochiti.—Lummis in Scribner's Monthly, 100, 1893.

Hapaluya. A former large village in upper Florida, visited by De Soto in 1539.—Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 133, 1850.

Hapanyi. The Oak clans of the Keresan pueblos of Laguna, Acoma, Sia, San Felipe, and Cochiti, N. Mex. The Oak clan of Laguna claims to have come originally from Rio Grande pueblos, by way of Mt Taylor, and to form a phratry with the Mokaich (Mountain Lion) clan; while that of Acoma claims phratral relationship with the Showwiti (Parrot) and Tanyi (Calabash) clans. The Oak clan of Sia is extinct. (F. W. H.)

Hápai-háno^{ch}.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 351, 1896 (Laguna form; hánoch = 'people'). Hápan-háno.—Ibid. (Sia form). Há-pan-ni.—Stevenson in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 19, 1894 (Sia form). Hápányi-háno.—Hodge, op. cit. (San Felipe form). Hápanyi-hánoq^{ch}.—Ibid. (Acoma form). Hápányi-hán.—Ibid. (Cochiti form).

Hapes. A small tribe found by Spanish explorers on the lower Rio Grande in the vicinity of Eagle Pass, Tex., although Uhde (1861) places it near Lampazos, in Nueva Leon, Mexico, some distance farther W. They numbered 490 in 85 huts in 1688, but an epidemic of smallpox raged among them soon afterward, and in 1689 the survivors were attacked by coast Indians and exterminated, with the exception of some boys who were carried off. (J. R. S.)

Apes.—Fernando del Bosque (1675) in Nat. Geog. Mag., XIV, 9, 347, 1903. Apis.—Manzanet (1689) in Tex. Hist. Ass. Quar., II, 25, 1898. Hapes.—De León (1689), ibid., VIII, 205, 1905. Iapies.—Linschoten, Descr. de l'Amér., map, 1, 1638. Japies.—De Laet, Hist. Nouv. Monde, 234, 1640. Jeapes.—Fernando del Bosque, op. cit. Xapes.—Uhde, Länder, 121, 1861. Xapies.—Navarette, Memorial y Noticias Sacras, 104, 1646.

Hapkug. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Happy Hunting Ground. See Popular fallacies.

Haqihana ('wolves'). A local band of the Arapaho, q. v.

Haqui. A Caddoan (?) tribe, apparently in N. E. Texas, mentioned in 1687 as at war with the "Cenis" or main body of the Caddo confederacy. Perhaps the Adai.

Aquis.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878.

Hakesians.—Hennepin, New Discov., 41, 1698.

Haquis.—Donay (1687) quoted by Shea, Discov. Miss. Val., 217, 1852.

Harahey. One of the various forms of the name of a province of which Coronado, while among the New Mexico pueblos in 1540–41, learned from a native thereof who said that it lay beyond Quivira (the Wichita country of E. central Kansas), and contained much gold. This Indian, who was known as The Turk (q. v.) and who served as a guide to Coronado's army, became a traitor to the Spaniards by leading them astray on the buffalo plains of Texas. After 12 days' journey from Pecos r. in New Mexico the Spaniards, then on the Staked plain, were informed by The Turk that Haxa, or Haya, was one or two days' journey toward sunrise. A party was sent forward to find it, and although settlements of Indians were found, amongst them Cona, occupied by the Teya (Texas?), Haxa does not appear to have been reached; it is therefore possible that Haxa, or Haya, is but another form of Harahey, which was far N. of where the Spaniards then were. Arriving at Quivira, Coronado learned more of Harahey, which was the next province beyond. The Spaniards did not visit it, but sent for their chief, named Tatarax, who came with 200 warriors, "all naked, with bows, and some sort of things on their heads." From the characteristic head-dress of The Turk and the other members of the tribe, and their proximity and apparent relationship with the Quivira, or Wichita, the Harahey people may have been the Pawnee, and their habitat at this date (1542) in the vicinity of Kansas r. in E. Kansas. See Brower, Quivira, 1898; Hodge, Coronado's March, in Brower, Harahey, 1899; Winship, Coronado Exped., 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896. (F. W. H.)

Araal.—Barcia, Ensayo, 21, 1723. Arache.—Jaramillo (after 1542) in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 588, 1896. Arae.—Rel. del Suceso (ca. 1542), ibid., 577. Arahei.—Jaramillo, op. cit. Arche.—Castañeda (ca. 1565) in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 503, 1896. Axa.—Gomara (1553) quoted by Winship in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 492, 1896. Axaas.—Volney, America, map, 1804. Axas.—Güsefeldt, Charte Nord America, 1797. Harae.—Herrera, Historia, VI, 206, 1728. Harahey.—Jaramillo, op. cit., 590. Harale.—Rel. del Suceso, op. cit. Harall.—Doc. of 1541 in Doc. Ind., XIV, 325, 1870. Haxa.—Castañeda (ca. 1565) in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 505, 1896. Haya.—Ibid. Hurall.—Bancroft, Ariz., and N. Mex., 51, 1889. Xaqueuira.—Galvano (1563) in Hakluyt Soc. Publ., xxx, 227, 1862 (apparently Axa and Quivira confused).

Harames. A former tribe of Coahuila, N. E. Mexico, gathered into the mission of San Juan Bautista. Probably of Coahuiltecan stock.

Jarames.—Morfi (1777) quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 612, 1886. Xarames.—Revillagigedo (1793) quoted by Bancroft, ibid., 611.

Harasgna. A former Gabrieleño rancharia in Los Angeles co., Cal.—Ried (1852) quoted by Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860.

Hard-mush. See Big-mush.

Harooka (Näyuhäru'këñ, 'forked reed.—Hewitt). A Tuscarora village in North Carolina in 1701.—Lawson (1709), Carolina, 383, 1860.

Harpaha. A former Timucua village near the mouth of St Johns r., Fla.—Laudonnière (1565) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., 349, 1869.

Harpoons. Piercing and retrieving weapons with a movable head—probably the most ingenious and complicated device invented by the North American aborigines. Before the natives came into contact with the whites, they made harpoons of wood, bone, walrus ivory, shell, stone, sinew, and hide. The several structural parts consisted of the shaft, foreshaft, loose shaft, ice pick, head, hinge, connecting line, assembling line, main line, hand rest, eyelet, float, and detachers. Besides these there were a multitude of accessories, such as stools, decoys, ice scoops, and canoes. The technique of every part represented the Indian's best skill in a number of handicrafts—wood working, bone and ivory carving, chipping and grinding stone; shredding, twisting, and braiding sinew; and dressing hides or floats, canoes, and the toughest possible thongs or lines, and other parts.

There are two quite different varieties of harpoons, based on the shape of the head—the barbed harpoon and the toggle harpoon. The head of the barbed harpoon is attached to the shaft by means of a connecting line tied to the butt or tang of the head. The toggle head is attached to the line or sling by means of a hole bored through the body; the head is driven entirely into the animal, and, toggling under the skin, gives firm hold. These two types merge into each other, and some harpoons possess the characteristics of both.

The parts of a barbed harpoon are:

Head.—Of various materials, the specific characters being the same as those of barbed arrows; they differ in that the tang fits loosely into a socket and is roughened, notched, or pierced for the hinging or connecting line.

Foreshaft.—That of the harpoon, as compared with the arrow, is heavier, and has a socket in front for the wedge-shaped, conical, or spindle-shaped tang of the head.

Shaft.—Length, from a few inches to many feet; thickness, from one-fourth of an inch to an inch or more; outer end spliced or socketed to the foreshaft; center of gravity furnished with hand rest; inner end pointed, pitted for hook of throwing stick, notched for a bowstring, with or without feathers, or furnished with ice pick.

Connecting line.—Of string or thong rudely tied to head and shaft or, in the finest specimens, attached at one end through a hole in the tang, the other end being bifurcated and fastened like a martingale to the ends of the shaft. When the animal is struck by the hurled harpoon the head is withdrawn, the foreshaft sinks by its gravity, and the shaft acts as a drag to impede the progress of the game (see Nat. Mus. Rep. 1900, pl. 11).

The parts of a toggle harpoon are:

Toggle head.—Consisting of body; blade of slate, chipped stone, ivory, or metal, usually fitted into a slit in front; line hole or opening through the body for the sling or leader of hide on which the toggle head hinges; line grooves

TOGGLE-HEAD
HARPOON;
ESKIMO

channeled backward from the line hole to protect the leader; barbs projecting backward at the butt of the toggle head to catch into the flesh and make the head revolve 90 degrees, forming a T with the line; shaft socket, a conoid pit in the butt of the toggle head to receive front end of loose shaft; and leader or sling, not always separate, but

DETAIL OF TOGGLE-HEAD
HARPOON; ESKIMO

BARBED-HEAD
HARPOON;
WESTERN ESKIMO

when so, either spliced to the main line or joined by an ingenious detach-er, which is sometimes prettily carved.

Loose shaft.—A spindle-shaped piece of ivory socketed to toggle head and fore-shaft and attached as a hinge to the leader or the foreshaft. Its object is to catch the strain caused by convulsive movements in the game and to render certain the speedy detach-ment of the toggle head.

One of the most interest-ing studies in connection with harpoons is environ-ment in relation to cul-ture—the play between the needy and ingenious man and the resources of game, materials, and tools. In E. Greenland is found the hinged toggle by the side of old forms; in W. Green-land a great variety of types from the very primitive and coarse to those having feath-ers of ivory and the hooks on the shaft. In the latter area are also throwing sticks of two kinds. On the W. side of Davis Strait harpoons are heavy and coarse, show-ing contact of the natives with whalers, especially the Ungava Eskimo examples. There also are flat types sug-gestive of N. Asia. From the Mackenzie R. country the harpoons are small and under the influence of the white trader. The har-poons of the Pt Barrow Es-kimo are exhaust-ively dis-cussed by Murdoch, and those from Pt Barrow south-ward by Nelson.

From Mount St Elias southward, within the timber belt, wherewood is easily obtainable, harpoon shafts are longer, but all the parts are reduced to their sim-plest form. For exam-ple, the Ntlakyapamuk of British Colum-bia make the toggle heads of their two-pronged harpoons by neatly lashing the parts together and to the sennit lead-ers. The Makah of Washington formerly made the blade of the head from shell, but now use metal; the leader is tied to a large, painted float of sealskin, the shaft being free. The Quinalt of Washing-ton have the bifurcated shaft, but no float. The Naltunne of Oregon have a barbed harpoon, with prongs on the blade as well as on the shank, while their cousins, the Hupa of N. California make the toggle, as do the Vancouver tribes, by attaching the parts of the head to a strip of rawhide.

See Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 1888; Goddard in Publ. Univ. Cal., Am. Archæol. and Ethnol., I, no. 1, 1903; Holm, Ethnol. Skizz., 1887; Mason in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1900, 1902; Morice in Trans. Can. Inst., IV, 1895; Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899; Niblack in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1888, 1890; Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 1877; Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, Anthrop. I, 1900; Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 1894. (O. T. M.)

Harrison River. The local name for a body of Cowichan near lower Fraser r., Brit. Col. (Can. Ind. Aff. for 1878, 78); evidently the Scowlit, or the Chehalis, or both.

Harsanykuk (Hársanykük, 'saguaro cactus standing'). A Pima village at Sacaton Flats, S. Ariz.—Russell, Pima MS., B. A. E., 18, 1902.

Hartwell. An Algonquian settlement, containing 25 persons in 1884, in Ottawa co., Quebec.—Can. Ind. Aff., 1884.

Harutawaqui (Harotlawi'ko', 'He holds the tree.'—Hewitt). A Tuscarora village in North Carolina in 1701.—Lawson (1709), Carolina, 383, 1860.

Hasatch ('place to the east'). A former summer village of the Lagunas, now a permanently occupied pueblo; situated 3 m. E. of Laguna pueblo, N. Mex.

Hasatch.—Loew in Wheeler Survey Rep., VII, 345, 1879. Hasátyi.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (proper native name). Mesita.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1904, 256, 1905 ('little mesa': common Spanish name). Mesita Negra.—Hodge (after Pradt) in Am. Anthropol., IV, 346, 1891 (Span.: 'little black mesa').

Hashkushtun (Ha'-chák-tán). A former Takelma village on the S. side of Rogue r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 235, 1890.

Haslinding. A small Hupa village, recently deserted, on the E. side of Trinity r., Cal., at the mouth of a creek of the same name, 3 m. S. of Hupa valley. (P. E. G.)

Has-lintah.—Gibbs in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 139, 1853. Hass-lin'-tung.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 73, 1877. Kas-lin-ta.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 194, 1853. Xasliniin.—Goddard, Life and Culture of the Hupa, 12, 1903.

Hasoomale. One of the Diegueño ran-cherias represented in the treaty of 1852 at Santa Isabel, S. Cal.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 133, 1857.

Hassanamesit ('at the place of small stones.'—Gookin). A village of Christian Indians established in 1654 at Grafton, Worcester co., Mass., in Nipmuc territory.

ESKIMO HARPOON MODIFIED BY CONTACT WITH WHITES

The last of the pure Indians died about 1825, but in 1830 there were still 14 persons there of mixed Indian and negro blood. It was the third of the praying towns "in order, dignity, and antiquity."

Cf. Hassinanisco.

(J. M.)

Hasanameset.—Hubbard (1680) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., v, 544, 1815. Hasanamaset.—Gookin (1677) in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 447, 1836. Hasanamesett.—Leverett (1677) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., XIII, 513, 1881. Hasanamamasitt.—Salisbury (1678), ibid., 526. Hasanamaskett.—Writer of 1676 in Drake, Ind. Chron., 17, 1836. Hasanamaset.—Gookin (1674) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., I, 184, 1806. Hasanamisco.—Barber, Hist. Coll. Mass., 568, 1839. Hasanamset.—Gookin (1677) in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 467, 1836. Hasanamesit.—Rawson (1675) in Drake, Ind. Chron., 17, 1836. Hasanamaset.—Gookin (1677) in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 435, 1836. Hasanemassit.—Harris in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., IX, 198, 1804. Hasanamisco.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. 2, 51, 1848. Hasunnimesut.—Eliot quoted by Tooker, Algonq. Ser., X, 24, 1901. Hessamesit.—Writer of 1675 in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., VI, 205, 1800. Husanamesit.—Drake, Ind. Chron., 166, 1836.

Hassasei. A rancharia, probably Diegueño, on the coast of Lower California; it was under the mission of San Miguel de la Frontera, which was in lat. 32°.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 18, 1860.

Hassimanisco. A former Indian village in Connecticut, probably near Connecticut r. In 1764 there were only 5 Indians left.—Stiles (1764) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., x, 105, 1809. Cf. Hasanamaset.

Hassinunga. A tribe of the Manahoac confederacy living about 1610 on the headwaters of Rappahannock r., Va. Hasinninga.—Smith (1629), Virginia, I, 186, repr. 1819. Hassinanga.—Ibid., 74. Hassinienegas.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 126, 1816. Hassinugas.—Strachey (ca. 1612), Virginia, 104, 1849. Hassinungaes.—Smith, op. cit., 74.

Hastings Saw Mill. A local name for a body of Squawmish of Fraser River agency, Brit. Col.; pop. 91 in 1898, the last time the name is mentioned.

Haisting's Saw Mills.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1889, 268. Hastings Saw-mill.—Ibid., 1898, 413. Hastings Saw Mills.—Ibid., 1886, 229.

Hastwiana ('he was a little man.'—Hewitt). A former Onondaga settlement on the site of the present village of Onondaga Valley, Onondaga co., N. Y. Gis-twe-ah'-na.—Morgan, League Iroq., 421, 1851. Häs-twi'-ä'-nä.—Hewitt, inf'n., 1886 (Onondaga form). Touenho.—Denonville (1688) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 375, 1855.

Hata. A Tsawatenok village at the head of Bond sd., Brit. Col.

Hä-tä.—Dawson in Can. Geol. Surv., map, 1888.

Hataam ('rider'). A Diegueño rancharia in n. w. Lower California, near Santo Tomas mission; visited in 1867 by Wm. Gabb, who obtained a vocabulary published in Ztschr. f. Ethnologie, 1877.

Hatakafushi ('bird'). A Chickasaw clan of the Koi phratry.

Fushi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 96, 1884.

Hä-täk-fu-shi.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 163, 1877.

Hatawa. A former Luiseño village in the neighborhood of San Luis Rey mission, s. Cal. (Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 11, 1860). Possibly the same as Ehutewa.

Hatchcalamocho. A former Seminole village near Drum swamp, 18 m. w. of New Mickasuky town; probably in the present Lafayette co., Fla.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 74 (1823), 19th Cong., 1st sess., 27, 1826.

Hatchets. These implements, made of iron or steel, and hafted with wood, were an important factor in the colonization of northern America, and the value of the hatchet, as well as that of the ax, was soon recognized by the natives, who obtained these tools through trade. Large numbers of hatchets and axes of both French and English manufacture are obtained from aboriginal dwelling sites. It is not known with certainty just what aboriginal implements and weapons were supplanted by the European hatchet, but it probably superseded, in large part, the grooved ax, the celt, and probably the tomahawk or war club among tribes that used these implements. So far as can be judged by the forms, the term "hatchet" may be applied with equal propriety to both the hafted ax and the hafted celt, as both were wielded usually with one hand and were equally effectual in war and in the arts of peace. So far as colonial literature refers to the uses of these implements, it would appear that the tomahawk or club, among the eastern tribes, was the weapon of war par excellence, while the ax and the celt were employed more especially in domestic work and for other ordinary industrial purposes (McCulloch). Both the hatchet and the war club doubtless rose on occasion to the dignity of ceremonial objects.

COMMON FORM OF HATCHET—A SHARPENED BOWLDER; VIRGINIA

It is clear, not only from the practice of the living tribes and of primitive peoples generally, but from traces of handles remaining on both stone and copper specimens obtained from the mounds, that the celt was hafted after the manner of the hatchet. An interesting group of implements showing that this was the archaic method of hafting celt-like objects, are the monolithic hatchets in which the blade and the handle are carved of a single piece of stone. Several specimens of this type are on record; one, found by

CELT-HATCHET WITH WOODEN HANDLE, FROM A MICHIGAN MOUND. (DODGE COLL.)

MONOLITHIC HATCHET OF GREENSTONE, FROM A TENNESSEE MOUND. LENGTH 13 1-2 IN. (JONES)

Joseph Jones, in Tennessee, is made of greenstone, and is 13½ in. in length; another, from a mound in York district, S. C., now in the National Museum, is also of greenstone; the third is from Mississippi co., Ark., and is owned by Mr Morris of that county (Thruston); the fourth, from a mound in Alabama, and now in possession of Mr C. B. Moore, of Philadelphia, is 11½ in. long, of greenstone, and a superb example of native lapidarian work. Specimens of this class are much more numerous in the Bahamas and the West Indies. As all are carefully finished, some being provided with a perforated knob or projection at the end of the handle for the insertion of a thong, it is probable that they served as maces or for some other ceremonial use. On the Pacific coast the stone war club sometimes took the form of a monolithic hatchet (Niblack).

MONOLITHIC HATCHET OF GREENSTONE, FROM A MOUND AT MOUNDVILLE, ALA. LENGTH 11 1-2 IN. (MOORE)

The combination of the iron hatchet with the tobacco pipe as a single implement, often called the tomahawk pipe, became very general in colonial and later times, and as no counterpart of this device is found in aboriginal art, it was probably devised by the whites as a useful and profitable combination of the symbols of peace and war. To "take up the hatchet" was to declare war, and "to bury the hatchet" was to conclude peace. According to some authors the hatchet pipe was a formidable weapon in war, but in the forms known to-day it is too light and fragile to have taken the place of the stone ax or the iron hatchet. It has passed entirely out of the realm of weapons. See Axes, Calumet, Celts, Pipes, Tomahawks.

Consult C. C. Jones, Antiq. So. Inds., 1873; Jos. Jones, Aboriginal Remains of Tenn., 1876; McCulloch, Researches, 1829; McGuire in Rep. Nat. Mus., 1897; Moore, various memoirs in Jour. Acad. Nat. Sci. Phila., 1894-1905; Morgan, League of the Iroquois, 1904; Niblack in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1888, 1890; Thruston, Antiq. of Tenn., 1897; Wilson in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1896, 1898. (w. n. n.)

Hatcheuxhau.—A former Upper Creek village near the site of La Grange, Troup co., Ga.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ga. map, 1899.

Hatchichapa ('half-way creek'). A former branch settlement of the Upper Creek town Kailaidshi, between Coosa and Tallapoosa rs., Ala. Hawkins states that the Creeks hostile to the United States burned it in 1813, but it was probably rebuilt as it is mentioned in Parsons' census list of 1832 as having 62 heads of families.

Hatchuchubb.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1827), 420, 1837. Half-way Creek.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 131, 1884. Hatchchi chubba.—Parsons (1832) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iv, 578, 1854. Hatchchubba.—Corley (1835) in H. R. Doc. 452, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 66, 1838. Hat-che chub-bau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 49, 1848. Hatchechubbee.—Creek paper (1836) in H. R. Rep. 37, 31st Cong., 2d sess., 122, 1851. Hatch ee chub ba.—Abbott (1832) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iv, 580, 1854. Hatchechubbass.—Simpson (1836) in H. R. Doc. 80, 27th Cong., 3d sess., 50, 1843. Hatchi tchapa.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 131, 1884.

Hatchichapa. A township in the Creek Nation, Ind. T., near North fork of Canadian r.

Hatch Point. A local name for a body of Salish of Cowichan agency, Vancouver id.; pop. 4 in 1896, the last time reported.

Hatch Point.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1896, 433. Hatch Point.—Ibid., 1883, 197.

Hatchukuni ('woli'). A Tonkawa clan. Hatchukuni.—Gatschet, Tonkawe MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Hathawekela. A principal division of the Shawnee, the name of which is of uncertain etymology. They emigrated from the S. about 1697, together with other Shawnee bands, and settled with them, partly on Susquehanna and partly on Allegheny r., Pa., where they are mentioned in 1731. Sewickley, Pa., probably takes its name from them. According to W. H. Shawnee, an educated member of the tribe, the proper form is Ha-tha-we-ke-lah, and they constitute one of the original 5 principal divisions of the Shawnee. Together with the Bicowetha (Piqua) and Kispokotha (Kispocoke) divisions they removed about 1793 to what was then Spanish territory in E. Missouri, thence into Arkansas, and in 1832 into Texas, where with other tribes they settled for a time near Saline r. Being afterward driven out by the new Texas government they removed to the present Oklahoma, where the 3 united bands are now known as Absentee Shawnee, from having been absent from the more recent treaties made with the rest of the tribe. The Hathawekela claim to be the "elder brothers" among the Shawnee, as being the first created of the tribe. The band formerly under Black Bob (q. v.) are a portion of this division. See Halbert and Shawnee in Gulf States Hist. Mag., I, no. 6, 413-418, 1903.

(J. M.)

Asseekales.—Cartlidge (1731) in Pa. Archives, I, 305, 1852. Assekelaes.—Gordon (1731) quoted by Brinton, Lenape Legends, 32, 1885. Assiwikales.—Brinton, ibid. Asswekales.—Davenport (1731) in Pa. Archives, I, 299, 1852. Asswikales.—Gov. Pa. (1731), ibid., 302. Asswikalus.—Le Tort (1731), ibid., 300. Elder Brothers.—W. H. Shawnee, op. cit., 417. Ha-tha-we-ke-lah.—Ibid., 415. Ha-tha-we-ki-lah.—Ibid., 417.

Hathletukhish (Haçl'-l'û-qîc'). A former Yaguina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Hatsi. The extinct Earth clans of Laguna and San Felipe pueblos, N. Mex. The Earth clan of Laguna claimed to have come originally from Jemez and to have formed a phratry with the Meyo (Lizard), Skurshka (Water-snake), and Shruhwi (Rattlesnake) clans.

(F. W. H.)

Hâtsu-hâno.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 350, 1896 (San Felipe form: hâno = 'people'). Hâtsi-hâno^{ch}.—Ibid. (Laguna form).

Hatsinawan (have 'leaves', tsinawe 'marks', 'paintings', wan 'place of': 'town of the (fossil?) leaf-marks.'—Cushing). A ruined pueblo formerly inhabited by the Zuñi, situated N. N. W. of Hawikuh and S. W. of the present Zuñi pueblo, N. Mex.—Cushing, inf'n, 1891.

Hatschi-na-wha.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archaeol., I, 101, 1891 (probably identical).

Hatteras. An Algonquian tribe living in 1701 on the sand banks about C. Hatteras, N. C., E. of Pamlico sound, and frequenting Roanoke id. Their single village, Sandbanks, had then only about 80 inhabitants. They showed traces of white blood and claimed that some of their ancestors were white. They may have been identical with the Croatan Indians (q. v.), with whom Raleigh's colonists at Roanoke id. are supposed to have taken refuge.

(J. M.)

Hatarask.—Lane (1586) in Smith (1629), Virginia, I, 92, 1819 (place name). Hatorask.—Ibid. Hatteras Indians.—Lawson (1714), Carolina, 108, 1860.

Hauenayo. A clan of the Apohola phratry of the ancient Timucua of Florida.—Pareja (ca. 1614) quoted by Gatschet in Am. Philos. Soc. Proc., XVII, 492, 1878.

Haukoma. A Pomo division or band on the W. side of Clear lake, Cal., numbering 40 in 1851.

How-ku-ma.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 109, 1853. How-ru-ma.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 136, 1853.

Hauwiyat (Hau-wi-yât'). A former Siuslaw village on or near Siuslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Hauzaurni. A former Costanoan village near Santa Cruz mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 5, 1860.

Havasupai ('blue or green waterpeople'). A small isolated tribe of the Yuman stock

HAVASUPAI MAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

(the nucleus of which is believed to have descended from the Walapai) who occupy Cataract canyon of the Rio Colorado in N.

HAVASUPAI WOMAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

W. Arizona. Whipple (Pac. R. R. Rep., III, pt. I, 82, 1856) was informed in 1850 that the "Cosninos" roamed from the Sierra Mogollon to the San Francisco mts. and along the valley of the Colorado Chiquito. The tribe is a peculiarly interesting one, since of all the Yuman tribes it is the only one which has developed or borrowed a culture similar to, though less advanced, than that of the Pueblo peoples; indeed, according to tradition, the Havasupai (or more probably a Pueblo clan or tribe that became incorporated with them) formerly built and occupied villages of a permanent character on the Colorado Chiquito E. of the San Francisco mts., where ruins were pointed out to Powell by a Havasupai chief as the former homes of his people. As the result of war with tribes farther E., they abandoned these villages and took refuge in the San Francisco mts., subsequently leaving these for their present abode. In this connection it is of interest to note that the Cosnino caves on the upper Rio Verde, near the N. edge of Tonto basin, central Arizona, were named from this tribe, because of their supposed early occupancy by them. Their present village, composed of temporary cabins or shelters of wattled canes and branches and earth in summer, and of the natural caves and crevices in winter, is situated 115 m. N. of Prescott and 7 m. S. of the Grand canyon. The Havasupai are well formed, though of medium stature. They are skilled in the manufacture and use of implements, and especially in preparing raw material, like buckskin. The men are expert hunters, the women adept in the manufacture of baskets which, when lined with clay, serve also as cooking utensils. Like the other Yuman tribes, unaffected by white influences during recent years, their clothing consisted chiefly of deerskin and, for the sake of ornament, both men and women painted their faces with thick, smooth coatings of fine red ochre or blue paint prepared from wild indigo; tattooing and scarification for ornament were also sometimes practised. In summer they subsist chiefly on corn, calabashes, sunflower seeds, melons, peaches, and apricots, which they cultivate by means of irrigation, and also the wild datila and mescl, in winter principally upon the flesh of game, which they hunt in the surrounding uplands and mountains. While a strictly sedentary people, they are unskilled in the manufacture of earthenware and obtain their more modern implements and utensils, except basketry, by barter with the Hopi, with which people they seem always to have had closer affiliation than with their Yuman kindred. Their weapons in war and the chase were rude clubs and pikes of hard wood, bows and arrows, and, formerly, slings; but firearms have practically replaced these more primitive appliances. The gentile system of descent or organization seems to be absent among the Havasupai, their society consanguineally being patriarchal. They are polygamists, the number of wives a man shall have being limited apparently only by his means for supporting them. Betrothals by purchase are common, and divorces are granted only on the ground of unfaithfulness. The Havasupai occupy a reservation of about 38,400 acres, set aside by Executive order in 1880 and 1882. Their population was 300 in 1869, 233 in 1902, 174 in 1905. (H. W. H.)

Agua Supais.—Hodge, Arizona, 169, 1877. Ah-Supai.—Bourke, Moquis of Ariz., 80, 1884. Ák'-ba-sú'-pai.—Gilbert, Yuma vocab., B. A. E., 64, 1878 (Walapai form). Akuesú'-pai.—Gatschet in Ztschr. f. Ethnol., xv, 127, 1885. Ava-Supies.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 547, 1889. Avésúpai.—Gatschet, op. cit., 123. Casinos.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 91, 1870. Casnino.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 27, 1863. Co-a-ni-nis.—Powell in Scribner's Mag., 213, Dec. 1875. Cochineans.—Emory, Recon., 96, 1848 (trans. 'dirty fellows'). Cochinichos.—Bartlett, Pers. Narr., II, 178, 1854. Cogoninos.—Cushing in Atlantic Mo., 544, Oct. 1882. Cohoninos.—Bourke, Moquis of Ariz., 80, 1884. Cojinino.—Sitgreaves, Expedition, 15, 1853 (name by which a Havésúpai called himself). Cojonina.—Scott in Donaldson, Moqui Pueblo Inds., 52, 1893. Cominas.—Vargas (1692), cited by Davis, Span. Conq. N. Mex., 370, 1869. Cominos.—Browne, Apache Country, 290, 1869 (mentioned as a branch of Gila Apache). Coninas.—Rivera, Diario y Derrotero, leg. 950, 1736. Cosninos.—Pumpelly, Across America and Asia, map, 1870. Cosninas.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 472, 1900. Cosninos.—Whipple, Pac. R. R. Rep., III, pt. 1, 82, 1856. Cuesninas.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 445, 1900 (erroneously said to be Maricopan name for Mohave). Cuismer.—Orozco y Berra, Geografía, 59, 1864 (misquoting Garcés). Cuisnurs.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 446, 1900. Culisinna.—Ibid., 473 (erroneously said to be applied to Mohave). Culisnurs.—Ibid. (erroneously said to be applied to the Mohave). Habasopis.—Gibbs, MS. map of Colorado tribes, B. A. E., no. 282. Haha-vasu-pai.—James, Inds. Painted Desert, 195, 199, 1903 ('people of the blue water'). Havasopi.—Thomas, MS., no. 602, B. A. E., 1868. 'Havasua Pai.—Ewing in Great Divide, 203, Dec. 1892. Ha-va-su-pai.—Cushing in Atlantic Mo., L, 374, Sept. 1882. Hava-su-pay.—Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 366, 1892. Havesu-pai.—Ewing, op. cit. 'Havisua Pai.—Ibid. Jabesua.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 340, 1900. Java Supais.—Baxter in Harper's Mag., June 1882. Javeusa.—Escudero, Noticias de Chihuahua, 228, 1834 (misquoting Garcés). Kochchinakwe.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. A., 300, 1885 (Zuñi name: 'Piñon nut people?'). Kochonino.—Ibid., 259. Ko'-hni'-na.—Gilbert, Yuma vocab., B. A. E., 64, 1878 (Hopi name). Kóhonino.—Voth, Traditions of the Hopi, 19, 1905 (Hopi name). Kokoninos.—Gatschet in Zeitschr. f. Ethnol., XVIII, 97, 1886. Kónino.—Ibid., xv, 124, 1885 (Hopi name). Kox-nina' kwe.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 7, 1884 (Zuñi name, borrowed from the Hopi). Kóxniname.—Ibid. (Hopi name). Kúchnikwe.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. A., 300, 1885 (Zuñi name: 'Piñon nut people?'). Kuhni kwe.—Cushing in Atlantic Mo., L, 362, Sept. 1882 (Zuñi name; kwe = 'people'). Ku'h-nis.—Escudero, Noticias de Chihuahua, 228, 1834 (misquoting Garcés, 1776). Kúni-kue.—Gatschet in Zeitschr. f. Ethnol., xv, 124, 1883 (Zuñi name). Nation of the Willows.—Cushing in Atlantic Mo., L, 362, 541, 1882. Navesu-pai.—Gatschet, op. cit., xv, 127, 1883 (a Walapai form). People of the Willows.—Powell in 3d Rep. B. A. E., xix, 1884. Supais.—Cushing in Atlantic Mo., 544, Oct. 1882 (after 'Arizona Miner'). Supies.—Hinton, Handbook to Arizona, 353, 1878. Supis.—Orozco y Berra, Geografía, 59, 386, 1864 (erroneously given as part of Faraon Apache). Suppai.—Ind. Aff. Rep., lxxxii, 1886. Tonto Cosnino.—Möhlhausen, Tagebuch, II, 196, 1858. Yabipais Jabesua.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 414, 1900. Yavai Suppai.—Arthur (1882) in Ind. Aff. Rep., 297, 1886. Yavipai Jabesua.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 112, 1890 (after Garcés). Yavipai Javesua.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 41, 1864 (after Garcés). Yuva-Supai.—Corbusier in Am. Antiq., 276, Sept., 1886.

Haverstraw (Dutch: haverstroo, 'oat-straw'). The name applied by the Dutch to a small tribe or band (according to Rutenber, a division) of the Unami Delawares, formerly living on the w. bank of the lower Hudson, in Rockland co., N. Y. The name they applied to themselves is lost, but it may have been Reweghnome or Rumachenanck.

Haverstraw.—Van Couwenhoven (1664) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., XIII, 364, 1881. Haverstroo.—De Laet (1633) quoted by Rutenber, Tribes Hudson R., 71, 1872. Rewechnongh.—Treaty of 1664 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., XIII, 375, 1881 ('Rewechnongh or Haverstraw'). Rumachenanck.—Treaty of 1660, ibid., 147 (apparently given as the tribal name).

Hawai. A former Diegueño rancheria under the Dominican mission of San Miguel de la Frontera, w. coast of Lower California, about 30 m. s. of San Diego, Cal. (A. S. G.)

Hawaiian influence. The establishment of the whale and seal fisheries of the N. Pacific coast led to the presence in that region of sailors and adventurers of the most diverse races and nationalities, many of whom came into more or less lasting contact with the natives of the country. Toward the middle of the 19th century (Hale, Oregon Trade Language, 19, 1890) the Hawaiian language was spoken by about 100 Sandwich Islanders employed as laborers about Ft Vancouver, Wash. Doubtless some intermixture of these with the Indians took place. In 1891 there lived among the Kutenai an Indian nicknamed Kanaka. Murdoch (9th Rep. B. A. E., 55, 1892) notes that several Hawaiian words have crept into the jargon as used by the western Eskimo and white whalers and traders who come into contact with them, and one or two of these words have even come to be employed by the Pt Barrow Eskimo among themselves; but there is no evidence that the Chinook jargon contains a Hawaiian element. Swanton suggests that it is barely possible that the Haida custom of tattooing may have come from some Polynesian island, as its introduction is always said by the natives to be recent. Whether the idea of a ladder made of a chain of arrows, which occurs among the myths of Polynesians and the people of the N. W. coast, could have had a similar origin may be doubted, but it is nevertheless possible. The theory of Polynesian-American contact has been maintained by Ratzel, Schultz, and others, stress being laid on resemblances in art as exemplified by clubs, masks, etc., and in other ways. (A. F. C.)

Hawikuh (have 'leaves', wiku 'gum'). A former pueblo of the Zuñi and one of the Seven Cities of Cibola of early Spanish times, situated about 15 m. s. w. of the present Zuñi pueblo, N. Mex., near the summer village of Ojo Caliente. Hawikuh was seen in 1539 by Fray Marcos de Niza, who viewed it from an adjacent height a few days after the murder, by the Zuñi of Hawikuh, of Estevanico, the former negro companion of Cabeza de Vaca. Fray Marcos referred to it by the name of Ahacus. In the following year Francisco Vasquez Coronado visited the pueblo with his advance guard, and as its inhabitants offered resistance, the village was stormed and captured, most of its people fleeing for safety to Taaiyalone, a mesa e. of the present Zuñi. Coronado referred to Hawikuh, under the name Granada, as the chief pueblo of Cibola, containing about 200 houses, and from there wrote his account of the journey to the viceroy Mendoza, Aug. 15, 1540. A Franciscan mission was established at Hawikuh in 1629, at which time the pueblo contained about 110 houses. Owing to Navaho or Apache depredations in Oct., 1670, when many of the Zuñi as well as the missionary of Hawikuh were killed, the pueblo was abandoned and never afterward permanently occupied. It is said that the roof timbers of the old church at Zuñi, which was erected about 1705, were those used previously in the Hawikuh chapel. A portion of the adobe walls of the latter building were still standing until about 1894, when the adobes were taken by the Indians to Ojo Caliente and there used in the construction of new houses. See Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 80, 1891; Bandelier (1) Final Rep., pts. I, II, 1890, 1892; (2) Doc. Hist. Zuñi Tribe, 1892; Cushing in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Hodge in Am. Anthropol., VIII, 142, 1895. (F. W. H.)

Abacu.—Heylyn, Cosmog., 968, 1703. Abacus.—Blaeu, Atlas, XII, first map, 1667. Aguas Calientes.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 133, 1890 (Ha-ai-cu, or). Aguascohi.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629) quoted by Bandelier in Mag. West. Hist., 665, 1846. Aguiico.—Cushing in Millstone, IX, 20, Feb. 1884 (misquoting Coronado). Aguiicobi.—Onate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., XVI, 133, 1871. Aguscohi.—Ibid., 132. Ahacus.—Niza (1539) in Hakluyt, Voy., 443, 1600. Apacus.—Davis, Span. Conq. N. Mex., 128, 1869 (misquoting Marcos de Niza). Aguiico.—Espejo (1583) in Doc. Inéd., XV, 118, 181, 1871. Auico.—MS. of 1676 quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 338, 1892. Avicu.—Cushing in Compt. rendu Internat. Cong. Am., VII, 156, 1890 (given as an early Spanish form). Cibola.—Castañeda (ca. 1565) in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 483, 1896. Granada.—Coronado (1540) in Hakluyt, Voy., III, 449, 451, 1600. Granade.—Gomara, Hist. Gen., 467b, 1606. Granado.—Purchas, Pilgrimes, 648, 1613; v. 853, 1616. Granata.—Coronado (1540) in Ramusio, Nav. et Viaggi, 361, 363, 1565. Grenada.—Simpson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1869, 330, 1871. Grenade.—Sanson, map l'Amérique, 28, 1657. Hahaiuen.—Peet in Am. Antiq., XVII, 352, 1895 (misprint). Ha Huico.—Zarate-Salmeron (1629) cited by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 154, 1889 (Havico or). Haicu.—

Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 326, 1892 (misprint). Ha-ui-ca.—Bandelier quoted in Arch. Inst. Rep., v, 43, 1884. Ha-ui-cu.—Bandelier in Revue d'Éthnog., 202, 1886. Havico.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629), Relación, in Land of Sunshine, 47, Dec. 1899. Ha-vi-cu.—Bandelier in Mag. West. Hist., 668, Sept. 1886. Ha-wi-k'hu.—Cushing in Millstone, x, 4, Jan. 1885. Há-wi-k'uh.—Ibid., 19, Feb. 1884. Há-wi-k'uh-ians.—Ibid., 20 (=the people of Hawikuh). Ha-wi-kuhs.—Powell, 2d Rep. B. A. E., xxvii, 1883. Hay-way-ku.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archeol., i, 100, 1891. Hay-we-cu.—Ibid., map. Jahuicu.—Escalante (1778) quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 257, 1892. Kuikawkuk.—Peet in Am. Antiq., xvii, 352, 1895 (misprint). La Concepcion de Agui-co.—Vetancourt (1693) in Teatro Mex., 320, 1871. Nueva Granada.—Galvano (1563) in Hakluyt Soc. Publ., xxx, 227, 1862. Nueva Granada.—Barcin, Ensayo, 21, 1723. Ojo-caliente.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., iii, 370, 1788 (doubtless identical). Rosa Hawicui.—Villasenor misquoted by Baneroff, Ariz. and N. Mex., 252, 1889 (confused with Abiqui). Santa Rosa de Hawicui.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., ii, 355, 1787. Santa Rosa Hawicui.—Villasenor, Teatro Am., pt. 2, 413, 1748. Tzibola.—Mota-Padilla (1742), Hist. Nueva España, 111, 1871. Zibola.—Perea, Verdadera Rel., 4, 1632.

Hawmanao (Xámanáo). A gens of the Quatsino, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 329.

Hayah (Hä-yäh). The Snake clan of the Pecos tribe of New Mexico.—Hewett in Am. Anthropol., vi, 439, 1904.

Head deformation. See Artificial head deformation.

Heakdhetanwan (Hé-ax'pé tan'wan'). An ancient Osage village on Spring cr., a branch of Neosho r., Indian Ter.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883.

Health and Disease. There is little evidence to show what diseases prevailed among the Indians n. of Mexico prior to the advent of white people. The traditions of the Indians, the existence among them of elaborate healing rites of undoubtedly ancient origin, their plantlore, in which curative properties are attributed to many vegetal substances, and the presence among them of a numerous class of professed healers, honored, feared, and usually well paid, would seem to indicate that diseases were not rare, but actual knowledge and even tradition as to their nature are wanting. The condition of the skeletal remains, the testimony of early observers, and the present state of some of the tribes in this regard, warrant the conclusion that on the whole the Indian race was a comparatively healthy one. It was probably spared at least some of the epidemics and diseases of the Old World, such as smallpox and rachitis, while other scourges, such as tuberculosis, syphilis (precolombian), typhus, cholera, scarlet fever, cancer, etc., were rare, if occurring at all. Taking into consideration the warlike nature of many of the tribes and the evidence presented by their bones (especially the skulls), injuries, etc., particularly those received by offensive weapons, must have been common, although fractures are less frequent than among white people.

At the time of the discovery the Indians on the whole were probably slowly increasing in numbers. Frequent wars, however, had a marked effect in limiting this increase. Since their contact with whites most of the tribes have gradually diminished in strength, while some of the smaller tribes have disappeared entirely. Very few tribes have shown an increase or even maintained their former numbers. The most remarkable example of steady gain is the Navaho tribe. The causes of decrease were the introduction of diseases (particularly smallpox), the spread of alcoholism, syphilis, and especially tuberculosis, destructive wars with the whites, and increased mortality due to changes in the habits of the people through the encroachment of civilization. During recent years a slow augmentation in population has been noticed among a number of tribes, and as more attention is paid to the hygienic conditions of the Indians, an increase comparable to that in whites may be expected in many sections. The least hopeful conditions in this respect prevail among the Dakota and other tribes of the colder northern regions, where pulmonary tuberculosis and scrofula are very common. (See Population.)

While preserving much of their robust constitution, the Indians—particularly those of mixed blood—are at present subject to many disorders and diseases known to the whites, although the pure bloods are still free from most of the serious morbid conditions and tendencies due to defective inheritance. They suffer little from insanity, idiocy, and rachitis. Cretinism is exceedingly rare, and general paresis, with a large number of serious nervous affections, has not yet been recorded among them. Diseases of the heart, arteries, and veins, serious affection of the liver and kidneys, as well as typhoid and scarlet fever are infrequent. Congenital malformations are very rare, although it is commonly heard among the Indians themselves that they do sometimes occur, but that the afflicted infants are not allowed to live. Fractures, and diseases of the bones in general, as well as dental caries, are less frequent than among the whites. There is considerable doubt whether cancer occurs in any form. Venereal diseases, while predominant among the more degraded Indians, are more or less effectually guarded against by others.

The most common disorders of health now experienced among Indians generally are those of the gastro-intestinal tract, which in infancy are due to improper feeding and particularly to the universal consumption of raw, unripe fruit and vegetables, and in later life to the lack of or overindulgence in food, irregular meals, the preference for fat, crudely prepared food, and, recently, the misuse of inferior baking powders and excessive use of coffee. While most of the disorders thus introduced are of a minor character, others, particularly in infants, are frequently fatal. Other more common diseases are various forms of malaria, bronchitis, pneumonia, pleurisy, and measles in the young. Whooping cough is also met with. Inflammation of the conjunctivæ is common and often leads to ulceration, opacity, and defect in or even total loss of vision. Defective hearing is occasionally found in the aged, and there are rare instances of deaf mutes. Eczema, favus, and acnæ are among the more ordinary affections of the skin. Tuberculosis of the lungs, and glandular tuberculosis, or scrofula, are frequent in many localities and are especially common among the reservation Indians in the colder parts of the United States, particularly in North Dakota, South Dakota, and Montana, due to their present mode of life. They live in small, insanitary hovels, which in cold weather are ill ventilated and often overheated and crowded, while their dress is heavier than formerly, their daily life less active, their food changed, and, what is most important, there is complete ignorance of the contagious nature of consumption. Some of these conditions, however, are being gradually bettered.

Goiter is widely distributed, though seldom prevalent; it is found particularly among some bands of the Sioux, and it occurs also with some frequency among the Menominee, Oneida, Crows, and White Mountain Apache. Albinism occurs among a number of the tribes; the cases, however, are quite isolated, except among the Hopi and to a lesser degree the Zuñi. In 1903 there were 12 cases of albinism in the former and 4 in the latter tribe, all of the complete variety. Vitiligo is much more scattered, but the cases are few. Diseases and functional disturbances peculiar to women, including those of the puerperium, are much less common among Indians than among the white women of this country. Of diseases peculiar to old age, senile arthritis, which affects particularly the spine, and occasional dementia, are found. Senility proceeds slowly in the pure-blood Indian, and the number of individuals above 80 years of age, according to census returns (which, however, should be regarded with caution), is relatively greater than among the whites. See Anatomy, Physiology.

Consult Bancroft, Native Races (with bibliographical references), i-v, 1882; Hrdlicka, Physiological and Medical Observations Among the Indians (with bibliography), Bull. 33, B. A. E., 1906; Jesuit Relations, Thwaites ed., i-lxxiii, 1896-1901; Josselyn, New-England's Rarities (1672), repr. 1865; Reports of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; Report on Indians, Eleventh U. S. Census (1890), 1894; Schoolcraft, Indian Tribes, i-vi, 1851-57. (A. H.)

Heashkowa. A prehistoric pueblo of the Red Corn (Kukinish-yaka) clan of Acoma, situated at the foot of a mesa about 2 m. s. e. of the present Acoma pueblo, N. Mex. According to tradition it was built by the Red Corn clan when the tribe entered its present valley from the n. and settled at Tapitsiama. It is said that when the village was abandoned some of the inhabitants joined the main body of the tribe while the remainder migrated southward. (F. W. H.)

Hebron. A Moravian Eskimo mission, founded in 1830, on the E. Labrador coast, lat. 58°.—Hindl., Lab. Penin., ii, 199, 1863.

Hecatari. A former Nevome pueblo of Sonora, Mexico, with 127 inhabitants in 1730; situated probably at or near the junction of the w. branch of the Rio Yaqui with the main stream, about lat. 28° 30'. Orozco y Berra classes it as a pueblo of the upper Pima.

Hecatari.—Rivera (1678) quoted by Bancroft, No. Mex. States, i, 513, 1884. Hecatazi.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 347, 1864.

Heda-haidagai (X'edax'-idaga-i, 'people living on the low ground'). A subdivision of the Stawas-haidagai, a Haida family of the Eagle clan; named from the character of the ground on which their houses stood in the town of Cumshewa. The town chief belonged to this subdivision.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 273, 1905.

Hediondo (Span.: 'fetid'). A Huichol rancheria about 2½ m. w. of Ratontita, in Jalisco, Mexico.—Lumholtz, Unknown Mex., ii, 271, 1902.

Rancho Hediondo.—Lumholtz, ibid.

Hegan. According to Pike (N. H. Hist. Soc. Coll., iii, 56, 1832) some English near Kittery, York co., Me., were attacked in 1706 "by their good friends, the Hegans." This may mean some relatives of Hogkins or Hawkins, a chief of the hostile Pennacook, formerly living in that vicinity. It can hardly mean the Mohegan, who were not hostile and who did not live in the neighborhood. (J. M.)

Hehametawe (He'ha'mē'tawē, 'descendants of Hametawe'). A subdivision of the Laalaksentaio, a Kwakiutl gens.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 332.

Hehlkoan ('people of Foam'). A Tlingit division at Wrangell, Alaska, belonging to the Wolf clan. They are named from a place called Foam (X'et), close to Loring, where they lived before joining the Stikine.

Chrelch-kōn.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 120, 1885. Qetlk'oan.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 25, 1889. Xel'koan.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Heiltsuk (He'ilt-sug). A dialect of Kwakiutl embracing the Bellabella (after whose native name it is called), the China Hat, Somehulitk, Nohunitk, and Wikeno. The number of Indians speaking the dialect was about 500 in 1904. (J. R. S.)

Heitotowa. A Choctaw town in the Choctaw Nation, Ind. T., situated at the later Sculleville.

Hei-to-to-wee.—Möhlhausen, Journey, i, 32, 1858.

Hekhalanois (Hēχalā'nois). The ancestor of a Koskimo gens, after whom it was sometimes called.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887.

Hekpa. The Fir clan of the Honau (Bear) phratry of the Hopi.

He'k-pa.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 38, 1891.

Helapoonuch. A former Chumashan village situated about 15 m. from Santa Barbara mission, Cal.—Father Timeno (1856) quoted by Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 4, 1860.

Helicopile. A village, named after a chief, on lower St Johns r., Fla., in 1564, probably belonging to Saturiwa's confederacy.

Helicopile.—Laudonnière (1567) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., 349, 1869. Helicopile.—Gourgue (1568), ibid., 2d s., II, 280, 1875.

Helikilika. An ancestor of a gens of the Nakomgilisala tribe of Kwakiutl.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887.

Hellett. A Salish tribe on Chimenes r., s. w. Vancouver id., speaking the Cowichan dialect; pop. 28 in 1904.

Hel-alt.—Can. Ind. Aff., 308, 1879. Haltalt.—Ibid., 79, 1878. Hel-alt.—Ibid., 1883, pt. I, 190. Hellal.—Ibid., 1892, 313. Hel-lalt.—Ibid., 1889, 269. Hellett.—Ibid., 1901, pt. II, 164. Qalā'ltq.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Hello (Hē'l-o'). A former Chumashan village on Mooris id., w. of Santa Barbara, Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Helshen ('sandy beach'; lit., 'soft to the foot'). A Squawmish village community on Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.

Helcen.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 475, 1900.

Heluta. A former Cholovone village in San Joaquin co., Cal., near San Joaquin r.—Pinart, Cholovone MS., B. A. E., 1880.

Hematite. An iron ore much used by the native tribes for implements, ornaments, and small objects of problematical use. It is found in many parts of the country and in great abundance in the Iron Mountain district of Missouri and in the Marquette region of Michigan. It occurs as a massive ore, as nodules, and in other forms, distributed through rocks of various classes, and is usually dark in color, showing various shades of gray, brown, and red. The specular varieties are generally rather gray, and have a metallic luster. The red, earthy varieties, when compact, are known as red chalk, and when much disintegrated and pulverulent, as red ochre. They were, and are, much used as paint by the aborigines, and small quantities, either in lumps or as powder, are commonly found in ancient graves, placed there for personal embellishment in the future existence. The highly siliceous varieties are often very hard, heavy, and tough, and make excellent implements. They were used especially in the manufacture of celts, axes, scrapers, etc., and for the rudely shaped hammers and sledges that served in mining work, as in the iron mines at Leslie, Mo. (Holmes). Many of the celts and celt-like implements are quite small, and in some cases probably served as amulets. Grooved axes of this material are of somewhat rare occurrence, but objects of problematical use, such as cones, hemispheres, and plummets, are common, and on account of their high finish, richness of color, and luster, are much prized by collectors. Hematite objects are found in mounds and on dwelling sites in the middle Mississippi valley region, in the Ohio valley, and extending into E. Kentucky and Tennessee to w. North Carolina, and to a limited extent in the S., in the Pueblo country, and on the Pacific coast. A small, well-shaped figure of this material, representing a bird, and neatly inlaid with turquoise and white shell, is among the collections obtained by Pepper from the Pueblo Bonito ruin, New Mexico. Hematite is not always readily distinguishable from limonite (which is generally yellowish or brownish in tint), and from some other forms of iron ore. See Mines and Quarries.

References to hematite objects are widely distributed throughout the literature of American archeology. Among others the following authors may be consulted: Douglass in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., VIII, 1896; Fewkes (1) in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 730, 1898, (2) in 21st Rep. B. A. E., 77, 1903; Fowke in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Holmes in Smithson. Rep. 1903, 1904; Moorehead, Prehist. Impl., 1900; Pepper in Am. Anthropol., VII, 195, 1905. (W. H. H.)

Hembem. * A former Maidu village on the E. side of North fork of American r., about 6 m. S. E. of Colfax, Placer co., Cal.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XVII, pl. xxxviii, 1905.

Hemispheres, Spheres. Small objects, usually of polished stone, the use of which has not been fully determined; they are therefore classed with problematical objects. The more typical forms, found in the mounds, are often of hematite and, like the cones, rarely exceed a few ounces in weight. Hemispheres are comparatively numerous, but spheres referable to this group are rare. Hammerstones and stones used as club-heads (see Clubs, Hammers) are often spherical, but usually they are not well finished, and occasionally large cannonball-like stones are found which can not be properly classed with the smaller polished objects. The base of the hemispheres is flat, rarely slightly hollowed out, and varies from a circle to a decided ellipse, while the vertical section departs considerably from a true semicircle. Typical objects of this group are most plentiful in the middle Ohio valley. It is surmised that they served in playing some game, as talismans or charms, or for some special shamanistic purpose. According to Grinnell (inf'n, 1906) small balls of stone are still used by some Plains tribes in a game. Little girls roll them on the ice in winter, trying to move a small stick resting on the ice in front of the opposing party, perhaps 20 ft distant. If the stick is touched and moved, the side which rolls the ball may roll it again, and a point is counted. If the stick is not moved, the ball is rolled by one of the opposing party who endeavors to move the stick which rests on the ice in front of her opponent. A small stone sphere was used by the Pima of Arizona in a kicked ball game, and numerous small spheres, usually of soft stone, are found in prehistoric ruins in Salt river valley of the same territory.

HEMISPHERE OF HEMPTOWN; WEST VIRGINIA.
(1-3)

Consult Rau in Smithson. Cont., xxii, 1877; Fowke (1) in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896, (2) Archæol. Hist. Ohio, 1902; Hrdlicka in Am. Anthropol., viii, no. 1, 1906; Moorehead, Prehist. Impl. 1900; Cushing in Comptes-rendu Internat. Cong. Am., vii, 178, 1890. (W. H. H.)

Hemptown (translation of the native name, Gatān'lt'iyi). A former Cherokee settlement on a creek of the same name, near the present Morganton, Fannin co., Ga.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 519, 1900.

Henaggi. An Athapascan tribe or band residing, according to Powers (Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 65, 1877), on Smith r., Cal. A treaty was made with them Aug. 17, 1857. It is said they were exceedingly hostile to the neighboring bands to whom they were related, but this hostility was probably only a temporary feud. They are seemingly extinct.

Engnas.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1856, 219, 1857 (probably identical). Hanags.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860. Haynaggi.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 665, 1878. Haynargee.—Gibbs, letter to Hazen, B. A. E., 1856. Hay-narg-ger.—A. W. Hamilton, MS. vocab., B. A. E. Hé-nag-gi.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 65, 1877. Hé-nar-ger.—Hamilton, vocab., op. cit.

Henakyalaso (Hé'nakyalasō). An ancestor of a gens of the Kwakiutl tribe Tlatlasikoala, after whom it was sometimes called.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887.

Hendrick. A Mohawk chief, son of The Wolf, a Mohegan, and a Mohawk woman; often called King Hendrick. With many of his men he participated in the campaign against the French in 1755, and notwithstanding the strong tendency of Braddock's defeat in that year to draw the Indians to the side of the French, Hendrick, at the request of Gen. Johnson, joined the English army, which met 2,000 French under Gen. Dieskau at Lake George, N. Y. At the battle which there took place, Sept. 8, 1755, Hendrick and many of his followers were killed. He was then less than 70 years of age.

Henicohio. Mentioned, in connection with Puaray, apparently as a pueblo of the Tigua in New Mexico in 1598.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., xvi, 115, 1871.

Heniocane. A former tribe in s. Texas, encountered by Fernando del Bosque in 1675 and said to number 178, including 65 warriors. They were probably related to the Coahuiltecan tribes.

Heniocare.—Fernando del Bosque (1675), in Nat. Geog. Mag., xiv, 346, 1903.

Henry, William. See Geletemend.

Hens. Seemingly derived from a New England Indian cognate of Algonkin, Chippewa, and Cree ens, 'a shell,' especially a small shell, with which may be compared the Natick amma (ʔamma) and the Abnaki als (l=ʔ). The early English colonists of New England by prefixing h formed hens, which they applied to the quahaug, quahock, or poquahock, 'a little thick shellfish' (Venus mercenaria), from an interior portion of the shell of which the New England Indians manufactured suckauhock, 'black or purple beads,' commonly called purplewampum. See Wampum. (J. N. B. H.)

Henuti. The extinct Cloud clan of the pueblo of Sia, N. Mex.

Hén-na-ti.—Stevenson in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 19, 1894. Hé'nuti-háno.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 349, 1896 (hano = 'people').

Henya. A Tlingit tribe on the w. coast of Prince of Wales id., Alaska, between Tlevak narrows and Sumner strait; pop. 300 in 1869, 500 in 1881, 262 in 1890, and about the same in 1900. Their chief town is Klawak; other towns are Shakan and Tuxian. The social divisions of the tribe are Ganahadi, Hlkoayedi, Kakos hit tan, Kuhinedi, Shunkukedi, Takwanedi, and Tanedi. (J. R. S.)

Anega.—Mahony (1869) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 68, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 19, 1870. Genuvskoe.—Veniaminoff, Zapiski, ii, pt. 3, 30, 1840. Hanaga.—Kane, Wand. N. A., app., 1859. Hanaga.—11th Census, Alaska, 158, 1890. Hanicas.—Borrowers in H. R. Ex. Doc. 197, 42d Cong., 2d sess., 4, 1872 (probably identical). Henja-kón.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 111, 1885. Henné-gā-kón.—Ibid., 120. Hennegas.—Ibid., 111. Henya qoan.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Hepowwoo. A former Luiseno village in the neighborhood of San Luis Rey mission, s. Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 11, 1860.

Heraldry. Among the tribes of the great plains, and perhaps of other sections, there existed a well-defined system of military and family designation comparable with the heraldic system of Europe. It found its chief expression in the painting and other decoration of the shield and tipi, with the body paint and adornment of the warrior himself, and was guarded by means of religious tabu and other ceremonial regulations. The heraldic tipis, which might number one-tenth of the whole body, usually belonged to prominent families by hereditary descent. The shield belonged to the individual warrior, but several warriors might carry shields of the same origin and pattern at the same time, while so far as known the heraldic tipi had no contemporary duplicate. Both tipi and shield were claimed as the inspiration of a vision, and the design and decoration were held to be in accordance with the instructions imparted to the first maker by the protecting spirit of his dream. The tipi is commonly named from the most notable feature of the painting, as the 'buffalo tipi,' 'star tipi,' etc. The shield was more often known by the name of the originator and maker of the series, but certain more noted series were known as the 'buffalo shield,' 'bird shield,' 'sun shield,' etc., the 'medicine' or protecting power being believed to come from the buffalo, bird, or sun spirits respectively. Shields of the same origin were usually but not necessarily retained in the possession of members of the family of the original maker, and handed down in time to younger members of the family, unless buried with the owner. A certain price must be paid and certain tabus constantly observed by the owner of either shield or tipi. Thus the heir to a certain heraldic tipi in the Kiowa tribe must pay for it a captive taken in war, while those who carried the bird shield were forbidden to approach a dead bird, and were under obligation on killing their first enemy in battle to eat a portion of his heart. Those of the same shield generally used a similar body paint and headdress, pony decorations, and war cry, all having direct reference to the spirit of the original vision, but no such regulation appears to have existed in connection with any tipi. The flag carried on the upper Columbia by the followers of the prophet Smohalla is an instance of the adaptation of Indian symbolism to the white man's usage (Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896).

Among the Haida and some other tribes of the N. W. coast, according to Swanton and other authorities, is found the germ of a similar system. Here, in many cases, the clan totem, or perhaps the personal manito of the individual, has evolved into a crest which persons of the highest rank, i. e. of greatest wealth, are privileged to figure by carving or painting upon their totem poles, houses, or other belongings, tattooing upon their bodies, or painting upon their bodies in the dance, on payment of a sufficient number of "potlatch" gifts to secure recognition as chiefs or leading members of the tribe. The privilege is not hereditary, the successor of the owner, usually his sister's son, being obliged to make the same ceremonial payment to secure the continuance of the privilege. (J. M.)

Hermho (Herm'-ho, 'once'). A Pima village on the N. side of Salt r., 3 m. from Mesa, Maricopa co., s. Ariz.—Russell, Pima MS., B. A. E., 1902.
Ā'mū Ā'kimūlt.—Russell, ibid.

Hero Myths. See Mythology, Religion.

Herring Pond. A former settlement on a reserve established for Christian Indians in 1655 at Herring Pond, Plymouth co., Mass. It is probably identical with Comassakumkanit, mentioned by Bourne in 1674, and the Indians there seem to have been considered a distinct tribe. In 1825 there were but 40 left, and these were of mixed blood. (J. M.)

Heshokta ('ancient town of the cliffs'). A ruined pueblo, formerly inhabited by the Zuñi, on a mesa about 5 m. N. W. of Zuñi pueblo, N. Mex. Cf. Shopakia.
Heshoktakwin.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. A., 291, 1885 (Heshoktakwin, or). Heshokta.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 365, 1901. Hesh-o-ta-thu-al-la.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archaeol., 1, 111, 1891.

Heshota Ayahltona ('ancient buildings above'). The ruins of a group of stone houses on the summit of Taaiyalana, or Seed mtn., commonly called Thunder mtn., about 4 m. S. E. of Zuñi pueblo, N. Mex. This mesa has been a place of refuge for the Zuñi at various periods since they have been known to history, Coronado mentioning it as such, although not by name, in 1540. In 1632, after having killed their first missionary, the Zuñi fled to the heights, remaining there until 1635. The ruined pueblo now to be seen on the summit was built probably about 1680, on the site of the ancient fortifications alluded to by Coronado, as a refuge against Spanish invasion during the Pueblo revolt of that year, when the villages in the valley below—those that remained of the Seven Cities of Cibola—were abandoned. The tribe doubtless occupied this stronghold uninterruptedly for at least 12 years during the Pueblo revolt, being found there by Vargas in 1692. In 1703 the Zuñi again fled to their mesa village, after having killed 4 Spanish soldiers. This time they remained until 1705, when they returned to the valley and began to build the present Zuñi pueblo on a part of the site of Halona. The ruins of Heshota Ayahltona have been mistakenly regarded by some writers as the ancient Cibola, hence are often noted on maps as Old Zuñi. See Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 89, 1891; Bandelier (1) in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 134, 1890; IV, 335, 1892, (2) Doc. Hist. Zuñi, in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archæol., III, 1892; Cushing, Zuñi Creation Myths, in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Winship, Coronado Exped., in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896.

(F. W. H.)

He-sho-ta A'-yathl-to-na.—Cushing, inf'n, 1891. Mesa de Galisteo.—Vargas (1692) quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 200, 1889 (referring to the mesa). Old Zuñi.—Wallace, Land of Pueblos, 238, 1888 (misprint). Old Zuñi.—Common map form. Taa-ai-yal-a-na-wan.—Cushing, inf'n, 1891 (lit. 'abiding place above on mountain-of-all-seed'). Taaiyahltona Hluelawa.—Cushing in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 429, 1896 (lit. 'towns-all-above of the seed-all'). Toillenny.—Donaldson, Mogui Pueblo Inds., 127, 1893 (refers to the mesa). To-yo-a-lana.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, pt. 1, 134, 1890. Zuñi Vieja.—Domenech, Deserts, I, 211, 1860.

Heshota Hluptsina (Heshota-hlup-tsina, 'ancient village of the yellow rocks'). A prehistoric ruined stone pueblo of the Zuñi, situated between the "gateway" and the summer village of Pescado, 7 m. E. of Zuñi pueblo, N. Mex. (F. W. H.) Heshota Hluctsina.—Bandelier in Rev. d'Ethnog., 200, 1886 (misprint). Hesh-o-ta-sop-si-na.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archæol., I, map, 1891. Heshota Hluc-tzinan.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 333, 1892. Heshotathluptsina.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. A., 291, 1885. Village of the Yellow Rocks.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 104, 1901.

Heshota Imkoskwin ('ancient town surrounded by mountains'). A ruined pueblo near Tawyakwin, or Nutria, anciently occupied by the northern clans of the Zuñi.—Cushing, inf'n, 1891.

He-sho-ta Im'-k'os-kwi-a.—Cushing, inf'n, 1891 (another form). Heshota Im-quosh-kuin.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 340, 1892. Heshota Im-quosh-kuin.—Bandelier in Rev. d'Ethnog., 202, 1886. Hesh-o-ta-inkos-qua.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archæol., I, 100, 1891. Heshota Mimkuosh-kuin.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 340, 1892. Heshota Mimquoshk-kuin.—Ibid., 329.

Heshota Uhla (Heshota-úhla, 'ancient town of the embrasure'). A prehistoric ruined stone pueblo of the elliptical type, supposed to be of Zuñi origin; situated at the base of a mesa on Zuñi r., about 5 m. W. of the Zuñi summer village of Ojo Pescado, or Heshotatsina, N. Mex. So named, according to Cushing, because it was embraced by hills, and by the turn of a northern trail.

(F. W. H.)

Heshota Uthia.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 22, 1892 (misprint). Hesho-ta U-thia.—Ibid., 329. Heshotau'thla.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. A., 291, 1885.

Heshque. The principal village of the Hesquiat (q. v.), on Hesquiat harbor, Vancouver id.—Can. Ind. Aff., 264, 1902.

Hespatingh. A village in 1657, probably belonging to the Unami Delawares, and apparently in N. New Jersey (Deed of 1657 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., XIV, 393, 1883). A clue to the locality is given by Nelson (Inds. N. J., 124, 1894), who records Espatingh, or Ispatingh, as the name of a hill back of Bergen, or about Union Hill, in 1650.

Hesquiat. A Nootka tribe on Hesquiat harbor and the coast to the westward, Vancouver id.; pop. 162 in 1901, 150 in 1904. Their principal village is Heshque. Esquiates.—Jewitt, Narr., 37, 1849. He'ckwiath.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 31, 1890. Hesh-que-aht.—Can. Ind. Aff., 188, 1883. Hesquiat.—Ibid., 131, 1879. Hesquiat.—Ibid., pt. 2, 158, 1901. Hishquayaht.—Sproat, Sav. Life, 308, 1868. Hosh-que-aht.—Can. Ind. Aff., 186, 1884.

Heuchi. A Yokuts tribe formerly living in the plains on or S. of Fresno r., N. central Cal., and on Fresno reserve in 1861, when they numbered 18.

Hawitches.—Barbour et al. (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 61, 1853. Haw-on-chee.—Ind. Com'r Jour. (1851), ibid., 61. Heuchi.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906 (correct form). Hou-etchus.—Johnston (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 61, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 22, 1852. How-ach-ees.—Barbour (1852), op. cit., 252. How-a-chez.—Lewis in Ind. Aff. Rep., 399, 1857. Howchees.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 219, 1861. How-ech-ee.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 782, 1899. How-ech-es.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 74, 1853.

Heudao (Xe-uda'o, 'the village that fishes toward the south'). A Haida town of the Kaidju-kegawai on the E. side of Gull pt., Prevost id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Hevhaitanio (Hévhai'ti'nio, 'hair men', 'fur men'; sing., Hévhai'tin). A principal division of the Cheyenne, q. v.

Hairy-Men's band.—G. A. Dorsey in Field Columb. Mus. Pub. no. 99, 13, 1905 (also Hairy-Men band). Hév'a'tán u.—Grinnell, Social Org. Cheyennes, 136, 1905 (trans. 'hairy men'). Hév-hai-ta-ni-o.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 290, 1862 ('hairy people'). Hévhai'ta'ni.—Mooney, inf'n, 1905 (see p. 254 of this Handbook). Héwa-ta'niuw.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1025, 1896.

Héviquipahis (Hévics-ni'páhís, 'aortas closed, by burning'; sing., Hévics-ni'pa). A principal division of the Cheyenne, q. v. Aorta band.—G. A. Dorsey in Field Columb. Mus. Pub. no. 99, 13, 1905. Evi'sts-un'i'páhís.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1025, 1896 (it does not mean 'smoky lodges', as stated in the Clark MS.). Hévics-ni'kpáhís.—Mooney, inf'n, 1905 (see p. 254 of this Handbook). I vist's tsi nih'páh.—Grinnell, Social Org. Cheyennes, 136, 1905 (trans. 'small wind-pipes'). We hee skeu (chien).—Clark (1804) in Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, I, 190, 1904.

Hewut. The village of the Umpqua on upper Umpqua r., Oreg.

Hay-woot.—Milhau, Umpqua Val. MS. vocab., B. A. E. He'-wut.—Milhau, Hewut MS. vocab., B. A. E.

Hia ('band of Cree'). A former Arikara band under chief Cherenakuta, or Yellow Wolf.

Hi'-a.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol., 357, 1862.

Hiabu. A tribe met by De Leon, in company with the Hapes, Jumeses (Jumano), and Mescales, near the Rio Grande, not far from the present Earedo, Tex., in 1696. It was probably a Coahuiltecan tribe.

Xiabu.—De Leon (1696) in Texas Hist. Ass. Quar., VIII, 205, 1905.

Hiamonee. A former Seminole village 5 m. from the Georgia boundary, on the E. bank of Oklokee r., probably on the present L. Lamony, Leon co., Fla.

Hiamonee.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 74 (1823), 19th Cong., 1st sess., 27, 1826.

Hianagouy. Mentioned by Joutel (Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878) as a tribe living probably in E. Texas in 1687, and hostile to the Kadohadacho.

Hiantatsi. Mentioned by Joutel (Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878) as a tribe living probably in E. Texas in 1687, and hostile to the Kadohadacho.

Hiaqua. Shell money and ornaments, composed of strings of dentalia, used by Indians of the N. Pacific coast. This word, which has been variously spelled haiqua, hiouqua, hiqua, hykwa, tokwa, ioqua, etc., and even Iroquois, is derived from the name for dentalium in the Chinook jargon. (A. F. C.)

Hiatam (Hi'-a-tam, 'sea-sand place,' from Hiakatik). A Pima village N. of Maricopa station on the S. P. R. R., S. Ariz.—Russell, Pima MS., B. A. E., 18, 1902.

Hiawatha (Haion'hwatha', 'he makes rivers'). A name and a title of a chieftainship hereditary in the Tortoise clan of the Mohawk tribe; it is the second on the roll of federal chieftainships of the Iroquois confederation. The first known person to bear the name was a noted reformer, statesman, legislator, and magician, justly celebrated as one of the founders of the League of the Iroquois, the Confederation of Five Nations. Tradition makes him a prophet also. He probably flourished about 1570, A. D., and was the disciple and active coadjutor of Dekanawida. These two sought to bring about reforms which had for their object the ending of all strife, murder, and war, and the promotion of universal peace and well-being. Of these one was the regulation to abolish the wasting evils of intratribal blood-feud by fixing a more or less arbitrary price—10 strings of wampum, a cubit in length—as the value of a human life. It was decreed that the murderer or his kin or family must offer to pay the bereaved family not only for the dead person, but also for the life of the murderer who by his sinister act had forfeited his life to them, and that therefore 20 strings of wampum should be the legal tender to the bereaved family for the settlement of the homicide of a co-tribesman. By birth Hiawatha was probably a Mohawk, but he began the work of reform among the Onondaga, where he encountered bitter opposition from one of their most crafty and remorseless tyrants, Wathatatario (Atotario). After three fruitless attempts to unfold his scheme of reform in council, being thwarted by the craft of his formidable antagonist (who for revenge destroyed his opponent's daughters), Hiawatha left the Onondaga and, exiling himself, sought the aid of the Mohawk and other tribes. But, meeting with little success among the former, he continued his mission to the Oneida, who willingly assented to his plans on condition that the Mohawk should do the same. The Mohawk, the Cayuga, and the Oneida finally formed a tentative union for the purpose of persuading the Onondaga to adopt the plan of confederation, and the latter accepted it on condition that the Seneca should also be included. A portion of the Seneca finally joined the confederation, whereon the Onondaga, through Wathatatario, accepted the proposed union. As the Onondaga chieftain was regarded as a great sorcerer, it was inferred that in this matter he had been overcome by superior magic power exercised by Hiawatha and Dekanawida, for they had brought Wathatatario under the dominion of law and convention for the common welfare. Hence in time the character of Hiawatha became enveloped in mystery, and he was reputed to have done things which properly belong to some of the chief gods of the Iroquois. In this mystified form he became the central figure of a cycle of interrelated legends. Longfellow has made the name of Hiawatha everywhere familiar, but not so the character of the great reformer. Schoolcraft, in his Algic Researches, embodied a large number of legends relating to Chippewa gods and demigods, and, while compiling his Notes on the Iroquois, Gen. Clark communicated to him this cycle of mythic legends misapplied to Hiawatha. Charmed with the poetic setting of these tales, Schoolcraft confused Hiawatha with Manabozho, a Chippewa deity, and it is to these two collections of mythic and legendary lore that the English language owes the charming poem of Longfellow, in which there is not a single fact or fiction relating to the great Iroquoian reformer and statesman. For further published information see Hale (1) Iroquois Book of Rites, (2) A Lawgiver of the Stone Age; Hewitt in Am. Anthropol., Apr. 1892. (J. N. B. H.)

Hicaranaou. An ancient Timuquanan village in N. Florida.—De Bry, Brev. Nar., II, map, 1591.

Hiccora, Hiccory. See Hickory.

Hichakhshepara ('eagle'). A subgens of the Waninkikikarachada, the Bird gens of the Winnebago.

Hi-tea-qee-pa-ra.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 240, 1897.

Hichuco. A subdivision or settlement of the Tehueco, probably inhabiting the lower Rio Fuerte or the Fuerte-Mayo divide, in N. W. Sinaloa, Mex.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 58, 1864.

Hickerau. A small Santee village on a branch of Santee r., S. C., in 1701.

Black house.—Lawson (1714), Hist. Carolina, 45, 1860 (so called by traders). Hickerau.—Ibid.

Hickory. A walnut tree belonging to any one of several species of the genus Hicoria. The word is spelled by early writers in a great variety of ways: po-hickery (Farrar, 1653), pekickery (Shrigley, 1669), peckikery, pokickery, hickorie, hiccora, hiccory, hickory (1682), etc. Capt. John Smith (Hist. Va., II, 26, 1624) describes pawcohiccora, a food of the Algonquian Indians of Virginia, as a preparation of pounded walnut kernels with water. From the cluster words pawcohiccora, etc., transferred by the whites from the food to the tree, has been derived hickory. Derivative words and terms are: Hickory-borer (Cyrtene picta), hickory-elm (Ulmus racemosa), hickory-eucalyptus (Eucalyptus punctata), hickory-girdler (Oncideres cingulatus), hickory-head (the ruddy duck), hickory nut (the nut of the hickory, specifically of Hicoria ovata or H. laciniata), hickory-oak (Quercus chrysolepis), hickory-pine (Pinus balfouriana and P. pungens), hickory pole (a Democratic party emblem), hickory poplar (Liriodendron tulipifera), hickory-shad (the gizzard-shad), hickory shirt (a coarse cotton shirt). As an adjective the word hickory took on the sense of firm, unyielding, stubborn, as applied to religious sectarians, members of a political party, etc. Gen. Andrew Jackson was called "Old Hickory." In Waterloo co., Ontario, according to W. J. Wintemberg, the German residents call a Pennsylvania German a Hickory, possibly in reference to their fellows in Pennsylvania having voted the Jackson ticket. (A. F. C.)

Hickory Indians. A small band formerly occupying a village near Lancaster, Pa. (Day, Penn., 397, 1843). Probably a part of the Delawares.

Hickory Log. A former Cherokee settlement on Etowah r., a short distance above Canton, Cherokee co., Ga.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 545, 1900. Wane'-asūn'tlūnyī.—Mooney, ibid. ('hickory foot-log place': native name).

Hickorytown. A former Munsee and Delaware village, probably about East Hickory or West Hickory, Forest co., Pa. On account of the hostility of the western tribes the Indians here removed in 1791 to the Seneca and were by them settled near Cattaraugus, N. Y. (J. M.)

Hickory town.—Procter (1791) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 164, 1832. Munsee settlement.—Ibid., 153.

Hietoba. One of the 5 divisions of the Dakota recorded by Pachot (Margry, Déc., VI, 518, 1886) about 1722. Unidentified.

Sciours de la chasse.—Ibid.

Hidatsa. A Siouan tribe living, since first known to the whites, in the vicinity of the junction of Knife r. with the Missouri, North Dakota, in intimate connection with the Mandan and Arikara. Their language is closely akin to that of the Crows, with whom they claim to have been united until some time before the historic period, when the two separated in consequence of a quarrel over the division of some game, the Crows then drawing off farther to the w.

The name Hidatsa, by which they now call themselves, has been said, with doubtful authority, to mean 'willows,' and is stated by Matthews to have been originally the name only of a principal village of the tribe in their old home on Knife r. (see Elahsa). It probably came to be used as the tribe name, after the smallpox epidemic of 1837, from the consolidation of the survivors of the other two villages with those of Hidatsa. By the Mandan they are known as Minitari, signifying 'they crossed the water,' traditionally said to refer to their having crossed Missouri r. from the E. The Sioux call them Hewaktokto, said to mean 'dwellers on a ridge,' but more probably signifying 'spreading tipis,' or 'tipis in a row,' the name by which they are known to the Cheyenne and Arapaho. The sign-gesture in each case would be nearly the same (Mooney). The Crows call them Amashi, 'earth lodges,' and they are now officially known as Gros Ventres (q. v.), a name applied also to the Apsina, a detached tribe of the Arapaho.

HIDATSA (CHESHAKHADAKHĪ, LEAN WOLF)

According to their own tradition the Hidatsa came from the neighborhood of a lake N. E. of their later home, and identified by some of their traditionists with Mini-wakan or Devils lake, N. Dak. They had here the circular earth-covered log house, in use also by the Mandan, Arikara, and other tribes living close along the upper Missouri, in addition to the skin tipi occupied when on the hunt. Removing from there, perhaps in consequence of attacks by the Sioux, they moved S. W. and allied themselves with the Mandan, who then lived on the W. side of the Missouri, about the mouth of Heart r. The three tribes, Hidatsa, Mandan, and Arikara were all living in this vicinity about 1765. From the Mandan the Hidatsa learned agriculture. Some time before 1796 these two tribes moved up the river to the vicinity of Knife r., where they were found by Lewis and Clark in 1804, the Hidatsa being then in three villages immediately on Knife r., while the Mandan, in two villages, were a few miles lower down, on the Missouri. The largest of the three villages of the tribe was called Hidatsa and was on the N. bank of Knife r. The other two, Amatihah and Amahami, or Mahaha, were on the S. side. The last named was occupied by the Amahami (Ahnahaway of Lewis and Clark), formerly a distinct but closely related tribe. In consequence of the inroads of the Sioux they had been so far reduced that they had been compelled to unite with the Hidatsa, and have long since been completely absorbed. The three villages together had a population of about 600 warriors, equivalent to about 2,100 souls. Of these the Amahami counted about 50 warriors. There was no change in the location of the villages until after the terrible smallpox epidemic of 1837, which so greatly reduced the Indian population of the upper Missouri, and in consequence of which the survivors of the three villages consolidated into one. In 1845 they, and about the same time the remnant of the Mandan also, moved up the river and established themselves in a new village (see Hidatsati) close to the trading post of Ft Berthold, on the N. bank of the Missouri and some distance below the entrance of the Little Missouri, in North Dakota. In 1862 the Arikara moved up to the same location, the three tribes now occupying a reservation of 884,780 acres on the N. E. side of the Missouri, including the site of the village. In 1905 the Hidatsa (Gros Ventres) were officially reported to number only 471.

Early writers describe the Hidatsa as somewhat superior intellectually and physically to their neighbors, although according to Matthews this is not so evident in later days. In home life, religious beliefs and customs, house building, agriculture, the use of the skin boat, and general arts, they closely resembled the Mandan with whom they were associated. Their great ceremony was the Sun dance, called by them Da-lipi-ke, which was accompanied with various forms of torture. Their warriors were organized into various military societies, as is the case with the Plains tribes generally.

Morgan (Anc. Soc., 159, 1877) gives a list of 7 Hidatsa "gentes," which were probably really original village names, or possibly society names, viz: Mit-che-ro-ka ('knife'), Min-ne-pa-ta ('water'), Bä-ho-liä-ta ('lodge'), Seech-ka-be-ruh-pä-ka ('prairie chicken'), E-tish-sho'-ka ('hill people'), Ah-nah-ha-nä'-me-te (an unknown animal), E-ku'-pä-be-ka ('bonnet'). The list of "bands" given by Culbertson (Smithson. Rep. 1850, 143, 1851) is really a list of military societies, viz: Fox, Foolish Dog, Old Dog, Bull, and Black-tailed Deers.

Consult Clark, Ind. Sign Lang., 1885; Cones, Exped. Lewis and Clark, 1893; Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, I-VIII, 1904-05; Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 1897; Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Vol. Mo., 1867; Matthews, Ethnog. and Philol. Hidatsa, 1877; Maximilian, Trav., 1843; McGee in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 1897. (J. M.)

A-gutch-a-ninne.—Tanner, Narr., 58, 1830. A-gutch-a-ninne-wug.—Ibid. ('the settled people'; Chippewa name). A-me-she'.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol., 402, 1862 ('people who live in earth houses'; Crow name). Ar-me-shay.—Anon. MS. Crow vocab., B. A. E. Belantse-etcia.—U. S. Ind. Treaties, 354, 1826. Belautse-etcia.—Cass (1834) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 609, 1853. E-nät'-zä.—Morgan in N. A. Rev., 47, Jan. 1870 (national name; cf. Ehartsar). Gi-auch-in-e-wug.—Warren in Minn. Hist. Coll., v, 178, 1885 ('men of the olden time'; Chippewa name). Gi-auch-in-ne-wug.—Ibid., 261. Grosventres.—For various forms of this name applied to the Hidatsa, see Gros Ventres. Hedatse.—Hamilton in Trans. Nebr. Hist. Soc., I, 75, 1885. He-wa'-kto-ka.—Cook, Yankton, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 181, 1882. Hewaktokto.—Matthews, Ethnog. and Philol., 36, 1877 (Dakota name). He-war-tuk-tay.—Corliss, Lacotah MS. vocab., B. A. E., 106, 1874. Hidatsa.—Matthews, Ethnog. and Philol., 3, 1877 (own name). Hidatza.—Baxter in Harper's Mag., June, 1882. Hidhatza.—Dorsey in Am. Nat., 829, 1882. Manetores.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 75, 1849. Maniataris.—Du Lac, Voy. dans le N., 225, 1805. Maniataris.—Maximilian, Trav., vii, 1843. Mannatures.—Cumming in H. R. Ex. Doc. 65, 34th Cong., 1st sess., 8, 1856. Menetare.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 26, 1806. Me-ne-ta-rees.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1805), I, 249, 1904. Menetares.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 25, 1806. Me ne tar res.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1805), I, 248, 1904 (also Me ne tar res). Metaharta.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, 121, 1814. Miditadi.—Matthews, Ethnog. and Philol., 193, 1887. Minetari.—Meigs in Smithson. Rep. 1867, 414, 1868. Minetaree.—Clark and Cass in H. R. Ex. Doc. 117, 20th Cong., 2d sess., 98, 1829. Minatarees.—Bradbury, Trav., 109, 1817. Minatarees.—Brown, West. Gaz., 215, 1817. Minatories.—Dougherty in H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 16, 1835. Minetaire.—Drake, Bk. Inds., vi, 1848. Minetarees.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, 163, 1817. Minetares.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1805), I, 324, 1904. Mine- tari.—Priehard, Phys. Hist. Man., v, 409, 1847. Minitarires.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 125, 1836. Minnetarre.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, map, 1814. Minnetarries.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1805), I, 283, 1904. Minitare.—Latham in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 160, 1848. Minitarees.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1804), I, 216, 1904. Minitarees.—Ibid., 10. Minitari.—Brownell, Ind. Races N. Am., 466, 1853 (Mandan name). Minitarres.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, I, 13, 1904. Minnetahrees.—Tanner, Narr., 316, 1830. Minnetahse.—Ibid., 325 (misprint). Min-né-tá-ré.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., II, Ixx, 1823. Minnetarees.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, 115, 1814. Minnetarees Metaharta.—Ibid., 131. Minnetarees of the Willows.—Ibid. Minnetares of the Knife R..—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1805), I, 283, 1904. Minnetaroes.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, 164, 1817. Minnetarres.—Warren, Nebr. and Ariz., 50, 1875. Minitarees.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 420, 1862. Minitarees Metaharta.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, 131, 1814. Minitarees of the Willows.—Ibid. Minitariis.—Am. Nat., 829, 1882. Minitaree.—Trans. Anthropol. Soc. Wash., III, 65, 1885. Moennitarris.—Maximilian, Trav., 337, 1843. Quehatsa.—Brown, West. Gaz., 213, 1817. Stationary Minnetares.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 125, 1836 (as distinguished from "Minitarees of Fort de Prairie," i.e., the Atsina). Wa-nuk'-e-ye'-na.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 326, 1862 ('lodges planted together'; Arapaho name). Wetitsaan.—Matthews, Ethnogr. and Philol. Hidatsa, 36, 1877 (Arikara name). Winetaries.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1804), I, 230, 1904. Wi-tets'-han.—Hayden, op. cit., 357 ('well-dressed people'; Arikara name).

Hidatsati (from Hidatsa and ati: 'dwelling of the Hidatsa Indians'). The Hidatsa village formerly at Ft. Berthold, N. Dak. In 1872 it contained 71 Arikara and 104 Hidatsa and Mandan dwellings. See Elahsa.

Berthold Indian Village.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. cxviii, 1899. Hi dá tsa ti.—Matthews, Ethnogr. and Philol. Hidatsa, 211, 1877.

Hidlis Hadjo. See Hillis Hadjo.

Highahwixon. One of several tribes displaced by the whites in 1651 from their homes in Charles and St. Mary cos., Md., and given a tract at the head of the Wicomico. They were probably Conoy.—Bozman, Maryland, II, 421, 1837.

High Tower Forks. A former Cherokee settlement mentioned in a document of 1799 (Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 144, 1887). It was probably one of the places called Etowah (I'tawá'), q. v.

Higos (Indios de los Higos, Span.: 'Fig Indians'). A tribe of s. Texas, so named by Cabeza de Vaca in 1528 (Smith trans., 84, 1851) from their custom of subsisting on the prickly pear, or tuna, in its season. Cabeza de Vaca states that they counted the seasons by the ripening of the fruits, the "dying" or (according to Smith) the biting of the fish, and by the appearance of certain constellations. Nothing is known of their ethnic relations. (A. C. F.)

Higitguk. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Hihagee. An unidentified Lower Creek town mentioned in a census list of 1833.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854.

Hihakanhanhanwin ('women the skin of whose teeth dangles'). A band of the Brulé Teton Sioux.

Hi-ha kanhanhan win.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897. Hi-ha kan'ha'ha' win.—Ibid.

Hihames. A former tribe of Coahuila, N. E. Mexico, which was gathered into the mission of El Santo Nombre de Jesus Peyotes when it was refounded in 1698. This tribe probably belonged to the Coahuiltecán family.

Gijames.—Morfi (1777) quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 611, 1886. Hijames.—Revillagigedo (1793), ibid. Xijames.—Ibid.

Hilakwitiyus (Hil-á-kwi-ti-yús'). A former Siuslaw village on or near Siuslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Hilksuk. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Hillabi (pron. hi'-la-pi). A former Upper Creek town near the present Ashland, Clay co., Ala., in the "central district" between Coosa and Tallapoosa rs., on Koufadi cr., a branch of Hillabee cr. Most of the Hillabi people had settled before 1799 in the 4 villages called Hlanudshiapala, Anatchapko, Istudshilaika, and Uktahasasi. In the vicinity of Hillabi town its inhabitants, with other "Red Sticks," or hostiles, were vanquished by Jackson's army, Nov. 18, 1813, when 316 of them were killed or captured and their town devastated. (A. S. G.)

Halibee.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. IV, 54, 1848. Hallebac.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776 (on w. bank of Loucushatchee [Tallapoosa] r.). Hallibeas.—Drake, Ind. Chron., 198, 1836. Hi'-la-pi.—Gatschet, Creek. Migr. Leg., I, 131, 1884 (proper pronunciation). Hillaba.—Bartram, Travels, 462, 1791 (on a branch of Coosa r.). Hillabeas.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Hillabys.—Woodward, Reminiscences, 96, 1859. Hill-au-bee.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 43, 1848. Hillebese.—Cornell (1793) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 385, 1832.

Hillabi. A town of the Creek Nation, s. w. of Eufaula, between North fork and Canadian r., Ind. T.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888.

Hilabi.—Gatschet, ibid.

Hillis Hadjo. (hilis 'medicine', hadsho 'crazy', an official at the busk, q. v.). A noted Seminole leader in the early part of the 19th century, usually known among the whites as Francis the Prophet, and whose name is also recorded as Hidlis Hadjo, Hillishago, Hillishager, etc. He took an active part in the Seminole war, and is accused of having been one of the chief instigators of the second uprising. He seems to have come into public notice as early as 1814, as on Apr. 18 of that year Gen. Jackson wrote from his camp at the junction of Coosa and Tallapoosa rs., Ala., that "Hillishagee, their [the Seminole's] great prophet, has absconded." Led by some abandoned English traders to believe that the treaty of Ghent in 1814 provided for the restoration of the Seminole country, and in the hope of obtaining aid for his tribe against the Americans, he went to England, where he received much attention. An English journal thus mentions his arrival: "The sound of trumpets announced the approach of the patriot Francis, who fought so gloriously in our cause in America during the late war. Being dressed in a most splendid suit of red and gold, and wearing a tomahawk set with gold, gave him a highly imposing appearance." His mission led to no practical result. Near the close of 1817 an American named McKrimmon, who had been captured by a Seminole party, was taken to Mikasuki, where dwelt Hillis Hadjo, who ordered him to be burned to death, but at the last moment his life was saved by the entreaties of Milly (q. v.), the chief's daughter, who, when her father wavered, showed her determination to perish with him. Francis shortly thereafter fell into the hands of the Americans and was hanged. His wife and several daughters afterward surrendered to the Americans at St Marks, Fla., where Milly received much attention from the whites, but refused McKrimmon's offer of marriage until assured that it was not because of his obligation to her for saving his life. (C. T.)

Hiluys. An unidentified tribe, said to have lived on Laredo channel, Brit. Col., about lat. 52° 30' (Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 316, 1868). This is in the country of the Kittizoo.

Himatanohis (Himátanólüs, 'bowstring men'). A warrior society of the Cheyenne, q. v. (J. M.)

Bow-String (Society).—Dorsey in Field Columb. Mus. Pub., no. 99, 15, 1905. Inverted (Society).—Ibid.

Himoioyoqis (H'woiyóqis, a word of doubtful meaning). A warrior society of the Cheyenne (q. v.); also sometimes known as Óómi-nū'tqiu, 'Coyote warriors.' (J. M.)

Coyote (Society).—Dorsey in Field Columb. Mus. Pub., no. 99, 15, 1905.

Hinama (H'namá, referring to the head of a variety of fish). A former Maricopa village whose people now live on the s. bank of Salt r., e. of the Mormon settlement of Lehi, Maricopa co., s. Ariz.—Russell, Pima MS., B. A. E., 16, 1902.

Hinanashiu (Hinanū'shiu, 'golden eagle'). A gens of the Kineuwidishianun or Eagle phratry of the Menominee.—Hoffman in 14th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 1, 42, 1896.

Hinauhan's Village. A summer camp of a Stikine chief on Stikine r., Alaska. In 1880, 31 people were there.—Petroff in Tenth Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

Hinhanshunwapa (toward the owl feather'). A band of the Brulé Teton Sioux.

H'ha-cū-wapa.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897. H'haq-sun-wapa.—Ibid.

Hiocaia. A former village, governed by a female chieftain, situated 12 leagues

n. of Charlefort, the French fort on St Johns r., Fla., in the 16th century.

Hiocaia.—Laudonnière (1564) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., 286, 1869. Hiouacara.—De Bry, Brev. Narr., II, map, 1591.

Hiouqua. See Hiaqua.

Hios. A branch of the Nevome who lived 8 leagues e. of the pueblo of Tepahue, in Sonora, Mexico (Orozco y Berra, Geog., 58, 351, 1864). The name doubtless properly belongs to their village.

Hipinimtech (hipi 'prairie', nimtech 'road', 'portage'). A former Chitimacha village on the w. side of Grand lake, at Fausse Pointe, near Bayou Gosselin, La. Hipinimtech námu.—Gatschet in Trans. Anthropol. Soc. Wash., II, 152, 1883 (námu = 'village').

Hiqua. See Hiaqua.

Hirrihigua. A province and town, presumably Timuquanan, on the w. coast of Florida, on or near Tampa bay, where De Soto landed in May, 1539. Possibly the same as Ucita.

Harriga.—Shipp, De Soto and Fla., 257, 1881. Hirrigua.—Garcilasso de la Vega, Hist. Fla., 30, 1723. Hirriga.—Shipp, op. cit., 683.

Hisada ('legs stretched out stiff', referring to a dead quadruped). A Ponca gens on the Chinzhu side of the camp circle.

Hisada.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 228, 1897. Thunder people.—Ibid.

Hishkowits (Hishkow'its, 'porcupine', known to the whites as Harvey White-shield). A Southern Cheyenne interpreter, born in w. Oklahoma in 1867; eldest son of the chief White-shield (see Wopovats). After 5 years' attendance at the agency schools he entered Carlisle School, Pa., in 1881, afterward attending other schools at Ft Wayne, Hanover (Ind.), and Lawrence (Kan.). In 1893 he became assistant teacher in the Menonite mission school among the Cheyenne at Cantonment, Okla., which position he held for 4 years. He still serves as interpreter for the mission and has been chief assistant of the Rev. Rudolph Petter, missionary in charge, in the preparation of a number of translations and a manuscript dictionary of the Cheyenne language. (J. M.)

Hisiometanio (Hisiometä'nio, 'ridge men'; sing., Hisiometä'n). A principal division of the Cheyenne, q. v.

Hisiometä'nio.—Mooney, inf'n, 1905 (see p. 255 of this Handbook). Hissio mé tán i u.—Grinnell, Social Org. Cheyennes, 136, 1905. I'sium-itä' niuw'.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1025, 1896.

Histapenumanke. A Mandan band, the first, according to their mythology, to come above ground from the subterranean lake.

E-sta-pa'.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 158, 1877 ('those with the tattooed faces'). Flat-head.—Ibid. Hista pe' nu-man' ke.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 241, 1897. Histoppa.—Maximilian, Trav., 366, 1843.

Hitchapuksassi. A former Seminole town about 20 m. from the head of Tampa bay, in what is now Hillsboro co., Fla.

Hechapususe.—Bell in Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 307, 1822. Helch-puck[sassy].—H. R. Ex. Doc. 74 (1823), 19th Cong., 1st sess., 23, 1826 (the last two syllables of this name are joined to the next town name, -chicu-chaly.) Hich-a-pue-susse.—Bell, op. cit. Hichipuckassa.—Taylor, War map, 1839.

Hitchiti (Creek: ahitchita, 'to look up-stream'). A Muskogean tribe formerly residing chiefly in a town of the same name on the E. bank of Chattahoochee r., 4 m. below Chiaha, and possessing a narrow strip of good land bordering on the river, in w. Georgia. When Hawkins visited them in 1799 they had spread out into two branch settlements—one, the Hitchitudshi, or Little Hitchiti, on both sides of Flint r. below the junction of Kinchafoonee cr., which passes through a country named after it; the other, Tutalo, on a branch of Kinchafoonee cr., 20 m. w. of Hitchitudshi. The tribe is not often mentioned in history, and appears for the first time in 1733, when two of its delegates, with the Lower Creek chiefs, met Gov. Oglethorpe at Savannah. The language appears to have extended beyond the limits of the tribe as here defined, as it was spoken not only in the towns on the Chattahoochee, as Chiaha, Chiahudshi, Hitchiti, Oconee, Sawkli, Sawkliudshi, and Apalachicola, and in those on Flint r., but by the Mikasuki, and, as traceable by the local names, over considerable portions of Georgia and Florida. The Seminole are also said to have been a half Creek and half Hitchiti speaking people, although their language is now almost identical with Creek; and it is supposed that the Yamasi likewise spoke the Hitchiti language. This language, like the Creek, has an archaic form called "woman's talk," or female language. The Hitchiti were absorbed into and became an integral part of the Creek Nation, though preserving to a large extent their own language and peculiar customs.

(A. S. G.)

Achilia.—Jefferys, French Dom. Am., I, 134, map, 1761 (incorrectly located; false orthography). At-pasha-shliha.—Gatschet, Koasati MS., B. A. E. (Koasati name: 'mean people'). Echeetes.—Carver, Travels, map, 1778. Echeles.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, 7, 1776 (town on Apalachicola r., Ga.). Echeta.—Bartram, Trav., 462, 1791. Echetas.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. IV, 29, 1848. Echete.—Latré, map, U. S., 1784 (1, on Chattahoochee; 2, on Altamaha). Echetes.—Jefferys, French Dom. Am., I, 134, map 1761 (two towns, incorrectly located). Echeti.—Mandrillon, Spectateur Américain, map, 1785. Echetii.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., II, 60, 1787 (on Echesli r., Ga.). Echitis.—Ibid. (on Apalachicola r.). Echitos.—Pénier in Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 311, 1822. Etchitas.—Doc. of 1747 in McCall, Hist. Ga., I, 367, 1811. Etchita.—Jones, Hist. Ga., I, 134, 1873. Euchitaws.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 9, 1888. Hatchita.—Robin, Voy., I, map, 1807. Hichetas.—Woodward, Reminiscences, 25, 38, 1859. Hilchittes.—Stevens, Hist. Ga., 51, 1847. Hitchatees.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Hitchetaws.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1779), 69, 1837. Hit-che-tee.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 64, 1848. Hitchies.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 239, 1851. Hitchittes.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. VIII, 1848. Hitch-ity.—Duval (1894) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 49, 31st Cong., 1st sess., 144, 1850. Ichiti.—Rafinesque, introd. Marshall, Ky., I, 24, 1824. Kitaheeta.—Barnard (1792) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 309, 1832 (misprint).

Hitchiti. A town of the Creek Nation, Ind. Ter., on Deep fork of Canadian r., about midway between Eufaula and Ocmulgee.

Hitchita.—P. O. Guide, 367, 1904. Hitchiti.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888.

Hitchitipusy. A former village, probably Seminole, a few miles S. E. of Ft. Alabama, and the same distance N. E. of Ft. Brooke, both of which forts were on Hillsboro r., Fla.—H. R. Doc. 78, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 768-9, map, 1838.

Hitchitudshi. A branch settlement of Hitchiti on Flint r., Ga., below its junction with Kinchafoonee cr.

Hitchatoche.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ga. map, 1900. Hit-che-too-che.—Hawkins (1779), Sketch, 65, 1848. Hitchitudshi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 77, 131, 1884. Little Hit-che-tee.—Hawkins, op. cit. Little Hitchiti.—Gatschet, op. cit.

Hitchowon. A former Chumashan village on the harbor of Santa Cruz id., off the coast of California.

Hits-too'-won.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Hithinsuwit. A former Yaquina village on the S. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.

Hi'-jain-su'-wit.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Hittoya ('westerners'.—Kroeber). A division of the Miwok on upper Chowchilla r., Mariposa co., Cal.

Heth-to'-ya.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 349, 1877. Hittoya.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1903.

Hiwaithe. A former Yaquina village on the S. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.

Hi'-wai-i'-t'-tē.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Hiwassee (Ayuhwa'si, 'savanna', 'meadow'). The name of several former Cherokee settlements. The most important, commonly distinguished by the Cherokee as Ayuhwa'si Egwá'hí, or Great Hiwassee, was on the N. bank of Hiwassee r., at the present Savannah ford, above Columbus, Polk co., Tenn. Another was farther up the same river, at the junction of Peachtree cr., above Murphy, Cherokee co., N. C.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 512, 1900.

Ayuhwa'si.—Mooney, op. cit. Euforse.—Doc. of 1755 quoted by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 142, 1887. Hiwassee.—Doc. of 1799 quoted by Royce, ibid., 144. Hiwassee.—Bartram, Travels, 371, 1792. Owassee.—Lanman quoted by Mooney, op. cit.

Hiyaraba ('panther'). A clan of the Achéha phratry of the ancient Timucua of Florida.—Pareja (c a. 1614) quoted by Gatschet in Am. Philos. Soc. Proc., XVII, 492, 1878.

Hiyayulge ('tree trunk'). A former Maricopa village on Gila r., S. Ariz.

Hiyayulge.—ten Kate, inf'n, 1888. Uskók.—Ibid. (Pima name).

Hizo. A division of the Varohio which occupied the pueblo of Taraichi in Chinipas valley, w. Chihuahua, Mexico.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 58, 324, 1864.

Hlagi (Há'gí). A town of the Kaidju-kegawai family of the Haida, on an island near the E. end of Houston Stewart channel, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Hlahayik (Há'xayik, 'inside of Hlaha [Há'xa]'). A former Yakutat town on Yakutat bay, Alaska, back of an island called Hlaha, whence the name. The Clach-a-jék of Krause seems to be identical with the town of Yakutat.

(J. R. S.)

Hlahloakalga (Lá'lo-akálga, 'fish ponds'). A Creek town in the Creek Nation, Ind. T., near Hilabee, between North fork and Canadian r.

Fish Ponds.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888. Lá'lo akálga.—Ibid.

Hlahloalgi ('fish people'). An extinct Creek clan.

Hú'-hlo.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1877. Há'lo-algi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 155, 1884.

Hlahlokalka (Lá'lo-kálka: lá'lo 'fish', akálgás 'I am separated from'). A former Upper Creek settlement established by the Okchayi on a small river forming ponds, 4 m. above Oakfuskee, Cleburne co., Ala.

(A. S. G.)

Fish pond.—Bartram, Travels, 462, 1791 (traders' name). Fish ponds.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 49, 1848.

Fish-Pond Town.—Parsons (1833) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854. Lá'lo-kálka.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 137, 1884. Slakagulgás.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, op. cit., v, 262, 1855. Tatluogees.—Woodward, Reminis., 83, 1859. Thlatlogulgau.—Schoolcraft, op. cit., IV, 381. Thlot-lo-gul-gau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 49, 1848.

Hlakeguns (Haqé'gáns). A town of the Kuna-lanas on Yagun r., at the head of Masset inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Hlanudshiapala (láni 'mountain'; udshi dim. suffix, apála 'on the other side': 'on the other side of a little mountain'). A former Upper Creek settlement, one of the four Hillabi villages, with a town square, situated on the N. W. branch of Hillabi cr., Ala., 15 m. from Hillabi town.

(A. S. G.)

Lánudshi apála.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 137, 1884. Thla-noo-che au-bau-lau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 43, 1848.

Hlaphlako (Láp-láko, 'tall cane'). Two former Upper Creek villages on or near Cupiahatchee cr., in Macon co., Ala., with 81 and 66 heads of families, respectively, in 1832.

James Bay.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 131, 1836 (misprint). Jim Boy's.—Campbell (1836) in H. R. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 20, 1838.

Láp-láko.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 137, 1884. Thabloc-ko.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, op. cit. Thloblocco-town.—Jesup (1836) in H. R. Doc. 78, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 48, 1838. Thlobthlocco.—H. R. Doc. 274, op. cit. Thlob Thlocco.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 425, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 257, 1836. Thlobthlocco.—Woodward, Reminis., 91, 1859.

Hlaphlako. A town of the Creek Nation, on Alabama cr., N. of the North fork of Canadian r., Okla.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888.

Hlahula (Hla'-u'hla, 'surrounded by arrow-shaft bushes'). The ruins of a small but traditionally important Zuñi pueblo near a small spring about 10 m. N. N. E. of Zuñi, N. Mex. (F. H. C.)

Clan-utsh-la.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archaeol., I, 100, 1891. Hla'-u'hla.—Cushing, inf'n, 1891.

Hlaukwima (Hlaukwi'ma). The native name of the South town of Taos pueblo, N. Mex. (F. W. H.)

Hlauuma (Hlauu'ma). The native name of the North town of Taos pueblo, N. Mex. (F. W. H.)

Hleetakwe (Hle'-e-tá-kwé). The north-western migration of the Bear, Crane, Frog, Deer, Yellow-wood, and other clans of the ancestral pueblo of Zuñi.—Cushing quoted by Powell, 4th Rep. B. A. E., xxxviii, 1886. See Pishla Ateuna.

Hlekatchka (Le-katchka, or Li-katchka, from 'le or 'li, 'arrow', katchka, 'broken': 'broken arrow'). A former Lower Creek town on a trail ford crossing Chattahoochee r., 12 m. below Kasihta, on the W. side of the river, probably in Russell co., Ala. According to Hawkins (Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 858, 1832) the settlement was destroyed in 1814; but it was apparently reestablished, as it was represented in the treaty of Nov. 15, 1827, and a census of 1832 (Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854) gives the number of families as 331 in that year.

(A. S. G.)

Broken Arrow.—Carey (1792) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 329, 1832. Broken Arrow Old Field.—Robertson (1796), ibid., 600. Chalagatsca.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Horse-path-town.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 425, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 135, 1836. Lekatchka.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 137, 1884. Li-i-katchka.—Ibid. Tauthlacotcheau.—Hawkins (1814) in Am. State Papers, op. cit., 858. Theacatchkah.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. 4, 54, 1848. Thlakatchka.—Census of 1832 in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854. Thleacatska.—Woodward, Reminis., 35, 1859. Thlu-katch-ka.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 425, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 135, 1836.

Hlekatska (Le kátska). The settlement of an offshoot of the Kawita on Arkansas r., almost opposite Wialaka and near Coweta (Kawita), in the Creek Nation, Okla.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888.

Hlgadun (Egadá'n, 'suffering from overwork'). A town of the Skidai-lanas on Moresby id., opposite and facing Anthony id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. It is prominent in Haida mythology.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Hlgaedlin (Egá'-itn, probably 'where they wash the frames upon which salal berries are dried'). A Haida town occupied by a branch of the Kona-kegawai called Sus-haidagai; situated on the S. side of Tanoo id., S. E. Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 278, 1905.

Hlgagilda-kegawai (Egagí'lda qé'-gawa-i, 'those born at Hlgagilda,' i. e., Skidegate). A subdivision of the Hlgaiulanas family of the Haida.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 269, 1905.

Hlgahet (Egā'xet, 'pebble town'.) A former Haida town near Skidegate, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was purchased from its earlier owners, the Kogangas, by a branch of the Yaku-lanas who were afterward known as the Hlgahetgu-lanas, from the name of their town. (J. R. S.)

Kil-kait-hādē.—Krause, Tlinkit Indianer, 304, 1885 ('people of Hlgahet'). Tlg'ā'it.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 24, 1898 (misapplied to to Old Gold Harbor).

Hlgahet-gitinaí (Egā'xet gitinā'-i, 'Gitins of Pebble-town'). A division of the Eagle clan of the Haida, for which Gitins was a second name. They moved from Hlgahet, the old town near Skidegate, to Chaahl on the w. coast, along with other families (see Hlgahetgu-lanas). Originally they and the Gitins of Skidegate constituted one family. The Djahui-hlgahet-kegawai, Yaku-gitinaí, Hlgahet-kegawai, and Gweundus were subdivisions. (J. R. S.)

Egā'xetgitinā'-i.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 274, 1905. Tlg'ā'it gyit'inaí'.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 24, 1898.

Hlgahetgu-lanas (Egā'xet-gu-lā'nas, 'people of Pebble-town'). The most important division of the Raven clan of the Haida, on the w. coast of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It received its name from an old town near Skidegate, where the people formerly lived. Before this they were part of the Yaku-lanas and lived at Lawn hill, but trouble arising, they were driven away and purchased the town of Hlgahet from the Kogangas. Later another war forced them to move to the w. coast. (J. R. S.)

Egā'xet-gu-lā'nas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 270, 1905. Lth'ait Lennas.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895. Tlg'ā'itgu-lā'nas.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 24, 1898.

Hlgahet-kegawai (Egā'xet-qē'gawa-i, 'those born at Pebble-town'). A subdivision of the Hlgahet-gitinaí, a family of the Eagle clan of the Haida, or only another name for that family.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 274, 1905.

Hlgai (Egā'i). Said to have been the name of a town at the head of Skedans bay, w. coast of the Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Hlgaiha (Egā'-iwa, from lgai 'to dig', xa 'to put in'). A semi-legendary Haida town n. of Dead Tree pt., at the entrance of Skidegate inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. From this place the great Gitins family of Skidegate is said to have sprung.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 99, 1905.

Hlgaiu (Egāi-u', probably 'place of stones'). A town and camping place of the Djahui-skwahladagai of the Haida,

s. of Dead Tree pt., at the entrance to Skidegate inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. One of the names of the town of Skidegate is said to have been derived from this. (J. R. S.)

Kit-hai-uāss hādē.—Krause, Tlinkit Indianer, 304, 1885 (possibly identical). Egāi-u'.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Hlgaiu-lanas (Egāi-ū' lā'nas, 'Skidegate town people'). A division of the Raven clan of the Haida who originally owned the town of Skidegate, Brit. Col., and hence came to be called by the Haida name of the town. Later they gave the town to the Gitins in payment for an injury inflicted on one of the latter, and moved to Gaodjaos, farther up the inlet. A subdivision was called Hlgagilda-kegawai. (J. R. S.)

Egāi-ū' lā'nas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 269, 1905. Tlaiyū Hādē.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895 (erroneously assigned to Old Gold Harbor). Tlg'āio lā'nas.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 24, 1898. Tlqaiulā'nas.—Boas, 5th Rep. of same, 26, 1889.

Hlgan (Egān, 'killer-whale's dorsal fin'). A Haida town s. of Tigon, on the w. coast of Graham id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col., occupied by the Dostlan-Inagai. The Koetas are said to have lived at this place before they moved to Alaska, and the town is said to have been so named on account of a rock which stands up in front of it like the dorsal fin of a killer-whale. (J. R. S.)

Egān.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 280, 1905. E'ān.—Swanton, inf'n, 1905 (another form).

Hlgihla-ala (Egī'ta āla, probably 'town of the ditches'). A former Haida town n. of Cape Ball, E. shore of Graham id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Naikun-kegawai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 280, 1905.

Hlielung (Ēi'elāñ). A former Haida town of the Kuna-lanas family on the right bank of a river of the same name (Hi-ellen on Dawson's chart), which flows into Dixon entrance at the foot of Tow hill, n. coast of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. The town was erroneously thought by Dawson (Queen Charlotte Ids., 165B, 1880) to be the Ne-con of John Work. (J. R. S.)

Hieller.—Deans, Tales from Hideroy, 92, 1899. Ia'gen.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 23, 1898. Ēi'elāñ.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 280, 1905.

Hlielung-keawai (Ēi'elāñ qē'awa-i, 'those born at the town of Hlielung'). A subdivision of the Stustas, a family of the Eagle clan of the Haida, occupying a town at the mouth of Hiellen (Hlielung) r., Graham id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. (J. R. S.)

Dl'ia'len k'e'owai'.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 23, 1898. Ēi'elāñ qē'awa-i.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 276, 1905. Lthyhellun Kiiwē.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895.

Hlielungkun-Inagai (Ēi'elāñ kun inagā'-i, 'Ēi'elāñ river point town-people'). A town of the Kuna-lanas, belonging to the Raven clan of the Haida, situated on a river of the same name (called Hiellen on Dawson's map).

(J. R. S.)

Di'ia'len kunilnagai'.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 23, 1898. Si'elañ kun inaga'-i.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 270, 1905.

Hlielung-stustae (Si'elañ stasta'-i, 'Stustas of Hlielung'). A subdivision of the Stustas, an important family of the Eagle clan of the Haida, occupying the town at the mouth of Hlielung or Hiellen r., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. Possibly a synonym of Hlielung-keawai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 276, 1905.

Hlimulnaas-hadai (Si'ma'l na'as xā'-da-i, 'hlimul-skin-house people'). A subdivision of the Salendas, a Haida family of the Eagle clan. They were so called from one of their houses; hlimul was a name applied to the skins of certain mainland animals.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 276, 1905.

Hlingwainaas-hadai (Si'ingwā'-i na'as xā'-da-i, 'world-house people'). A subdivision of the Aokeawai, a family of the Raven clan of the Haida; probably named from a house.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 272, 1905.

Hlkaonedis (Tlingit: Eqa'onedis, 'people of Eqao river'). A subdivision of the Koetas, a family of the Raven clan of the Haida, living principally in Alaska. They may have received their name from a camping place.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 272, 1905.

Hlkia (Ekliā', 'chicken-hawk town' or 'saw-bill town'). A former Haida town on the outer side of Lyell id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Kona-kegawai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 278, 1905.

Hlkoayedi (Eqo'ayedi). A Tlingit division at Klavak, Alaska, said to be part of the Shunkukedi, q. v.

(J. R. S.)

Hlukahadi. A division of the Raven phratry of the Chilkat, formerly living in the town of Yendestake, Alaska. According to the Chilkat themselves the name means 'quick people', but according to informants at Wrangell, 'people of Hlukak' (Eqā'x), a creek near Wrangell.

Chlukāach-adī.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 116, 1885. Kādūwot-kēdi.—Ibid. (given as a distinct social group). Eqā'xadi.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Hlukkuhoan (Exqquxo-ān, 'town where people do not sleep much'). A former Tlingit town in Alaska.

(J. R. S.)

Hluln (Ēluln). A former Haida town in Naden harbor, Graham id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Hoabonoma. Evidently the Pima or Maricopa name of a tribe of which Father Kino learned while on the lower Rio Gila, Ariz., in 1700. Unidentified, although probably Yuman. They have sometimes been loosely classed as a part of the Cocopa. Heabenomas.—Consag (1746) quoted by Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Dec. 6, 1861. Hebonumas.—Venegas, Hist. Cal., II, 171, 1759. Hoabonoma.—Kino (1700) quoted by Coues, Garcés Diary, 548, 1900. Hoahonómos.—Mayer, Mexico, II, 38, 1853. Hobonomas.—Venegas, Hist. Cal., I, 301, 1759. Oaboponoma.—Kino (1700) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., I, 349, 1856.

Hoaiels. Mentioned by Baudry des Lozières (Voy. Louisiane, 242, 1802) in a list of tribes with no indication of habitat. Possibly intended for Theloei, a name given sometimes to part, at others to all the Natchez.

Hoako. A former Maidu village on the w. bank of Feather r., below Marysville, Sutter co., Cal.

(R. B. D.)

Hoak.—Wozencraft (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 206, 1853. Hoako.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt. 3, map, 124, 1905.

Hock.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 282, 1877. Hocks.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 129, 1850.

Hoka.—Curtin, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885. Huk.—Hale, Ethnol. and Philol., vi, 631, 1846.

Hobatinequasi. A clan of the Acheha phratry of the ancient Timucua of Florida.—Pareja (ca. 1614) quoted by Gatschet in Am. Philos. Soc. Proc., xvii, 492, 1878.

Hobbamock, Hobbamoco. See Hobomok, Hobomoko.

Hobeckentopa. A locality, possibly a town, where a treaty with the Choctaw was concluded Aug. 31, 1803. It was on Tombigbee r., in the e. part of Washington co., Ala., perhaps on or near a bluff of the same name upon which St Stephens now stands.

(H. W. H.)

Hobenkenlopa.—Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff. (1805), I, 749, 1832. Hoe-Buckin-too-pa.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1803), 103, 1837.

Hobnuts. A folk-etymological corruption of hobbenis, the name of a tuberous root (Orontium aquaticum) in the Delaware dialect of Algonquian. Rev. A. Hesselius (cited by Nelson, Inds. of N. J., 78, 1894), writing in the early years of the 18th century in New Jersey, mentions "the first fruits of roots, which grow in swamps, not unlike nuts, called tachis, or by the English hopnuts." The Delaware hobbenis is a diminutive of hobbin, which was afterward applied by these Indians to the potato. The Swedish colonists called this root hopnis.

(A. F. C.)

Hobomok. A chief of the Wampanoag who was the life-long friend of the English, from the time he met them at Plymouth in 1621. He helped to strengthen the friendship of Massasoit for the colonists, but, unlike Massasoit, he became a Christian, and died, before 1642, as a member of the English settlement at Plymouth. He was of great service to the English in warning them of Indian conspiracies. He was present at some of the battles in which Standish performed valorous deeds, but was not an active participant. The name is identical with Abbamoch, Hobbamoco, Habamouk, Hobbamock, Hobomoko, etc. See the following.

(A. F. C.)

Hobomoko. Whittier, in the notes to his Poems (464, 1891) cites the saying concerning John Bonython:

Here lies Bonython, the Sagamore of Saco,
He lived a rogue and died a knave, and went to Hobomoko.

Mentioned by early writers as an evil deity of the Massachuset and closely related Algonquian tribes. (A. F. C.)

Hoccanum. Mentioned as a band formerly in East Hartford township, Hartford co., Conn., where they remained, according to Stiles, until about 1745. They were probably identical with or a part of the Podunk (q. v.). De Forest locates the Podunk here, but does not mention the Hoccanum.

Hoccanums.—Stiles (1761) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., x, 105, 1809. Hockanoanco.—Mason (1659), ibid., 4th s., vii, 423, 1865 (perhaps the name of the village).

Hochelaga (dialectic form of Hochelayi, 'at the place of the [beaver] dam'). A former Iroquoian town, strongly palisaded, situated in 1535 on Montreal id., Canada, about a mile from the mountain first called "Mont Royal" by Cartier. At that time it contained about 50 typical Iroquoian lodges, each 50 or more paces in length and 12 or 15 in breadth, built of wood and covered with very broad strips of bark, neatly and deftly joined. Estimating 12 fires and 24 firesides, each of three persons, to every lodge, the total population would have been about 3,600. The upper portion of the lodges was used for storing corn, beans, and dried fruits. The inhabitants pounded corn in wooden mortars with pestles and made a paste of the meal, which was molded into cakes that were cooked on large hot rocks and covered with hot pebbles. They also made many soups of corn, beans, and peas, of which they had a sufficiency. In the lodges were large vessels in which smoked fish was stored for winter use. They were not travelers like those of "Canada" and "Saguenay," although, according to Cartier, "the said Canadians are subject to them with 8 or 9 other peoples along the river."

(J. N. B. H.)

Hochelaga.—Cartier (1545), Bref Récit, 9, 1863. Hochelagenses.—De Laet (1633) quoted by Barton, New Views, xlii, 1798 (Latin name of the inhabitants). Ochelaga.—Map (ca. 1543) in Maine Hist. Soc. Coll., i, 351, 1869; Jes. Rel. 1642, 36, 1858.

Hochelayi ('at the place of the [beaver] dam'). A former Iroquoian town, situated in 1535 in a flat country not far from the junction of Jacques Cartier r. with the St Lawrence, and probably near the present Pt Platon, Quebec. (J. N. B. H.)

Achelaci.—Cartier (1535), Bref Récit, 56a, 1863. Achelacy.—Ibid. Achelaiy.—Ibid. Achelayy.—Ibid. Hochelai.—Cartier (1535) quoted by Hakluyt, Voy., ii, 115, 1889. Hochelay.—Ibid., 129. Ochelay.—Cartier, Bref Récit, op. cit.

Hochonchapa ('alligator'). A Chickasaw clan of the Ishpanee phratry.

Ho-chon-chab-ba.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 163, 1877.

Hotchon tchápa.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 96, 1884.

Hockhocken ('place of gourds.'—Hewitt). A former Delaware village on Hocking r., Ohio.

Hackhocken.—La Tour, map, 1779. Hockhocken.—Ibid., 1782. Hoekhocken.—Lattre, map, 1784. Mockhocken.—Esnauts and Rapiilly, map, 1777 (misprint).

Hoes and Spades. Agricultural implements in general are referred to under Agriculture (q. v.), special mention being here made of certain numerous, large, bladelike, chipped implements of flint found in the rich alluvial bottom lands of the middle Mississippi valley, whose polished surfaces in many cases unmistakably indicate long-continued use in digging operations; and this, in connection with their suggestive shape, has caused them to be classified as hoes and spades. Extensive quarries of the flint nodules from which implements of this class were shaped, have been located in Union co., Ill. (see Quarries). Great numbers of the hoes and spades, originating in these or in similar quarries, are distributed over an extensive area in Missouri, Illinois, and the neighboring states. The most common form has an oval, or elliptical outline, with ends either rounded or somewhat pointed; a modified form has the lower end strongly curved, with the sides in straight or slightly concave lines and the same pointed top. Beginning with the extremes of this type, it is possible to arrange a series which will pass by insensible gradations into small scrapers and scraper-like celts. Another type, not unusual, has a semi-elliptical blade with a square or flat top, in the sides of which deep notches are cut for securing the handle. An allied form is without the notches but has projecting points at the top, which answer the same purpose. The larger implements of this class, often reaching a foot in length, are generally denominated spades, and the shorter, or notched, forms hoes; but as both had the handles put on either parallel with the longer axis or at an angle with it, allowing all alike to be used in the same manner, the distinction is without particular significance.

Consult Fowke in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Moorehead, Prehist. Implements, 1900; Rau, Archæol. Coll. Nat. Mus., 1876; Thruston, Antiquities of Tenn., 1897; Willoughby in Am. Anthrop., viii, 130, 1906. (G. F. W. H. H.)

Hog. See Quahog.

Hogan. A Navaho house; adapted from qoghán (Mindeleff in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 475, 1898), in the Navaho dialect of the Athapascan stock. See Habitations.

Hog Creek. A former Shawnee settlement on a branch of Ottawa r., in Allen co., Ohio. The Indians sold their reservation there in 1831 and removed w. of the Mississippi. (J. M.)

Hogologes. A former Creek town on Apalachicola r., at the junction of Chatahoochee and Flint rs., in Georgia.

Hogoligis.—Bartram, Voy., I, map, 1799. Hogoleeges.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 8, 1776. Hogoleegies.—Romans, Fla., I, 280, 1775. Hogoleegis.—Roberts, Fla., 13, 90, 1763. Hogoligis.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., II, 364, 1787. Hogologes.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Ogoleeges.—Lattre, Map U. S., 1784.

Hogstown. Described as an old (Delaware) village between Venango and Buffalo cr., Pa., in 1791 (Proctor in Am. St. Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 153, 1832). Perhaps wrongly located and identical with Kuskusi.

Hoh. A band of the Quileute living at the mouth of Hoh r., about 15 m. s. of Lapush, the main seat of the tribe on the w. coast of Washington. They are under the jurisdiction of the Neah Bay agency. Pop. 62 in 1905. (L. F.) Hohs.—McKenney in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 131, 1870. Holes.—Hill, ibid., 1867, 48, 1868. Hooch.—Swan, N. W. Coast, 211, 1857. Hooh.—Ibid. Hüch.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 173, 1877. Kwääksat.—Ibid.

Hohandika ('earth eaters'). A Shoshoni division inhabiting the region w. of Great Salt lake, Utah. They suffered a severe defeat in 1862 at the hands of California volunteers.

Diggers.—Gatschet in Geog. Surv. W. 100 M., 409, 1879. Earth Eaters.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., XXIII, 298, 1886. Höhandika.—Ibid. Hokan-dik'-ah.—Stuart, Montana, 81, 1865. Hokantikara.—Gatschet, op. cit. Salt Lake Diggers.—Stuart, op. cit.

Hohe ('Assiniboin'). A band of the Sisasapa division of the Teton Sioux.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897.

Hohilpo. Said by Lewis and Clark (Exped., I, map, 1814; II, 596, 1817) to be a tribe of the Tushepaw (q. v.) residing on Clarke r., above the Micksucksealton, in the Rocky mts., and numbering 300 in 25 lodges in 1805.

Ho hill pos.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 114, 1905. Ho-hil-pos.—Ibid., 120. Ho-pil-po.—Lewis and Clark misquoted by Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 417, 1855.

Hohio. Mentioned by Coxe (Carolana, 12, 1741) as a nation living on the Wabash. Unidentified, and probably imaginary as a tribe, although the name is the same as Ohio.

Hohopa (Ho-ho-pa). A Koeksotenok village on the w. coast of Baker id., Brit. Col.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. 2, 73, 1887.

Hohota. Mentioned by Oñate (Doc. Inéd., xvi, 113, 1871) as a pueblo of New Mexico in 1598; at that time doubtless situated in the country of the Salinas, in the vicinity of Abo, E. of the Rio Grande, and evidently occupied by the Tigua or the Piro.

(F. W. H.)

Hoindarkhouon ('island people.'—Hewitt). The Huron name of a tribe subordinate to the Ottawa.—Sagard (1632), Canada, IV, cap. 'Nations,' 1866.

Hoitda. A division of the Maidu living on Rock cr., in the n. part of Butteco., Cal. Hocktem.—Chever in Bull. Essex Inst., II, 28, 1871. Hoitda.—Curtin, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885.

Hokarutcha ('skunk'). A band or society of the Crows.

Ho-ka-rut'-cha.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 159, 1877. Pole-cat band.—Culbertson in Smithson. Rep. 1850, 144, 1851.

Hokedi (Xôq!e'di, 'people of Xôq!'). A Tlingit clan at Wrangell, Alaska, belonging to the Wolf phratry. They are named from a place (Xôq!) opposite Old Wrangell.

Kook-a-tee.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Qôq'e'de.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes of Can., 25, 1889. Rchüh-e'di.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 120, 1885. Xôq!e'di.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Hoko. A Clallam village on Okeho r., Wash. Under the name Okeno its inhabitants participated in the treaty of Point No Point, Wash., in 1855.

Hoko.—Swan, letter, B. A. E., Feb. 1886. Ocha.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 429, 1855. Ocho.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 450, 1854. Okeho.—Ibid. Okeno.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1855), 800, 1873.

Hoko. The Juniper clan of the Kokop (Wood) phratry of the Hopi.

Hôhu.—Voth, Hopi Proper Names, 78, 1905. Hoko wiñwü.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900 (wiñwü = 'clan'). Ho'-ko wun-wü.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 404, 1894.

Hokokwito. A former village of the Awani division of the Miwok, opposite Yosemite falls, in Yosemite valley, Mariposa co., Cal. The hotel now occupies its site.

Hocôwedoc.—Powers in Overland Mo., x, 333, 1874. Hok-ok'-wi-dok.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 365, 1877. Hokokwito.—A. L. Kroeber, in fin, 1905.

Hokomo. A former Maidu village on the E. side of Middle fork of Feather r., almost due N. of Mooretown, Butte co., Cal.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XVII, pl. xxxviii, 1905.

Hokwaits (Ho-kwaits). A band of Paiute formerly living near Ivanpah, S. E. Cal. (Powell in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1873, 51, 1874). Cf. Hakwicke, the Mohave name of the Kawia, q. v.

Holatamico, popularly known as Billy Bowlegs. The last Seminole chief of prominence to leave Florida and remove with his people to the W. He was born about 1808, and after the first Seminole removal became the recognized chief of the remnant in 1842, and was the leader of hostilities in 1855 to 1858. Although but 25 years of age, and not then a chief, he was one of the signers of the treaty of Payne's Landing, May 9, 1832, by which the Seminole agreed to remove to Indian Ter., but it was not until May, 1858, that he and his band, numbering 164 persons, departed. See Bowlegs. (C. T.)

Holeclame. One of several tribes formerly occupying "the country from Buena Vista and Carises lakes, and Kern r. to the Sierra Nevada and Coast range,"

Cal. (Barbour in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 256, 1853). By treaty of June 10, 1851, these tribes reserved a tract between Tejon pass and Kern r. and ceded the remainder of their lands to the United States. Probably Mariposan (Yokuts), though possibly Chumashan. Cf. Holkoma, Holmiuk.

Hole-in-the-day (Bagwānagīik, 'hole, opening, rift in the sky.'—W. J.). A Chippewa chief, a member of the warlike Noka (Bear) clan. He succeeded Curly-head (q. v.) as war chief in 1825. He had already been recognized as a chief by the Government for his bravery and fidelity to the Americans in the war of 1812. His whole subsequent life was spent in fighting the Sioux, and he ended the struggle that had lasted for centuries over the possession of the fisheries and hunting grounds of the L. Superior region by definitively driving the hereditary enemy across the Mississippi. Had not the Government intervened to compel the warring tribes to accept a line of demarkation, he threatened to plant his village on Minnesota r. and pursue the Sioux into the western plains. At Prairie du Chien he acknowledged the ancient possession by the Sioux of the territory from the Mississippi to Green bay and the head of L. Superior, but claimed it for the Chippewa by right of conquest. The Chippewa had the advantage of the earlier possession of fire-arms, but in the later feuds which Hole-in-the-day carried on the two peoples were equally armed. George Copway, who valued the friendship of Hole-in-the-day and once ran 270 miles in 4 days to apprise him of a Sioux raid, relates how he almost converted the old chief, who promised to embrace Christianity and advise his people to do so "after one more battle with the Sioux." He was succeeded as head chief of the Chippewa on his death in 1846 by his son, who bore his father's name and who carried on in Minnesota the ancient feud with the Dakota tribes. At the time of the Sioux rising in 1862 he was accused of planning a similar revolt. The second Hole-in-the-day was murdered by men of his own tribe at Crow Wing, Minn., June 27, 1868.

(F. H.)

Holholto. A former Maidu village a few miles s. of Mooretown, Butte co., Cal. Holto.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 282, 1877. Holholto.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pl. xxxviii, 1905.

Holkoma. A Mono tribe on Sycamore cr. and Big cr., n. of Kings r., Cal. There is some doubt as to its proper name.

Hol-cu-ma.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 782, 1899. Ho-len-mahs.—Johnston (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc 61, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 22, 1852. Hol-en-nas.—Barbour (1852) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 254, 1853. Hol'-ko-mah.—Merriam in Science, xix, 916, June 15, 1904. Hol-o'-kommah.—Ibid. To-win-che'-bā.—Ibid.

Hollow-horn Bear. A Brulé Sioux chief, born in Sheridan co., Nebr., in Mar., 1850. When but 16 years of age he accompanied a band led by his father against the Pawnee, whom they fought on the present site of Genoa, Nebr. In 1868 he joined a band of Brulés in an attack on United States troops in Wyoming, and in another where now is situated the Crow agency, Mont.; and in the following year participated in a raid on the laborers who were constructing the Union Pacific R. R. Subsequently he became captain of police at Rosebud agency, S. Dak., and arrested his predecessor, Crow Dog, for the murder of Spotted Tail. Five years later he resigned and was appointed second lieutenant under Agent Spencer, but was again compelled to resign on account of ill health. When Gen. Crook was sent with a commission to Rosebud, in 1889, to make an agreement with the Indians there, Hollow-horn Bear was chosen by the Sioux as their speaker, being considered an orator of unusual ability. He took part in the parade at the inauguration of President Roosevelt at Washington, Mar. 4, 1905.

(C. T.)

Holmiuk. One of the tribes formerly occupying "the country from Buena Vista and Carises lakes, and Kern r. to the Sierra Nevada and Coast range," Cal. By treaty of June 10, 1851, these tribes reserved a tract between Tejon pass and Kern r. and ceded the remainder of their land to the United States. Probably of Mariposan (Yokuts) or Shoshonean stock. Cf. Holeclame, Holkoma.

Hol-mie-uhs.—Barbour (1852) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 256, 1853. Holmiuk.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 782, 1899.

Holstenborg. A missionary station on Davis str., w. Greenland.

Holsteinberg.—Crantz, Hist. Greenland, I, 13, 1767. Holstenborg.—Meddelelser om Grönland, xxv, map, 1902.

Holtrochtac. A Costanoan village formerly connected with Santa Cruz mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 5, 1860.

Holukhik (Ho-lūq'-ik). A Yaquina village on the n. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Homalko. A Salish tribe on the E. side of Bute inlet, Brit. Col., speaking the Comox dialect; pop. 89 in 1904.

Em-alcom.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1884, 187. Homalko.—Ibid., 1891, map. Homalko.—Ibid., 1901, pt. II, 158. Qoé'qomatxo.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Homayine (Ho'ma yin'-e, 'young elk'). A subgens of the Khotachi, the Elk gens of the Iowa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 238, 1897.

Homayo. A large ruined pueblo of the Tewa on the w. bank of Rio Ojo Caliente, a small w. tributary of the Rio Grande, in Rio Arriba co., N. Mex. See Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 37, 1892; Hewett in Bull. 32, B. A. E., 39, 1906.

Homhoabit. Given by Rev. J. Caballeria (Hist. San Bernardino Val., 1902) as a former village, probably of the Serranos, at a place now called Homoa, near San Bernardino, s. Cal.

Hominy. From the Algonquian dialects of New England or Virginia, applied to a dish prepared from Indian corn pounded or cracked and boiled, or the kernels merely hulled by steeping first in lye or ashes and afterward boiled, with or without fish or meat to season it. The first mention of the name in print occurs in Capt. John Smith's True Travels, 43, 1630. Some forms of the name given by early writers are tackhummin, 'to grind corn (or grain),' and pokhommin, 'to beat or thresh out.' Josselyn (N. E. Rar., 53, 1672) defined hominy as what was left after the flour had been sifted out of cornmeal. Beverley (Virginia, bk. 3, 1722) says that homony is "Indian corn, broken in a mortar, husked, and then boiled in water over a gentle fire for ten or more hours to the consistency of firmity." The name "hominy grits" is sometimes applied to the cracked variety. Tooker suggests as the radicals ahām, 'he beats or pounds'; min, 'berry or fruit,' 'grain.' The name may be a reduction of some of the words in which it occurs, as rockohominy. Dr Wm. Jones (inf'n, 1906) says: "It is plain that the form of the word hominy is but an abbreviation, for what is left is the designative suffix -min, 'grain,' and part of a preceding modifying stem." For a discussion of the etymology see Gerard in Am. Anthropol., vi, 314, 1904; vii, 226, 1905; Tooker, ibid., vi, 682. See Samp.

(A. F. C. J. N. B. H.)

Homna (Ho-mna, 'smelling like fish'). A division of the Brulé Teton Sioux.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 218, 1897.

Homnipa. Given as a Karok village on Klamath r., n. w. Cal., inhabited in 1860. Home-nip-pah.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 23, 1860.

Homolobi (Hō-mōl'-ōbi, 'place of the breast-like elevation'). A group of ruined pueblos near Winslow, Ariz., which were occupied by the ancestors of various Hopi clans. See Fewkes in 22d Rep. B. A. E., 23, et seq., 1904; Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 29, 1891.

Homolua. A former Timucua village, situated, according to Laudonnière, on the s. side of St Johns r., Fla., at its mouth, in 1564. De Gourgues placed a town of similar name about 60 leagues inland on the same river.

Emola.—Laudonnière (1564) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., 306, 1869. Homolua.—Ibid., 331. Homolua.—De Bry, Brev. Nar., map, 1590. Molloua.—Laudonnière, op. cit., 242. Molua.—Fontaneda (1575), ibid., 2d s., 264, 1875. Molona.—Laudonnière, op. cit., 245. Monlousa.—Gourges, ibid., 2d s., 275, 1875. Omolua.—Laudonnière, op. cit., 253.

Homosassa ('abundance of pepper'). A Seminole town in Hernando co., Fla., in 1837. There are now a river and a town of the same name in that locality.

Homa Sasa.—Drake, Ind. Chron., 215, 1836.

Homuarup. A former Karok village on Klamath r., Cal.

Home-war-roop.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 23, 1860.

Homulchison. A Squawmish village community at Capilano cr., Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.; the former headquarters of the supreme chief of the tribe. Pop. 45 in 1904.

Capalino.—Can. Ind. Aff., 276, 1894. Capitano Creek.—Can. Ind. Aff., 308, 1879. Homulchison.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 475, 1900. Capilano.—Can. Ind. Aff., 357, 1897.

Honabanou. Coxe (Carolana, 14, 1741) says that "fifteen leagues above the Ohio . . . to the w. is the river Honabanou, upon which dwells a nation of the same name, and another called Amicoa." On the map accompanying his work this river is represented as in s. e. Missouri, entering the Mississippi immediately above or nearly opposite the mouth of the Ohio. As there is no stream on the w. side between the mouth of the Ohio and St Genevieve co. that can be called a river, and no Indians of the names mentioned are known to have resided in that section, both must be rejected as unauthentic, and indeed mythical so far as the locality is concerned. This river has evidently been laid down from Hennepin's map of 1697, relating to the "New Discovery," which is admitted to be unauthentic so far as it relates to the region s. of the mouth of Illinois r. It is evident, however, that Coxe has attempted to give the name Ouabano (q. v.), which La Salle applied to some Indians who visited Ft St Louis, on Matagorda bay, Texas, from a westerly section. (J. M. C. T.)

Honani. The Badger phratry of the Hopi, comprising the Honani (Badger), Muinyan (Porcupine), Wishoko (Turkey-buzzard), Buli (Butterfly), Buliso (Evening Primrose), and Kachina (Sacred Dancer) clans. According to Fewkes this people settled at Kishyuba, a spring sacred to the Kachinas, before going to Tusayan. The Honani and Kachina phratries are intimately associated. The former settled Walpi when the village was on the old site, and some of them went on to Awatobi, whence they returned after the fall of that pueblo. The arrival of the Honani in Tusayan was probably not earlier than the latter part of the 17th century.

Ho-na-ni-nyū-mū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 405, 1894 (nyū-mū = 'phratry').

Honani. The Badger clan of the Hopi. Honani.—Bourke, Snake Dance, 117, 1884. Honani wiñwū.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900 (wiñwū = 'clan'). Ho-na-ni wūñ-wū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 405, 1894. Hon'-wūñ-wū.—Ibid., 404.

Honanki (Hopi: 'bear house'). A prehistoric cliff-village, attributed to the Hopi, in the valley of Oak cr., in the "red-rock" country s. of Flagstaff, Ariz.—Fewkes in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 558-569, 1898.

Honau (Ho'-na-u). The Bear phratry of the Hopi, comprising the Honau (Bear), Tokochi (Wild-cat), Chosro (Bird [blue]), Kokyan (Spider), and Hekpa (Fir) clans. According to Fewkes these people are traditionally said to have been the first to arrive in Tusayan. Although reputed to be the oldest people in Walpi they are now almost extinct in that pueblo, and are not represented in Sichonovi. They exist however at Mishongnovi.

Honau.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900. Ho'-nau-üh.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 404, 1894. Hónin nyumu.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 38, 1891 (nyumu = 'phratry'). Hón-namu.—Voth, Traditions of the Hopi, 36, 1905.

Honau. The Bear clan of the Hopi.

Honan.—Bourke, Snake Dance, 117, 1884 (misprint). Ho'-nau.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891. Honau winwá.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900. Honawuu.—Dorsey and Voth, Mishongnovi Ceremonies, 175, 1902.

Honayawus. See Farmer's Brother.

Honeye ('his finger lies.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca settlement on Honeye cr., near Honeye lake, N. Y.; destroyed by Sullivan in 1779.

Anagangaw.—Livermore (1779) in N. H. Hist. Soc. Coll., vi, 327-329, 1850. Anageen.—Pouchot, map (1758) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 694, 1858. Anagangaw.—Livermore, op. cit. Anayaya.—Hubley (1779) quoted by Conover, Kanadaga and Geneva MS., B. A. E. Hannayaya.—Sullivan (1779) quoted by Conover, ibid. Hanneayaya.—Nukerck (1779), ibid. Haunayaya.—Grant (1779), ibid. Honeye.—Dearborn (1779), ibid. Honeyayaya.—Fellows (1779), ibid. Onnayayou.—McKendry (1779), ibid. Onyayyah.—Barton (1779), ibid.

Honest John. See Tedyuskung.

Honetapartenwaz. Given as a division of the Yankton of the North under chief Tattungarweeteco in 1804, but probably intended for the Hunkpatina.

Hone-ta-par-teen-waz.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 34, 1806; Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, vi, 99, 1905.

Honkut. A division of Maidu living near the mouth of Honcut cr., Yuba co., Cal.

Hoancuts.—Powers in Overland Mo., xii, 420, 1874. Hoan'-kut.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 282, 1877. Honcut.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, i, 450, 1874.

Honmoyaushu (Hon-mo-yau'-cu). A former Chumashan village at El Barranco, near San Pedro, Ventura co., Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Honniasantkeronon (Iroquois: 'people of the place of crook-necked squashes,' or 'people of the place where they wear crosses'). An unidentified people of whom Gallinée was informed by the Iroquois as living on Ohio r., above the falls at Louisville, Ky. On a map of De l'Isle, dated 1722, a small lake called L. Oniasont, around which are the words 'les Oniasontke,' is placed on the s. side, apparently, of the "Ouabache, otherwise called Ohio or Beautiful river," and the outlet of L. Oniasont is made to flow into the Ouabache. It may be inferred that the Iroquois statement as to the location of this people was substantially correct; that is, that they lived on a small lake e. of Wabash r. and having an outlet into that stream, although Hoñniasantke'roñno^a is an Iroquois euphemism for the land of departed spirits. (J. N. B. H.)

Honniasantkeronons.—Gallinée (1669) in Margry Déc., i, 116, 1875. Oniasontke.—De l'Isle, map, 1772.

Oniasont-Keronons.—Fernow, Ohio Valley, 32, 1890.

Honosonayo ('white deer'). A clan of the ancient Timucua of Florida.

Honoson Nayo.—Pareja (ca. 1613) quoted by Gatschet in Am. Philos. Soc. Proc., xvii, 492, 1878.

Honowa (Hó'nowá, 'poor people'; sing., Hó'nów). A principal division of the Cheyenne, q. v.

Hóf nowa.—Grinnell, Social Org. Cheyennes, 136, 1905. Hó'nowá.—Mooney, inf'n, 1905. Poor.—Dorsey in Field Columbian Mus. Pub., no. 103, 62, 1905.

Honsading. A former Hupa village situated on the right bank of Trinity r., Cal., near the entrance of the canyon through which the river flows after leaving Hupa valley. (P. E. G.)

Aknutl.—Goddard, inf'n, 1903 (Yurok name). Hoonselton.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 66, 1872. Hoonsolton.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 82, 1870. Hun'-sa-tung.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 73, 1877. Loonsolton.—H. R. Rep. 98, 42d Cong., 3d sess., 428, 1873. Okáhno.—Meyer, Nachdem Sacramento, 282, 1855. Oka-no.—McKee in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 194, 1853. Oke-noke.—Gibbs in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 139, 1853. Okenope.—Gibbs, MS., B. A. E., 1852.

Honwee Vallecito. A Diegueño rancheria represented in the treaty of 1852 at Santa Isabel, s. Cal.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 132, 1857.

Hook. One of the small tribes or bands formerly living in South Carolina on the lower Pedee and its affluents, and possibly of Siouan stock. Lawson (Hist. Car., 45, 1860) refers to them as foes of the Santee and as living in 1701 about the mouth of Winyaw bay, S. C. Consult Mooney, Siouan Tribes of the East, Bull. B. A. E., 1895. See Backhook.

Hooka (Hó'-o-ka). The Dove clans of the Keresan pueblos of Santa Ana, San Felipe, and Sia, New Mexico. That of the last-mentioned village is extinct.

Hóhoka-háno.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 350, 1896 (Sia form; háno = 'people'). Hóoka-háno.—Ibid. (Santa Ana form). Húuka-háno.—Ibid. (San Felipe form).

Hook-stones. A variety of prehistoric artifacts to which no particular purpose can be assigned. They are heavy, hook-like objects, from 1 to 4 or 5 in. in length and of diversified proportions. The principal variety standing on the heavy rounded base resembles somewhat the letter Z; others are longer and more slender, with the base less developed, but with the hook more pronounced. An example with hook at both ends, probably not properly included in this group, is given by Yates in Morehead's Prehistoric Implements. They are usually made of soapstone and other soft rock, and occur in burials in s. California, on the islands as well as on the mainland, and no doubt had symbolic use (see Problematical objects). A number of these objects, now in the Peabody Museum, are described by Putnam, who prefers to regard them as implements, and mentions signs of use. Two examples were obtained from a grave at the ancient soapstone quarry of Santa Catalina id. in 1902 (Holmes), and a deposit of about 50 specimens was discovered at Redondo beach, Cal., in 1903 (Palmer).

HOOK-STONE; S. CALIFORNIA. (PALMER)

Consult Holmes in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1900, 1902; Moorehead, op. cit.; Palmer in 2d Bull. S. W. Soc. Archaeol. Inst. Am., 1905; Putnam in Surv. W. 100th Merid., 7, 1879. (W. H. H.)

Hoolatassa. A former Choctaw town 4 m. from Abihka, probably in the present Kemper co., Miss.—Romans, Fla., 310, 1775.

Hoolikan. See Eulachon.

Hoonebooeey. One of the Shoshoni tribes or bands said to have dwelt e. of the Cascade and s. of the Blue mts. of Oregon, in 1865. Not identified.

Hoonebooeey.—Huntington in Ind. Aff. Rep., 466, 1865. Hoo-ne-booy-ly.—Ibid., 471.

Hooshkal (Hoosh-kal). A former Chehalis village on the n. shore of Grays harbor, Wash.—Gibbs, MS., no. 248, B. A. E.

Hopahka Choctaw. The Choctaw formerly residing in Hopahka town in s. Mississippi, w. of Pearl r., who are spoken of as the most intelligent and influential of the tribe. Known also as Cobb Indians, from their leader.—Claiborne (1843) in Sen. Doc. 168, 28th Cong., 1st sess., 39, 65, 1844.

Hopedale. A Moravian Eskimo mission village on the e. coast of Labrador, established in 1782 (Hind, Lab. Penin., II, 199, 1863). Pop. about 155.

Hopehood. A Norridgewock chief, known among his people as Wahowa, or Wohawa, who acquired considerable notoriety in e. New England in the latter part of the 17th century. He was the son of a chief called Robinhood. Hopehood's career is pronounced by Drake (Ind. Biog., 130, 1832) to have been one of long and bloody exploits. He first appears as a participant in King Philip's war, when he made an attack on a house filled with women and children at Newichawanoc, about the site of Berwick, Me.; all escaped, however, except two children and the woman who bravely barred and defended the door. In 1676 he was one of the leaders of the e. New England tribes who held consultation with the English at Taconnet, Me. In 1685 he joined Kankamagus and other sachems in a letter to Gov. Cranfield of New Hampshire, protesting against the endeavor of the English to urge the Mohawk to attack them. On Mar. 18, 1690, he joined the French under Hertel in a massacre at Salmon falls, and in May attacked Fox Point, N. H., burning several houses, killing 14 persons, and carrying away 6 others. Not long afterward he penetrated the Iroquois country, where some Canadian Indians, mistaking him for an Iroquois, slew him and several of his companions. Hopehood was at one time a captive in the hands of the English and served as a slave for a season in Boston. (C. T.)

Hopi (contraction of Hópitú, 'peaceful ones,' or Hópitú-shímumu, 'peaceful all people'; their own name). A body of Indians, speaking a Shoshonean dialect, occupying 6 pueblos on a reservation of 2,472,320 acres in n. e. Arizona. The name "Moqui," or "Moki," by which they have been popularly known, means 'dead' in their own language, but as a tribal name it is seemingly of alien origin and of undetermined signification—perhaps from the Keresan language (Mósiha in Laguna, Mo-ts in Acoma, Mótsi in Sia, Cochiti, and San Felipe), whence Espejo's "Mohace" and "Mohoce" (1583) and Oñate's "Mohoqui" (1598). Bandelier and Cushing believed the Hopi country, the later province of Tusayan, to be identical with the Totontec of Fray Marcos de Niza.

History.—The Hopi first became known to white men in the summer of 1540, when Coronado, then at Cibola (Zuñi), dispatched Pedro de Tobar and Fray Juan de Padilla to visit 7 villages, constituting the province of Tusayan, toward the w. or n. w. The Spaniards were not received with friendliness at first, but the opposition of the natives was soon overcome and the party remained among the Hopi several days, learning from them of the existence of the Grand canyon of the Colorado, which Cardenas was later ordered to visit. The names of the Tusayan towns are not recorded by Coronado's chroniclers, so that with the exception of Oraibi, Shongopovi, Mishongnovi, Walpi, and Awatobi, it is not known with certainty what villages were inhabited when the Hopi first became known to the Spaniards. Omitting Awatobi, which was destroyed in 1700, with the possible exception of Oraibi none of these towns now occupies its 16th century site.

Francisco Sanchez Chamuscado visited Zuñi in 1581 and speaks of the Hopi country as Asay or Osay, but he did not visit it on account of the snow. Two years later, however, the province was visited by Antonio de Espejo, who journeyed 28 leagues from Zuñi to the first of the Hopi pueblos in 4 days. The Mohoce, or Mohace, of this explorer consisted of 5 large villages, the population of one of which, Agnato (Ahuato, Zaguato=Awatobi) he estimated at 50,000, a figure perhaps 25 times too great. The names of the other towns are not given. The natives had evidently forgotten the horses of Tobar and Cardenas of 43 years before, as they now became frightened at these strange animals. The Hopi presented Espejo with quantities of cotton "towels," perhaps kilts, for which they were celebrated then as now.

The next Spaniard to visit the "Mohoqui" was Juan de Oñate, governor and colonizer of New Mexico, who took possession of the country and made the Indians swear to obedience and vassalage on Nov. 15, 1598. Their spiritual welfare was assigned to Fray Juan de Claros, although no active missions were established among the Hopi until nearly a generation later. The 5 villages at this time, so far as it is possible to determine them, were Aguato or Aguatuybá (Awatobi), Gaspe (Gualpe=Walpi), Comupavi or Xumupami (Shongopovi), Majanani (Mishongnovi), and Olalla or Naybi (Oraibi).

The first actual missionary work undertaken among the Hopi was in 1629, on Aug. 20 of which year Francisco de Porras, Andrés Gutierrez, Cristobal de la Concepcion, and Francisco de San Buenaventura, escorted by 12 soldiers, reached Awatobi, where the mission of San Bernardino was founded in honor of the day, followed by the establishment of missions also at Walpi, Shongopovi, Mishongnovi, and Oraibi. Porras was poisoned by the natives of Awatobi in 1633. All the Hopi missions seem to have led a precarious existence until 1680, when in the general Pueblo revolt of that year four resident missionaries were killed and the churches destroyed. Henceforward no attempt was made to reestablish any of the missions save that of Awatobi in 1700, which so incensed the other Hopi that they fell upon it in the night, killing many of its people and compelling its permanent abandonment. Before the rebellion Mishongnovi and Walpi had become reduced to visitas of the missions of Shongopovi and Oraibi respectively. At the time of the outbreak the population of Awatobi was given as 800, Shongopovi 500, and Walpi 1,200. Oraibi, it is said, had 14,000 gentiles before their conversion, but that they were consumed by pestilence. This number is doubtless greatly exaggerated.

The pueblos of Walpi, Mishongnovi, and Shongopovi, situated in the foothills, were probably abandoned about the time of the Pueblo rebellion, and new villages were built on the adjacent mesas for the purpose of defense against the Spaniards, whose vengeance was needlessly feared. The reconquest of the New Mexican pueblos led many of their inhabitants to seek protection among the Hopi toward the close of the 17th century. Some of these built the pueblo of Payupki, on the Middle mesa, but were taken back and settled in Sandia about the middle of the 18th century. About the year 1700 Hano

WIKI, CHIEF OF THE SNAKE SOCIETY; PUEBLO OF WALPI
(VROMAN, PHOTO.)

was established on the East mesa, near Walpi, by Tewa from near Abiquiu, N. Mex., who came on the invitation of the Walpians. Here they have lived uninterruptedly, and although they have intermarried extensively with the Hopi, they retain their native speech and many of their distinctive tribal rites and customs. Two other pueblos, Sichomovi on the First mesa, built by Asa clans (q. v.)

from the Rio Grande, and Shipaulovi, founded by a colony from Shongopovi on the Second or Middle mesa, are both of comparatively modern origin, having been established about the middle of the 18th century, or about the time the Payupki people returned to their old home. Thus the pueblos of the ancient province of Tusayan now consist of the following: Walpi, Sichomovi, and Hano, on the First or East mesa; pop. (1900) 205, 119, and 160, respectively, exclusive of about 20 who have established homes in the plain; total 504. Mishongnovi, Shongopovi, and Shupaulovi, on the Second or Middle mesa; estimated pop. 244, 225, and 126; total 595. Oraibi, on the Third or West mesa; pop. (1890) 905. Total Hopi population (1904) officially given as 1,878.

Social organization.—The Hopi people are divided into several phratries, consisting of numerous clans, each of which preserves its distinct legends, ceremonies, and ceremonial paraphernalia. Out of these clan organizations have sprung religious fraternities, the head-men of which are still members of the dominant clan in each phratry. The relative importance of the clans varies in different pueblos; many that are extinct in some villages are powerful in others. The 12 phratries and their dependent clans as represented in the East Mesa villages are as follows:

HOPI MAN AND WIFE; PUEBLO OF MISHONGNOVI. (VROMAN, PHOTO.)

1. Ala-Lengya (Horn-flute) phratry: Ala (Horn), Pangwa (Mountain sheep), Sowinwa (Deer), Chubio (Antelope), Chaizra (Elk), Lehu (Seed grass), Shiwanu (Ant), Anu (Red-ant), Tokoanu (Black-ant), Wukoanu (Great-ant), Leliotu (Tiny-ant), Shakwalengya (Blue flute), Masilengya (Drab or All-colors flute).

2. Patki (Water-house or Cloud) phratry: Patki (Water-house), Kau (Corn), Onauwu (Rain-cloud), Tanaka (Rain-bow), Talawipiki (Lightning), Kwan (Agave), Siwapi ('Rabbit-brush'), Pawikya (aquatic animal [Duck]), Pakwa (Frog), Pavatiya (Tadpole), Murzibusi (Bean), Kawaibatunya (Watermelon), Yoki (Rain).

3. Chua (Snake) phratry: Chua (Snake), Tohouh (Puma), Huwi (Dove), Ushu (Columnar cactus), Puna (Cactus fruit), Yungyu (Opuntia), Nabowu (Opuntia frutescens), Piuwani (Marmot), Pihcha (Skunk), Kalashiyu (Raccoon), Tubish (Sorrow), Patung (Squash), Atoko (Crane), Kele (Pigeon-hawk), Chinunga (Thistle). The last 5 are extinct.

4. Pakab (Reed) phratry: Pakab (Reed), Kwahu (Eagle), Kwayo (Hawk), Koyonya (Turkey), Tawa (Sun), Paluna (Twin-brother of Puhukonghoya), Shohu (Star), Massikwayo (Chicken-hawk), Kahabi (Willow), Tebi (Greasewood).

5. Kokop (Wood) phratry: Kokop (Wood), Ishanu (Coyote), Kwewu (Wolf), Sikyataiyu (Yellow-fox), Letaiyo (Gray-fox), Zrohona (small mammal), Masi (Masau, dead, skeleton, Ruler of the Dead), Tuvou (Piñon), Hoko (Juniper), Awata (Bow), Sikyachi (small yellow bird), Tuvuchi (small red bird).

6. Tabo (Cottontail rabbit) phratry: Tabo (Cottontail rabbit), Sowi (Jackrabbit).

7. Tuwa (Sand or Earth) phratry: Kuch, Bachipkwasi, Nananawi, Momobi (varieties of lizard), Pisa (White sand), Tuwa (Red sand), Chukai (Mud), Sihu (Flower), Nanawu (small striped squirrel).

8. Honau (Bear) phratry: Honau (Bear), Tokochi (Wild-cat), Chosro (Blue-bird), Kokyan (Spider), Hekpa (Fir).

9. Kachina (Sacred dancer) phratry: Kachina (Sacred dancer), Gyazru (Paroquet), Angwusi (Raven), Sikyachi (Yellow bird), Tawamana (Blackbird), Salabi (Spruce), Suhubi (Cottonwood).

10. Asa (Tansy mustard) phratry: Asa (Tansy mustard), Chakwaina (Black-earth Kachina), Kwinyap (Oak), Hosboa (Chapparral cock), Posiwu (Magpie), Chisro (Snow-bunting), Puchkohu (Boomerang rabbit-stick), Pisha (Field-mouse).

11. Piba (Tobacco) phratry: Piba (Tobacco), Chongyo (Pipe).

12. Honani (Badger) phratry: Honani (Badger), Muinyawu (Porcupine), Wishoko (Turkey-buzzard), Buli (Butterfly), Buliso (Evening Primrose), Kachina (Sacred dancer).

Most of the above clans occur in the other Hopi pueblos, but not in Hano. There are a few clans in the Middle Mesa villages and in Oraibi that are not now represented at Walpi. For the Hano clans see Hano.

The Honau (Bear) clan is represented on each mesa and is supposed to be the oldest in Tusayan. It is said to have come originally from the Rio Grande valley, but on the East mesa the clan is now so reduced as to be threatened with extinction at Walpi within a generation.

The Chua (Snake) people were among the earliest to settle in Tusayan, joining the Bears and living with them when Walpi was in the foot-hills. The legends of this people declare that they came from pueblos in the N., near Navaho mt., on the Rio Colorado. In their northern home they were united with the Ala (Horn) people, who separated from them in their southerly migration and united with the Flute people at the now-ruined pueblo of Lengyanobi, s. of the East mesa. The combined Snake and Ala people control the Antelope and Snake fraternities, and possess the fetishes and other paraphernalia of the famous Snake dance. The palladium of this people is kept at Walpi, thus leading to the belief that this was the first Hopi home of the Snake and kindred people.

The Lengya (Flute) people, once very strong, are now almost extinct at the East mesa, but are numerous in some of the other pueblos. They are said to have lived formerly at Lengyanobi and to have come to Tusayan from the S., or from pueblos along Little Colorado r. The chief of the Flute priesthood controls the Flute ceremony, which occurs biennially, alternating with the Snake dance. There are two divisions in the Flute fraternity, one known as the Drab Flute and the other as the Blue Flute, the former being extinct at Walpi. Sichomovi and Hano have no representatives of this phratry, but it is represented in all the other Hopi villages.

There are Ala, or Horn, people in most of the Hopi pueblos, and clans belonging to this phratry are named generally after horned animals. Their ancestors came to Walpi with the Flute people and were well received, because they had formerly lived with the Snake people in the N. They now join the Snake priest in the Antelope rites of the Snake dance.

The Patki (Water-house, or Cloud) phratry includes a number of clans that came to the Hopi country from the S., and the now ruined villages along the Little Colorado are claimed by this people to have been their former homes. They were comparatively late arrivals, and brought a high form of sun and serpent worship that is still prominent in the Winter Solstice ceremony. The Sun priests, who are well represented in most of the Hopi pueblos and are especially strong at Walpi, accompanied this people. Others, as the Piba or Tobacco clan, came to Walpi from Awatobi on the destruction of the latter pueblo in 1700.

The Pakab (Reed) people also came from Awatobi, settling first at the base of the Middle mesa, whence they went to Walpi. They control the Warrior society called Kalektaka.

The Kokop (Wood) phratry came from Sikyatki and have a few representatives in Walpi and in the other villages. The traditional home of the Kokop and allied clans was Jemez (q. v.), in New Mexico.

The Honani or Badger phratry originally lived at Awatobi, and after the destruction of that pueblo went to Oraibi and Walpi. It is now largely represented in Sichomovi, which village it joined the Asa in founding. The Buli, or Butterfly, clan is closely related to the Honani people, and both are probably of Keresan or of Tewa origin.

HOPI MAN AND WIFE

The Kachina phratry is also of New Mexican origin, and in some of the pueblos shares with the Honani the control of the masked dance organization called Kachinas; but it is not strong in Walpi.

The Asa people were Tewa in kin, coming originally from the Rio Grande valley and settling successively at Zuñi and in the Canyon de Chelly. This people, with the Honani, founded Sichomovi, and is now one of the strongest clans on the East mesa. Only one or two members now live at Walpi; a few live in the Middle Mesa villages, but none at Oraibi.

Archaeology.—The erection and final abandonment of their villages by the various Hopi clans during their migrations and successive shiftings have left many ruins, now consisting largely of mounds, both within their present territory and remote from it. Ruins of villages which the traditions of the Hopi ascribe to their ancestors are found as far n. as the Rio Colo. rado, w. to Flagstaff, Ariz., s. to the Verde valley, Tonto basin, and the Rio Gila, and e. to the Rio Grande in New Mexico. Therefore, although Shoshonean in language, the present Hopi population and culture are composite, made up of accretions from widely divergent sources and from people of different linguistic stocks. Some of the Hopi ruins have been explored by the Bureau of American Ethnology, the National Museum, and the Field Museum of Natural History. One of the most celebrated of these is Awatobi (q. v.) on Jeditho or Antelope mesa, the walls of whose mission church, built probably in 1629, are still partly standing.

Sikyatki (q. v.), another large and now well-known ruin, in the foot-hills of the East mesa, was occupied in prehistoric times by Kokop clans of Keresan people from the Rio Grande country. They had attained a highly artistic development as exhibited by their pottery, which is probably the finest ware ever manufactured by Indians n. of Mexico.

The original clans of Walpi are said to have occupied three sites after their arrival in the Hopi country, settling first on the terrace w. of the East mesa, then higher up and toward the s., where the foundation walls of a Spanish mission church can still be traced. From this point they moved to the present Walpi on the summit of the mesa, apparently soon after the Pueblo revolt of 1680. See Kisakobi, Kuchaptwela.

Payupki, a picturesque ruin on the Middle mesa, was settled by Tanoan people (apparently Tigua) about the year 1700 and abandoned about 1742, when the inhabitants were taken back to the Rio Grande and settled at Sandia.

Chukubi, a prehistoric pueblo midway between Payupki and Shupaulovi, also on the Middle mesa, was built probably by southern clans whose descendants form most of the present population of the Middle mesa villages.

Old Shongopovi lay in the foot-hills at the base of the Middle mesa, below the present pueblo of that name. This town was inhabited at the time of the Spanish advent, and near it was built a church the walls of which, up to a few years ago, served as a sheep corral. Its original inhabitants came from the Little Colorado valley.

The ruins of Old Mishongnovi are on the terrace below the present pueblo. Its walls are barely traceable. From its cemetery beautiful pottery, resembling that of Sikyatki, has been exhumed.

Some of the most important ruins of the Hopi country are situated on the rim of Antelope mesa, not far from Awatobi, and are remains of Keresan pueblos. Among these are Kawaika and Chakpahu. In the same neighborhood are the ruins of Kokopki, once occupied by the Wood clan, originally from Jemez. North of the present Hopi mesas are ruins at Kishuba, where the Kachina clan once lived, and at Lengyanobi, the home of the Flute people. The ruins along the lower Little Colorado, near Black falls, known as Wukoki, and those called Homolobi, near Winslow, are likewise claimed by the Hopi as the homes of ancestral clans. Wukoki may have been inhabited by the Snake people, while the inhabitants of Homolobi were related to southern clans that went to Walpi and Zuni.

Characteristics and customs.—The Hopi are rather small of stature, but muscular and agile. Both sexes have reddish-brown skin, high cheek-bones, straight broad nose, slanting eyes, and large mouths with gentle expression. As a rule the occiput exhibits cradle-board flattening (see Artificial head deformation). The proportion of albinos is large. The hair is usually straight and black, but in some individuals it is brownish and in others it is wavy. The hair of the men is commonly "banged" in front or cut in "terraces"; the long hair behind is gathered in a sort of short queue and tied at the neck. The matrons wear their hair in two coils which hang in front. On reaching puberty the girls dress their hair in whorls at the sides of the head, in imitation of the squash blossom, the symbol of fertility (see illustration). The women tend to corpulency and age rapidly; they are prolific, but the infant mortality is very great (see Health and Disease). Boys and girls usually have fine features, and the latter mature early, often being married at the age of 15 or 16 years. Bachelors and spinsters are rare. A few men dress as women and perform women's work.

In mental traits the Hopi are the equal of any Indian tribe. They possess a highly artistic sense, exhibited by their pottery, basketry, and weaving. They are industrious, imitative, keen in bargaining, have some inventive genius, and are quick of perception. Among themselves they are often merry, greatly appreciating jests and practical jokes. They rarely forget a kindness or an injury, and often act from impulse and in a childlike way. They are tractable, docile, hospitable, and frugal, and have always sought to be peaceable, as their tribal name indicates. They believe in witchcraft, and recognize many omens of good and bad.

The Hopi are monogamists, and as a rule are faithful in their marital relations. Murder is unknown, theft is rare, and lying is universally condemned. Children are respectful and obedient to their elders and are never flogged except when ceremonially initiated as kachinas. From their earliest years they are taught industry and the necessity of leading upright lives.

The clothing of the Hopi men consists of a calico shirt and short pantaloons, and breechcloth, moccasins, and hair bands. Bracelets, necklaces of shell, turquoise, or silver, and earrings, are commonly worn.

HOPI MAIDEN. (MOONEY, PHOTO.)

The women wear a dark-blue woolen blanket of native weave, tied with an embroidered belt, and a calico manta or shawl over one shoulder; their moccasins, which are worn only occasionally, are made of ox-hide and buckskin, like those of the men, to which are attached leggings of the same material, but now often replaced by sheepskin. The ear-pendants of the women and girls consist of small wooden disks, ornamented with turquoise mosaic on one side. Small children generally run about naked, and old men while working in the fields or taking part in ceremonies divest themselves of all clothing except the breechcloth.

The governing body of the Hopi is a council of hereditary clan elders and chiefs of religious fraternities. Among these officials there is recognized a speaker chief and a war chief, but there has never been a supreme chief of all the Hopi. Following ancient custom, various activities inhere in certain clans; for instance, one clan controls the warrior society, while another observes the sun and determines the calendar. Each pueblo has an hereditary village chief, who directs certain necessary communal work, such as the cleaning of springs, etc. There seems to be no punishment for crime except sorcery, to which, under Hopi law, all transgressions may be reduced. No punishment of a witch or wizard is known to have been inflicted at Walpi in recent years, but there are traditions of imprisonment and of the significant and mysterious disappearance of those accused of witchcraft in former times.

The Hopi possess a rich mythology and folklore, inherited from a remote past. They recognize a large number of supernatural beings, the identification of which is sometimes most difficult. Their mythology is poetic and highly imaginative, and their philosophy replete with inconsistency. Their songs and prayers, some of which are in foreign languages, as the Keresan and Tewa, are sometimes very beautiful. They have peculiar marriage customs, and elaborate rites in which children are dedicated to the sun. The bodies of the dead are sewed in blankets and deposited with food offerings among the rocks of the mesas. The Hopi believe in a future life in an underworld, but have no idea of future punishment. They smoke straight pipes in ceremonies, but on secular occasions prefer cigarettes of tobacco wrapped in corn-husks. They never invented an intoxicating drink, and until within recent years none of them had any desire for such. Although they have seasons of ceremonial gaming, they do not gamble; and they have no oaths, but many, especially among the elders, are garrulous and fond of gossip.

Maize being the basis of their subsistence, agriculture is the principal industry of the Hopi. On the average 2,500 acres are yearly planted in this cereal, the yield in 1904 being estimated at 25,000 bushels. Perhaps one-third of the annual crop is preserved in event of future failure through drought or other causes. There are also about 1,000 acres in peach orchards and 1,500 acres in beans, melons, squashes, pumpkins, onions, chile, sunflowers, etc. Cotton, wheat, and tobacco are also raised in small quantities, but in early times native cotton was extensively grown. In years of stress desert plants, which have always been utilized to some extent for food, form an important part of the diet.

The Hopi have of late become more or less pastoral. Flocks (officially estimated in 1904 at 56,000 sheep and 15,000 goats), acquired originally from the Spaniards, supply wool and skins. They own also about 1,500 head of cattle, and 4,350 horses, burros, and mules. Dogs, chickens, hogs, and turkeys are their only other domesticated animals. All small desert animals are eaten; formerly antelope, elk, and deer were captured by being driven into pitfalls or corrals. Communal rabbit hunts are common, the animals being killed with wooden clubs shaped like boomerangs (see Rabbit sticks). Prairie dogs are drowned out of their burrows, coyotes are caught in pitfalls made of stones, and small birds are captured in snares.

The Hopi are skilled in weaving, dyeing, and embroidering blankets, belts, and kilts. Their textile work is durable, and shows a great variety of weaves. The dark-blue blanket of the Hopi woman is an important article of commerce among the Pueblos, and their embroidered ceremonial blankets, sashes, and kilts made of cotton have a ready sale among neighboring tribes. Although the Hopi ceramic art has somewhat deteriorated in modern times, fair pottery is still made among the people of Hano, where one family has revived the superior art of the earlier villagers. They weave basketry in a great variety of ways at the Middle Mesa pueblos and in Oraibi; but, with the exception of the familiar sacred-meal plaques, which are well made and brightly colored, the workmanship is crude. The Hopi are clever in making masks and other religious paraphernalia from hides, and excel in carving and painting dolls, representing kachinas, which are adorned with bright feathers and cloth. They likewise manufacture mechanical toys, which are exhibited in some of their dramatic entertainments. Nowhere among the aborigines of North America are the Hopi excelled in dramaturgic exhibitions, in some of which their imitations of birds and other animals are marvelously realistic.

The Hopi language is classified as Shoshonean; but, according to Gatschet, it "seems to contain many archaic words and forms not encountered in the other dialects, and many vocables of its own." The published vocabularies are very limited, and comparatively little is known of the grammatical structure of the language; but it is evident that it contains many words of Keresan, Tewa, Pima, Zuni, Ute, Navaho, and Apache derivation. As among other Southwestern tribes a number of words are modified Spanish, as those for horse, sheep, melon, and the names for other intrusive articles and objects. Slight dialectic differences are noticeable in the speech of Oraibi and Walpi, but the language of the other pueblos is practically uniform. The Hopi language is melodious and the enunciation clear. The speech of the people of Awatobi is said to have had a nasal intonation, while the Oraibi speak drawlingly. Although they accompany their speech with gestures, few of the Hopi understand the sign language. The Keresan people have furnished many songs, with their words, and Zuni and Pima songs have also been introduced. Some of the prayers also have archaic Tanoan or Keresan words.

The Hopi are preëminently a religious people, much of their time, especially in winter, being devoted to ceremonies for rain and the growth of crops. Their mythology is a polytheism largely tinged with ancestor worship and permeated with fetishism. They originally had no conception of a great spirit corresponding to God, nor were they ever monotheists; and, although they have accepted the teachings of Christian missionaries, these have not had the effect of altering their primitive beliefs. Their greatest gods are deified nature powers, as the Mother Earth and the Sky god—the former mother, and the latter father, of the races of men and of marvelous animals, which are conceived of as closely allied.

The earth is spoken of as having always existed. In Hopi mythology the human race was not created, but generated from the earth, from which man emerged through an opening called the sipapu, now typified by the Grand canyon of the Colorado. The dead are supposed to return to the underworld. The Sky Father and the Earth Mother have many names and are personated in many ways; the latter is represented by a spider; the former by a bird—a hawk or an eagle. Such names as Fire god, Germ god, and others are attributive designations of the great male powers of nature, or its male germinative principle. All supernatural beings are supposed to influence the rain and consequently the growth of crops. Every clan religion exhibits strong ancestral worship, in which a male and a female ancestral tutelary of the clan, called by a distinctive clan name, is preëminent. The Great Horned or Plumed Serpent, a form of sky god, derived from the S., and introduced by the Patki and other southern clans, is prominent in sun ceremonies. The number of subordinate supernatural personages is almost unlimited. These are known as "kachinas," a term referring to the magic power inherent in every natural object for good or for bad. Many of these kachinas are personations of clan ancestors, others are simply beings of unknown relationship but endowed with magic powers. Each kachina possesses individual characteristics, and is represented in at least six different symbolic colors. The world-quarters, or six cardinal points, play an important rôle in Hopi mythology and ritual. Fetishes, amulets, charms, and mascots are commonly used to insure luck in daily occupations, and for health and success in hunting, racing, gaming, and secular performances. The Hopi ceremonial calendar consists of a number of monthly festivals, ordinarily of 9 days' duration, of which the first 8 are devoted to secret rites in kivas (q. v.) or in rooms set apart for that purpose, the final day being generally devoted to a spectacular public ceremony or "dance." Every great festival is held under the auspices of a special religious fraternity or fraternities, and is accompanied with minor events indicating a former duration of 20 days. Among the most important religious fraternities are the Snake, Antelope, Flute, Sun, Lala-kontu, Owakutu, Mamzrautu, Kachina, Tatakyamu, Wuwuchimtu, Aaltu, Kwakwautu, and Kalektaka. There are also other organized priesthoods, as the Yaya and the Poshwypkia, whose functions are mainly those of doctors or healers. Several ancient priesthoods, known by the names Koyinsi, Paiakyamu, and Chukuwypkia, function as clowns or fun-makers during the sacred dances of the Kachinas. The ceremonial year is divided into two parts, every great ceremony having a major and a minor performance occurring about 6 months apart; and every 4 years, when initiations occur, most ceremonies are celebrated in extenso. The so-called Snake and Flute dances are performed biennially at all the pueblos except Sichomovi and Hano, and alternate with each other. Ceremonies are also divided into those with masked and those with unmasked participants, the former, designated kachinas, extending from January to July, the latter occurring in the remaining months of the year. The chief of each fraternity has a badge of his office and conducts both the secret and the open features of the ceremony. The fetishes and idols used in the sacred rites are owned by the priesthood and are arranged by its chief in temporary altars (q. v.), in front of which dry-paintings (q. v.) are made. The Hopi ritual is extraordinarily complex and time-consuming, and the paraphernalia required is extensive. Although the Hopi cultus has become highly modified by a semi-arid environment, it consisted originally of ancestor worship, embracing worship of the great powers of nature—sky, sun, moon, fire, rain, and earth. A confusion of effect and cause and an elaboration of the doctrine of signatures pervade all their rites, which in the main may be regarded as sympathetic magic.

Consult Dorsey and Voth in the publications of the Field Columbian Museum; Fewkes in Reports of the Bureau of American Ethnology and in various papers in the American Anthropologist, the Journal of American Folk-lore, and the Journal of American Ethnology and Archaeology; Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 1891. See Pueblos, Shoshonean, and the pueblos above named.

(J. W. F.)

A-ar-ke.—White, MS. Hist. Apaches, B. A. E., 1875 (Apache name). Ah-mo-kai.—Eaton in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iv, 221, 1854 (Zuni name). Ai-yah-kin-nee.—Ibid., 220 (Navaho name). Al-qui.—Escalante (1775-1776) quoted by Baneroff, Ariz. and N. Mex., 185, 1889. Amaques.—Short, N. Am. of Antiqu., 332, 1880 (wrong identification). Amaqui.—Ibid. A'moekwikwe.—Ten Kate, Reizen in N. Am., 264, 1885 ('smallpox-folk'; Zuni name). A-mo-kini.—Bowman in Ind. Aff. Rep., 136, 1884 (Zuni name; 'kini' = 'kwe', 'people'). A-mo-kwi.—Vanderver in Ind. Aff. Rep., 168, 1890 (Zuni name). A'-mu-kwi-kwe.—Ten Kate, Synonymie, 7, 1884 ('smallpox people'; Zuni name). Asay.—Bustamante and Gallegos (1582) in Doc. Ind., xv, 86, 1871 (also Osay, p. 93). Bokeal.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Sandia Tigua name). Buhk'hérk.—Ibid. (Isleta Tigua name for Tusayan). Búkin.—Ibid. (Isleta name for the people). Chinouns.—Hoffman in Bull. Soc. d'Anthrop. Paris, 206, 1883 (= 'Moquis de l'Arizona'). Ci-nyu-múh.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, v, 33, 1892 ('people'; own name; c=sh). Cummoa-qui.—Viceroy Monterey (ca. 1602) in Doc. Ind., xvi, 60, 1871. Cummoaqui.—Viceroy Monterey cited by Duro, Don Diego de Peñalosa, 24, 1882. E-ar'-ke.—White, Apache Names of Ind. Tribes, MS., B. A. E., 2, n. d. (= 'live high up on top of the mesas'; Apache name). Eyakini diné.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Navaho name). Hape-ka.—Hodge, Arizona, 169, 1877 (= 'Hépekyakwe', 'excrement people'; a Zuni name). Hapitus.—Bowman in Ind. Aff. Rep., 136, 1884 (given as their own name). Ho-pees.—Dellenbaugh in Bull. Buffalo Soc. Nat. Sci., 170, 1877 ('our people'; own name). Hopi.—Fewkes in Am. Anthrop., v, 9, 1892. Hopii.—Bourke, Moquis of Ariz., 117, 1884 (own name). Hopite.—Ten Kate, Reizen in N. Am., 259, 1885 ('the good ones?'; own name). Hópítú.—Ibid. Hopituh.—Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 17, 1891 (own name). Hó-pi-tuh-ci'-nu-múh.—Fewkes in Am. Anthrop., v, 9, 1892 ('peaceful people'; own name; c=sh). Hó-pi-tuh-ci'-nyu-múh.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, v, 33, 1892. Hó-pi-tuh-lei'-nyu-muh.—Donaldson, Moqui Pueblo Inds., 13, 1893 (misprint). Húpi.—Lummis quoted by Donaldson, ibid., 71. Joso.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 612, 1900 (Tewa name). Khoso.—Hodge cited in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 642, 1898 (Santa Clara name). Koco.—Fewkes in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 642, 1898 (Hano Tewa name; c=sh). Koso.—Ibid. K'o-so-o.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (San Ildefonso Tewa name). Maastoetsjkwe.—Ten Kate, Reizen in N. Am., 260, 1885 ('the land of Másawé', god of the earth; given as the name of their country). Macueques.—Arrievita, Cronica Seráfica, II, 424, 1792 (probably identical). Magui.—Ten Broeck in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iv, 81, 1854 (misprint). Makis.—Bowman in Ind. Aff. Rep., 136, 1884. Maqui.—Venegas, Hist. Cal., II, 194, 1759. Mastut'-kwe.—Ten Kate, Synonymie, 6, 1884 ('the country of Ma-sa-wé, given as the Hopi name for their country). Mawkeys.—Bartlett in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, 17, 1848; Squier in Am. Review, 523, Nov. 1848 (traders' corruption of 'Moqui'). Miqui.—Johnston in Emory, Recon., 569, 1848. Mocas.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 561, 1851. Mochi.—Clavijero, Storia della California, map, 1789. Mochies.—Calhoun (1849) in Cal. Mess. and Corresp., 221, 1850. Mogeris.—Ruxton misquoted by Simpson, Report, 57, 1850. Mogin.—Wilkins (1859) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 69, 36th Cong., 1st sess., 6, 1860 (misprint). Mogui.—Ogilby, America, map, 1671. Mohace.—Espejo (1583) in Doc. Indé., XV, 119, 1871. Mohoce.—Ibid. Mohóce.—Onate (1598) ibid., XVI, 307, 1871. Mohóce.—Ibid., 115. Mohotze.—Hakluyt, Voyages, 462, 1600. Moke.—Gatschet in Mag. Am. Hist., 260, 1882. Mokey.—Pattie, Pers. Narr., 91, 1833. Moki.—Hervas, Idea dell' Universo, XVII, 76, 1784. Monkey Indians.—Wilkes, U. S. Expl. Exped., IV, 472, 1845. Monquai.—Prichard, Physical Hist. Mankind, V, 430, 1847. Mooqui.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629), Relacion, in Land of Sunshine, 48, Dec. 1899. Mo-o-tzá.—Bandelier in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archaeol., III, 67, 1892 (Keresan name). Moq.—Saldivar (1618) quoted by Prince, N. Mex., 176, 1883. Moqui.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. Am., 260, 1885 (misprint). Moqua.—Palmer in Am. Nat., XII, 310, 1878. Moques.—Blaeu, Atlas, XII, 62, 1667. Moqui.—Benavides, Memorial, 33, 1690. Moquian Pueblos.—Shufeldt, Ind. Types of Beauty, 14, 1891. Moquinas.—Villa-Señor, Theatre Am., pt. 2, 426, 1748. Moquinos.—Kino (1697) in Doc. Hist Mex., 4th s., I, 285, 1856; Rivera, Diario, leg. 950, 1736. Moquins.—Poston in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1863, 388, 1864. Moquitch.—Barber in Am. Nat., II, 693, 1877 (Ute name). Moquois.—Holmes in 10th Rep. Hayden Surv., 403, 1878. Moquy.—Duro, Don Diego de Peñalosa, 63, 1882. Morqui.—Hoffman in Jour. Anthropol. Inst., IX, 465, 1880. Mósi.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Laguna name for Tusayan). Mósiicha.—Ibid. (Laguna name for the Hopi). Mosquies.—Calhoun in Ind. Aff. Rep., 65, 1850. Mo-ts.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Acoma name for the Hopi). Mo-tsi.—Ibid. (Cochiti name). Mouguis.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May, 18, 1860. Moxi.—Palou, Relacion Hist., 251, 1787. Muca.—Garcés cited by Escudero, Noticias Estad. de Chihuahua, 228, 1834. Mu-gua.—Bandelier, Gilded Man, 149, 1893 (misprint). Mú-ké.—Corbuser, Yavapai MS. vocab., B. A. E., 27, 1873-75 (Yavapai name). Munchies.—Sage, Scenes in Rocky Mts., 198, 1846. Muqui.—Garcés (1775-76) cited by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 137, 395, 1889. Opii.—Bourke, Moquis of Ariz., 117, 1884 (given as their own name). Osaij.—Bandelier in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archaeol., III, 62, 1892 (misprint of the following). Osay.—Bustamante and Gallegos (1582) in Doc. Indé., XV, 93, 1871 (also Asay, p. 86). Pokkenvolck.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. Am., 259, 1885 (Shinumo, or). Shi-nu-mos.—Powell in Scribner's Mag., 202, 212, 1875 (own name: trans., 'we, the wise'). Shumi.—Bourke, Moquis of Ariz., 118, 1884 (given as the sacred name for themselves). Ta-sa-ün.—Vandever in Ind. Aff. Rep., 168, 1890 ('the place of isolated buttes'; Navaho name of surrounding country). Tesayan.—Prince, N. Mex., 125, 1883. Tonteca.—Sansón, L'Amérique, 30, 1657. Tonteca.—Mota-Padilla, Hist. de la Conquista, 111, 1742. Tontontecac.—Wyttliet, Hist. des Indes, map, 66-67, 1605. Topin-keua.—Cushing cited by Bandelier in Archaeol. Inst. Papers, IV, 368, 1892 (or Topin-teua; given as the Zuñi name of which 'Totontecac' is a corruption). Top-in-te-ua.—Bandelier, ibid., V, 175, 1890; IV, 368, 1892. Totantecac.—Marcos de Nica (1539) in Hakluyt, Voy., 443, 1600 (misprint). Totontecac.—Ibid., 440; Coronado (1540) ibid., 452 (see Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 114; V, 175, 1890). Toton-teal.—Loew (1875) in Wheeler Surv. Rep., VII, 333, 1879 (misprint). Tototeco.—Alarcon (1540) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., IX, 315, 1838. Tototecac.—Visscher, America Nova Descr., first map, 1601. Tucan.—Writer of 1542 in Smith, Colec. Doc. Fla.,

I, 149, 1857. Tucano.—Coronado (1542) in Hakluyt, Voy., III, 453, 1600. Tucayan.—Castaneda (ca. 1565) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., IX, 181, 1838; Jaramillo, ibid., 370. Tuehano.—Zaltieri, map (1566) in Winsor, Hist. Am., II, 451, 1886; Wyttliet, Hist. des Indes, map, 114-116, 1605. Tusan.—Coronado (1540) quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 46, 137, 1889. Tusayan.—Castaneda (ca. 1565) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., IX, 58, 1838. Tusayan Moqui.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 115, 1890. Tu-se-an.—Bowman in Ind. Aff. Rep., 136, 1884 (said to be the Navaho name for the Rocky mts.). Tusyan.—Stevenson in 2d Rep. B. A. E., 328, 1883. Tuzan.—Coronado (1540) in Doc. Indé., XIV, 320, 1870. Usaya.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, V, 170, 1890 (or Usayan; 'names given anciently by the Zuñis to the principal pueblos of Moqui'). Usaya-kue.—Ibid., 115 (= 'people of Usaya,' the Zuñi name of 'two of the largest Moqui villages'; hence T-usayan). Usayan.—Ibid., 170. Welsh Indians.—Prichard, Phys. Hist. Mankind, V, 431, 1847. White Indians.—Sage, Scenes in Rocky Mts., 198, 1846. Whiwnai.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Sandia Tigua name).

Hopitsewah. Mentioned as a "sacred town" of the "Laguna" Indians, a Pomo band on the w. shore of Clear lake, Mendocino co., Cal.—Revere, Tour of Duty, 130, 1849.

Hopkins, Sarah. See Winnemucca.

Hopnis, Hopnuts. See Hobnuts.

Hopnomkoyo. A former Maidu village on Lights cr., in the n. part of Plumas co., Cal.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XVII, pl. xxxviii, 1905.

Hopocan ('[tobacco] pipe'). A Delaware chief, known to the whites as Captain Pipe, and after 1763 among his people as Konieschguanokee ('Maker of Daylight'). An hereditary sachem of the Wolf division of the Delawares, he was war chief of the tribe. He was also prominent in council, having a reputation for wisdom and a remarkable gift of oratory. In the French war he fought against the English with courage and skill. He was present at the conference with Geo. Croghan at Ft Pitt in 1759, and in 1763 or 1764 tried to take the fort by stratagem, but failed, and was captured. After peace was concluded he settled with his clan on upper Muskingum r., Ohio, and in 1771 sent a "speech" to Gov. Penn. He attended the councils of the tribe at the Turtle village and at Ft Pitt until the Revolutionary war broke out, when he accepted British pay and fought the Americans and the friendly Indians, but told the British commander at Detroit that he would not act savagely toward the whites, having no interest in the quarrel, save to procure subsistence for his people, and expecting that when the English made peace with the colonists the Indians would be punished for any excesses that they committed. Col. William Crawford, however, in retaliation for the massacre of Moravian Indians by a party of white men, was put to torture when he fell into Captain Pipe's hands after the ignominious rout of his regiment of volunteers near the upper Sandusky in May, 1782. Pipe signed the treaty of Ft Pitt, Pa., Sept. 17, 1778, the first treaty between the United States and the Indians; he was also a signer of the treaties of Ft McIntosh, Ohio, Jan. 21, 1785, and Ft Harmar, Ohio, Jan. 9, 1787. In 1780 he removed from his home on Walhonding cr., at or near White Woman's town, to old Upper Sandusky, or Cranestown, Ohio, thence to Captain Pipe's village, about 10 m. s. e. of Upper Sandusky, on land that was ceded to the United States in 1829. He died in 1794. See Drake, Hist. Ind., 534, 1880; Darlington, Jour. of Col. May, 94, 1873; Pa. Archives, iv, 441, 1833.

Hoquiam. A Chehalis village on a creek of the same name, n. shore of Grays harbor, Wash.

Ho-ki-um.—Ross in Ind. Aff. Rep., 18, 1870. Hokwa-imits.—Gibbs, MS., No. 248. B. A. E. (Chehalis name). Hoquiam.—Land Office map of Washington, 1891. Hoquium.—Gibbs, op. cit.

Horocon. Marked on a map of 1671 as a people living on the headwaters of Hudson r., N. Y., w. of L. Champlain, and placed by others in the same general region. Rutenber says they were a part of the Mahican who occupied the L. George district, but Shea considers the word a mere misprint for Hicrocoi, Hierocoyes, or Iroquois, which is doubtful.

Herechenes.—Gatschet in Am. Antiq., iii, 321, 1881.

Herekenes.—Fleet (1632) quoted, ibid. Hori-cons.—Rutenber, Tribes Hudson R., 41, 1872. Horikans.—Ogilby, America, map, 1671.

Hormiguero (Span.: 'ant hill'). A village, probably of the Pima, on the Pima and Maricopa res., Gila r., Ariz.; pop. 510 in 1860, 514 in 1869. Cf. Ormejea. Herringuen.—Browne, Apache Country, 290, 1869. Hormiguero.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 19, 1863.

Hornotlimed. A Seminole chief who came into notice chiefly through a single incident of the Seminole war of 1817-18. He resided at the Fowl Town, in n. w. Florida, at the beginning of hostilities, but was forced to flee to Mikasuki. On Nov. 30, 1817, three vessels arrived at the mouth of Apalachicola r. with supplies for the garrison farther up the stream, but on account of contrary winds were unable to ascend. Lieut. Scott was sent to their assistance with a boat and 40 men, who, on their return from the vessels, were ambushed by Hornotlimed and a band of warriors, all being killed except 6 soldiers, who jumped overboard and swam to the opposite shore. Twenty soldiers who had been left to aid the vessels, and an equal number of women and sick who were with them, fell into the hands of Hornotlimed and his warriors and were slain and scalped. The scalps were carried to Mikasuki and displayed on red sticks as tokens of the victory. Mikasuki was soon afterward visited by American troops and, although most of the Indians escaped, Hornotlimed was captured and immediately hanged. Gen. Jackson called him "Homattlemico, the old Red-stick," the latter name being applied because he was a chief of the Mikasuki band, known also as Red sticks, because they erected red-painted poles in their village. (C. T.)

Horocroc. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Horses. The first horses seen by the mainland Indians were those of the Spanish invaders of Mexico. A few years later De Soto brought the horse into Florida and westward to the Mississippi, while Coronado, on his march to Quivira in 1541, introduced it to the Indians of the great plains. When the Aztec saw the mounted men of Cortés they supposed horse and man to be one and were greatly alarmed at the strange animal. The classical Centaur owed its origin to a like misconception. A tradition existed among the Pawnee that their ancestors mistook a mule ridden by a man for a single animal and shot at it from concealment, capturing the mule when the man fell.

The horse was a marvel to the Indians and came to be regarded as sacred. For a long time it was worshipped by the Aztec, and by most of the tribes was considered to have a mysterious or sacred character. Its origin was explained by a number of myths representing horses to have come out of the earth through lakes and springs or from the sun. When Antonio de Espejo visited the Hopi of Arizona in 1583, the Indians spread cotton scarfs or kilts on the ground for the horses to walk on, believing the latter to be sacred. This sacred character is sometimes shown in the names given to the horse, as the Dakota sunka wakan, 'mysterious dog.' Its use in transportation accounts for the term 'dog' often applied to it, as the Siksika ponokamita, 'elk dog'; Cree mistatim, 'big dog'; Shawnee mishawā, 'elk.' (See Chamberlain in Am Ur-Quell, 1894.)

The southern plains proved very favorable, and horses greatly multiplied. Stray and escaped horses formed wild herds, and, as they had few carnivorous enemies, their increase and spread were astonishingly rapid. The movement of the horse was from s. to n., at about an equal rate on both sides of the mountains. It moved northward in three ways: (1) The increase of the wild horses and their dispersal into new regions was rapid. (2) For 150 years before the first exploration of the W. by residents of the United States, Spaniards from the Mexican provinces had been making long journeys northward and eastward to trade with the Indians, even, it is said, as far N. as the camps of the Kiowa, when these were living on Tongue r. (3) As soon as the Indians nearest to the Spanish settlements appreciated the uses of the horse, they began to make raiding expeditions to capture horses, and as knowledge of the animal extended, the tribes still farther to the N. began to procure horses from those next S. of them. So it was that tribes in the S. had the first horses and always had the greatest number, while the tribes farthest N. obtained them last and always had fewer of them. Some tribes declare that they possessed horses for some time before they learned the uses to which they could be put.

On the N. Atlantic coast horses were imported early in the 17th century, and the Iroquois possessed them toward the end of that century and were regularly breeding them prior to 1736. For the northern plains they seem to have been first obtained from the region W. of the Rocky mts., the Siksika having obtained their first horses from the Kutenai, Shoshoni, and other tribes across the mountains, about the year 1800. W. T. Hamilton, who met the Nez Percés, Cayuse, and other tribes of the Columbia region between 1840 and 1850, tells of the tradition among them of the time when they had no horses; but having learned of their existence in the S., of the purposes for which they were used, and of their abundance, they made up a strong war party, went S., and captured horses. It is impossible to fix the dates at which any tribes procured their horses, and, since many of the Plains tribes wandered in small bodies which seldom met, it is likely that some bands acquired the horse a long time before other sections of the same tribe. The Cheyenne relate variously that they procured their first horses from the Arapaho, from the Kiowa, and from the Shoshoni, and all these statements may be true for different bodies. A very definite statement is made that they received their first horses from the Kiowa at the time when the Kiowa lived on Tongue r. The Cheyenne did not cross the Missouri until toward the end of the 17th century. For some time they resided on that stream, and their progress in working westward and southward to the Black-hills, Powder r., and Tongue r. was slow. They probably did not encounter the Kiowa on Tongue r. long before the middle of the 18th century, and it is possible that the Kiowa did not then possess horses. Black Moccasin, reputed trustworthy in his knowledge and his dates, declared that the Cheyenne obtained horses about 1780. The Pawnee are known to have had horses and to have used them in hunting early in the 18th century. Carver makes no mention of seeing horses among the Sioux that he met in 1767 in W. Minnesota; but in 1776 the elder Alexander Henry saw them among the Assiniboin, while Umfreville a few years later spoke of horses as common, some being branded, showing that they had been taken from Spanish settlements.

The possession of the horse had an important influence on the culture of the Indians and speedily changed the mode of life of many tribes. The dog had previously been the Indian's only domestic animal, his companion in the hunt, and to some extent his assistant as a burden bearer, yet not to a very great degree, since the power of the dog to carry or to haul loads was not great. Before they had horses the Indians were footmen, making short journeys and transporting their possessions mostly on their backs. The hunting Indians possessed an insignificant amount of property, since the quantity that they could carry was small. Now all this was changed. An animal had been found which could carry burdens and drag loads. The Indians soon realized that the possession of such an animal would increase their freedom of movement and enable them to increase their property, since one horse could carry the load of several men. Besides this, it insured a food supply and made the moving of camp easy and swift and long journeys possible. In addition to the use of the horse as a burden bearer and as a means of moving rapidly from place to place, it was used as a medium of exchange.

The introduction of the horse led to new intertribal relations; systematic war parties were sent forth, the purpose of which was the capture of horses. This at once became a recognized industry, followed by the bravest and most energetic young men. Many of the tribes, before they secured horses, obtained guns, which gave them new boldness, and horse and gun soon transformed those who, a generation before, had been timid foot wanderers, to daring and ferocious raiders.

On the plains and in the S. W. horses were frequently used as food, but not ordinarily when other flesh could be obtained, although it is said that the Chiricahua Apache preferred mule meat to any other. It frequently happened that war parties on horse-stealing expeditions killed and ate horses. When this was done the leader of the party was always careful to warn his men to wash themselves thoroughly with sand or mud and water before they went near the enemy's camp. Horses greatly dread the smell of horse flesh or horse fat and will not suffer the approach of any one smelling of it.

The horse had no uniform value, for obviously no two horses were alike. A war pony or a buffalo horse had a high, an old pack pony a low, value. A rich old man might send fifteen or twenty horses to the tipi of the girl he wished to marry, while a poor young man might send but one. A doctor might charge a fee of one horse or five, according to the patient's means. People paid as they could. Among the Sioux and the Cheyenne the plumage of two eagles used to be regarded as worth a good horse. Forty horses have been given for a medicine pipe.

Indian saddles varied greatly. The old saddle of Moorish type, having the high peaked pommel and cantle made of wood or horn covered with raw buffalo hide, was common, and was the kind almost always used by women; but there was another type, low in front and behind, often having a horn, the prong of a deer's antler, for a rope. The Indians rode with a short stirrup—the bareback seat. Today the young Indians ride the cowboy saddle, with the cowboy seat—the long leg. Cow-skin pads stuffed with the hair of deer, elk, antelope, buffalo, or mountain sheep were commonly used instead of saddles by some of the tribes in running buffalo or in war, but among a number of tribes the horse was stripped for chasing buffalo and for battle. Some tribes on their horse-stealing expeditions carried with them small empty pads, to be stuffed with grass and used as saddles after the horses had been secured. The Indians of other tribes scorned such luxury and rode the horse naked, reaching home chafed and scarred.

Horse racing, like foot racing, is a favorite amusement, and much property is wagered on these races. The Indians were great jockeys and trained and handled their horses with skill. When visiting another tribe they sometimes took race horses with them and won or lost large sums. The Plains tribes were extremely good horsemen, in war hiding themselves behind the bodies of their mounts so that only a foot and an arm showed, and on occasion giving exhibitions of wonderful daring and skill. During the campaign of 1865 on Powder r., after Gen. Conner's drawn battle with a large force of Arapaho and Cheyenne, an Arapaho rode up and down in front of the command within a few hundred yards, and while his horse was galloping was seen to swing himself down under his horse's neck, come up on the other side, and resume his seat, repeating the feat many times.

The horse was usually killed at the grave of its owner, just as his arms were buried with him, in order that he might be equipped for the journey that he was about to take. A number of Plains tribes practised a horse dance. There were songs about horses, and prayers were made in their behalf. On the whole, however, the horse's place in ceremony was only incidental. On the occasion of great gatherings horses were led into the circle of the dancers and there given away, the donor counting a coup as he passed over the gift to the recipient. In modern times the marriage gift sent by a suitor to a girl's family consisted in part of horses. Among some tribes a father gave away a horse when his son killed his first big game or on other important family occasions. In the dances of the soldier-band societies of most tribes 2, 4, or 6 chosen men ride horses during the dance. Their horses are painted, the tails are tied up as for war, hawk or owl feathers are tied to the forelock or tail, and frequently a scalp, or something representing it, hangs from the lower jaw. The painting represents wounds received by the rider's horse, or often there is painted the print of a hand on either side of the neck to show that an enemy on foot has been ridden down. In preparing to go into a formal battle the horse as well as his rider received protective treatment. It was ceremonially painted and adorned, as described above, and certain herbs and medicines were rubbed or blown over it to give it endurance and strength.

Among some of the Plains tribes there was a guild of horse doctors who devoted themselves especially to protecting and healing horses. They doctored horses before going into battle or to the buffalo hunt, so that they should not fall, and doctored those wounded in battle or on the hunt, as well as the men hurt in the hunt. In intertribal horse races they "doctored" in behalf of the horses of their own tribe and against those of their rivals. See Commerce, Domestication, Travel and Transportation. (G. B. G.)

Hosboa. The Road-runner or Pheasant clan of the Hopi, q. v.

Hoe'-bo-a.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891.

Hoe'-bo-a-wun-wü.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 405, 1894 (wün-wü = 'clan'). Hosboa winwü.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900. Huspoa.—Bourke, Snake Dance, 117, 1884.

Hosmite. A former Cholovone village on lower San Joaquin r., Cal.

Hosmite.—Pinart, Cholovone MS., B. A. E., 1880.

Kosmitas.—Chamisso in Kotzebue, Voy., III, 51, 1821. Kosmiti.—Choris, Voy. Pitt., 5, 1822.

Hospitality. Hospitality, distinguished from charity, was a cardinal principle in every Indian tribe. The narratives of many pioneer explorers and settlers, from De Soto and Coronado, Amidas and Barlow, John Smith and the Pilgrims, down to the most recent period, are full of instances of wholesale hospitality toward the white strangers, sometimes at considerable cost to the hosts. Gift dances were a feature in every tribe, and it was no uncommon occurrence on the plains during the summer season for large dancing parties to make the round of the tribes, returning in the course of a month or two with hundreds of ponies given in return for their entertainment. Every ceremonial gathering was made the occasion of the most lavish hospitality, both in feasting and the giving of presents. In some languages there was but one word for both generosity and bravery, and either one was a sure avenue to distinction. A notable exemplification of this was the institution of the potlatch (q. v.) among the tribes of the N. W. coast, by which a man saved for half a lifetime in order to give away his accumulated wealth in one grand distribution, which would entitle him and his descendants to rank thereafter among the chiefs. In tribes where the clan system prevailed the duty of hospitality and mutual assistance within the clan was inculcated and sacredly observed, anyone feeling at liberty to call on a fellow-clansman for help in an emergency without thought of refusal. The same obligation existed in the case of formal comradeship between two men. Among the Aleut, according to Veniaminoff, the stranger received no invitation on arriving, but decided for himself at which house he chose to be a guest, and was sure to receive there every attention as long as he might stay, with food for the journey on his departure.

On the other hand it can not be said that the Indian was strictly charitable, in the sense of extending help to those unable to reciprocate either for themselves or for their tribes. The life of the savage was precarious at best, and those who had outlived their usefulness were very apt to be neglected, even by their own nearest relatives. Hospitality as between equals was a tribal rule; charity to the helpless depended on the disposition and ability of the individual. See Ethics and Morals, Feasts. (J. M.)

Hostayuntwa (Ho-'stā-yōn-twān', 'there he cast a lean thing into the fire.'—Hewitt). An Oneida village that stood on the site of Camden, N. Y.

Ho-'stā-yōn-twān'.—J. N. B. Hewitt, inf'n, 1906. Ho-'stā-yun'-twā.—Morgan, League Iroq., 473, 1851.

Hosukhaunu ('foolish dogs'). Given as an Arikara band under chief Sithauche about 1855, but properly a dance society. Foolish Dogs.—Culbertson in Smithson. Rep. 1850, 143, 1851. Ho-sūk'-hau-nu.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol., 357, 1862.

Hosukhaunukarerihu ('little foolish dogs'). Given as an Arikara band under chief Tigaranih about 1855, but properly a dance society.

Ho-sūk'-hau-nu-ka-re'-ri-hu.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol., 357, 1862. Little Foolish Dogs.—Ibid.

Hotachi ('elk'). A Missouri gens, co-ordinate with the Khotachi gens of the Iowa.

Ho-ma'.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 240, 1897. Hoo'-ma.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 156, 1877. Ho-ta'-tei.—Dorsey, op. cit.

Hotagastlas-hadai (Xō'tagastlas xā'da-i, 'people who run about in crowds'). A subdivision of the Chaahl-lanas, a family of the Eagle clan of the Haida, settled in Alaska. They are said to have been thus named because they were so numerous that when visitors came great crowds ran to meet them.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 276, 1905.

Hotalihuyana (Creek: hótali, hótali, 'wind,' 'gust,' 'hurricane'; huyána, 'passing'; hence 'Hurricane town'). A former Lower Creek or Seminole town in Dougherty co., Ga., established by Indians of Chiaha on the e. bank of Flint r., 6 m. below the junction of Kitchofooni cr. Settlers from the adjacent Osotchi had mingled with the 20 families of the village in Hawkins' time (1799). It had 27 families in 1832. (A. S. G.)

Fatehennyahna.—Brinton, Florida Penin., 145, 1859. Holatlahaanna.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 300, 1836. Ho tal le ho yar nar.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iv, 578, 1854. O-tel-le-who-yau-nau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 64, 1848. Otelwehoyon-nee.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1814), 163, 1837. Talehanas.—Ibid. (1797), 68. Talchouyana.—Penière in Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 311, 1822. Talle-whananas.—Ibid., 364. Telhuanas.—Kinnard (1792) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., i, 313, 1832. Tellihuana.—Ibid., 383. Telluana.—Ibid.

Hotamimsaw (Hotám-imsáw, 'foolish or crazy dogs'). A warrior society of the Cheyenne, q. v.

Hotá'mi mássaw.—Grinnell, inf'n, 1906 (lit. 'dogs crazy'). Hotám-imsáw.—Mooney, inf'n, 1905.

Hotamitanio (Hotámítā'nio, 'dog men'; sing., Hotámítā'n). A warrior society of the Cheyenne (q. v.), commonly known to the whites as Dog Soldiers. See Military Societies. (J. M.)

Dog Men's.—G. A. Dorsey, The Cheyenne, 15, 1905. Dog Soldier band.—Culbertson in Smithson. Rep. 1850, 143, 1851. Hotámítā'nio.—Mooney, inf'n, 1905 (see p. 256 of this Handbook). Ho-tum'-i-ta'-ni-o.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Vol., 281, 1862 (incorrectly given as the name of a dance, but properly intended for the dance of this society). Mí'stávii'nút.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1026, 1896 (= 'heavy eyebrows': another name).

Hotao (Xō'tao). A legendary Haida town that is said to have stood on the s. w. coast of Maude id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. From this place, according to one account, came the ancestress of the Hlgaiu-lanas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Hotdjihoas (Xō'tdjihoas, 'hair seals at low tide'). A former Haida town on Lyell id., near the n. end of Darwin sd., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Hagi-lanas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Hothelepoya. See Menewa.

Hotnas-hadai (ʔot nas xadā-i, 'box-house people'). Given by Boas (Fifth Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 27, 1889) as the name of a subdivision of the Yaku-lanas, a family of the Raven clan of the Haida in Alaska. It is in reality only a house name belonging to that family. (J. R. S.)

Hot Springs. A summer camp of the Sitka Indians on Baranoff id., Alaska. There were 26 people there in 1880.—Petroff in Tenth Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

Hottrochtac. A Costanoan village situated in 1819 within 10 m. of Santa Cruz mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 5, 1860.

Houaneihia. An unidentified village or tribe mentioned to Joutel (Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878) in 1687, while he was staying with the Kadohadacho on Red r. of Louisiana, by the chief of that tribe as being among his enemies.

Houattoehronon (Huron: Kwathogé-rónon, 'people of the sunseting or of the west'). One of a number of tribes, mentioned in the Jesuit Relation for 1640, which were reputed to be sedentary, populous, and agricultural. Later the form Quatoghe, or Quadoge, is found as the name of the s. end of L. Michigan, being so employed on Mitchell's map of the British Colonies in N. A., of 1755, and on Jefferys' and D'Anville's maps, the one of 1777 and the other of 1775. Meaning simply 'people of the west', it was evidently the name of some people living in the w., at the s. end of L. Michigan. For some unknown reason the name Quatoghees or Quatoghies was applied to the Tionontati by Colden, and by Gallatin, Schoolcraft, and others who followed him; but this is an apparent error, as the Tionontati, or Hurons du Petun, never lived at the s. end of L. Michigan. In the famous deed of the hunting grounds of the Five Nations to the King of England, in 1701, Quadoge is given as the western boundary, at a point w. of the Miami. Father Potier, who resided at Detroit in 1751, says that Satoeronnon (Ouatoieronon and Quatokeoronon being cognate forms) was the Huron name for the Sauk. (J. N. B. H.)

Houattoehronon.—Jes. Rel., index, 1858. Hvattoehronon.—Jes. Rel. 1640, 35, 1858. Satoeronnon.—Potier, Rac. Hur. et Gram., MS., 1751.

Houjets. An unidentified tribe containing 40 men described as of fine stature, living on a branch of Red r. of Louisiana, 6 leagues from the main stream, at the beginning of the 19th century.—Baudry des Lozières, Voy. a la Louisiane, 242, 249, 1802.

Houtgna. A former Gabrieleño rancharia in Los Angeles co., Cal., at a locality later called Ranchito de Lugo.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860.

Howakeas. Mentioned with the Choctaw as forming a small party which was defeated by the Creeks (Oglethorpe, 1743, in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist. VI, 242, 1855). Possibly a bad misprint for Timucua.

Howiri. A ruined pueblo, formerly occupied by the Tewa, at the Rito Colorado, about 10 m. w. of the Hot Springs, near Abiquiu, Rio Arriba co., N. Mex. See Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 61, 1890; IV, 22, 1892; Hewett in Bull. 32, B. A. E., 40, 1906.

Ho-ui-ri.—Bandelier, op. cit.

Howkan (^s*a'oklian*, a Tlingit word probably referring to a stone which stood up in front of the town, although some derive it from qōwakā'n, 'deer,' deer being numerous there). A Haida town on Long id., facing Dall id., Alaska, below which a great canoe fight took place, resulting in the occupancy of part of Prince of Wales id. by the Kaigani Haida. It was the seat of several families, but the Chaahl-lanas owned it. According to John Work's estimate (1836-41) there were 27 houses and 458 inhabitants. Petroff gave the population as 287 in 1880-81; in 1890 there were 90; in 1900, 145, including whites. (J. R. S.)

Hau kan hade.—Krause, Tlinkit Indianer, 304, 1885. Houa-guan.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, V, 489, 1855 (after Work, 1836-41). Houkan Hade.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895. How-a-guan.—Dawson, Q. Charlotte Ids., 173b, 1880 (after Work). Howakan.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884. Howkan.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 31, 1890. Hon-a-gan.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859 (misprint from Work).

Howungkut. A Hupa village of the southern division, nearly due s. of Medilding, from which it is separated by Trinity r., Cal. At this village the first day's dancing of the white deer-skin dance of the Hupa takes place. (P. E. G.)

Wang'-kat.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 73, 1877. Xōwūnkūt.—Goddard, Life and Culture of the Hupa, 12, 1903.

Hoya. The name of a chief and also of a former settlement on or near the s. coast of South Carolina, visited by Jean Ribault in 1562. Apparently the Ahoya mentioned by Vandera in 1567. The people were friendly with and were possibly related to the Edisto, q. v.

Ahoya.—Vandera (1567) in Smith, Collec. Doc. Fla., 16, 1857. Hoya.—Ribault (1562) in Hakluyt, Voy., 1600, 379, 1800.

Hoya (Xō'ya, 'raven' in the Skidegate dialect). One of the two great phratries or clans into which the Haida are divided. (J. R. S.)

K'ōā'la.—Boas, Fifth and Twelfth Repts. N. W. Tribes Canada, passim (improperly applied; K'ōā'la or K'ōā'las means simply 'people of another clan'). Yēh.—Swanton, in f'n, 1900 (name in Masset dialect).

Hoyagundla (Xō'ya ga'nta, 'raven creek'). A Haida town on a stream of the same name which flows into Hecate str. a short distance s. of C. Fife, Queen Charlotte Ids., Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Djahui-gitinaí.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 280, 1905.

Hoyalas ('the troubled ones'). A Kwakiutl tribe formerly occupying the upper shores of Quatsino sd.; they were exterminated by the Koskimo.

Ho-ya.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1897, sec. II, 70. Xō'yalas.—Boas in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., v, pt. 2, 401, 1902. Xoyā'les.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 332.

Hoyima. A former Yokuts (Mariposan) tribe on San Joaquin r., Cal.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906.

Huachi. A former Costanoan village near Santa Cruz mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 5, 1860.

Huachinera (so called on account of the tascal wood found there in abundance.—Rudo Ensayo). An Opatá pueblo and seat of a Spanish mission, founded about 1645, which afterward became a visita of Baseraca; situated on Tesorobabi cr., a branch of Río Bavispe, e. Sonora, Mexico, near the Chihuahua border. Population 538 in 1678; 285 in 1730, but as it became the place of refuge of the inhabitants of Baquigopa and Batesopa on the abandonment of those villages later in the 18th century, the population was augmented. Total pop. 337 in 1900. (F. W. H.)

Guatzinera.—Rudo Ensayo (ca. 1763), Guiteras trans., 217, 1894. Huachinera.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, pt. 1, 59, 1890. San Juan Guachirita.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 343, 1864 (mentioned as if distinct from Huachinera). S. Juan Guachinela.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 1444, 1736. S. Juan Guachinera.—Zapata (1678) quoted by Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 246, 1884.

Huadjinaas-hadai. (Xū'adji na'as xā'-da-i, 'people of grizzly-bear house'). A subdivision of the Koetas family of the Kaigani Haida of British Columbia.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 272, 1905.

Huados (Xuado's, 'standing-water people,' in allusion to the swampy nature of the land around their towns). A division of the Raven clan of the Haida, formerly occupying the E. shore of Graham id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. Originally they were settled at Naikun, but on account of wars they moved to C. Ball, thence to Skidegate. The Naikun-kegawai seem to have been a sort of aristocratic branch of this family. (J. R. S.) Qua'dōs.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 24, 1898. Xuado's.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 270, 1905.

Huados. A small Haida town, inhabited by a family bearing the same name, near the town of Hlgihla-ala, n. of C. Ball, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 280, 1905.

Hualga. Given by Bourke (Jour. Am. Folk-lore, II, 180, 1889) as the Moon clan of the Mohave; but according to Kroeber, so far as known the Mohave do not name their clans, and their name for moon is halya.

Hualimea. A former Cochimi rancheria under San Ignacio mission, Lower California, about lat. 28° 40'.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Jan. 17, 1862.

Hualquilme. A former Costanoan village near Santa Cruz mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 5, 1860.

Huanes. A former tribe of s. Texas, mentioned with the Pampoa, Mesquites, Pastias, Camamas, Cacanas, and Canas, as a tribe for which mission San José at San Antonio had been founded.

Xuanes.—Solis, Diario, 1767-68, cited by H. E. Bolton, inf'n, 1906.

Huaque. Mentioned by Oviedo (Hist. Gen. Indies, III, 628, 1853) as one of the provinces or villages visited by Ayllon in 1520. Probably on the South Carolina coast.

Huascari. A tribe or band, probably Paiute, living in 1775 in lat. 38° 3', doubtless in s. Utah.—Dominguez and Escalante in Doc. Hist. Mex., 2d s., I, 537, 1854.

Huashpatzena (huashpa = 'dance-kilt'). A pueblo occupied after 1605 by the ancestors of the inhabitants of Santo Domingo pueblo, near the present site of the latter, on the E. bank of the Río Grande, n. central New Mexico. The pueblo was erected after the destruction, by a freshet, of the second Gipyu (q. v.) to the eastward. A part of Huashpatzena was also carried away by flood, compelling the villagers to move farther east, where they built the pueblo of Kiua—the present Santo Domingo, q. v.

Huash-pa Tzen-a.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 187, 1892. Uash-pa Tze-na.—Ibid., III, 34, 1890.

Huasna. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Huatabampo. One of the principal settlements of the Mayo, in Sonora, Mexico; pop. 1,553 in 1900.—Censo del Estado de Sonora, 96, 1901.

Huaxicori. A former Tepehuane pueblo in lat. 23°, long. 105° 30', Sinaloa, Mexico. Huajicori.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., map, 1864. Huaxicori.—Ibid., 281.

Huchiltchik (Hū'tcilttchik, 'round clearing'). A Pima village below Santa Ana, on the N. bank of the Gila, ins. Arizona. Hörltchöletchök.—ten Kate quoted by Gatschet, MS., B. A. E., XX, 199, 1888 (trans. 'plain'). Hū'tcilttchik.—Russell, Pima MS., B. A. E., 1902. Buen Llano.—Bailey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 208, 1858. Llano.—Brown, Apache Country, 270, 1869.

Huchnom. A division of the Yuki of N. California, speaking a dialect divergent from that of the Round Valley Indians. They lived on South Eel r. above its confluence with the middle fork of Eel r., or in adjacent territories, and on the headwaters of Russian r. in upper Potter valley. To the N. of them were the Witu-komnom Yuki, to the E. the Wintun, and on the other sides were Pomo tribes. The Pomo call them Tatu, the whites Redwoods, from Redwood cr.

Hūch'-nom.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 126, 1877 (trans. 'outside the valley'). Redwoods.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 75, 1870. Tahtos.—Powers in Overland Mo., IX, 507, 1872. Tā-tu.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., op. cit., 139 (so called by Pomo of Potter valley).

Huda ('wind'). A Yuchi clan.

Hudá táhá.—Gatschet, Uchee MS., B. A. E., 70, 1885.

Huddoh. A local name of the hump-backed salmon (Salmo proteus); also known as haddo, from huddo, the name of this fish in Niskwalli (Rep. U. S. Comm. Fish., 1872-73, p. 99), of the Salishan stock. (A. F. C.)

Hudedut (Hüdedüt'). A former Takilman village at the forks of Rogue r. and Applegate cr., Oreg.

Howteteah.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 76, 1856 (misprint). How-te-te'-oh.—Gibbs in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 423, 1853 (possibly the same, or mistaken for the Kikaktsik). Hü-de-düt'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 235, 1890.

Huehnerigita. A former Opatá pueblo at Casas Grandes, at the w. foot of the Sierra Madre, Chihuahua, Mexico. It was already deserted in the 16th century. Bandelier, Gilded Man, 142, 1893.

Huelemin. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Huenejel. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861. Mentioned as if distinct from Huenejel.

Hueneme. A former Chumashan village on the coast, a few miles s. of Saticoy r., Ventura co., Cal.

Hueneme.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, July 24, 1863. We-ne'-mu.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Huenejel. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861. Mentioned as if distinct from Huenejel.

Huepac. A Tegüima Opatá pueblo and the seat of a Spanish mission founded in 1689; situated in Sonora, Mexico, on the E. bank of Rio Sonora, below lat. 30°. Pop. 268 in 1678, 71 in 1730. In addition to its civilized Opatá population it contained 10 Yaqui in 1900.

Guipaca.—Kino, map (1702) in Stöcklein, Neue Welt-Bott, 1726. Huëpac.—Davila, Sonora Histórico, 317, 1894. Huepaca.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 344, 1864. San Lorenzo Guepaca.—Ibid., 343. San Lorenzo Huepaca.—Zapata (1678) quoted by Bancroft, No. Mex. States, 514, 1884.

Huertas (Las Huertas; Span.: 'the orchards' or 'kitchen gardens'). A cluster of ruined pueblos 4 m. below Socorro, N. Mex. (Abert in Emory, Recon., 495, 1848); probably originally inhabited by the Pirois.

Hueso Parado (Span.: 'bone set up' or 'standing bone'). A former Pima and Maricopa village on the Pima and Maricopa res., Gila r., Ariz.; pop. 263 Pima and 314 Maricopa in 1858.

El Juez Parado.—Bell in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 231, 1869 (misquoting Bailey). El Juez Tarado.—Bailey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 207, 208, 1858. Hueso Parrado.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 19, 1863.

Huexotitlan. A pueblo in Chihuahua, Mexico, and the seat of a Spanish mission with a mixed population of Nevome, Tepehuane, and Tarahumare. Its inhabitants are now civilized.

Huejotitán.—Present name. Huexotitlan.—Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 598, 1884. San Gerónimo Huexotitlan.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 324, 1864.

Huhilp (Huh-ilp, 'on the edge'). A village of the Fountain band of Upper Lillooet, on Fountain cr., an E. affluent of upper Fraser r., Brit. Col.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1891, sec. II, 44.

Huhlitaiga (Hä'h-täiga, 'war fiddle'). A lower Creek village on Chattahoochee r., about the present Georgia-Alabama boundary, the inhabitants of which in or prior to 1799 removed to Oakfusi, settling on the opposite side of the Tallapoosa.

Hohtatoga.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Ho-ith-le-ti-gau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 45, 1848. Hohtetega.—Bartram, Travels, 462, 1791. Hohtetoga.—Swan misquoted by Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 131, 1884. Hu'li-täiga.—Ibid. (correct form).

Huhliwahi ('to apportion war'). A former Upper Creek town on the right bank of Tallapoosa r., 5 m. below Atasi, in Macon co., Ala. It obtained its name from the privilege of declaring war which was accorded to it, the declaration being sent from this town to Tukabatchi, thence to the other villages. (A. S. G.)

Cawalla.—H. R. E. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 150, 1836. Chiwalle.—Ibid., 131. Clewallles.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1797), 68, 1837. Cleu wattha.—Parsons in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 575, 1854. Clewalla.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1827), 420, 1837. Clewallleys.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Clewella.—Devereux in H. R. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 8, 1838. Clewulla.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854. Cleyali.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., I, 589, 1786. Cluale.—Bartram, Travels, 461, 1791. Cuwall.—Woodward, Reminiscences, 14, 1859. Elewallies.—Weatherford (1793) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 385, 1832. Hoithlewallie.—Flint, Ind. Wars, 205, 1833. Ho-ith-le Waule.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 32, 1848. Hoithlewallie.—Woodward, Reminiscences, 76, 1858. Hu'li Wa'hli.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 131, 1884. Rolling Bullet.—Woodward, op. cit. Sdewaetes.—Weatherford (1793) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 385, 1832. Tegualles.—Barcia (1693), Ensayo, 313, 1723 (called a Talaposa town). Tekewallles.—Doyell (1813) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 841, 1832. Thlea Walla.—Woodward, Reminiscences, 14, 75, 1858 ("Rolling Bullet").

Huhliwahi. A town in the Creek Nation, on North fork of Canadian r., above Hillabi, Okla.

Hu'li-Wá'li.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888. Liwa'hli.—Ibid.

Huhunata (Hu-hu'-na-ta). A former Chumashan village near Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Henshaw, Santa Inez MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Huiaulch.—A Clallam village, the modern Jamestown, 5 m. E. of Dungeness, Puget sd., Wash.

Hui-au-ultc.—Eells, letter, B. A. E., May 21, 1886. Jamestown.—Ibid.

Huichol. A tribe of the Piman stock, numbering 3,000 to 4,000, living in the rugged Sierra Madre of N. W. Jalisco, Mexico. Their neighbors on the E. are the Tepecano, on the W. the Cora; in the N. their territory was formerly bounded by that of the Tepehuane, and in the S. by the Jalisco tribes proper, but these have largely given way to a Mexican and mixed population. In many respects the Huichol are closely related to the Cora; they are alike physically, speak cognate dialects, and exhibit many similarities in culture, thus leading some early writers to confuse the two tribes.

Their country, drained chiefly by the Rio Chapalagana, is divided into three principal districts, with the villages of

HUICHOL MAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

Santa Catarina, San Sebastian, and San Andrés Coamiata as their respective central seats of government. There is little political unity in the tribe. Each of the three districts controls the land within definite boundaries and annually elects officers of its own, consisting of a governor, an alcalde, a captain, a majordomo, and some minor officials—an acquisition from the Spaniards. These officials reside in the central village, which is also a religious center. The farming season is spent in isolated rancherías, and here indeed some of the natives live during the entire year.

The Huichol are of medium stature, three-fourths of the men ranging between 160 and 170 cm.; they are predominantly brachycephalic (the cephalic index of 70 percent of the men exceeding 80), with rather short face and slightly platyrrhine nose. The body is generally well developed, deformity being extremely rare. They are healthy and prolific, and gain their livelihood by farming, hunting, fishing, and by gathering wild fruits. The wealthier Indians own good cattle. They maintain their independence with great jealousy, but they are generally peaceable and mild tempered, and show marked fondness for music, dancing, flowers, and personal finery. The women are adept in weaving and embroidery.

Their houses are quadrangular, and are built of loose stones, or of stone and mud, with thatched roofs. The dress of the men, now slightly modified, consisted of a poncho made of brown, blue, or white woolen fabric, tightened at the waist with one to three handsomely embroidered girdles, and short breeches of poorly dressed deerskin without hair, at the lower edges of which were strung a number of leathern thongs. To-day these are supplanted by trousers of white cotton. The males wear straw hats handsomely decorated in many ways. Pouches woven of wool or cotton in great variety of design form a part of their costume. Several such bags generally hang from a woven string around the waist; on ceremonial occasions as many as a dozen may be thus worn. The women wear short skirts and ponchos of cotton cloth, sometimes nicely embroidered. Both the men and the women wear over their shoulders, on gala occasions, a small cotton shawl, richly embroidered with red or red and blue thread. Sandals are worn by men. The men tie the hair in a sort of queue with a colored hair ribbon, or confine it at the neck behind. The women usually wear the hair loose.

HUICHOL WOMAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

The Huichol are polygamists. They preserve their aboriginal religious beliefs, which however show some Christian admixture owing to the teachings of the friars which began after the Spanish conquest of 1722. They have numerous small temples, shrines, and sacrificial caves. Each year a party of men makes a pilgrimage to San Luis Potosi to gather peyote and to procure holy water, and their return is followed by an elaborate ceremony. Justice is administered almost entirely by the Indians themselves. Thieves are punished by enforced restitution; other criminals by whipping and confinement without food; sorcerers are sometimes killed. The dead are buried in graves or deposited in caves.

The Huichol villages and rancherias, past or present, include Bastita, Chonacate, Guadalupe y Ocotan, Guayabas, Hediondo, Kiatate, Nogal, Ocota, Pedernales, Pochotita, Popotita, San Andrés Coamijata, San José, San Sebastian, Santa Catarina, Santa Gertrudis, Soledad, Techalotita, and Texompa. (A. H.)

Huicholas.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, 1, 621, 1882.
Huitcole.—Ibid., III, 719, 1886. Vi-ra-ri-ka.—Lumholtz, Huichol Inds., 2, 1898 (given as their own name). Visálaka.—Lumholtz, Unknown Mexico, II, 21, 1902.

Huikuayaken. Given as a gens of the Squawmish on Howe sd., Brit. Col.

Xuikuayaxén.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Huilacatlan (Nahuatl: 'place of the reeds'). A former settlement of the Tepecano, situated in the valley of the Rio de Bolaños, a short distance from the town of Bolaños, in Jalisco, Mexico.—Hrdlicka in Am. Anthropol., v, 409, 1903.

Huila.—Hrdlicka, ibid.

Huililoc. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.

Hél-i-ok.—Henshaw, Buena Ventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884. Huililoc.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Huimen. A former Costanoan rancharia connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Huinikashina (Hu i'niyik'ácin'a, 'fish people'). A division of the Washawanan gens of the Osage.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897.

Huinikashika. A Quapaw gens.

Fish gens.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 229, 1897.

Hu i'nikaci'qa.—Ibid.

Huinyirren. A former Costanoan village whose people were connected with San Juan Bautista mission, Cal.

Huiniirren.—Arroyo de la Cuesta, Idiomas Californias, 1821, MS. trans., B. A. E.

Huirivis. A settlement of the Yaqui on the n. bank of the lower Rio Yaqui, s. w. Sonora, Mexico.

Huadibis.—Mühlenpfordt quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 608, 1882. Huiris.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 332, 1864. Huirivis.—Velasco (1850) quoted by Bancroft, op cit.

Huite (Cahita: 'archer'). A small tribe or subdivision of the Cahita group, formerly living, according to Orozco y Berra, in the mountains of N. Sinaloa, Mexico, 7 leagues from the "Sinaloas." They are described as having been anthropophagous, at open war with all their neighbors, and as barbarous and naked, but through the efforts of the missionaries they were gradually reformed and were gathered into a pueblo where they afterward became confounded with the "Sinaloas." Whether they spoke a dialect different from that of the other subdivisions of the Cahita is uncertain, although from statements by Father Perez de Ribas, in 1645, it may be inferred that they did. They became extinct as a tribe at an early date, probably through absorption by the Sinaloa.

Huites.—Ribas, Hist. Triunfos, 211, 1645. Santiago Huites.—Orozco y Berra, Geog. 333, 1864 (mission name of settlement). Vites.—Ibid.

Huititnom. The branch of the Yuki of N. California who held the s. fork of the middle fork of Eel r. (A. L. K.)

Huixapapa. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 459, 1874.

Hukanuwu (Xak nuwū). An old Tlingit town on the N. side of Cross sd., Alaska, between the mainland and Chichagof id. Distinct from Kukanuwu. (J. R. S.)

Huldanggats (Xaldā'ngats, 'slaves'). A division of the Hagi-lanas, an important part of the Raven clan among the Nin-stints Haida of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. The native story told to account for their name relates that a chief's wife was once giving these people food, and since they never seemed to have enough, she finally said, "Are you slaves?" The name clung to them ever after. (J. R. S.)

Qaldā'ngasal.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 25, 1898. Xaldā'ngats.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 268, 1905.

Hullootell. Reported to Lewis and Clark as a numerous nation living N. of Columbia r., on Coweliskee (Cowlitz) r., above the Skilloot, and on Chahwahna-hiooks (Lewis) r., in 1806. It was either a Chinookan or a Salishan tribe.

Hull-loo-el-tell.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 117, 1905. Hullooelell.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., II, 591, 1817. Hullootell.—Ibid., II, 209, 1814. Hull-loo-et-tell.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, IV, 206, 1905. Hul-lu-et-tell.—Ibid., 214.

Huma ('red'). A Choctaw tribe living during the earlier period of the French colonization of Louisiana, 7 leagues above Red r. on the E. bank of the Mississippi, their settlement in 1699 containing 140 cabins and 350 families. A red pole (see Baton Rouge) marked the boundary between them and the Bayougoula on the S. In 1706 the Tonika fled to them from the Chickasaw, but later rose against them and killed more than half, after which the remainder established themselves near the site of New Orleans. Later they lived along Bayou La Fourche and in the neighborhood of the present Houma, La., which bears their name. They are now supposed to be extinct. See Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 113, 1884.

Homas.—La Harpe (1719) in Margry, Déc., VI, 244, 1886. Houma.—Gatschet, op cit. Omats.—Letter of 1682 in Margry, Déc., II, 205, 1877. Ommas.—Iberville (1699), ibid., IV, 448, 1880. Ouma.—La Salle, ibid., I, 563, 1875.

Humaliya. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Humarisa (from hūmashi, 'to run'). A rancheria of 288 Tarahumare, not far from Norogachic, Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, inf'n, 1894.

Humawhi. A Shastan tribe or subtribe formerly living on the s. fork of Pit r., Modoc co., Cal. According to Curtin they were a portion of the Ilmawi, living a short distance n. of Hot Spring, Modoc co.

Hāma'wi.—Curtin, Ilmawi vocab., B. A. E., 1889.
Hu-mā'-whi.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 267, 1877.

Humbo. A New Hampshire word for maple syrup. Horatio Hale sought to bring it into relation with ombigamisige in Chippewa and closely related Algonquian dialects, a term signifying 'he makes the maple syrup boil,' or 'boiled sugar drink,' the chief element being the radical omb, 'to boil.' (A. F. C.)

Humboldt Indians. The Paviotsso living around Humboldt lake, Nev.—Simpson, Rep. of Explor. Across Utah, 38, 1876.

Hume. A former tribe of s. Texas, probably Coahuiltecan, the chief of which was encountered in 1675 by Fernando del Bosque 7 leagues beyond the Rio Grande. June.—Fernando del Bosque (1675) in Nat. Geog. Mag., XIV, 344, 1903. Jumees. Revillagigedo, MS. (1793) quoted by Orozco y Berra, Geog., 306, 1864.

Humelsom (Humelson). A Squawmish village community on Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 475, 1900.

Humkak (Hum-kak'). An important Chumashan village formerly near Pt Conception, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Humor. It has been so commonly the fashion to describe the American Indian as "the stoic of the woods without a tear," that he has generally been denied as well the possession of a sense of humor. That he does not lack such, however, will readily be admitted by any one who has come to know the Indian as he is, has shared his meals and his camp fire, and had the opportunity of enjoying the real wit and humor abounding in common speech and in ancient legend. The pun, the jest of all kinds, the practical joke, the double-entendre, of which he is sometimes past-master, are all known to him. Particularly does the awkward action or the inept movement of the white man incite him to laughter. Like the white man, he has a fund of wit at the expense of the weaker sex and its peculiarities. The Eskimo and the Pueblos especially are merry, laughing people, who jest and trifle through all the grades from quiet sarcasm to the loudest joke. This appears in their songs and legends, in which humor and satire are constantly cropping out. That the Micmac and closely related Indian tribes of the Algonquian stock in N. E. North America have a keen sense of the humorous and ridiculous any one may convince himself by reading some of the tales in Leland and Prince's Kuloskap (1902), especially the episode of the master and the babe, and the story of the wizard and the Christian priest. The mythic trickster is, in fact, found in every tribe, sometimes as a misshapen personage, sometimes as a supernatural coyote, rabbit, or other animal, and the relation of his adventures provokes the greatest mirth. Around their camp fires, and "when the spirit moves them," the Chippewa and related tribes can jest and trifle in real fashion. The episodes in many of their tales and legends also prove their possession of wit and humor. The Cherokee sense of humor is proved by their myths and legends (Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 1900), and that of the Zuñi by the folklore of that tribe (Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 1901). The Kutenai of British Columbia and Idaho are not without the virtues of humor and sarcasm (Chamberlain, Rep. on N. W. Tribes of Can., 70, 1892). Puns and mistakes in pronunciation easily set them into fits of laughter. The Pueblos, Iroquois, Apache, some of the Plains tribes, and those of the N. W. Pacific coast had regular clowns or fun-makers at some of their dances and other ceremonies. Some Plains tribes had the custom of marking the spot where any amusing accident occurred while on the march in order that later travelers might inquire and learn the joke. See Amusements. (A. F. C.)

Humptulips (said to mean 'chilly region'). A body of Chehalis on a river of the same name emptying into Chehalis r., Wash. They are under the supervision of the Puvallup school superintendent and numbered 21 in 1904.

Hamtolops.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 574, 1878.

Humptulip.—Ind. Aff. Rep., pt. I, 702, 1901.

Hump-tu-lups.—Ross in Ind. Aff. Rep., 18, 1870.

Um-too-leaux.—Ford, ibid., 250, 1858.

Huna. A Tlingit tribe on Cross sd., Alaska, camping in summer northward to and beyond Lituya bay. Pop. 1,300 in 1870, 908 in 1880, and 592 in 1890. For 1900 the entire population of Gaudekan, the chief Huna village, was given as 447. Other towns in their country are Akvet-skoe, Hukanuwu, Klughuggue, Kukanuwu, and Tlushashakian. Their social divisions are Chukanedi, Koskedi, Tak-dentan, and Wushketan.

Chūna-kōn.—Krause, Tinkit Ind., 118, 1885.

Cross Sound Indians.—Kane, Wand N. A., app., 1859 (traders' name). Grass Sound Indians.—

Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 535, 1870. Hoonah

Kow.—Emmons in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., III, 232, 1903. Hoone-ahs.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 314, 1868. Hoone-aks.—Halleck in Rep. Sec. War, pt. I, 39, 1868. Hooniahs.—Scidmore, Alaska, 127, 1885. Hoonid.—Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 535, 1870. Hoonyah.—Petroff in Tenth Census, Alaska,

31, 1884. Humros.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 314, 1868. Huna.—Pfeiffer, Second Journ. Around World, 314, 1856. Huna cow.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 489, 1855 (after Kane; misprint). Hūna-kōn.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 118, 1885. Hunas.—Halleck in Rep. Sec. War, pt. 1, 39, 1868. Ueena-caw.—Kane, Wand in N. A., app., 1859. Whinega.—Mahony (1869) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 68, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 19, 1870.

Hunawurp (Hū-na-wūr-p). One of the Chumashan villages formerly near Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Henshaw, Santa Inez MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Hunctu. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Hungopavi (Navaho: 'crooked nose'). An important pueblo ruin 2 m. above Pueblo Bonito, on the N. side of Chaco canyon, at the base of the canyon wall, in N. W. New Mexico. It is built around 3 sides of a court, the extremities of the wings being connected by a semicircular double wall and the space between these walls divided into rooms. The length of the main building is 309 ft; of the 2 wings, 136 ft each. The building was 4 stories high. There is a circular kiva in the court and another inclosed within the walls of the main building. The one inclosed is 23 ft in diameter. The masonry of Hungopavi is exceptionally good; the material is fine-grained, grayish-yellow sandstone, compactly laid in thin mud mortar. The exterior walls of the first story are 3 ft thick. Walls still stand to a height of 30 ft, and deterioration has proceeded very slowly since the ruin was first described. See Hardacre in Scribner's Mag., Dec. 1878; Jackson in 10th Rep. Hayden Surv., 438, 1879, and the writers mentioned below. (E. L. H.)

Hungo Parie.—Domenech, Deserts, 1, 200, 1860 (misprint). Hungo Pavia.—Morgan in Rep. Peabody Mus., XII, 549, 1880. Hungo Pavié.—Simpson, Exped. Navaho Country, 79, 1850. Hunyo Pavié.—Cope in Rep. Wheeler Surv., app. LL, 173, 1875.

Huning ruin. A large, rectangular, prehistoric ruin on the ranch of Henry Huning at Showlow, Navajo co., Ariz., on a rock table above Showlow cr. The pottery found on the site is of red and gray ware, not of very fine quality. The masonry of the walls is good, but the remains of the pueblo do not indicate very long occupancy.—Hough in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1901, 301, 1903.

Hunkkhwitik (Hūn-kwi'-tik). A former Yaquina village on the N. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Hunkpapa (variously interpreted 'at the entrance,' 'at the head end of the circle,' 'those who camp by themselves,' and 'wanderers'). A division of the Teton Sioux. From the meager data relating to the history of this band it seems probable that it is one of comparatively modern formation. When Hennepin, in 1680, found what are believed to have been the Teton as far E. as the banks of the upper Mississippi, no mention of the Hunkpapa at that early date or for 100 years thereafter can be found unless it be under some name yet unidentified. Their name is not mentioned by Lewis and Clark, though it is possible that the tribe is included in the Teton Saone of those explorers. The name first appears as Honkpapa, and it is properly written Hunkpapa in the treaty of 1825. It is evident that the tribe was then well known, although its history previous to this date is undetermined. The Teton Saone were located by Lewis and Clark, in 1804, on both sides of the Missouri below Beaver cr., N. Dak., and were estimated at 300 men or 900 souls in 120 tipis. Ramsey (1849) gave their location as near Cannonball r. Culbertson (1850) gave their range as on the Cheyenne, Moreau, Grand, and Cannonball rs., and estimated them at 320 tipis. Gen. Warren (1855) said that they lived on the Missouri near the mouth of the Moreau and roamed from the Big Cheyenne up to the Yellowstone, and W. to the Black-hills. He states that they formerly intermarried extensively with the Cheyenne. His estimate of population is 365 tipis, 2,920 souls. He adds that many of the depredations along the Platte "are committed by the Unkpapas and Sihaspas." It is indicative of their character that they were among the last of the Dakota to be brought upon reservations. The Indian agent, writing in 1854, says: "All the bands of Sioux have already received their presents with great appearance of friendship, excepting the Minnecowzues (Miniconjou), Blackfeet (Sihapapa), and Honepapas (Hunkpapa). The former band are daily expected at the fort, and will gladly receive their annuities; but the Blackfeet and Honepapas still persist in refusing any annuities, and are constantly violating all the stipulations of the treaty. They are continually warring and committing depredations on whites and neighboring tribes, killing men and stealing horses. They even defy the Great Father, the President, and declare their intention to murder indiscriminately all that come within their reach. They, of all Indians, are now the most dreaded on the Missouri." And when the agent finally succeeded in reaching them and holding a council with their chiefs at Ft. Clark, they refused to receive the presents sent by the Government, stating that they did not want them, but preferred the liberty to take scalps and commit whatever depredations they pleased. They took part in most of the subsequent conflicts with the whites, as that at Ft. Phil. Kearney and that with Custer on the Little Bighorn. The number of the band in 1891 was 571;

these were gathered on Standing Rock res., N. and S. Dak. The population is no longer given separately. The noted Sitting Bull was chief of this tribe, though in making treaties he signed also for the Oglala.

Their subdivisions as given by J. O. Dorsey are: (1) Chankaokhan, (2) Cheokhba, (3) Tinazipeshicha, (4) Talonapin, (5) Kiglashka, (6) Chegnakeokisela, (7) Shikshichela, (8) Wakan, and (9) Hunska-chantozhuha. Culbertson (Smithson. Rep. 1850, 141, 1851) mentions the following bands: Devil's medicine-man band (Wakan), Half breechclout people (Chegnakeokisela), Fresh meat necklace people (Talonapin), Sleepy Kettle band (Cheokhba), Sore backs (Chankaokhan), Bad boys (Tinazipeshicha), and Those that carry. Fire-Heart's band (Chantapeta's band) is supposed to be a part of the Hunkpapa.

Ampapa.—Smet, Miss. de l'Oregon, 264, 848. Ampapas.—Smet, Letters, 23, 1843. Aukpapas.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 297, 1851. Hankpapas.—Parker, Jour., 44, 1840. Honepapas.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 295, 1854. Honk pa pa.—Ex. Doc. 56, 18th Cong., 1st sess., 9, 1824. Houkpapas.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 471, 1838. Hunkappas.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1849, 86, 1850 (misprint). Hunkpapa.—Riggs, Dakota Gram. and Dict., viii, 1852. Hunkpapas.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1825), 346, 1826. Hunkpa-te-dans.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1849, 86, 1850 (mistake). Nicpapa.—Hare in Spirit of Missions, 586, 1885 (misprint). Oak-papas.—Hoffman in H. R. Ex. Doc. 36, 33d Cong., 2d sess., 3, 1855. Oncapapas.—Corliss, Lacotah MS. vocab., B. A. E., 107, 1874. Onc-pa-pah.—Culbertson in Smithson. Rep. 1850, 141, 1851. Onc-pah-pa.—Donaldson in Smithson. Rep. 1885, pt. 2, 57, 1886. Oncpapa.—Catlin, N. Am. Inds., i, 223, 1844. Onc-papa.—Donaldson in Smithson. Rep., 1885, pt. 2, 57, 1886. Onkpahpah.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1886), 899, 1873. Onkpapah.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 494, 1855. Ouh-papas.—Vaughan in H. R. Doc. 36, 33d Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1855. Uncpapa.—Terry in Rep. Sec. War for 1869, pt. 1, 34. Unc Papas.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1856, 7, 1857. Uncpappas.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 541, 1878. Unkpapa Dakotas.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., map, 1862. Unkpapas.—Warren, Dakota Country, 16, 1855.

Hunkpatina ('campers at the end of the circle'). One of the two primary divisions of the Yanktonai Sioux, commonly known as Lower Yanktonai, from their former range on lower James r. of E. South Dakota. The Hunkpatina are seemingly referred to for the first time, in whole or in part, by Lewis and Clark, in 1804, under the name Honetaparteen, as a division of the Yankton of the N. They were on intimate terms with the Upper Yanktonai, who ranged about the upper waters of the James. They are now chiefly on Crow Creek res., S. Dak., where they numbered 1,009 in 1905. In 1866 they were estimated at 2,100. Some others appear to be attached to Standing Rock agency, N. Dak. Their bands, as given by J. O. Dorsey (15th Rep. B. A. E., 218, 1897), are: Putetemini (Sweat-lips), Shungikcheka (Common dogs), Takhuhayuta (Eat-the-scrappings-of-hides), Sangona (Shot-at-some-white-object), Ihasha (Red-lips), Iteghu (Burnt-face), Pteyuteshni (Eat-no-buffalo-cows).

Amkepates.—Smet, Letters, 23, 1843. Hen-ta-pah-tus.—Prescott in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, ii, 169, note, 1852. Hen-tee-pah-tees.—Ibid. Ho in de bor-to.—Clark (1804) in Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, i, 132, 1904. Honepatela band.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 94, 34th Cong., 1st sess., 11, 1856. Honepatela Yancetonais.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 130, 34th Cong., 1st sess., 7, 1856. Hone-ta-par-teen.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 34, 1806. Hunk-pate.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 71, 1858. Hunkpatee.—Cleveland in Our Church Work, Dec. 4, 1875. Hunkpatidan.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 248, 1851. Hunkpatidans.—Riggs, Dak. Gram. and Dict., xvi, 1852. Hunkplatin.—Brown in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 92, 1860. Lower Yancetonais.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 371, 1866. Lower Yancetonais.—Ibid., 1871, 525, 1872. Lower Yanktonai.—Robinson, letter to Dorsey, 1879. Lower Yanktonais.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 27, 1878. Unc-pah-te.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1867, 231, 1868. Uncpatina.—Alderson in Ind. Aff. Rep., 266, 1874. Unkepates.—Smet, Letters, 37, note, 1843.

Hunkuwaniha ('without-a-mother'). A band of the Brulé Teton Sioux.

Hunkuwania.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897. Hunkuwania.—Ibid.

Hunnint. A Clallam village in N. W. Washington which participated in the treaty of Point No Point in 1855.—U. S. Ind. Treat., 800, 1873.

Hunska-chantozhuha ('legging tobacco pouches'). A band of the Hunkpapa Teton Sioux.

Hunska-chantozhuha.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 221, 1897. Hunska-tea-tojuha.—Ibid.

Hunting. The pursuit of game may be divided into two sets of activities, which correspond to military strategy and tactics, the one including the whole series of traps, the other hunting weapons and processes. Beginning with the latter, the following 9 classes embrace all the hunting activities of the American Indians:

(1) Taking animals with the hand without the aid of apparatus. Examples of this are picking up marine animals on the beach to eat on the spot, robbing birds' nests, and seizing birds on their roosts on dark nights. Such unskilled taking developed the utmost cunning, agility, and strength for pursuing, seizing, climbing, diving, stealing upon, and deceiving, and the same qualities were useful also in the pursuit with weapons. The climax of this first class was the communal game drive, in which a whole band or tribe would surround a herd of animals and coax or force them into a gorge, a corral, or natural cul-de-sac.

(2) Gathering with devices. To this class of activities belong substitutes for the fingers or palms, such as rakes for drawing or piling up sea food; a sharp stick for getting worms by forcing them out of the ground; nets and scoops for taking animals from the water (see Fishing, Nets); also dulle, reatas, and bolas for reaching out and grasping. This class reached its climax in the partnership or communal net, used by the Eskimo and other tribes for taking seal and also small fish.

(3) The employment of apparatus for striking, bruising, or breaking bones, including stones held in the hands, clubs with grips, and hard objects at the end of a line or handle, like a slung shot. The N. Pacific tribes took great pains with their clubs, carving on them their symbolism.

(4) Slashing or stabbing with edged weapons. The Indians had little to do with metals and were given almost altogether to the use of stone, bone, reeds, and wood for stabbing and slashing. Both chipped and ground weapons were used, either without a handle, with a grip, or at the end of a shaft. Every Eskimo had a quiver of daggers for use at close quarters, and so had the Indian his side arms. Edged weapons, however, were not so common as the weapons of the next class.

(5) Hunting with piercing weapons, the most common of all Indian methods of taking animals. The implements include the pointed stick or stone, the lance, the spear, the harpoon, and the arrow (q. v.). Weapons of this class were held in the hand, hurled from the hand, shot from a bow or a blowgun, or slung from the throwing stick. Each of the varieties went through a multitude of transformations, depending on game, materials at hand, the skill of the maker, etc.

(6) The use of traps, pits, and snares (see Traps). The Tenankutchin of Alaska capture deer, moose, and caribou by means of a brush fence, extended many miles, in which at intervals snares are set; and the same custom was practised by many other tribes in hunting the larger game. The Plains tribes and the ancient Pueblos captured deer, antelope, and wolves by means of pitfalls.

(7) Capturing game by means of dogs or other hunting animals. Indian tribes, with few exceptions, had no hunting dogs regularly trained to pursue game, but the common dog was very efficient. Fowls of the air, marine animals, and especially carnivorous animals, such as the coyote, by their noises and movements gave the cue which aided the cunning and observant hunter to identify, locate, and follow his game. (See Domestication.)

(8) Hunting by means of fire and smoke. In America, as throughout the world, as soon as men came into possession of fire the conquest of the animal kingdom was practically assured. The Indians used smoke to drive animals out of hiding, torches to dazzle the eyes of deer and to attract fish and birds to their canoes, and firebrands and prairie fires for game drives.

(9) Taking animals by means of drugs. The bark of walnut root served to asphyxiate fish in fresh-water pools in the Southern states; in other sections soap root and buckeyes were used.

In connection with hunting processes there were accessory activities in which the Indian had to be versed. There were foods to eat and foods tabued, clothing and masks to wear, shelters and hiding places to provide, and not only must the hunter be familiar with calls, imitations, decoys, whistles, and the like, but acquainted with the appropriate hunting songs, ceremonies, and fetishes, and with formulas for every act in the process, the time for the chase of the various animals, the laws for the division of game, and the clan names connected with hunting. Besides, there were numberless employments and conveniences associated therewith. In order to use the harpoon it was necessary to have a canoe, and with every method of hunting were connected other employments which taxed the ingenuity of the savage mind. There were also certain activities which were the result of hunting. Questions presented themselves regarding transportation, receptacles, the discrimination of useful species, and the construction of fences. A slight knowledge of anatomy was necessary in order to know where to strike and how to cut up game. All these gave excellent training in perception, skill, and cooperative effort. See Buffalo, Fishing, Food, Fur trade, Horse, etc., and the various subjects above referred to.

Consult Allen, Rep. on Alaska, 138, 1885; Boas, Central Eskimo, 6th Rep. B. A. E., 1888; Catlin, N. A. Inds., i-ii, 1844; Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pt. 3, 1905; Hoffman, Menomini Inds., 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Mason, various articles in Rep. Smithsonian. Inst. and Nat. Mus.; Maximilian, Travels, 1849; Murdoch, Ethnological Results of the Point Barrow Exped., 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Nelson, Eskimo about Bering Strait, 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899; Schoolcraft, Indian Tribes, i-vi, 1851-57. (O. T. M.)

Huntlatin. A division of the Tenankutchin on Tanana r., Alaska.

Hautlatin.—Dawson (after Allen) in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can., 203B, 1887. Huntlatin.—Allen, Rep. on Alaska, 137, 1887.

Hunxapa. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.

Huixapa.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, i, 459, 1874. Hunxapa.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Huocom. A former Costanoan village near Santa Cruz mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 5, 1860.

Hupa. An Athapasean tribe formerly occupying the valley of Trinity r., Cal., from South fork to its junction with the Klamath, including Hupa valley. They were first mentioned by Gibbs in 1852; a military post was established in their territory in 1855 and maintained until 1892; and a reservation 12 m. square, including nearly all the Hupa habitat, was set apart in Aug., 1864. The population in 1888 was given as 650; in 1900, 430; in 1905, 412. They are at present self-supporting, depending on agriculture and stock raising. When they first came in contact with the whites, in 1850, the Hupa were all under the control of a chief called Ahrookoos by the Yurok (McKee in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 161, 1853), whose authority is said to have extended to other peoples southward along Trinity r. The position of chief depended on the possession of wealth, which usually remained in the family, causing the chieftainship to descend from father to son. In feasts and dances a division of the Hupa into two parts is manifest, but this division seems to have no validity outside of religious matters. The tribe occupied the following permanent villages: Cheindekhotding, Djish-tangading, Haslinding, Honsading, How-ungkut, Kinchuwikut, Medilding, Miskut, Takimilding, Tlilding, Toltsasding, and Tsewenaliding. Powers (Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 73, 1877) gave Chailkutkaituh, Wissomanchuh, and Misketoi-itok, which have not been identified with any of the foregoing; Gibbs (MS. on Klamath river, B. A. E., 1852), on information furnished by the Yurok, gave Wangullewutlekaul, Wangullewatl, Sehachpeya, and (Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 139, 1853) Tashuanta, Sokeakeit (Sok-chit), and Meyemma.

HUPA WOMAN. (GODDARD)

The houses of the Hupa were built of cedar slabs set on end, the walls being 4 ft high on the sides and rising to more than 6 ft at the ends to accommodate the slope of the roof, inclosing a place about 20 ft square, the central part of which was excavated to form the principal chamber, which was about 12 ft square and 5 ft deep. The entrance was a hole 18 or 20 in. in diameter and about a foot above the ground. This was the storehouse for the family goods and the sleeping place of the women. The men occupied sweat houses at night. The Hupa depended for food on the deer and elk of the mountains, the salmon and lamprey of the river, and the acorns and other vegetal foods growing plentifully about them. They are noted for the beautiful twined baskets produced by the women and the fine pipes and implements executed by the men. The yew bows they used to make, only about 3 ft long, strengthened with sinew fastened to the back with sturgeon glue, were effective up to 75 yds. and could inflict a serious wound at 100 yds. Their arrows, made of syringa shoots wound with sinew, into which foreshafts of juneberry wood were inserted, feathered with three split hawk feathers and pointed with sharp heads of obsidian, flint, bone, or iron, sometimes passed entirely through a deer. The hunter, disguised in the skin of the deer or elk, the odor of his body removed by ablution and smoking with green fir boughs, simulated so perfectly the movements of the animal in order to get within bowshot that a panther sometimes pounced upon his back, but withdrew when he felt the sharp pins that, for the very purpose of warding off such an attack, were thrust through the man's hair gathered in a bunch at the back of the neck. The Hupa took deer also with snares of a strong rope made from the fiber of the iris, or chased them into the water with dogs and pursued them in canoes. Meat was roasted before the fire or on the coals or incased in the stomach and buried in the ashes until cooked, or was boiled in water-tight baskets by dropping in hot stones. Meat and fish were preserved by smoking. Salmon were caught in latticed weirs stretched across the river or in seines or poundnets, or were speared with barbs that detached but were made fast to the pole by lines. Dried acorns were ground into flour, leached in a pit to extract the bitter taste, and boiled into a mush.

HUPA MAN. (GODDARD)

The men wore ordinarily a breechclout of deerskin or of skins of small animals joined together, and leggings of painted deerskin with the seam in front hidden by a fringe that hung from the top, which was turned down at the knee. Moccasins of deerskin with soles of elk hide were sometimes worn. The dance robes of the men were made of two deerskins sewn together along one side, the necks meeting over the left shoulder and the tails nearly touching the ground. Panther skins were sometimes used. The hair was tied into two clubs, one hanging down on each side of the head, or into one which hung behind. Bands of deerskin, sometimes ornamented with woodpeckers' crests, were worn about the head in dances, and occasionally feathers or feathered darts were stuck in the hair. The nose was not pierced, but in the ears were often worn dentalium shells with tassels of woodpeckers' feathers. A quiver of handsome skin filled with arrows was a part of gala dress, and one of plain buckskin or a skin pouch or sack of netting was carried as a pocket for small articles. Women wore a skirt of deerskin reaching to the knees, with a long, thick fringe hanging below and a short fringe at the waist. When soiled it was washed with the soap plant. At the opening of the skirt in front an apron was worn underneath. The skirts worn in dances were ornamented with strings of shell beads, pieces of abalone shell, and flakes of obsidian fastened to the upper and of shells of pine nuts inserted at intervals in the lower fringe. The apron for common wear was made of long strands of pine-nut shells and braided leaves attached to a belt. The dance aprons had strands of shells and pendants cut from abalone shells. Small dentalium and olivella shells, pine-nut shells, and small black fruits were strung for necklaces. A robe of deerskin or of wildcat fur was worn with the hair next to the body as a protection against the cold and in rainy weather with the hair side out. The head covering was a cap of fine basket work, which protected the forehead from the carrying strap whereby burdens and baby baskets were borne. Women, except widows, wore their hair long and tied in queues that hung down in front of the ears, and were ornamented with strips of mink skin, sometimes covered with woodpeckers' crests, and shell pendants, and sometimes perfumed with stems of yerba buena. From their ears hung pendants of abalone shell attached to twine. All adult women were tattooed with vertical black marks on the chin and sometimes curved marks were added at the corners of the mouth.

The imagination of the Hupa has peopled the regions e., w., s., and above with mortals known as Kihunai. The underworld is the abode of the dead. Their creator or culture hero, Yimantuwingyai, dwells with Kihunai across the ocean toward the n. A salmon feast is held by the southern division in the spring and an acorn feast by the northern division in the fall. They formerly celebrated three dances each year: the spring dance, the white-deerskin dance, and the jumping dance. They have a large and varied folklore and many very interesting medicine formulas. See Goddard, Life and Culture of the Hupa, Univ. Cal. Pub., 1903; Hupa Texts, ibid., 1904. (P. E. G.)

Cha-parahihu.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (Shasta name). Hich'hu.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (Chimariko name). Hoopa.—Gatschet in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 440, 1877. Hoo-pah.—Gibbs in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 139, 1853. Ho-pah.—Gibbs, MS., B. A. E., 1852. Hupá.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, 73, 1877. Hupó.—Gatschet in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 440, 1877. Kishakevira.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (Karok name). Nabiltse.—Gibbs, Nabiltse MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1857 (trans. 'man'). Nabil-tse.—Gibbs in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 423, 1853. Nabiltse.—Latham in Proc. Philol. Soc. Lond., VI, 84, 1854. Natano.—Ray in Am. Nat., 832, 1886. Noh-tin-oah.—Azpell, MS., B. A. E. (own name). Num-ee-muss.—Ibid. (Yurok name). Trinity Indians.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc.

4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 161, 1853. Up-pa.—Hazen quoted by Gibbs, Nabilts MS. vocab., B. A. E.

Huron (lexically from French huré, 'bristly,' 'bristled,' from hure, 'rough hair' (of the head), head of man or beast, wild boar's head; old French, 'muzzle of the wolf, lion,' etc., 'the scalp,' 'a wig'; Norman French, huré, 'rugged'; Roumanian, hurée, 'rough earth,' and the suffix -on, expressive of depreciation and employed to form nouns referring to persons). The name Huron, frequently with an added epithet, like vilain, 'base,' was in use in France as early as 1358 (La Curne de Sainte-Palaye in Dict. Hist. de l'Ancien Langage Française, 1880) as a name expressive of contumely, contempt, and insult, signifying approximately an unkempt person, knave, ruffian, lout, wretch. The peasants who rebelled against the nobility during the captivity of King John in England in 1358 were called both Hurons and Jacques or Jacques bons hommes, the latter signifying approximately 'simpleton Jacks,' and so the term Jacquerie was applied to this revolt of the peasants. But Father Lalement (Jes. Rel. for 1639, 51, 1858), in attempting to give the origin of the name Huron, says that about 40 years previous to his time, i. e., about 1600, when these people first reached the French trading posts on the St Lawrence, a French soldier or sailor, seeing some of these barbarians wearing their hair cropped and roached, gave them the name Hurons, their heads suggesting those of wild boars. Lalement declares that while what he had advanced concerning the origin of the name was the most authentic, "others attribute it to some other though similar origin." But it certainly does not appear that the rebellious French peasants in 1358, mentioned above, were called Hurons because they had a similar or an identical manner of wearing the hair; for, as has been stated, the name had, long previous to the arrival of the French in America, a well-known derogatory signification in France. So it is quite probable that the name was applied to the Indians in the sense of 'an unkempt person,' 'a bristly savage,' 'a wretch or lout,' 'a ruffian.'

A confederation of 4 highly organized Iroquoian tribes with several small dependent communities, which, when first known in 1615, occupied a limited territory, sometimes called *Huron*ia, around L. Simcoe and S. and E. of Georgian Bay, Ontario. According to the Jesuit Relation for 1639 the names of these tribes, which were independent in local affairs only, were the Attigneaouantac (Bear people), the Attigneonognahac (Cord people), the Arendahronon (Rock people), and the Tohontaenrat (Atahonta'enrat or Tohonta'enrat, White-eared or Deer people). Two of the dependent peoples were the Bowl people and the Ataronchronon. Later, to escape destruction by the Iroquois, the Wenrohronon, an Iroquoian tribe, in 1639, and the Atontrataronnon, an Algonquian people, in 1644, sought asylum with the Huron confederation. In the Huron tongue the common and general name of this confederation of tribes and dependent peoples was Wendat (Sendat), a designation of doubtful analysis and signification, the most obvious meaning being 'the islanders' or 'dwellers on a peninsula.' According to a definite tradition recorded in the Jesuit Relation for 1639, the era of the formation of this confederation was at that period comparatively recent, at least in so far as the date of membership of the last two tribes mentioned therein is concerned. According to the same authority the Rock people were adopted about 50 years and the Deer people about 30 years (traditional time) previous to 1639, thus carrying back to about 1590 the date of the immigration of the Rock people into the Huron country. The first two principal tribes in 1639, regarding themselves as the original inhabitants of the land, claimed that they knew with certainty the dwelling places and village sites of their ancestors in the country for a period exceeding 200 years. Having received and adopted the other two into their country and state, they were the more important. Officially and in their councils they addressed each other by the formal political terms 'brother' and 'sister'; they were also the more populous, having incorporated many persons, families, clans, and peoples, who, preserving the name and memory of their own founders, lived among the tribes which adopted them as small dependent communities, maintaining the general name and having the community of certain local rights, and enjoyed the powerful protection and shared with it the community of certain other rights, interests, and obligations of the great Wendat commonwealth.

The provenience and the course of migration of the Rock and Deer tribes to the Huron country appear to furnish a reason for the prevalent but erroneous belief that all the Iroquoian tribes came into this continent from the valley of the lower St Lawrence. There is presumptive evidence that the Rock and the Deer tribes came into *Huron*ia from the middle and upper St Lawrence valley, and they appear to have been expelled therefrom by the Iroquois, hence the expulsion of the Rock and the Deer people from lower St Lawrence valley has been mistaken for the migration of the entire stock from that region.

In his voyages to the St Lawrence in 1534-43, Jacques Cartier found on the present sites of Quebec and Montreal, and along both banks of this river above the Saguenay on the n. and above Gaspé peninsula on the s. bank, tribes speaking Iroquoian tongues, for there were at least two dialects, a fact well established by the vocabularies which Cartier recorded. Lexical comparison with known Iroquoian dialects indicates that those spoken on the St Lawrence at that early date were Huron or Wendat. Cartier further learned that these St Lawrence tribes were in fierce combat with peoples dwelling southward from them, and his hosts complained bitterly of the cruel attacks made on them by their southern foes, whom they called Toudamani (Trudamans or Trudamani) and Agouionda (Onkhiio "thá" is an Onondaga form), the latter signifying 'those who attack us.' Although he may have recorded the native names as nearly phonetically as he was able, yet the former is not a distant approach to the well-known Tsonnontowanen of the early French writers, a name which Champlain printed Chouontouaroion (probably written Chonontouaroñon), the name of the Seneca, which was sometimes extended to include the Cayuga and Onondaga as a geographical group. Lescarbot, failing to find in Canada in his time the tongues recorded by Cartier, concluded that "the change of language in Canada" was due "to a destruction of people," and in 1603 he declared (Nova Francia, 170, 1609): "For 't is some 8 years since the Iroquois did assemble themselves to the number of 8,000 men, and discomfited all their enemies, whom they surprised in their enclosures;" and (p. 290) "by such surprises the Iroquois, being in number 8,000 men, have heretofore exterminated the Algonmequins, them of Hochelaga, and others bordering upon the great river." So it is probable that the southern foes of the tribes along the St Lawrence in Cartier's time were the Iroquois tribes anterior to the formation of their historical league, for he was also informed that these Agouionda "doe continually warre one against another"—a condition of affairs which ceased with the formation of the league. Between the time of the last voyage of Cartier to the St Lawrence, in 1543, and the arrival of Champlain on this river in 1603, nothing definite is known of these tribes and their wars. Champlain found the dwelling places of the tribes discovered by Cartier on the St Lawrence deserted and the region traversed only rarely by war parties from extralimital Algonquian tribes which dwelt on the borders of the former territory of the expelled Iroquoian tribes. Against the aforesaid Iroquoian tribes the Iroquois were still waging relentless warfare, which Champlain learned in 1622 had then lasted more than 50 years.

Such was the origin of the confederation of tribes strictly called Hurons by the French and Wendat (Sendat) in their own tongue. But the name Hurons was applied in a general way to the Tionontati, or Tobacco tribe, under the form "Huron du Pétun," and also, although rarely, to the Attiwendaronk in the form "Huron de la Nation Neutre." After the destruction of the Huron or Wendat confederation and the more or less thorough dispersal of the several tribes composing it, the people who, as political units, were originally called Huron and Wendat, ceased to exist. The Tionontati, or Tobacco tribe, with the few Huron fugitives, received the name "Huron du Pétun" from the French, but they became known to the English as Wendat, corrupted to Yendat, Guyandotte, and finally to Wyandot. The Jesuit Relation for 1667 says: "The Tionnontateheronons of to-day are the same people who heretofore were called the Hurons de la nation du pétun." These were the so-called Tobacco nation, and not the Wendat tribes of the Huron confederation. So the name Huron was employed only after these Laurentian tribes became settled in the region around L. Simcoe and Georgian bay. Champlain and his French contemporaries, after becoming acquainted with the Iroquois tribes of New York, called the Hurons les bons Iroquois, 'the good Iroquois,' to distinguish them from the hostile Iroquois tribes. The Algonquian allies of the French called the Hurons and the Iroquois tribes Nadowek, 'adders,' and Irvikhowek, 'real serpents,' hence, 'bitter enemies.' The singular Irvikowi, with the French suffix -ois, has become the familiar "Iroquois." The term Nadowe in various forms (e. g., Nottaway) was applied by the Algonquian tribes generally to all alien and hostile peoples. Champlain also called the Hurons Ochateguin and Charioquois, from the names of prominent chiefs. The Delawares called them Talamatan, while the peoples of the "Neutral Nation" and of the Huron tribes applied to each other the term Attiwendaronk, literally, 'their speech is awry,' but freely, 'they are stammerers,' referring facetiously to the dialectic difference between the tongues of the two peoples.

In 1615 Champlain found all the tribes which he later called Hurons, with the exception of the Wenrobronon and the Atontrataronon, dwelling in Huronia and waging war against the Iroquois tribes in New York. When Cartier explored the St Lawrence valley, in 1534-43, Iroquoian tribes occupied the N. bank of the river indefinitely northward and from Saguenay r. eastward to Georgian bay, with no intrusive alien bands (despite the subsequent but doubtful claim of the Onontchataronon to a former possession of the island of Montreal), and also the S. watershed from the Bay of Gaspé w. to the contiguous territory of the Iroquois confederation on the line of the E. watershed of L. Champlain.

The known names of towns of these Laurentian Iroquois are Araste, Hagonchenda, Hochelaga, Hochelay, Satadin, Stadacona, Starnatan, Tailla, Teguenon-dahi, and Tutonaguy. But Cartier, in speaking of the people of Hochelaga, remarks: "Notwithstanding, the said Canadians are subject to them with eight or nine other peoples who are on the said river." All these towns and villages were abandoned previous to the arrival of Champlain on the St. Lawrence in 1603. Of the towns of the Hurons, Sagard says: "There are about 20 or 25 towns and villages, of which some are not at all shut, nor closed [palisaded], and others are fortified with long pieces of timber in triple ranks, interlaced one with another to the height of a long pike [16 ft], and reenforced on the inside with broad, coarse strips of bark, 8 or 9 ft in height; below there are large trees, with their branches lopped off, laid lengthwise on very short trunks of trees, forked at one end, to keep them in place; then above these stakes and bulwarks there are galleries or platforms, called ondaqua ('box'), which are furnished with stones to be hurled against an enemy in time of war, and with water to extinguish any fire which might be kindled against them. Persons ascend to these by means of ladders quite poorly made and difficult, which are made of long pieces of timber wrought by many hatchet strokes to hold the foot firm in ascending." Champlain says that these palisades were 35 ft in height. In accord with the latter authority, Sagard says that these towns were in a measure permanent, and were removed to new sites only when they became too distant from fuel and when their fields, for lack of manuring, became worn out, which occurred every 10, 20, 30, or 40 years, more or less, according to the situation of the country, the richness of the soil, and the distance of the forest, in the middle of which they always built their towns and villages. Champlain says the Hurons planted large quantities of several kinds of corn, which grew finely, squashes, tobacco, many varieties of beans, and sunflowers, and that from the seeds of the last they extracted an oil with which they anointed their heads and employed for various other purposes.

The government of these tribes was vested by law in a definite number of executive officers, called "chiefs" (q. v.) in English, who were chosen by the suffrage of the child-bearing women and organized by law or council decree into councils for legislative and judicial purposes. There were five units in the social and political organization of these tribes, namely, the family, clan, phratry, tribe, and confederation, which severally expressed their will through councils co-ordinate with their several jurisdictions and which made necessary various grades of chiefs in civil affairs. In these communities the civil affairs of government were entirely differentiated from the military, the former being exercised by civil officers, the latter by military officers. It sometimes happened that the same person performed the one or the other kind of function, but to do so he must temporarily resign his civil authority should it be incumbent on him to engage in military affairs, and when this emergency was past he would resume his civil function or authority.

In almost every family one or more chiefship titles, known by particular names, were hereditary, and there might even be two or three different grades of chiefs therein. But the candidate for the incumbency of any one of these dignities was chosen only by the suffrage of the mothers among the women of his family. The selection of the candidate thus made was then submitted for confirmation to the clan council, then to the tribal council, and lastly to the great federal council composed of the accredited delegates from the various allied tribes.

The tribes composing the Hurons recognized and enforced, among others, the rights of ownership and inheritance of property and dignities, of liberty and security of person, in names, of marriage, in personal adornment, of hunting and fishing in specified territory, of precedence in migration and encampment and in the council room, and rights of religion and of the blood feud. They regarded theft, adultery, maiming, sorcery with evil intent, treason, and the murder of a kinsman or a co-tribesman as crimes which consisted solely in the violation of the rights of a kinsman by blood or adoption, for the alien had no rights which Indian justice and equity recognized, unless by treaty or solemn compact. If an assassination were committed or a solemnly sworn peace with another people violated by the caprice of an individual, it was not the rule to punish directly the guilty person, for this would have been to assume over him a jurisdiction which no one would think of claiming; on the contrary, presents designed to "cover the death" or to restore peace were offered to the aggrieved party by the offender and his kindred. The greatest punishment that could be inflicted on a guilty person by his kindred was to refuse to defend him, thus placing him outside the rights of the blood feud and allowing those whom he had offended the liberty to take vengeance on him, but at their own risk and peril.

The religion of these tribes consisted in the worship of all material objects, the elements and bodies of nature, and many creatures of a teeming fancy, which in their view directly or remotely affected or controlled their well-being. These objects of their faith and worship were regarded as man-beings or anthropic persons possessed of life, volition, and orenda (q. v.) or magic power of different kind and degree peculiar to each. In this religion ethics or morals as such received only a secondary, if any, consideration. The status and interrelations of the persons of their pantheon one to another were fixed and governed by rules and customs assumed to be similar to those of the social and the political organization of the people, and so there was, therefore, at least among the principal gods, a kinship system patterned after that of the people themselves. They expressed their public religious worship in elaborate ceremonies performed at stated annual festivals, lasting from a day to fifteen days, and governed by the change of seasons. Besides the stated gatherings there were many minor meetings, in all of which there were dancing and thanksgiving for the blessings of life. They believed in a life hereafter, which was but a reflex of the present life, but their ideas regarding it were not very definite. The bodies of the dead were wrapped in furs, neatly covered with flexible bark, and then placed on a platform resting on four pillars, which was then entirely covered with bark; or the body, after being prepared for burial, was placed in a grave and over it were laid small pieces of timber, covered with strong pieces of bark and then with earth. Over the grave a cabin was usually erected. At the great feast of the dead, which occurred at intervals of 8 or 10 years, the bodies of those who had died in the interim, from all the villages participating in the feast, were brought together and buried in a common grave with elaborate and solemn public ceremonies.

In 1615, when the Hurons were first visited by the French under Champlain, he estimated from the statements of the Indians themselves that they numbered 30,000, distributed in 18 towns and villages, of which 8 were palisaded; but in a subsequent edition of his work Champlain reduces this estimate to 20,000. A little later Sagard estimated their population at 30,000, while Brebeuf gave their number as 35,000. But these figures are evidently only guesses and perhaps much above rather than below the actual population, which, in 1648, was probably not far from 20,000.

When the French established trading posts on the St Lawrence at Three Rivers and elsewhere, the Hurons and neighboring tribes made annual trips down Ottawa r. or down the Trent to these posts for the purpose of trading both with the Europeans and with the Montagnais of the lower St Lawrence who came up to meet them. The chief place of trade at this time was, according to Sagard (Histoire, I, 170, 1866), in the harbor of Cape Victory, in L. St Peter of St Lawrence r., about 50 miles below Montreal, just above the outlet of the lake, where, on Sagard's arrival, there were "already lodged a great number of savages of various nations for the trade of beavers with the French. The Indians who were not sectarians in religion invited the missionaries into their country. In 1615 the Récollect fathers accepted the invitation, and Father Le Caron spent the year 1615-16 in Huronia, and was again there in 1623-24. Father Poulain was among the Hurons in 1622, Father Viel from 1623 to 1625, and Father De la Roche Daillon in 1626-28. The labors of the Jesuits began with the advent of Father Brebeuf in Huronia in 1626, but their missions ended in 1650 with the destruction of the Huron commonwealth by the Iroquois. In all, 4 Récollect and 25 Jesuit fathers had labored in the Huron mission during its existence, which at its prime was the most important in the French dominions in North America. As the first historian of the mission, Fr. Sagard, though not a priest, deserves honorable mention.

From the Jesuit Relation for 1640 it is learned that the Hurons had had cruel wars with the Tionontati, but that at the date given they had recently made peace, renewed their former friendship, and entered into an alliance against their common enemies. Sagard is authority for the statement that the Hurons were in the habit of sending large war parties to ravage the country of the Iroquois. The well-known hostility and intermittent warfare between the Iroquois and the Huron tribes date from prehistoric times, so that the invasion and destruction of the Huron country and confederation in 1648-50 by the Iroquois were not a sudden, unprovoked attack, but the final blow in a struggle which was already in progress when the French under Cartier in 1535 first explored the St Lawrence. The acquirement of firearms by the Iroquois from the Dutch was an important factor in their subsequent successes. By 1643 they had obtained about 400 guns, while, on the other hand, as late as the final invasion of their country the Hurons had but very few guns, a lack that was the direct cause of their feeble resistance and the final conquest by the Iroquois confederation of half of the country E. of the Mississippi and N. of the Ohio. In July, 1648, having perfected their plans for the final struggle for supremacy with the Hurons, the Iroquois began open hostility by sacking two or three frontier towns and Teanastayaé (St Joseph), the major portion of the invading warriors wintering in the Huron country unknown to the Hurons; and in March, 1649, these Iroquois warriors destroyed Taenhatentaron (St Ignace) and St Louis, and carried into captivity hundreds of Hurons. These disasters completely demoralized and disorganized the Huron tribes, for the greater portion of their people were killed or led into captivity among the several Iroquoian tribes, or perished from hunger and exposure in their precipitate flight in all directions, while of the remainder some escaped to the Neutral Nation, or "Hurons de la Nation Neutre," some to the Tobacco or Tionontati tribe, some to the Erie, and others to the French settlements near Quebec on the island of Orleans. The Tohontanerat, forming the populous town of Scanonaenrat, and a portion of the Arendahronon of the town of St-Jean-Baptiste surrendered to the Seneca and were adopted by them with the privilege of occupying a village by themselves, which was named Gandougaræ (St Michel). As soon as the Iroquois learned of the Huron colony on Orleans id., they at once sought to persuade these Hurons to migrate to their country. Of these the Bear people, together with the Bowl band and the Rock people, having in an evil day promised to remove thither, were finally, in 1656, compelled to choose between fighting and migrating to the Iroquois country. They chose the latter course, the Bear people going to the Mohawk and the Rock people to the Onondaga. The Cord people alone had the courage to remain with the French.

The adopted inhabitants of the new town of St Michel (Gandougaræ) were mostly Christian Hurons who preserved their faith under adverse conditions, as did a large number of other Huron captives who were adopted into other Iroquois tribes. In 1653 Father Le Moine found more than 1,000 Christian Hurons among the Onondaga. The number of Hurons then among the Mohawk, Oneida, and Cayuga is not known.

Among the most unfortunate of the Huron fugitives were those who sought asylum among the Erie, where their presence excited the jealousy and perhaps the fear of their neighbors, the Iroquois, with whom the Erie did not fraternize. It is also claimed that the Huron fugitives strove to foment war between their protectors and the Iroquois, with the result that notwithstanding the reputed 4,000 warriors of the Erie and their skill in the use of the bow and arrow (permitting them dextrously to shoot 8 or 9 arrows while the enemy could fire an arquebus but once), the Erie and the unfortunate Huron fugitives were entirely defeated in 1653-56 and dispersed or carried away into captivity. But most pathetic and cruel was the fate of those unfortunate Hurons who, trusting in the long-standing neutrality of the Neutral Nation which the Iroquois had not theretofore violated, fled to that tribe, only to be held, with the other portion of the Huron people still remaining in their country, into harsh captivity (Jes. Rel. 1659-60).

A portion of the defeated Hurons escaped to the Tionontati or "Huron du Pétun," then dwelling directly westward from them. But in 1649, when the Iroquois had sacked one of the Tionontati palisaded towns, the remainder of the tribe, in company with the refugee Hurons, sought an asylum on the Island of St Joseph, the present Charity or Christian id., in Georgian bay. It is this group of refugees who became the Wyandots of later history. Finding that this place did not secure them from the Iroquois, the majority fled to Michilimackinac, Mich., near which place they found fertile lands, good hunting, and abundant fishing. But even here the Iroquois would not permit them to rest, so they retreated farther westward to Manitoulin id., called Ekaentoton by the Hurons. Thence they were driven to Ile Huronne (Potawatomi id., because formerly occupied by that tribe), at the entrance to Green bay, Wis., where the Ottawa and their allies from Saginaw bay and Thunder bay, Manitoulin, and Michilimackinac, sought shelter with them. From this point the fugitive Hurons, with some of the Ottawa and their allies, moved farther westward 7 or 8 leagues to the Potawatomi, while most of the Ottawa went into what is now Wisconsin and N. W. Michigan among the Winnebago and the Menominee. Here, in 1657, in the Potawatomi country, the Hurons, numbering about 500 persons, erected a stout palisade. The Potawatomi received the fugitives the more readily since they themselves spoke a language cognate with that of the Ottawa and also were animated by a bitter hatred of the Iroquois who had in former times driven them from their native country, the n. peninsula of Michigan. This first flight of the Potawatomi must have taken place anterior to the visit by Nicollet in 1634.

Having murdered a party of Iroquois scouts through a plot devised by their chief Anahotaha, and fearing the vengeance of the Iroquois, the Hurons remained here only a few months longer. Some migrated to their compatriots on Orleans id., near Quebec, and the others, in 1659-60, fled farther w. to the Illinois country, on the Mississippi, where they were well received. Anahotaha was killed in 1659 in a fight at the Long Sault of Ottawa r., above Montreal, in which a party of 17 French militia under Sieur Dolard, 6 Algonkin under Mitameg, and 40 Huron warriors under Anahotaha (the last being the flower of the Huron colony then remaining on Orleans id.) were surrounded by 700 Iroquois and all killed with the exception of 5 Frenchmen and 4 Hurons, who were captured. It was not long before the Hurons found new enemies in the Illinois country. The Sioux brooked no rivals, much less meddlesome, weak neighbors; and as the Hurons numbered fewer than 500, whose native spirit and energy had been shaken by their many misfortunes, they could not maintain their position against these new foes, and therefore withdrew to the source of Black r., Wis., where they were found in 1660. At last they decided to join the Ottawa, their companions in their first removals, who were then settled at Chequamigon bay, on the s. shore of L. Superior, and chose a site opposite the Ottawa village. In 1665 Father Allouez, the founder of the principal western missions, met them here and established the mission of La Pointe du Saint Esprit between the Huron and the Ottawa villages. He labored among them 3 years, but his success was not marked, for these Tionontati Hurons, never fully converted, had relapsed into paganism. The Ottawa and the Hurons fraternized the more readily here since the two peoples dwelt in contiguous areas s. of Georgian bay before the Iroquois invasion in 1648-49. Father Marquette succeeded Father Allouez in 1669 and founded the missions of the Sault Ste Marie and St François-Xavier de la Baie des Puants. The Sioux, however, sought every possible pretext to assail the settlements of the Hurons and the Ottawa, and their numbers and known cruelty caused them to be so feared that the latter tribes during Marquette's régime withdrew to the French settlements, since the treaty of peace between the French and the Iroquois in 1666 had delivered them from their chief enemies. The Ottawa, however, returned to Manitoulin id., where the mission of St Simon was founded, while the Hurons, who had not forgotten the advantageous situation which Michilimakinac had previously afforded them, removed about 1670 to a point opposite the island, where they built a palisaded village and where Marquette established the mission of St Ignace. Later, some of the Hurons here settled moved to Sandusky, Ohio, others to Detroit, and still others to Sandwich, Ontario. The last probably became what was latterly known as the Anderdon band of Wyandots, but which is now entirely dissipated, with the possible exception of a very few persons.

In 1745 a considerable party of Hurons under the leadership of the war chief Orontony, or Nicholas, removed from Detroit r. to the marsh lands of Sandusky bay. Orontony was a wily savage whose enmity was greatly to be feared, and he commanded men who formed an alert, unscrupulous, and powerful body. The French having provoked the bitter hatred of Nicholas, which was fomented by English agents, he conspired to destroy the French, not only at Detroit but at the upper posts, and by Aug., 1747, the "Iroquois of the West," the Hurons, Ottawa, Abnaki, Potawatomi, "Ouabash," Sauteurs, Missisauga, Foxes, Sioux, Sauk, "Sarastau," Loups, Shawnee, and Miami, indeed all the tribes of the middle W., with the exception of those of the Illinois country, had entered into the conspiracy; but through the treachery of a Huron woman the plot was revealed to a Jesuit priest, who communicated the information to Longueuil, the French commandant at Detroit, who in turn notified all the other French posts, and although a desultory warfare broke out, resulting in a number of murders, there was no concerted action. Orontony, finding that he had been deserted by his allies, and seeing the activity and determination of the French not to suffer English encroachments on what they called French territory, finally, in Apr., 1748, destroyed his villages and palisade at Sandusky, and removed, with 119 warriors and their families, to White r., Ind. Not long after he withdrew to the Illinois country on Ohio r., near the Indiana line, where he died in the autumn of 1748. The inflexible and determined conduct of Longueuil toward most of the conspiring tribes brought the coalition to an end by May, 1748.

After this trouble the Hurons seem to have returned to Detroit and Sandusky, where they became known as Wyandots and gradually acquired a paramount influence in the Ohio valley and the lake region. They laid claim to the greater part of Ohio, and the settlement of the Shawnee and Delawares within that area was with their consent; they exercised the right to light the council fire at all intertribal councils, and although few in number they joined all the Indian movements in the Ohio valley and the lake region and supported the British against the Americans. After the peace of 1815 a large tract in Ohio and Michigan was confirmed to them, but they sold a large part of it in 1819, under treaty provisions, reserving a small portion near Upper Sandusky, Ohio, and a smaller area on Huron r., near Detroit, until 1842, when these tracts also were sold and the tribe removed to Wyandotte co., Kans. By the terms of the treaty of 1855 they were declared to be citizens, but by the treaty of 1867 their tribal organization was restored and they were placed on a small tract, still occupied by them, in the N. E. corner of Oklahoma.

That portion of the Hurons who withdrew in 1650 and later to the French colony, were accompanied by their missionaries. The mission of La Conception, which was founded by them, although often changed in name and situation, has survived to the present time. The Hurons who wintered in Quebec in 1649 did not return to their country after learning of its desolation by the Iroquois, but were placed on land belonging to the Jesuits at Beauport, and when the Huron fugitives came down to Quebec to seek protection, the others followed these in May, 1651, to Orleans id., settling on the lands of Mademoiselle de Grand Maison that had been bought for them. Here a mission house was erected near their stockaded bark lodges. In 1654 they numbered between 500 and 600 persons. But again the Iroquois followed them, seeking through every misrepresentation to draw the Hurons into their own country to take the place of those who had fallen in their various wars. By this means a large number of the Hurons, remnants of the Bear, Rock, and Bowl tribes, were persuaded in 1656 to migrate to the Iroquois country, a movement that met with such success that the Iroquois even ventured to show themselves under the guns of Quebec. In the same year they mortally wounded Father Garreau, near Montreal, and captured and put to death 71 Hurons on Orleans id. These misfortunes caused the Hurons to draw nearer to Quebec, wherein they were given asylum until peace was concluded between the French and the Iroquois in 1666. The Hurons then withdrew from the town about 5 m., where in the following year the mission of Notre Dame de Foye was founded. In 1693 the Hurons moved 5 m. farther away on account of the lack of wood and the need of richer lands; here the missionaries arranged the lodges around a square and built in the middle of it a church, to which Father Chaumonot added a chapel, patterned after the Casa Sancta of Lorette in Italy, and now known as Old Lorette. Some years later the mission was transferred a short distance away, where a new village, Younger Lorette, or La Jeune Lorette, was built. About the remains of this mission still dwell the so-called Hurons of Lorette.

The old estimates of Huron population have been previously given. After the dispersal of the Huron tribes in 1649-50, the Hurons who fled w. never seem to have exceeded 500 persons in one body. Later estimates are 1,000, with 300 more at Lorette (1736), 500 (1748), 850 (1748), 1,250 (1765), 1,500 (1794-95), 1,000 (1812), 1,250 (1812). Only the first of these estimates is inclusive of the "Hurons of Lorette," Quebec, who were estimated at 300 in 1736, but at 455, officially, in 1904. In 1885 those in Indian Ter. (Oklahoma) numbered 251, and in 1905, 378, making a total of 832 in Canada and the United States.

Nothing definite was known of the clans of the Hurons until the appearance of Morgan's Ancient Society in 1877, Powell's Wyandot Government (1st Rep. B. A. E., 1881), and Connolley's The Wyandots (Archæol. Rep. Ontario, 92, 1899). From the last writer, who corrects the work of the former authorities, the following list of Huron clans is taken: Great Turtle, Little Water Turtle, Mud Turtle, Wolf, Bear, Beaver, Deer, Porcupine, Striped Turtle, Highland Turtle, Snake, and Hawk. These, according to Powell, were organized into four phratries or clan brotherhoods, but Connolley denies that four phratries ever existed. The evidence appears to indicate, however, that the four-phratry organization was merged into one of three, of which the Wolf clan constituted one and acted as executive and presiding officer.

The Huron villages were Andiata, Angoutenc, Anonatea, Arendaonatia, Arente, Arontaen, Brownstown, Cahiague, Carhagouha, Carmaron, Cranetown (2 villages), Ekhiondatsaan, Eendarahy, Jaenhouton, Ihonatiria (St Joseph II), Jeune Lorette, Junquisindundeh(?), Junundat, Khioetia, Karenbassa, Khinonascarant (3 small villages so called), Lorette, Ouenrio, Onentisati, Ossossané, Sandusky, Ste Agnes, Ste Anne, St Antoine, Ste Barbe, Ste Catherine, Ste Cécile, St Charles (2 villages), St Denys, St Etienne, St François Xavier, St Geneviève, St Joachim, St Louis, St Martin, Ste Marie (2 villages), Ste Térése, Scanonaenrat, Taenhatentaron (St Ignace I, II), Tean-austayaé (St Joseph I), Teandewiata, Touaguainchain (Ste Madeleine), and Tondakhra.

For sources of information consult Bressany, Relation-Abregée (1653), 1852; Connolley in Archæol. Rep. Ontario 1899, 1900; Jesuit Relations, I-III, 1858, and also the Thwaites edition, I-LXXIII, 1896-1901; Journal of Capt. William Trent (1752), 1871; Morgan, Ancient Society, 1878; N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., I-XV, 1853-87; Perrut, Mémoire, Tailhaned., 1864; Powell in 1st Rep. B. A. E., 1881. (J. N. B. H.)

Ahouandate.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 522, 1853. Ahwāndate.—Featherstonhaugh, Canoe Voy., I, 168, 1847. Attiendaronk.—Jes. Rel. 1641, 72, 1858. Bons Irocois.—Champlain (1633), Œuvres, II, 47, 1870. Charioquois.—Ibid. (1611), III, 244 (probably from the name of a chief). Delamatanoes.—Post (1758) in Proud, Pa., II, app., 120, 1798 (Delaware name). Delamattenos.—Lusk, Hist. United Breth., pt. 3, 16, 103, 1794. Delenatanoes.—Post (1758) quoted by Rupp, West. Pa., app., 118., 1846. Dellamattanoes.—Barton, New Views, app., 8, 1798. Ekeenteeronon.—Potier, Rac. Huron et Gram., MS., 1761 (Huron name of Hurons of Lorette). Euyrons.—Van der Donck (1656) in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., I, 209, 1841. Garrenajenhaga.—Bruyas, Radices, 63, 1863. Guyandot.—Parkman, Pioneers, xxiv, 1883. Gyan-dottes.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, 103, 1848. Hahsēdagerha.—Bruyas, Radices, 55, 1863. Harones.—Rusle (1724) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., II, 246, 1814. Hatindiaointen.—Potier, Rac. Huron et Gram., MS., 1761 (Huron name of Hurons of Lorette). Hironos.—Gorges (1658) in Maine Hist. Soc. Coll., II, 67, 1847. Houandates.—Sagard (1632), Canada (Dict.), IV, 1866. Hounondate.—Coxe, Carolana, 44, 1741. Hourons.—Tonti (1682) in French Hist. Coll. La., 169, 1846. Huron.—Jesuit Relation 1632, 14, 1858. Hurons.—Vailant (1688) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., III, 524, 1853. Huronnes.—Hildreth, Pioneer Hist., 9, 1848. Hurrons.—Writer of 1761 in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., IX, 427, 1871. Lamatan.—Rafinesque, Am. Nations, I, 139, 1836 (Delaware name). Little Mingoes.—Pownall, map of N. Am., 1776. Menchōn.—Duro, Don Diego de Peñalosa, 43, 1882.

Nadowa.—For forms of this name applied to the Hurons see Nadova. Ocāsteguin.—Champlain (1609), Œuvres, III, 176, 1870 (from name of chief). Ochatagin.—Ibid., 219. Ochataguin.—Ibid., 174. Ochateguin.—Ibid. (1632), v, pt. 1, 177. Ochateguin.—Ibid. (1609), III, 175. Ochateguins.—Ibid., 198. Ouaouackecinatouek.—Potier quoted by Parkman, Pioneers, xxiv, 1883. Ouendat.—Jes. Rel. 1640, 35, 1858. Sendat.—Jes. Rel. 1639, 50, 1858. Owandats.—Weiser (1748) quoted by Rupp, West. Pa., app., 16, 1846. Owendats.—Peters (1750) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VI, 596, 1855. Owendats.—Croghan (1750) quoted by Rupp, West. Pa., app., 26, 1846. Owndot.—Hamilton (1760) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., IX, 279, 1871. Pemedenick.—Vetromile in Hist. Mag., 1st s., IV, 369, 1860 (Abnaki name). Quatoges.—Albany conf. (1726) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., v, 791, 1855. Quatoghees.—Ibid., VI, 391, note, 1855. Quatoghies.—Garangula (1684) in Williams, Vermont, I, 504, 1809. Quatoghies of Lorette.—Colden, Five Nations, I, 197, 1755. Sastaghretsy.—Post (1758) in Proud, Pa., II, app., 113, 1798. Sastharhetsi.—La Potherie, Hist. Am. Sept., III, 223, 1753 (Iroquois name). Talamatan.—Walam Olum (1833) in Brinton, Lenape Leg., 200, 1885. Talamatum.—Squier in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 28, 1877. Telamatenos.—Hewitt after Journeycake, a Delaware ("Coming out of a mountain or cave": Delaware name). Telamatinos.—Document of 1759 in Brinton, Lenape Leg., 231, 1885. Thāschetē.—Hewitt, Onondaga MS., B. A. E., 1888 (Onondaga name). Viandots.—Maximilian, Travels, 382, 184. Wanats.—Barton, New Views, xlii, 1798. Wandats.—Weiser (1748) quoted by Rupp, West. Pa., app., 15, 1846. Wandots.—Ibid., 18. Wantats.—Weiser in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 605, 1854. Wayandots.—

Hamilton (1749) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VI, 531, 1855. Wayondots.—Croghan (1759) in Proud, Pa., II, 296, 1798. Wayondots.—Croghan, Jour., 37, 1831. Wayundatts.—Doc. of 1749 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VI, 533, 1855. Wayundots.—Ibid. Weandots.—Buchanan, N. Am. Inds., 156, 1824. Wendats.—Shea, Miss. Val., preface, 59, 1852. Weyandots.—Croghan (1760) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., IX, 262, 1871. Weyondots.—Ibid., 249. Wiandotts.—Ft Johnson conf. (1756) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 236, 1856. Wiondotts.—Edwards (1788) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., IX, 95, 1804. Wiwandots.—Morse, Modern Geog., I, 196, 1814. Wyandote.—Morgan in N. Am. Rev., 52, Jan. 1870. Wyandotte.—Garrard, Wahtoyah, 2, 1850. Wyandots.—Croghan (1754) quoted by Rupp, West. Pa., app., 51, 1846. Wyondats.—Croghan (1765) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 782, 1856. Wyondots.—Croghan, Jour., 34, 1831. Yendat.—Parkman, Pioneers, xxiv, 1883. Yendots.—Schoolcraft in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Proc., 86, 1844.

Hurriparacussi. A village near which De Soto landed from Tampa bay, Fla., in 1539. According to Gatschet the name is properly the title of the principal chief, from two Timucua words signifying 'war chief.'

Hurriparacuxi.—Biedma in Smith, Collec. Doc. Fla., 48, 1857. Paracossi.—Gentil of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 128, 1850. Parocossi.—Gentil of Elvas in Hakluyt Soc. Pub., IX, 32, 1851. Urriba cuxi.—French, op. cit., 98, note. Urribarracuxi.—Garcilasso de la Vega cited in Hakluyt Soc. Pub., op. cit., 32. Vrriibarracuxi.—Garcilasso de la Vega, Florida, 37, 1723.

Hurst tablet. See Notched plates.

Husada ('legs stretched out stiff'). A subgens of the Khuya gens of the Kansa. Husada.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897. Qūyunikaci'ga.—Ibid. ('White-eagle people').

Husadta (Hūsaja, 'limbs stretched stiff'). A subgens of the Hangkaabutun gens of the Osage, one of the original fireplaces of the Hangka division.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897.

Husadtawanu (Hū'saja Wanū', 'elder Husadta'). A subgens of the Hangkaabutun gens of the Osage, one of the original fireplaces of the Hangka division.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897.

Husam. A former winter village of the Hahamatases at the mouth of Salmon r., Brit. Col.; now the seat of a salmon fishery.

H'usam.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 230, 1887. Koo-sām.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 65.

Hushkoni ('skunk'). A Chickasaw clan of the Ishpanee phratry.

Hushkoni.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 163, 1877. Huskōni.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 96, 1884.

Hushkovi. A traditional village about 2 m. N. W. of Oraibi, N. E. Ariz. According to Hopi story Hushkovi and Pivanhonkapi were destroyed by a fire that had been kindled in the San Francisco mts., 90 m. away, at the instance of the chief of Pivanhonkapi and with the aid of the Yayaponchatu people who are said to have been in league with supernatural forces, because the inhabitants of Pivanhonkapi had become degenerates through gambling. Most of the inhabitants were also destroyed; the survivors moved away, occupying several temporary villages during their wanderings, the ruins of which are still to be seen. See Voth, Traditions of the Hopi, 241, 1905.

Hu'ckovi.—Voth, op. cit.

Husistaic. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Huskanaw. An Algonquian word applied to certain initiation ceremonies of the Virginia Indians, performed on boys at puberty, which were accompanied by fasting and the use of narcotics. The whites applied the term to huskanaw (Beverley, Hist. Va., III, 32, 39, 1705) in a figurative sense. Thus Jefferson (Corresp., II, 342) wrote: "He has the air of being huskanawed, i. e., out of his element." The term is derived from the language of the Powhatan.

Gerard (Am. Anthropol., VII, 242, 1905) etymologizes the word as follows: "Powhatan uskinawew, 'he has a new body', from uski 'new', naw 'body', eu 'has he', said of a youth who had reached the age of puberty". But the word is rather from the Powhatan equivalent of the Massachusetts wuskeno, 'he is young', and does not necessarily contain the root iaw (not naw) 'body'. It has no connection with the English word "husky," as some have supposed. For an account of the "solemnity of huskanawing" see Beverley, op. cit., and cf. Heckewelder (1817), Indian Nations, 245, 1876. See Child Life, Ordeals. (A. F. C.)

Husky. According to Julian Ralph (Sun, N. Y., July 14, 1895), "the common and only name of the wolf-like dogs of both the white and red men of our northern frontier and of western Canada." Husky was originally one of the names by which the English settlers in Labrador have long known the Eskimo (q. v.). The word, which seems to be a corruption of one of the names of this people, identical with our 'Eskimo' in the northern Algonquian dialects, has been transferred from man to the dog. (A. F. C.)

Husoron. A former division or pueblo of the Vahio, probably in the Chinipas valley, in w. Chihuahua, Mexico.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 58, 1864.

Huspah. A Yamasí band living in South Carolina under a chief of the same name about the year 1700. (A. S. G.)

Hussliakatna. A Koyukukhotana village, of 14 people in 1885, on the right bank of Koyukuk r., Alaska, 2 m. above the s. end of Dall id.

Hussleakatna.—Allen, Rep. on Alaska, 122, 1887.

Hussliakatna.—Ibid., 141.

Hutalgali (hútali 'wind', algi 'people'). A principal Creek clan.

Ho-tor'-lee.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1877. Hotulgee—Pickett, Hist. Ala., I, 96, 1851. Hutalgali.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 155, 1884. Wind Family.—Woodward, Reminiscences, 19, 20, 1859.

Hutatchl (Hut-tát-ch'l). A former Lummi village at the s. e. end of Orcas id., of the San Juan group, Wash.—Gibbs, Clallam and Lummi, 38, 1863.

Huthukawedl (X'ú'tx'útkawét, 'holes by or near the trail'). A village of the Nicola band of the Nlakypamuk, near Nicola r., 23 m. above Spences Bridge, Brit. Col.

N'hothotk'as.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 4, 1899. X'ú'tx'útkawét.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 174, 1900.

Hutsawap. One of the divisions or subtribes of the Choptank, formerly in Dorchester co., Md.—Bozman, Maryland, I, 115, 1837.

Hutsnawu ('grizzly bear fort'). A Tlingit tribe on the w. and s. coasts of Admiralty id., Alaska; pop. estimated at 300 in 1840, and given as 666 in 1880 and 420 in 1890. Their former towns were Angun and Nahltushkan, but they now live at Killisnoo. Their social divisions are Ankakehittan, Daklawedi, Deshuhittan, Tekoedi, and Wushketan. (J. R. S.)

Chúts-na-kón.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 118, 1885.

Chútsnou.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map facing 142, 1855.

Contznous.—Borrows in H. R. Ex. Doc. 197, 42d Cong., 2d sess., 4, 1872.

Hoidznous.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 313, 1868.

Hoochenous.—Ball in Sen. Ex. Doc., 105, 46th Cong., 1st sess., 30, 1880.

Hoochinoo.—Wright, Among the Alaskans, 151, 1883.

Hoodchenoo.—George in Sen. Ex. Doc. 105, 46th Cong., 1st sess., 29, 1880.

Hoodsino.—Colyer, ibid., 1869, 575, 1870.

Hoodsna.—Hallock in Rep. Sec. War, pt. I, 39, 1868.

Hoods-Naboo.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 309, 1868.

Hoochenoo.—Ball in Sen. Ex. Doc., 105, 46th Cong., 1st sess., 30, 1880.

Hootsinoo.—George, ibid., 29.

Hootsinoo.—Kane, Wand. N. A., app., 1859.

Hootz-ah-tar-gwan.—Emmons in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., III, 232, 1903.

Khootznahoo.—Petroff in Tenth Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

Khutsno.—Tikhmenief, Russ. Am. Co., II, 341, 1863.

Khutsnu.—Ibid.

Koo-tche-noos.—Beardslee in Sen. Ex. Doc., 105, 46th Cong., 1st sess., 29, 1880.

Kootsenoos.—Mahoney in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1869, 576, 1870.

Kootsnovskoe.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. Alaska, 227, 1875.

(transliterated from Veniaminoff).

Kootznahoo.—Niblack, Coast Indians of S. Alaska, chart I, 1890.

Kootznous.—Seward, Speeches on Alaska, 5, 1869.

Kootznov.—Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 587, 1870.

Koushnous.—Hallock in Rep. Sec. War, I, 38, 1868.

Koutzenoos.—Beardslee in Sen. Ex. Doc., 105, 46th Cong., 1st sess., 31, 1880.

Koutznous.—Hallock in Rep. Sec. War, pt. I, 38, 1868.

Kutsnovskoe.—Veniaminoff, Zapiski, II, pt. 3, 30, 1840.

Xu'adi-nao.—Swanton, field notes, 1900-01 (according to the Haida).

Xuts'nuwu'.—Ibid., 1904.

B. A. E. (own name).

Hutucgna. A former Gabrieleño rancheria in Los Angeles co., Cal., at a place later called Santa Ana (Yorbas).

Hutucgna.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860.

Hutuk.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1905 (Luiseno name).

Huvaguere. A Nevome division, described as adjoining the Hio, who were settled 8 leagues E. of Tepahue, in Sonora, Mexico (Orozco y Berra, Geog., 58, 1864). The name doubtless properly belongs to their village.

Huwaka. The Sky clan of Acoma pueblo, N. Mex., which, with the Osach (Sun) clan, forms a phratry.

Huwáka-hanoq^{ch}.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 352, 1896 (hanoq^{ch} = 'people').

Huwanikikarachada ('those who call themselves after the elk'). A Winnebago gens.

Elk.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 157, 1877. Hoo-wun'-ná.—

Ibid. Hu-wa-i-ki'-ka-ra'-tea-da.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 240, 1897.

Huwi. The Dove clan of the Chua (Rattlesnake) phratry of the Hopi.

Hé-wi.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 38, 1891. Hüwi wüwü.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 582, 1901 (wüwü = 'clan'). Hü'-wi wüwü.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 402, 1894.

Hwades (Xudé's, 'cut beach'). The principal village of the Koskimo and Koprino at Quatsino narrows, Vancouver id. Hwat-es'—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 65, 1888. Hwot-es.—Dawson in Can. Geol. Surv., map, 1887. Xudé's.—Boas, inf'n, 1906.

Hwahwatl (Qwā'qwal). A Salish tribe on Englishman r., Vancouver id., speaking the Puntlatsh dialect.—Boas, MS. B. A. E., 1887.

Hwotat. A Hwotsotenne village on the E. side of Babine lake, near its outlet, in British Columbia.

Hwo'-tat.—Morice in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., x, 109, 1893. Whalatt.—Downie in Mayne, Brit. Col., 453, 1861 (misprint). Whatatt.—Downie in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., xxxi, 253, 1861. Wut-at.—Dawson in Geol. Surv. Can., 26b, 1881.

Hwotsotenne ('people of Spider river'). A Takulli tribe, belonging to the Babine branch, living on Bulkley r. and hunting as far as François lake, Brit. Col. They are somewhat mixed with their immediate neighbors, the Kitksan (Morice in Trans. Can. Inst., 27, 1893). Their villages are Hagwilget, Hwotat, Keyerhwotket, Lachalsap, Tsechah, and Tselkazkwo. Akwilgét.—Morice, Notes on W. Dénés, 27, 1893 ('well dressed': Kitksan name). Hwotso'tenne.—Morice in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., map, 1892. Outsotin.—British Columbia map, 1872.

Hykehah. A former Chickasaw town, one of a settlement of five, probably in or near Pontotoc co., Miss.

Hikihaw.—Romans, Florida, 63, 1775. Hikkihaw.—W. Florida map, ca. 1775. Hykehah.—Adair, Am. Ind., 352, 1775.

Hykwa. See Hiakwa.

Hyperboreans (Greek). Applied by Bancroft (Nat. Races, i, 37, 1882) to the tribes of extreme N. W. America, N. of lat. 55°, including western and southern Eskimo, Aleut, Tlingit, and Athapascan tribes; by others the name is employed to designate all the circumpolar tribes of both the Old and the New World.

Hyukkeni. A former Choctaw settlement, noted by Romans in 1775, but not located on his map unless it be an unnumbered town on the E. side of Buckatunna cr., N. E. of Yowani, in the present Mississippi.—Halbert in Miss. Hist. Soc. Pub., vi, 432, 1902.

Iahenhouton ('at the caves.'—Hewitt). A Huron village in Ontario in 1637.—Jes. Rel. for 1637, 159, 1858.

Ialamma. A former Chumashan village subordinate to Purisima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Ialamne. A former Chumashan village subordinate to Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal. (Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861). Possibly the same as Ialamma.

Ialmuk (Īa'lmug). A Squawmish village community at Jericho, Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. B. A. A. S., 475, 1900.

Ialostimot (Ialo'stimōt, 'making good fire'). A Talio division among the Bellaçoola of British Columbia; named from a reputed ancestor.

Ialo'stimōt.—Boas in 7th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 3, 1891. Tā't'entsāit.—Ibid. ('a cave protecting from rain': secret society name).

Iana (Ia'na). The Corn clan of the pueblo of Taos, N. Mex.

Iāna-tāina.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (tāina = 'people').

Ibache ('holds the firebrand to sacred pipes'). A Kansa gens. Its subgentes are Khuyeguzhinga and Mikaunika-shinga.

Haŋga jīnga.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897 ('small Hanga'). Ibate'é.—Ibid.

Ibin. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Ibitoupa. A small tribe of unknown affinity, but the theory that they were connected with the Chickasaw has more arguments in its favor than any other. In 1699 they formed one of the villages mentioned by Iberville (Margry, Déc., iv, 180, 1880) as situated on Yazoo r., Ibitoupa being near the upper end of the group between the Chakesauma (Chakchiuma) and the Thysia (Tioux), according to the order named, which appears to be substantially correct, although Coxé (Carolina, 10, 1741) who omits Thysia, makes the Ibitoupa settlement expressly the uppermost of the series. The Ibitoupa and Chakchiuma, together with the Tapoucha (Taposa), were united in one village on the upper Yazoo by 1798. What eventually became of them is not known, but it is probable that they were absorbed by the Chickasaw. See Itomapa.

(A. S. G.)

Bitoupas.—Pénicaut (1700) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., i, 61, 1869. Epitoupa.—Coxé, Carolina, 10, map, 1741. Ouitoupas.—Pénicaut (1700) in Margry, Déc., v, 401, 1883. Outapa.—Iberville (1699), ibid., iv, 180, 1880. Outaypes.—Martin, Hist. La., i, 249, 1827. Witoupa.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., v, 343, 1789 (misprint). Witowpa.—Esnaux et Rapilly, map, 1777. Witowpo.—Philippeaux, map of English Col., 1781. Ybitoupas.—Romans, Fla., i, 101, 1775. Ybitoupas.—Baudry des Lozières, Voy. à la Louisiane, 245, 1802.

Icayme. Given as the native name of the site on which San Luis Rey mission, s. California, was founded; perhaps also the name of a neighboring Diegueño village.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Feb. 22, 1860.

Ichenta. A village of the Chalonedivision of the Costanoan family, formerly near Soledad mission, Cal.

Ichenta.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860. San José.—Ibid.

Ichuarumpats (I'-chu-ar'-rum-pats, 'people of cactus plains'). A Paiute tribe formerly in or near Moapa valley, s. e. Nev., numbering 35 in 1873.—Powell in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1873, 50, 1874.

Icosans. Mentioned by Bartram (Trav., 54, 1792) in connection with the Ogechee, Santee, Utina, Wapoo, Yamasi, etc., as having been attacked by the Creeks, and "who then surrounded and cramped the English possessions." The reference is to the early colonial period of South Carolina and Georgia.

Idakarinke. Mentioned as a Shasta band of Shasta valley, n. Cal., in 1851, but it is really only a man's personal name. (R. B. D.)

Ida-kara-wak-a-ha.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 221, 1853 (seemingly identical). Ida-ka-riúke.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 171, 1853. I-do-ka-rai-uke.—McKee, ibid., 171.

Idelabuú ('mesas of the mountains'). A ranchería, probably Cochimi, connected with Purísima (Cadegomo) mission, Lower California, in the 18th century.—Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., v, 189, 1857.

Idelibinagá ('high mountains'). A ranchería, probably Cochimi, connected with Purísima mission, Lower California, in the 18th century.—Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., v, 189, 1857.

Idiuteling. An Eskimo settlement on the n. shore of Home bay, Baffin land, where the Akudnirmiut Eskimo gather to hunt bear in the spring.

Ipiutelling.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 441, 1888 (misprint). Ipnitelling.—Ibid., map (misprint).

Idjorituaktuin ('with grass'). A village of the Talirpingmiut division of the Okomiut Eskimo on the w. shore of Cumberland sd.; pop. 11 in 1883.

Ejjujujuin.—Kumlien in Bull. Nat. Mus., no. 15, 15, 1879. Idjorituaktuin.—Boas in Deutsche Geog. Blatt., VIII, 33, 1885. Idjorituaktuin.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 426, 1888. Idjorituaktuin.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., no. 80, 70, 1885.

Idjuniving. A spring settlement of Padlimiut Eskimo near the s. end of Home bay, Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Iebathu. The White-corn clan of the Tigua pueblo of Isleta, N. Mex.

Iebathú-t'áinm.—Lummis quoted by Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (t'áinm='people').

Iechur. The Yellow-corn clan of the Tigua pueblo of Isleta, N. Mex.

Iechur-t'áinm.—Lummis quoted by Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (t'áinm='people').

Iefeu. The Red-corn clan of the Tigua pueblo of Isleta, N. Mex.

Iefe'u-t'áinm.—Lummis quoted by Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (t'áinm='people').

Iekidhe (Iekičé, 'criers'). A gens of the Inkesabe division of the Omaha.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 227, 1897.

Ieshur. The Blue-corn clan of the Tigua pueblo of Isleta, N. Mex.

Ieshur-t'áinm.—Lummis quoted by Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (t'áinm='people').

Ieskachincha ('child of one who speaks Dakota'). The ordinary name for the mixed-blood element among the western Sioux. Given by J. O. Dorsey as a Brulé gens composed of half-breeds.

Ieskačingča.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897. Ieska-toičtea.—Ibid.

Ieskachincha. A modern Oglala Dakota band, composed of half-breeds.

Ieska čingča.—Cleveland, letter to Dorsey, 1884.

Ieska-toičtea.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 221, 1897.

Ietan. A term which, with "Tetau" and other forms of the name, was applied by writers of the early part of the 19th century to several western tribes. Mooney (17th Rep. B. A. E., 167, 1898) explains its application as follows: "The Ute of the mountain region at the headwaters of the Platte and the Arkansas, being a powerful and aggressive tribe, were well known to all the Indians of the plains, who usually called them by some form of their proper name, Yútaváts, or, in its root form, Yuta, whence we get Eutaw, Utah, and Ute. Among the Kiowa the name becomes íatä (-go), while the Siouan tribes seem to have nasalized it so that the early French traders wrote it as Ayutan, Iatan, or Ietan. By prefixing the French article it became L'Iatan, and afterward Aliatan, while by misreading of the manuscript word we get Jatan, Jetan, and finally Tetau. Moreover, as the early traders and explorers knew but little of the mountain tribes, they frequently confounded those of the same generic stock, so that almost any of these forms may mean Shoshoni, Ute, or Comanche, according to the general context of the description." By reason of the varied applications of Ietan and its equivalents, the name is here treated separately.

Aliatá.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 60, 1806 (so called by the French). Aliatan.—Drake, Bk. Inds., vi, 1848. Aliatans, of La Playes.—Lewis, Travels, 181, 1809. Aliatans, of the West.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 63, 1806. Aliatons.—Lewis and Clark, Jour., 139, 1810. Aliatons of the west.—Brown, West. Gaz., 215, 1817. Ayutan.—Brackenridge, Views of Louisiana, 80, 1814 (also called 'Camanches'). Halisanes.—Du Lac, Voy. Louisianes, 261, 1805. Halitanes.—Ibid., 309. Hietanes.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 40, 1864. Hietans.—Pénicaut (1720) in French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 156, 1869. I-a'-kár.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 60, 1806. Iatan.—Gregg, Comm. Prairies, I, 21, 1844. I-a-tans.—Bonner, Life of Beckwourth, 34, 1856. Ietans.—Boudinot, Star in West, 126, 1816 (misprint). Ielan.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 374, 1822 (misprint). Ietam.—Cass in H. R. Ex. Doc. 117, 20th Cong., 2d sess., 102, 1829. Ietan.—Pike, Travels, xiv, 1811. Ietan.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 40, 1864. Ietans.—Pike, Exped., 3d map, 1810. Iotan.—Pattie, Pers. Narr., 36, 1833. Itean.—M'Kenney, Memoirs, II, 94, 1846 (misprint). Jetam.—Cass quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 609, 1853 (misprint). Jetans.—Pénicaut (1720) in French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 156, note, 1869 (misprint). Jetans.—Mayer, Mexico, II, 39, 1853 (misprint). Jotans.—Pattie, Pers. Narr., 37, 1833 (misprint). Laitanes.—Mallet (1740) in Margry, Déc., VI, 457, 1886 (French form). La Kar.—Fisher, New Trav., 175, 1812. La Litanes.—Ibid.

Lee-ha-taus.—Hunter, Captivity, 68, 1823. Liahtan Band.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, map, 1822. L'iatan.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1043, 1896 (French form of Jatan above). Tetans.—Pike, Exped., 109, 1810 (misprint). Yetans.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 545, 1878 (misprint).

Iewatse (I-e-wat-se', 'mouth men'). The Crow name for some unidentified tribe.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 402, 1862.

Ift. A Karok village on Klamath r., Cal., inhabited in 1860.

If-terram.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 23, 1860.

Igagik. An Aglemiut Eskimo settlement at the mouth of Ugaguk r., Alaska; pop. 120 in 1880, 60 in 1890, 203 in 1900.

Igagik.—Petroff, 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884.

Ugaguk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Igak. A former Kaniagmiut Eskimo village on Afognak id., Alaska, E. of Afognak, whither it seems to have been moved.

Igagmiut.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 1855. Kaljukischwigmjut.—Ibid.

Igamansabe (Igama'sabz, 'black paint', Kansa name for Big Blue r., Kans.). One of the villages occupied by the Kansa, probably before 1820.—Dorsey, MS. Kansas vocab., B. A. E., 1882.

Igdlorpait. A Danish post and Eskimo village in s. w. Greenland, lat. 60° 28'.

Igdlopait.—Koldewey, German Arct. Exped., 182, 1870. Igdlorpait.—Meddelelser om Grönland, xvi, map, 1896.

Igdluarsuk. A village of the southern group of East Greenland Eskimo, on the coast between lat. 63° and 64°.—Nansen, First Crossing, 383, 1890.

Igiak. A Magemiut Eskimo village inland from Scammon bay, Alaska; pop. 10 in 1880.

Igiagagamiut.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 1884. Igiagagamiut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Igragamiut.—Nelson cited by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 212, 1901.

Igiakchak. A village of the Kuskwogmiut Eskimo in the Kuskokwim district, Alaska; pop. 81 in 1890.

Igiakchaghamiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 6, 1893. Igiakchak.—Ibid.

Igivachok. A Nushagagmiut Eskimo village in the Nushagak district, Alaska; pop. 31 in 1890.

Igivachochamiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Iglakatekhila ('refuses to move camp'). A division of the Oglala Teton Sioux.

Iglaka tehila.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 220, 1897. Iglaka-tehila.—Ibid.

Iglu. A snow house of the Eskimo: from igdlu, its name in the E. Eskimo dialects. See Habitations. (A. F. C.)

Igludahoming. An Ita Eskimo settlement on Smith sd., Greenland.

Igloodahominy.—Mrs Peary, My Arct. Jour., 81, 1893. Igludahoming.—Heilprin, Peary Relief Exped., 133, 1893.

Igluduasuin (Igludu'shuin, 'place of houses'). An Ita Eskimo village in N. Greenland, lat. 77° 50'.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., no. 9, map, 1902.

Iglulik. A winter settlement of the Aivilirmiut Eskimo at the head of Lyon inlet, Hudson bay.

Iglulik.—Rink in Jour. Anthropol. Inst., xv, 240, 1886. Igdumiut.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888 (the inhabitants). Iglolik.—Perry, Sec. Voy., 404, 1824. Iglolip.—Gilder, Schwatka's Search, 253, 1881.

Iglulik. A town of the Iglulirmiut Eskimo, on an island of the same name, near the E. end of Fury and Hecla straits.—Boas in Zeitschr. Ges. f. Erdk., 226, 1883.

Iglulirmiut ('people of the place with houses'). A tribe of central Eskimo living on both sides of Fury and Hecla straits.

They kill walrus in winter on Iglulik and other islands, harpoon seal in the fjords in early spring, and throughout the summer hunt deer in Baffin land or Melville peninsula. Their settlements are Akuli, Arlagnuk, Iglulik, Kangertluk, Krimerksumalek, Pilig, and Uglirn.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 444, 1888.

Iglulingmiut.—Boas in Trans. Anthropol. Soc. Wash., 111, 96, 1885.

Ignok. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on the right bank of the lower Yukon, Alaska; pop. 175 in 1880.

Ignokhatskomute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 57, 1884. Ingekasagmi.—Raymond (1869), quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Ignokhatskamut. A village on lower Yukon r., adjacent to the Bering coast Eskimo, the inhabitants of which are probably of Athapascan and Eskimo mixture.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. ii, 1900.

Igpirto. A fall settlement of Talirpingmiut Eskimo of the Okomiut tribe at the head of Nettilling fjord, Cumberland sd.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Igualali (Ig-wa'-la-li, 'a hole'). A small rancheria of the Tarahumare, not far from Norogachic, Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, inf'n, 1894.

Iguanes. A tribe of whom Father Kino heard, in 1699, while near the mouth of the Rio Gila in s. w. Arizona. As they are mentioned in connection with the Alchedoma and Yuma, they were probably a Yuman tribe.

Iguanas.—Venegas, Hist. Cal., i, 57, 1759. Iguanes.—Kino (1699) quoted by Coues, Gacetas Diari, 544, 1900. Yuanes.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 59, 1864.

Iguik. An Unaligmiut Eskimo village on Norton sd., Alaska; pop. 8 in 1880, 51 in 1890.

Agowik.—11th Census, Alaska, 165, 1893. Egowik.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, map, 1877. Igaui.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Igaui.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 59, 1884. Iguik.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 165, 1893.

Igushik. A Nushagagmiut Eskimo village on Igushik r., Alaska; pop. 74 in 1880.

Igushek.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884. Igushik.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1901.

Ihaisdaye (Iha-isdaye, 'mouth-greasers'). A band of the Yankton Sioux.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 217, 1897.

Ihamba (I'ha-mba). An ancient pueblo of the Tewa on the s. side of Pojoaque r., between Pojoaque and San Ildefonso pueblos, N. New Mex.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 85, 1892.

Ihanktonwan ('Yankton'). A band of the Brulé Teton Sioux, so called because descended from Yankton women.

Ihanktoṡwān.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 218, 1897. Ihanktoṡwān.—Ibid.

Ihasha ('red lips'). A band of the Hunkpatina or Lower Yanktonai Sioux. Iha-ca.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 218, 1897. Iha-sa.—Ibid.

Ihonatiria. A former Huron village in Simcoe co., Ontario, built about 1634 and depopulated by pestilence in 1636. The Jesuits established there the mission of Immaculate Conception.

Ihonatiria.—Jes. Rel. for 1635, 30, 1858. Ihonatiria.—Jes. Rel. for 1637, 153, 1858. Immaculate Conception.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 173, 1855.

Ijelirtung. The northernmost summer settlement of the Akudnirmut Eskimo of Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 441, 1888.

Ijirang. A fabulous people of central Eskimo mythology.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 640, 1888.

Ika. A Cochini tribe of Lower California, said by Father Baegert to have lived about 40 m. inland from Magdalena bay in the 18th century.

Ica.—Mühlenpfordt, Mexico, II, 2, 443, 1844. Ikas.—Baegert, Nachrichten, 96, 1773.

Ikak. An Aglemiut Eskimo village near Naknek lake, Alaska; pop. 162 in 1880.

Ik-khagmute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884. Savonoski.—Spurr and Post (1898) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Ukak.—Dall, Alaska, map, 1870.

Ikalu. A winter village of the Ita Eskimo on Whale sd., N. Greenland.

Idkalloo.—Markham in Trans. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., 129, 1866. Iká'rio.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., no. 9, map, 1902.

Ikanachaka (ikana 'ground', atchaka 'reserved', 'set apart', 'beloved', 'sacred'). A former Upper Creek town, located by Meek (Romantic Passages in S. W. Hist., 278, 1857) on the s. side of Alabama r., between Pintala and Big Swamp cr., in Lowndes co., Ala. It was built on "holy ground" and hence was thought to be exempt from hostile inroads. Weatherford and the "prophet" Hillis Hadjo resided there, and the Creek forces were defeated there Dec. 23, 1813, at which date it contained 200 houses and included some Shawnee.

(H. W. H.)

Eekanachacu.—Claybourne (1814) in Boudinot, Star in the West, 254, 1816. Eekanakaka.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. IV, 58, 1848. Eoonachaca.—Pickett, Hist. Ala., II, 323, 1851. E-cun-cha-ta.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ala., map, 1899. Holy Ground.—Claybourne (1814) in Boudinot, op. cit. Ikanatch-aka.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 132, 1884.

Ikanhatki ('white ground'). A former Upper Creek town on the right bank of lower Tallapoosa r., Montgomery co., Ala., immediately below Kulumi town. Swan, who passed there in 1791, says it had been settled by Shawnee, who had 4 villages in the vicinity, and they are called by him Shawnee refugees, but Bartram (1775) states that they spoke Muscogee. Under the name Ekundutske the village was said to contain 47 houses in 1832.

(A. S. G.)

Cunhutke.—Bartram, Trav., 461, 1791. Eoonautekky.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 425, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 255, 1836. Eoonautsky.—Ibid. E-cun-but-ke.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 34, 1848. Eoonhuttee.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 380, 1854. E kun duts ke.—Census of 1832, ibid., 578. Ekunhutke.—Pickett, Hist. Ala., II, 267, 1851 (inhabited by Shawanese). Ikan-hátki.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 132, 1884. Kenhulka.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, op. cit., v. 262, 1855. White Ground.—Finnelson (1792) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 289, 1832.

Ikaruck. Mentioned as a Shasta band of Shasta valley, N. Cal., in 1851, but it is really a man's personal name. (R. B. D.) I-ka-nuck.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 171, 1853. Ika-ruck.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 171, 1853.

Ikatchiocata. A former Choctaw town between the headwaters of Chicawhay and Tombigbee rs., Miss.

Ikachioe ta.—Lattre, map U. S., 1784. Ikechipouta.—Philippeaux, map, 1781.

Ikatek. An Angmagssalingmiut Eskimo village on Sermilik fjord, E. Greenland; pop. 58 in 1884.—Meddelelser om Grönland, x, map, 1888.

Ikatikunahita (iká'ti 'swamp', kínahí'ta 'long'; Long Swamp town). A Cherokee settlement, about the period of the removal in 1839, situated on Long Swamp cr., about the boundary of Forsyth and Cherokee cos., N. W. Ga. (J. M.) Long Swamp Village.—Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1887.

Ikatiek. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on Yukon r., Alaska, 30 m. below Anvik; pop. 9 in 1880.

Ikaklagmüt.—Raymond in Sen. Ex. Doc. 12, 42d Cong., 1st sess., 25, 1871. Ikategomut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Ikategomut.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Ikoklag'müt.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 17, 1877.

Ikerasak. A northern settlement of the Angmagssalingmiut Eskimo of E. Greenland, lat. 66°.—Meddelelser om Grönland, xxvii, 22, 1902.

Ikherkhamut (I-qér-qa-müt', 'end of river people'; Kaniagmiut name). A division of the Ahtena near the mouth of Copper r., Alaska.—Hoffman, MS., B. A. E., 1882.

Ikmun (referring to an animal of the cat kind). A band of the Yankton Sioux.

Ikmun.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 217, 1897. Ikmun.—Ibid.

Iknetuk. A Kaviagmiut Eskimo village on Golofnin bay, Alaska; pop. 100 in 1880.

Ignituk.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Iknetuk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1901. Knittag'emüt.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 16, 1877.

Ikogmiut. A tribe of Alaskan Eskimo inhabiting both banks of the Yukon as far as Makak. They have hairy bodies and strong beards and exhibit a marked variation in physique, customs, and dialect from the Eskimo N. and E. of Norton sd., being more nearly allied to the other fishing tribes s. of them. Dall estimated their number at 1,000 in 1870, including the Chnagmiut. In 1890 there were 172

Ikogmiut proper. Holmberg divided the natives of the delta into the Kwipagmiut and the Kwikluagmiut, living respectively on the Kwipak and Kwikluak passes. The villages are Asko, Bazhi, Ignok, Ikatlek, Ikogmiut, Ingahame, Ingrakak, Katagkak, Kenunimik, Kikhkak, Koko, Koserefski, Kuyikanuik-pul, Kvikak, Makak, Nukluak, Nunaikak, Nunaktak, Paimute, Pogoreshapka, and Uglovaiia.

Ekjgmüt.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., 1, 17, 1877. Ekgmüt.—Dall, Alaska, 407, 1870. Hekjinx-tana.—Doroschin in Radloff, Wörterbuch d. Kinai-Spr., 29, 1874 (Kinai name). Ikogmjut.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 142, 1855. Ikogmutes.—Schwatka, Milit. Recon., Explor. in Alaska, 353, 1900. Kahvichpaks.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. in Alaska, 29, 1874. Koikhpagamute.—Petroff in Am. Nat., xvi, 570, 1882 (Eskimo: 'people of the Kwipak, the big river'). Kuwichpackmüten.—Wrangell, Ethnog. Nachr., 122, 1839. Kwikhpagmüte.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884. Kwikhluagmüten.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 5, 1855. Kwiphacker.—Wrangell, Ethnog. Nachr., 122, 1839. Kwiphagmüten.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 5, 1855. Kwiphak.—Whymper, Trav. in Alaska, map, 1868. Kwikh-pag-müt.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., 1, 17, 1877.

Ikogmiut. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on the lower Yukon, Alaska, where the Russians established a mission about 1843. Pop. 148 in 1880, 140 in 1890, 166 in 1900.

Icogmüte.—Bruce, Alaska, map, 1885. Ikoghmiute.—Zagoskine in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850. Ikogmut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. ii, 1899. Ikogmüte.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, map, 1884. Ikuagmjut.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 1855.

Ikolga. A former Aleut village on Unalaska, Aleutian ids., Alaska.—Coxe, Russian Discov., 164, 1787.

Iktigalik. A Kaiyuhkhotana village on Unalaklik r., Alaska, having 10 houses in 1866.

Igtigalik.—Whymper in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., 225, 1868. Iktigalik.—Dall, Alaska, 26, 1870. New Ulukuk.—Whymper, Trav. in Alaska, 175, 1869. Nove Ulukuk.—Ibid. (Russian name).

Ikuak. A Chnagmiut village on the lower Yukon, Alaska, near the head of the delta; pop. 65 in 1890.

Iko-agmiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 165, 1893. Iku-agmiut.—Tikhmenief (1861) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1901. Ikuak.—Baker, ibid. Yukagmut.—Raymond (1869), quoted by Baker, ibid.

Ikwopsum. A Squawmish village community on the left bank of Squawmisht r., Brit. Col.

Ekwwhatsum.—Survey map, U. S. Hydrog. Office. Ikwopsum.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. S. S., 475, 1900. Yik'oa'psan.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Ilamatech. A former Tepehuane pueblo in Durango, Mexico, and the seat of a mission.

S. Antonio Ilamatech.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 319, 1864.

Ildjunai-hadai (Íldjuna-i xá'da-i, 'valuable-house people'). A subdivision of the Yadas, a family of the Eagle clan of the Ha da in w. British Columbia. The name is derived from that of a house.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 276, 1905.

Ile Percée. A French mission, probably among the Micmac, on the Gulf of St Lawrence in the 17th century.—Shea, Miss. Val., 85, 1852.

Ilex cassine. See Black drink.

Iliamna. A Kaniagmiut Eskimo village on the s. shore of Iliamna lake, Alaska; pop. 49 in 1880, 76 in 1890.

Iliamna.—11th Census, Alaska, 95, 1893. Ilyamna.—Petroff, 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884.

Ilis ('spread-legs beach'). A Nimkish Kwakiutl village on Cormorant id., Alert bay, Brit. Col., opposite Vancouver id. Some Kwakiutl proper come here during the salmon season.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 227, 1887.

I-lis.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 65, 1887.

Iisees. Mentioned by Ker (Travels, 98, 1816) as the native name of a tribe, numbering about 2,000, which he says he met on upper Red r. of Louisiana, apparently in the N. E. corner of Texas. Their chief village was said to be Wascoo. Both the tribe and the village are seemingly imaginary.

Iliulink (Aleut: 'harmony'). A town on Unalaska id., Alaska, the headquarters of the commercial interests of the Aleutians (Schwatka, Mil. Recon., 115, 1885). Pop. 196 in 1831, 406 in 1880, 317 in 1890.

Gavanskoe.—Veniaminoff, Zapiski, II, 202, 1840 (Russian: 'harbor'). Gavanskoi.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. Alaska, 1875. Gawanskoie.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 1855. Ilijjuljuk.—Ibid. Illcoo-look.—Elliott, Our Arct. Prov., map, 1886. Oona-laska.—Schwatka, Mil. Recon., 115, 1885. Unalaska.—11th Census, Alaska, 88, 1893.

Iliutak. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on Kuskokwim bay, Alaska; pop. 40 in 1880.

Iliutagamute.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 53, 1884.

Ilkatsho ('the big fattening'). A village of the Ntshaautin on the lake at the head of Blackwater r., Brit. Col. The population is a mixed one of Takulli and Bellacoola descent.

Il'kato.—Morice in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., 109, 1892. T'ka-tco.—Morice, Notes on W. Dénés, 25, 1893. Ulchchako.—Can. Ind. Aff., 285, 1902.

Illinois (Iliniwek, from ilini 'man', iw 'is', ek plural termination, changed by the French to ois). A confederacy of Algonquian tribes, formerly occupying s. Wisconsin, n. Illinois, and sections of Iowa and Missouri, comprising the Cahokia, Kaskaskia, Michigamea, Moingwena, Peoria, and Tamaroa.

The Jesuit Relation for 1660 represents them as living s. w. of Green bay, Wis., in 60 villages, and gives an extravagant estimate of the population, 20,000 men, or 70,000 souls. The statement in the Jesuit Relations that they came from the border of a great sea in the far W. arose, no doubt (as Tailhan suggests), from a misunderstanding of the term "great water," given by the Indians, which in fact referred to the Mississippi. Their exact location when first heard of by the whites can not be determined with certainty, as the tribes and bands were more or less scattered over s. Wisconsin, N. Illinois, and along the w. bank of the Mississippi as far s. as Des Moines r., Iowa. The whites first came in actual contact with them (unless it be true that Nicollet visited them) at La Pointe (Shaugawaumikong), where Allouez met a party in 1667, which was visiting that point for purposes of trade. In 1670 the same priest found a number of them at the Mascoutin village on upper Fox r., some 9 m. from where Portage City now stands, but this band then contemplated joining their brethren on the Mississippi. The conflicting statements regarding the number of their villages at this period and the indefiniteness as to localities render it difficult to reach a satisfactory conclusion on these points. It appears that some villages were situated on the w. side of the Mississippi, in what is now Iowa, yet the major portion of the tribes belonging to the confederacy resided at points in n. Illinois, chiefly on Illinois r. When Marquette journeyed down the Mississippi in 1673 he found the Peoria and Moingwena on the w. side, about the mouth of Des Moines r. On his return, 2 months later, he found them on Illinois r., near the present city of Peoria. Thence he passed n. to the village of Kaskaskia, then on upper Illinois r., within the present LaSalle co. At this time the village consisted of 74 cabins and was occupied by one tribe only. Hennepin estimated them, about 1680, at 400 houses and 1,800 warriors, or about 6,500 souls. A few years later (1690-94) missionaries reported it to consist of 350 cabins, occupied by 8 tribes or bands. Father Sébastien Rasles, who visited the village in 1692, placed the number of cabins at 300, each of 4 "fires," with 2 families to a fire, indicating a population of about 9,000—perhaps an excessive estimate. The evidence, however, indicates that a large part of the confederacy was gathered at this point for awhile. The Kaskaskia at this time were in somewhat intimate relation with the Peoria, since Gravier, who returned to their village in 1700, says he found them preparing to start s., and believed that if he could have arrived sooner "the Kaskaskians would not thus have separated from the Peouaroua [Peoria] and other Illinois." By his persuasion they were induced to stop in s. Illinois at the point to which their name was given. The Cahokia and Tamaroa were at this time living at their historic seats on the Mississippi in s. Illinois. The Illinois were almost constantly harassed by the Sioux, Foxes, and other northern tribes; it was probably on this account that they concentrated, about the time of LaSalle's visit, on Illinois r. About the same time the Iroquois waged war against them, which lasted several years, and greatly reduced their numbers, while liquor obtained from the French tended still further to weaken them. About the year 1750 they were still estimated at from 1,500 to 2,000 souls. The murder of the celebrated chief Pontiac, by a Kaskaskia Indian, about 1769, provoked the vengeance of the Lake tribes on the Illinois, and a war of extermination was begun which, in a few years, reduced them to a mere handful, who took refuge with the French settlers at Kaskaskia, while the Sauk, Foxes, Kickapoo, and Potawatomi took possession of their country. In 1778 the Kaskaskia still numbered 210, living in a village 3 m. n. of Kaskaskia, while the Peoria and Michigamea together numbered 170 on the Mississippi, a few miles farther up. Both bands had become demoralized and generally worthless through the use of liquor. In 1800 there were only about 150 left. In 1833 the survivors, represented by the Kaskaskia and Peoria, sold their lands in Illinois and removed w. of the Mississippi, and are now in the n. e. corner of Oklahoma, consolidated with the Wea and Piankashaw. In 1885 the consolidated Peoria, Kaskaskia, Wea, and Piankashaw numbered but 149, and even these are much mixed with white blood. In 1905 their number was 195.

Nothing definite is known of their tribal divisions or clans. In 1736, according to Chauvignerie (N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 1056-1855), the totem of the Kaskaskia was a feather of an arrow, notched, or two arrows fixed like a St Andrew's cross; while the Illinois as a whole had the crane, bear, white hind, fork, and tortoise totems.

In addition to the principal tribes or divisions above mentioned, the following are given by early writers as seemingly belonging to the Illinois: Albivi, Amonokoa, Chepoussa, Chinko, Coiracoentanon, Espeminkia, and Tapouara. In general their villages bore the names of the tribes occupying them, and were constantly varying in number and shifting in location.

The Illinois are described by early writers as tall and robust, with pleasant visages. The descriptions of their character given by the early missionaries differ widely, but altogether they appear to have been timid, easily driven from their homes by their enemies, fickle, and treacherous. They were counted excellent archers, and, besides the bow, used in war a kind of lance and a wooden club. Polygamy was common among them, a man sometimes taking several sisters as wives. Unfaithfulness of a wife was punished, as among the Miami, the Sioux, the Apache, and other tribes, by cutting off the nose of the offending woman, and as the men were very jealous, this punishment was often inflicted on mere suspicion.

It was not the custom of the Illinois, at the time the whites first became acquainted with them, to bury their dead. The body was wrapped in skins and attached by the feet and head to trees. There is reason, however, to believe, from discoveries that have been made in mounds and ancient graves, which appear to be attributable to some of the Illinois tribes, that the skeletons, after the flesh had rotted away, were buried, often in rude stone sepulchers. Prisoners of war were usually sold to other tribes.

According to Hennepin, the cabins of the more northerly tribes were made like long arbors and covered with double mats of flat flags or rushes, so well sewed that they were never penetrated by wind, snow, or rain. To each cabin were 4 or 5 fires, and to each fire 2 families, indicating that each dwelling housed some 8 or 10 families. Their towns were not inclosed.

The villages of the confederacy noted in history are Cahokia (mission), Immaculate Conception (mission), Kaskaskia, Matchinkoa, Moingwena, Peoria, and Pimitoui.

(J. M. C. T.)

Abimouéc.—Doc. of 1660 in Margry, Déc., I, 54, 1875 (b=l). Abimisec.—Jes. Rel. 1660, 12, 1858 (b=l). Alimouek.—Ibid., 1667, 21. Alimouk.—Ibid., III, index, 1858. Alinouek.—Ibid., 1658, 21. Alinisek.—Ibid., 1660, 12 (correction in errata). Alinoueeks.—Coxe, Carolina, 19, 1741. Allinoueks.—Ibid., 49. Chicktaghicks.—Colden (1727), Five Nations, 30, 1747 (Iroquois name). Chictaghicks.—Smith in Williams, Vermont, I, 501, 1809. Chictaghicks.—Colden, op. cit., 31. Chictachiks.—Homann, map, 1756. Eriniouai.—Jes. Rel. 1640, 35, 1838. Eriniwek.—Ibid., III, index, 1858. Geghdageghroano.—Post (1758) in Prond, Pa., II, app., 113, 1798. Geghtighegroones.—Canajoharie conf. (1759) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 384, 1855. Hilini.—Brinton, Lenape Leg., 213, 1885. Hiliniiki.—Rafinesque, Am. Nations, I, 139, 1836 (Delaware name). Ilimouek.—Jes. Rel. 1670, 101, 1858. Iliné.—Hervas (1785) in Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 347, 1816 (Italian form). Ilinese.—La Fontan, Nouv. Voy., I, 217, 1703. Ilinese.—Walch, map, 1805 (German form). Ilinoiuek.—Jes. Rel. 1667, 18, 18 8. Ilinois.—Ibid., 1670, 86. Ilinoüets.—Ibid., 1670, 92. Ilinoüetz.—Ibid., 101. Ilinois.—Proud, Pa., II, 296, 1798. Illeinois.—Morse, North Am., map, 1776. Illeonecks.—Ibid., 255. Illicouek.—Coxe, Carolina, 17, 1741. Ilinoüec.—Jes. Rel. 1667, 21, 1858. Ilinese.—Hennepin, Cont. of New Discov., 88, 1698. Illinese.—Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 341, 1816 (German form). Il-li-ni.—Hough in Indiana Geol. Rep., map, 1883. Illiniens.—Hennepin, op. cit. 45b. Illiniwek.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 348, 1855. Illinoias.—Niles (1761) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., V, 541, 1861. Illinois.—Prise de Possession (1671) in Margry, Déc., I, 96, 1875. Illinoix.—Brackenridge, La., 132, 1815. Illinooneks.—Morse, North Am., 255, 1798. Illinooneks.—Doc. of 1719 in N. C. Rec., II, 351, 1886. Ilinooueks.—Coxe, Carolina, 49, 1741. Illose.—Schermerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., II, 3, 1814. Illois.—Campbell (1761), ibid., 4th s., IX, 423, 1871. Iluni.—Allouez (1665) quoted by Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 71, 1850. Irinions.—Jes. Rel. 1642, 97, 1858. Isle aux Noix.—Lapham, Ind's of Wis., 4, 1870 ('Walnut island': a form used by some author, who probably mistook Illinois for a corrupted French word). Isliinois.—La Salle (1680) in Margry, Déc., II, 33, 1877. Kichtages.—Maryland treaty (1682) in N. Y. Doc.

Col. Hist., III, 325, 1853. Kicktages.—Albany conf. (1726), ibid., V, 791, 1855. Kighetawhigh Roanu.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 28, 1741 (Iroquois name). Kightages.—Livingston (1720) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., V, 567, 1855. Lazars.—Croghan (1759) in Rupp, West. Pa., 146, 1846. Lezar.—Croghan quoted by Jefferson, Notes, 145, 1825 (probably the Illinois). Linioouk.—Jes. Rel. 1656, 39, 1858. Linneways.—Brice, Ft. Wayne, 121, 1868. Linways.—Croghan, op. cit. Minneways.—Brice, Ft. Wayne, 121, 1868. Ondataouatouat.—Potter MS. cited in Charlevoix, New France, II, 270, note, 1866 (first applied by the Wyandot to the Ottawa, afterward to the Illinois). Willinis.—Proud, Pa., II, 296, 1798. Witishaytano.—Gatschet, Wyandot MS., B. A. E., 1881 (from Ushaytano, 'Illinois r.', Huron name for the Peoria, Kaskaskia, Wea, and Piankashaw).

Illumination. The employment of artificial light among the Indians was limited by their simple habits and needs to the camp-fire and the torch, in which respect they are found in the same culture grade as the Malay, the Negro, and the majority of uncivilized peoples. The camp-fire, built for the purpose of cooking food or furnishing heat, supplied most of the needed light. On special occasions large bonfires were made when ceremonies were held and nocturnal illumination was required. As a makeshift for the torch, a brand was taken from the camp-fire. When a continuous light was desired the fire was fed with slivers of wood set up in a circle and fed from one end where a gap was left in the circle, as among the Cherokee; or when a temporary light was wanted among the Indians of British Columbia a little oil was thrown on the coals. The torches were of pine knots, rolls of bark, cane, or other inflammable material, but bundles of resinous wood, or masses of resin were almost never made, the form of the Indian torch being of the most primitive character. They were used by night for hunting and fishing; for instance, deer were "weequashed," or "jacked," by means of torches, and fish were speared and birds captured by light from pine knots, especially among the eastern Indians. Lamps, however, have been possessed from time immemorial by the Eskimo, and they are the only aborigines of the hemisphere who had such utensils. In s. Alaska the lamp has a narrow wick-edge and is in the shape of a flat-iron; along the tundra n. of St Michael it is a saucer of clay or stone; northward to Point Barrow it is gibbous, with wide wick-edge and made of soapstone. The length of the wick-edge of the Eskimo lamp has been observed to vary with the latitude, that is, the higher the latitude the longer the night, hence the greater need for light, which is met by lengthening the margin of the lamp on which the moss wick is placed, so that while in s.

ESKIMO LAMP, 24 IN. LONG. (NELSON)

Alaska the wick edge is 2 or 3 in. long, in Smith sd. it is 36 in. in length, and between these geographical extremes there is an increase in the size of the lamp from lower to higher latitudes. In at least two localities in the United States the bodies of fish were burned for light—the candle-fish of the N. W. coast and a fresh-water fish of Penobscot r. in Maine.

Torches and fires were used for signaling at night; the Apache set fire to the resinous spines of the saguaro, or giant cactus, for this purpose. The picturesque and remarkable Fire-dance of the Navaho described by Matthews is a good example of the use of illumination in ceremonies. Among many tribes fire forms an essential part of a ceremony; in some cases, where Indians have been induced to rehearse a night ceremony by day, they do not omit the fire, though artificial light is not required. A law of the Iroquois League required that a messenger approaching a camp-fire or village at night should carry a torch in order to show the absence of hostile intent. See Fire-making.

Consult Hough (1) Development of Illumination, Smithsonian. Rep. 1901, 1902, (2) The Range of the Eskimo Lamp, Am. Anthropol., Apr. 1898, (3) The Lamp of the Eskimo, Rep. Nat. Mus. 1896, 1898; Matthews, Mountain Chant, 5th Rep. B. A. E., 1887. (W. H.)

Ilmawi (own name; from ilma, "river"). A tribe of the Achomawi division of the Shastan family, formerly living on the s. side of Pit r., opposite Ft Crook, Shasta co., Cal.

Ilmawees.—Powers in Overland Mo., XII, 412, 1874. Il-má'-wi.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 267, 1877.

Irak (Irak). A former village of the Ntshaautin sept of the Takulli of British Columbia.—Morice in Trans. Can. Inst., IV, 25, 1893.

Ilsethylthawaiame. A former village of the Mishikhwutmetunne on Coquille r., Oreg.

Il'-sèpl ça-wai'-à-mé.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folklore, III, 232, 1890.

Iluilek. An Eskimo village, now deserted, on the E. coast of Greenland, lat. 60° 20'.

Iluilek.—Das Ausland, 162, 1886. Iluilek.—Meddelelser om Grönland, XXV, 23, 1902.

Imagnee. A former Aleut village on Summer bay, Unalaska, E. Aleutian ids.; pop. 32 in 1830, 34 in 1884.

Imagnak.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 34, 1884.

Imagnee.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 215, 1902.

Imagninskoe.—Veniaminoff, Zapiski, II, 202, 1840.

Sinagnia.—Sarichef (1790) quoted by Baker, op. cit.

Imaha. A Quapaw village mentioned by La Metairie in 1682 and by Iberville in 1699, and visited by La Harpe in 1719. It was situated on a s. w. branch of Arkansas r. In the wars and contentions of the 18th and 19th centuries some of the Quapaw tribe fled from their more northerly villages and took refuge among the Caddo, finally becoming a recognized division of the confederacy. These were called Imaha, but whether the people composing this division were from the village Imaha, mentioned by the early French travelers, is not absolutely known. The people of the Imaha division of the Caddo confederacy for some time retained their own language, which was Siouan. See Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1092, 1896. (A. C. F.)

Imaham.—La Harpe (1719) in French, Hist. Coll. La., pt III, 73, 1851. Imahans.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Imahao.—Iberville (1699) in Margry, Déc., IV, 179, 1880.

Imaklimiut. An Eskimo tribe occupying Big Diomedé id., Bering strait. See Okioarmiut.

Achjuch-Aliat.—Dall in Smithsonian. Cont., XXII, 2, 1880. Imach-leet.—Jackson, Reindeer in Alaska, map, 145, 1894. Imäh-kli-müt.—Dall in Proc. A. A. A. S., XXXIV, 377, 1886. Imakleet.—Wells and Kelly, Eskimo-English and Eng.-Esk. Vocabs., chart, 1890. Imaklitmut.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. in Am., I, 73, 1847. Imalugmiut.—Woolfe in 11th Census, Alaska, 130, 1893 (given to inhabitants of both islands; see Isalik). Yikirga'ult.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 21, 1904 (Chukchi name for inhabitants of Diomedé ids.).

Imarsivik. An Eskimo village of 21 people on the E. coast of Greenland.—Nansen, Eskimo Life, 124, 1894.

Imekpung (Imé'kpññ). An Utkiavimut Eskimo camp near Pt Barrow, Alaska.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 274, 1892.

Imiak. A Togiagmiut village at the outlet of Aleknagik lake, Alaska.—Tebenkof (1849) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Imiche. A Californian tribe cited several times and mentioned once as on Kaweah r., Cal., which location, if correct, would make it part of the Mariposan stock. The Wimalchi of Kings r. may have been meant.

Eemithes.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 363, 1874. Y-Mitches.—Henley in Ind. Aff. Rep., 511, 1854 (at Four rivers, near Tulare r.). Ymitches.—Bancroft, op. cit., I, 456 (misquoted from Henley).

Imigen ("fresh water"). One of the two winter villages of the Kingumiut, a branch of the Okomiut Eskimo, on an island at the head of Cumberland sd.; pop. 17 in 1883.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Imik. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Immaculate Conception. A mission established by Marquette in 1674 among the Kaskaskia, near Rockford, Ill.

Immaculate Conception.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 406, 1855. Immaculée Conception de Notre Dame aux Illinois.—Gravier(?) (1694) quoted by Shea, ibid., 419.

Immahal. A former Chumashan village in Ventura co., Cal., "not far from José Carrillo's rancho" in 1856.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 4, 1860.

Imnangana. The southernmost winter settlement of the Ita Eskimo, situated at C. York, N. Greenland.

Ekdalü'hsuin.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., no. 9, map, 1902 (= 'salmon fishery'). Ignanine.—Heilprin, Peary Relief Exped., 102, 1893. Imangen.—Markham in Trans. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., 127, 1866. Imnagen.—Ibid., 129. Imnangana.—Kroeber in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XII, 269, 1899. Imanak.—Hayes, Arct. Boat Journ., 182, 1860.

Imnarkuan ('where we make maple sugar'). A Passamaquoddy village formerly on the site of Pembroke, Washington co., Me.—Vetromile, Abnakis, 56, 1866.

Imoktegokshuk. A Kaviagmiut Eskimo village at C. Nome, Alaska; pop. 30 in 1880.

Imoktagokshuk.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 11, 1884. Imoktegokshuk.—Ibid., map. Imoktegokshuk.—Baker, Geog. Diet. Alaska, 1902.

Imongalasha (Imoklasha, 'their people are there'). A former Choctaw settlement, sometimes called West Imongalasha to distinguish it from Imongalasha Skatane, and also popularly known as Mokalusha. It was situated on the headwaters of Talashah cr., Neshoba co., Miss., and was the most important Choctaw town in that region, the name appearing often in early government records. Tecumseh visited it in 1811 and held a council there. In 1824 it was almost abandoned owing to the ravages of smallpox. The houses of the settlement, with the small fields intervening, covered an area of 3 m. N. and S., and $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. E. and W. It consisted of a number of hamlets, the names of which, from S. to N., were Yaneka Chukkilissa, Onaheli, Nanihaba, and Bihikonlo.—Halbert in Miss. Hist. Soc. Publ., VI, 431, 1902. Imoklasha.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 138, 1884.

Imongalasha Skatane (Imoklasha Iskitini, 'Little Imongalasha'). A former Choctaw town on the E. prong of Yazoo cr., now known as Flat cr., a N. affluent of Petickfa cr., Kemper co., Miss.—Halbert in Miss. Hist. Soc. Pub., V, 423, 1902. East Moka-Lassa.—Romans, Florida, 310, 1775. Imongalasha Skatani.—West Fla. map., ca. 1775.

Implements, Tools, Utensils. While a tool is that with which something is made, an implement that with which work is done, and a utensil that in or on which something is prepared or used up, they can not always be distinguished among primitive peoples, who utilize one thing for many purposes. Many forms are discussed under Arts and Industries and in articles devoted to special activities. It must be borne in mind that all such devices were helpers of the skilful hand and a vast deal of excellent work was done with it alone.

The Indians of North America were in the stone age and therefore every device with which the arts of life were carried on, whether implement, tool, or utensil, was in harmony with this grade of culture. The archeologist finds of such objects in ancient remains and sites either their substantial portions, or the perishable parts that have been accidentally preserved, or impressions of them left on pottery. By comparing these relics with implements, tools, and utensils found in actual use among the Indians one is able to partially reconstruct ancient industry and read far backward into history. The moment that the savages saw implements, tools, and utensils of metal in the hands of Europeans, they recognized the superiority of these and adopted them. It is interesting to note the modifications that were made in hafting and using, in order to adapt the new devices to old habits and customs. As of old, manual parts were still carved, painted, and hung with symbols, without which they were thought to be ineffectual.

The instruments of handicraft were of two classes—general, for common purposes, and special, for particular industries. The general implements, tools, and utensils may be described in detail (Holmes in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1901, 501, 1903):

Hammers.—These were made of stone or other hard substance, with or without handles. There were sledges, mauls, and pile-drivers for two or more men.

Knives.—These were made commonly of chipped or ground stone. Teeth, bone, shell, and wood were also used for the purpose (McGuire in Am. Anthropol., IV, 1891).

Saws.—These were of serrated stones, shells, or other materials, and were worked by rubbing with the edge, often with the aid of sand with or without water.

Borers.—Many natural objects were used for making holes in hard and soft objects, either by pressure, striking, vibrating, or revolving. They were held directly in the hand or were hafted; were grasped by one hand or by both hands; held between the palms or were worked by means of strap, bow, or pump (McGuire in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1894, 623, 1896). (See Drills and Drilling.)

Axes.—The stone ax, rudely flaked or highly polished, plain or grooved, ranging in weight from a few ounces to many pounds in the ceremonial ax, was universal. It was held in the hand or attached in various ways to a handle by means of rawhide, but was never furnished with an eye for a helve. Other substances were occasionally used, as shell, iron ore, and copper, but the stone ax was the main reliance. The blade could be easily turned at right angles, and then the implement became an adz. (See Adzes, Axes, Celts.)

Scrapers.—The scraper was also a tool of wide dispersion. In shape it resembled a chisel blade with a beveled edge. The rudest were sharp spalls of siliceous stone, held in the hand with or without padding; others were of smooth materials set into handles or grips that snugly fitted the workwoman's hand. One variety was made for scraping hides, another for scraping wood.

Nippers.—These include all devices for holding tightly an object or holding parts together while being worked. Hinged varieties were not known, but the Eskimo, especially, had several inventions to do the work of clamps, pincers, tweezers, or the vise with the aid of wedges.

The simple mechanical powers, the wedge, the lever, and the inclined plane, were universally understood. The screw was employed but sparingly, if at all. The N. W. coast tribes used rollers, skids, and parbuckles to move great house beams into place, and the Alaskan Eskimo, according to Elliott, landed the walrus by means of a sliding tackle looped over pegs driven into cracks in the rocks and run through slits in the hide. The wheel and axle were entirely unknown, save in their most primitive form, the spindle. Power for doing work with the devices just described was derived from the muscle of the worker. The wind was utilized here and there, blowing upon a fixed mat erected for a sail, but nothing was known of shifting sails. The Indians made good use of fire in clearing ground for planting, in felling trees, excavating canoes, and making pitch and glue. Bellows were not used, but the blowtube existed. Water wheels were unknown, and in the matter of using nature's forces for work northern America was in a primitive state of culture. The special implements, tools, and utensils employed in the various aboriginal industries are enumerated below. They are also treated more fully in separate articles.

Agriculture.—Digging sticks, hardened in fire and sharpened, and often weighted; dibbles, hoes, scarecrows, harvesting devices, husking pegs, granaries, and caches were common. For harvesting both wild and cultivated produce various tribes had tongs for picking the cactus fruit, stone implements for opening hulls or shells, baskets for gathering, carrying, and storing, poles for reaching fruit, harvesting apparatus for grass seed, wild rice, camas, wokus, coonti, maize, etc. (See Agriculture, Food.)

Bark work.—Peelers, shredders, twist-ers, sewing tools, pitching tools.

Boat building.—Axes, adzes, saws, borers, hammers, knives, pitch and paint brushes, and fire.

Carrying.—Packing baskets, hide cases, walking sticks, special costumes, and a provision of compact food, as pemmican, dried fish, and crisp bread. The making up of burdens into neat loads for handling and for the back was understood and further completed by means of headbands, breast straps, and shoulder straps. The dog was here and there a pack beast and harness was devised.

Cooking.—Besides open roasting, grilling frames of wood, and pits for baking and steaming, there were stone slabs for parching seeds and for baking bread; pottery and baskets for boiling (the latter by the help of heated stones), and soapstone utensils for preparing meat and other food. (See Food.)

Curing food.—Drying frames, smoking devices.

Fishing.—Besides fishing implements proper, the fisher's outfit included canoes, paddles, weirs, dams, anchor stones, etc.

Plastic art.—In the technic of this industry belong all tools and implements used in quarrying clays and preparing them for the potter, all devices employed in building up, smoothing, polishing, and decorating ware, and the apparatus for burning. (See Pottery.)

Quarrying, mining, and stone working.—Digging sticks, mauls, hammers, edge tools for making lamps, and dishes and other receptacles of soapstone, chipping and other shaping tools and implements, carrying apparatus, flakers, chippers, polishers.

Textile industries.—All implements and tools needed in gathering roots, stems, and leaves as materials, and those used in preparing these for matting, bagging, basketry, blankets, robes, lacework, network, thread, string, and rope; finally all inventions employed in manufacturing these products. (See Basketry, Blankets, Weaving.)

Whaling.—Suit of water-tight clothing; kaiak and paddle; harpoon, with line; skin floats; lance.

Woodcraft.—Ax, knife, saw, adz, chisel, borers, rasps, polishers, paint brushes, rollers, moving and setting up devices. (See Woodwork.)

For serving and consuming food, knives were necessary; spoons were fashioned of natural objects, especially of wood, horn, and gourd, but there were no forks or individual dishes or tables. Much food was consumed on the spot where it was found. The Indians had manifold apparatus for making, preserving, and using fire; for cooking, lighting, and heating. Shovels were used for baking bread. The outfit for harvesting and preparing acorns included gathering basket, for which the woman's hat was often used, carrying hamper, granary, hulling mill, mortar, hopper basket, meal mat, leaching pit, cooking basket, mush basket, and eating bowls. Milling implements in general included natural boulders and pebbles; mortars of wood, stone, bone, or hide; pestles of the same materials; metates of varying degrees of texture, with manos to correspond; baskets to serve as hoppers and to catch meal, and brooms. Hunters' implements included a vast number of accessory apparatus for making weapons effectual.

Devices for binding or permanently holding two parts together, pegs, lashings, and cement were used (see Cement). In the absence of metal and rattan, rawhide, sinew, roots of evergreen trees, splits of tough wood, pitch, and animal glue performed the necessary function. In the aboriginal economy no great stones were moved, but large logs were sometimes transported many miles.

Metric devices of the North Americans were very crude compared with modern standards, but were exactly adapted to their needs. A man fitted his boat and all its appurtenances to his body, just as he did his clothing. The hunter, basket maker, potter, tentmaker, weighed and measured by means of the same standard. For securing uniform thickness the N. W. coast tribes bored holes through hulls of dugouts, and ran slender plugs into them which were used as gauges. Usually the parts of the body were the only gauges. (See Measurements.)

Straighteners were made of wood, stone, horn, or ivory for bending wood and other substances to shape. Digging sticks, dibbles, and the whole class of implements for making holes in the ground were used also for working in quarries, for getting worms and the like from the beach or the earth, and for digging roots for food or for textile and other industrial purposes. Tongs were employed in moving hot stones, in gathering cactus fruit, and in capturing snakes.

Dwellings were of such varying types and forms that their construction in different areas required the services of different kinds of work—that of the tentmaker, the joiner, the mason, or the snow worker, with their different implements, including shovels, axes, trowels, adzes, levers, parbuckles, etc. (see Architecture, Habitations). The joiner's outfit included many devices, from those for hafting to those for house building, tent framing, boat fitting, and the use of roots and thongs. Puncheons were hewn out, but there was no mortising. Hafting, the joining of the working part of a tool to the manual part, was accomplished variously by driving in, groove, splice, socket, tongue-and-groove, or mortising, and the fastening was done with pegs or lashing.

For the shaping arts, the working of stone, wood, and other hard substances, the apparatus varied with the material, and consisted of knives, hammers, wedges, saws, files, polishers, borers, adzes, and chisels, made out of materials best suited always to their uses. (See Art, Sculpture, Stonework, Woodwork.)

The propelling of all sorts of water craft was done by paddling, by poling, by dragging over mud, and by towing. No oars or rudders were used. Vessels were made water-tight with pitch or by the swelling of the wood. The rope or rawhide line for dragging a canoe along shore is known as a cordelle, the French-Canadian term. Portage, the moving of a bark canoe from one body of water to another, was accomplished by carrying load and canoe separately, sliding the empty canoe over mud, or shooting rapids in it. (See Boats, Commerce, Travel and Transportation.)

The making of snowshoes was an important occupation in the N., requiring great skill and manifold tools and devices. Ice and snow implements and utensils used in the higher latitudes include picks with ivory or stone blades, shovels with wooden blade and ivory edge, creepers for the boots, boat hooks for warding off and drawing canoes, sleds, and the indispensable snowshoes. The Eskimo were ingenious in devising such implements. They had shovels with edges of walrus ivory, walking sticks for going over the snow, snow goggles, snowshoes, and snow trowels and knives for housebuilding; also ice picks and crowbars and hooks and scoops for cutting and moving ice.

See Arts and Industries, and the subjects cited thereunder; also the articles describing special types of implements, tools, and utensils, and the materials from which they are made. (O. T. M.)

Imtuk. A Yuit Eskimo village near Indian pt., N. E. Siberia; pop. 43 in 9 houses about 1895, 65 in 12 houses in 1901. Most of its people are of the Aiwan division, but 4 families are from Cherinak.

Imtuk.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 29, 1904. Imtun.—Ibid. (Chukchi name).

Imukfa (Hitchiti: 'shell,' also referring to a metallic ornament of concave shape; applied possibly in allusion to the bend in the river). A subordinate settlement of the Upper Creek town Oakfuski, on a creek of the same name, a short distance W. of Tallapoosa r., Ala. A battle was fought there Jan. 24, 1814, in the Creek war, and the celebrated battle of the Horseshoe Bend, on Mar. 25 of the same year, took place in the immediate vicinity. (A. S. G.)

Emucfau.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, VI, 371, 1857.

Emuckfau.—Pickett, Hist. Ala., II, 332-339, 1859.

Emuckfaw.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. IV, 50, 1848.

Emukfau.—Ibid., 59. Im-mook-fau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 46, 1848.

Imuris. Given by early authorities as a Pima rancharia near the E. bank of Rio San Ignacio (or Magdalena), lat. 30° 50', long. 110° 50', in the present Sonora, Mexico. Orozco y Berra mentions the Himeris (who are evidently the inhabitants of this settlement), with the Oyata. If they belonged to the latter, Imures was doubtless the last Oyata settlement toward the N., and the earlier writers did not, in this case, distinguish the Oyata from the Pima. Imuris was visited by Father Kino as early as 1699, and the bell in its church bears the date 1680. It was afterward a visita of San Ignacio mission (Rudo Ensayo, ca. 1762, 153, 1863), with 80 inhabitants in 1730. It is now a civilized pueblo. Of its 637 inhabitants in 1900, 74 were Mayo and 32 Yaqui. (F. W. H.)

Himares.—Kino, map, in Stöcklein, Neue Welt-Bott, 74, 1726. Himeris.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 58, 344, 1864. Himuri.—Rudo Ensayo (ca. 1762), 153, 1863. Imoris.—Box, Adventures, 277, 1869. Imures.—Kino (1696) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., I, 267, 1856. Imurez.—Hardy, Travels, 427, 1829. Imuri.—Kino (ca. 1699) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., I, 348, 1856. Imuris.—Font, map (1777) in Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 393, 1889. Imuriz.—Hardy, Travels, 432, 1829. S. José Imuri.—Rivera (1730) in Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 514, 1884. Uburiqui.—Kino (ca. 1699) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., I, 348, 1856. Ymurez.—Bandelier, Gilded Man, 179, 1893.

Inajalaihū. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 459, 1874.

Inalik. An Inguklimiut village on Little Diomed id., Alaska. The name of the people was extended by Woolfe (11th Census, Alaska, 130, 1893) to include the inhabitants of both islands.—Nelson, 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899.

Inam. The best known village of the upper division of the Karok, speaking the Karakuka dialect. Situated on Klamath r., at or near the mouth of Clear cr., N. W. Cal. It was the scene of the Deer-skin dance and of an annual "world-making" ceremony. (A. L. K.)

E-nam.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 23, 1860.

Inaqtek (Inā'khtek, 'raven'). A subphratry or gens of the Menominee.—Hoffman in 14th Rep. B. A. E., pt. I, 42, 1896.

Inaspetsum. One of the tribes included by the early fur traders under the term Nez Percé (Ross, Fur Hunters, I, 185, 1855). They lived on Columbia r., above the mouth of the Snake, in Washington. Perhaps they were the Winatshipum or the Kalispel. (L. F.)

Incense. From the Latin incendere, 'to burn,' is defined as anything burned to produce a pleasant sweet smell during religious rites. It may be regarded as direct sacrifice, as symbolic of ascending prayer, or as an aid to spiritual exaltation. Incense has been in almost universal use from the earliest historic period, particularly in the more highly organized ancient religions. In Mexico and adjacent parts various resinous gums known collectively under the Aztec name of copalli, or copal, were used. North of the Rio Grande the plant substances most commonly employed for the same purpose were tobacco, in various native varieties; the dried tops of Thuja, and other cedars; spruce and pine needles, particularly those of Abies and Pinus ponderosa; sweetgrass (Savastana odorata), Artemisia, and the root of the balsam-root (Balsamorhiza). Tobacco was used in one way or another in important ceremonials over almost the whole area of the United States and along the N. W. coast, and in the Canadian interior. Pine needles were most commonly used among the Pueblos and other tribes of the S. W. In the noted Hopi snake dance the smoke of burning juniper tops was blown through tubes known as "cloud-blowers" until the kiva was filled with the pleasing fragrance. Cedar tops, sweet grass, and wild sage were more common in ceremonies of the Plains Indians, especially the Peyote rite, and parcels of the dried substance were sometimes attached to sacrifice poles or deposited with the corpse in the grave or on the scaffold. With some tribes the twigs and leaves of the plant were differentiated as male and female. The balsam root was burned in small quantities in every great sweat-house rite among the Plains tribes and was held so precious that sometimes a horse was given for a single root. Among the Siksika, according to Wissler, every tipi contains an altar—a small excavation in the earth—where sweet gum is burned daily.

There were also a number of vegetal perfumes used for personal gratification, either by rubbing the juice of the crushed plant over the skin or by wearing the leaves or dried tops in little bags attached to the clothing. The Southern Ute mother placed sweet-smelling herbs under the pillow of her baby. One of the ingredients of the secret medicine employed by the Buffalo doctors among the Plains tribes in treating wounds is believed to have been the strong smelling musk of the beaver. (J. M.)

Incha. An unidentified tribe said to have lived where there were Spanish settlements and to have been at war with the Mantons (Mento) of Arkansas r. in 1700. Icca.—Iberville (1702) in Margry, Déc., IV, 561, 1880. Incha.—Ibid., 599.

Inchi (In'chi, 'stone lodge'). A village occupied by the Kansa in their migration up Kansas r.—J. O. Dorsey, inf'n, 1882.

Incomecanetook (Income-can-útook). Given by Ross (Advent., 290, 1847) as an Okinagan tribe.

Indak. A former Maidu village on the site of Placerville, Eldorado co., Cal.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XVII, pl. xxxviii, 1905.

Indelchidnti ('pine'). An Apache clan or band at San Carlos agency and Ft Apache, Ariz., in 1881 (Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 111, 1890); identical with Indilche-dentiene, 'Live in country with large pine trees' (White, Apache Names of Indian Tribes, MS., B. A. E.), a band formerly under chief Narchubeulecolte.

Indian. The common designation of the aborigines of America. The name first occurs in a letter of Columbus dated Feb., 1493, wherein the discoverer speaks of the Indios he had with him (F. F. Hilder in Am. Anthropol., n. s., 1, 545, 1899). It was the general belief of the day, shared by Columbus, that in his voyage across the Atlantic he had reached India. This term, in spite of its misleading connotation, has passed into the languages of the civilized world: Indio in Spanish, Portuguese, and Italian; Indien in French; Indianer in German, etc. The term American Indian, for which it has been proposed to substitute Amerind (q. v.), is however in common use; less so the objectionable term redskins, to which correspond the French Peaux-rouges, the German Rothhäute. Brinton titled his book on the aborigines of the New World, "The American Race," but this return to an early use of the word American can hardly be successful. In geographical nomenclature the Indian is well remembered. There are Indian Territory, Indiana, Indianapolis, Indianola, Indio. Besides these, the maps and gazetteers record Indian arm, bay, bayou, beach, bottom, branch, brook, camp, castle, cove, creek, crossing, diggings, draft, fall, field, fields, ford, gap, grove, gulch, harbor, head, hill, hills, island; lake, mills, mound, mountain, neck, orchard, pass, point, pond, ridge, river, rock, run, spring, springs, swamp, town, trace, trail, valley, village, and wells, in various parts of the United States and Canada. The term Red Indian, applied to the Beothuk, has given Newfoundland a number of place names.

Many wild plants have been called "Indian" in order to mark them off from familiar sorts. Use by Indians has been the origin of another class of such terms.

The following plants have been called after the Indian:

Indian apple.—The May apple, or wild mandrake (Podophyllum peltatum).

Indian arrow.—The burning bush, or wahoo (Euonymus atropurpureus).

Indian arrow-wood.—The flowering dogwood, or cornelian tree (Cornus florida).

Indian batn.—The erect trillium, or ill-scented wake-robin (Trillium erectum).

Indian bark.—The laurel magnolia, or sweet bay (Magnolia virginiana).

Indian bean.—(1) The catalpa, or bean-tree (Catalpa catalpa). (2) A New Jersey name of the groundnut (Apios apios).

Indian beard-grass.—The bushy beard-grass (Andropogon glomeratus).

Indian bitters.—A North Carolina name of the Fraser umbrella or cucumber tree (Magnolia fraseri).

Indian black drink.—The cassena, yaupon, black drink (q. v.), or Carolina tea (Ilex cassine).

Indian boys and girls.—A western name of the Dutchman's breeches (Bikukulla cucullaria).

Indian bread.—The tuckahoe (Scelerotium giganteum).

Indian bread-root.—The prairie turnip, or pomme blanche (Psoralea esculenta).

Indian cedar.—The hop-hornbeam, or ironwood (Ostrya virginiana).

Indian cherry.—(1) The service-berry, or june-berry (Amelanchier canadensis). (2) The Carolina buckthorn (Rhamnus caroliniana).

Indian chickweed.—The carpet-weed (Mollugo verticillata).

Indian chief.—A western name of the American cowslip or shooting-star (Dodecatheon meadia).

Indian cigar tree.—The common catalpa (Catalpa catalpa), a name in use in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and the District of Columbia. See Indian bean, above.

Indian corn.—Maize (Zea mays), for which an early name was Indian wheat.

Indian cucumber.—Medeola virginiana, also known as Indian cucumber-root.

Indian cup.—(1) The common pitcher-plant (Sarracenia purpurea). (2) The cup-plant (Silphium perfoliatum).

Indian currant.—The coral-berry (Symphoricarpos vulgaris).

Indian dye.—The yellow puccoon or orange-root (Hydrastis canadensis); also known as yellow-root.

Indian elm.—The slippery-elm (Ulmus fulva).

Indian fig.—(1) The eastern prickly pear (Opuntia opuntia). (2) Cereus giganteus, or saguaro, the giant cereus of Arizona, California, Mexico, and New Mexico.

Indian fog.—The crooked yellow stonecrop or dwarf houseleek (Sedum reflexum).

Indian gravel-root.—The tall boneset or joe-pye-weed (Eupatorium purpureum).

Indian hemp.—(1) The army-root (Apocynum cannabinum), called also black Indian hemp. (2) The swamp milkweed (Asclepias incarnata) and the hairy milkweed (A. pulchra), called also white Indian hemp. (3) A West Virginia name for the yellow toad-flax (Linaria linaria). (4) The velvet-leaf (Abutilon abutilon), called also Indian mallow.

Indian hippo.—The bowman's-root (Porteranthus trifolius), called also Indian physic.

Indian lemonade.—A California name, according to Bergen, for the fragrant sumac (Rhus trilobata).

Indian lettuce.—The round-leaved wintergreen (Pyrola rotundifolia).

Indian mallow.—(1) The velvet-leaf (Abutilon abutilon), also known as Indian hemp. (2) The prickly sida (Sida spinosa).

Indian melon.—A Colorado name of a species of Echinocactus.

Indian millet.—The silky oryzopsis (Oryzopsis cuspidata).

Indian moccasin.—The stemless lady's-slipper or moccasin-flower (Cypripedium acaule).

Indian mozemize, or moose misse.—The American mountain-ash or dogberry (Sorbus americana).

Indian paint.—(1) The strawberry-blite (Blitum capitatum). (2) The hoary puccoon (Lithospermum canescens). (3) A Wisconsin name, according to Bergen, for a species of Tradescantia. (4) Bloodroot (Sanguinaria canadensis), called red Indian paint. (5) The yellow puccoon (Hydrastis canadensis), called yellow Indian paint.

Indian paint-brush.—The scarlet-painted cup (Castilleja coccinea).

Indian peach.—Ungrafted peach trees, according to Bartlett, which are considered to be more thrifty and said to bear larger fruit. In the South a specific variety of clingstone peach.

Indian pear.—The service-berry (Ame-lanchier canadensis), called also wild Indian pear.

Indian physic.—(1) The bowman's-root (Porteranthus trifolius), called also Indian hippo. (2) American ipecac (Porteranthus stipulatus). (3) Fraser's magnolia, the long-leaved umbrella-tree (Magnolia fraseri).

Indian pine.—The loblolly, or old-field pine (Pinus taeda).

Indian pink.—(1) The Carolina pink, or worm-grass (Spigelia marylandica). (2) The cypress-vine (Quamoclit quamoclit). (3) The fire pink (Silene virginica). (4) The cuckoo-flower, or ragged-robin (Lychnis flos-cuculi). (5) The fringed milkwort, or polygala (Polygala paucifolia). (6) The scarlet-painted cup (Castilleja coccinea). (7) The wild pink (Silene pennsylvanica). (8) Silene californica.

Indian pipe.—The corpse-plant or ghost-flower (Monotropa uniflora).

Indian pitcher.—The pitcher-plant or side-saddle flower (Sarracenia purpurea).

Indian plantain.—(1) The great Indian plantain or wild collar (Mesadenia reniformis). (2) The pale Indian plantain (M. atriplicifolia). (3) The tuberous Indian plantain (M. tuberosa). (4) The sweet-scented Indian plantain (Synosma suaveolens).

Indian poke.—(1) American white heliobore (Veratrum viride). (2) False heliobore (V. woodii).

Indian posey.—(1) Sweet life-everlasting (Gnaphalium obtusifolium). (2) Large-flowered everlasting (Anaphalis argentea). (3) The butterfly-weed (Asclepias tuberosa).

Indian potato.—(1) The groundnut (Apio apios). (2) A western name for the squirrel-corn (Bikukulla canadensis). (3) A California name, according to Bergen, for Brodiaea capitata; but according to Barrett (inf'n, 1906) the term is indiscriminately given to many different species of bulbs and corms, which formed a considerable item in the food supply of the Californian Indians.

Indian puccoon.—The hoary puccoon (Lithospermum canescens).

Indian red-root.—The red-root (Gyrotheca capitata).

Indian rhubarb.—A California name, according to Bergen, for Saxifraga peltata.

Indian rice.—Wild rice (Zizania aquatica).

Indian root.—The American spikenard (Aralia racemosa).

Indian sage.—The common thoroughwort or boneset (Eupatorium perfoliatum).

Indian shamrock.—The ill-scented wake-robin, or erect trillium (Trillium erectum).

Indian shoe.—The large yellow lady's-slipper (Cypripedium hirsutum).

Indian slipper.—The pink lady's-slipper, or moccasin-flower (Cypripedium acaule).

Indian soap-plant.—The soap-berry, or wild China-tree (Sapindus marginatus).

Indian strawberry.—The strawberry-blite (Blitum capitatum).

Indian tea.—Plants, the leaves, etc., of which have been infused by the Indians, and after them by whites; also the decoction made therefrom, for example, Labrador tea (Ledum groenlandicum), which in Labrador is called Indian tea.

Indian tobacco.—(1) The wild tobacco (Lobelia inflata). (2) Wild tobacco (Nicotiana rustica). (3) The plantain-leaf everlasting (Antennaria plantaginifolia). (4) A New Jersey name, according to Bartlett, of the common mullein (Verbascum thapsus).

Indian turmeric.—The yellow puccoon, or orange-root (Hydrastis canadensis).

Indian turnip.—(1) The jack-in-the-pulpit (Arisaema triphyllum), also called three-leaved Indian turnip. (2) The prairie potato, or pomme blanche (Psoralea esculenta).

Indian vervain.—A Newfoundland name, according to Bergen, for the shining club-moss (Lycopodium lucidulum).

Indian warrior.—A California name for Pedicularis densiflora.

Indian weed.—An early term for tobacco.

Indian wheat.—An early term for maize, or Indian corn.

Indian whort.—A Labrador and Newfoundland name for the red bearberry or kinnikinnik (Arctostaphylos uva-ursi).

Indian wickup.—The great willow-herb or fireweed (Epilobium angustifolium), although Algonquian Indians called the basswood (Tilia americana) wickup.

There are, besides, the Indian's dream, the purple-stemmed cliff-brake (Pellaea atropurpurea), and the Indian's plume, Oswego tea (Monarda didyma).

Another series of terms in which the Indian is remembered is the following:

Indian bed.—A simple method of roasting clams, by placing them, hinges upmost, on the ground, and building over them a fire of brushwood.

Indian bread.—Bread made of maize meal or of maize and rye meal.

Indian-corn hills.—(1) In Essex co., Mass., according to Bartlett, hummocky land resembling hills of Indian corn. (2) Hillocks covering broad fields near the ancient mounds and earthworks of Ohio, Wisconsin, etc. (Lapham, Antiquities of Wisconsin).

Indian dab.—A Pennsylvania name for a sort of battercake.

Indian file.—Single file; the order in which Indians march.

Indian fort.—A name given to aboriginal earthworks in w. New York, in Ohio, and elsewhere.

Indian gift.—Something reclaimed after having been given, in reference to the alleged custom among Indians of expecting an equivalent for a gift or otherwise its return.

Indian giver.—A repentant giver.

Indian ladder.—A ladder made by trimming a small tree, the part of the branches near the stem being left as steps.

Indian liquor.—A Western term for whisky or rum adulterated for sale to the Indians.

Indian meal.—Maize or corn meal. A mixture of wheat and maize flour was called in earlier days "wheat and indian"; one of maize and rye flour, "rye and indian."

Indian orchard.—According to Bartlett, a term used in New York and Massachusetts to designate an old orchard of ungrafted apple trees, the time of planting being unknown.

Indian pipestone.—A name for catlinite (q. v.), the stone of which tribes in the region of the upper Mississippi made their tobacco pipes.

Indian pudding.—A pudding made of cornmeal, molasses, etc.

Indian reservation or reserve.—A tract of land reserved by Government for the Indians.

Indian sign.—A Western colloquialism of the earlier settlement days for a trace of the recent presence of Indians.

Indian sugar.—One of the earlier names for maple sugar.

Indian summer.—The short season of pleasant weather usually occurring about the middle of November, corresponding to the European St Marthas summer, or summer of All Saints (Albert Matthews in Monthly Weather Rev., Jan., 1902).

The name Indian appears sometimes in children's games (Chamberlain in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, xv, 107-116, 1902).

In Canadian French the usual term applied to the Indian was "sauvage" (savage); and hence are met such terms as "botte sauvage," "trainee sauvage," "tabagane," "thé sauvage." The "Siwash" of the Pacific coast and in the Chinook jargon is only a corruption of the "sauvage" of French-Canadian trappers and adventurers. (A. F. C.)

Indian Affairs. See Office of Indian Affairs.

Indian Commissioners. See United States Board of Indian Commissioners.

"Indian Helper." See Carlisle School.

Indian Industries League. A philanthropic organization, originally the Indian industries department of the National Indian Association, but incorporated as an independent body at Boston, Mass., in 1901. Its object is "to open individual opportunities of work, or of education to be used for self-support, to individual Indians, and to build up self-supporting industries in Indian communities." As a department of the national organization the Indian industries gained its first important impetus in 1892, when it held at the Mechanics' Fair, in Boston, an exhibition of Indian beadwork and of class-room work in iron, tin, wood, leather, and lace. It has been instrumental in the education of two Indian girls, who were graduated with credit from the Boston High School, and has helped individual educated Indians toward self-support, having in view the fact that the progress of the Indians toward civilization is in proportion to the number of their young people who have seen and practised the white man's life at its best. It has also helped to foster a beadwork industry; aided in developing the native moccasins to suit the white man; bought baskets of native manufacture, paying therefor a fair price to the Pima and Mission Indians, the basket making tribes of Washington, and others, and has obtained for these products places for exhibit and sale. The league also erected an industrial room for the Navaho on San Juan r., N Mex., which was disposed of when the plant became a mission station. In 1905 the president of the league officially visited the Mission Indians of California and others, his report on the former resulting in the amelioration of their extreme poverty by bringing to them governmental and private aid. The league strives to aid the Indians in any way that offers even temporary self-support, like that derived from their aboriginal industries. It believes in the assimilation of the Indians into the national life, in the abolishment of reservations, and in the freedom of the Indians to live and work where they please. (F. C. S.)

Indian Point. A village on the site of Lisbon, N. Y., occupied after the Revolution by Catholic Iroquois removed thither by the English Government until they were dispersed in 1806, when they retired to Onondaga and St Regis.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 342, 1855.

Indian Rights Association. A nonpolitical, nonsectarian body organized in Philadelphia, Dec. 15, 1882, by gentlemen who met in response to an invitation of Mr John Welsh to consider the best method of producing such public feeling and Congressional action as should secure civil rights and education to the Indians, and in time bring about their civilization and admission to citizenship. When the association began its work much of the country over which the Indians roamed was sparsely settled; outbreaks had been frequent; comparatively little attention was paid to the Indians' rights and wrongs, and ignorance concerning Indian affairs was widespread. When the tide of emigration swept westward, and settlers, good and bad, began crowding the Indians more and more, it was evident that measures should be adopted whereby the Indian could be adapted to his new artificial environment. The work confronting the association was one of magnitude. It was necessary to procure accurate knowledge of actual conditions, which could be done only by frequent visits to the Indian country. The information thus obtained had to be brought to the attention of the public in order that sufficient pressure might be exerted on Congress and the Executive. This was done by dissemination of information in pamphlets and leaflets, by public addresses, and by announcements through the public press. The association gradually won the respect and confidence of the public. The accuracy of its statements is rarely questioned now, and an appeal to the press on any matter requiring attention from Congress or the public usually meets with ready response. In the beginning the association was regarded by a few as maintaining visionary theories, and was viewed by some Government officials as a meddlesome and irresponsible body; but the Office of Indian Affairs came to regard it as a friendly critic and welcomed its aid. The association has a representative in Washington to cooperate with the Office of Indian Affairs, to bring to the attention of the Commissioner matters requiring adjustment, to scrutinize legislation relating to Indian affairs, and to inform members of Congress regarding the merits or demerits of pending bills. Vicious legislation, when it can not be defeated in committee, is vigorously fought in Congress through personal presentation and by letters and pamphlets, with frequent appeals to the Executive.

Many of the laws enacted by Congress with a view of improving the condition of the Indian have been prompted by the association. Among those of a general nature is the statute of Feb. 8, 1887, known as the "general severalty act," which authorizes allotments. Under this law the title to Indian lands is held by the Government in most cases for 25 years, but in the meantime the allottee is subject to the laws in common with other citizens. More recent is the enactment of a statute, drafted by the association, designed to defeat the monopoly that has so largely controlled Indian trade, the law now providing that any person of good moral character shall be granted a license on application.

The courts have frequently been appealed to by the association in the endeavor to secure justice. The Warner Ranch (Mission Indian) case, appealed from the local courts of California to the Supreme Court of the United States, was in its inception espoused by the association and prosecuted by it to the final decree of the highest tribunal, the necessary funds for the prosecution of the case being advanced by the association. The celebrated "Lone Wolf" case was appealed by the association to the United States Supreme Court in the hope that the policy of recognizing the validity and sacredness of the Government's treaty obligations with the Indian tribes, followed since the adoption of the Constitution, would be upheld. The adverse decision in this case marked the beginning of a new era in the management of the Indians. The appeal made to the association by friends of Spotted Hawk and Little Whirlwind, of the Northern Cheyenne in Montana, under sentence of death and life imprisonment, respectively, for the alleged murder of a sheep herder, was responded to by the association, which employed counsel to present the case on appeal to the supreme court of Montana. The effort resulted in securing the liberty of both young men, and a subsequent confession by the person guilty of the crime charged to them fully exonerated them and showed the need of watchfulness to prevent great wrongs against Indians by reason of local prejudice. The exposure by the association of the anomalous conditions in Indian Territory resulted in directing the attention of the people and of Congress to the need of better safeguarding the rights of the Five Civilized Tribes.

Considerable attention has been given by the association to exposing the wrongdoing of Government officials where such unfortunately existed, usually by the class of employees who obtained their positions through political influence. The association has also strenuously urged that the appointment of Indian agents be made solely on the ground of efficiency, and it was through its efforts that the civil-service rules were extended to the Indian service.

At the time of the organization of the Indian Rights Association, Congress, owing largely to misunderstanding of the Indians' needs, failed to make adequate appropriations for schools, but by informing the public of the nature and possibilities of this work, a vigorous sentiment was created in its favor (see Education). The fact that an organization exists solely to guard the rights of the Indians acts as a powerful deterrent to persons seeking the exploitation of the Indians' estate.

The association has printed and distributed about 600,000 copies of various publications. Among those that have attracted much attention are: The Indian Before the Law, by Henry S. Pancoast; The Indian Question Past and Present, by Herbert Welsh; Indian Wardship, by Charles E. Pancoast; Civilization Among the Sioux, by Herbert Welsh; The Mission Indians, by C. C. Painter; Latest Studies on Indian Reservations, by J. B. Harrison; and A New Indian Policy, by S. M. Brosius. (M. K. S. S. M. B.)

Indian River. A summer camp of the Sitka Indians of Alaska, containing 43 persons in 1880.—Petroff in Tenth Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

"Indian's Friend." See National Indian Association.

Indian Village. A former Micmac village near L. Badger, Fogo co., Newfoundland.—Vetromile, Abnakis, 56, 1866.

Industries. See Arts and Industries, and the various industries thereunder mentioned.

Inewakhubeadhin (In'w-waqube-aq'in, 'keepers of the mysterious stones'). A subgens of the Mandhinkagaghe gens of the Omaha.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 228, 1897.

Inghame. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on lower Yukon r., Alaska; pop. 63 in 1880, 50 in 1890.

Inghamé.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 12, 1884. Inghameh.—Ibid., map. Inghamiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 165, 1893.

Ingalik ('having louse's eggs'). An Eskimo term for Indian, applied first to the Kaiyukhotana of Yukon r., and extended by the Russians to all Kaiyukhotana, sometimes to Athapascan tribes in general. Pop. 635 in 1890: 312 males and 323 females. The villages are Anvik, Chagvagchat, Chinik, Kagokakat, Kaiakak, Kaltag, Khatnotoutze, Khogoltinde, Khulikakat, Klamasqualtin, Koserefski, Kunkhogliak, Kutul, Lofka, Nunakhtagamut, Tanakot, Tutago, Taguta, and Wolasatux.

Ingleek.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. Alaska, 29, 1874. Ingleet.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., 1, 26, 1877. Ingate.—Whymper, Alaska, 153, 1868. Ingalik.—Dall, op. cit., 25 (Russian form). Ingalit.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 5, 1884. Ingekagmi.—Raymond in Sen. Ex. Doc. 12, 42d Cong., 1st sess., 25, 1871. Ingelets.—Ibid., 51. In'kalik.—Dall, op. cit., 25. Inkalite.—Latham in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., 1, 183, 1848. Inkaliten.—Glasnov in Baer and Helmersen, Beiträge, 1, 120, 1839. Inkilik.—Schott in Erman Archiv, VII, 480, 1849. Inkiliken.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 7, 1855.

Ingamatsha. A Chugachigmiut village on Chenega id., Prince William sd., Alaska; pop. 80 in 1880, 73 in 1890, 140 in 1900.

Chenega.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884.

Ingamatsha.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 67, 1893.

Ingdhezhide ('red dung'). An Omaha gens on the Inshasanda side of the tribal circle.

Ing'e-jide.—Dorsey in 3d Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1885. Ingdhezhide.—Dorsey in Bull. Philos. Soc. Wash., 130, 1880. Ing-gera-je-da.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., 1, 327, 1823. In-grá-zhe-da.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 155, 1877 (trans. 'red').

Inger. A Nunivagmiut Eskimo village on Nunivak id., Alaska; pop. 35 in 1890. Ingeramut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899.

Ingichuk. A Chnagmiut village in the delta of the Yukon, Alaska; pop. 8 in 1880.

Ingchuk.—Elliott, Our Arct. Prov., map, 1876. Ingichuk.—Nelson (1878) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Ingkdhunkashinka ('small cat'). A subgens of the Wasapetun gens of the Hangka division of the Osage.

In'gūn'ka oin'qa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897.

Inglutaligemiut (Inglūtāl'igēmūt). A subdivision of Malemiut Eskimo dwelling on Inglutalik r., Alaska.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., 1, 16, 1877.

Ingmikertok. An East Greenland Eskimo village on a small island in Angmagsalik fjord.—Meddelelser om Grönland, ix, 379, 1889.

Ingrakak. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on lower Yukon r., Alaska.

Ingrakaghamiut.—Ceast Surv. officers, 1898. Ingrakak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Inguklimiut. An Eskimo tribe occupying Little Diomed id., Bering strait. Their village is Inalik. See Okiogmiut. Achjuch-Alliat.—Dall in Smithson. Cont., xxii, 2, 1878 (Chukchi name). Inalugmiut.—Woolfe in 11th Census, Alaska, 130, 1893 (given to inhabitants of both islands). Ing-ūh-kli-mūt.—Dall in Trans. A. A. S., xxxiv, 377, 1885. Inguleet.—Jackson in Rep. Bur. Education, 145, map, 1894. Yikirga'ult.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 21, 1904 (Chukchi name: 'large-mouthed,' referring to their labrets).

Iniahico. A principal Apalachee village in 1539, near the site of Tallahassee, Fla.

Anaica Apalache.—Gentleman of Elvas in Hakluyt Soc. Pub., ix, 43, 1851. Anhayca.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., ii, 102, 1836. Aniaca Apalache.—Shipp, De Soto and Florida, 684, 1881 (misprint). Iniahico.—Biedma (1544) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., xx, 57, 1841.

Inigsalik. A southern settlement of the Angmagsalingmiut Eskimo of E. Greenland, where they find soft stone of which they fashion pots and lamps.—Meddelelser om Grönland, x, 368, 1888.

Inigsuarsak. An Eskimo village in lat. 72° 45', w. Greenland.—Science, xi, map, 259, 1888.

Inisiguanin. Mentioned as one of the towns or provinces apparently on or in the vicinity of the South Carolina coast, visited by Ayllon in 1520.

Inisiguanin.—Oviedo, Hist. Gen. Indias, iii, 628, 1853. Yncignavin.—Barcia, Ensayo, v, 1723.

Intikilly. A Tikeramiut Eskimo village near the coal veins E. of C. Lisburne, Alaska.—Coast Surv. map, 1890.

Inkalich. The Eskimo name of a division of the Kaiyuhkhotana on Innoko r., Alaska. Paltchikatno and Tigshelde were probably two of the villages.

Inchulukhlaites.—Latham, Essays, 271, 1860. Inkällichjuaten.—Holmberg quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 25, 1877. Inkulüchliuten.—Wrangell quoted by Bacr and Helmersen, Beiträge, i, 118, 1839. Inkulukhlaites.—Latham, op. cit., 267. Inkuluklaities.—Ibid., 272.

Inkesabe ('black shoulder'). An Omaha gens of the Hangashenu division, the custodian of the tribal pipes. The sub-gentes are Iekidhe, Nonhdeitazhi, Wadigizhe, and Watanzizhidedhatazhi.

Black.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 155, 1877. Enk-ka-sa-ba.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., i, 326, 1823. Ink-ka'-sa-ba.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 155, 1877. Inkesabé.—Dorsey in 3d Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1885.

Inkillis Tamaha ('English town'). One of the former so-called Choctaw Sixtowns in the N. W. part of Jasper co., Miss. It gave its name to a considerable tract in that part of the county and extending into Newton co. It is said to have received this name from the fact that the English made a distribution of property there in early times.—Halbert in Ala. Hist. Soc., Misc. Coll., i, 382, 1901.

Killis-tamaha.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 109, 1884.

Inkpa. A band of the Wahpeton Sioux, living in 1886 at Big Stone lake, Minn., and probably at Cormorant pt., Mille Lacs, in 1862.

Big Stone Lake band.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 102, 1859. Inkpatonwan.—Ashley, letter to Dorsey, Jan. 1886. Inpaton.—Ibid.

Innoka. A Kaiyuhkhotana village on Tlegon r., Alaska.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 37, 1884.

Inojey. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Inomassi. A former Diegueño rancheria belonging to San Miguel de la Frontera mission, w. coast of Lower California, about lat. 32° 10'.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 18, 1860.

Inoschuochin ('bear berry'). An Apache clan or band at San Carlos agency and Ft Apache, Ariz., in 1881.

Inoschujochen.—Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 112, 1890.

Inotuks. Given as a Karok village on Klamath r., Cal.; inhabited in 1860.

E-no-tucks.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 23, 1860.

Insanity. See Health and Disease.

Inscribed tablets. Objects, generally of soft stone, usually shale or sandstone, containing various lines and formal characters incised or in relief. Some of them are undoubtedly prehistoric and susceptible of interpretation in the light of aboriginal ornamentation and symbolism; others are forgeries. While it would perhaps be too much to say that there exists N. of Mexico no tablet or other ancient article that contains other than a pictorial or pictographic record, it is safe to assert that no authentic specimen has yet been brought to public notice. Any object claimed to be of pre-Columbian age and showing hieroglyphic or other characters that denote a degree of culture higher than that of the known tribes, is to be viewed with suspicion and all the circumstances connected with its discovery subjected to rigid scrutiny. The same remarks apply to engraved copper plates. In the latter material, the uneven surface produced by natural corrosion is often mistaken for attempts at inscriptions. See Grave Creek mound, Pictography.

GRAVE CREEK TABLET;
LENGTH 1 3/4 IN.

Consult Farquharson in Proc. Davenport Acad. Sci., ii, 1877-80; Fowke, Archaeol. Hist. Ohio, 1902; McLean, Mound Builders, 1879; Mallory in 10th Rep. B. A. E., 1893; Mercer, The Lenape Stone, 1885; Moorehead, Prehist. Impls., 1900; Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i-iv, 1851-57; Squier and Davis, Ancient Monuments, 1848; Thomas in 12th Rep. B. A. E., 632, 1894. (G. F.)

Inscription Rock. See El Morro.

Inselnostlinde. A Kaiyuhkhotana village of the Jugelnute division on Shageluk r., Alaska.—Zagoskin, Descr. Russ. Poss. Am., map, 1842.

Inshtasanda (inshta, 'eye' or 'eyes'; sanda, an archaic and untranslatable term.—Fletcher). One of the 2 divisions of the Omaha, containing the Mandhinkagaghe, Tesinde, Tapa, Ingdhezhide, and Inshtasanda gentes.

Grey Eyes.—Jackson (1877) quoted by Donaldson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1885, pt. 2, 74, 1886. Ictasanda.—Dorsey in 3d Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1885. Inshtasanda.—A. C. Fletcher, inf'n, 1906. Ish-ta-sun'-da.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., i, 325, 1823. Istasunda.—Jackson (1877), op. cit., 74.

Inshtasanda. An Omaha gens, belonging to the Inshtasanda division. The subdivisions are Ninibatan, Real Inshtasanda, Washetan, and Real Thunder people. Ictasanda.—Dorsey in 3d Rep. B. A. E., 220, 1885. Inshtasanda.—A. C. Fletcher, inf'n, 1906. Ish- dä'-sun-da.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 155, 1877 (trans. 'thunder'). Thunder.—Ibid. Wash-a-tung.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., i, 327, 1823 (mistaking a Hanguishenu gens for the Inshatanda division).

Insiachak. A Nushagamiut Eskimo village in the Nushagak district, Alaska; pop. 42 in 1890.

Insiachamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Intanto. A former Nishinan village in the valley of Bear r., Cal.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 316, 1877.

Intapupshe (Intahpupcē', 'curved stone'). An ancient Osage village on upper Osage r., above the mouth of Sac r., Mo.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883.

Intatchkalgi ('people of the beaver dams.'—Gatschet). A former Yuchi town on Ophlakok cr., 28 m. above its junction with Flint r., probably in Dooly co., Ga. It contained 14 families in 1799. Intatchkalgi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 132, 1884. In-tuch-cul-gau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 62, 1848.

Intenleiden. A Kaiyuhkhotana village of the Jugelnute division on the E. bank of Shageluk r., Alaska.

Intenleiden.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884. Intelleiden.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., xxi, map, 1850. Intenleiden.—Zagoskin, Descr. Russ. Poss. Am., map, 1842.

Interpreters. See Agency system.

Intietook (Inti-etook). Given by Ross (Advent, 290, 1847) as an Okinagan tribe.

Intimbich. A Mono band in Mill Creek valley, some miles s. of its junction with Kings r., Cal.

Em-tim'-bitch.—Merriam in Science, xix, 916, June 15, 1904. Entimbich.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906 (correct form). Eu-tem-pe-che's.—Wessells (1853) in H. R. Ex. Doc., 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 32, 1857. In-tem-peach-es.—Johnston (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc., 61, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 22, 1852. Intim-peach.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 782, 1899. Intim-peches.—Barbour (1852) in Sen. Ex. Doc., 4, 32d Cong., spec. se s., 254, 1853. Ytimpeiches.—Dominguez and Escalante (1776) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 2d s., i, 537, 1854.

Inuarnligang. A race of dwarfs who figure in the mythology of the Central Eskimo. They are supposed to inhabit cliffs that overhang the sea.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 640, 1888.

Inugsit. An Eskimo settlement in E. Greenland, about lat. 61° 50'; pop. 32 in 1884.—Das Ausland, 163, 1886.

Inugsulik. A summer settlement of the Aivilirmiut Eskimo on the n. coast of Repulse bay, n. of Hudson bay.

Enook-sha-lig.—Ross, Second Voy., 430, 1835. Inugsulik.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Inuhksoyistamiks (In-uhk'-so-yi-stam-iks, 'long tail lodge poles'). A band of the Kainah division of the Siksika.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 209, 1892.

Inuissimuit. An Eskimo tribe that occupied Depot id. and the adjacent coast of Hudson bay before 1800. The last descendant died some years ago.—Boas in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xv, 6, 1901.

Inuksikahkopwaiks (In-nuk-si'-kah-kop-wa-iks, 'small brittle fat'). A division of the Piegan Siksika.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 209, 225, 1892.

Inuksiks ('small robes'). A former division of the Piegan Siksika.

A-miks'-eks.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 264, 1862. I-nuks'-iks.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 209, 1892. Little Robes.—Cuibertson in Smithson. Rep., 1850, 144, 1851. Small Robes.—Grinnell, op. cit., 225.

Invention. In the language of the Patent Office "an invention is something new and useful." The word applies to the apparatus of human activities and to the processes involved. The life of culture from the lowest savagery to the highest civilization is an increase in the artificialities of life. There were no tribes in America without culture, and the lowest of them had inventions. For instance, the Fugians had learned to convert the fish-spear into a barbed harpoon by fastening the detachable head, which was set loosely in the socket, to the end of a shaft by means of a short piece of rawhide. They had also invented a canoe of bark made in three pieces. When they wished to move to a new bay or inlet between which and the last there was a dangerous headland, they could take the canoe apart, carry it over the intervening mountain, and unite the parts by lashing, covering the joints with pitch. The most ingenious savages on the continent, however, were the Eskimo, all of whose apparatus used in their various activities show innumerable additions and changes, which are inventions. They lived surrounded by the largest animals in the world, which they were able to capture by their ingenuity. Their snow domes, waterproof clothing, skin canoes, sinew-backed bows, snowshoes, traps and snares in myriad varieties, some of which they shared with neighboring Indian tribes, amaze those who study them. Among other ingenious devices which would pass under the name of inventions are: the use of skids by the N. W. coast natives for rolling logs into place in building their immense communal dwellings; the employment of the parbuckle to assist in the work of moving logs; the use of a separate fly of rawhide at the top of the tipi, which could be moved by means of a pole with one end resting on the ground, so that the wind would not drive the smoke back into the tipi; driving a peg of known length into the side of a canoe as a gauge for the adzman in chipping out the inside; the boiling of food in baskets or utensils of wood, gourd, or rawhide, by means of hot stones; the attachment of inflated sealskins to the end of a harpoon line to impede the progress of game through the water after it was struck; the sinew-backed bow, which enabled the Eskimo hunter to employ brittle wood for the rigid portion and sinew string for propulsion; the continuous motion spindle; the reciprocating drill; the sand saw for hard stone, and all sorts of signaling and sign language. See Arts and Indus- tries and Implements, and the separate articles cited thereunder.

Consult Mason (1) Aboriginal American Mechanics, Mem. Internat. Cong. Anthropol., Chicago, 1894; (2) Origins of Invention, 1895; McGuire, A Study of the Primitive Methods of Drilling, Rep. U. S. Nat. Mus. 1894, 1896; Holmes, Development of the Shaping Arts, Smithsonian. Rep. 1902. See also the various Reports of the Bureau of American Ethnology. (O. T. M.)

Inyaha. A Diegueño village in w. San Diego co., Cal. Its inhabitants, who numbered 53 in 1883, 32 in 1891, and 42 in 1902, occupy a reservation comprising 280 acres of poor land, which has been patented to them.

Anaha.—Jackson and Kinney, Rep. Miss. Ind., 24, 1883. Anahuac.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 175, 1902. Inaja.—Ibid., II, 72, 1891. Injaya.—Ibid., 146, 1903. Inyaha.—Ibid., 175, 1902.

Inyanche-yaka-atonwan ('village at the dani or rapids'). A Wahpeton Sioux band or division residing in 1859 at Little Rapids, Sand Prairie, and Minnesota r., not far from Belleplaine, Minn. Mazomani was their chief in 1862.

Inyan-teeyaka-ato-wan.—Dorsey (after Ashley) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 216, 1897. Little Falls Band.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 102, 1860. Little Rapids.—Parker, Minn. Handbk., 140, 1857. Lower Wahpeton.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 102, 1860. Lower Wakpatons.—Minn. Hist. Coll., III, 250, 1880.

Inyangmani. A Wahpeton Sioux band, named after its chief, living on Yellow Medicine cr., Minn., in 1862.

Inyangmani.—Ashley, letter to J. O. Dorsey, 1886. Yellow Medicine's band.—McKusick in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1863, 315, 1864.

Inyanhaoin ('musselshell earring'). A band of the Miniconjou Teton Sioux.

I-na-ha'-o-win.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Vol., 376, 1862 (trans. 'stone earring band'). Inya-ha-oin.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 220, 1897. Inyan-h-oin.—Ibid. Shell earring band.—Culbertson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1850, 142, 1851.

Iokwa. See Hiaqua.

Ionata. Apparently two former Chumashan villages connected with Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.

Ionata.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861. Jonatas.—Gatschet in Chief Eng. Rep., pt. III, 553, 1876.

Ioqua. See Hiaqua.

Iowa ('sleepyones'). One of the southwestern Siouan tribes included by J. O. Dorsey with the Oto and Missouri in his Chiwere group. Traditional and linguistic evidence proves that the Iowa sprang from the Winnebago stem, which appears to have been the mother stock of some other of the southwestern Siouan tribes; but the closest affinity of the Iowa is with the Oto and Missouri, the difference in language being merely dialectic. Iowa chiefs informed Dorsey in 1883 that their people and the Oto, Missouri, Omaha, and Ponca "once formed part of the Winnebago nation." According to the traditions of these tribes, at an early period they came with the Winnebago from their priscan home n. of the great lakes, but that the Winnebago stopped on the shore of a great lake (L. Michigan), attracted by the abundant fish, while the others continued southwestward to the Mississippi. Here another band, the Iowa, separated from the main group, "and received the name of Pahoja, or Gray Snow, which they still retain, but are known to the white people by the name of Ioways, or Aiaouez. The first stopping place of the Iowa, after parting from the Winnebago, as noted in the tradition, appears to have been on Rock r., Ill., near its junction with the Mississippi. Another tradition places them farther n. In 1848 a map was drawn by a member of the tribe showing their movements from the mouth of Rock r. to the place where they were then living. According to this their first move was to the banks of Des Moines r., some distance above its mouth; the second was to the vicinity of the pipestone quarry in s. w. Minnesota, although on the map it was placed erroneously high up on the Missouri; thence they descended to the mouth of Platte r., and later moved successively to the headwaters of Little Platte r., Mo.; to the w. bank of the Mississippi, slightly above the mouth of Des Moines r., a short distance farther up on the same side of the Mississippi; again southwestwardly, stopping on Salt r., thence going to its extreme headwaters; to the upper part of Chariton r.; to Grand r.; thence to Missouri r., opposite Ft. Leavenworth, where they lived at the time the map was drawn. These successive movements, which are of comparatively recent date, are generally accepted as substantially correct. The Sioux have a tradition (Williamson in Minn. Hist. Coll., I, 296) that when their ancestors first came to the falls of St. Anthony, the Iowa occupied the country about the mouth of Minnesota r., while the Cheyenne dwelt higher up on the same stream. The Iowa appear to have been in the vicinity of the mouth of Blue Earth r., Minn., just before the arrival there of Le Sueur in 1701 for the purpose of erecting his fort. His messengers, sent to invite them to settle in the vicinity of the fort because they were good farmers, found that they had recently removed toward Missouri r., near the Maha (Omaha), who dwelt in that region. The Sioux informed Le Sueur that Blue Earth r. belonged to the Scioux of the West (Dakota), the Aya-vois (Iowas), and Otocatas (Oto), who lived a little farther off. Father Marest (La Harpe, Jour., 39, 1851) says that the Iowa were about this date associated with the Sioux in their war against the Sauk. This does not accord with the general tradition that the Dakota were always enemies of the Iowa, nevertheless the name Nadouessi Mascouteins seems to have been applied to the Iowa by the early missionaries because of their relations for a time with the Sioux. Père Andre thus designated them in 1676, when they were living 200 leagues w. of Green Bay, Wis. Perrot (Mém., 63, 1864) apparently located them in the vicinity of the Pawnee, on the plains, in 1685. Father Zenobius (1680) placed the Anthoutantas (Oto) and Nadouessious Maskoutens (Iowa) about 130 leagues from the Illinois, in 3 great villages built near a river which empties into the river Colbert (Mississippi) on the w. side, above the Illinois, almost opposite the mouth of the Wisconsin. He appears to locate a part of the Ainoes (perhaps intended for Aioües), on the w. side of Milwaukee r., in Wisconsin. On Marquette's map (1674-79) the Pahoutet (Iowa), the Otoutanta (Oto), and Maha (Omaha) are placed on Missouri r., evidently by mere guess. La Salle knew of the Oto and the Iowa, and in his letter in regard to Hennepin, Aug. 22, 1682, mentions them under the names Otoutanta and Aionouea, but his statement that Accault, one of his company, knew the languages of these tribes is doubtful. It is probable that in 1700, when Le Sueur furnished them with their first firearms, the Iowa resided on the extreme headwaters of Des Moines r., but it appears from this explorer's journal that they and the Oto removed and "established themselves toward the Missouri river, near the Maha." Jefferys (Fr. Dom. in Am., 1761) placed them on the E. side of the Missouri, w. of the sources of Des Moines r., above the Oto, who were on the w. side of the Missouri and below the Omaha; but in the text of his work they are located on the Mississippi in lat. 43° 30'. In 1804, according to Lewis and Clark (Orig. Jour., VI, 91-92, 1905), they occupied a single village of 200 warriors or 800 souls, 18 leagues up Platte r., on the s. e. side, although they formerly lived on the Missouri above the Platte. They conducted traffic with traders from St Louis at their posts on Platte and Grand Nemaha r., as well as at the Iowa village, the chief trade being skins of beaver, otter, raccoon, deer, and bear. They also cultivated corn, beans, etc. In 1829 (Rep. Sec. War) they were on Platte r., Iowa, 15 m. from the Missouri state line. Schoolcraft (1853) placed them on Nemaha r., Nebr., a mile above its mouth. By 1880 they were brought under the agencies.

The visiting and marriage customs of the Iowa did not differ from those of cognate tribes, nor was their management of children unlike that of the Dakota, the Omaha, and others. They appear to have been cultivators of the soil at an early date, as Le Sueur tried to persuade them to fix their village near Ft L'Huillier because they were "industrious and accustomed to cultivate the earth." Pike says that they cultivated corn, but proportionately not so much as the Sauk and Foxes. He also affirms that the Iowa were less civilized than the latter. Father André (Jes. Rel., 1676, Thwaites ed., LX, 203, 1900) says that although their village was very large, they were poor, their greatest wealth consisting of "ox-hides and red calumets," indicating that the Iowa early manufactured and traded catlinite pipes. Some small mounds in Minnesota and Iowa have been ascribed to them by two distinct traditions.

IOWA. (DAVID TOHEE)

In 1824 they ceded all their lands in Missouri, and in 1836 were assigned a reservation in N. E. Kansas, from which a part of the tribe moved later to another tract in central Oklahoma, which by agreement in 1890 was allotted to them in severalty, the surplus acreage being opened to settlement by whites.

Various estimates of the population of the Iowa at different dates are as follows: In 1760, 1,100 souls; by Lewis and Clark in 1804, 800, smallpox having carried off 100 men besides women and children in 1803; the Secretary of War gives the number in 1829 as 1,000; Catlin in 1832 at about 1,400, but in 1836 at 992; the Indian Affairs Report of 1843 gives their number as 470; the number at the Potawatomi and Great Nemaha agency in Kansas was 143 in 1884, 138 in 1885, 143 in 1886, and 225 in 1905. At the latter date they were under the jurisdiction of the Kickapoo School. At the Sauk and Fox agency, Okla., in 1885 they numbered 88; in 1901, 88; in 1905, 89.

The Iowa camp circle was divided into half circles, occupied by two phratries of four gentes each. These were:

First phratry. (1) Tunanpin, Black Bear; (2) Michirache, Wolf; (3) Cheghita, Eagle and Thunder-being; (4) Khotachi, Elk.

Second phratry. (5) Pakhtha, Beaver; (6) Ruche, Pigeon; (7) Arukhwa, Buffalo; (8) Wakan, Snake; (9) Mankoke, Owl. The last-named gens is extinct.

There was an Iowa village called Wolf village.

See Catlin, Iowa Inds., 1844; Dorsey (1) in B. A. E., 1894, and 15th Rep. B. A. E., 1897, (2) Trans. Anthropol. Soc. Wash., II, 1883; Hamilton and Irvin, Ioway Gram., 1848; Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 1862; Lewis and Clark, Orig. Jour., I-VIII, 1904-05; Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., I, 1823; Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., I, 1872; Sen. Doc. 452, 57th Cong., 1st sess., II, 1903. (J. O. D. C. T.)

Agones.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 125, 1816.
Agouais.—De Ligny (1726) in Wis. Hist. Soc. Coll., I, 22, 1854. Agoual.—Chauvignerie (1736) quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 557, 1853. Agoues.—Hutchins (1764), ibid. Ahe-o-war.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 91, 1905. Aiaoua.—Perrot (1689), Mém., 196, 1864. Aiaouais.—ibid., index. Aiaouez.—Jefferys, French Dom. in Am., I, 139, 1761. Aiaunway.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1804), I, 61, 1904. Aiaavis.—Le Sœur quoted by Ramsey in Minn. Hist. Coll., I, 45, 1872. Aieways.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1804), I, 45, 1904. Aijoues.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 522, 1853. Ainones.—Membre (1680) quoted by Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 445, 1862. Ainoves.—Hennepin, New Discov., 132, 1698. Aiaoez.—Coles, Lewis and Clark Exped., I, 19, note, 43, 1893. Aiouez.—Charlevoix (1723) in Margry, Déc., VI, 526, 1886. Aiounouea.—Hennepin (1680-82) in Margry, Déc., II, 258, 1877. Aiowais.—Pike, Trav., 134, 1811. Aisnours.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 50, 1854. Aiaouez.—Jefferys, Fr. Dom. Am., pt. I, map 1, 1761. Ajouas.—Smet, Miss. de l'Oregon, 108, 1848. Ajoues.—Bowles, map Am., ca. 1750. Ajouez.—Perrot, Mém., index, 1864. Anjouis.—Buchanan, N. Am. Inds., 155, 1824. Aôais.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 630, 1858. Aonays.—Smet, Letters, 38, note, 1843 (misprint). Aouas.—Cabeza de Vaca misquoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 37, 1852 (error). Avaouwais.—Lewis and Clark, Trav., 14, 1807. Avoy.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 200, 1858. Avoys.—Wis. Hist. Soc. Coll., I, 32, 1854. Ayahwa.—Coles, Lewis and Clark Exped., I, 20, note, 1893. Ayauais.—Drake, Bk. Inds., VI, 1848. Ayauvai.—Coles, Lewis and Clark Exped., I, 19, note, 1893. Ayauwais.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 17, 1806. Ayauwas.—Lapham, Blossom, and Dousman, Inds. Wis., 3, 1870. Ayauwaus.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, I, 91, 1904. Ayauway.—ibid., 45. Ayavois.—La Harpe and Le Sœur (1699) quoted by Long, Exped. St. Peter's R., II, 320, 1824. Ayawai.—Coles, Lewis and Clark Exped., I, 19, note, 1893. Ayaways.—Lewis and Clark, Trav., II, 442, 1814. Ayewais.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 197, 1858. Ayebais.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 608, 1858. Ayoea.—Martin, Hist. La., 301, 1882. Ayoos.—Perrot (1689) in Minn. Hist. Coll., II, pt. 2, 24, 1864. Ayoiois.—Bienville (1722) in Margry, Déc., VI, 407, 1886. Ayowais.—Beauharnois and Hocquet (1731) in Margry, Déc., VI, 570, 1886. Ayooués.—Iberville (1702) quoted by Neill, Hist. Minn., 172, 1858.

Ayosois.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 1055, 1855. Ayoua.—Adelung, Mithridates, III, 271, 1816. Ayouahs.—Domenech, Deserts N. Am., II, 34, 1860. Ayoues.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 173, 1858. Ayouez.—Lamothe Cadillac (1695) in Margry, Déc., v, 124, 1883. Ayouwa.—Pike, Trav., map, 1811. Ayouwais.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 4, 1806. Ayouways.—ibid., 29. Ayovai.—Coles, Lewis and Clark Exped., I, 20, note, 1893. Ayovoiois.—Bienville (1722) in Margry, Déc., VI, 396, 1886. Ayowa.—Gatschet, Kaw MS. vocab., B. A. E., 27, 1878 (Kansa name). Ayowás.—Maximilian, Travels, 507, 1843. Ayoway.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, 487, 1817. Ayuhba.—Riggs, Dak. Gram. and Dict., 278, 1852. Ayuhuwahak.—Gatschet, Fox MS., B. A. E. (Fox name). Ayukba.—Williamson in Minn. Hist. Coll., I, 299, 1872. Ayuwas.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 83, 1815. Dusty Nose.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 262, 1853. Ho-wah.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1849, 74, 1850 (Mdevakanton name). Iawai.—Coles, Lewis and Clark Exped., I, 29, note, 1893. Iawas.—La Harpe and Le Sœur (1699) quoted by Long, Exped. St. Peter's R., II, 320, 1824. Iaways.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 91, 1905. Ihoway.—Sen. Doc. 21, 18th Cong., 2d sess., 5, 1825. Ioewaig.—Tanner, Narr., 316, 1830 (Ottawa name). Iowa.—Pike, Trav., 134, 1811. Ioway.—Pike, Exped., 112, 1810. Iyakhba.—Williamson in Minn. Geol. Rep. for 1884, 106 (Santee Dakota name). Iyakhwa.—ibid. (Teton name). Iyuhba.—Riggs, Dak. Gram. and Dict., 278, 1852 (trans. 'sleepy ones'). Jowai.—Ann de la Propag. de la Foi, III, 569, 1828. Jowas.—Pike, Trav., 123, 1811. Joways.—Schermerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Coll., 2d s. II, 39, 1814. Maqude.—Dorsey, Cegiha MS. Dict., B. A. E. 1878 (Omaha and Ponca name). Minowas.—Rafinesque in Marshall, Hist. Ky., I, 28, 1824 (confounding Iowa with Missouri). Nadoessi Mascoutens.—Jes. Rel. 1676-77, Thwaites ed., IX, 203, 1900. Nadoessi Maskoutens.—Perrot, Mém., index, 1864. Nadoessioux Maskoutens.—ibid., 237. Nadoessioux Maskoutens.—Minn. Hist. Coll., II, pt. 2, 30, note, 1864 ('Sioux of the prairies'; Algonkin name). Ne per-a.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 91, 1905 (i.e., Nez Percés; given as traders' nickname). Ovas.—Barcia, Ensayo, 238, 1723. Oyoa.—Du Lac, Voy. dans les Louisianes, 232, 1805. Pa-ho-cha.—Hamilton in Trans. Nebr. Hist. Soc., I, 47, 1885 (trans. 'dusty men'). Pa-ho-dje.—Maximilian, Trav., 507, 1843 (trans. 'dust-noses'). Pa-ho-ja.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., I, 339, 1823 (trans. 'gray snow'). Pahstet.—Marquette (1673) in Shea, Discov., 265, map, 1852. Pahucze.—Hamilton and Irwin, Ioway Gram., 17, 1848. Pa-hu-cha.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 262, 1853. Pá-kuh'-thá.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 153, 1877. Paoté.—La Salle (1682) in Margry, Déc., II, 215, 1877. Paoutés.—La Harpe, from Le Sœur's Jour. (1700) in Shea, Early Voy., 93, 1861. Paoutés.—Le Sœur (1700) in Margry, Déc., VI, 70, 1886. Paoutez.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Paq-octe.—Dorsey in Trans. Anthropol. Soc. Wash., II, 10, 1883. Pa'-go-tée.—Dorsey, Kansa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 (Kansa name). Pa'-qu-té.—Dorsey, Kwapa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1881 (Quapaw name). Páquisé.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883 (Osage name). Pashóhan.—Gatschet, Pawnee MS., B. A. E. (Pawnee name). Passinchan.—Doc. 1720 quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Pap., v, 203, 1890. Pauhoochees.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 209, 1854. Pá'odshé.—Gatschet, Kaw MS. vocab., B. A. E., 27, 1878 (Kansa name). Pierced Noses.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., I, 339, 1823. Wa-qóte.—Dorsey, Winnebago MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1886 (Winnebago name). Yahowa.—Beltrami, Pilgrimage, II, 151, 1828. Yoways.—De l'Isle, map of La., in Neill, Hist. Minn., 164, 1858. Yuahés.—Iberville (1700) in Margry, Déc., IV, 440, 1880 (identical?). Zaivovois.—Haldimand, according to Catlin, quoted by Donaldson in Smithson. Rep. for 1885, pt. 2, 145, 1866.

Ipec. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Ipersua. A summer village of the Utkiavimut Eskimo in N. Alaska.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 83, 1892.

Ipiik. An Eskimo village in s. w. Greenland, lat. 60° 31'.—Meddelelser om Grønland, xvi, map, 1896.

Ipsogi. A subordinate settlement of the Upper Creek town Oakfiski, on a creek of the same name which enters the Tallapoosa from the e., opposite Oakfiski, Ala. According to Hawkins it had 40 settlers in 1799.

E-pe-sau-gee.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 47, 1848.

Ipsogi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 133, 1884.

Ipnót. A Nunatogmiut Eskimo village at C. Thomson, Alaska; pop. 40 in 1880.

Ip-Not.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 19, 1884.

Ipoksimaiks (I'-pok-si-maiks, 'fat roast-ers'). A division of the Piegan.

E-phō-si-miks.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 264, 1862 (= 'the band that fries fat').

Fat Roasters.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 225, 1892. Ih-po'-se-mā.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 171, 1877 (= 'webfat'). I'-pok-si-maiks.—Grinnell, op. cit., 209.

Ippo (Ip-po', 'mesa'). A Tarahumare rancheria in Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, inf'n, 1894.

Iptugik. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Iratea. A village, presumably Costanoan, formerly connected with San Juan Bautista mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Nov. 23, 1860.

Irihibano ('war councilors'). The progenitors of the Fish clan of the ancient Timucua of Florida.—Pareja (ca. 1613) quoted by Gatschet in Am. Philos. Soc. Proc., xvii, 492, 1878.

Iron. The use of iron by the American aborigines and especially by the tribes n. of Mexico was very limited as compared with their use of copper. The compact ores were sometimes used, and were flaked, pecked, or ground into shape, as were the harder varieties of stone. Implements, ornaments, and symbolic objects of hematite ore are found in great numbers in mounds and in burial places and on dwelling sites over a large part of the country. Since smelting was unknown to the natives, the only form of metallic iron available to them and sufficiently malleable to be shaped by hammering is of meteoric origin, and numerous examples of implements shaped from it have been recovered from the mounds. A series of celts of ordinary form, along with partly shaped pieces and natural masses of the metal, were found by Moorehead in a mound of the Hopewell group near Chillicothe, Ohio, and these are now in the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago. The Turner mounds, in Hamilton co., Ohio, have perhaps yielded the most interesting relics of this class. Putnam describes these, in enumerating the various objects found on one of the earthen altars, as follows: "But by far the most important things found on this altar were the several masses of meteoric iron and the ornaments made from this metal. One of them is half of a spool-shaped ear ornament, like those made of copper with which it was associated. Another ear ornament of copper is covered with a thin plating of iron, in the same manner as others were covered with silver. Three of the masses of iron have been more or less hammered into bars, as if for the purpose of making some ornament or implement, and another is apparently in the natural shape in which it was found" (16th Rep. Peabody Museum, III, 171, 1884; see also Putnam in Proc. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 349, 1883). Ross records the fact that the Eskimo of Smith sd. used meteoric iron. Small bits of this metal beaten out and set in a row in an ivory handle made effective knives. See Hematite, Metal work.

Consult Kroeber in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xii, 285, 1899; Ross, Voyage of Discovery, 1819; Thomas in 12th Rep. B. A. E., 319, 336, 1894. (w. n. n.)

Iroquoian Family. A linguistic stock consisting of the following tribes and tribal groups: the Hurons composed of the Attignauquantan (Bear people), the Attigneonongnahac (Cord people), the Arendahronon (Rock people), the Tohontaenrat (Atahontaenrat or Tohontaenrat, White-eared or Deer people), the Wenrohronon, the Ataronchronon, and the Atonthrataronon (Otter people, an Algonquian tribe); the Tionontati or Tobacco people or nation; the confederation of the Attiwendaronk or Neutrals, composed of the Neutrals proper, the Aondironon, the Ongniarahronon, and the Atiragenratka (Atiraguenrek); the Conkhandeenrhonon; the Iroquois confederation composed of the Mohawk, the Oneida, the Onondaga, the Cayuga, and the Seneca, with the Tuscarora after 1726; and in later times the incorporated remnants of a number of alien tribes, such as the Tutelo, the Saponi, the Nanticoke, the Conoy, and the Muskwaki or Foxes; the Conestoga or Susquehanna of at least three tribes, of which one was the Akhrakouaehronon or Atrakouaehronon; the Erie or Cat nation of at least two allied peoples; the Tuscarora confederation, composed of several leagued tribes, the names of which are now unknown; the Nottaway; the Meherrin; and the Cherokee composed of at least three divisions, the Elati, the Middle Cherokee, and the Atali; and the Onnon-toga consisting of the Iroquois-Catholic seceders on the St Lawrence.

Each tribe was an independent political unit, except those which formed leagues in which the constituent tribes, while enjoying local self-government, acted jointly in common affairs. For this reason there was no general name for themselves common to all the tribes.

Jacques Cartier, in 1534, met on the shore of Gaspé basin people of the Iroquoian stock, whom in the following year he again encountered in their home on the site of the city of Quebec, Canada. He found both banks of the St Lawrence above Quebec, as far as the site of Montreal, occupied by people of this family. He visited the villages Hagonchenda, Hochelaga, Hochelayi, Stadacona, and Tutonaguy. This was the first known habitat of an Iroquoian people. Champlain found these territories entirely deserted 70 years later, and Lescarbot found people roving over this area speaking an entirely different language from that recorded by Cartier. He believed that this change of languages was due to "a destruction of people," because, he writes, "some years ago the Iroquois assembled themselves to the number of 8,000 men and destroyed all their enemies, whom they surprised in their enclosures." The new language which he recorded was Algonquian, spoken by bands that passed over this region on warlike forays.

The early occupants of the St Lawrence were probably the Arendahronon and Tionontaenrat, tribes of the Hurons. Their lands bordered on those of the Iroquois, whose territory extended westward to that of the Neutrals, neighbors of the Tionontati and western Huron tribes to the n. and the Erie to the s. and w. The Conestoga occupied the middle and lower basin of the Susquehanna, s. of the Iroquois. The n. Iroquoian area, which Algonquian tribes surrounded on nearly every side, therefore embraced nearly the entire valley of the St Lawrence, the basins of L. Ontario and L. Erie, the s. e. shores of L. Huron and Georgian bay, all of the present New York state except the lower Hudson valley, all of central Pennsylvania, and the shores of Chesapeake bay in Maryland as far as Choptank and Patuxent rs. In the S. the Cherokee area, surrounded by Algonquian tribes on the n., Siouan on the e., and Muskogean and Uchean tribes on the s. and w., embraced the valleys of the Tennessee and upper Savannah rs. and the mountainous parts of Virginia, the Carolinas, and Alabama. Separated from the Cherokee by the territory of the eastern Siouan tribes was the area occupied by the Tuscarora in e. North Carolina and by the Meherrin and Nottoway n. of them in s. e. Virginia.

The northern Iroquoian tribes, especially the Five Nations so called, were second to no other Indian people n. of Mexico in political organization, statecraft, and military prowess. Their leaders were astute diplomats, as the wily French and English statesmen with whom they treated soon discovered. In war they practised ferocious cruelty toward their prisoners, burning even their unadopted women and infant prisoners; but, far from being a race of rude and savage warriors, they were a kindly and affectionate people, full of keen sympathy for kin and friends in distress, kind and deferential to their women, exceedingly fond of their children, anxiously striving for peace and good will among men, and profoundly imbued with a just reverence for the constitution of their commonwealth and for its founders. Their wars were waged primarily to secure and perpetuate their political life and independence. The fundamental principles of their confederation, persistently maintained for centuries by force of arms and by compacts with other peoples, were based primarily on blood relationship, and they shaped and directed their foreign and internal polity in consonance with these principles. The underlying motive for the institution of the Iroquois league was to secure universal peace and welfare (ne' skén'no') among men by the recognition and enforcement of the forms of civil government (ne' gá'i'huwio) through the direction and regulation of personal and public conduct and thought in accordance with beneficent customs and council decrees; by the stopping of bloodshed in the bloodfeud through the tender of the prescribed price for the killing of a cotribesman; by abstaining from eating human flesh; and, lastly, through the maintenance and necessary exercise of power (ne' gá'shásdo^{n'}sá'), not only military but also magic power believed to be embodied in the forms of their ceremonial activities. The tender by the homicide and his family for the murder or killing by accident of a cotribesman was twenty strings of wampum—ten for the dead person, and ten for the forfeited life of the homicide.

The religious activities of these tribes expressed themselves in the worship of all environing elements and bodies and many creatures of a teeming fancy, which, directly or remotely affecting their welfare, were regarded as man-beings or anthropic personages endowed with life, volition, and peculiar individual orenda, or magic power. In the practice of this religion, ethics or morals, as such, far from having a primary had only a secondary, if any, consideration. The status and personal relations of the personages of their pantheon were fixed and regulated by rules and customs similar to those in vogue in the social and political organization of the people, and there was, therefore, among at least the principal gods, a kinship system patterned on that of the people themselves.

The mental superiority of the Hurons (q. v.) over their Algonquian neighbors is frequently mentioned by the early French missionaries. A remainder of the Tionontati, with a few refugee Hurons among them, having fled to the region of the upper lakes, along with certain Ottawa tribes, to escape the Iroquois invasion in 1649, maintained among their fellow refugees a predominating influence. This was largely because, like other Iroquoian tribes, they had been highly organized socially and politically, and were therefore trained in definite parliamentary customs and procedure. The fact that, although but a small tribe, the Hurons claimed and exercised the right of lighting the council fire at all general gatherings, shows the esteem in which they were held by their neighbors. The Cherokee were the first tribe to adopt a constitutional form of government, embodied in a code of laws written in their own language in an alphabet based on the Roman characters adapted by one of them (see Sequoya), though in weighing these facts their large infusion of white blood must be considered.

The social organization of the Iroquoian tribes was in some respects similar to that of some other Indians, but it was much more complex and cohesive, and there was a notable difference in regard to the important position accorded the women. Among the Cherokee, the Iroquois, the Hurons, and probably among the other tribes, the women performed important and essential functions in their government. Every chief was chosen and retained his position, and every important measure was enacted by the consent and cooperation of the child-bearing women, and the candidate for a chiefship was nominated by the suffrages of the matrons of this group. His selection by them from among their sons had to be confirmed by the tribal and the federal councils respectively, and finally he was installed into office by federal officers. Lands and houses belonged solely to the women.

All the Iroquoian tribes were sedentary and agricultural, depending on the chase for only a small part of their subsistence. The northern tribes were especially noted for their skill in fortification and house-building. Their so-called castles were solid log structures, with platforms running around the top on the inside, from which stones and other missiles could be hurled down upon besiegers.

For the population of the tribes composing the Iroquoian family see Iroquois, and the descriptions of the various Iroquoian tribes.

(J. N. B. H.)

> Chelekees.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., Cent. and So. Am., app., 472, 1878 (or Cherokees).
> Cherokees.—Gallatin in Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 89, 306, 1836 (kept apart from Iroquois, though probable affinity asserted); Bancroft, Hist. U. S., III, 246, 1840; Prichard, Phys. Hist. Mankind, v, 401, 1847; Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, pt.

1, xcix, 77, 1848; Latham, in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 58, 1856 (a separate group, perhaps to be classed with Iroquois and Sioux); Gallatin in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 401, 1853; Latham, Opuscula, 327, 1860; Keane in Stanford, Compend., Cent. and So. Am., app., 460, 472, 1878 (same as Chelekees or Tsalagi—"apparently entirely distinct from all other American tongues").
> Cherokee.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 24, 1884; Gatschet in Science, 413, Apr. 29, 1887.
= Huron-Cherokee.—Hale in Am. Antiq., 20, Jan., 1883 (proposed as a family name instead of Huron-Iroquois; relationship to Iroquois affirmed).
< Huron-Iroquois.—Bancroft, Hi t. U. S., III, 243, 1840. > Irokesen.—Berghaus (1845), Physik. Atlas, map 17, 1848; ibid., 1852. < Irokesen.—Berghaus, Physik. Atlas, map 72, 1887 (includes Kataba and said to be derived from Dakota). = Iroquoian.—Powell in 7th Rep. B. A. E., 77, 1891. > Iroquois.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 21, 23, 305, 1836 (excludes Cherokee); Prichard, Phys. Hist. Mankind, v, 381, 1847 (follows Gallatin); Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, pt. 1, xcix, 77, 1848 (as in 1836); Gallatin in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 401, 1853. Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 58, 1856; Latham, Opuscula, 327, 1860; Latham Elements Comp. Philol., 463, 1862. > Tschirokies.—Berghaus (1845), Physik. Atlas, map 17, 1848. > Wyandot-Iroquois.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., Cent. and So. Am., app., 460, 468, 1878.

Iroquois (Algonkin: Iri'akhoiw, 'real adders', with the French suffix -ois). The confederation of Iroquoian tribes known in history, among other names, by that of the Five Nations, comprising the Cayuga, Mohawk, Oneida, Onondaga, and Seneca. Their name for themselves as a political body was Onkwano'sioñni', 'we are of the extended lodge.' Among the Iroquoian tribes kinship is traced through the blood of the woman only; kinship means membership in a family, and this in turn constitutes citizenship in the tribe, conferring certain social, political, and religious privileges, duties, and rights which are denied to persons of alien blood; but, by a legal fiction embodied in the right of adoption, the blood of the alien may be figuratively changed into one of the strains of the Iroquoian blood, and thus citizenship may be conferred on a person of alien lineage. In an Iroquoian tribe the legislative, judicial, and executive functions are usually exercised by one and the same class of persons, commonly called chiefs in English, who are organized into councils. There are three grades of chiefs. The chiefship is hereditary in certain of the simplest political units in the government of the tribe; a chief is nominated by the suffrages of the matrons of this unit, and the nomination is confirmed by the tribal and the federal councils. The functions of the three grades of chiefs are defined in the rules of procedure. When the five Iroquoian tribes were organized into a confederation, its government was only a development of that of the separate tribes, just as the government of each of the constituent tribes was a development of that of the several clans of which it was composed. The government of the clan was a development of that of the several brood families of which it was composed, and the brood family, strictly speaking, was composed of the progeny of a woman and her female descendants, counting through the female line only; hence the clan may be described as a permanent body of kindred, socially and politically organized, who trace actual and theoretical descent through the female line only. The simpler units surrendered part of their autonomy to the next higher units in such wise that the whole was closely interdependent and cohesive. The establishment of the higher unit created new rights, privileges, and duties. This was the principle of organization of the confederation of the five Iroquoian tribes. The date of the formation of this confederation (probably not the first, but the last of a series of attempts to unite the several tribes in a federal union) was not earlier than about the year 1570, which is some 30 years anterior to that of the Huron tribes.

The Delawares gave them the name Mingwe. The northern and western Algonquians called them Nadowa, 'adders'. The Powhatan called them Masawomes. The English knew them as the Confederation of the Five Nations, and after the admission of the Tuscarora in 1722, as the Six Nations. Moreover, the names Maqua, Mohawk, Seneca, and Tsonnontowan, by which their leading tribes were called, were also applied to them collectively. The League of the Iroquois, when first known to Europeans, was composed of the five tribes, and occupied the territory extending from the e. watershed of L. Champlain to the w. watershed of Genesee r., and from the Adirondacks southward to the territory of the Conestoga. The date of the formation of the league is not certain, but there is evidence that it took place about 1570, occasioned by wars with Algonquian and Huron tribes. The confederated Iroquois immediately began to make their united power felt. After the coming of the Dutch, from whom they procured firearms, they were able to extend their conquests over all the neighboring tribes until their dominion was acknowledged from Ottawa r. to the Tennessee and from the Kennebec to Illinois r. and L. Michigan. Their westward advance was checked by the Chippewa; the Cherokee and the Catawba proved an effectual barrier in the S., while in the N. they were hampered by the operations of the French in Canada. Champlain on one of his early expeditions joined a party of Canadian Indians against the Iroquois. This made them bitter enemies of the French, whom they afterward opposed at every step to the close of the French régime in Canada in 1763, while they were firm allies of the English. The French made several attempts through their missionaries to win over the Iroquois, and were so far successful that a considerable number of individuals from the different tribes, most of them Mohawk and Onondaga, withdrew from the several tribes and formed Catholic settlements at Caughnawaga, St. Regis, and Oka, on the St. Lawrence. The tribes of the league repeatedly tried, but without success, to induce them to return, and finally, in 1684, declared them to be traitors. In later wars the Catholic Iroquois took part with the French against their former brethren. On the breaking out of the American Revolution the League of the Iroquois decided not to take part in the conflict, but to allow each tribe to decide for itself what action to take. All the tribes, with the exception of the Oneida and about half of the Tuscarora, joined the English. After the revolution the Mohawk and Cayuga, with other Iroquoian tribes that were in the English interest, after several temporary assignments, were finally settled by the Canadian government on a reservation on Grand r., Ontario, where they still reside, although a few individuals emigrated to Gibson, Bay of Quinté, Caughnawaga, and St. Thomas, Ontario. All the Iroquois in the United States are on reservations in New York with the exception of the Oneida, who are settled near Green Bay, Wis. The so-called Seneca of Oklahoma are composed of the remnants of many tribes, among which may be mentioned the Conestoga and Hurons, and of emigrants from all the tribes of the Iroquoian confederation. It is very probable that the nucleus of these Seneca was the remnant of the ancient Erie. The Catholic Iroquois of Caughnawaga, St. Regis, and Oka, although having no connection with the confederation, supplied many recruits to the fur trade, and a large number of them have become permanently resident among the northwestern tribes of the United States and Canada.

The number of the Iroquois villages varied greatly at different periods and from decade to decade. In 1657 there were about 24, but after the conquest of the Erie the entire country from the Genesee to the w. watershed of L. Erie came into possession of the Iroquoian tribes, which afterward settled colonies on the upper waters of the Allegheny and Susquehanna and on the n. shore of L. Ontario, so that by 1750 their villages may have numbered about 50. The population of the Iroquois also varied much at different periods. Their constant wars greatly weakened them. In 1689 it was estimated that they had 2,250 warriors, who were reduced by war, disease, and defections to Canada, to 1,230 in 1698. Their losses were largely made up by their system of wholesale adoption, which was carried on to such an extent that at one time their adopted aliens were reported to equal or exceed the number of native Iroquois. Disregarding the extraordinary estimates of some early writers, it is evident that the modern Iroquois, instead of decreasing in population, have increased, and number more at present than at any former period. On account of the defection of the Catholic Iroquois and the omission of the Tuscarora from the estimates it was impossible to get a statement of the full strength of the Iroquois until within recent times. About the middle of the 17th century the Five Nations were supposed to have reached their highest point, and in 1677 and 1685 they were estimated at about 16,000. In 1689 they were estimated at about 12,850, but in the next 9 years they lost more than half by war and by desertions to Canada. The most accurate estimates for the 18th century gave to the Six Nations and their colonies about 10,000 or 12,000 souls. In 1774 they were estimated at 10,000 to 12,500. In 1904 they numbered about 16,100, including more than 3,000 mixed-bloods, as follows:

In Ontario: Iroquois and Algonkin at Watha (Gibson), 139 (about one-half Iroquois); Mohawk of the Bay of Quinté, 1,271; Oneida of the Thames, 770; Six Nations on Grand r., 4,195 (including about 150 Delawares). In Quebec: Iroquois of Caughnawaga, 2,074; of St Regis, 1,426; of Lake of Two Mountains, 393. Total in Canada, about 10,418.

The Iroquois of New York in 1904 were distributed as follows: Onondaga and Seneca on Allegany res., 1,041; Cayuga, Onondaga, and Seneca on Cattaraugus res., 1,456; Oneida on Oneida res., 150; Oneida and Onondaga on Onondaga res., 513; St Regis res., 1,208; Cayuga and Seneca on Tonawanda res., 512; Onondaga and Tuscarora on Tuscarora res., 410. Total, 5,290.

In 1905 there were also 366 Indians classed as Seneca under the Seneca School, Okla.

The Algonquian and other Indians included with the Iroquois are probably outnumbered by the Caughnawaga and others in the Canadian N. W. who are not separately enumerated.

The following villages were Iroquois, but the particular tribes to which they belonged are either unknown or are collective: Adjouquay, Allaquippa, Anpuquin, Aquatsagana, Aratumquat, Awegen, Blackleg's Village, Buckaloon, Cahun-ghage, Canowdowsa, Caughnawaga, Charlierstown, Chemegaide, Chenango, Chinklacamoose, Chugnut, Churamuk, Codocoraren, Cokanuck, Conaquanosshan, Conejoholo, Conemaugh, Conihunta, Connosomothdian, Conoytown (mixed Conoy and Iroquois), Coreorgonel (mixed), Cowawago, Cussewago, Ganadoga, Gana-garabhare, Ganasarage, Ganeraske, Ganneious, Gannentaha, Glasswanoge, Goshgoshunk (mixed), Grand River Indians, Hickorytown (mixed), Janundat, Jedakne, Johnstown, Jonondes, Juniata, Juraken (2), Kahendohon, Kanaghsaws, Kannawalohalla, Kanesadageh, Karaken, Karhationni, Karhawenradon, Kayehkwarageh, Kaygen, Kenté, Kick-enapawling, Kiskiminetas, Kittaning, Kuskuski (mixed), Lawunkhannek, Logstown, Loyalhannon (?), Mahusquechikoken, Mahican, Mahoning, Manckatawangum, Matchasung, Middletown, Mingo Town, Mohanet, Nescopeck, Newtown (4 settlements), Newtchaning, Octageron, Ohrekionni, Onaweron, Onkwe Iyede, Opolopong, Oquaga, Osewingo, Oskawaserenhon, Ostonwackin, Oswegatchie, Otiahanague, Otsiningo, Otskwirakeron, Ousagwentera, Owego, Paille Coupée, Pluggy's Town, Punxatawney, Runonvea, Saint Regis, Sawcunk, Schoharie, Schohorage, Sconassi, Scoutash's Town, Seneca Town, Sevege, Sewickly's Old Town, Shamokin, Shanopin, Shenango, Sheshequin, Sheonage, Sittawingo, Skannayutenate, Skehandowa, Soloeka, Swahadowri, Taiaia-gon, Tewanondadon, Tioga, Tohoguses Cabins, Tonihata, Tullibas, Tuscarora, Tuskokogie, Tutelo, Unadilla, Venango, Wakatomica, Wakerhon, Wautegehe, Yoghroonwago, Youcham. Catholic missions among the Iroquois were: Caughnawaga, Indian Point, La Montagne, La Prairie, Oka, Oswegatchie, St Regis, and Sault au Recollet. For the other Iroquois settlements, see under the several tribal names. (J. N. B. H.)

Aquinoshionee.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 517, 1873. Aquiniusshionee.—Schoolcraft in Proc. N. Y. Hist. Soc., 80, 1844. Aganuschionni.—Macaulay, N. Y., ii, 185, 1829. Agoneaseah.—Ibid. Agonnonnionni.—Charlevoix (1744) quoted by Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. v, 3, 1848. Aggonousioni.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, iii, 79, 1854. Aggonnionni.—Clark, Onondaga, i, 19, 1849. Akononnionni.—Brinton, Lenape Leg., 255, 1885. Akwioshionni.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, vi, 138, 1857. Aquanoschionni.—Barton, New Views, app., 7, 1798. Aquanushionni.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. v, 4, 1848. Aquanushionig.—Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 309, 1816. Aquinoshionni.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, vi, 188, 1857. Aquiniusshionee.—Ibid., iii, 532, 1853. Caenoostoeary.—Schuyler (1699) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 563, 1854. Canaghkonje.—Dellius (1697), ibid., 280. Canaghkouse.—Ibid. Cannassone.—Doc. of 1695, ibid., 122. Cannissoone.—Ibid., 120. Cannossoone.—Gov. of Can. (1695), ibid., 120, note. Cannossoone.—Doc. of 1695, ibid., 120. Cannossoone.—Ibid. Canton Indians.—Fletcher (1693), ibid., 33. Coenossoony.—Ibid., 563, note. Confederate Indians.—Johnson (1760), ibid., vii, 432. Confederate Nations.—Mt Johnson conf.

(1755), ibid., vi, 983, 1855. Confederates.—Johnson (1763), ibid., vii, 582, 1856. Erocoise.—Morton (ca. 1650) in Me. Hist. Soc. Coll., iii, 34, 1853. Five Canton Nations.—Jamison (1696) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 235, 1854. Five Indian Cantons.—Hunter (1711), ibid., v, 252, 1855. Five Mohawk Nations.—Carver, Trav., 173, 1778. Five Nations.—Andros (1690) in R. I. Col. Rec., iii, 284, 1858. Gwhunnugh-shonee.—Macauley, N. Y., ii, 185, 1829. Haugh-gohnnuchshonee.—Ibid., 185. Hirocoi.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 215, 1855. Hiroquois.—Ibid., 205 (first applied by French to both Hurons and Iroquois). Hiroquois.—Jes. Rel. for 1632, 14, 1858. Ho-de-no-sau-nee.—Morgan, League Iroq., 51, 1851. Ho-di-no'-syo'-ni'.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 ('they are of the house': own name, Seneca form). Honon-tonchionni.—Millet (1693) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 78, 1854. Hotinnonchiendi.—Jes. Rel. for 1654, ii, 1858. Hotinnonsionni.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 205, 1855. Hotinnosionni.—Bruyas (ca. 1700) quoted in Charlevoix, New France, ii, 189, note, 1866 (Mohawk form). Hyroquois.—Sagard (1636) in note to Champlain, Œuv., iii, 220, 1870. Hyroquoys.—Ibid. Inquoi.—Boyd, Ind. Local Names, 1885 (misprint). Irecois.—Loveclae (1670) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iii, 190, 1853. Irecois.—Brickell, N. C., 283, 1737. Iriquois.—Boyd, Ind. Local Names, 30, 1885. Iriquois.—Thornton in Me. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 175, 1857. Irocois.—Champlain (1603), Œuv., ii, 9, 1870. Iroquois.—Doc. of 1666 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iii, 134, 1853. Irognas.—Rasle (1724) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., viii, 246, 1819. Irokesen.—Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 303, 1816 (German form). Ironois.—Hennepin, Cont. of New Discov., map, 1698. Iroques.—Bayard (1698) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 353, 1854. Iroque.—Smith (1799) quoted by Drake, Trag. Wild., 254, 1841. Iroqueuse.—Hennepin (1683) quoted by Harris, Voy. and Trav., ii, 906, 1705. Iroqueze.—Harris, ibid., i, 811, 1705. Iroqueise.—Hennepin, New Discov., 19, 1698. Iroquois.—Baraga, Eng.-Otc. Diet., 147, 1878. Iroquois.—Jes. Rel. for 1645, 2, 1858. Iroquois.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. v, 41, 1848. Irriquois.—Pike, Trav., 130, 1811. Iroquois.—Talon (1671) in Margy, Déc., i, 100, 1875. Iroquoys.—La Montagne (1658) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiii, 89, 1881. Ke-nunctioni.—Macauley, N. Y., ii, 174, 1829. Konoshioni.—Gale, Upper Miss., 159, 1867. Konoshioni.—Dellius (1694) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 78, 1854. Konungzi Oniga.—Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 309, 1816. Let-e-nugh-shonee.—Macauley, N. Y., ii, 185, 1829. Mahongwis.—Rafinesque, Am. Nations, i, 157, 1836. Massawomekes.—Smith (1629), Va., i, 120, 1819. Massawamaes.—Keane in Stanford Compend., 521, 1878. Massawomacs.—Jefferson, Notes, 279, 1825. Massawomecks.—Strachey (ca. 1612), Va., 40, 1849. Massawomees.—Rafinesque, introd. to Marshall, Ky., i, 33, 1824. Massawomekes.—Smith (1629), Va., i, 74, 1819. Massawonacks.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, vi, 130, 1857. Massawomacs.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 127, 1816. Massawomekes.—Smith (1629), Va., i, 119, 1819. Mat-che-naw-to-waig.—Tanner, Narr., 316, 1830 ('bad snakes': Ottawa name for the Iroquois, in contradistinction to the Hurons, called the 'good snakes'). Matchinadaoek.—La Hontan (1703) quoted by Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 264, 1816 ('bad people': Algonquian name). Mengua.—Heckewelder (1819) quoted by Thompson, Long Id., i, 767, 1843. Mengues.—Bozman, Md., ii, 481, 1837. Menguy.—Rafinesque, introd. to Marshall, Ky., i, 31, 1824. Mengwe.—Heckewelder (1819) in Me. Hist. Soc. Coll., vi, 216, 1859. Mengwee.—Macauley, N. Y., ii, 185, 1829. Mengwi.—Rafinesque, Am. Nations, i, 157, 1836. Messawomes.—Am. Pion., ii, 189, 1843. Minckquas.—Smith (1660) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiii, 164, 1881. Minquaas.—Doc. of 1660, ibid., 181. Mingae.—Doc. of 1659, ibid., 106. Mingoe.—Conestoga council (1721) quoted by Proud, Penn., ii, 132, 1797. Mingos.—Homann Heirs map, 1756. Mingwee.—Macauley, N. Y., ii, 185, 1829. Minquaas.—Doc. of 1660 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiii, 181, 1881 (also applied to the Mingo on Ohio r., on map in Mandrillon, Spectateur Américain, 1785). Minquaes.—Doc. of 1658, ibid., 95. Minquaas.—Van der Donck (1656) quoted by Ruttenber, Tribes Hudson R., 51, 1872. Mungwas.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 147, 1855 (Chippewa name, and may mean the Munda). Nä-do-wage'.—

Morgan in N. Am. Rev., 52, 1870. Nadowaig.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 39, 1855. Nadowas.—Schoolcraft, Pers. Mem., 446, 1851. Nadów.—Baraga, Engl.-Otc. Diet., 147, 1878 (Chippewa name). Nah-dah-waig.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 193, 1855. Nahdoways.—Jones, Ojibway Inds., 32, 1861. Nahdoways.—Ibid., 111. Natuagi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 61, 1884 (Creek name). Naud-o-waig.—Warren (1852) in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 83, 1885. Naudoways.—Tanner, Narr., 88, 1830. Nautowaig.—Ibid., 316 (Ottawa name). Nautowas.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 304, 1853. Nautoway.—Tanner, Narr., 310, 1830. Nod-o-waig.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 90, 1850. Nodoways.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, ii, 149, 1852. Nodswaig.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 83, 1850. Notinnonchioni.—Millet (1693) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 79, 1854. Nottawages.—Glen (1750), ibid., iv, 588, 1855. Nottawegas.—Mitchel in Hist. Mag., 1st s., iv, 358, 1860. Notteweges.—McCall, Hist. Ga., i, 243, 1811. On-gwa'-no'-syo'-ni'.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (Seneca form). Rodinunchsionni.—Colden (1727) quoted in Charlevoix, New France, ii, 189, note, 1866. Sechs Nationen.—Güsefeld, map, 1784 (German: 'Six Nations'). Six Allied Nations.—Sharpe (1754) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 3d s., v, 16, 1836. Six Nations.—Albany conf. (1724) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., v, 713, 1855. Trokese.—Heckewelder (1819) quoted by Thompson, Long Id., i, 76, 1842 (Dutch form; misprint). Troquois.—Gorges (1658) in Me. Hist. Soc. Coll., ii, 66, 1847 (misprint). Tudamanes.—Barcia, Ensayo, 16, 1723. Wassawomees.—Rafinesque, introd. to Marshall, Ky., i, 33, 1824. Yä'kwä-nä'-syän-ni'.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (Tuscarora form). Yrocois.—Champlain (1632), Œuv., v, pt. 2, 46, 1870. Yrokoise.—Vaudreuil (1760) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 1092, 1858. Yroquois.—Champlain (1632), Œuv., v, pt. 2, 47, 1870.

Iroquoise Chippeways. The Catholic Iroquois and Nipissing settled at Oka, Quebec.—Schermerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., ii, 11, 1814.

Iroquois Supérieurs (French: 'upper Iroquois'). A geographical group of Iroquois, embracing the Oneida, Onondaga, Cayuga, and Seneca, occupying, in the 17th century, an inland country farther from St Lawrence r. than the Mohawk, who were called Iroquois Inférieurs.—Jes. Rel. for 1656, 7, 1858.

Irrigation. It was once assumed that irrigation was not practised by the Indians of the arid region, except to a very limited extent, until after they came under the influence of Spanish missionaries; but recent systematic study of the archeologic remains in the S. W. has removed all doubt that agriculture was conducted in prehistoric times with the aid of extensive irrigation canals, reservoirs, and dams. The most important of these works are in the valleys of the Gila and its tributaries, in s. Arizona, where scores of miles of ditches are still traceable, in instances extending more than 10 m. from the stream from which the water was diverted; according to some observers there are individual canals that traverse a total distance of 25 m. In the Salt River valley alone it is estimated that from 200,000 to 250,000 acres were made available for cultivation by means of irrigation before the arrival of white men. Some of the ancient canals were about 7 ft deep and 4 ft wide at the bottom, but the sides sloped gradually, rising in steps, giving the acequia a width of about 30 ft at the surface. Both the bed and the sides were carefully tamped and plastered with clay to prevent waste through seepage. Remains of what are believed to have been wooden head gates have been exposed by excavation. Where canal depressions have disappeared, owing to cultivation or to sand drift, the canals are still traceable by the innumerable bowlders and water-worn concretions that line the banks; these, according to Cushing, having been placed there by the natives as "water-tamers" to direct the streams to the thirsty fields. The irrigation works in the valleys mentioned probably indicate greater engineering skill than any aboriginal remains that have been discovered n. of Mexico. Several of the old canal beds have been utilized for miles by modern ditch builders; in one instance a saving of $20,000 to $25,000 was effected at the Mormon settlement of Mesa, Maricopa co., Ariz., by employing an ancient acequia that traversed a volcanic knoll for 3 m. and which at one point was excavated to a depth of 20 to 25 ft in the rock for several hundred feet. The remains of ditches the building of which necessitated overcoming similar though less serious obstacles exist in the valley of the Rio Verde; and on the Hasyampa, n. w. of Phoenix, a canal from that stream traverses a lava mesa for several miles and falls abruptly into a valley 40 or 50 ft. below, the water in its descent having cut away the rocky mesa walls for several feet.

Even where the water supply of a pueblo settlement situated several miles from a stream was obtained by means of canals, each house cluster was provided with a reservoir; and in many instances through the S. W., reservoirs, sometimes covering an area measuring 1 m. by $\frac{1}{2}$ m., designed for the storage of rain water, were the sole means of water supply both for domestic purposes and for irrigation. In the valleys of the Rio Grande and its tributaries, in New Mexico, small reservoirs were the chief means of supplying water to the ancient villages; and even to-day only the rudest methods of irrigation are employed by the Pueblo tribes. The ancient occupants of Peñasco Blanco, one of the Chaco canyon group of ancient ruins in the Navaho desert in n. w. New Mexico, diverted water from the Chaco by means of a ditch which supplied a reservoir built in sand, and partially prevented seepage by lining its bed with slabs of stones and clay.

The neighboring pueblos of Una Vida, Pueblo Bonito, Kinklazhin, Kinbineola, and Kinyaah, also were artificially provided with water for irrigation. Kinbineola, however, exhibits the best example of irrigation works of any of the Chaco group of villages, water having been diverted from the sandy wash to a large natural depression and thence conducted to the fields, 2 m. away, by a ditch dug around a mesa and along a series of sand hills on a fairly uniform grade. This ditch was mainly earthwork, but where necessary the lower border was reinforced with retaining walls of stone. Kinyaah is said to have been provided with two large reservoirs and a canal 25 to 30 ft wide and in places 3 to 4 ft deep.

Hand irrigation is still practised by the Pueblo Indians. The Zuñi women, in order to raise their small crops of onions, chile, etc., are obliged to carry water in jars on their heads, sometimes for several hundred yards; it is then poured on the individual plants with a gourd ladle. At the Middle Mesa villages of the Hopi, garden patches are watered in much the same way, except that here the gardens are within easier reach of the springs and are irrigated by means of a gourd vessel fastened to the end of a long pole. Both the Hopi of to-day and the ancient inhabitants of the vicinity of the present Solomonville, on the Gila, constructed reservoirs on the mesa sides from which terraced gardens below were readily irrigated, the reservoirs being supplied by impounding storm water. Throughout the S. W. where pueblos occupied the summits of mesas, reservoirs were provided, and according to tradition some of these were filled in winter by rolling into them immense snowballs. For hundred of years the pueblo of Acoma (q. v.) has derived its entire water supply for domestic purposes from a natural depression in the rock which receives the rainfall from the mesa summit.

Consult Cushing (1), Zuñi Breadstuff, 1884-85, (2) in Compte-rendu Internat. Cong. Amér., vii, 163, 1890; Fewkes in 22d Rep. B. A. E., 1904; Hewett in Records of the Past, iv, no. 9, 1905; Hodge in Am. Anthropol., vi, 323, 1893; Mindeleff in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Wilson in 13th Rep. U. S. Geol. Surv., 133, 1893. (F. W. H.)

Irupiens. A village on a river of the same name, an affluent of Trinity r., Tex., at which St Denis and his party stopped in 1717. Herds of buffalo were encountered there. The region was in the main occupied by tribes of the Caddoan family, but bordered the country occupied by intrusive tribes of other stocks. Consult Derbanne in Margry, Déc., vi, 204, 1886; La Harpe in French, Hist. Coll. La., iii, 48, 1851. Cf. Ervipiamas.

(A. C. F.)

Iruwaitsu (Iruai'tsu, 'Scott valley people'). One of the 4 divisions of the main body of Shasta, living in Scott valley, Siskiyou co., Cal. In 1851 the entire Indian population of Scott valley occupied 7 villages and was estimated by Gibbs (Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 171, 1853) to number 420. One of these settlements was apparently Watsaghika.

Iruai (tsu).—R. B. Dixon, inf'n, 1903 (correct name). Iruwai.—Curtin, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885. Scott's Valley Indians.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 170, 1853. Scott Valley Indians.—Steele in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1864, 120, 1865.

Isalwakten. A body of Salish of Fraser superintendency, Brit. Col.

Isalwakten.—Can. Ind. Aff., 79, 1878. Isalwalken.—Ibid., 138, 1879.

Isamis. A body of Salish of Fraser superintendency, Brit. Col.—Can. Ind. Aff., 78, 1878.

Isamuck. A body of Salish of Fraser superintendency, Brit. Col.

Isamuck.—Can. Ind. Aff., 138, 1879. Isamuck.—Ibid., 78, 1878.

Isanthcogna. A former Gabrieleño rancharia in Los Angeles co., Cal., at a locality later called Mission Vieja.—Ried (1852) quoted by Hoffman in Bull. Essex Inst., XVII, 2, 1885.

Isanyati ('Santee'). A Brulé Sioux band, probably originally Santee.

Isanyati.—Cleveland quoted by Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897. Isanyati.—Ibid.

Isfanalgi. An extinct clan of the Creeks, said by Gatschet to be seemingly analogous to the Ishpani phratry and clan of the Chickasaw.

Is-fa-nul'-ke.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1877. Ish-fanalgi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 156, 1884.

Isha. A former populous Chumashan village near San Pedro, Ventura co., Cal. I-ca'.—Henshaw, Buena Ventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Ishaau. The Coyote clan of the Hopi. I'-sau-uh wūn-wū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 403, 1894 (wūn-wū = 'clan'). Isauū winwū.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900. Ish.—Voth, Oraibi Summer Snake Ceremony, 282, 1903. I-sha-hue.—Bourke, Snake Dance, 171, 1884. Ish-awū.—Dorsey and Voth, Oraibi Soyal, 12, 1901. I'shawū.—Voth, Hopi Proper Names, 81, 1905. Shahue.—Donaldson, Moqui Pueblo Inds., 65, 1893 (misquoting Bourke).

Ishgua. A former Chumashan village located by Taylor near the mouth of Saticoy r., Ventura co., Cal. Perhaps the same as Isha.

Ishgua.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, July 24, 1863. Ishguaget.—Ibid.

Ishipishi. A Karok village on the w. bank of Klamath r., N. W. Cal., a mile above the mouth of the Salmon, opposite Katimin, and, like it, burned by the whites in 1852.

Ish-e-pish-e.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 23, 1860. Ishipishi.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1904 (Karok name). Isshe-pishe-rah.—Gibbs, MS. Misc., B. A. E., 1852. Kepar.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1904 (Yurok name).

Ishpani ('Spanish'). A Chickasaw phratry and clan.

Ish-pān-ee.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 163, 1877. Ish-pāni.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 96, 1884. Ispāni.—Ibid., 156.

Ishtakhechiduba (Ieta'qe tci dūba, 'four white men's houses'). One of the later villages occupied by the Kansa in their migration up Kansas r.—Dorsey, Kansa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883.

Ishtowa. The extinct Arrow clans of Sia and San Felipe pueblos, N. Mex.

Ish'to-hāno.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 348, 1896 (San Felipe form; hāno = 'people'). Ishtōwa-hāno.—Ibid. (Sia form).

Ishtua Yene (Keresan: ishtoā, 'arrow'). A place above Santo Domingo, N. Mex., whence fled the Cochiti inhabitants of Kuapa when pursued in prehistoric times by the mythical Pinini (q. v.), or pygmies, according to San Felipe tradition. The place is so called on account of numerous arrowpoints found there.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 166, 1892. Isht-ua Yen-e.—Bandelier, op. cit.

Ishtunga ('right side'). The name applied to those divisions of the Kansa that camped on the right side of the tribal circle.

Ictūnga.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 230, 1897.

Ishwidip. A Karok village on Klamath r., Cal., inhabited in 1860.

E-swhedip.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 23, 1860. Ishwidip.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1905.

Isi (a red and white flower). A clan of San Felipe pueblo, N. Mex., of which there was but a single survivor in 1895.

I'si-hāno.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 350, 1896 (hāno = 'people').

Isisokasimiks (I-sis'-o-kas-im-iks, 'hair shirts'). A division of the Kainah.

Hair Shirts.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 209, 1892. I-sis'-o-kas-im-iks.—Ibid. The Robes with Hair on the outside.—Culbertson in Smithsonian Rep. 1850, 144, 1851.

Isituchi. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Iskulani ('small' [people]). A Choctaw clan of the Wataikihulata phratry.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 162, 1878.

Isle aux Tourtes (French: 'turtle-dove island'). A French Sulpitian mission station, probably on Ottawa r., Quebec, begun for the Algonkin and Nipissing about 1720, but shortly afterward removed to Oka, q. v.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 333, 1855.

Isle of St John's. A village or resort of a band of Micmac, probably in Nova Scotia, in 1760.—Frye (1760) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., x, 115, 1809.

Isleta (Span: 'islet', so named from the location of the old village on a delta or island between the bed of a mountain torrent and the Rio Grande. The native name of the pueblo is Shiewhibak, 'knife laid on the ground to play whib,' whib being a native foot race. The name was perhaps suggested by the knife-like shape of the lava ridge on which the pueblo is built.—Lummis). A Tigua pueblo on the w. bank of the Rio Grande, about 12 m. s. of Albuquerque, N. Mex. According to Lummis it stands on the site it occupied at the time of the Spanish discovery in 1540, when it formed one of the villages of the province of Tiguex of Coronado's chroniclers. It was the seat of the Franciscan mission of San Antonio de Isleta from prior to 1629, and about 1675 received accessions from the Tigua pueblos of Quarai, Tajique, and others, E. of the Rio Grande, when those pueblos were abandoned in consequence of Apache depredations. In 1680 the population of Isleta was about 2,000. As the Spanish settlers along the lower Rio Grande took refuge in this pueblo when the uprising occurred in the year named, and thus in-year following (1681) Otermin surprised and captured the pueblo, and on his return from the N. took with him 519 captives, of whom 115 afterward escaped. The remainder were settled on the N. E. bank of the Rio Grande, a few miles below El Paso, Tex., the name Isleta del Sur ('Isleta of the South') being applied to their pueblo. The date of the refounding of the northern Isleta is somewhat in doubt. According to Baneroft the present pueblo was built in 1709 by some scattered families of Tigua gathered by missionary Juan de la Peña, while Bandelier asserts that the pueblo "remained vacant and in ruins until 1718, when it was repeopled with Tiguas who had returned from the Moquis [Hopi], to whom the majority of the tribe had fled during interrupted communication between its inhabitants and the seat of war at the northern villages, they did not participate in the massacre of the colonists and missionaries in the vicinity. When Gov. Otermin retreated from Santa Fé, however, he found Isleta abandoned, the inhabitants having joined the rebels. The

ISLETA WOMAN. (VROMAN, PHOTO.)

VICENTE JIRON, FORMER GOVERNOR OF ISLETA

the 12 years of Pueblo 'independence,'" 1680-92. The name of the mission (San Antonio de la Isleta) seems also to have been transferred to the new pueblo in the s., and on the reestablishment of the northern Isleta the latter became the mission of San Agustin. The Genizaros pueblos of Belen and Tomé were visitas of this mission in 1788. It has been learned by Lummis that a generation ago about 150 Queres from Acoma and Laguna were forced to leave their homes on account of drought and to settle at Isleta, where they still form a permanent part of that village and are recognized by representation in its civil and religious government. Pop. 1,110. (Consult Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 233, et seq., 1892.)

According to Lummis (inf'n, 1896) the Isleta people have the following clans: Kim (Mountain lion), Pashir (Water pebble), Num (Earth), T'hur (Sun), Shi'u (Eagle), Tam (Antelope), Pim (Deer), Churehu (Mole), Shumuyu (Turquoise), Kurni (Goose), Tuim (Wolf), Iebathu (White corn), Iefeu (Red corn), Ieshur (Blue corn), Iechur (Yellow corn), and Parrot. According to Gatschet the tribe is divided into the Churan and Shifunin fraternities or parties—the 'Red Eyes' and the 'Black Eyes'—but these may be merely phratral designations. See Pueblos, Tigua. (F. W. H.)

Alameda la Isleta.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Gleta.—Calhoun (1849), in Cal. Mess. and Corre-p., 211, 1850 (misprint). Hanichiná.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 ('eastern river': Laguna name). Ilet.—D'Anville, map N. A., 1752. Iseta.—Segura in Ind. Aff. Rep., 172, 1890 (misprint). Islella.—Morse, Hist. Am., map, 1798 (misprint). Isleta.—De l'Isle, carte Mexique et Floride, 1703. Isletabuh.—Ward (1864) in Donaldson, Moqui Pueblo Inds., 81, 1893. Isletans.—Lummis, N. Mex. David, 98, 1891. Isletenos.—Lummis, Man Who Married the Moon, 133, 1894. Isletta.—Kitchin, map N. Am., 1787. Isoletta.—Emory, Recon., 41, 1848. Jsleta.—Humboldt, Atlas Nouv. Espagne, carte 1, 1811. Luma.—Senex, map, 1710 (misprint). San Agustín del Isleta.—Aleuca-ter (1805) quoted by Prince, N. Mex., 37, 1883. San Antonio de la Isleta.—Benavides, Memorial, 20, 1630. San Augustin de la Isleta.—Villaseñor, Teatro Am., pt. 2, 418, 422, 1748. San Augustin del Isleta.—Alencaster (1805) in Meline, Two Thousand Miles, 212, 1867. Shee-ah-whib-bahk.—Lummis in St. Nicholas, XVIII, 834, Sept. 1891 (native name). Shee-ah-whib-bak.—Ibid., 829. Shee-e-huib-bac.—Lummis in Scribner's Mag., 478, Apr. 1893. Shee-eh-whib-bak.—Lummis, Man Who Married the Moon, 4, 1894. Shiewhibak.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895. Shye-ui-beg.—Century Cyclop. of Names, art. 'Isleta,' 1894. Siwhipa.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Acoma form). Tayude.—Gatschet, Isleta MS. vocab., 1882 ('one of the people'; proper name of an Isleta Indian; pl. Táyun or Tá iun). Tchi-ha-hui-pah.—Jouveneau in Cath. Picn., 1, 20, 9, 13, 1906. Tshi-a-uip-a.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 220, 1892. Tshya-ui-pa.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Rep., v, 37, 1884. Tü-ei.—Gatschet, Isleta MS. vocab., 1882 ('town': given as their own name for the pueblo). Yoletta.—Columbus Memorial Vol., 156, 1893 (misprint). Ysleta.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 756, 1736. Yslete.—Buschmann, N. Mex., 277, 1858. Ystete.—Lane (1854) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 689, 1855.

Isleta del Sur (Span.: 'Isleta of the south'). A Tigua pueblo on the N. E. bank of the Rio Grande, a few miles below El Paso, Tex. It was established in 1681 by some 400 Indian captives from Isleta, N. Mex., taken thence by Gov. Otermin on his return from the attempted reconquest of the Pueblos after their revolt in Aug., 1680. It was the seat of a Franciscan mission from 1682, containing a church dedicated to San Antonio de Padua. The mission name San Antonio applied to Isleta del Sur belonged to the northern Isleta until its abandonment in consequence of the revolt, and when the latter was resettled in 1709 or 1718, the mission was named San Agustín de la Isleta. The few inhabitants of Isleta del Sur are now almost completely Mexicanized. See authors cited below; also Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., IV, no. 1, 1902. (F. W. H.)

Corpus Christi de Isleta.—Otermin (1682) quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 191, 1889. Ileta.—De l'Isle, Atlas Nouveau, map, 59, 1733. Iselle.—Vaugondy, map Amér., 1778. Isla.—Escudero, Noticias Nuevo-Méx., 14, 1849. Isleta del Paso.—Gatschet in Mag. Am. Hist., 259, Apr. 1882. Isleta del Paso.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 8, 1884. Isleta del Sur.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 86, 1890. Isleta of the South.—Davis, El Gringo, 115, 1857. Isletta.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 128, 1850. Islettas.—Calhoun (1849) in Cal. Mess. and Corre-p., 211, 1850. San Antonio de la Isleta.—Bell in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., 1, 224, 1869. Ysleta.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 684, 1736.

Islets de Jeremie. An Indian mission, probably Montagnais, on the lower St. Lawrence, Quebec, in 1863.—Hind, Lab. Penin., II, 179, 1863.

Islayamen. A village w. of the Tlaamen and N. of Texada id., on the mainland of British Columbia.—Brit. Col. map, Ind. Aff., Victoria, 1872.

Ismiquilpas. A tribe or band of w. Texas, allied with the Jumano in 1699.—Iberville (1702) in Margry, Déc., IV, 316, 1880.

Ismuracanes. One of the tribes formerly connected with San Carlos mission, near Monterey, Cal.—Galiano, Relacion, 164, 1802.

Isoquichic. A Tarahumare settlement in Chihuahua, Mexico (Orozco y Berra, Geog., 323, 1864); possibly the same as Sisoquichi, located on some maps near the headwaters of Rio Conchos, lat. 27° 48'.

Ispipewhumaugh. One of the tribes included by the early fur traders under the term Nez Percés (Ross, Fur Hunters, I, 185, 1855). They lived on Columbia r., above the mouth of Snake r., Wash. They were possibly of Shahaptian stock, but are not otherwise identifiable.

Isquepah. A Sumass village on the N. bank of Fraser r., Brit. Col., opposite the lake.—Brit. Col. map, Ind. Aff., Victoria, 1872.

Issi ('deer'). A clan of the Koi phratry of the Chickasaw.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 163, 1877.

Issui (Is'-sui, 'tails that can be seen from the front,' in allusion to a buffalo-tail worn on the hip.—Wissler). A society of the Ikunhkahtsi, or All Comrades, among the Piegan Siksika. It is composed of old men who dress like and dance with and like the Emitaks, though forming a different society.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 221, 1892.

Istapoga (isti 'people', apókita 'to reside'). An Upper Creek settlement, not recorded in the earlier documents; but probably in the neighborhood of the present Eastaboga, Talladega co., Ala.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 133, 1884.

Istikainah (Is-tsi'-kai-nah, 'woods Bloods'). A division of the Kainah. Is-tsi'-kai-nah.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 209, 1892. Woods Bloods.—Ibid.

Istudshilaika (Istudshi-lái'ka, 'where a young thing was found.'—Hawkins). One of the 4 Hillabi villages formerly on the left side of Hillabi cr., 4 m. below Hillabi, Ala.

E-chuse-is-li-gau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 43, 1848. Istudshi-láika.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 133, 1884.

Isutkwa (Isutkwa). An ancient Nukwumiut village on the site of the U. S. Signal station at Pt Barrow, Alaska.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., pl. ii, 1892.

Ita. A tribe of Eskimo between lat. 76° and 78° 18', w. Greenland. Their principal village (Etah), from which they take their name, is at Foulke fjord; their chief hunting grounds are Whale and Wolstenholme sds. When first visited by Ross in 1818 they possessed neither canoes nor arrows. The art of building kaiaks, long forgotten, was introduced after 1873 by immigrants from Baffin land, who came by way of Ellesmere land. They hunt seal, their principal food, on the floes of the bays and walrus at the floe edges, and in summer they kill caribou in the mountains. They live in almost complete isolation, without salt, with scarcely any substance of vegetal origin, in the northernmost climate inhabited by human beings, having no food besides meat, blood, and blubber; no clothing except the skins of birds and animals. Pop. in 1854, according to Kane, 140; in 1884, according to Nourse, 80; Peary enumerated 253 in 1895, reduced by disease to 234 in 1897. Their villages and camping places at various times are: Akpan, Anoatok, Etah, Igludahoming, Igluduasuin, Ikalu, Immangana, Iterlesoa, Iltubling, Kana, Kangerdluksoa, Kangidli, Karmenak, Karsuit, Kiatang, Kingatok, Koinson, Kukan, Navialik, Netlek, Nutun, Pikirlu, Pituarvik, Sarfalik, Udluhusen, Umana, and Uwarosuk. See Kroeber, cited below.

Arctic Highlanders.—Ross, Voy. of Discov., 183, 1819. Etah.—Hayes, Arct. Boat. Jour., 197, 1860. Ita-Eskimos.—Boas in Trans. Anthropol. Soc. Wash., III, 102, 1885. Itá'mi.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., 198, 1892. Itaner.—Bessels, Amer. Nordpol. Exped., 351, 1879. Itanese.—Bessels in Am. Nat., XVIII, 863, 1884. Smith Sound Eskimo.—Kroeber in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XII, 266, 1899.

Itaanyadi (Ita anyadi, 'deer people'). A Biloxi clan.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 243, 1897.

Itaes.—A former Chumashan rancharia connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Itafi. A district of Florida where one of the Timuquanan dialects was spoken.—Pareja (ca. 1614), Arte Leng. Timuq., xxi, 1886.

Itahasiwaki ('old log'). A former Lower Creek town on lower Chattahoochee r., 3 m. above Ft Gaines, Ga., with 100 inhabitants in 1820.

Eto-husse-wakkes.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 364, 1822.

Itamalgi. A Creek clan.

Ítamalgi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 155, 1884.

Támálgi.—Ibid. Tá-mul'-kee.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1877.

Itamameou. A Montagnais mission in 1854, E. of Natashquan, on the n. bank of the St Lawrence, Quebec province.

ítamameou.—Arnaut (1854) in Hind, Lab. Penin., II, 178, 1863. Itamamio.—Hind, ibid., 180.

Itara. A former village in n. Florida, visited by De Soto's troops in 1539.

Ytara.—Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 130, 1850.

Itaywi. A former Luiseño village in the neighborhood of San Luis Rey mission, S. Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 11, 1860.

Itazipcho ('without bows'). A band of the Sans Arcs Sioux, the same as Minishala, though the two were originally distinct.

Itazipco-héa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897. Itaziptco-qtea.—Ibid. Me-ne-sharne.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 34, 1806 (given as a Brulé division). Mini-cala.—Dorsey, op. cit. Minisála.—Ibid. Min-i-sha'.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 375, 1862. Red water band.—Culbertson in Smithsonian, Rep. 1850, 142, 1851.

Itchadak. A former Aleut village on one of the E. Aleutian ids., Alaska.—Coxe, Russ. Discov., 165, 1787.

Itchhasualgi (itchhasua 'beaver', algi 'people'). A Creek clan.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 155, 1884.

Itchualgi (itchu 'deer', algi 'people'). A Creek clan.

E'-cho.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1877. Itchúalgi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 155, 1884.

Iteghu ('burnt faces'). A band of the Hunkpatina or Lower Yanktonai Sioux.

Ité-gu.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 218, 1897.

Ité-xu.—Ibid.

Iterlesoa (Iterl'hsua, 'bay'). An Ita Eskimo settlement on Granville bay, lat. 76° 50', n. Greenland.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., no. 9, map, 1902.

Iteshicha ('bad face'). A band of the Ogla Sioux.

Bad Faces.—Brackett in Smithsonian, Rep. 1876, 467, 1877. E-tach-e-cha.—Ibid. Ité-citca.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 220, 1897. Ité-sica.—Ibid. Oglala-qtea.—Ibid. ('real Ogla').

Iteshichaetanhan ('from bad face'). A band of the Ogla Sioux.

Ité-citca-eta-ha'.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 220, 1897. Ité-sica-etap-haj.—Ibid.

Itthyemamits. A tribe or band of doubtful linguistic affinity, either Chinookan or Shahaptian, living in 1812 on Columbiar in Klickitatco., Wash., nearly opposite The Dalles. Their number was estimated at 600.

Itte-Kai-Mamits.—Stuart in Nouv. Ann. Voy., XII, 26, 1821. Itthyemamits.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 368, 1822.

Itiblung ('portage'). An Ita Eskimo village at the entrance of Inglefield gulf, n. w. Greenland.

I'tiblung.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., 198, 1902. Itibloo.—Peary in Geog. Jour., II, 224, 1898. Itiblu.—Peary, My Arct. Jour., 80, 1893. Itiblu-Netlik.—Sharp, Arct. Highlanders, II, 244, —.

Iticha. A Yokuts (Mariposan) tribe on Kings r., Cal., below the Choinimni and above the Wichikik.

Aiticha.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906 (correct form).

I-tach-ee.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 782, 1899.

Itaches.—Johnston (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 61, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 22, 1852. I-te-che.—Wessells (1853) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 31, 1857.

I-tchees.—McKee et al. (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 75, 1853. It-i'-cha.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 370, 1877. I-to-ches.—Barbour (1852) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 252, 1852. Ituchas.—Lewis in Ind. Aff. Rep., 399, 1858 (a band of the Wattokes high up on Kings r.).

Itijarelling. A summer settlement of Padlimiut Eskimo on Exeter sd., Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Itivimiut ('people of the farther side,' so called by the Eskimo of Labrador proper). A tribe of Labrador Eskimo inhabiting the E. coast of Hudson bay, from lat. 53° to 58°; pop. estimated at 500. These people hunt in the interior half-way across the peninsula, continually scouring the coast for seal and the plains and hills for caribou to obtain necessary food and clothing.

Itivimiut.—Turner in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., II, 99, 1888. Thiviment.—Boas in Am. Antiq., 40, 1888 (misprint).

Itivliarsuk. An Eskimo village in w. Greenland, lat. 73° 30'.—Science, XI, map, 259, 1888.

Itiwa Ateuna ('those of the midmost all'). A Zuñi phratry embracing the Pichi or Mula (Parrot or Macaw), Taa (Seed or Corn), and Yatokya (Sun) clans.—Cushing, inf'n, 1891.

Itliok. A Squawmish village community on the left bank of Squawmish r., Brit. Col.

Itli'og.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900. Yitli'q.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Itokakhtina ('dwellers at the south'). A band of the Sisseton Sioux; an off-shoot of the Basdecheshni.

Itokah-tina.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 217, 1897. Itokaq-tina.—Ibid.

Itomapa. Mentioned by Martin (Hist. La., I, 252, 1820) as a tribe, on the w. side of the lower Mississippi, which sent a deputation to the village of the Acolapissa in 1717 to meet Bienville. Cf. Ibitoupa.

Itrahani. The Cottonwood clan of Cochiti pueblo, N. Mex.

Hiits Hanyi.—Bandelier, Delight Makers, 256, 1890 (same?). Y'traháni hánuch.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 350, 1896 (hanuch='people').

Itsaatiaga (It-sa'-a-ti-a-ga). A Paviotso band formerly living about Unionville, w. Nev.—Powell, Paviotso MS., B. A. E., 1881.

Itscheabine. A division of the Assiniboin, numbering 850, including 250 warriors, in 100 tipis, when seen by Lewis and Clark in 1804, at which time they roved on the headwaters of Mouse (Souris), Qu'Appelle, and Assiniboine rs., in the United States and Canada. In 1808, according to Henry (Coues, New Light, II, 522, 1897), they were at enmity with the Dakota, Shoshoni, and with some of the Arikara and other tribes, but were friendly with the Cree. They lived by hunting, conducting trade with the Hudson's Bay, Northwest, and X. Y. fur companies, whose posts were 150 m. N. of Ft Mandan. They are said to have paid little attention to their engagements and were great drunkards. In 1853 they numbered 10 lodges under chief Les Yeux Gris.

(F. W. H.)

Gens de Feuilles.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, 217, 1893. Gens de la Feuille.—Badin (1830) in Ann. de la Prop. de la Foi, IV, 536, 1843 (same?). Gens des fees or Girls.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 104, 1905 (given as traders' nickname). Gens des filles.—Maximilian, Trav., 194, 1843. Gens des Tee.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, op. cit. Girls' band.—Hayden quoted by Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 222, 1897. Itscheabine.—Maximilian, op. cit. Little Girl Assiniboines.—Coues, Henry and Thompson Jour. (1808), II, 522, 1897. Na-co'-tah O-see-gah.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, op. cit. Osgeegah.—Ibid. We-che-ap-pe-nah.—Denig (1853) quoted by Dorsey, op. cit. Wi-ié'-ap-i-nah.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 387, 1862. Witei'ya'-pina.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 223, 1897.

Itseyi (Itséyi, 'new green place,' or 'place of fresh green'; often falsely rendered 'Brasstown,' from the confusion of Itséyi and Ūtsaiyí', the latter term signifying 'brass'). The name of several former Cherokee settlements. One was on Brasstown cr. of Tugaloo r., in Oconee co., S. C.; another was on Little Tennessee r., near the present Franklin, Macon co., N. C., and probably about the junction of Cartoogaja cr.; a third, known to the whites as Brasstown, was on upper Brasstown cr. of Hiwassee r., Towns co., Ga.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 523, 1900. Echay.—Mouzon map quoted by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 143, 1887. Echia.—Mooney, op. cit. Echoe.—Barttram, Travels, 371, 1792. Echoee.—Doc. of 1755 quoted by Royce, op. cit. Etchoe.—Scaife, Hist. Catawba, 7, 1896. Etchowee.—Mooney, op. cit.

Ittatso. The principal village of the Ucluelet (q. v.) on Ucluelet arm of Barclay sd., w. coast of Vancouver id.—Can. Ind. Aff., 263, 1902.

Ituc. A former Chumashan village near Santa Barbara, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 24, 1863.

Itukemuk. A former Luiseño village in the neighborhood of San Luis Rey mission, S. Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 11, 1860.

Ivan. A Kaiyuhkhotana village on the divide between Unalaklik and Yukon rs., Alaska. Allen (Rep. Alaska, 131, 1877) gave the population as 69. Ivan's barráborá.—Dall, Alaska, 531, 1870.

Ivigtitte. A variety of paragonite. According to Dana (Text-book of Mineral., 354, 1888) it occurs in yellow scales, also granular, with cryolite from Greenland. It was named from Ivigtuk, Greenland, where it was discovered, a place-name derived from the Eskimo language. The -ite is an English suffix. (A. F. C.)

Iviglut. A settlement of Europeans and Eskimo in s. w. Greenland, lat. 61° 15'.—Nansen, First Crossing, II, 182, 1890.

Ivikat. A missionary station 16 m. N. of Julianehaab, s. Greenland.—Koldewey, German Arct. Exped., 203, 1874.

Ivimiut. An Eskimo settlement near Lindenov fjord, E. Greenland, with 12 inhabitants in 1829.—Graah, Exped., 114, 1837.

Ivitachuco. A former principal town of the Apalachee, possibly near the present Wacahotee, Fla.

Attachooka.—Archdale (1707) in Carroll, Hist. Coll. S. C., II, 352, 1836. Ibitachka.—Ibid., 575. Ivitachma.—Bancroft, Hist. U. S., II, 194, 1884. Ivitachua.—Jefferys, Fr. Dom. Am., West Indies map, 1761. Ivi-ta-chuco.—Biedma (1544) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 99, 1850. Ivitanoa.—Jefferys, Fr. Dom. Am., 135, map, 1761. Vita-chuco.—Gentil, of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 134, 1850. Yvitachua.—Bartram, Trav., I, map, 1799.

Ivory. See Bonework.

Ivy Log. A Cherokee settlement, about the period of the removal of the tribe to Indian Ter. in 1839, on Ivy Log cr., Union co., N. Ga. (J. M.)

Iwai. A former Yaquina village on the N. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.

I-wai.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Iwayusota ('uses up by begging for'; 'uses up with the mouth'). A band of the Oglala Sioux.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 220, 1897.

Iwi. The Eagle gens of the Kadodachacho.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1093, 1896.

Ixtacan. A pueblo of the Cora and the seat of a mission; situated on the S. bank of the Rio San Pedro, about lat. 22°, Tepic, Mexico.

Diskatan.—Hrdlicka, inf'n, 1906. S. Pedro de Ixtacan.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 280, 1864.

Iyaaye (I-ya-äye, 'sunflower'). An Apache clan or band at San Carlos agency and Ft Apache in 1881.—Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 111, 1890. See Yachin.

Iyakoza ('wart on a horse's leg'). A band of the Brulé Teton Sioux.

A-ä-ko-za.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Vol., 376, 1862. Big Ankle band.—Ibid. Big-legged horses.—Culbertson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1850, 141, 1851. Iyakoza.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 218, 1897. Iyak'ozä.—Ibid.

Iyama Ateuna ('those of the upper-most'). A phratry embracing the Kyakyali (Eagle) and Ana (Tobacco) clans of the Zuñi.—Cushing, inf'n, 1891.

Iyis. A Karok village on Klamath r., Cal., inhabited in 1860.

I-yiss.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 23, 1860.

Iza. A settlement of which Coronado was informed by the Indian known as The Turk, while on the Rio Grande in New Mexico in 1540-41, as a place, 6 or 7 days' journey distant, at which the army could obtain provisions on its way to "Copala" and Quivira. It was possibly imaginary; if not, it may have been a settlement of the Eyish, a Caddoan tribe of Texas. See Mota-Padilla (1742), Nueva Galicia, 164, 1870. (F. W. H.)

Iztacans. A name adopted by Rafinesque (introd. to Marshall, Ky., I, 26, 1824) for an imaginary prehistoric race of the United States.

Jack. See Kintpuash.

Jackash. A name of the American mink (Putorius vison) in use in the fur country (Coues, N. Am. Must., 172, 1877). From atchâkas, the name of this animal in the Cree dialect of Algonquian. This word Lacombe (Dict., 316, 1874) explains as a diminutive of wittakûy, signifying 'genitals,' in reference to the glands of the creature. (A. F. C.)

Jack Indians. An unidentified tribe mentioned by Dobbs (Hudson Bay, 13, 1744), who states that in 1731 they came to trade at the mouth of Albany r., N. W. Ter., Canada. Named as distinct from Moose River Indians (Monsoni), Sturgeon Indians (Nameuilini), and French Indians.

Jackquyome (Jack-quiy-ome). A body of Salish of Kamloops agency, Brit. Col.; pop. 257 in 1884, when their name appears for the last time.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1884, 188.

Jacobs Cabins. A settlement on Youghiogheny r. in 1753 (Gist in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 3d s., v. 102, 1836). It may have been near Jacobs cr., Fayette co., Pa., and was perhaps named from Captain Jacobs. (J. M.)

Jacobs, Captain. A Delaware chief who participated in the ambush of Gen. Braddock's army, and a leader in conjunction with Shingis in the raids and massacres on the frontiers of the settlements of Pennsylvania that followed the British disaster. A price was set on both their heads. They had a rendezvous at Kittanning, Pa., whither they took their spoils and captives. Col. John Armstrong marched against this place and assailed it at daybreak on Sept. 8, 1756. The Pennsylvanians surrounded the village and the Indians defended themselves bravely but hopelessly from their burning wigwams. Jacobs was killed with all his family.—Drake, Bk. Inds., 534, 1880.

Jacona (Span. form of Tewa Sákona). A former small Tewa pueblo situated with Cuyamunque a short distance W. of Nambe, on the S. side of Pojoaque r., Santa Fé co., N. Mex. At the time of the Pueblo rebellion of 1680 it was a visita of Nambe mission. It was abandoned in 1696, its inhabitants settling among the other Tewa pueblos, and in 1702 the grant of land that had been made to it by Spain became the property of Ignacio de Roybal. See Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 85, 1892. (F. W. H.)

Iacona.—Buschmann, Neu-Mex., 230, 1858. Jacona.—Davis, El Gringo, 88, 1857. Jacona.—Vetancurt (1693) Teatro Mex., III, 317, 1871. Sacona.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 85, 1892 (Jacona, or). Sa'kona.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1885 (Tewa pronunciation). S. Domingo de Xacomo.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. S. Domingo de Xacoms.—Walch, Charte America, 1805. S. Domingo de Xacona.—D'Anville, map Am. Sept., 1746. Xacona.—De l'Isle, carte Mexiq. et Floride, 1703. Xacomo.—De l'Isle, Atlas Nouveau, map 60, 1733.

Jacuencacahel. A former rancharia under the mission of San Francisco Xavier de Biaundo, in Lower California.—Writer of 1728 in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., v, 187, 1857.

Jade. See Nephrite.

Jagavans. The name of a small tribe formerly on the Texas coast; mentioned by Harris (Coll. Voy., i, 802, 1705) as one of those visited about 1530 by Cabeza de Vaca, as not far from the Chorroco, and as neighbors of the Mariames. Possibly the Yguases of Cabeza de Vaca's Relation (Smith trans., 92, 1871).

Jagaya. A former village in a well-watered country 50 leagues from Santa Helena and 20 leagues from the sea, in n. w. South Carolina; visited by Juan Pardo in 1565.—Vandera (1567) in Smith, Colec. Doc. Fla., i, 16, 1857.

Jakobshavn. A Danish missionary station and trading post on Disko bay, w. Greenland, established in 1741. Pop. 300 in 1867.

Jacobs-haven.—Crantz, Hist. of Greenland, i, 15, 1767.

Jamac. A former rancharia, probably of the Sobaipuri of s. Arizona, and a visita of the mission of Guevavi in 1732.—Alegre quoted by Bancroft, No. Mex. States, i, 524, 1884.

Jamaica. A former pueblo of the Opata in n. e. Sonora, Mexico, under the jurisdiction of the municipality of Cumpus, in the district of Moctezuma (Orozco y Berra, Geog., 343, 1864). It contained 9 civilized inhabitants in 1900.

Jameco. The supposed name of "a small tribe or family of Indians subject to some other," thought to have dwelt formerly on Long Island, N. Y., near Jamaica, which derives its name from the band.

Jameco.—Thompson, Long Id., 382, 1839. Jemaco.—Flint, Early Long Id., 198, 1896.

Janemo. See Ninigret.

Janos. An extinct tribe which, with the Jocomes, inhabited the region of Chihuahua, Mexico, between Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, and Fronteras. Bandelier (Nation, July 2, 1885) classes them as the most southerly band of the Apache, called after presidio Janos in n. w. Chihuahua. He believes that the tribe slowly arose after 1684 and was composed of Lipan, Mescalero, and other Apache stragglers, together with renegade Suma, Toboso, Tarahumare, and Opata Indians, and Spanish captives. Missions were established among them at an early date at Janos and Carretas, but were abandoned on account of the incursions of the Apache proper, with whom the Janos were subsequently merged. Frequent mention is made of the Janos by Jesuit missionaries during the first half of the 18th century, but of their language and customs almost nothing is known.

Hanos.—Linschoten, Descr. de l'Am., map 1, 1638. Hanos.—Benavides, Memorial, 7, 1630. Jamos.—

Duro, Peñalosa, 63, 1882. Janeros.—Bandelier in N. Y. Nation, July 2, 1885. Janos.—Kino (1690) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., i, 230, 1856. Yanos.—Mühlenpfordt, Mejico, ii, 521, 1844.

Jantamais. Mentioned by Domenech (Deserts of N. Am., i, 441, 1860) in a list of tribes without further notice. Possibly the Yanktonai; otherwise unknown.

Japazaws. A Powhatan Indian, chief of Potomac and a friend of the English. In 1611 he inveigled Pocahontas on board an English ship to be detained as a hostage for the good behavior of Powhatan, her father.—Drake, Bk. Inds., 357, 1880.

Jappayon. A former village connected with San Carlos mission, Cal., and said to have been Esselen.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860.

Japul. Given by the Yavapai to Fray Francisco Garcés in 1776 (Diary, 405, 1900) as the name, seemingly, of a Yuman tribe; locality not recorded, but possibly in the vicinity of the Rio Colorado.

Japiel.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 349, 1864 (misprinting Garcés). Japui.—Garcés, op. cit., 444. Tapiel.—Cortez (1799) in Whipple, Pac. R. R. Rep., III, pt. 3, 126, 1856 (misprint).

Jars. See Dishes, Pottery, Receptacles.

Jasniga. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with San Juan Bautista mission, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Nov. 25, 1860.

Jasper. An impure, opaque form of chalcedony displaying various shades of color, the yellow, red, and brown hues predominating. When grayish or greenish and mottled with red the name blood-stone is sometimes applied. It was much used by the native tribes for flaked implements of several varieties, and more rarely for hammers, celts, axes, and ornaments. It occurs in irregular masses, or pockets, in connection with other formations in many sections of the United States, and was often obtained by the Indians in the form of fugitive pebbles and boulders; but in Pennsylvania, and perhaps in other states, it was quarried from the original beds. The best known quarries are in Bucks, Lehigh, and Berks cos., E. Pa. Jasper was extensively worked by the ancient inhabitants of Converse and neighboring counties of Wyoming, who found this material as well as the translucent varieties of chalcedony in connection with the quartzite of the region. See Chalcedony.

Consult Dorsey in Field Columb. Mus. Pub., Anthropol. ser., II, no. 4, 1900; Holmes in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 1897; Mercer in Am. Anthropol., VII, 80, 1894.

(w. H. H.)

Jatonabine ('people of the rocks'). An Assiniboin band living in 1808 in n. w. Manitoba, and having 40 tipis.

E-an-to-ah.—Denig quoted by Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 222, 1897 ('Stone Indians'; "the original appellation for the whole nation"). Easab.—Franklin, Narr., 104, 1823. Gens de Roche.—Ibid., 306. Gens des Roches.—Hayden, Ethnogr. and Philol. Mo. Val., 387, 1862. Gens des roches.—Ind.

Aff. Rep., 289, 1854. I'-an-to'-an.—Hayden, Ethnol. and Philol. Mo. Val., 387, 1862. Ie-ska-pi.—Am. Natur., 829, 1882. Iya-to'-wa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 223, 1897 (= 'stone village'). Jatonabiné.—Maximilian, Trav., 194, 1843. Rocks.—Larpeur (1829), Narr., I, 109, 1898. Stone Indians.—Maximilian, Trav., 194, 843 (so called by the English).

Jaumalturgo. A rancheria of the Pima or the Sobaipuri in 1697, s. of the ruin of Casa Grande, in the present Arizona.

San Gregoris Jaumalturgo.—Mange quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 301, 1853 (Gregoris = Gregorio).

Jeaga. A village at the s. extremity of Florida, about 1570.

Gaga.—Fontaneda (ca. 1575) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., XX, 32, 1841. Teaga.—Shipp, Hist. Fla., 587, 1881. Jaega.—Fontaneda, Narr., Smith trans., 21, 1854. Teaga.—Fontaneda in Ternaux-Compans, op. cit., 23. Teago.—Ibid., 32.

Jeboaltae. A former village, presumably Costanoan, near San Juan Bautista mission, Cal.

Jeboaltae.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Nov. 23, 1860. Jeboaltac.—Engelhardt, Franciscans in Cal., 398, 1897.

Jedakne. A village, Iroquois or Delaware, that existed in the 18th century on the w. branch of Susquehanna r., probably on the site of Dewart, Northumberland co., Pa. (J. N. B. H.)

Jedacne.—Lattre, map, 1784. Jedakne.—Homann Heirs' map, 1756.

Jedandago. A former Seneca hamlet, E. of Irondequoit bay, L. Ontario, N. Y.—Doc. of 1687 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., III, 434, 1853.

Jemez (from Hä'-mish, or Hae'-mish, the Keresan name of the pueblo.—Bandelier). A village on the n. bank of Jemez r., about 20 m. n. w. of Bernalillo, N. Mex. According to tradition the Jemez had their origin in the n., at a lagoon called Uabunatota (apparently identical with the Shipapulima and Cibobe of other Pueblo tribes), whence they slowly drifted into the valleys of the upper tributaries of the Rio Jemez—the Guadalupe and San Diego—where they resided in a number of villages, and finally into the sandy valley of the Jemez proper, which they now occupy, their habitat being bounded on the s. by the range of the w. division of the Rio Grande Keresan tribes—the Sia and Santa Ana. Castañeda, the chronicler of Coronado's expedition of 1541, speaks of 7 pueblos of the Jemez tribe in addition to 3 others in the province of Aguas Calientes, identified by Simpson with the Jemez Hot Springs region. Espejo in 1583 also mentions that 7 villages were occupied by the Jemez, while in 1598 Oñate heard of 11 but saw only 8. In the opinion of Bandelier it is probable that 10 pueblos were inhabited by the tribe in the early part of the 16th century.

Following is a list of the pueblos formerly occupied by the Jemez people so far as known. The names include those given by Oñate, which may be identical with some of the others: Amushungkwa, Anyukwinu, Astialakwa, Bulitzequa, Catroo, Ceca, Guatituti, Guayoguia, Gyusiwa, Hanakwa, Kiashita, Kiatsukwa, Mecastria, Nokyuntseleta, Nonyishagi, Ostyalakwa, Patoqua, Pebulikwa, Pekwiligii, Potre, Seshiua, Setoqua, To-wakwa, Trea, Tyajuindena, Tyasoliwa, Uahatzaa, Wabakwa, Yjar, Zolatungze-zhii.

Doubtless the reason for the division of the tribe into so many lesser village communities instead of aggregating in a single pueblo for defense against the persistent aggressiveness of the Navaho, according to Bandelier, was the fact that cultivable areas in the sandy valley of the Jemez and its lower tributaries are small and at somewhat considerable distances from one another; but another and perhaps even more significant reason was that the Navaho were apparently not troublesome to the Pueblos at the time of the Spanish conquest. On the establishment of Spanish missions in this section and the introduction of improved methods of utilizing the water for irrigation, however, the

JEMEZ MAN AND WIFE. (VROMAN, PHOTO.)

Jemez were induced to abandon their pueblos one by one, until about the year 1622 they became consolidated into the two settlements of Gyusiwa and probably Astialakwa, mainly through the efforts of Fray Martin de Arvide. These pueblos are supposed to have been the seats of the missions of San Diego and San Joseph, respectively, and both contained chapels probably from 1618. Astialakwa was permanently abandoned prior to the Pueblo revolt of 1680, but in the meantime another pueblo (probably Patoqua) seems to have been established, which became the mission of San Juan de los Jemez. About the middle of the 17th century the Jemez conspired with the Navaho against the Spaniards, but the outbreak plotted was repressed by the hanging of 29 of the Jemez. A few years later the Jemez were again confederated with the Navaho and some Tigua against the Spaniards, but the contemplated rebellion was again quelled, the Navaho soon resuming their hostility toward the village dwellers. In the revolt of the Pueblos in Aug., 1680, the Jemez took a prominent part. They murdered the missionary at Gyusiwa (San Diego de Jemez), but the missionary at San Juan de los Jemez, with the alcalde mayor and three soldiers, succeeded in escaping. In 1681, when Gov. Otermin attempted to regain possession of New Mexico, the Jemez retreated to the mesas, but returned to their village on the evacuation of the region by the Spaniards. Here they probably remained until 1688, when Cruzate appeared, causing them to flee again to the heights. When Vargas came in 1692 the Jemez were found on the mesa in a large pueblo, but they were induced to descend and to promise the Spaniards their support. The Jemez, however, failed to keep their word, but waged war during 1693 and 1694 against their Keresan neighbors on account of their fidelity to the Spaniards. Vargas returned to the Jemez in 1693, when they reiterated their false promises. In July, 1694, he again went to Jemez with 120 Spaniards and some allies from Santa Ana and Sia. The mesa was stormed, and after a desperate engagement, in which 84 natives were killed, the pueblo was captured. In the month following, Vargas (after destroying this village, another on a mesa some distance below, and one built by their Santo Domingo allies 3 leagues N.) returned to Santa Fé with 361 prisoners and a large quantity of stores. From this time the only then existing pueblo of the Jemez reoccupied was San Diego, or Gyusiwa, which was inhabited until 1696, when the second revolt occurred, the Indians killing their missionary and again fleeing to the mesas, where they constructed temporary shelters. Here they were joined by some Navaho, Zuñi, and Acoma allies, and made hostile demonstrations toward the Sia, Santa Ana, and San Felipe people, but in June of the year mentioned they were repulsed by a small detachment of Spaniards from Bernalillo and Sia with a loss of 30 men, 8 of whom were Acoma. The defeated Jemez this time fled to the Navaho country, where they remained several years, finally returning to their former home and constructing the present village, called by them Walatooa, "Village of the Bear." In 1728, 108 of the inhabitants died of pestilence. In 1782 Jemez was made a visita of the mission of Sia.

The Jemez clans are: Waha (Cloud), Seh (Eagle), Son (Badger), Daahl (Earth), Kyiahl (Crow), Pe (Sun), Kyunu (Corn), Sungki (Turquoise), Weha (Calabash), Yang (Coyote), Kio (Pine).

The population of the tribe in 1890 was 428; in 1904, 498, including a score of descendants of the remnant of the Pecos (q. v.), who left their old home on the upper Rio Pecos in 1838 to join their kindred.

Consult Bancroft, Arizona and N. Mex., 1889; Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 200-217, 1892; Hewett in Bull. 32, B. A. E., 1906; Holmes in Am. Anthrop., vii, no. 2, 1905. See also Pecos, Pueblos, Tanoan.

(F. W. H.)
Amayes.—Duro, Don Diego de Peñalosa, 128, 1882.
Ameges.—Siguenza quoted by Buschmann, Neu-Mex., 228, 264, 1858. Ameias. Espejo (1583) quoted by Mendoza (1586) in Hakluyt Soc. Pub., xv, 245, 1854. Ameias.—Mendoza in Hakluyt, Voy., iii, 469, 1600. Amejes.—Ibid., 462. Ameries.—Squier in Am. Review, 523, Nov. 1848. Amies.—Davis, Span. Conq., N. Mex., 252, 1869. Amios.—Ibid., map. Amires.—Ogilby, Amer., 294, 1671. Djemez.—Gallatin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., xxvii, 280, 1851. Emeas.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 206, 1892. Emeges.—Espejo (1583) in Doc. Inéd., xv, 179, 1871. Emenes.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 132, 1889. Emes.—Cordova (1619) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., x, 444, 1838. Emes.—Villagran, Hist. Nueva Mex., 155, 1610. Emexes.—Espejo (1583) in Doc. Inéd., xv, 116, 1871. Emmes.—Ofiate (1598), ibid., xvi, 102, 260, 1871. Euimes.—Columbus Memorial Vol., 155, 1893. Gemes.—Villa-Señor, Theatro Am., pt. 2, 421, 1748. Gemex.—Zárate-Salmeron (ca. 1629) quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, i, 600, 1882. Gemez.—Humboldt, Atlas Nouv. Espagne, carte 1, 1811. Gomez.—Arrow-smith, map N. A. 1795, ed. 1814. Haemish.—Bandelier in Revue d'Ethnog., 203, 1886 (Queres name). Ha-mish.—Bandelier in N. Y. Staatszeitung, June 28, 1885 (Queres name). Ha-way-wah-lah-too-waw.—Simpson in Rep. Sec. War, 143, 1850 (proper name of pueblo). He'-mai.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Isleta name). Hemeos.—Zárate-Salmeron (1629) quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 205, 1892. Hemes.—Castañeda (ca. 1565) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., ix, 133, 1838. Hémés.—Benavides (1630) quoted by Gallatin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., xxvii, 305, 1851. Hemeshitse.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Laguna and San Felipe name). He'-mishu-tsa.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Sia form). Hemez.—Squier in Am. Review, 522, Nov. 1848 (misquoting Castañeda). He mi.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Santa Ana name). He-mi-ma'.—Ibid. (Picuris name). Hémishitz.—Ibid. (Acoma name). Hemex.—Zárate-Salmeron (ca. 1629) quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 205, 1892. Hermes.—Curtis, Children of the Sun, 121, 1883 (misquoting Coronado). Hernes.—Kern in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iv, 32, 39, 1854. He'-wa'.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Pecos name of pueblo). Hiem-ai.—Gatschet, Isleta MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885 (Isleta name of pueblo). Hiemide.—Ibid. (pl. Hiemnin; Isleta name for the people). James.—Marcy in Rep. Sec. War, 196, 1850. Jamez.—Gallegas (1814) in Emory, Recon., 478, 1848. Jemas.—Wislizenus, Memoir, 24, 1848. Jemes.—Mendoza (1742) in Mellé, Two Thousand Miles, 213, 1867. Jemex.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 12, 1863. Jemez.—Simpson in Rep. Sec. War, 59, 1850. Jemmes.—Peet in Am. Antiq., xvii, 354, 1895. Jemos.—Loew (1875) in Wheeler Surv. Rep., vii, 345, 1879. Jenies.—Calhoun in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 633, 1853. Jermz.—Kern, ibid., iv, 39, 1854. Jeures.—Ward in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1867, 210, 1868. Jimenez.—Escudero, Not. Estad. Chihuahua, 180, 1824. Jumez.—Arch. Inst. Rep., v, 37, 1884. Mai-déc-kiz-ne.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 6, 1884 ('Wolf neck': Navaho name). Tames.—Brackenridge, Early Spanish Discov., 10, 1857. Temes.—Gatschet in Mag. Am. Hist., 259, Apr. 1882. Temex.—Alegre, Hist. Comp. Jesus, i, 336, 1841. Tuhua.—Bandelier in Ausland, 813, 1882 (='houses': proper name of the pueblo). Tu'-wa.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (own name of pueblo). Uala-to-hua.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iii, 260, 1890 ('village of the bear': own name of pueblo). Ual-to-hua.—Ibid., iv, 203, 1892. Vallatooa.—Loew in Wheeler Surv. Rep., vii, 344, 1879. Wa-la-nah.—Jouvenceau in Cath. Pion., i, no. 9, 13, 1906. Walatoa.—Gatschet in Mag. Am. Hist., 259, Apr. 1882. Wa'-la-tu-wa.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895. Wong'-ge'.—Ibid. ('Navaho place': Santa Clara and San Ildefonso name). Xemes.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 950, 1736. xemes.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 6, 1884. Xeméz.—Ruxton, Adventures, 194, 1848. Yemez.—Latham, Var. of Man, 396, 1850. Zemas.—Simpson in Jour. Am. Geog. Soc., v, 195, 1874.

Jennesedaga.—A former Seneca village on the right bank of Allegheny r., 17 m. above Warren, Pa., which in 1816 was the residence of the celebrated Cornplanter; it then consisted of 12 houses.—Day, Hist. Coll. Pa., 656, 1853.

Jenzenaque. A former Natchez village. Dumont (Mémoire, II, 97, 1753) mentions it in addition to Great, Flour, Apple, and Gray villages, in the early part of the 18th century. The fifth village, mentioned by most authors of his period, is Terre Blanche, and Jenzenaque may be its Natchez name.

Jerome Big Eagle. See Wamdetanka.

Jeramestown. A former Delaware village near the present Jeromesville, Ashland co., Ohio, on a section of land set aside for the use of the Delawares by act of Mar. 3, 1807, but ceded to the United States by treaty of Sept. 29, 1817. It received its name from Jean Baptiste Jerome, an early French trader. See Brown, West. Gaz., 314, 1817; Howe, Hist. Coll. Ohio, i, 255, 1898; Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ohio map, 1899.

Jesus María. A pueblo of the Cora on the E. bank of Rio San Pedro, here known as the Rio Jesus María, in the N. part of the Territory of Tepic, about lat. 22° 40', Mexico. It was the seat of a mission, of which San Francisco was a visita. See Orozco y Berra, Geog., 380, 1864; Lumloltz, Unknown Mexico, i, 487; II, 16, map, 1902.

Jesus María y José. A Franciscan mission founded by Fathers Casañas and Bordoy, in 1690, in the vicinity of and as an adjunct to the mission of San Francisco de los Tejas (q. v.) in Texas, and abandoned in 1693. Its history is the same as that of the parent mission. See Bancroft, No. Mex. States, i, 417-418, 666, 1886; Garrison, Texas, 1903.

Santa María.—Bancroft, op. cit. Santísimo Nombre de María.—Ibid.

Jet, Lignite, Anthracite, Cannel coal. Carbonaceous materials used to some extent by Indians. Jet of excellent quality occurs in Colorado, and the Indians of the arid region employ it for jewelry and various carvings. Good examples of lignite ornaments were obtained by Fewkes from the ancient ruins of Arizona, and of jet by Pepper from the ruins of Chaco canyon, N. Mex. Among the latter is a well-sculptured frog decorated with inlaid designs in turquoise and shell. Cannel-coal objects are found in the Ohio valley mounds, but few specimens carved from anthracite are known. A small, well-carved human head of jet-like stone was obtained by Smith from a shell heap on lower Frazer r., Brit. Col., and Niblack says that the N. W. coast tribes pulverize lignite and mix it with oil for paint.

Consult Fewkes in 22d Rep. B. A. E., 1903; Niblack in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1888, 1890; Pepper in Am. Anthropol., VII, 1905; Smith in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., IV, 1903. (W. H. H.)

Jetti. A former Cochimi rancheria 3 leagues N. of Loreto mission, Lower California.—Picolo (1702) in Lettres Edifiantes, II, 63, 1841.

Jews and Indians. See Lost Ten Tribes, Popular fallacies.

Jiaspi. A former rancheria of the So-baipuri, visited by Father Kino about 1697 and by him named Rosario. It was situated on the W. bank of Rio San Pedro, probably in the vicinity of the present village of Prospect, s. Arizona. (F. W. H.)

Jiaspi.—Kino (1697) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., I, 279, 1856. Rosario.—Bernal (1697) quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 356, 1887, (Jiaspi, or).

Jicamorachic. A former Tarahumare settlement in Chihuahua, Mexico.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 323, 1864.

Jicara. (Mex. Span.: 'small gourd vessel or basket'). A former Tepehuane pueblo in Durango, Mexico, and the seat of a Spanish mission.

S. Pedro Jicara.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 319, 1864.

Jicarilla (Mex. Span.: 'little basket'). An Athapaskan tribe, first so called by Spaniards because of their expertness in making vessels of basketry. They apparently formed a part of the Vaqueros of early Spanish chronicles, although, according to their creation legend, they have occupied from the earliest period the mountainous region of S. E. Colorado and N. New Mexico, their range at various periods extending eastward to W. Kansas and Oklahoma, and into N. W. Texas. The Arkansas, Rio Grande, and Canadian rs. figure in their genesis myth (Mooney in Am. Anthropol., XI, 200, 1898), but their traditions seem to center about Taos and the heads of Arkansas r. They regard the kindred Mescaleros and also the Navahos as enemies, and, according to Mooney, their alliances and blood mixture have been with the Ute and Taos. In language they are more closely related to the Mescaleros than to the Navaho or the Arizona Apache. The Jicarillas were first mentioned by this name early in the 18th century. Later, their different bands were designated Carlanes, Calchufines, Quar-telejos, etc., after their habitat or chiefs. The Spaniards established a mission among them within a few leagues of Taos, N. Mex., in 1733, which prospered for only a short time. They were regarded as a worthless people by both the Spanish settlers of New Mexico and their American successors, in raids for plunder the worst of the Apache tribes, more treacherous and cruel and less brave and energetic warriors than the Ute, but equally fond of intoxicants. While they sometimes planted on a small scale, they regarded theft as a natural means of support. The governor of New Mexico in 1853 induced 250 of the tribe to settle on Rio Puerco, but failure to ratify the treaty caused them to go on the warpath, maintaining hostility until their defeat by United States troops in 1854. Henceforward they were nominally at peace, although committing many petty thefts. In 1870 they resided on the Maxwell grant in N. E. New Mexico, the sale of which necessitated their removal. In 1872 and again in 1878 an attempt was made to move them s. to Ft Stanton, but most of them were permitted to go to the Tierra Amarilla, on the N. confines of the territory, on a reservation of 900 sq. m. set aside in 1874. Their annuities being suspended in 1878 on account of their refusal to move southward in accordance with an act of Congress of that year, they resorted to thieving. In 1880 the act of 1878 was repealed, and a new reservation was set aside on the Rio Navajo, to which they were removed. Here they remained until 1883, when they were transferred to Ft Stanton, but in 1887 were again returned to the reservation set aside for them in the Tierra Amarilla region by Executive order of Feb. 11 of that year, where they have since resided. Of this reservation 129,313.35 acres have been allotted to the Indians, and 280.44 acres reserved for mission, school, and agency purposes; the remainder, comprising 286,400 acres, is unallotted. Their population in 1905 was 795. The present divisions of the Jicarilla, as recorded by Mooney (MS., B. A. E., 1897), are: Apatziltlizihihi, Dachizhozhin, Golkahin, Ketsilind, and Saitinde. (F. W. H.)

JICARILLA. (AGUSTÍN VIJIL)

Apaches Xicarillas.—Cortez (1799) in Pac. R. R. Rep., III, 119, 1856. Bé'-xai.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 6, 1884 (Navaho name). Gicarillas.—MS. of 1784 quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, v, 184, 1890. Hickory.—Coues, Garcés Diary, 222, 1900. Icarilla Apaches.—Army in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1867, 204, 1868. Icarilla Apaches.—Ibid., 217, 1861. Icarilla Apaches.—Ibid., 1864, 495, 1865. Icarillas.—Bent (1846) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 11, 1848. Jacarilla Apaches.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 328, 1875. Jacarilla Apaches.—Bell, New Tracks in N. Am., I, 184, 1869. Jecorilla.—Latham in Proc. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., VI, 74, 1854. Jicaras.—Gibbs, Letter to Higgins, B. A. E., 1866. Jicarelo Apaches.—Meriwether in Sen. Ex. Doc. 69, 34th Cong., 1st sess., 15, 1856. Jicarilla Apache.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 12, 1863. Jicarilla.—Rivera, Diario y Derrotero, leg. 950, 1736. Jicarilla Apaches.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 434, 1853. Jicarillos.—Morgan in N. Am. Rev., 58, 1870. Jicarrilla Apache.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 55, 35th Cong., 1st sess., 11, 1858. Jicarrilla Apaches.—Bell in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 240, 1869. Jickorie.—Higgins, MS. notes on Apache, B. A. E., 1866. Jicorilla.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 243, 1851. Jicorilla Apaches.—Simpson, MS. vocab., B. A. E. Kinya-indé.—Mooney, field notes, B. A. E., 1897 (Mescalero name). K'op-tagui.—Ibid. ('mountain Apache'; Kiowan name). Northern Apaches.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 142, 1850. Pe-x'gé.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 6, 1884 (Navaho name). Pi'-ke-e-wai-ne.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Picuris name). Tan-nah-shisen.—Yarrow in Wheeler Surv. Rep., VII, 470, 1879 ('men of the woodland'). Tash'né.—Mooney, field notes, B. A. E., 1897 (Mescalero name, possibly from tashi, 'above', 'beyond'). Ticorillas.—Simpson in Rep. Sec. War, 57, 1850 (misprint). Tindé.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (own name). Tu-sa-be'.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 8, 1884 (Tesuque name). Xicarillas.—MS. of 1724 quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, v, 192, 1890.

Jitisorichi. A former pueblo, apparently of the Teguima Opatá, on the upper Rio Sonora between Bacuachi and Arizpe, in Sonora, Mexico. It was doubtless abandoned prior to the 17th century.

Jitisorichi.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 489, 1892. Ti-ji-só-ri-chi.—Bandelier, Gilded Man, 182, 1893 (misprint).

Jlaacs. A former Chumashan village near Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.

Jlaacs.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861. Jlaacs.—Ibid.

Joasseh ('heron'). An Iroquois clan. Jo-ás'-seh.—Morgan, League Iroq., 80, 1851 (Seneca form). Otinanchahé.—French writer (1666) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 47, 1855.

Jocomes. A warlike nomadic tribe of the 17th and 18th centuries which, with the Janos, ranged to the N. of the Casas Grandes in Chihuahua, Mexico, and westward to Fronteras, Sonora, later becoming absorbed by the Apache (Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 91, 1890). Orozco y Berra (Geog., 59, 1864) classes them as a part of the Faraon Apache and as distinct from the Jacomis, who, however, were doubtless the same. (F. W. H.)

Hojomes.—De l'Isle, Carte Mex. et Floride, 1703.
Jacome.—Humboldt, Atlas, 1st map, 1811. Jacomis.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 59, 1864. Jacomeos.—Doc. ca. 1702 in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., v, 129, 1857. Jocomes.—Kino (1690), ibid. 1, 230, 1856. Jocomis.—Rudo Ensayo (ca. 1763), 154, 1863. Xocomes.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 591, 1736.

Joconostla. A former Tepehuane pueblo in Durango, Mexico, and the seat of a Spanish mission.

S. José de Joconostla.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 318, 1864.

John Day. A Shahaptian tribe, speaking the Tenino language, formerly living on John Day r., Oreg., having their principal village 4 m. above the mouth. By treaty of 1855 they were placed on Warm Springs res., Oreg., where there are about 50 survivors. (L. F.)

Dock-spūs.—U. S. Stat., XII, 963, 1863. John Days.—Thompson in Ind. Aff. Rep., 285, 1854. John Day's river.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 417, 1855. Tūk-spū'sh.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 743, 1896 (Tenino name for John Day r.). Tūkspū'sh-lēma.—Ibid. (sig.: 'people of John Day r.').

John Hicks' Town. A former Seminole settlement w. of Payne's savanna, in N. Florida, occupied by Mikasuki Indians.—Bell in Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 507, 1822.

Johnnys. A Hankutehin village situated on Yukon r., Alaska, where the mining camp of Eagle now is. It was the village of the Katshikotin, whose chief was known as John.—Schwatka, Recon. in Alaska, 87, 1885.

Johnson, John. See Enmegahbowh.

Johnstown. A former Cherokee settlement on the upper waters of Chattahoochee r., probably in the N. part of Hall co., Georgia.

John's Town.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1887.

Johnstown. A new settlement "where the Iroquois were thereafter to speak," instead of at Orange or New Albany, N. Y.—Doc. of 18th cent. in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 98, 1858.

Jolee. A former Seminole town in Florida, on the w. bank of Apalachicola r., 60 m. above its mouth, apparently at or near the present Iola in Calhoun co.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 74 (1823), 19th Cong., 1st sess., 27, 1826.

Jolly, John. A Cherokee chief, noted as the adopted father of Gen. Samuel Houston, and later chief of the Arkansas band of Cherokee. His native name was Ahíludégi, 'He throws away the drum.' His early life was spent in Tennessee, near the mouth of the Hiwassee, where an island still preserves his name, and it was here that Houston came to live with him, remaining 3 years and acquiring a life-long friendship for his adopted people. In 1818 Jolly removed to the other side of the Mississippi and joined the Arkansas band, whose chief he became a few years later on the death of Tollunteskee.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 507, 1900.

Jonatas. A former Chumashan village, tributary to Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Gatschet in Chief Engrs. Rep., pt. III, 553, 1876.

Joneadih (Jo'-ne-a-dih, 'beyond the point.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca village on Allegheny r., nearly opposite Salamanca, N. Y.—Morgan, League Iroq., 466, 1851.

Jones, Peter (Kahkewaquonaby, Kahkewagwonnaby). A mixed-blood Mississauga chief, missionary, and author; born Jan. 1, 1802, died June 29, 1856. His father was a white man of Welsh descent named Augustus Jones, who maintained the closest friendship with Brant during the latter's life. Peter's mother was Tuhbenahneguay, daughter of Wahbanosay, a chief of the Mississauga on Credit r., at the extreme w. end of L. Ontario, where, on a tract of land known as Burlington heights, Peter and his brother John were born. He remained with his tribe, following their customs and accompanying them on their excursions, until his 16th year, when his father, who was then a government surveyor, had him baptized by Rev. Ralph Leeming, an English Episcopal minister, at the Mohawk church on Grand r., near Brantford, Ont. Having professed religion at a campmeeting held near Ancaster, Ont., and taken an active part in the religious exercises of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, Peter was sent on a missionary tour, in 1827, to L. Simcoe, St. Clair, Muncey, and other points in w. Ontario, although not yet ordained. He had by this time entered upon his literary work, as in this year was published a hymn book translated by him into Chippewa. He was constituted a deacon of the Wesleyan Methodist conference in 1830, and as minister by Rev. George Marsden at the Toronto conference in 1833. The remainder of his life was devoted chiefly to missionary work among the Mississauga and Chippewa, and to some extent among the Iroquois. His position as a Christian pastor and ruling chief of his tribe gave him great influence, not only among his own people, but among all the Chippewa tribes. He visited England and New York, and made repeated journeys to Toronto in the prosecution of his work and in behalf of his people. It was largely through his efforts that the titles of the Credit Indians to their lands were perfected. Although injured to out-door life and of a somewhat robust frame, his constitution began to yield to excessive exposures, resulting in his death, near Brantford, in 1856. A monument was erected to his memory, in 1857, with the inscription: "Erected by the Ojibeway and other Indian tribes to their revered and beloved chief, Kahkewaquonaby (the Rev. Peter Jones).” A memorial tablet was placed by his family in the Indian church at the New Credit settlement.

Ryerson (Ojibway Indians, 18, 1861) describes Jones as “a man of athletic frame, as well as of masculine intellect; a man of clear perception, good judgment, great decision of character; a sound preacher, fervent and powerful in his appeals; very well informed on general subjects, extensively acquainted with men and things.” His wife was an English woman, who with 4 sons survived him. His seventh son, Peter E. Jones, who bore his father's name (Kah-ke-wa-quo-na-by), was editor of a periodical, The Indian, published at Hagersville, Ont., in 1885-86.

In addition to the volume of hymns, first printed in 1829, republished in 1836, and in various enlarged editions in later years, Jones translated also into Chipewewa a volume of Additional Hymns (1861), an Ojibway Spelling Book (1828), Part of the New Testament (1829), The First Book of Moses (1835), and Part of the Discipline of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada (1835). He also wrote the Life and Journals of Kah-ke-wa-quo-na-by (Rev. Peter Jones), 1860, and a History of the Ojibway Indians, with Especial Reference to their Conversion to Christianity, 1861. Consult Pilling, Bibliog. Algonq. Lang., Bull. B. A. E., 1891.

Jones' River. A village of Christian Indians in Kingston township, Plymouth co., Mass., in 1703.—Cotton (1703) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 3d s., II, 244, 1830.

Jonondes (Dionon'dese, ‘at the high mountain’). A former Iroquois village belonging to the Bear clan; location unknown. (J. N. B. H.)

Jonondese.—Hale, Iroquois Book of Rites, 120, 1833. Jonondeseh.—Ibid., 121.

Joquizara. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861. Cf. Josquigard.

Jore (probably from Ayd'li'yi, ‘little place,’ i. e., ‘little town’; abbreviated Ayd'li). A former Cherokee settlement on Iola cr., an upper branch of Little Tennessee r., N. C. (J. M.)

Iola.—Present map form. Jore.—Bartram, Travels, 371, 372, 1792. Joree.—Doc. of 1755 cited by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 142, 1887.

Joseph. The leader of the Nez Percés in the hostilities of 1877. His mother was a Nez Percé, his father a Cayuse, who received the name Joseph from his teacher, the missionary Spalding, who was with Dr Whitman and who went to the Idaho country in the late thirties of the 19th century. Chief Joseph's native name was Himmaton-valatkit (himmaton, ‘thunder’; yalatkit, ‘coming from the water up over the land.’—Miss McBeth), but both he and his brother Ollicot were often called

Joseph, as if it were a family name. Joseph was a man of fine presence and impressive features, and was one of the most remarkable Indians within the borders of the Union. The treaty of 1863, by which the whites obtained a right to the Wallowa valley, the ancient home of Joseph's band in N. E. Oregon, was not recognized by Joseph and the Indians sympathizing with him, who continued to dwell there in spite of collisions between the Indians and the whites, which became more and more frequent. The matter of removing these Indians to the Lapwai res. in Idaho, after the failure of a commission the previous year, was proceeding to a peaceful settlement when outrageous acts on the part of the white settlers caused the Nez Percés to break loose and attack the settlements. War was declared. After several engagements, in which the whites lost severely, Joseph displayed remarkable generalship in a retreat worthy to be remembered with that of Xenophon's ten thousand (Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 714, 1896). In spite of the fact that in front of him was Col. Miles, behind Gen. Howard, on his flank Col. Sturgis and his Indian scouts, Joseph brought his little band, incommoded with women and children, to within 50 miles of the Canadian border, their objective point, when they were cut off by fresh troops in front and forced to surrender conditionally on Oct. 5, 1877. Not only the conduct of the Nez Percés during this retreat of more than 1,000 miles, but also the military and tactical skill displayed by their leader, won unstinted praise from their conquerors. The promises made to Joseph and his people were ignored, and the Indians, numbering 431, were removed to Ft Leavenworth, Kans., and afterward to Indian Ter., where they remained for several years, always yearning for the mountains and valleys of Idaho. In 1883 a party of 33 women and children were allowed to go back to their old home, and were followed the next year by 118 others. Joseph and the remaining members of his band, however, numbering 150, were not permitted to return to Idaho, but were sent to the Colville res., Wash. He lived to visit President Roosevelt and Gen. Miles at Washington in Mar., 1903, but died at Nespelim, on the Colville res., Wash., Sept. 21, 1904. According to the Indian agent he had become reconciled to civilization in his last years, lending his aid in the education of the children of his tribe, and discouraging gambling and drunkenness.

CHIEF JOSEPH

Josquigard. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861. Cf. Jozizara.

Jotars. An unidentified tribe of Texas, mentioned in the Mezières MS. of 1779, together with the Kichai and Nasoni, from whom an epidemic had spread to the Tawakoni, Caddo, and other tribes. The Jotars lived in a locality remote from Nacogdoches, probably toward the N. W.

(H. E. B.)

Jova. A former Opatá division inhabiting principally the valley of the stream on which Sahuaripa (lat. 29°, lon. 109°) is situated, in Sonora, Mexico, and extending E. into Chihuahua, to and including the village of Dolores on a s. tributary of Rio Aros. Its members are now completely Mexicanized. The language spoken differed dialectically from the Opatá proper and the Eudeve. The Jova settlements were Arivechi, Chamada, Natora, Ponida, Sahuaripa (in part), San Mateo, Malzura, Santa María de los Dolores, Santo Tomas, Satechi (?), Servas, Setasura, and Teopari.

(F. W. H.)

Jaba.—Davila, Sonora Hist., 316, 1894. Joba.—Ibid., 317. Jobal.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 345, 1864. Jobales.—Ibid. Jova.—Ibid. Ovas.—Ibid. Sahuaripas.—Ibid.

Joytudachi. Apparently a former village of the Opatá in the Sierra de Baserac, one of the N. W. spurs of the Sierra Madre, in N. E. Sonora, Mexico.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 58, 1890.

Joyvan. Mentioned by La Harpe (Margry, Déc., VI, 277, 1886), together with the Quidehais, Naouyiches, Huanchanés, and others, as a wandering tribe, apparently W. of southern Arkansas in 1719. Unidentified.

Juajona. A former ranchería, probably Papago, near San Xavier del Bac in S. Arizona; visited by Kino and Mange in 1699.—Mange quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 358, 1889.

Juan Bautista. A Kawia village of the Cabezon division, in San Bernardino co., Cal.—Burton in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 117, 1857.

Juaneños. A Shoshonean division on the California coast, named from San Juan Capistrano mission (q. v.), at which they were principally gathered, extending N. to Alisos cr. and S. to a point between San Onofre and Las Flores crs. Their language forms one group with those of the Luisenos, Kawia, and Aguas Calientes (q. v.). According to Ames (Rep. Mission Inds., 5, 1873) there were only 40 individuals in the neighborhood in 1873; of these most are now dead and the remainder scattered.

Gaichim.—Gatschet in Rep. Chief of Engrs., pt. 3, 555, 1876. Juaneños.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1905 (so called by the Indians and Spaniards). Netela.—Hale, Ethnog. and Philol., 222, 1846 (sig. 'my language').

Judac. The largest of three large Pima rancherías on Gila r., S. Ariz., in the 18th century, now probably known by some other name.—Villa-Señor, Teatro Am., pt. 2, 404, 1748.

Judosa. A village or community E. of the mouth of Trinity r., Tex., in a region generally controlled by tribes of the Attacapan family in the 17th century.

Jacdoas.—Uhde, Länder, 159, 1861. Judosa.—De l'Isle, map (1700) in Winsor, Hist. Am., II, 294, 1886.

Jugelnute. A Kaiyukhotana division on Shageluk and Innoko rs., Alaska; pop. 150 in 1880. It included the villages of Anilukhtakpak, Inselnostlinde, Intenleiden, Khuligichakat, Kuingshtetaktan, Kvigimpainagmute, and Vagitchehate. Chageluk settlements.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 12, 1884. Inkalit-Ingelnut.—Schott in Erman, Archiv, VII, 480, 1849 (misprint). Jugelnuten.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 7, 1855. Jugelnuts.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 517, 1878. Ounagountchaguéliougiout.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850. Shagelook.—Whymper, Alaska, map, 1869. Shageluk.—Schwatka, Rep. on Alaska, 101, 1885. Shagelook.—Whymper, Alaska, 265, 1869. Takai-yakhōtān'a.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 26, 1877 (Athapaskan name). Yugelnut.—Zagoskin (1842) quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884.

Juichun. A Costanoan division or village in California, speaking a dialect very similar to that of the Mutsun.—Arroyo de la Cuesta, Idiomas Californias, MS. trans., B. A. E.

Jukiusme. The Moquelumnan Indians on whose land the San Rafael mission, Cal., was built. Their language was identical with the Chokuyem, and their name may be a distorted form of the same word.

Joukioumé.—Duflet de Mofras, Expl., II, 391, 1844. Joukioumé.—Shea, Catholic Miss., 109, 1855. San Rafael Indians.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 195, 1877. Yonkioume.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 82, 1856 (misquoted).

Julianehaab. A Danish colony and Eskimo settlement on a small island, lat. 60° 43', S. Greenland.

Julianehaab.—Graah, Exped. Greenland, map, 1837. Kakortok.—Meddelelser om Grönland, XVI, map, 1896.

Julimeños. A former tribe in N. E. Mexico, probably of the Coahuiltecan linguistic family, which was gathered into the mission of San Francisco Vizarrón de los Pausanes, in Coahuila, in 1737.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 303, 1864.

Jumano. A tribe of unknown affinity, first seen, although not mentioned by name, about the beginning of 1536 by Cabeza de Vaca and his companions in the vicinity of the junction of the Conchos with the Rio Grande, or northward to about the s. boundary of New Mexico. They were next visited in 1582 by Antonio de Espejo, who called them Jumanos and Patarabueyes, stating that they numbered 10,000 in five villages along the Rio Grande from the Conchos junction northward for 12 days' journey. Most of their houses were built of sod or earth and grass, with flat roofs; they cultivated maize, beans, calabashes, etc. When visited in 1598 by Juan de Oñate, who called them Rayados on account of their striated faces, a part at least of the Jumano resided in several villages near the Salinas, E. of the Rio Grande, in New Mexico, the four principal ones being called Atripuy, Genobey, Quelotetrey, and Pataotrey. From about 1622 these were administered to by the Franciscan Fray Juan de Salas, missionary at the Tigua pueblo of Isleta, N. Mex. In response to the request of 50 Jumano, who visited Isleta in July, 1629, an independent mission, under the name San Isidore, was established among them in the Salinas, but the main body of the tribe at this time seems to have resided 300 m. E. of Santa Fé, probably on the Arkansas, within the present Kansas, where they were said to be also in 1632. Forty years later there were Jumano 15 leagues E. of the Piros and Tigua villages of the Salinas, not far from Pecos r., who were administered by the priest at Quarai. About this time the Salinas pueblos were abandoned on account of Apache depredations. The Jumano did not participate in the Pueblo rebellion of 1680–92, but before it was quelled, i. e., in Oct., 1683, 200 of the tribe visited the Spaniards at El Paso, to request missionaries, but owing to the unsettled condition of affairs by reason of the revolt in the N., the request was not granted. In the following year friars visited the Jumano in S. Texas, and within this decade they became known to the French under the name Choumans. Various references to them are made during the 18th century, including the perhaps significant statement by Cabello (Informe, 1784, MS. cited by H. E. Bolton, inf'n, 1906) that "the Taguyazes (Wichita) are known in New Mexico by the name of Jumanes also." As late as the middle of the 19th century they are mentioned in connection with the Kiowa, and again as living near Lampazas, Nuevo Leon, Mexico. The tribal name was once applied to the Wichita mts. in Oklahoma, and it is still preserved in the "Mesa Jumanes" of New Mexico. See Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 268, 1892; Benavides, Memorial (1630), in Land of Sunshine, xiv, 46, 51, 1901; Vetancurt (1693), Teatro Americana, iii, 304, repr. 1871. (F. W. H.)

Aumanes.—Uhde, Länder, 121, 1861 (near Lampazas, N. Leon). Borrados.—Doc. of 1796 quoted by Orozco y Berra, Geog., 382, 1864 'striped'; same? Chaumenes.—Charlevoix, New France, Shea ed., iv, 78, 1870. Chomanes.—Barcia, Ensayo, 264, 1723. Chomans.—Doc. of 1699 in Margry, Déc., iv, 316, 1880. Chomenes.—Barcia, op. cit., 271. Chouman.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 299, 1878. Choumanes.—Barcia, op. cit., 283. Choumans.—Douay (ca. 1687) quoted by Shea, Discov., 205, 1852. Choumay.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 410, 1878. Choumenes.—Joutel (1687) in French, Hist. Coll. La., i, 137, 1816. Desumanas.—Duro, Don Diego de Peñalosa, 63, 1882. Humanas.—Perea, Verdadera Rel., 2, 1632. Humanas de Tumpires.—Brion de la Tour, Map N. Am., 1779 (confounded with Tumpiros). Humanas de Tumpiros.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Humanos.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, ii, 28, 1852. Humas.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 70, 1864 (believed by Bandelier to be identical; see Xumas below). Humunas de Tumpires.—Morse, Atlas, map 52, 1812. Ipitaraguies.—Mota-Padilla, Hist. de la Conquista, 169, 1742 (probably identical). Iumanas.—Buschmann, Neu-Mexico, 228, 264, 1858 (after Sigüenza, 1691–93). Iumanes.—Sanson, L'Amérique, map, 27, 1657. Iumanos.—Mendoza (1586) in Hakluyt, Voy., 459, 466, 1600. Jumanas.—Espejo (1582) in Doc. Inéd., xv, 186, 1871. Jumanes.—Whipple, Pac. R. R. Rep., iii, pt. 3, 113, 1856 (misquoting Hakluyt). Jumanoes.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, ii, 29, 1852. Jumanos.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 163, 1744. Jumas.—Orozco y Berra (1864) quoted in Arch. Inst. Bul., i, 31, 1883. Lumanos.—Davis, Span. Conq. N. Mex., 242, 1869. Parabuyeis.—De l'Isle, Atlas Nouveau, map 59, 1733. Patarabueyes.—Bell in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., i, 263, 1869. Patarabueyes.—Espejo (1582) in Doc. Inéd., xv, 168, 1871. Patarabueyes.—Mendoza (1586) in Hakluyt, Voy., 459, 1600. Patarabeyes.—Heylen, Cosmog., 1072, 1703. Rayados.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., xvi, 266, 1871. Rrayados.—Ibid. Sumanas.—Duro, Don Diego de Peñalosa, 56, 1882. Tarra-Iumanes.—Linschoten, Description de l'Amérique, map 1, 1638 (confused with Tarahumare?). Tatarabueyes.—Rodríguez, Relación, in Doc. Inéd., xv, 97, 1871. Umanos.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 519, 1851 (misidentified with Yumas). Xoumanes.—Doc. of 1699 in Margry, Déc., iv, 316, 1880. Xumanas.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., xvi, 114, 1871. Xumanes.—De l'Isle, Map Am. Septentrionale, 1700. Xumarias.—Espejo (1582) in Doc. Inéd., xv, 168, 1871. Xumas.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Bul., i, 31, 1883 (said to be a 16th century name). Xumases.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., xvi, 266, 1871. Yumanos.—Bent (1846) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 242, 1851. Zumanas.—Vetancurt (1693), Teatro Mex., iii, 308, 1871.

Junaluska (corruption of Tsunilāhānski, 'he tries repeatedly, but fails'). A former noted chief of the East Cherokee in North Carolina. In the Creek war of 1813–14 he led a detachment of warriors to the support of Gen. Jackson, and did good service at the bloody battle of the Horseshoe Bend. Having boasted on setting out that he would exterminate the Creeks, he was obliged to confess on his return that some of that tribe were still alive, whence the name jokingly bestowed upon him by his friends. He went west with his people in the removal of 1838, but returned to North Carolina, and as a special recognition of his past services was given citizenship rights and a tract of land at Cheowa, near the present Robbinsville, Graham co., N. C., where he died in 1858. See Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 97, 164-5, 1900.

Junatca. A former tribe or village, presumably Costanoan, from which Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal., drew some of its neophytes.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Junetre. A ruined pueblo of the Tewa in Rio Arriba co., N. Mex.—Bandelier in Ritch, N. Mex., 201, 1885. See Tajique.

Juniamuc. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Juniata (from Tyu'navyate, 'projecting rock,' in the Seneca and other Iroquois dialects, a name said to refer to a standing stone to which the Indians paid reverence.—Hewitt). An unidentified tribe that lived at and about the mouth of Juniata r., Pa. Their village, known by the same name, was situated on Duncan id., in the Susquehanna. About 1648 they were the forced auxiliaries of the Conestoga. (J. M.)

Ihon-a-Does.—Writer (ca. 1648) quoted by Proud, Penn., I, 114, 1797. Iottecass.—Map (ca. 1614) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., I, 1856. John-a-does.—Sanford, U. S., cxlviii, 1819. Juneauta.—Brainerd (1745) quoted by Day, Penn., 275, 1843 (the village).

Junostaca. A former rancheria, probably Papago, visited by Kino and Mange in 1699; situated near San Xavier del Bac, in the present s. Arizona.—Mange quoted by Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 358, 1889.

Junqueindundeh ('it has a rock.'—Hewitt). A village, probably of the Hurons, situated in 1766 on Sandusky r., Ohio, 24 m. above its mouth.—Smith, Bouquet Exped., 67, 1766.

Junundat ('one hill.'—Hewitt). A Huron village in 1756 on a small creek that empties into a little lake below the mouth of Sandusky r., Seneca co., Ohio.

Ayonontouns.—La Jonquière (1751) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 240, 1858. Ayonontout.—Ibid., vi, 733, 1855. Canundageh.—Guy Park conf. (1775), ibid., viii, 556, 1857. Chenunda.—Croghan (1759) quoted by Rupp, West. Penn., 146, 1846. Chenundea.—Croghan (1759) quoted by Proud, Penn., II, 296, 1798. Chinundeda.—Croghan (1760) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., ix, 261, 1871. Junundat.—Peters (1760), ibid., 258. Sunyendeand.—Smith (1799) quoted by Drake, Trag. Wild., 201, 1841. Wyandot Town.—Hutchins, map in Smith, Bouquet Exped., 1766.

Juraken. Two former villages under Iroquois rule, one situated on the right bank of Susquehanna r., just below the fork, at the site of Sunbury, Pa., the other on the left bank of the e. branch of the Susquehanna.—Poppel, Nouv. Carte Particulière de l'Amérique [n. d.].

(J. N. B. II.)

Juris. A former village, presumably Costanoan, connected with Dolores mission, San Francisco, Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Jurlanoca. A former village on the Indian trail of N. Florida, 8 m. E. of Alachua. Jefferys (Topog. N. Am., chart, 67, 1762) has here a river joining the St Johns from the s. w.

Jurumpa. Given by Rev. J. Caballeria (Hist. San Bernardino Val., 1902) as a former village, probably Serrano, at Riverside, s. California. The Spanish Rancho Jurupa shows the same name.

Jutan. A Calusa village on the s. w. coast of Florida, about 1570.

Futun.—Fontaneda as quoted by Shipp, De Soto and Fla., 586, 1881 (misprint). Jutun.—Fontaneda Memoir (ca. 1575), Smith trans., 19, 1854.

Juyubit. A former rancheria connected with San Gabriel mission, Los Angeles co., Cal. The locative ending, bit, shows the name to be Serrano rather than Gabrieleño.

Jujubit.—Latham in Proc. Philol. Soc. Lond., vi, 76, 1854. Juyubit.—Dufloet de Mofras, Explor., I, 394, 1844.

Kaadnaas-hadai (Q!ā'ad nā'as Xadā'-i, 'dogfish house people'). A subdivision of the Yaku-lanas, a family of the Raven clan of the Haida, living in s. w. Alaska. The name is probably derived from that of a particular house. (J. R. S.)

K'at nas :had'ā'i.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 26, 1898. Q!ā'ad nā'as Xadā'-i.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 271, 1905.

Kaake (Qā'āqē). A Salish tribe which formerly occupied the s. e. coast of Valdez id. Brit. Col., and spoke the Comox dialect. It is now extinct.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Kaana. The Corncob clan of the pueblo of Taos, N. Mex.

Kâana-tâina.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1899 (tâina='people').

Kaayahunik. A Squawmish village on the w. bank of Squawmish r., Brit. Col.—Brit. Adm. chart, no. 1917.

Kaayu (Kā-ā-yu). A pueblo built, occupied, and abandoned by the Nambé tribe prior to the Spanish advent in the 16th century. Situated with Agawano in the vicinity of the "Santuario," in the mountains about 7 m. E. of the Rio Grande, on Rio Santa Cruz, Santa Fé co., N. Mex.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 84, 1892.

Kabahseh ('sturgeon'). A gens of the Abnaki.

Kā-bāh'-seh.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 174, 1877. Kabasa.—J. Dyneley Prince, inf'n, 1905 (modern St Francis Abnaki form).

Kabaye. A tribe or village formerly in the country lying between Matagorda bay and Maligne (Colorado) r., Tex. Joutel in 1687 obtained the name from the Ebahamo Indians, who were probably closely affiliated to Karankawan tribes living in this region. They are probably identical with the Cabia of Manzanet. See Joutel in French, Hist. Coll. La., I,

137, 152, 1846, and in Margry, Déc., III, 288, 1878; Gatschet, Karankawa Indians, 23, 25, 1891. Cf. Kiabaha. (A. C. F.)

Cabaies.—Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723. Cabia.—Masnet (1690), MS., cited by Bolton, inf'n, 1906. Kabayes.—Joutel, Jour. Voy., 90, 1719.

Kachegaret. A Kaviagmiut village at Port Clarence, Alaska.—11th Census, Alaska, 162, 1893.

Kachgiya ('the raven'). A Knaiakhotana division residing on Cook inlet, Alaska.—Richardson, Arctic Exped., I, 406, 1851.

Kachina. A term applied by the Hopi to "supernatural beings impersonated by men wearing masks or by statuettes in imitation of the same"; also to the dances in which these masks figure. See Masks. Consult Fewkes (1) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 25, 1897; (2) 21st Rep. B. A. E., 3, 1903; Voth in various pubs. Field Columbian Museum.

Kachina. The Sacred Dancer phratry of the Hopi, comprising the Kachina, Gyazru (Paroquet) Angwusi (Raven), Sikyachi (Yellow bird), Tawamana (Black bird), Salabi (Spruce), and Suhubi (Cottonwood) clans. They claim to have come from the Rio Grande, but lived for some time near the now ruined pueblo of Sikyatki.

Ka-tei'-na.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891 (tc = ch). Ka-tei'-na nyū-mū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 404, 1894 (nyū-mū = 'phratry').

Kachina. The name of two distinct Sacred Dancer clans of the Hopi, one belonging to the Kachina, the other to the Honani (Badger) phratry. The Tewa pueblo of Hano has a similar clan.

Kachina-tōwa.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 351, 1896 (Tewa name: tōwa = 'people'). Ka-tei'-na.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891. Kachina wiwū.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900 (wiwū = 'clan'). Ka-tei'-na bū-wu.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 404, 1894.

Kachinba ('sacred-dancer spring'). A small ruin at a spring 6 m. from Sikyatki and about E. of Walpi pueblo, N. E. Arizona. It was one of the stopping places of the Kachina clan of the Hopi, whence the name.—Fewkes in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 589, 1898.

Kachisupal. A former Chumashan village connected with Purísima mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Kachnawaacharege. A former fishing station of the Onondaga, situated W. of Oneida lake. At this place Col. Schuyler held a conference with the Onondaga chiefs, Apr. 25, 1700. (J. N. B. H.)

Kachnawaacharege.—Doc. of 1700 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IV, 657, 1854. Kachnawarage.—Ibid., 799. Kagnewarage.—Ibid., 805.

Kachyayakuch (Katc-ya-yá'-kute). A former Chumashan village at Alazumita, near San Buenaventura, Ventura co., Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kadadjans (Q'adadja'ns, said to be applied to a person who gets angry with another and talks of him behind his back; a backbiter). A town of the Hagi-lanas of the Haida, on the N. W. end of Anthony id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., on which also stood the town of Nin-stints.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Kadakaman. A Laimon tribe or band that lived between the old missions of San Fernando and Santa Rosalia Mulege, Lower California.—Taylor in Browne, Res. Pac. Slope, app., 54, 1869. See San Ignacio de Kadakaman.

Kadishan's Village. A summer settlement of a Stikine chief named Katishan, on Stikiner., Alaska; 27 people were there in 1880.—Petroff in Tenth Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

Kadohadacho (Kä'dohadä'cho, 'real Caddo,' 'Caddo proper'). A tribe of the Caddo confederacy, sometimes confused with the confederacy itself. Their dialect is closely allied to that of the Hainai and Anadarko, and is one of the two dialects dominant to-day among the remnant of the confederacy.

The Kadohadacho seem to have developed, as a tribe, on Red r. of Louisiana and in its immediate vicinity, and not to have migrated with their kindred to any distance either N. or S. Their first knowledge of the white race was in 1541, when De Soto and his followers stayed with some of the subtribes on Washita r. and near the Mississippi. The Spaniards never penetrated during the 16th and 17th centuries to their villages in the lake region of N. W. Louisiana, but the people came in contact with Spanish soldiers and settlers from the W. by joining the war parties of other tribes. Various articles of European manufacture were brought home as trophies of war. The tribe was not unfamiliar with horses, but had not come into possession of firearms when the survivors of La Salle's party visited them on their way N. in 1687. For nearly two years La Salle had previous direct relations with tribes of the Caddo confederacy who were living in what is now Texas, so that when the approach of the French was reported the visitors were regarded as friends rather than as strangers. The chief of the Kadohadacho, with his warriors, taking the calumet, went a league to meet the travelers, and escorted them with marks of honor to the village on Red r. On arrival, "the women," says Douay, "as is their wont, washed our heads and feet in warm water and then placed us on a platform covered with very neat white mats. Then followed banquets, the calumet dance, and other rejoicing day and night." The friendly relations then begun with the French were never abandoned. A trading post was established and a flour mill built at their village by the French early in the 18th century, but both were given up in a few years owing to the unsettled state of affairs between the Spaniards and the French. These disturbances, added to the enmity of tribes who were being pushed from their homes by the increasing number of white settlers, together with the introduction of new diseases, particularly smallpox and measles, brought about much distress and a great reduction in the population. During the last quarter of the 18th century the Kadodachado abandoned their villages in the vicinity of the lakes in s.w. Louisiana, descended the river, and settled not far from their kindred, the Nachitoches. By the beginning of the 19th century their importance as a distinct tribe was at an end; the people became merged with the other tribes of the confederacy and shared their misfortune. In customs and ceremonies they resembled the other Caddo tribes.

The tribes of the Caddo confederacy, including the Kadodachado, have 10 clans, according to Mooney, viz.: Suko (Sun), Kagahanin (Thunder), Iwi (Eagle), Kishi (Panther), Oat (Raccoon), Tao (Beaver), Kagaih (Crow), Nawotsi (Bear), Tasha (Wolf), Tanaha (Buffalo). The Buffalo clan was sometimes called Kobo (Alligator), "because both animals bellow in the same way." The members of a group did not kill the animal from which the group took its name, except the eagle, whose feathers were necessary for regalia and in sacred ceremonies; but the bird was killed only by certain men initiated to perform this ceremonial act. The rituals and songs attending the rite of preparation for the killing of eagles have passed away with their last keeper, and the people have now to depend on other tribes for the needed feathers (see Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1093, 1896). (A. C. F.)

At'-ta-wits.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 10, 1884 (Comanche name). Cadadoquis.—Tonti (1690) in French, Hist. Coll. La., i, 73, 1846. Cadaquis.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 409, 1878. Cadaudachos.—Barreiro, Ojeada, 7, 1832. Cadaux.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 136, 1806 (so called by the French). Caddo-dacho.—Espinosa (1746) quoted by Buschmann, Spuren, d. aztec. Spr., 417, 1854. Caddoe.—Nuttall, Jour., 288, 1821. Caddokies.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., ii, 116, 1836. Caddons.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 504, 1878. Caddoques.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 66, 1806. Caddoquies.—Ibid., 105. Caddoquis.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 80, 1815. Caddos.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 66, 1806. Caddow.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 21, 18th Cong., 2d sess., table 5, 1825. Cadeaux.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 162, 1806. Cadoles.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 504, 1878. Cado.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., ii, 310, 1823. Cadodachado.—Hennepin, New Discov., pt. 2, 41, 1698. Cadodache.—Drake, Bk. Inds., vi, 1848. Cadodachos.—De l'Isle, map, 1700. Cadodaguios.—Carver, Trav., map, 1778. Cadodakis.—Gütsfeldt, Chartre U.S., 1784. Cadodaquinos.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 504, 1878. Cadodaquio.—Joutel (1687) in French, Hist. Coll. La., i, 168, 1846. Cadodaquiou.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 408, 1878. Cadodaquious.—Pénicaut (1701) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., i, 73, 1869. Cadodaquis.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 409, 1878. Cadoes.—Ker, Trav., 83, 1816. Cadogdachos.—Morfí, Mem. de Texas, 1792. Ca-do- ha-da-cho.—Pénicaut (1701) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., i, 73, note, 1869. Cadodjodachio.—Linares (1716) in Margry, Déc., vi, 217, 1846. Cadoux.—Lewis and Clark, Jour., 193, 1840. Cadrons.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, vi, 34, 1857. Candada-cho.—Altamira (1714) quoted by Yoakum, Hist. Texas, i, 386, 1855. Cadodcho.—Tex. State Arch., Nov. 17, 1763. Catcho.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 409, 1878. Chadadoquis.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 134, 1806. Coddoque.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 87, 1815. Codogdachos.—Morfí quoted by Shea in Charlevoix, New France, iv, 80, note, 1870. Dá'sha-i.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1092, 1896 (Wichita name). Datcho.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 409, 1878. Dé'sa.—Mooney, op. cit. (another form of Dá'sha-i). Edawika.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Pawnee name, sing.). Erawika.—Ibid. Kaddo.—Möllhausen, Journ. to Pac., 95, 1858. Ka'-di.—Gatschet, Caddo and Yatassi MS., B. A. E. ('chief', original name). Kaddo.—Brüyère (1742) in Margry, Déc., vi, 463, 1886. Kadodakio.—Gravier (1701) quoted by Shea, Early Voy., 149, 1861. Kadodakious.—Brüyère (1742) in Margry, Déc., vi, 474, 1886. Kadodaquious.—Ibid., 483. Kádohádá'cho.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1092, 1896 (own name). Ka-lôx-la'-tee.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 11, 1884 (Choctaw form). Kalu-ñásh-shu.—Gatschet, Tonkawa MS., B. A. E. (Tonkawa name). Karo-ñásh-shu.—Ibid. Kásseyá.—Ibid. (Tonkawa name). Kasseyé'-i.—Ibid. (Tonkawa name). Kul-hül-atsí.—Grayson, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885 (Creek name). Ma'se'p.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1092, 1896 ('pierced nose': Kiowa name). Mósi.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. Am., 375, 1885 (Kiowa name). Ni'ris-hári-sí-ki'riki.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1092, 1896 (another Wichita name). Ota's-ita'-niuw.—Ibid. ('pierced-nose people': Cheyenne name). Quadodaaques.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 128, 1816. Quadodaguioes.—Le Page du Pratz, Hist. La., map, 1758. Quodadiquo.—Barcia, Ensayo, 288, 1723. Soudayé.—La Harpe (1722) in Margry, Déc., vi, 363, 1886 (Fr. form of Quapaw name). Su'-djé.—Dorsey, Kwapa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1891 (Quapaw name). Tani'bánen.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1092, 1896 ('pierced-nose people': Arapaho name). Tani'bánenina.—Ibid. Tani'batha.—Ibid. Tashash.—Gatschet, Wichita MS., B. A. E. (Wichita name). Tawitskash.—Ibid. (Wichita name for a Caddo). U-tai-si'-ta.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 9, 1884 ('pierced noses': Cheyenne name). Utá-séta.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Cheyenne name). Witúne.—Gatschet, Comanche MS. vocab., B. A. E., 9, 1884 (Comanche name).

Kadusgo (Qá'dasgo). A Haida town or camp on Louise id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col., at the mouth of a creek bearing the same name, which flows into Cumshewa inlet from the s. The family which occupied it came to be called Kadusgo-kegawai ('those born at Kadusgo').—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 278, 1905.

Kadusgo-kegawai (Qá'dasgo qé'gawa-i, 'those born at Kadusgo creek'). A family belonging to the Raven clan of the Haida, residing in the town of Kloo, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. The name was derived from that of an old camping place on the n. side of Louise id., and the people claimed descent from the Hlgahetgu-lanas of Old Gold Harbor; but until recent years they occupied a low position socially. At present they form one of the most numerous of the surviving family groups of the tribe. (J. R. S.) K'-adas ke'-e'owai.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 25, 1898. Qá'dasgo qé'gawa-i.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 269, 1905.

Kae (Qá-i, 'sea-lion town'). A former Haida town on Skotsgai bay, above Skidegate, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Kaiahl-lanas, who took their name from the place before they moved to Kaisun. (J. R. S.)

Kaekibi. A traditional pueblo of the Asa people of the Hopi, who were of Tewa origin; situated on the Rio Chama, N. Mex., near the present Abiqui.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 30, 1891.

Kaersok. An Eskimo village and trading post in w. Greenland, lat. 72° 39'.—Meddelelser om Grönland, viii, map, 1889.

Kaffetalaya (Kafi-talaia, 'sa: safras thicket'). A former Choctaw town on Owl cr., Neshoba co., Miss. The name was extended to cover a large district in that territory.—Halbert in Miss. Hist. Soc. Pub., vi, 427, 1902.

Cofetalaya.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 108, 1884. Coffadeliah.—West Florida map, ca. 1775.

Kafitalaya.—Romans, Florida, map, 1775.

Kagahanin (Ka'gähänin). The Thunder clan of the Caddo.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1093, 1896.

Kagaih (Ka'gaih). The Crow clan of the Caddo.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1093, 1896.

Kagakwisuwug (Kägäkwisuwugi, 'they go by the name of pigeon-hawk'). A Thunder gens of the Sauk and Foxes.

Kägäkwisuwagi.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1906. Kä-käkwis-so-uk.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 170, 1877.

Kaganhittan ('sun-house people'). Given by Boas as a social group of the Tlingit at Wrangell, Alaska, but it is actually only the name of the people of a house belonging to the Kiksadi, q. v. Gag'nhittan.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. K'agan hit tan.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes of Can., 25, 1889.

Kagials-kegawai (Qä'gials qē'gawa-i, 'those born at Kagials'). An important family of the Raven clan of the Haida, which derives its name from a reef near Lawn hill, at the mouth of Skidegate inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., where some of the people formerly lived. A second name was ēqe'not-lā'nas, 'people of [the town of] Cumshewa', whence one portion of the Kagials-kegawai is said to have moved. Their own town was Skedans, and their chief was one of the most influential on the islands. Subdivisions of the family were the Kils-haidagai and Kogaahl-lanas, the latter being of low social rank. The Kagials-kegawai claim to have sprung from a woman who floated ashore at Hot Springs id. in a cockleshell. They were closely connected with the Tadjil-lanas, who appear to have originated in the same locality. (J. R. S.)

K'agials-ē'owai.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 24, 1898. ēqe'not-lā'nas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 269, 1905. Qä'gials qē'gawa-i.—Ibid. Tlk i-notl-lā'nas.—Boas, op. cit.

Kngokakat. A village of the Ingalik division of the Kaiyuhkhotana, at the mouth of Medicine cr., n. bank of Yukon r., Alaska; pop. 9 in 1843, 115 in 1880.

Kagokhakat.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., xx, map, 1850. Kakagokhakat.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884. Khatnotoutze.—Petroff, ibid., 12.

Kagoughsage (Seneca: Kakoñ'sä'-ge, 'at false-face place'). The Iroquois name of a Shawnee village, known also as Akonwarage (Akoñwarä'-ge, the Mohawk equivalent), in 1774, apparently in Ohio or w. Pa. (J. N. B. H.)

Agonwarage.—Johnson Hall conf. (1774) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., viii, 426, 1857. Akonwarage.—Ibid.

Kagoughsage.—Ibid.

Kagerssuak. An Eskimo village and trading post in w. Greenland, lat. 73° 5'.

Kagerssuak.—Science, xi, 259, 1888. Kagerssuak.—Meddelelser om Grönland, viii, map, 1889. Karsarsoak.—Kane, Arct. Explor., ii, 293, 1853.

Kaguyak. A Kaniagmiut Eskimo village on the s. w. coast of Kodiak id., Alaska; pop. 109 in 1880, 112 in 1890. Alsentic.—Coast Surv. map, 1898. Kaguiak.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884. Kaguyak.—Coast Surv. map, 11th Census, Alaska, 1893. Kaniag-miut.—Russ.-Am. Co. map, 1849. Kaniagmiut.—Holmberg, Ethnogr. Skizz., 142, map, 1855. Kawnjagmiut.—Ibid.

Kaguyak. A Kaniagmiut Eskimo village on Shelikof strait, Alaska; pop. 85 in 1890.

Douglas.—11th Census, Alaska, map, 1893. Kaiaiak.—Tebenkof (1849) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kaiayakak.—Lutke (1835), quoted, ibid. Kayayak.—Coast Surv. charts prior to 1884, quoted, ibid.

Kagwantan ('burnt [house] people'). A large and important Tlingit division at Sitka, Chilkat, Huna, and Yakutat, Alaska, being especially strong at the two first-mentioned places. It belongs to the Wolf phratry.

Kagontän.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 116, 118, 1885. Kä'gwantän.—Swanton, field notes, 1904, B. A. E. Kar-gwan-ton.—Emmons in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., iii, pl. vi, 1903. Kokvontan.—Lutke, Voy. Autour du Monde, i, 195, 1835. Koukhontans.—Ibid.

Kahabi (Ka-ha'-bi). The Willow clan of the Pakab (Reed) phratry of the Hopi.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891.

Kahansuk. Marked as a Delaware tribe on the e. bank of lower Delaware r., about Low cr., Cumberland co., N. J., on Herrman's map (1670) in Maps to Accompany the Report of the Commissioners on the Boundary line between Virginia and Maryland, 1873.

Kahendohon (Kä'hē'ndō'hon). A former Iroquois village belonging to the Two-clans of the Turtle. The locality is not known. (J. N. B. H.)

Kahendohon.—Hale, Iroquois Book of Rites, 118, 1883. Kah ken doh hon.—Ibid., 119.

Kahesarahera ('a rotten log lying on the top of it.'—Hewitt). A Seneca village in New York in 1691; location unknown.—Markham (1691) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iii, 805, 1853.

Kah-ge-ga-gah-bowh. See Copway.

Kahl. The Forehead clan of the Hopi, represented in their pueblo of Mishongnovi.

Kahl.—Dorsey and Voth, Mishongnovi Ceremonies, 175, 1902. Käl-namu.—Voth, Trad. of the Hopi, 58, 1905.

Kahlchanedi (Q'Alcane'di, 'people of Kahlchan r.'). An extinct Tlingit division formerly living at Kake, Alaska. It was of the Raven phratry. (J. R. S.)

Kahlchatlan (Qā'tcaī'an). A town occupied by the Stikine before moving to the present site of Wrangell, Alaska, and consequently called Old Wrangell by the whites. (J. R. S.)

Kahlguihlgahet-gitinaī (Qā'guī'-igā'xet gītina'-i, 'the Pebble-town Giti'ns living on the side of the town up the inlet'). A small branch of a Haida family called Hlgahet-gitinaī living on the w. coast of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 284, 1905.

Kahligua-haidagai (Qā'tiguarā'-idaqa-i, 'people living at the end of the town up the inlet'). A subdivision of the Stawashaidagai, a family of the Eagle clan of the Haida in Brit. Col., so named from the position of their houses in the town.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 273, 1905.

Kahmetahwungaguma ('lake of the sandy waters.'—Warren). The Chippewa name of Sandy lake, on the upper Mississippi r., in Cass co., Minn. The Chippewa built a village on this lake about 1730, which was their first settlement on the headwaters of the Mississippi. The band residing here was commonly known as the Sandy Lake band. Some of them removed about 1807 to Pembina r. at the persuasion of the Northwest Fur Company. (J. M.)

Chippeways of Sand Lake.—Lewis and Clark, Travels, 28, 1806. Kah-me-tah-wung-a-guma.—Warren (1852) in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 177, 1885. Kamī'tāwāngagamāg.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 19, 6 (correct form). Sandy Lake Indians.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 33, 1822.

Kahmitaiks ('buffalo dung'). A division of the Piegan tribe of the Siksika. Buffalo Dung.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 225, 1892. Kah'-mi-taiks.—Ibid., 209.

Kahmiut. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village in the Kuskokwim district, Alaska; pop. 40 in 1890.—11th Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Kahra ('wild rice'). One of the two modern divisions of the Sisseton Sioux. They had no permanent residence, but frequently visited L. Traverse, Minn., their hunting grounds being on Red r. of the North. Long (Exped. St. Peters R., 1, 378, 1824) said that they dwell in fine skin tipis, the skins being well prepared and handsomely painted.

Caree.—Drake, Book Inds., vi, 1848 (identical?). Careés.—Domenech, Deserts of N. Am., i, 440, 1860 (identical?). Carrees.—Pike, Trav., 127, 1811. Cawras.—McIntosh, Origin of N. Am. Inds., 202, 1853. Caw-ree.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 34, 1806. Lac Traverse band.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 1859, 102, 1860. North Susseton.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 497, 1839. Sussitongs of Roche Blanche.—Pike, Trav., 127, 1811. Upper Seesetoans.—Sibley (1852) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 29, pt. 2, 32d Cong., 24 sess., 9, 1853.

Kahtai. A former Clallam village at Port Townsend, Wash., in territory formerly occupied by the Chemakum.

Kahti.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., i, 429, 1855. Kā-tai.—Gibbs, Clallam and Lummi, 20, 1863.

Kai ('willows'). A Navaho clan. Cf. Kaihatin.

Kai-gine—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 193, 1890 (= 'people of the willows'). Kāidine.—Matthews, Navaho Legends, 30, 1897.

Kaiachim. A former Pomo village in Russian r. valley, Sonoma co., Cal.

Kajatschim.—Wrangell, Ethnog. Nachr., 80, 1839.

Kaiahl-lanas (Qā'-ai la'nas, 'people of sea-lion town'). A family of the Eagle clan of the Haida, so called from the town which they formerly occupied on Skots-gai bay, near Skidegate, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. After difficulties with their neighbors they moved to the w. coast, where they built the town of Kaisun. The remnant is now at Skidegate. They claimed community of origin with the Kona-kegawai, Djiguahhl-lanas, and Stawashaidagai. (J. R. S.)

Kā'atī lā'nas.—Boas in 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 24, 18 8. Qā'-iat lā'nas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 17, 1905. Qā'-ita lā'nas.—Ibid.

Kaiak, kayak. The men's boat of the Eskimo of N. E. North America, from qajaq (q=German ch), the name in the eastern dialects of the Eskimo language. See Boats. (A. F. C.)

Kaiakak. A village of the Ingalik division of the Kaiyukhotana, with 134 natives in 1880, on the w. bank of Yukon r., Alaska.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 12, 1884.

Kaiaksekawik ('place for making kaiaks'). A Utukamiut village on the n. side of Icy cape, Alaska.

Kaiakskawik.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 162, 1893. Kayakshigvik.—Zagoskin, Descr. Russ. Pos. in Am., pt. 1, 74, 1847.

Kaialigmiut. An Eskimo tribe n. of the Kuskwogmiut, extending on the mainland from Kuguktk r. to C. Romanzof, Alaska. In the lakes and streams of the tundra they obtain an abundant supply of fresh fish at the season when the coast natives often hunger. They are therefore a more vigorous people, living still in primitive simplicity. Their villages are Agiukchuk, Askinuk, Chininak, Kaialik, Kailukluk, Kashigalak, Kushunuk, Kvigatluk, Nuloktolok, Nunvogulukhuguk, Sfaganuk, Ukak, Ukuk, and Unakagak. Kaialigamut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kai-a-lig-mūt.—Dall in Proc. Am. A. S., xxxiv, 18, 1858.

Kaialik. A Kaialigmiut Eskimo village in the Yukon delta near Azun r., Alaska; pop. 100 in 1880, 157 in 1890.

Kaialigumiut.—Nelson (1868) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kaiwigamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893. Kialigamut.—Ibid., 110.

Kaibab (prob. 'on the mountain,' from kai or kaiba, 'mountain,' and the locative ending ab or ba.—Kroeber). A division of the Paiute, numbering 171 in 1873, when they were in the vicinity of Kanab, s. w. Utah. Powell gave their name to the Kaibab plateau, n. w. Ariz. In 1903 their number was given as 140, of which 30 were at Cedar City, Utah, and 110 under a special agent. In 1905 there were 109 reported, not under an agent.

Kai-bab-bit.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 251, 1877. Kaibabits.—Ingalls in H. R. Ex. Doc. 66, 42d Cong., 3d sess., 2, 1873. Kaivaywit.—Powell in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1873, 50, 1874. Kai-vwaw-uai Nu-ints.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 42, 43d Cong., 1st sess., 15, 1874.

Kaidatoiabie (Kai-da-toi-ab-ie). A Paviotso tribe of 6 bands formerly living in N. E. Nevada; pop. 425 in 1873.—Powell in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1873, 52, 1874.

Kaidju (Qai'dju, 'songs-of-victory town'). A Haida town on a point opposite Danger rocks, Moresby id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., occupied by the Tadjilanas. The Kaidju-kegawai, a subdivision of the Tadjilanas, took its name from this town.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Kaidju. A Haida town in Hewlett bay, on the E. coast of Moresby id., Queen Charlotte ids. Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Kaslanas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Kaidjudal (Qai'djudal). A former Haida town on Moresby id., opposite Hot Spring id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Huldangats.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 278, 1905.

Kaidju-kegawai (Qai'dju qe'gawa-i, 'those born at Songs-of-victory town'). A subdivision of the Tadjilanas, a family belonging to the Gunghet-haidagai (Ninistsints people) of the Haida of British Columbia.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 269, 1905.

Kaigani (K'aiqā'nī). A division of the Haida, living in Alaska. Their name is derived from that of a camping place or summer settlement where they were accustomed to assemble to meet incoming vessels and to trade with the whites. The Kaigani emigrated from the N. W. end of Queen Charlotte ids. between 150 and 200 years ago, drove the Tlingit (Koluschan) from the S. end of Prince of Wales id., and took possession of their towns. The most important of these settlements were Sukwan, Klinkwan, Howkan, and Kasaan, which bear their old Tlingit names. The last three are still inhabited. Like many Tlingit tribes, but unlike other Haida, the Kaigani subdivisions often took their names from the name given to some individual house. About 1840 the population was estimated at 1,735. According to Petroff's report (10th Census, Alaska) they numbered 788 in 1880; in 1890 the population was given as 391. Their present number probably does not exceed 300. (J. R. S.)

Kaigani.—Halleck (1869) in Morris, Resources of Alaska, 67, 1879. Kaigan.—Terry in Rep. Sec. War, i, 40, 1868-69. Kaigan.—Dawson, Queen Charlotte ids., 104B, 1880. Kegarnie.—Dunn, Hist. Oregon, 281, 1844. Kiganis.—Duflet de Mofras, Oregon, i, 335, 336, 1844. Kigarnie.—Ludewig, Aborig. Lanz. America, 157, 1860. Kigenes.—Am. Pioneer, ii, 189, 1843. Kygnani.—Dall in Proc. A. A. S., 269, 1869. Kygnani.—Sculer in Jour. Geog. Soc.

London, i, 219, 1841. Kygany.—Gibbs after Anderson in Hist. Mag., 74, 1863. Kygarney.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 489, 1855 (after Work, 1836-41). Kygarney.—Kane, Wand. N. A., app., 1859 (after Work, 1836-41).

Kaigani. An important Haida summer town or camping place at the S. E. end of Dall id., S. W. Alaska. Most of the families which moved from the Queen Charlotte ids. formerly gathered here to meet trading vessels, for which reason they came to be known to the whites as Kaigani. The dominant family in this town is said to have been the Yakulanans. (J. R. S.)

Kaigwu (Kiowa proper). The oldest tribal division of the Kiowa, from which the tribe derives its name. To it belongs the keeping of the medicine tipi, in which is the grand medicine of the tribe.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1079, 1896.

Kaihatin ('willow'). A clan or band of the Coyotero and also of the Pinaleño Apache at San Carlos and Ft Apache agencies, Ariz.; coordinate with the Kai clan of the Navaho.

Kajjatin.—Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 112, 1890. Kay-tzen-lin.—Ibid.

Kaiihl-lanas (Qai-ih lā'nas). A subdivision of the Dostlan-lagai, a family group of the Haida, named from a camping place on the W. coast of Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. (J. R. S.)

Kailaidshi. A former Upper Creek town in the central district, on a creek of the same name, which joins Oakjoy cr., a w. tributary of Tallapoosa r., probably in the N. W. part of the present Elmore co., Ala. Atchinahatchi and Hatchichapa were dependent villages of this town, the name of which probably has reference to a warrior's head-dress. (A. S. G.)

Caileedjee.—Robin, Voy., II, map, 1807. Cieligees.—Woodward, Reminiscences, 83, 1859. Ka-ilaish.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 133, 1884. Kealee.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1779), 69, 1837. Keiljah.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 318, 1836. Kialajahs.—Simpson (1836) in H. R. Doc. 80, 27th Cong., 3d sess., 50, 1843. Kialechies.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 124, 1836. Kialees.—U. S. Ind. Treaties (1779), 69, 1837. Kialaga.—Crawford (1836) in H. R. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 24, 1838. Kialgie.—Shorter (1835) in H. R. Doc. 452, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 65, 1838. Kialigages.—Ore (1792) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., i, 274, 1832. Kialiga's.—Campbell (1836) in H. R. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 20, 1838. Kialige.—Creek paper (1836) in H. R. Rep. 37, 31st Cong., 2d sess., 122, 1851. Kialigee.—H. R. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 149, 1838. Ki-a-li-jee.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 48, 1848. Kiclichee.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 425, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 181, 1836. Kiliga.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 133, 1884 (an early form). Killeegko.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Kiolege.—Bartram (1778), Travels, 462, 1791. Kuyaleges.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1797), 68, 1837. Ogolegees.—Lattré, map of U. S., 1784 (probably identical). Pialeges.—Weatherford (1793) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., i, 386, 1832.

Kailaidshi. A town of the Creek Nation on Canadian r., E. of Hilabi, Okla. Ka-ila'idshi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888.

Kaime (Kai-me'). A Pomo tribe occupying Russian r. valley, Cal., from Cloverdale to Geyserville.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 183, 1877.

Kaizah (Ah-kai-nah, 'many chiefs', from a-kai-im 'many', ni'-nah 'chiefs'). A division of the Siksika (q. v.), or Blackfeet, now living on a reservation under the Blood agency in Alberta, Canada, between Belly and St Mary rs. The subtribes or bands are Ahkaiksumiks, Ahkaipokaks, Ahkotashiks, Ahkwonists, Anepo, Apikaiyiks, Aputosikainah, Inuhksivistamiks, Isisokasimiks, Istikainah, Mameoya, Nitiksiks, Saksinahmahyiks, Siksahpuniks, and Siksinnokaks. According to the Report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for 1858, there were then 300 tipis and 2,400 persons. In 1904 there were 1,196 persons on the reservation, of whom 958 were classed as pagans.

Bloodies.—Hind, Red R. Exped., 157, 1860 (so called by half-breeds). Blood Indians.—Writer of 1786 in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., III, 24, 1794. Blood People.—Morgan, Consang. and Affin., 289, 1871. Blut Indianer.—Walch, map, 1805 (German form). Ede-but-say.—Anon. Crow MS. vocab., B. A. E. (Crow name). Gens du Sang.—DuRoi de Mofras, Expl., II, 342, 1844. Indiens du Sang.—Ibid., 339. Kaenna.—Maximilian, Travels, 245, 1843. Kahna.—Ibid. Kai'-e-na.—Hayden, Ethnol. and Philol. Mo. Val., 256, 1862. Kaimé.—Browne in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 81, 1877. Kai'-na.—Clark Wissler, in F. N. 1905 (Piegan dialectic form). Kai'-nau.—Tims, Blackfoot Gram. and Dict., 113, 1889 (Siksika name). Kainé'-koon.—Franklin, Journ. Polar Sea, I, 170, 1824 (own name). Kam'-ne.—Hayden, op. cit., 402 (Crow name). Ke'-na.—Hale, Ethnol. and Philol., 219, 1846 (sing., Keneku'n). Ki'-ná.—Morgan, Consang. and Affin., 289, 1871 (trans: 'high minded people'). Kine-ne-ai-koon.—Henry, MS. vocab., 1808. Ki'-no.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 171, 1877. Meethco-thinyowuc.—Franklin, Journ. Polar Sea, I, 170, 1824. We'-wi-ca-sa.—Cook, Yankton MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 (Yankton name).

Kaisun (Qai'sun). A former Haida town on the N. W. coast of Moresby id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. It belonged to the Kaiahl-lanas, who settled there after moving from Skidegate inlet, but before that time the Kas-lanas are said to have occupied it. By the whites Kaisun was sometimes called Gold Harbor, or, to distinguish it from the town afterward built on Maude id. by the west-coast people, Old Gold Harbor; but this term is properly applicable to Skaito, a campon Gold Harbor, itself occupied by Haida from all parts of the Queen Charlotte ids. during the time of the gold excitement. Kaisun is the Kish-a-win of John Work's list, which was accredited by him with 18 houses and 329 people in 1836-41. Since the old people can still remember 17 houses, Work's figures would appear to be trustworthy. The few survivors of Kaisun now live at Skidegate. (J. R. S.)

Kaishun.—Dawson, Q. Charlotte Ids., 168, 1880. K'ai'sun.—Boas, Twelfth Report N. W. Tribes Canada, 24, 1880. Kaisun Haadé.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895. Kish-a-win.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 489, 1855 (after Work, 1836-41). Qai'sun.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 287, 1905.

Kaivanungavidukw (Kai-va-nung-av'-i-duk-w). A band of the Paviotso, popularly called Paiute, formerly living in Surprise valley, N. E. Cal.—Powell, Paviotso MS., B. A. E., 1881.

Kaiyan ('head'). A name applied by all the Pomo about Clear lake to those living about the N. end of the lake, in Upper Lake and Bachelor valleys, Lake co., Cal. (S. A. B.)

Kaiyuhkhotana. The westernmost Athapascan tribe of Alaska, living on the banks of Yukon r. between Anvik and Koyukuk rs. They have been supplanted in the W. part of their old habitat by Eskimo. Since hostilities between them and the Eskimo have ceased they have become assimilated with the latter, adopting a fish diet and differing from all their congeners in acquiring a liking for oil. The tribe is distinguished from its neighbors also by its language, they being unable to converse with the Kutchin. The southernmost settlements subsist principally by fishing and trading. They dry fish and are very expert in making wooden ware and strong birch canoes. Those of upper Yukon, Shageluk, and Kuskokwim rs. combine hunting with these pursuits. The Kaiyuhkhotana build permanent villages which they sometimes leave during the summer. The pointed hunting shirts formerly worn have been largely replaced by the clothing of the whites. They do not appear to have adopted a totemic system, and follow the Eskimo custom of giving elaborate feasts. Zagoskin in 1844 estimated their population at 923. Petroff (10th Census, Alaska, 1884) gave their number as 805 on the Yukon and 148 on the Kuskokwim. Allen (Report on Alaska, 1887) gave the population as about 1,300. The 11th Census (1880, 1893) gives the population of the Yukon district as 753 and of the Kuskokwim as 386; total, 1,139. The following are Kaiyuhkhotana villages, exclusive of those of the Jugelnute division: Anvik, Chagvagchat, Chinik, Iktigalik, Innoka, Ivan, Gagokakat, Kaiakak, Kaltag, Khaigamute, Khogoltinde, Khulikakat, Khunanilinde, Klamaskwatin, Koserefski, Kunkhogliak, Kutul, Loika, Nulato, Nunakhtagamat, Palchikatno, Taguta, Tanakot, Terentief, Tigshelhe, Tutag, Ulukakhotana, and Wolastux. The local divisions were Ingalik, Inkalič, Jugelnute, Kaiyuhkhotana, Nulato, Takaiaik, Tlegonkhotana, Taiyanyanokhotana, and Ulukakhotana. Dané.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 361, 1891. Ingaličs.—Dall in Proc. Am. A. S., XVIII, 270, 1870. Ka-yah-Khatana.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 133, 1874. Kaiyuhkhotana.—Ibid., 148, 1882. Kaiyuhkhotana.—Dall, Alaska, 431, 1870. Kaiyuhkhotana.—Allen, Rep., 143, 1887. Kkpayou-Koutane.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 361, 1831 ('people of the willows'). Lowlanders.—Dall in Proc. Am. A. S., XVIII, 270, 1870.

Kaiyuhkhotana. A division of the Kaiyuhkhotana, living on Kaiyuh r. Their village was Kutul.

Kainakhotana.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 161, 1884 (misprint). Kaiyuk'a-kho-tan'a.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., 1, 26, 1877.

Kaiyuwuntsunitthai ('rocky land'). A former Kuitsh village on lower Umpqua r., Oreg.

Kai-yü-wun-ts'u'-nit t'ai'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lor., III, 231, 1890.

Kajechadi. (Kā-jēch-adi). Given by Krause (Tlinkit-Ind., 116, 1885) as a Tlingit division living in the town of Chilkoot, Alaska. Unidentified.

Kajienatroene ('eagle people.'—Hewitt). One of the 6 'castles' of the Ottawa near Michilimackinac, Mich., in 1723.—Albany conf. (1723) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., v, 693, 1855.

Kaka ('crows'). A band or society of the Arikara.

Crows.—Culbertson in Smithsonian Rep. 1850, 143, 1862. Ka-ka'.—Hayden, Ethnol. and Philol., 357, 1862.

Kakagshe (Kā-kāg'-she, 'crow'). A gens of the Potawatomi.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 167, 1877.

Kakake (Kakāke, 'crow'). A subphratry or gens of the Menominee.—Hoffman in 14th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 1, 42, 1896.

Kakake. Given as the Pigeon-hawk gens of the Chippewa, but really the Raven (Kagigi) gens of that tribe.

Kagagi.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1906. Ka-kaik.—Tanner, Narr., 314, 1830 ('hen hawk'). Ka-kake'.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 166, 1877 ('pigeon hawk').

Kakanatzatia. A former village of the Sia (q. v.), opposite the present Sia pueblo, on Jemez r., N. central N. Mex. According to Sia tradition, war broke out between the inhabitants of this village and those of Kohasaya, the former being driven southward by an attempt of the latter to burn their pueblo, the Kohasaya afterward moving to the site of Sia. It is not improbable that one of the two pueblos mentioned was occupied at the time of Espejo's visit in 1583, and thus formed one of the villages of his province of Punames.

Ka-kan A-tza Tia.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 198, 1892.

Kakapoya ('inside fat.'—Morgan). Given as a division of the Piegan tribe of the Siksika. Perhaps the same as Inuk-sikahkopwaiks, q. v.

Inside Fat.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 171, 1877. Ka-ka'-po-ya.—Ibid.

Kakawatilikya (Qā'qawatilik'a). A gens of the Tsawatenok, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 331, 1897.

Kake. A Tlingit tribe on Kupreanof id., Alaska. The designation is often extended to include the people of Kuia and Sundum (q. v.). Their winter village is Kake, near Hamilton harbor. Pop., including probably the Kuia people, 234 in 1890. Their social divisions are Kahlchanedi (extinct), Katchadi, Nesadi, Sakutenedi, Shunkukedi, Tsaguedi, Tanedi, and Was-hinedi. (J. R. s.)

Cakes.—Seward, Speeches on Alaska, 5, 1869. Kacks.—Crosbie in H. R. Ex. Doc. 77, 36th Cong., 1st sess., 8, 1860. Kake.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kakus.—Halleck in Rep. Sec. War, pt. 1, 38, 1868. Kates.—Colyer (Louthan) in Ind. Aff. Rep., 573, 1870. Kaykovskie.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. Alaska, 227, 1875 (translated from Veniaminoff). Kehk.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884. Kehons.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 313, 1868 (name on Russian charts). Kek.—Tikhmenieff, Russ. Am. Co., II, 341, 1863. Kēkch-kōn.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 120, 1885. Kekuvskoe.—Veniaminoff, Zapiski, II, pt. 3, 30, 1840. Kēg'.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Khekhu.—Holmberg, Ethnol. Skizz., map, 1855. Kyacks.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 314, 1868. Rat tribe.—Mahony (1869) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 68, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 20, 1870.

Kake. The modern name of the village of the Kake Indians on the N. W. coast of Kupreanof id., Alaska; pop. 234 in 1890. Kēg'.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Klukwan.—Petroff in Tenth Census, Alaska, 32, 1884. S'likanaxsā'ni.—Swanton, op. cit. (said to be proper name of the town, perhaps meaning 'from a black bear town').

Kakegha ('making a grating noise'). A division of the Brulé Teton Sioux.

Kakega.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897. Kak'exa.—Ibid.

Kakekt (Āx'ēqt). An extinct Salish tribe which formerly lived at C. Lazo, E. coast of Vancouver id., and spoke the Comox dialect.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Kakhan. The Wolf clan of the Keresan pueblo of Laguna, N. Mex. It claims to have come originally from Sandia.

Ka-kan.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 293, 1890 (given as name of the wolf fetish). Kākhan-hano'.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 352, 1896 (hano'ch = 'people').

Kakhmiationwan ('village at the bend'). A division of the Sisseton Sioux.

Kahmi-atonwan.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 217, 1897. Kaqmi-atow'wa.—Ibid.

Kakhtshanwaish. A former Alsea village on the N. side of Alsea r., Oreg.

Kāq-tea'-waic'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lor., III, 230, 1890.

Kakick. According to Coxé a tribe formerly on an island of the same name in Tennessee r., above the Chickasaw; possibly Creek. See Cochali.

Kakick.—Coxé, Carolana, map, 1741. Kakigue.—Ibid., 14.

Kakinonba. A tribe mentioned by several early French writers about the close of the 18th century as living apparently on Tennessee or Cumberland r., although the exact locality and the relationship of the tribe can not be determined. Marquette's map places them E. of the Mississippi, about the region of Kentucky, in 1674. The Senex map of 1710 locates them along the middle of Tennessee r. St Cosme speaks of them as in S. Illinois in 1699. Tennessee r. was called Casquin-ambeaux, Casquinampo, and Kaskinempo by early French explorers.

Kakinonpas.—Sauvole (1701) in French, Hist. Coll. La., III, 238, 1851. Caskinampo.—Senex, map of N. Am., 1710. Kakinonba.—Marquette's map (ca. 1674) in Shea, Discov. Miss., 1852. Karkinonpols.—

St Cosme (1699) in Shea, Early Voy., 60, 1861. Kasquinanipo.—Tonti (ca. 1690) in French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 82, 1846.

Kakliaklia. A Koyukukhotana village of 26 people on the Koyukuk, at the mouth of Sukloseanti r., Alaska.

Kakhlyakhlyakakat.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. Am., map, 1848. Kakliakliakakat.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884.

Kakliaklia.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kakliakliak.—Tikhmenief (1861) quoted by Baker, ibid. Kikliakliakakate.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850.

Kakonak. A Kiatagmiut Eskimo village on the s. shore of Iliamna lake, Alaska; pop. 28 in 1890.

Kakhonak.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Kakonkaruk (kakon, a species of hawk; ka, locative; ruk, 'house.'—Kroeber). A village of the Rumsen, a division of the Costanoan family, formerly at Sur, on the coast, 20 m. s. of Monterey, Cal.

Cakanaruk.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860.

Kakontaruk.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906.

Kakos-hit-tan (Qaq'ō's hit tən, 'people of man's-feet house'). A subdivision of the Shunkukedi (q. v.), a Tlingit division at Klawak, Alaska. (J. R. S.)

Kakouchaki (from kakou, 'porcupine'). A small Montagnais tribe formerly living on St John lake, Quebec. They frequently visited Tadoussac with other northern tribes and were occasionally visited in their country by the missionaries.

Kacouchakhi.—Can. Ind. Aff., 40, 1879. Kak8akhi.—Jes. Rel. for 1641, 57, 1858. Kakouchac.—Ibid, 1672, 44. Kakouchakhi.—Ibid, 1643, 38.

Kakouchaki.—Champlain, Œuvres, II, 21, note, 1870. Nation des Porc épics.—Jes. Rel. for 1638, 24, 1858. Nation of the Porcupine.—Winsor, Cartier to Frontenac, 171, 1894. Porcupine Tribe.—Charlevoix, Hist. N. France, II, 118, 1866.

Kaksine (Qak'sinē). A Squawmish village community on Mamukum cr., left bank of Squawmish r., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kaku (Ká-ku). A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kakuak. A Nushagamiut Eskimo village 60 m. up Nushagak r., Alaska; pop. 104 in 1880, 45 in 1890.

Kakuak.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 47, 1881. Kakwok.—Coast Surv. map, 11th Census, Alaska, 1893.

Kakuguk. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Kakuik. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on Kuskokwim r., Alaska; pop. 8 in 1880.

Kakhuigamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884.

Kalanunyi (Ká'lanūn'yi, 'raven place'). One of the five districts or "towns" which Col. William H. Thomas, in his capacity of agent for the Eastern Cherokee, laid off on the E. Cherokee res. in Swain and Jackson cos., N. C., after the removal of the rest of the tribe to Indian Ter. in 1838. The name is still retained. (J. M.)

Big Cove.—Mooney in 19th Rep., B. A. E., 161, 624, 1900. Ká'lanūn'yi.—Ibid. (Cherokee name: 'Raven place'). Raventown.—Ibid.

Kalapooian Family. A group of tribes formerly occupying the valley of Willamette r., N. w. Oreg., and speaking a distinct stock language (see Powell in 7th Rep. B. A. E., 81, 1891). Little is known of their history, but they seem to have confined themselves to the territory mentioned, except in the case of one tribe, the Yonkalla, which pushed southward to the valley of the Umpqua. The earliest accounts describe a numerous population in Willamette valley, which is one of the most fertile in the N. W.; but the Kalapooian tribes appear to have suffered severe losses by epidemic disease about 1824, and since that time they have been numerically weak. They are also described as being indolent and sluggish in character, yet they seem to have been able to hold their territory against the attempts of surrounding tribes to dispossess them. They were at constant war with the coast peoples and also suffered much at the hands of the white pioneers. Game, in which the country abounded, and roots of various kinds constituted their chief food supply. Unlike most of the Indians of that region they did not depend on salmon, which are unable to ascend the Willamette above the falls, and at which point the Kalapooian territory ended. Of the general customs of the group there is little information. Slavery existed in a modified form, marriage was by purchase and was accompanied by certain curious ceremonies (Gatschet in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, XII, 212, 1899), and flattening of the head by fronto-occipital pressure was practised. The language is sonorous, the verb excessively complex, few prefixes being used, and the words are distinguished by consonantal endings.

By treaty of Calapooia cr., Oreg., Nov. 29, 1854, the Umpqua and Kalapooian tribes of Umpqua valley ceded their lands to the United States, the tract, however, to constitute a reserve for these and other tribes, unless the President should decide to locate them elsewhere. This removal was effected, and the entire tract was regarded as ceded. By treaty at Dayton, Oreg., Jan. 22, 1855, the Calapooya and confederated bands of Willamette valley ceded the entire drainage area of Willamette r., the Grande Ronde res. being set aside for them and other bands by Executive order of June 30, 1857. By agreement June 27, 1901, confirmed Apr. 21, 1904, the Indians of Grande Ronde res. ceded all the unallotted lands of said reservation. The Kalapooian bands at Grande Ronde numbered 351 in 1880, 164 in 1890, 130 in 1905. There are also a few representatives of the stock under the Siletz agency.

It is probable that in early times the tribes and divisions of this family were more numerous, but the following are the chief ones of which there is definite information: Ahantchuyuk or Pudding River, Atfalati or Tualati, Calapooya, Chelamela, Chepenafa, Lakmiut, Santiam, Yamel, and Yonkalla.

The following are presumed to be Kalapooian tribes or bands, but have not been fully identified: Chemapho, Chemeketas, Chillychandize, Laptambif, Leeshetelosh, Peyyon, Shehees, Shookany, and Winnefely. See Calapooya. (L. F.)

> Calapooya.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, III, 565, 629, 1882. > Chinooks.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., Cent. and So. Am., app. 474, 1878 (includes Calapooyas and Yamkally). = Kalapoohah.—Scouler in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc. Lond., XI, 225, 1841 (includes Kalapoohah and Yamkallie; thinks the Umpqua and Cathlamet languages are related); Buschmann, Spüren der aztek. Sprache, 599, 617, 1859 (follows Scouler). = Kalapoohia.—Powell in 7th Rep. B. A. E., 81, 1891. = Kalapuya.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., VI, 217, 564, 1846 (of Willamet valley above falls); Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, pt. 1, c. 17, 77, 1848; Berghaus (1851), Physik. Atlas, map 17, 1852; Gallatin in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 402, 1853; Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 73, 1856; Buschmann, Spüren der aztek. Sprache, 617, 1859; Latham, Opuscula, 340, 1860; Gatschet in Mag. Am. Hist., 167, 1877; Gatschet in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 442, 1877. > Yamkally.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, III, 565, 630, 1882 (bears a certain relationship to Calapooya).

Kalashianu (Ka-la'-ci-au-u). The Raccoon clan of the Chua (Snake) phratry of the Hopi.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 38, 1891.

Kalawashuk (Ka-la-wa'-cük). One of the Chumashan villages connected with the former Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Henshaw, Santa Inez MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kalawatset. A geographical group of tribes of different families in w. Oregon, embracing particularly the Coos, Kuitsh, and Siuslaw.

Kala-Walset.—Mannypenny in H. R. Ex. Doc. 37, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 9, 1857. Kalawatset.—Milbau, MS. vocab. Coast Inds., B. A. E. Kalawatshet.—Gibbs, MS., B. A. E. Kiliwatsal.—Framboise, quoted by Gairdner (1835) in Jour. Geog. Soc. Lond., XI, 255, 1841. Kiliwatshat.—Hale, Ethnol. and Philol., 221, 1846. Killawat.—Drake, Bk. Inds., viii, 1848. Killewatsis.—Armstrong, Oreg., 116, 1857. Killiwashat.—Latham (1853) in Proc. Philol. Soc. Lond., VI, 82, 1854. Killiwatshat.—Hamilton quoted by Gibbs, MS., B. A. E. K'lo-gwee'yánné.—Dorsey, MS. Chasta Costa vocab., B. A. E., 1884 (Chasta costa name). Ral-la-wat-sets.—Drew in H. R. Ex. Doc. 93, 34th Cong., 1st sess., 127, 1856.

Kalbauvane. A former Delaware (?) village on the headwaters of the w. branch of Susquehanna r., Pa.—Pouchot map (1758) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 694, 1858.

Kalbusht ('where the water rolls'). A former Alsea village on the s. side of Alsea r., Oreg.

yal'-büet'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kalekhta. A former Aleut village on Unalaska, Aleutian ids., Alaska, containing 14 persons about 1825.

Kalehtenskoi.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. Alaska, 225, 1875. Kalaktak.—Coxe, Russian Discov., 167, 1787. Kalehtinskoje.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 1855. Kalehtinskoe.—Veniaminof, Zapiski, II, 202, 1840.

Kalelk (Ka'-lelk). A former Modoc settlement on the n. shore of Tule or Rhett lake, s. w. Oregon.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. 1, xxxii, 1890.

Kali ('fishermen'). A Knaiahotana clan living on Cook inlet, Alaska.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 407, 1851.

Kalignak. A Nushagarmiut village on a tributary of Nushagak r., Alaska; pop. 91 in 1880.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 47, 1880.

Kaliko. A Yuit Eskimo village on the Siberian coast E. of Iskagan bay.—Krause in Deutsche Geog. Blätt., v, 80, map, 1882.

Kalindaruk (kalin 'ocean', ta 'at', ruk 'houses'.—Kroeber). A village near the mouth of Salinas r., Cal. The name has been used, whether or not with justification, to designate the group of Indians inhabiting the villages on lower Pajaro r., and between it and the Salinas, near the coast. Indians from this area were taken both to San Carlos and to San Juan Bautista missions. Among the villages attributed to this region are Alcoz, Animpayamo, Kapanai, Kulul, Lukaista, Mustak, Nutnur, Paisin, Poitokwis, Tiubta, and Ymunakam.

Calendaruc.—Engelhardt, Franciscans in Cal., 398, 1897. Kalindaruk.—A. L. Kroeber, infn., 1906 (proper form). Kathlendaruc.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Nov. 25, 1860. Katlendarukas.—Ibid., Apr. 20, 1860.

Kalispel (popularly known as Pend d'Oreilles, 'ear drops'). A Salish tribe around the lake and along the river of the same name in the extreme n. part of Idaho and n. e. Washington. Gibbs divided them into the Kalispelms or Pend d'Oreilles of the Lower Lake and the Sika-tkml-schi or Pend d'Oreilles of the Upper Lake, and according to Dr Dart the former numbered 520 in 1851, the latter 480 (Pac. R. R. Rep. I, 415, 1855). McVickar (Hist. Exped. Lewis and Clark, II, 386, note, 1842) made three divisions: Upper Pend d'Oreilles, Lower Pend d'Oreilles, and Mickseucksealton. Lewis and Clark estimated their number at 1,600 in 30 lodges in 1805. In 1905 there were 640 Upper Pend d'Oreilles and 197 Kalispel under the Flathead agency, Mont., and 98 Kalispel under the Colville agency, Wash.

The subdivisions, being seldom referred to, are disregarded in the synonymy.

Ach-min-de-cou-m-y.—Anon. Crow MS. vocab., B. A. E. (Crow name). Ak-min'-e-shu'-me.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol., 402, 1862 ('the tribe that uses canoes': Crow name). Calapel ns.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, VI, 686, 1857. Calespel n..—Lane (1849) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 52, 31st Cong., 1st sess., 170, 1850. Calespell.—Johnson and Winter, Rocky Mts., 34, 1846. Calespin.—Lane (1849) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 52, op. cit., 170. Calspells.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 504, 1878. Cotespeln.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, VI, 701, 1857. Colespells.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 102, 43d Cong., 1st sess., I, 1874. Coopsellar.—Drake, Bk. Inds., vii, 1848. Coospellar.—Lewis and Clark Exped., II, 475, 1814. Coos-pel-lar's Nation.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 119, 1905. Ear Rings.—De Smet, Letters, 62, 1843. Flathead Kootanie.—Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocab., 124b, 1884 (erroneously so called). Hanging Ears.—Irving, Rocky Mts., I, 127, 1837. Kah-lis-pelm.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 461, 1854. Kale pel.—Ibid., 418. Kálesipilm.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Okinagan name). Kalispel.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1901, 692, 1902 (own name). Kalispelines.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 418, 1854. Kalispelms.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 415, 1855. Kalispels.—Smet, Letters, 170, 1843. Kalispelum.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 419, 1854. Kalispelu ses.—Ibid., 418. Ká'noqtlá'tlám.—Chamberlain in 8th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 8, 1892 (Kutenai name: 'compress side of head'). Kellespém.—Dufort de Moiras, Expl., II, 101, 335, 1844. Klanoh-klatk'iam.—Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocab., 124b, 1884 (Kutenai name). Kullas Palus.—Warre and Vavasour in Martin, Hudson Bay Ter., 82, 1849. Kullespelm.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., VI, 205, 1846. Kullespen.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, 27, 1848. Kushpélú.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 731, 1896 (a Yakima or Palooos form). Kuttelispelm.—Latham, Comp. Philol., 399, 1862. Lower Pend d'Oreilles.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 415, 1855. Ni-he-ta-te-tup-i-o.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol., 264, 1862 (Siksikan name). Papshpún'léma.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 731, 1896 (Yakima name: 'people of the great fir trees'). Peaux d'Oreilles.—Audouard, Le Far West, 204, 1869. Pend d'Oreilles of the Lower Lake.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 415, 1855. Pend d'Oreilles of the Upper Lake.—Ibid. Pends-d'oreilles.—Smet, Letters, viii, 1843. Pend; Oreilles.—Irving, Rocky Mts., I, 121, 1837. Pond d'Oreilles.—Price in Sen. Ex. Doc. 44, 47th Cong., 2d sess., 2, 1883. Pondecas.—McVickar, Hist. Exped. Lewis and Clark, II, 386, note, 1842. Pondera.—Parker, Jour., 293, 1840. Ponderas.—Robertson (1846) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 8, 1848. Ponderas.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., VI, 669, 1846. Po d' Orrilles.—Dart in Ind. Aff. Rep., 216, 1851. Ponduras.—Lane (1849) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 52, 31st Cong., 1st sess., 170, 1850. Pouderas.—Lane in Ind. Aff. Rep., 159, 1850. Sar-lit-hu.—Suckley in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 300, 1855. Silka-tkmi-schi.—Gibbs, ibid., 415. Upper Pend d'Oreilles.—Com'r. Ind. Aff. in Sen. Misc. Doc. 136, 41st Cong., 2d sess., II, 1870.

Kaliukluk. A Kalgialmiut Eskimo village s. of C. Vancouver, Nelson id., Alaska; pop. 30 in 1880.

Kaliookhagamute.—Nelson quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kaliookhlogamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 54, 1884. Kaliukluk.—Baker, op. cit.

Kalkalya. A former Maidu village on the site of Mooretown, Butte co., Cal.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XVII, pl. xxxviii, 1905.

Kalokta. The Crane clan of the Zuñi of New Mexico.

Ká'loktá-kwe.—Cushing in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 368, 1896 (kwe='people'). Ko-oh-lok-tá-que.—Stevenson in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 541, 1887.

Kalokwis (Qá'logwis, 'crooked beach'). A village of the Thluitsis on Turner id., Brit. Col. It was the legendary home of the Kwakiutl tribe at which all the transformations of animals took place.

Ka-loo-kwis.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 72. Kar-luk-wees.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 229, 1887. Qá'logwis.—Boas, inf'n, 1906 (= 'crooked beach'). Qalukwis.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., op. cit.

Kalopaling (pl. Kalopalit). A merman of Eskimo mythology; also called Mitiling ('with eider ducks'). He wears a jacket of eider-duck skins spotted with their black heads, and into the enormous hood he puts drowned hunters when kaiaks capsize. His feet are as big as sealskin floats. The Central Eskimo believe that once there were many Kalopalit, while now only few are left, but they imagine that they still see one occasionally swimming far out at sea and splashing the water with his legs and arms, or basking on a rock, or sitting in winter on the edge of a floe. They are supposed to delight in overturning kaiaks, and hunters tell stories of stealing up to Kalopalit while they lie asleep on the water and killing them with walrus harpoons, but one must shut his eyes as he makes the cast, else the Kalopaling will overset the kaiak and drown all on board. The flesh of the Kalopalit is said to be poisonous, but it can be fed to dogs.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 620, 1888.

Kaltag. A Kaiyuhkhotana village on the left bank of the Yukon, Alaska; pop. 45 in 1880.

Coltog.—Whymper, Alaska, 190, 1869. Kahltog.—Raymond in Sen. Ex. Doc. 12, 42d Cong., 1st sess., 25, 1871. Kaltag.—Dall, Alaska, 41, 1870. K-kaltat.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 87, 1884. Kkhaltat.—Tikhmenief (1861) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kaltat. A Koyukukhotana village on an island in Yukon r., not far from its junction with Koyukuk r., Alaska; pop. 9 in 1842.

Khaltat's village.—Allen, Rep. on Alaska, 110, 1887. K-khaltat.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884.

Kaltsergheatunne ('people on a point of land extending far into the ocean'). A division of the Tututni, formerly residing at Port Orford, on the coast of Oregon.

Kálts'e'-rx-e-a-ñúné.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folklore, III, 233, 1890 (own name). Port Orford Indians.—Palmer in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1856, 214, 1857. Port Orfords.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 470, 1865. Qwúe-tu'-mipl-tún-ñúné.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folklore, III, 233, 1890 (Naltunnetunne name). Tsa-re-ar-to-ny.—Abbott, MS. Coquille census, B. A. E., 1855. Ts'e-rxi'-à-ñúné.—Dorsey, Coquille MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884. Tse-xi'-à-téne.—Everette, Tutu MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883 (= 'people by C. Foulweather').

Kaltshak. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on the right bank of Kuskokwim r., about lon. 161°; pop. 106 in 1880, 29 in 1890.

Kakhilgagh-miut.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850. Kalkhagamute.—Hallock in Nat. Geog. Mag., IX, 90, 1898. Kalthagamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kalt-kagamut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893. Kaltkhagamute.—Petroff, op. cit., 53. Kaltshagamut.—Spurr and Post quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kaltshak.—Baker, ibid. Kehaljagmjut.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skiz., map, 1855.

Kaluiak. A Kaniagmiut Eskimo village and fishing station on Chignik bay, Alaska; pop. 30 in 1880, 193 in 1890.

Chignik Bay.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 163, 1893. Kaluiak.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 28, 1884.

Kaluktuk. An Eskimo village in the Kuskokwim district, Alaska; pop. 29 in 1893.

Kahlukhtughamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Kalulaadlek (Kahuláá'LEX, 'small house of owl'). A village of the Ntlakyapamuk on the E. side of Fraser r., about 24 m. above Yale, Brit. Col.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 169, 1900.

Kalulek. A Kaviagmiut Eskimo village at Port Clarence, Alaska.

Kalulegeet.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 162, 1893.

Kaluplo (Ka'-lu-plo.) A former Nishinam village in the valley of Bear r., Cal.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 316, 1877.

Kamaiaikan (Kamai'ukan). The principal chief of the Yakima and confederate tribes of E. Washington under the treaty of 1855, and leader in the war which began a few months later and continued for 3 years. He appears to have been himself a Yakima. In consequence of the heavy immigration to Oregon and the discovery of gold in the Colville and Cœur d'Alène country of N. E. Washington and adjacent Idaho, in the spring of 1855, Gov. Stevens, of Washington, was instructed to negotiate treaties for cession of territory with the various tribes of the region, with the purpose of limiting them to reservations. Led by Kamaiaikan the Indians offered strong opposition to any arrangement which would deprive them of any portion of the lands or allow right of way to the whites. After considerable difficulty treaties were made with a number of the tribes, largely through the assistance of a majority of the Nez Percés, but it soon became evident that practically the entire body of the Cayuse, Yakima, Wallawalla, Paloo, Spokane, and others were bitterly opposed to removal from their homes or confinement to reservations. In the meantime, although the treaties were not yet ratified and no time had been designated for the removal, settlers and miners began to overrun the Indian lands and collisions became frequent. In Sept., 1855, the war began with the killing of special agent Sohon while on his way to arrange a conference with Kamaiaikan, who now publicly declared his intention to keep all whites out of the upper country by force and to make war also on any tribe refusing to join him. The first regular engagement occurred, Oct. 4 and 5, on the southern edge of Simcoe valley, between a detachment of 84 regulars under Maj. Haller and a large force of Indians led by Kamaiaikan himself. The troops were finally obliged to retire, although the Indian loss was thought to be the greater.

By this time it was believed that 1,500 hostiles were in the field, and the rising now spread to the tribes in W. Washington as well as among those of S. Oregon, and even including some of the coast Indians of S. Alaska. The principal leader in W. Washington was Leschi (q. v.). In Sept., 1856, another conference was held near Wallawalla with some of the chiefs, but to no purpose, Kamaiaikan refusing to attend and those present refusing all terms except the evacuation of the territory by the whites. The war went on, with numerous raids, murders, and small engagements by regulars and volunteers. In the next year, 1857, the rising was brought under control W. of the Cascade mts., several of the leaders being hanged. An incident of the war in this quarter was a determined attack on Seattle, Jan. 25, 1856, which was repulsed by a naval force stationed in the harbor at the time.

On May 17, 1858, a strong force of dragoons under Col. Steptoe was defeated a few miles from the present site of Colfax, N. W. Washington, by a combined force of Paloo, Spokane, and Skitswish (Cœur d'Alènes), but a few months later the war was brought to a close by two decisive defeats inflicted by Col. George Wright, with more than 700 cavalry, infantry, and artillery, on the main body of the hostiles led by Kamaiaikan himself. The engagements took place Sept. 1 and 5 near Four Lakes, on a S. tributary of Spokane r. Besides their killed and wounded, the Indians lost 800 horses, having already lost large quantities of winter supplies, and burned their own village to save it from capture. Kamaiaikan was among the wounded. On the 17th Wright dictated terms to the hostiles at a conference near Cœur d'Alène mission. The defeated Indians, being no longer capable of resistance, were treated with great severity, 24 of the leading chiefs of the various tribes being either hanged or shot. Kamaiaikan refused to sue for peace, but crossed the border into British Columbia, where he finally ended his days. Consult Bancroft, Hist. Wash., Idaho, and Montana, 1890, and authorities cited; Stevens, Life of I. I. Stevens, 1900. (J. M.)

Kamass. See Camas.

Kamatukwucha (Ká'matúk wú'tcá, 'below the Estrella mts.'). A Pima village at Gila crossing, S. Ariz.—Russell, Pima MS., B. A. E., 18, 1902.

Kamegli. A Ku-kwoymiut Eskimo village on the right bank of Kuskokwim r., above Bethel, Alaska.

Kameglimut.—Kilbuck (1898) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Ala-ka, 1902.

Kamenakshchtat. A former important Chitimacha town at Bayou du Plomb, near Bayou Chêne, 18 m. N. of Charenton, La.

Káme nákh tshát námu.—Gatschet in Trans. Anthrop. Soc. Wash., II, 152, 1883 (tshát, 'bayou'; námu, 'village').

Kamiah. A Nez Percé band formerly living at the site of the present town of Kamiah, Idaho. It is mentioned by Lewis and Clark in 1805 as a band of the Chippewish and numbering 800 people who lived in large lodges.

Kamia.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E., 1878. Kamiah.—Howard, Nez Percé Joseph, 19, 1885. Kimmoenim.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 369, 1822. Kimoenims.—Drake, Bk. Inds., VII, 1848. Kimooenim.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., II, 471, 1814. Ki-moo-enim.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 115, 1905.

Kamiaken. See Kamaiaikan.

Kamit (Ká'mít, 'back'). A former Pima village in s. Arizona.—Russell, Pima MS., B. A. E., 16, 1902.

Kamloops ('point between the rivers'). A village at the junction of Thompson and North Thompson rs., Brit. Col., occupied by Shuswap Salish; pop. 244 in 1904. It gave its name to Kamloops Indian agency, now united with that of Okanagan as Kamloops-Okanagan.

Kam-a-loo'-pa.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1891, sec. II, 7 (native name). Kameloups.—Smet, Oregon Miss., 100, 1847. Kamloops.—Cox, Columbia River, II, 87, 1831. Salst Kamlúps.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Okinagan name, from Sálsst, 'people').

Kammátwa (Kammát'wa). One of the four divisions of the main body of the Shasta, occupying Klamath valley from Scott r. to Seiad valley, n.w. Cal. According to Steele the native name of these Hamburg Indians, so-called, is T-ka, but this is apparently a misprint of I-ka, properly Aika, their name for Hamburg bar. (R. B. D.)

Hamburg Indians.—Steele in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1864, 120, 1865. T-ka.—Ibid. (misprint).

Kammuck. A former body of Salish of Fraser superintendency, Brit. Col.

Kammack.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1879, 138. Kammuck.—Ibid., 1878, 79.

Kamukusuk. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Kamulas. A former Chumashan village situated at or near the present Camulos, near the mouth of the Piru, in Ventura co., Cal.

Kamulas.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, July 24, 1863. Ka-mu'-lús.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kana. An Ita Eskimo settlement on Murchison sd., n. Greenland.

Ká'na.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., no. 9, map, 1902. Karnah.—Mrs Peary, My Arct. Jour., 190, 1893.

Kanadasero. One of the two Seneca villages, locality unknown, which in 1763 were still in the English interest.—Johnson (1763) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 582, 1856.

Kanagak. An Eskimo village in the Kuskokwim district, Alaska; pop. 35 in 1890.

Kanagamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Kanagaro (Kaná'karo, 'a pole in the water'). A Mohawk town situated in 1677 on the n. side of Mohawk r., in Montgomery or Herkimer co., N. Y. In the year named it had a single stockade, with four ports, and contained 16 houses. Megapolensis mentions it as early as 1644, but no reference is made to it after 1693. (J. N. B. H.)

Andagaron.—Parkman, Jesuits, 222, note, 1883. Andaraqué.—Parkman, Old Rég., 197, 1883. Banagaro.—Megapolensis (1644) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., III, 250, 1853. Kanagaro.—Conf. of 1674, ibid., II, 712, 1858. Kanagiro.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., III, 250, 1853. Kaná'karo.—Hewitt, inf'n (Mohawk and Cayuga form).

Kanagaro. A former Seneca town on Boughton hill, directly s. of Victor, N. Y. For a long period it was the capital of the Seneca tribe. Greenhalgh states that in 1677 it contained 150 houses, 50 to 60 ft in length, with 13 or 14 fires to the house. Here Greenhalgh saw 9 prisoners (4 men, 4 women, and a boy) burned, the torture lasting about seven hours. This shows that the Iroquois as well as the Neuters burned their unadopted women prisoners, but the Jesuit Relation for 1641 says the Huron do not burn their women captives. On the approach of Denonville, in 1687, this town was burned by its inhabitants, who, like those of the neighboring Kanagaro, the foreign colony, removed about 20 m. s. e. to Kanadasaga, where the foreign element became known by the name Seneca. In the early part of the 19th century the Seneca formed a village approximately on the site of the burned Kanagaro, which they called Gaonsageon ('basswood bark lying around'), referring, it is said, to gutters of this material employed to convey water from a neighboring spring. Another settlement existed in 1740 in the vicinity of the old site, which was called Chinoshahgeh.

(J. N. B. H.)

Cahacagarue.—Lattre, map, 1784. Cahaquonaghe.—Esnauts and Rapilly, map, 1777. Canagaro.—Greenhalgh (1677) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., III, 251, 1853. Canagaro.—Ibid., 250. Cangaro.—Ibid. Gaensera.—Belmont (1687) quoted by Conover, Kanadega and Geneva MS., B. A. E. Ganagaro.—La Salle (1682) in Margry, Déc., II, 217, 1877. Gandagan.—Jes. Rel. for 1657, 45, 1858. Gandagaro.—Jes. Rel. for 1670, 23, 1858. Gannagaro.—Denonville (1687) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 367, 1855. Kaná'kao.—Hewitt, inf'n (Seneca and Onondaga form). Kohoseraghe.—Cortland (1687) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., III, 434, 1853. Onnuttage.—Belmont (1687) quoted by Conover, op. cit. Saint Jacques.—Jes. Rel. for 1671, 20, 1858. Saint James.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 367, 1855.

Kanagaro. A former town belonging to the Seneca, situated at different times at different sites from 1½ to 4 m. s. of Kanagaro, the Seneca capital, and s. e. from Victor, on the e. side of Mud cr., N. Y. According to Greenhalgh it contained about 30 houses in 1677. The inhabitants of this town, according to the Jesuit Relation for 1670, were chiefly incorporated captives and their descendants of three tribes, the Onnottoga, the Neuters, and the Hurons. Its situation thus placed its inhabitants directly under the eyes of the federal chiefs dwelling in the capital town of Kanagaro. Here in 1656 the Jesuits established the mission of the Tohontenrat at Scanonenrat, which surrendered in a body to the Seneca in 1649. On account of these associations the missionaries gave it their special attention, with such success that it became known as the Christian town of the Seneca. Like all the principal Seneca towns it was destroyed by Denonville in 1687. The inhabitants of the western towns, Totiakton and Gandachiragon, removed s. and then w. to Genesee r., where their settlements were destroyed by Sullivan in 1779; those of the eastern towns, Gandagaro (Kanagaro) and Gandougaræ, removed to the E., where their settlements at Canandaigua and near Geneva, N. Y., were also destroyed by Sullivan's army.

(J. N. B. H.)

Canoenada.—Greenhalgh (1677) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., III, 250, 1883. Gandagarae.—Jes. Rel. for 1670, 77, 1858. Gandougaræ.—Denonville (1687) quoted by Conover, MS., B. A. E. Gannogarae.—Denonville (1687) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 366, 1855. Gannongarae.—Doc. 1687, ibid., 334. Gannougaræ.—Denonville quoted by Conover, MS., B. A. E. Saint Michael's.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 291, 1855. Saint Michel.—Jes. Rel. for 1670, 77, 1858.

Kanaghsaws. An Iroquois town of 18 houses, situated in 1779 about 1 m. N. W. of Conesus Center, N. Y. Grant, one of Sullivan's officers, says: "Captain Sunfish, a negro, resided here, a very bold, enterprising fellow, who commanded the town." Chief Bigtree (Karontowanen) is said to have resided here also.—Jour. Mil. Exped. of Gen. Sullivan (1779), 131, 1887.

(J. N. B. H.)

Kanajormiut. An Eskimo village in S. W. Greenland.—Meddelelser om Grønland, XVI, map, 1896.

Kanak. An Alaskan Eskimo village in the Kuskokwim district, Alaska; pop. 41 in 1893.

Kanagmiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Kanakakanak. A Nushagagmiut village on Nushagak bay, near which are two salmon canneries; pop. 53 in 1890, 145 in 1900.

Kanakakanak.—11th Census, Alaska, 93, 1893. Kanakakanak.—12th Census Rep., I, 426, 1901.

Kanakuk. A Kickapoo prophet. When the Kickapoo in 1819 ceded their lands, was still occupied by the hostile Osage. Half the tribe emigrated instead to Spanish territory in Texas, and the rest were ready to follow when the Government agents intervened, endeavoring to induce them to remove to Missouri. Kanakuk, inspired with the ideas that had moved Tenskawatawa, exhorted them to remain where they were, promising that if they lived worthily, abandoning their native superstitions, avoiding quarrels among themselves and infractions of the white man's law, and resisting the seduction of alcohol, they would at last inherit a land of plenty clear of enemies. He was accepted as the chief of the remnant who remained in Illinois, and many of the Potawatomi of Michigan became his disciples. He displayed a chart of the path, leading through fire and water, which the virtuous must pursue to reach the "happy hunting grounds," and furnished his followers with prayer-sticks graven with religious symbols. When in the end the Kickapoo were removed to Kansas he accompanied them and remained their chief, still keeping drink away from them, until he died of smallpox in 1852. See Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 692-700, 1896.

Kanani (Ka'nāni, 'living arrows'). A Navaho clan.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 104, 1890.

Kanapima ('one who is talked of'). An Ottawa chief, born about 40 m. S. of Mackinaw, Mich., July 12, 1813, and christened as Augustin Hammelin, jr. He was sent with his younger brother, Macoda Binnasee (The Blackbird), in 1829 to be educated in the Catholic seminary at Cincinnati, where the two boys remained for 3 years without making marked progress in their studies. In 1832 both were sent to Rome to continue their education in the college of the Propaganda Fide, with the view of entering the priesthood. This object in Kanapima's case was defeated from the usual causes. After his brother died at the end of two years he ceased his studies, returned to America, became chief of his branch of the tribe, and resumed the costume and habits of his people, except when he went among white people, as in 1835, to make a treaty for the Ottawa with the Government at Washington, but he does not appear to have been a signer of any Ottawa treaty. On such occasions he exhibited the ease and polish of a man of the world.

Kanastunyi (Kānastūn'yī). A traditional Cherokee settlement on the headwaters of French Broad r., near the present Brevard, in Transylvania co., N. C. A settlement called Cannostee or Cannastion is mentioned as existing on Hiawassee r. in 1776.

(J. M.)

Conastee.—Doc. of 1755 quoted by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 142, 1887. Kāna'sta.—Mooney in covering nearly half the state of Illinois, they could not go to the reservation assigned to them in Missouri because it 19th Rep. B. A. E., 480, 524, 1900 (abbreviated form). Kanastūn'yi.—Ibid.

KANAKUK, THE KICKAPOO PROPHET. (AFTER CATLIN)

Kanatak. A Kaniagmiut Eskimo village on Shelikof Strait, Alaska; pop. 26 in 1890 (11th Census, Alaska, 163, 1893).

Kanatakowa ('great village'.—Hewitt). The village of the Onondaga situated at the place still called Onondaga Castle, N. Y. It was the principal village of the tribe as early as 1654. (J. M.)

Kā-nā-tā-go'-wā.—Morgan, League Iroq., 471, 1851. Kā-nā-tā'-ko'-wā.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (Onondaga form). Onondaga.—Greenhalgh (1677) quoted by Morgan, League Iroq., 316, 1851. Onondaga Castle.—Ibid., 471 (common English name). Onondaghara.—Macauley, N. Y., II, 177, 1829. Onondaghare.—Ibid.

Kanatiochiage ('place of wild rice'). A former Iroquois settlement or village on the N. shore of L. Ontario, inhabited chiefly by "Dowaganaes," and reputed to be "near the Sennekes [Seneca] country." It was situated near Tchojachiage, or approximately on the site of Darlington or Port Hope, in the New Castle district, Ontario. Three nations, composing 16 "castles," came to settle there by Iroquois permission. (J. N. B. H.)

Ganadatsiagon.—Frontenac (1673) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 112, 1855. Ganatcheskiagon.—Ibid., note. Ganatoeskiagon.—Ibid. Kanatiochiage.—Doc. of 1700, ibid., IV, 694, 1854.

Kanchati ('red ground,' 'red earth'). A name applied to several places, one of the best known being the principal village of the Alibamu, formerly on the E. bank of Alabama r., below Koasati and a little w. of Montgomery, Ala. Hawkins described it in 1799 as a small village on the left bank of Alabama r., with its fields on the right side in a cane swamp, and its people poor and indolent. A census of 1832 (Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854) gave the number of families as 55. The name has been applied also to a township in the Creek Nation, Okla., and to a village a few miles N. w. of Talladega, Ala. (A. S. G.)

Con chante ti.—Census of 1832 in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854. Con-chant-ti.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 133, 1884. Onchart ee.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 312, 1836. Ecanchatty.—Woodward, Reminiscences, 12, 1859. Ecumchate.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 380, 1854. E-cun-chā-ta.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ala. map, 1809. E-cun-chate.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 36, 1848. Ikan-tebati.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 88, 1884. Kanshāde.—Ibid., 133. O-cun-e-a-ta.—Bell in Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 307, 1822. Red Grounds.—Ibid., 364.

Kandoucho. A former village of the Neutrals in Ontario, near the Huron country.

Kandoucho.—Jes. Rel. for 1641, 75, 1858. Tous les Saints.—Ibid. (mission name).

Kaneonda. A former fishing station of the Onondaga, situated at the fork of Seneca and Onondaga rs., N. Y., 8 m. from their palisaded village. It was also their landing place when they returned from hunting on the N. side of L. Ontario. (J. N. B. H.)

Kanienda.—Doc. of 1700 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IV, 619, 1854.

Kanesadageh (Kane'sādā'ge'). A former Iroquois village belonging to the Two-clans of the Turtle; location unknown. (J. N. B. H.)

Kaneghsadakeh.—Hale, Iroquois Book of Rites, 118, 1883. Kanesadakeh.—Ibid., 119.

Kanestio. A village occupied by Delawares and others, subject to the Iroquois, formerly on the upper Susquehanna, near Kanestio cr., in Steuben co., N. Y. It was burned by the Iroquois in 1764, on account of hostilities committed by the inhabitants against the whites. It then contained about 60 houses.

Kanestio.—Vaudreuil (1757) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., X, 588, 1858 (name of the creek). Kanestio.—Pouchot, map (1758), ibid., 694.

Kang. The Mountain Lion clans of the Tewa pueblos of San Juan, San Ildefonso, and Nambe, N. Mex.

Chang Doa.—Bandelier, Delight Makers, 464, 1890. Kā-tōā.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 351, 1896 (San Juan and San Ildefonso form; tōā = 'people'). Qen-tōā.—Ibid. (Nambe form; q = German ch).

Kangarsik. A village of the Angmag-salingmiut on a large island at the mouth of Angmagalik fjord, Greenland, lat. 65° 33'; pop. 34 in 1884.—Meddelelser om Grönland, IX, 379, 1889.

Kangek. An Eskimo settlement 10 m. s. of Godthaab, w. Greenland, lat. 64° 10'.—Nansen, Eskimo Life, 166, 1894.

Kangerdluksoa ('the great fjord'). An Ita Eskimo settlement in Inglefield gulf, N. Greenland.

Kangerlooksoah.—Wychoff in Scribner's Mag., XXVIII, 447, 1900. Kangerdlū'hsua.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., IX, map, 1902.

Kangertloaping ('remarkable fjord'). A summer settlement of Okomiut Eskimo of Saumia, at the head of an inlet emptying into Cumberland sd., Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kangertluk ('fjord'). A spring and fall settlement of Iglulirmiut Eskimo on N. Melville penin. near the Fox Basin coast.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kangertlukdjuaq ('great fjord'). A summer settlement of Okomiut Eskimo of Saumia, at the head of an inlet emptying into Cumberland sd., Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kangertlung ('fjord'). A summer settlement of Talirpia Okomiut Eskimo on the s. w. coast of Cumberland sd.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kanguati-lanas (Qā'ngual lā'nas). An extinct subdivision of the Stustas, a family of the Eagle clan of the Haida of British Columbia. (J. R. S.)

K'anguati lā'na'i.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 22, 1898. Qā'ngual lā'nas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 276, 1905.

Kanghishunpegnaka ('those who wear crow feathers in their hair'). A division of the Sishasapa or Blackfoot Sioux.

Kan-gi-sun-pegnaka.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897. Ka'xi-cū-pegnaka.—Ibid.

Kanghiyuha ('crow keepers'). A division of the Brulé Teton Sioux.

Kan-gi-yu-ha.—Tatankawakan, letter to Dorsey, 1880. Kan-gi-yu-ha.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 218, 1897. Ka'xi-yu-ha.—Ibid. Thosethatecrows.—Culbertson in Smithsonian, Rep. 1850, 141, 1851.

Kangiartsoak. An Eskimo village and Danish settlement in w. Greenland, lat. 72° 47'.—Kane, Arctic Exped., 472, 1854.

Kangidli. An Ita Eskimo village at C. York, N. Greenland.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., ix, map, 1892.

Kangigdek. An Angnagsalingmiut Eskimo village on Angnagsalik fjord, E. Greenland, lat. 65° 40'.—Meddelelser om Grønland, xvi, map, 1896.

Kangikhlukhmüt (Kang-iq-xlu-q'müt, 'head-of-the-rapid-river people': Kaniagmiut name). A division of the Ah-tena at the head of Copper r., Alaska.—Hoffman, MS. vocab. B. A. E., 1882.

Kangisunka. See Crow Dog.

Kangivamiut ('people at the head'). A subtribe of the Sukinimiut Eskimo, living in the region of George r., N. Labrador.

Kangivamiut.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888. Kan'gütlu-luksoagmiut.—Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 176, 1894 (= 'people of the great bay'). Kinüklu-luksoa-miut.—Turner in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., v, 99, 1888.

Kangmaligmiut ('distant ones'). An Arctic Eskimo tribe between Manning pt and Herschel id. The name has been attached to different local groups all the way from Pt Hope to Mackenzie r.

Kadjakians.—Rink in Jour. Anthropol. Inst., xv, 240, 1886. Kak'-a-kg.—Zagoskin, Descr. Russ. Poss. Am., pt. 1, 74, 1847. Kangiudlit.—Rink, op. cit., 240. Kangmali-enyui.—Richardson, Polar Regions, 300, 1861. Kangmaligmiut.—Murdoch in Ninth Rep. B. A. E., 46, 1892. Kangmali'gmüt.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 10, 1877. Kangmali-innuin.—Simpson quoted by Dall, ibid. Ka-gmali-k.—Woolfe in 11th Census, Alaska, 130, 1893. Kngialis.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 517, 1878. Kunmali-enyui.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 46, 1892. Künmü'd'liä.—Ibid., 43, 46. Western Mackenzie Innuin.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 12, 1877 (collective term including Kopagmiut and Kangmaligmiut).

Kangormiut ('goose people'). A tribe of Central Eskimo living in Victoria land. Kang-orr-Moosot.—Franklin, Journ. to Polar Sea, II, 43, 1824. Kang-or-mi-ut.—Richardson, Arctic Exped., i, 362, 1851. Kanp-meut.—Petitot in Bib. Ling. et Ethnol. Am., III, 11, 1876 (Chiglit name). White-Goose Eskimos.—Franklin, op. cit., 42.

Kanhada (G'anhada, meaning obscure). One of the 4 clans or phratries into which all Indians of the Chimmesyan stock are divided. It is also applied specifically to various local subdivisions of the clan. One such is found in the Niska town of Lakku'zap and one in each of the Kitksan towns—Kitwingach, Kitzegukla, and Kishpiyeux.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 49–50, 1895.

Kanhaghton. A former Delaware village about the mouth of Chemung r., in the N. part of Bradford co., Pa. It was destroyed by the Iroquois in 1764 on account of the hostility of its inhabitants to the whites.—Johnson (1764) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 625, 1856.

Kaniagmiut ('people of Kodiak'). The largest and most powerful Eskimo tribe on the Alaskan coast, inhabiting Kodiak id. and the mainland from Iliamna lake to Ugashik r., the s. coast to lon. 159° w. The tribe numbered 1,154 in 1890. Their villages are Afognak, Aiaktalik, Akhiok, Aleksashkina, Alexandrovsk, Ashivak, Chiniak, Fugitive, Igak, Iliamna, Kaguyak, Kaluiak, Kanatak, Karluk, Katnai, Kattak, Kiliuda, Kodiak, Kuikuk, Kukak, Liesnoi, Mitrofania, Nauklak, Nunamiut, Nuniliak, Orlova, Ostrovki, Seldovia, Sutkum, Three Saints, Uganik, Uhaiaik, Uhaskek, Ukshivikak, Uyak, Uzinki, Yalik, and Yelovoi.

Achkuqmiut.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 4, 1855 (applied to Aglemut and Kaniagmiut by the people of Norton sd.; = 'inhabitants of the warm country'). Kadiagmutes.—Am. Nat., xv, 156, 1881. Kadjacken.—Wrangell, Ethnol. Nachr., 117, 1839. Kanagist.—Coxe, Russ. Disc., 135, 1787. Kaniag'müt.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 20, 1877. Kaniagmiut.—Rink, Eskimo Tribes, 32, 1887. Kinaghi.—Morse, Syst. of Mod. Geog., i, 74, 1814. Konagens.—Drake, Bk. of Inds., viii, 1848. Konagis.—Latham in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., i, 183, 1848. Konasi.—Prichard, Phys. Hist., Man, 371, 1847. Koniagi.—Humboldt, New Spain, II, 392, 1811. Koniagmutes.—Dall in Proc. Am. A. S., XVIII, 267, 1870. Konagen.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 4, 1855. Southern Eskimos.—Form used by various English writers.

Kanig. A former Chnagmiut village on the N. bank of Yukon r., Alaska, near its mouth.

Kanig-miut.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850. Kanygmüt.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 1855.

Kanikaligamut (Ka'ni-ga-li-ga-mut, 'people close to the river': Chugachigmiut name). An unidentified division of the Knaiakhotana living on Cook inlet, Alaska.—Hoffman, MS., B. A. E., 1882.

Kanikluk. A Chugachigmiut village on the N. shore of Prince William sd., Alaska; pop. 54 in 1880, 73 in 1890.

Kanikhluk.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884. Kanikluk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 229, 1902.

Kanlax (Nxō'isten, 'the point'). An Upper Lillooet town at the junction of Bridge and Fraser rs., interior of British Columbia; pop. 104 in 1904.

Bridge river.—Can. Ind. Aff. Rep. 1904, pt. 2, 72, 1905. Kan-lax'.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1891, sec. II, 44. Nxō'isten.—Boas, inf'n, 1906.

Kanna ('eel'). A clan of the Tuscarora. According to Morgan (League Iroq., 70, 1877) an Eel clan is found among the Tuscarora, the Onondaga, and the Cayuga. Eel.—Morgan, op. cit. Kā'w-nā.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1886 (Tuscarora form).

Kannawaloalla ('a head fastened to the end of an object.'—Hewitt). An Iroquois village on the site of Elmira, N. Y., which was destroyed by Sullivan in Aug., 1779.—Jour. Mil. Exped. Gen. Sullivan (1779), 232, 1887.

Kannehouan. An unidentified tribe, possibly of Caddoan affinity, heard of by La Salle's party in 1687 as living to the w. or n. w. of Maligne (Colorado) r., Tex. Cf. Cahimio, Kanohatino.

Caniouis—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., i, 341, 1786 (possibly identical). Cannaha.—Joutel (1687) in Margy, Déc., III, 409, 1878. Cannahios.—Ibid. Cannehovanes.—Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723. Kannehonan.—Joutel (1687), Jour. Voy., 90, 1719. Kannehouan.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 288, 1878. Kaouanoua.—17th cent. Doc. in Margry, ibid., 602. Quanahinan.—De l'Isle, map (1703) in Winsor, Hist. Am., II, 294, 1886 (possibly identical; misprint Q for C). Quayneos.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Tahianinhou.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878.

Kanohatino ('red river'). The Caddo name for the Red r. of Louisiana, and, according to Gatschet, for the Colorado r. of Texas. It was supposed by the companions of La Salle to be the name of a tribe encountered by them in the neighborhood of the Colorado or the Brazos. From the alternative name given, "Ayano," or "Ayona," it has been erroneously assumed that this tribe was the Hainai. "Ayano," however, is evidently the general Caddo word for "man." Although a Caddo tribe may have been living or camping in the region indicated when La Salle passed, the fact that they were not mentioned when León advanced to the Caddo country a few years later would seem to discredit the theory. The only alternative supposition is that the Wichita or one of their branches, the Tawakoni or the Waco, were camping considerably to the s. of their customary habitat at that time. This would explain the warfare that was found to exist between the Caddo and the Kanohatino in which some of La Salle's former companions took part.

(J. R. S.)

Aiano.—Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723. Ayano.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 299, 1878. Ayona.—Joutel in French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 138, 1846. Canatino.—Anville, map N. Am., 1752. Cannohatino.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 299, 1878. Cannohatino.—Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723. Cannohatino.—Joutel (1687) in French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 148, 1846. Canoatino.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878. Canoatino.—Iberville (1700), ibid., IV, 374, 1880. Canoatino.—Shea, Early Voy., 36, note, 1861. Canoatino.—Joutel, Jour. Voy., 90, 1719. Canouhanans.—Baudry des Loziers, Voy. a la Le., 212, 1802. Conoatino.—Bienville (1700) in Margry, Déc., IV, 442, 1880. Kanaatino.—Brion de la Tour, Carte Gen. des Col. Angl., 1781. Kanoatino.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 127, 1816. Kanoatino.—Hennepin, New Discov., pt. 2, 32, 1698. Kanoatino.—Le Page du Pratz (1757), Hist. La., map, 1774. Kano Hatino.—Mooney, inf'n (Caddo: 'red river'). Kanoutino.—Cavellier (1688) in Shea, Early Voy., 36, 1861. Konatinos.—Coxe, Carolana, map, 1741. Konoatino.—Ibid., 38. Quanoatino.—Douay (ca. 1688) in Shea, Discov., 211, 1852. Quanoatino.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 81, 1854. Quanoatino.—Tonti (1690) in French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 76, 1846. Quanoatino.—Ibid., 74. Quoanantino.—Barcia, Ensayo, 302, 1723. Quoanantino.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 87, 1854. Quonoatino.—Coxe, Carolana, 33, 1741.

Kansa. A southwestern Siouan tribe; one of the five, according to Dorsey's arrangement, of the Dhegiha group. Their linguistic relations are closest with the Osage, and are close with the Quapaw. In the traditional migration of the group, after the Quapaw had first separated therefrom, the main body divided at the mouth of Osage r., the Osage moving up that stream and the Omaha and Ponca crossing Missouri r. and proceeding northward, while the Kansa ascended the Missouri on the s. side to the mouth of Kansas r. Here a brief halt was made, after which they ascended the Missouri on the s. side until they reached the present n. boundary of Kansas, where they were attacked by the Cheyenne and compelled to retrace their steps. They settled again at the mouth of Kansas r., where the Big Knives, as they called the whites, came with gifts and induced them to go farther w. The native narrators of this tradition give an account of about 20 villages occupied successively along Kansas r. before the settlement at Council

KANSA. (KAKEBASHA)

Grove, Kans., whence they were finally removed to their reservation in Indian Ter. Marquette's autograph map, drawn probably as early as 1674, places the Kansa a considerable distance directly w. of the Osage and some distance s. of the Omaha, indicating that they were then on Kansas r. The earliest recorded notice of the Kansa is by Juan de Oñate, who went from San Gabriel, N. Mex., in 1601, till he met the "Escansaques," who lived 100 leagues to the n. e., near the "Panana," or Pawnee. It is known that the Kansa moved up Kansas r. in historic times as far as Big Blue r., and thence went to Council Grove in 1847. The move to the Big Blue must have taken place after 1723, for at that date Bourgmont speaks of the large village of the Quans (Kansa) as on a small river flowing from the N. 30 leagues above Kansas r. and near the Missouri. The village of the Missouri tribe was then 30 leagues below Kansas r. and 60 leagues from the Quans village. Iberville estimated them at 1,500 families in 1702. A treaty of peace and friendship was made with them by the United States, Oct. 28, 1815. They were then on Kansas r. at the mouth of Saline r., having been forced back from the Missouri by the Dakota. They occupied 130 earth lodges, and their number was estimated at 1,500. According to Lewis and Clark, they resided in 1804 on Kansas r., in two villages, one about 20 and the other 40 leagues from its mouth, with a population of 300 men. These explorers say that they formerly lived on the s. bank of Missouri r. about 24 leagues above the mouth of the Kansas, and were more numerous, but were reduced by the attacks of the Sauk and the Iowa. O'Fallon estimated their number in 1822 at 1,850. By the treaty of St. Louis, June 3, 1825, they ceded to the United States their lands in N. Kansas and s. E. Nebraska, and relinquished all claims they might have to lands in Missouri, but reserving for their use a tract on Kansas r. Here they were subject to attacks by the Pawnee, and on their hunts by other tribes, whereby their number was considerably reduced. Porter estimated their number in 1829 at 1,200; according to the Report of the Indian Office for 1843 the population was 1,588. By treaty at Methodist Mission, Kans., Jan. 14, 1846, they ceded to the United States 2,000,000 acres of the E. portion of their reservation, and a new reservation was assigned them at Council Grove, on Neosho r., Morris co., Kans., where they remained until 1873. As this tract was overrun by settlers, it was sold, and with the funds another reservation was bought for them in Indian Ter. next to the Osage; with the exception of 160 acres, reserved for school purposes, all their lands have now been allotted in severalty. The population diminished from about 1,700 in 1850 to 209 in 1905, of whom only about 90 were full-bloods. Much of this decrease has been due to epidemics. In the winter of 1852-53 smallpox alone carried off more than 400 of the tribe at Council Grove.

The Kansa figured but slightly in the history of the country until after the beginning of the 19th century, and they never played an important part in frontier affairs. During the 26 years which the Kansa spent at Council Grove, efforts were made to civilize them, but with little success. Mission schools were conducted by the Methodists in 1850-54, and by the Quakers in 1869-73, but the conservatism of the tribesmen prevented the attendance of the children, believing it to be degrading and ruinous to Indian character to adopt the white man's ways. According to T. S. Huffaker, who lived among them, chiefly as teacher, from 1850 to 1873, only one Indian of the tribe was converted to Christianity during that period, while the influence of frontier settlers and traders, with the introduction of liquor, stood in the way of the good that the schools might otherwise have accomplished. While at Council Grove they subsisted largely by hunting the buffalo, until the extinction of the herds, when they took up desultory farming under the instruction of Government teachers, because driven to it by necessity; but the houses erected by the Government for their use they refused to occupy, regarding their own lodges as more healthful and comfortable (G. P. Morehouse, inf'n, 1906).

Say's account, perhaps the most accurate of the earlier notices (Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., 1823), describes the ordinary dress of the men as consisting of a breech-clout of blue or red cloth secured in its place by a girdle, leggings and moccasins without ornamentation, and a blanket thrown over the shoulders. The hair of the chiefs and warriors, except a small lock at the back, was scrupulously removed. The dress of the females consisted of a piece of cloth secured at the waist by a girdle, the sides meeting on the outside of the right thigh, the whole extending downward to the knee. In cold weather or for full dress a similar piece of cloth was thrown over the left shoulder, and leggings of cloth, with a broad protecting border on the outside, and moccasins were worn. They were cultivators of the soil. Tattooing was formerly practised to a limited extent. The chastity of the females was guarded to a greater extent than was usual among the western tribes. The mode of constructing their principal permanent dwellings is described by Say as follows: "The roof is supported by two series of pillars, or rough vertical posts, forked at top for the reception of the transverse connecting pieces of each series; 12 of these posts form the outer series, placed in a circle; and 8 longer ones, the inner series, also describing a circle; the outer wall, of rude frame-work, placed a proper distance from the exterior series of pillars, is 5 or 6 ft high. Poles as thick as the leg at base rest with their butts upon the wall, extending on the cross-pieces, which are upheld by the pillars of the two series, and are of sufficient length to reach nearly to the summit. These poles are very numerous, and, agreeably to the position which we have indicated, they are placed all round in a radiating manner, and support the roof like rafters. Across these are laid long and slender sticks or twigs, attached parallel to each other by means of bark cord; these are covered by mats made of long grass, or reeds, or with the bark of trees; the whole is then covered completely over with earth, which, near the ground, is banked up to the eaves. A hole is permitted to remain in the middle of the roof to give exit to the smoke [see Earth lodge]. Around the walls of the interior a continuous series of mats are suspended; these are of neat workmanship, composed of a soft reed united by bark cord in straight or undulated lines, between which lines of black paint sometimes occur. The bedsteads are elevated to the height of a common seat from the ground, and are about 6 ft wide; they extend in an uninterrupted line around three-fourths of the circumference of the apartment, and are formed in the simplest manner of numerous sticks or slender pieces of wood, resting at their ends on cross-pieces, which are supported by short notched or forked posts driven into the ground; bison skins supply them with a comfortable bedding." Restriction of marriage according to gentes has always been strictly observed by the Kansa. When the eldest daughter of a family married, she controlled the lodge, her mother, and all her sisters, the latter being always the wives of the same man. On the death of the husband the widow became the wife of his eldest brother without ceremony; if there was no brother the widow was left free to select her next husband.

The Kansa gentes as given by Dorsey (15th Rep. B. A. E., 230, 1897) are: 1, Manyinka (earth lodge); 2, Ta (deer); 3, Panka (Ponca); 4, Kanze (Kansa); 5, Wasabe (black bear); 6, Wanaghe (ghost); 7, Kekan (carries a turtle on his back); 8, Minkin (carries the sun on his back); 9, Upan (elk); 10, Khuya (white eagle); 11, Han (night); 12, Ibache (holds the firebrand to sacred pipes); 13, Hangatanganga (large Hanga); 14, Chedunga (buffalo bull); 15, Chizhuwashtage (Chizhu peacemaker); 16, Lunikashinga (thunder-being people). These gentes constitute 7 phratries.

The following were some of the Kansa villages, their names having been gained chiefly through the investigations of Rev. J. O. Dorsey, but in only a few cases are their locations known: Bahekhube, Cheghulin (2), Djestyedje, Gakhulin, Gakhulinulinbe, Igamansabe, Inchi, Ishtakhechiduba, Manhazintanman, Manhazulin, Manhazulintanman, Manyinkatuhudje, Neblazhetama, Niudje, Padjegadjin, Pausulin, Tanmangile, Waheheyngetsyabe, Wazhazhepa, Yuzhemakanchebukhpaye, Zandjezhinga, Zandjulin, and Zhanichi.

Aláhó.—Mooney, inf'n (Kiowa name). Ansaus.—Trumbull, Ind. Wars, 185, 1851 (misprint). Canceze.—Coles, Lewis and Clark Exped., I, xxv, note, 1893. Cancezs.—Lewis (1806) in Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VII, 336, 1905. Can bez.—Le Page Du Pratz, Hist. La., II, 251, 1758. Canips.—Lewis, Trav., 3, 1809. Cans.—Maximilian, Trav., 119, 1843 (so called by the French). C nsa.—Harris, Voy. and Trav., I, map, 685, 1705. Canses.—Smith, Bouquet Exped., 70, 1766. Cansés.—Iberville (1702) in Margry, Déc., IV, 601, 1880. Cansez.—Charlevoix, Voy. N. Am., II, 168, 1766. Canzas.—Le Page Du Pratz, Hist. La., III, 301, 1774. Canzés.—Bienville (1722) in Margry, Déc., VI, 387, 1886. Canzez.—Le Page Du Pratz, Hist. La., I, 324, 1758. Caugh.—Whitehouse (1804) in Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VII, 40, 1905. Cauzes.—Trumbull, Ind. Wars, 185, 1851. Caw.—Farnham, Trav. West. Prairies, 14, 1843. Ercansques.—Salmeron quoted by Dunbar in Mag. Am. Hist., IV, 280, 1880. Escanjaques.—Vétancourt (1693), Teatro Mex., III, 303, repr. 1871. Escanjaques.—Zarate-Salmeron (ca. 1629), Relación, in Land of Sunshine, 45, Dec. 1899 (the original form of this name; possibly the Kansa). E canjaques.—Shea (1662), Peñalosa, 29, 1882 (supposed by Shea to be Comanche). Esquansques.—Ladd, Story of N. Mex., 109, 1891. Estanjaques.—Shea, Peñalosa, 83, 1882. Excansjaque.—Zarate-Salmeron quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 599, 1882. Excansjaquex.—Columbus Memor., 157, 1893 (misprint). Hutanga.—Dorsey, Kansa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 (own name). Ka Anjou.—Bowen, Am. Discov. by the Welsh, 92, 1876. Ka Anzou.—Ibid. (called Chickasaw name; trans. 'first men'). Kah.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 81, 1905 (given as French traders' name). Káh.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 13, 1806. Kamse.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 1057, 1855. Kancas.—La Potherie, Hist. Am., II, 271, 1753. Kancés.—Du Lac, Voy. dans les Louisianes, VI, 1805. Kans.—Pike, Exped., 123, 1810. Kansa.—Ex. Doc. 56, 18th Cong., 1st sess., 9, 1824. Kansa.—Coxe, Carolana, 11, 1741. Kansas.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1804), I, 60, 1904. Kansé.—La Harpe (1722) in Margry, Déc., IV, 365, 1886. Kansé.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883 (Osage and Quapaw name). Kanses.—Iberville (1702) in Margry, Déc., IV, 599, 1880. Kanzez.—Anville, map N. Am., 1752. Kansies.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 557, 1853. Kantha.—Hamilton in Trans. Nebr. Hist. Soc., I, 73, 1885 (Iowa name). Kants.—Smet, Oregon Miss., 161, 1847. Kanzas.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1804), I, 67, 1904. Kanzeis.—Whitehouse (1805), ibid., VII, 189, 1905. Kanzes.—Lewis and Clark, ibid., VI, 84. Kar'-sa.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 13, 1806. Karsea.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 84, 1905 (given as their own name). Kasas.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 37, 1853. Kathági.—Gatschet, MS. B. A. E. (Shawnee name). Kauras.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., I, 186, 1879 (misprint). Ka zau.—M'Coy, Ann. Reg., no. 2, 4, 1836. Kaws.—Gregg, Commerce of Prairies, I, 41, 1844. Kaw'-sa.—Huffaker (1873), inf'n communicated by G. P. Morehouse, 1906 (own name). Kaw'-zá.—Morgan, Am. Soc., 156, 1877. Konaz.—Latham, Philol. and Ethnol. Essays, 296, 1860 (misprint). Konsa.—Gatschet, Kaw vocab., 27, B. A. E., 1878. Kon-ses.—Hunter, Captiv. among Inds., 18, 1-23. Konza.—Maximilian Trav., 119, 1843. Konzas.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., I, 111, 1823. Les pancake.—Shea, Peñalosa, 21, note, 1882 (= Les kan'aké = Escanjaques). Móhtawas.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. Am., 383, 1855 (Comanche name). Mó'tawá.—(ten Kate, Synonymie, 9, 1884 (Comanche name: 'without a lock of hair on the forehead'). Okames.—Morgan in N. Y. Rev., 45, 1870. Okams.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 1057, 1855. Okanis.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 557, 1853.

Quans.—Bourgmont (1723) in Margry, Déc., vi, 393, 1886. Ukasa.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Fox name). Ukasak.—Ibid.

Kansaki (Gānsā'gi, Gānsā'giyi). The name of several distinct Cherokee settlements: (1) on Tuckasegee r., a short distance above the present Webster, in Jackson co., N. C.; (2) on the lower part of Canasauga cr., in McMinn co., Tenn.; (3) at the junction of Canasauga and Coosawatee rs., where afterward was situated the Cherokee capital, New Echota, in Gordon co., Ga.; (4) mentioned in the De Soto narratives as Canasoga or Canasagua, in 1540, on Chattahoochee r., possibly in the neighborhood of Kenesaw mtn., Ga. (J. M.)

Canasagua.—Gentl. of Elvas (1557) in Hakluyt Soc. Pub., ix, 61, 1851. Canasauga.—Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1887. Gānsā'gi.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 518, 1900. Gānsāgiyi.—Ibid.

Kanse ('Kansa'). The 14th Hangka Osage gens and 7th on the right side of the tribal circle. See Kanse.

A'k'a i'niyāk'āci'wa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1797 ('south wind people'). Idats'ē.—Ibid. ('holds a firebrand to the sacred pipes to light them'). Kansa.—Ibid. Ka'se.—Ibid. Pe'ise i'niyāk'āci'wa.—Ibid. ('fire people'). Ta'se i'niyāk'āci'wa.—Ibid. ('wind people').

Kantico, Kanticoy. See Cantico.

Kanulik. A Nushagamiut Eskimo village on the left bank of Nushagak r., near its mouth, in Alaska; pop. 142 in 1880, 54 in 1890.

Kanoalik.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 47, 1880. Kanulik.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884. Karulik.—Elliott, Our Arct. Prov., map, 1886.

Kanutaluhi (Kanūtālū'hi, 'dogwood place'). A Cherokee settlement in N. Georgia about the period of the removal of the tribe in 1839. (J. M.)

Kanuti. A Koyukukhotana village on Koyukuk r., Alaska, lat. 66° 18', with 13 inhabitants in 1885.

Kanuti.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Ko-nōtēnā.—Allen, Rep. Alaska, 97, 1887.

Kanwaiakaku (Kan-wai'-a-ka-ku). A former Chumashan village near the mission of San Buenaventura, Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kanwasowaua (Kānwāsowā'wa, 'long tail'). The panther gens of the Miami. Ka-ne zī'-wa.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 168, 1877. Kānwāsowā'wa.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1906.

Kanyuksa Istichati (i-kan-a 'ground', i-yuk-sa 'point' or 'tip', i. e., point of ground, or peninsula, is-ti-tea-ti 'red men'). The native name of that branch of the Seminole, numbering 136 in 1881, residing s. of Caloosahatchee r., at Miami and Big Cypress Swamp settlements, Fla.—MacCauley in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 509, 1887.

Kanze (archaic and untranslatable; rendered by Dorsey 'wind people'). The 5th gens on the Hangashenu side of the Omaha tribal circle. See Kanse.

Kanze.—Dorsey in 3d Rep. B. A. E., 230, 1885. Kon-za.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., i, 327, 1823. Kun'-zā.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 155, 1877.

Kanze (Kansa). Given by J. O. Dorsey as the 4th Kansa gens, consisting of the Tdjeunikashinga and Tadjezhinga subgentes.

Ic'-hā-she.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 156, 1877 (trans. 'tent'). Kanze.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897. Last-lodge.—Ibid. Lodge-in-the-rear.—Ibid. Tei hāci.—Ibid.

Kapachichin ('sandy shore'). A Ntlakyapamuk town on the w. side of Fraser r., about 28 m. above Yale, Brit. Col.; pop. 52 in 1901.

Kapato'tein.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., ii, 169, 1900. Kapatsitsan.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1901, pt. ii, 164. Klapato'tein.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 5, 1899. Kopachichin.—Brit. Col. map, Ind. Aff., Victoria, 1872. North Bend.—Teit, op. cit. (name given by whites).

Kapaits. The conservative party among the Lagunas of New Mexico (Loew in Wheeler Surv. Rep., vii, 339, 1879). According to Bandler this party constitutes a phratry. See Kayomasho.

Kapaka (Ka'-pa-ka). A former Nishinam village in the valley of Bear r., N. Cal.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 316, 1877.

Kapanai. A former village of the same Costanoan group as Kalindaruk, and connected with San Carlos mission, Cal.

Capanay.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860. Kapanai.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1905.

Kaparakotlik. A summer settlement of Tununirusirmiut Eskimo near the entrance to Ponds inlet, Baffin land.—McClintock, Voy. of Fox, 162, 1859.

Kapaslok (K'apaslōg, 'sand roof'). A village of Ntlakyapamuk on Fraser r., above Suk, Brit. Col. It was formerly a large settlement.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 5, 1899.

Kapawnich. A village of the Powhatan confederacy on the n. bank of the Rappahannock, about Corotoman r., Lancaster co., Va., in 1608.—Smith (1629), Va., i, map, repr. 1819.

Kapiminakouetiik. Mentioned in the Jesuit Relations (26, 1646) as a tribe living at some distance n. of Three Rivers, Can. Doubtless Montagnais, and possibly the Papinachois, q. v.

Kapisilik. An Eskimo village not far from Godthaab, x. Greenland.—Nansen, First Crossing of Greenland, ii, 219, 1890.

Kapkapetlp (Qapqapētlp, 'place of cedar' [?]). A Squawmish village community at Point Grey, Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 475, 1900.

Kapozha ('not encumbered with much baggage'). A Mdewakanton Sioux band. In 1811 they lived between Cannon r. and Minnesota r., and their village, known as Kaposia, was on the e. bank of the Mississippi 15 m. below the mouth of the Minnesota. At that time the chief was Little Crow (Chetanwakanmani), q. v. In 1830 their village was said to be 3 leagues below the mouth of Minnesota r. Another Little Crow, who was chief in 1862, was killed at the close of the Sioux outbreak.

Ca-po-cia band.—Smithson, Misc. Coll., xiv, art. 6, 1878. His-scarlet-people.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 144, note, 1858. Kah-po-sia.—Prescott in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, pt. 2, 171, 1852. Kapozhah.—Snelling, Tales of N. W., 197, 1830. Kahpozhay.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, I, 303, 1854. Kapoga.—Neill in Minn. Hist. Coll., I, 263, 1872. Kapaja.—Long, Exped. St. Peters R., I, 383, 1824. Kapo'ja.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 215, 1897. Ka-po'-sias.—Ramsay in Ind. Aff. Rep., 81, 1850. Kapota.—Ausland, 462, 1887. Ka-po'-za.—Riggs, Dak. Gram. and Dict., 118, 1852. Kapozha.—Williamson in Minn. Geol. Rep., 107, 1884. Little Crow's band.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 118, 1850. Petit Corbeau's band.—Long, Exped. St. Peters R., 380, 1824. Tahohyayhtay-dootah.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 589, 1858 ('his scarlet people': real name of Little Crow). Ta-o-ya-te-du-ta.—Ibid., 144, note.

Kapozha. A band of the Sisseton Sioux. Kap'oja.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 217, 1897. Kapoza.—Riggs quoted by Dorsey, ibid.

Kapulo. The now extinct Crane clan of the Tewa of Hano pueblo, N. L. Arizona. Ka-pu'-lo.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 166, 1894. Kapulo-towa.—Hodge, ibid, IX, 350, 1896 (towa = 'people').

Kaguaith. A former Clallam village at Port Discovery, Wash.

Ka-kaitl.—Gibbs, Clallam and Lummi, 20, 1863. Ka-quaitl.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 457, 1854. Ka-quaitl.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 435, 1855. Skwa-kwel.—Gibbs, Clallam and Lummi, 20, 1863. Squah-quaitl.—U. S. Ind. Treat., 800, 1873. Squa-que-hl.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 429, 1855.

Karaken (Karā'kēn, 'it is white'). A traditionary Iroquois town belonging to the Bear clan and designated as one of recent formation. (J. N. B. H.)

Karakenh.—Hale, Iroquois Book of Rites, 120, 1883. Ka ra ken.—Ibid, 121.

Karakuka. The name given by the main body of the Karok (q. v.) to the divergent dialect spoken on Clear cr. and at Happy Camp, Cal.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1905.

Karankawa. A term that seems to have been given originally to a small tribe near Matagorda bay, Texas, but its application has been extended to include a number of related tribes between Galveston bay and Padre id. The signification of the name has not been ascertained. Although the linguistic material obtained is not sufficient to show positive relation to any other language, there are very strong indications of affinity with the dialects of the Pakawa group—Pakawa, Comecrudo, and Cotonam—still recognized as a part of the Coahuiltecan family. On the other side they were probably connected with the Tonkawa. If any of the coast tribes mentioned by Cabeza de Vaca was identical with the Karankawa, which is not unlikely, it is impossible to determine the fact. The first positive notice of it is found in the accounts of La Salle's ill-fated visit to that section. It was on Matagorda bay, in the country of the tribe at that time, that this French explorer built his Ft St Louis. Joutel (1687) mentions them under the name Koienkahé (Margry, Déc., III, 288, 1878), probably a misprint for Korenkake, which is also given. They are represented as living at that time chiefly between St Louis bay (a part of Matagorda bay) and Maligne (Colorado) r., but are the Indians, though mentioned under the name Clamecöets, who massacred all except 5 of the people left by La Salle at his fort in 1687. If the Ebahamo, Hebobiamos, Bahamos, or Bracamos were identical with the Karankawa or with a portion of the tribe, which is probable, they were living on St Louis or St Bernard bay in 1707 (De l'Isle's map in Winsor, Hist. Am., II, 294, 1886), and are noticed as living at the same place in 1719-21. Their abode is spoken of as an island or peninsula in St Bernard bay (French, Hist. Coll., II, 11, note, 1875). It appears from documents in the Texas archives that in 1793 a part of the Karankawa had become christianized and were then living at the mission of Nuestra Señora del Refugio (q. v.), established in 1791 at the mouth of Mission r. emptying into Aransas bay. The pagan portion of the tribe lived at that time contiguous to the Lipan. Later a number of the tribe were living at the mission of Espíritu Santo de Zúñiga. According to Orozco y Berra (Geog., 382, 1864) the territory of the Lipan near the lower Rio Grande bordered that occupied by the Karankawa in 1796. An incident in the history of the tribe was a fierce battle with Lafitte's band of pirates in consequence of the abduction of one of their women by one of the former; the Indians, however, were forced to retreat before the heavy fire of the buccaneers. With the settlement made by Stephen Austin on the Brazos in 1823 began the decline of the tribe. Conflicts between the settlers and the Indians were frequent, and finally a battle was fought in which about half the tribe were slain, the other portion fleeing for refuge to La Bahia presidio on San Antonio r. They took sides with the Americans in the Texan war of independence, in which their chief, José Maria, was killed, as were most of his warriors, amounting, however, to only about 20. Mention is made of 10 or 12 families living between 1839 and 1851 on Aransas bay and Nueces r. According to Bonnell (Topog. Descrip. Texas, 137, 1840) the Karankawa in 1840 had become reduced to 100, living on Lavaca bay. In 1844, having murdered one of the whites on Guadalupe r., they fled toward the mouth of the Rio Grande, one part stopping on Padre id. and the other passing into Mexico. But few references are made to them after this date, and these are conflicting. A report quoted by Gatschet says the history of these Indians terminates with an attack made on them in 1858 by Juan Nepomuceno Cortina with other rancheros, when they were surprised at their hiding place in Texas and exterminated.

The men are described as very tall and well formed, the women as shorter and fleshier. Their hair was unusually coarse, and worn so long by many of the men that it reached to the waist. Agriculture was not practised by these Indians, their food supply being obtained from the waters, the chase, and wild plants, and, to a limited extent, human flesh; for, like most of the tribes of the Texas coast, they were cannibals. Travel among them was almost wholly by the canoe, or dugout, for they seldom left the coast. Head-flattening and tattooing were practised to a considerable extent. Little is known in regard to their tribal government, further than that they had civil and war chiefs, the former being hereditary in the male line. (See Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 1891.)

The following tribes or villages were probably Karankawan: Coaque, Ebahamo, Emet, Kouyam, Meracouman, Quara, Quinet, and Toyal. The following were in the country of the Karankawa, but whether linguistically connected with them is not certain: Ahehouen, Ahouerhopiheim, Arhau, Chorroco, Doguenes, Kabaye, Kiabaha, Kopano, Las Mulas, Mariames, Mendica, Mora, Ointemarhen, Omenaosse, Pataquilla, Quevenes, San Francisco, and Spichehat.

(A. C. F. J. R. S.)

Caramanes.—Mezières (1778) quoted by Bancroft, N. Mex. States, i, 661, 1886 (distinct from the Xaramanes = Aramanes). Caranacaguas.—Doc. of 1796 quoted by Orozco y Berra, Geog., 382, 1864. Caranacaguas.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 2602, 1736. Caranacahuas.—Maillard, Hist. Tex., 238, 251, 1842. Caranacahuases.—Doc. of 1828 in Soc. Geog. Mex., 504, 1869. Caranacahuases.—Doc. of 1793 quoted by Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 28, 1891. Carancanay.—Robin, Voy. Louisiane, iii, 15, 1807. Carancouas.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 101, 1856. Caranhouas.—Lewis and Clark, Jour., 155, 1840. Carankahuas.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 103, 1856. Carankawaes.—French, Hist. Coll. La., ii, 11, note, 1875. Carankonas.—Domenech, Deserts N. A., i, 440, 1860. Carankouas.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 72, 1806. Carankoways.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 571, 1855. Cazancanay.—Robin, Voy. Louisiane, iii, 14, 1807. Charankoua.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 544, 1853. Clamcoets.—Joutel, Jour. du Dernier Voy. de La Salle, 74, 1713. Coiencahes.—Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723. Coran-canas.—Schermerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Coll., 2d s., ii, 25, 1814. Corankoua.—Brackenridge, Views La., 81, 1814. Coronkawa.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 374, 1822. Coronks.—A popular abbreviation in Texas for Karankawa. Curanacahuases.—Escudero, Not. de Chihuahua, 231, 1834. Karankaways.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 30, 1850. Karankas.—Sanford, Hist. U. S., clxvii, 1819. Karankoo-as.—Brackenridge, Views La., 87, 1814. Kéles.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. ('wrestlers'; Tonkawa name). Kikanonas.—Barcia, Ensayo, 263, 1723. Kironnonas.—French, Hist. Coll. La., ii, 11, note, 1875. Kironomes.—Charlevoix, New France, Shea ed., iv, 88, 1870. Kirononas.—Coxe, Carolina, 38, 1741. Koienkahe.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 288, 1878. Korenkake.—Joutel (1687) in French, Hist. Coll. La., i, 137, 1846. Korons.—Bollaert (1849) quoted by Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 35, 1891. Nda kun-dadéhe.—Gatschet, Lipan MS., B. A. E., 1884 (Lipan name: nda 'people', kun 'water', dadéhe 'going walking'; 'people walking in the water'). Quelamouches.—De Hisle map (ca. 1707) in Winsor, Hist. Am., ii, 294, 1886. Quelancouchis.—Ibervillier (1699) in Margry, Déc., iv, 316, 1880. Quelanhubeches.—Barcia, Ensayo, 294, 1723 (probably identical). Quineres.—

Ibid., 259 (identical?). Quinets.—Douay in Shea, Discov., 207, 210, 1852 (identical?). Tampacuaes.—Reports of the Mex. Border Commission, 406, 1873. Tarancahuases.—Doc. of 1828 quoted by Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 34, 1891. Yakokon la ai.—Gatschet, Tonkawa MS., B. A. E., 145 ('without moccasins'; Tonkawa name, including also the Coahuiltecan coast tribes).

Karankawan Family. A family established by Powell (7th Rep. B. A. E., 82, 1891) on the language of the Karankawa tribe as determined by Gatschet. Although this and the related tribes are extinct, investigation has led to the conclusion that the Coaque, Ebahamo, and other tribes or settlements of the Texas coast mentioned under Karankawa (q. v.) should be included in the family.

Karezi. An unidentified tribe mentioned as living w. of L. Superior and distinct from the Cree.—Jes. Rel. 1667, 23, 1858.

Karhadage ('in the forest.'—Hewitt). An unidentified tribe, band, or village, probably in Canada, with which the Iroquois affirmed they had made peace in 1701. Mentioned with the Chippewa, Mississauga, Nipissing, and others (Livingston in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., iv, 899, 1854). Cf. Karhagaghirooney, Karigouistes, Karrihael. (J. M.)

Karhagaghirooney (Karhagaronon, 'people of the woods'). According to Sir Wm. Johnson a name applied by the Iroquois to wandering Indians n. of Quebec; but as he suggests Carillon on Ottawa r. as the best point for a post of trade with them, they were probably more to the westward. Dobbs located them n. of L. Huron. The term is a collective one, referring to wandering bands of different tribes, possibly to the Têtes de Boule, and to those called O'pimittish Ininiwac by Henry.

Karhagaghirooneys.—Johnson (1764) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 638, 1856. Kirhawguagh Roanu.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 28, 1744.

Karhationni (Kārhatīon'ni), 'a forest lying extended lengthwise'. A traditional Iroquois village belonging to the Wolf clan; location unknown.

(J. N. B. H.)

Karhatyonni.—Hale, Iroquois Book of Rites, 118, 1883. Karhetyonni.—Ibid., 119.

Karhawnradonh (Karhaw'n'hrā'don'). A traditional Iroquois town belonging to the Bear clan and to those towns designated as of recent formation; location unknown. (J. N. B. H.)

Karhawenghradongh.—Hale, Iroquois Book of Rites, 120, 1883. Ka rho wengh ra don.—Ibid., 121.

Kariak. An Eskimo settlement close to Amaralik fjord, w. Greenland.—Crantz, Hist. Greenland, i, 8, 1767.

Kariak. A summer settlement of Aivilirmut Eskimo on Lyon inlet, n. end of Hudson bay.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 450, 1888.

Karigouistes. The name given by the Iroquois to the Catholic Indians of Canada, probably more especially to the Caughnawaga. The name seems to have reference to a long dress, possibly the gowns worn by the priests. (J. N. B. H.)

Caraguists.—Colden (1727), Five Nations, 163, 1747.
Karigouistes.—Bacqueville de la Potherie, III, 200, 1753.
Karigistes.—Bellins (1694) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IV, 95, 1854.

Karkin. A division of the Costanoan Indians inhabiting the country s. of Carquinez straits, San Francisco bay, Cal., the name of the straits being derived from that of the Indians. According to Kotzebue they extended e. as far as the mouth of San Joaquin r.

Carquin.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.
Jarquín.—Ibid. Karkin.—Arroyo de la Cuesta, Idiomas Californias, MS. trans., B. A. E. Karquines.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861. Korekins.—Kotzebue, New Voy. (1823-26), II, 141, 1830.

Karluk. A Kaniagmiut village on the n. coast of Kodiak id., Alaska, where there are large salmon canneries; pop. 302 in 1880, 1,123 in 1890, 1,864 in 1900. Carleok.—Lislanski (1805), quoted by Baker, Geog. Diet. Alaska, 1902. Karlooch.—Ibid. Karluta.—Coxe, after Shelikof, quoted by Baker, ibid. Nunakachwak.—Holmberg, Ethnög. Skizz., map, 1855.

Karmakdjuin (Qarmagdjuin, 'large huts'). A summer settlement of the Akudnirmiut Eskimo on Home bay, Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 441, 1888.

Karmakdjuin. A village of Padlimiut Eskimo on the coast just n. of Exeter sd., Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Karmang (Qarmang, 'hut'). A summer settlement of Talirpingmiut Okomiut Eskimo at the n. w. end of Nettilling lake, w. of Cumberland sd.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Karmenak. An Ita Eskimo settlement in N. Greenland.—Kane, Arct. Explor., II, 127, 1856.

Karmentaruka. A former village of the Rumsen, connected with San Carlos mission, Cal.

Karmentaruka.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860.

Karok (karuk, 'upstream'; they have no name for themselves other than that for 'men' or 'people', arar, whence Arra-arra, Ara-ara, etc.). The name by which the Indians of the Quoratean family have, as a tribe, been generally called. They lived on Klamath r. from Releap cr. to Indian cr., n. w. Cal. Below them on the river were the Yurok, above them the Shasta, to their e. were other Shastan tribes, while on the w. they were separated by a spur of the Siskiyou mts. from the Yurok and the Athapascan Tolowa. Salmon r., a tributary of the Klamath, was not Karok territory except for about 5 m. from its mouth, but was held mainly by Shastan tribes. While the Karok language is fundamentally different from the languages of the adjacent Hupa and Yurok, the Karok people closely resemble these two tribes in mode of life and culture, and any description given of the latter will apply to the Karok. They differ from the Yurok principally in two points: One, that owing to the absence of redwood they do not make canoes but buy them from the Yurok; the other, that they celebrate a series of annual ceremonies called "making the world," which are held at Panamenik, Katimin, and Inam, with a similar observance at Amaikiara, while the Yurok possess no strictly analogous performances. The Karok had no divisions other than villages, and while these extended along the entire extent of their territory, three important clusters are recognizable, in each of which there was one village at which certain ceremonies were held that were observed nowhere else. Panamenik, on the site of Orleans Bar, and several other settlements formed the first group; the second was about the mouth of Salmon r. and comprised Amaikiara, Ashipak, Ishipishi, Katimin, Shanamkarak, and others; in the third and northernmost group the most important villages were Inam, at the mouth of Clear cr., and Asisufuunuk at Happy Camp. In the first two groups a single dialect was spoken; in the last, the farthest upstream, a divergent dialect called Karakuka was employed.

Following is a list of the Karok villages: Amaikiara, Aperger, Apyu, Aranimokw, Ashipak, Asisufuunuk, Chainiki, Chawakoni, Chiniits, Couth, Homnipa, Homuarup, Ift, Inam, Inotuks, Ishipishi, Ishwidip, Iyis, Katimin, Katipara, Kokaman, Kworatem, Ohetur, Olegel, Oler, Opegoi, Panamenik, Pasara, Sawuara, Shanamkarak, Shegoashkwu, Sumaun, Sunum, Supasip, Tishrawa, Tsano, Tsofikara, Tui, Uchapa, Unharik, Wetsitsiko, Wopum, and Yutoyara.

Ara.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. 1, xlvii, 1890 (sig. 'man'). Ara-ara.—Ibid. Arra-ara.—Crook, ibid., III, 447, 1877. Cahrocs.—Powers in Overland Mo., IX, 157, 1872. Cahroes.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 504, 1878. Cisquiuows.—Meek in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 10, 1848 (may include also Yurok and Shasta). Ivapi.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (Shasta name). Kahrak.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 151, 1853. Karok.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 19, 1877. Orleans Indians.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (sometimes locally used, especially downstream from the Karok territory). Patesick.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 194, 1853. Patih-riks.—Meyer, Nach dem Sacramento, 282, 1855. Peh-tsik.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 138, 1853 (Yurok name; sig. 'upstream'—Kroeber). Petit-sick.—McKee, op. cit., 161. Petsikla.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (Yurok name). Upper Klamath.—McKee, op. cit., 194.

Karrihaet. Given as the name of a tribe, probably in Canada, with whom the Iroquois made peace in 1701. Mentioned with the Chippewa, Missisauga, Nipissing, and others.—Livingston (1701) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IV, 899, 1854. Cf. Karigouistes, Karhadage.

Karsok. An Eskimo village in w. Greenland, lat. 72° 40'.

Karsck.—Science, XI, 259, 1888. Karsuk.—Kane, Arct. Explor., I, 458, 1856.

Karsuit. A village of Ita Eskimo on Inglefield gulf, n. Greenland.

Karsioot.—Kane, Arct. Explor., II, 212, 1856. Karsioot.—Hayes, Arct. Boat. Journ., 307, 1860.

Karsukan. A spring settlement of Okomiut Eskimo of Saunia, on the coast of Baffin land, n. of Cumberland sd.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Karusuit ('the caves'). A village of the Talirpingmiut Okomiut Eskimo on Nettilling fjord, w. shore of Cumberland sd.; pop. 29 in 1883.

Kaioosuit.—Boas in Deutsche Geog. Blätt., VIII, 32, 1885. Karussut.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., no. 80, 70, 1885. Kemasuit.—Kumlien in Bull. Nat. Mus., no. 15, 15, 1879. Kemesuit.—Ibid. Kimmockswick.—Wareham in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., XII, 24, 1842. Qarussuit.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 426, 1888.

Karusuk. An Eskimo settlement near Ameralik fjord, lat. 64° 20', w. Greenland.—Nansen, First Crossing of Greenland, II, 416, 1890.

Kasaan (pronounced by Haida Gasa'n, but said to be from Tlingit Kā'si-ān, 'pretty town'). One of the three towns in Alaska still occupied by the Haida; situated on Skowl arm of Kasaan bay, e. coast of Prince of Wales id. Chat-chee-nie, the name of a Kaigani town in John Work's list of 1836-41, was either a camping place of the people of Kasaan or a town occupied by them before moving to the latter place. In Work's time it had 18 houses and 249 people. Petroff gives the population of Kasaan (and "Skowl") in 1880 as 173, and the Census of 1890 as 46; the present number is insignificant. The family that settled here was the Tadjilanas. (J. R. S.) Gasa'n.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 282, 1905. Kasaan.—U. S. Coast Surv. map of Alaska, southeast sec., Apr. 1898. Kasaan.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884. Kasaan Hade.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895.

Kasaktikak (Ka-sak-ti'-kat). A former Chumashan village at a place called Bajada de la Cañada, in Ventura co., Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kasenos (Ka'-se-nos). A village, probably of the Cathlacum, formerly situated where Scappoose cr. empties into Willamette slough, Oreg.—Gibbs, MS. 248, B. A. E.

Kashahara. The Karok name of the Wintun of Trinity r., n. Cal. (Kroeber, inf'n, 1903). The Trinity r. Wintun consisted of the Normuk, Tientien, and Waikenmuk.

Kashaiak. A Togiagamiut Eskimo village on Togiak r., near its junction with the Kashaiak, Alaska; pop. 181 in 1880.

Kashaiak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kashaiyak.—Spurr and Post quoted by Baker, ibid. Kissaiakh.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884. Kissiak.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 49, 1880. Kissiak.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1900.

Kashiga. An Aleut village on Unalaska id., Alaska. Pop. 41 in 1833 (at which date it was the headquarters of the foreman of the Russian-American Co. for the w. half of Unalaska), according to Veniaminoff; 74 in 1874, according to Shiesnekov; 73 in 1880; 46 in 1890.

Kashiga.—Sarichef (1792) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kashiga.—11th Census, Alaska, 89, 1893. Kashigin.—Ibid. Koshiginskoe.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 142, 1855. Koshiginskoi.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. Alaska, 225, 1875. Koshigin.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 20, 1880. Koshiginskoe.—Veniaminoff, Zapiski, II, 202, 1840.

Kashigalak. A Kaialigmiut Eskimo village in the middle of Nelson id., Alaska; pop. 10 in 1880.

Kashigalagumute.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 54, 1881. Kashigalagumut.—Nelson (1878) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kashigalagumut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1900. Kashigalak.—Baker, op. cit.

Kashiwe (Kas-hi'-we). A former Chumashan village near Newhall, Ventura co., Cal., at a place now called Cuesta Santa Susana.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kashkachuti (Kash-kach'-u-ti). A pueblo of the Acoma which, according to tradition, was inhabited in prehistoric times during the migration of the tribe from the mythic Shipapu in the indefinite n.—Hodge in Century Mag., LVI, 15, May, 1898.

Kashkekoan ('people of [the r.] Káshk'). A Tlingit division at Yakutat, Alaska, that is said to have migrated from the Athapascan country on the upper part of Copper r. It belongs to the Raven phratry. Kák'le qoan.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Káshke-kon.—Krause, Tinkit Ind., 116, 1885.

Kashong. A former Seneca settlement on Kashong cr., at its entrance into Seneca lake. It is first mentioned in 1765, and contained 14 houses when destroyed by Sullivan in Sept., 1779. (J. M.)

Cashaem.—MS. Jour. of 1787 quoted by Conover, Kanadasega and Geneva MS., B. A. E. Cashong.—Ibid. Gagh-sieanhgwe.—Ibid. Gaghsiungwa.—Ibid. Gagh-singhwa.—Ibid. Gaghsonghwa.—Kirkland (1765) quoted by Conover, ibid. Gagsonghwa.—Ibid. Gahasieanhgwe.—Ibid. Garhawquash.—Morgan, League Iroq., map, 1851. Gathsiungwa.—Jour. of 1687 quoted by Conover, MS., B. A. E. Gothescunqueon.—Ibid. Gothsenquean.—Ibid. Gothseunquean.—Ibid. Go'shsinquea.—Ibid. Kashanquash.—Ibid. Kashong.—Ibid. Kashonquash.—Ibid. Kershong.—Ibid. Kushang.—Ibid. Shenawaga.—Ibid.

Kash's Village. A summer camp of a Stikine chief on Etolin id., Alaska; 40 people were there in 1880.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

Kashtata (K'ac-ta'-tā). A former Takelma village on the s. side of Rogue r., above Leaf cr. and Galice cr., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 235, 1890.

Kashtok (Kac-tō'k). A former Chumashan village in the interior of Ventura co., Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kashtu (Kac-tū). A former Chumashan village on the Piru, a tributary of Santa Clara r., Ventura co., Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kashunuk. A Magemint Eskimo village on the Kashunuk outlet of Yukon r., Alaska; pop. 125 in 1880, 232 in 1890, 208 in 1900.

Kashunahmiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 111, 1893. Kashunok.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 54, 1884. Kashunuk.—Nelson (1878) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kesuna.—12th Census Rep.

Kashutuk.—A Chnagmiut Eskimo village on an island of the Yukon delta, Alaska; pop. 18 in 1880.

Kachutok.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kashutuk.—Nelson (1878) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kushutuk.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899.

Kasiagianguit ('little freshwater seals.'—Boas). An Eskimo village near Ameralik fjord, w. Greenland, lat. 64° 10'.—Nansen, First Crossing of Greenland, II, 376, 1890.

Kasihta. A former Lower Creek town on the E. bank of Chattahoochee r., in Chattahoochee co., Ga., 2½ m. below Kavita, its branch settlements extending along the w. side of the river. It was visited by De Soto in 1540, and is referred to under the name Casiste by the Gentleman of Elvas as a great town. In 1799 it was considered the largest of the Lower Creek towns, containing, with its dependencies, 180 warriors and in 1832 it had 620 families and 10 chiefs. Hawkins (Sketch, 58, 1843), in 1799, described a large conical mound, with the "old Cussetah town" near it, which afterward was settled by the Chickasaw. Apatai, now spelled Upatoie, was a branch village. The Kasihta people believed they were descended from the sun, and a curious migration legend, preserved by Von Reck, existed among them (see Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 133-34, 1884), from which it appears that the Kawita were originally the same people as those of Kasihta, and that they separated in very ancient times. Cusseta, a variant of Kasihta, is now the name of a town in Chambers co., Ala., and another is in Chattahoochee co., Ga. A district in the Creek Nation, Okla., was once called Cuseta. (A. S. G.)

Casawda.—Crawford (1836) in H. R. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 24, 1838. Casetais.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 126, 1816. Casica.—Barcia (1693), Ensayo, 287, 1723. Casista.—Ibid., 333. Casiste.—Gentleman of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 155, 1850. Cassetta h.—White (1787) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 21, 1832. Cassita—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 251, 1855. Cuseta.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 365, 1854. Cusetahs.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1779), 69, 1837. Cusetas.—Lattre, Carte des Etats-Unis, 1781. Cusheta s.—Coxe, Carolana, 23, 1741. Cusitas.—Aleedo, Dic. Geog., I, 738, 1786. Cusitash.—White (1787) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 20, 1832. Cusseta.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 189, 1888. Cussetahs.—McGillivray (1787) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 18, 1832. Cussetas.—Pickett, Hist. Ala., passim, 1851. Cussetau.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1814), 162, 1837. Cusset w.—Census of 1832 in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854. Cussetuh.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 25, 57, 1848. Cusitahs.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Cusitto.—Romans, Florida, I, 281, 1775. Cusittas.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 126, 1816. Kacistas.—Milford, Mémoire, 118, 1802. Old Cusetau.—Woodward, Reminis., 14, 1859. Usseta.—Bartram, Travels, 457, 1791.

Kasilof. A Knaiakhotana village on the E. coast of Cook inlet, at the mouth of Kasilof r., Alaska. A settlement was planted there by the Russians in 1786, called St George. Pop. 31 in 1880; 117, in 7 houses, in 1890.

Georgiefskaia.—Russian map cited by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 232, 1902. Kassilo.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884. Kassilof.—Ibid., map. Kussilof.—Post route map, 1903.

Kasispä (käsl's 'a point', pä locative: 'at the point'). A Paloos village at Ainsworth, at the junction of Snake and Columbia rs., Wash.

Cospisa.—Ross, Fur Hunters, I, 185, 1855. Kasispä.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 735, 1896.

Kaska. Given by Dawson (Rep. Geol. Surv. Can., 199b, 1889) as a division of the Nahane, comprising the Achetotena (Etchareottine) and Dahotena (Etagottine) tribes. They are described as undersized and of poor physique, have the reputation of being timid, and are lazy and untrustworthy, but are comparatively prosperous, as their country yields good furs in abundance. According to Morice (Trans. Can. Inst., VII, 519, 1892-93), however, "Kaska is the name of no tribe or subtribe, but McDane cr. is called by the Nahane Kasha . . . and this is the real word which, corrupted into Cassiar by the whites, has since a score of years or more served to designate the whole mining region from the Coast range to the Rocky mts., along and particularly to the N. of the Stickeen r." The name Kaska is not recognized by the Indians themselves, who form the third division of Morice's classification of the Nahane. They number about 200. (A. F. C.)

Kaskakoedi ('people of Kasek'). A division of the Raven phratry of the Tlingit, living at Wrangell, Alaska. They are said to have come from among the Masset Haida and to have received their name from a place (Käsqle'k'u) where they camped during the migration. Kaas-ka-qua-tee.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. K'asq'agwé'dé.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes of Can., 25, 1889. Käsq'akwé'di.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Kassra-küedi.—Krause, Tlingit Ind., 120, 1885.

Kaskanak. A Kiatagmiut Eskimo village on Kvichak r., where it flows from L. Iliamna, Alaska; pop. 119 in 1880, 66 in 1890.

Kaskanakh.—Post route map, 1903. Kaskanek.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, map, 1880. Kaskinakh.—Ibid., 45.

Kaskaskia (perhaps akin to käskäskahmwa, 'he scrapes it off by means of a tool.' The Foxes have always held the Peoria in low esteem, and in their traditions claim to have destroyed most of them on a rocky island in a river.—Wm. Jones). Once the leading tribe of the Illinois confederacy, and perhaps rightly to be considered as the elder brother of the group. Although the first knowledge of this confederacy obtained by the whites related, in all probability, to the Peoria while they yet resided on the Mississippi, it is probable that the references to them in the Jesuit Relations of 1670 and 1671, from the reports of Father Allouez, apply to the Kaskaskia on upper Illinois r. and possibly to some minor tribes or bands connected therewith whose names have not been preserved. Although it has been asserted that earlier visits than that of Marquette in 1673 were made to this people by the whites, there is no satisfactory evidence to justify this conclusion. Their chief village, which had the same name as that of the tribe, is supposed to have been situated about the present site of Utica, La Salle co., Ill. Marquette states that at the time of his first visit the village was composed of 74 cabins. He returned again in the spring of 1674 and established the mission of Immaculate Conception among them. It appears that by this time the village had increased to somewhat more than a hundred cabins. Allouez, who followed as the next missionary, states that when he came to the place in 1677 the village contained 351 cabins, and that while the village formerly consisted of but one nation (tribe), at the time of his visit it was composed of 8 tribes or peoples, the additional ones having come up from the neighborhood of the Mississippi. Although the known Peoria village was some distance away, it may be that at this time this tribe and the Moingwena resided at the Kaskaskia village. This is implied in an expression by Gravier, who speaks of the Mugulasha "forming a village with the Baiougoula [Bayougoula] as the Piouarouia [Peoria] do with the Kaskaskia." This, however, would lead to the supposition, if the statement by Allouez be accepted as correct, that there were other bands or tribes collected here at the time of his mission whose names have not survived. Possibly they may have been bands of the Mascoutin or the Miami. Kaskaskia was the village of the Illinois which La Salle reached about the close of Dec., 1679, on his first visit southward from the lakes. He found it unoccupied, however, the inhabitants being on a hunting expedition. The French mission was maintained at this place under Fathers Rasles, Gravier, Binneteau, Pinet, and Marest, until about the close of 1700. At that time the Kaskaskia, influenced by a desire to join the French in Louisiana, resolved to separate from their brethren and migrate to the lower Mississippi. Gravier was much opposed to this movement, and although he arrived on the ground too late to prevent their departure, he was successful in checking the blow which the indignant Peoria and Moingwena were about to inflict on them. It was also through his influence that they were induced to halt at the mouth of Kaskaskia r., where they made their home, on or near the site of the present town of Kaskaskia, Randolph co., Ill., until their removal w. of the Mississippi under the treaty of Oct. 27, 1832. According to Hutchins, in 1764 the Kaskaskia numbered 600, but he gives the number in 1778 as 210 individuals, including 60 warriors. They were then in a village about 3 m. n. of the present town of Kaskaskia, greatly degenerated and debauched. The tribe participated in the treaties of Greenville, Ohio, Aug. 3, 1795, and Ft Wayne, Ind., June 7, 1803, made by the tribes of the n. w. with Anthony Wayne and William H. Harrison. In the treaty of Aug. 13, 1803, at Vincennes, Ind., it is stated that the tribe constitutes "the remains of and rightfully represents all the tribes of the Illinois Indians, originally called the Kaskaskia, Mitchigamia, Cahokia, and Tamaroi." By this treaty they were taken under the immediate care and patronage of the United States and promised protection against the other Indians. By treaty made at Castor Hill, Mo., Oct. 27, 1832, they ceded to the United States all their lands e. of the Mississippi except a single tract reserved to Ellen Ducoigne, the daughter of their late chief. Previous to this, however, the remnants of the various tribes of the Illinois confederacy had consolidated with the Kaskaskia and Peoria. By the treaty of Washington, May 30, 1854, the consolidated tribes ceded to the United States part of the tracts held by them under the treaty of 1832, above mentioned, and under the treaty with the Piankashaw and Wea, Oct. 29, 1832, reserving 160 acres for each member of the tribe and 10 sections as a tribal reserve. By the treaty of Washington, Feb. 23, 1867, land was assigned them in the n. e. corner of Indian Ter.

The consolidated bands, including also the remnant of the Wea and Piankashaw and now known officially as Peoria, numbered altogether in 1905 only 195, hardly one of whom was of pure Indian blood.

Their totem or crest was an arrow notched at the feather, or two arrows supporting each other like a St Andrew's cross.

(J. M. C. T.)

Cacachias.—La Salle (1682) in Margry, Déc., II, 96, 1877. Cacarilica.—Hennepin, New Discov., 310, 1698 (2an Illinois division about 1680). Cas.—Marain (1753) in Margry, Déc., VI, 651, 1886. Cascachias.—Mémorial of 1718 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 891, 1855. Cascacia.—La Salle (1682) in Margry, Déc., I, 508, 1875. Cascavias.—La Harpe (1719) ibid., VI, 310, 1886. Cascaquas.—Güsefeldt, map, 1784. Cascachia.—La Salle (1681) in Margry, Déc., II, 134, 1877. Cascaskias.—Perkins and Peck, Annals of the West, 55, 1850. Cascaquia.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 476, 1878. Caskaguias.—De l'Isle map (ca. 1710) in Neill, Minn., 1858. Caskaquias.—Doc. of 1743 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., X, 142, 1858. Casquasquia.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 481, 1878. Casquiars.—Writer in Smith, Bou- quet Exped., 66, 1766. Casquias.—Smith, ibid. Huskhuskeys.—Croghan (1765) in Monthly Am. Jour. Geol., 272, 1831. Kasaskias.—La Harpe (1719) in Margry, Déc., vi, 309, 1886. Kachkacha.—Allouez (1677) in Shea, Miss. Val., 74, 1852. Kachkaska.—Marquette map (ca. 1678) in Shea, ibid. Kakaskigi.—Gatschet, Shawnee MS., B. A. E., 1879 (Shawnee name, sing., Kakaski). Kaskasky.—Imlay, West. Ter., 364, 1797. Karhaski.—Loskiel (1794) quoted by Rutenber, Tribes Hudson r., 336, 1872. Karkadia.—Perkins and Peck, Annals of the West, 61, 1850. Kasgresquios.—Buchanan, N. Am. Inds., 155, 1824. Kaskaisas.—Doc. of 1717 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 876, 1855. Kaskaiskas.—Jefferys, French Doms., pt. 1, map, 1761. Kaskakias.—Chauvignerie (1736) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 1056, 1855. Kskakie.—Vaudreuil (1760), ibid., x, 1042, 1858. Kaskascia.—La Salle (1680) in Margry, Déc., ii, 121, 1877. Kaskasia.—Burton, City of the Saints, 117, 1861. Kaskaskia.—La Salle (1682) in Margry, Déc., ii, 201, 1877. Kaskaskians.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1795), 184, 1873. Kskaskies.—Greenville treaty (1795) in Harris, Tour, 241, 1805. Kaskasquia.—Charlevoix (1724) in Schoolcraft, Travels, 136, 1821. Kaskasies.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 127, 1816. Kasqui.—Coxe, Carolina, 13, 1741 (identical?). Kasquias.—Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 351, 1816. Kasquasquias.—Smyth, Tour in U. S., i, 317, 1784. Keskeskias.—Doc. of 1764 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 641, 1856. Kiskuskas.—Smyth, Tour in U. S., ii, 247, 1784 (place name). Kuilkia.—Hennepin, New Discov. (1698), ii, 667, 1903. Kuskeiskees.—Johnson (1767) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 966, 1856. Kuskuske.—Adair, Am. Inds., 371, 1775. Quasquens.—Iberville (ca. 1701) in Margry, Déc., iv, 541, 1880. Roins c.—Mémorial of 1718 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 891, 1855 (village). Rouinsac.—ibid., 886 (said in note to be Kaskaskia village). Tchatchakigouas.—La Salle (1679-81) in Margry, Déc., i, 481, 1877.

Kas-lanas (Qlās lā'nas, 'pitch-town people'). A family of the Raven clan of the Haida. They inhabited the w. coast of Moresby id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col., had no crests like the other Haida divisions, and were regarded as barbarous by the latter. Their principal town was in Tasoo harbor.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 270, 1905.

Kaslukug. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Kasnatchin. A Knaikhotana village at Anchor pt., Kenai penin., Alaska; pop. 29 in 1880.

Kasnatchin.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 75, 1902. Laida.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884. Laidnojo.—Baker, op. cit. (Russian name: 'icy').

Kaso (Kā'so). A former Chumashan village at Cañada del Diablo, Ventura co., Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kasoongkta. A tribe or band conquered by the Iroquois and settled among the Onondaga.—Clark, Onondaga, i, 305, 1849.

Kassiank. A Togiagamiut village on Togiak r., Alaska, having two dance houses; pop. 615 in 1880, 50 in 1890.

Kassiachamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893. Kassianmute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884.

Kassigiakdjuaq (Qassigiagdjuaq). A winter settlement of Nugumiut Eskimo on Frobisher bay, s. e. Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kassovo (from Gashowa, pl. of Gashwusha.—Kroeber). A Yokuts tribe formerly living on Dry cr., Fresno co., Cal. Several families of survivors now live in Winchell gulch, near Pollasky.

Car-soos.—Johnston (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc., 61, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 23, 1852. Cas-sans.—Barbour (1852) in Sen. Ex. Doc., 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 252, 1853. Cas-soos.—McKee et al. in Ind. Aff. Rep., 223, 1851. Casson.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 782, 1899. Cassos.—Johnston (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc., 61, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 22, 1852. Cosos.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 18, 1863 (same?). Costrowers.—Hendley in Ind. Aff. Rep., 512, 1854. Coswas.—Lewis in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1857, 399, 1858. Gashowu.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906 (correct form; pl. Gashwusha). Gosh-sho-o.—Merriam in Science, xix, 915, June 15, 1904. Kash-a-woosh-ah.—ibid., 916 (Wiksachi name). Kas-so'-vo.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 370, 1877. Kosh-sho'-o.—Merriam, op. cit.

Kasta (Qā'sta). A legendary Haida town on Copper bay, Moresby id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. It was named for the creek (Skidegate cr.), which ran near it, and was occupied by the Daiyuahl-lanas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Kastichewanuk. A Cree band on Albany r. of Hudson bay in 1770.—Hutchins (1770) in Richardson, Arctic Exped., ii, 37, 1851.

Kata (K'ā'ta, 'biters,' referring to the Arikara). A tribal division of the Kiowa; so called, not because of Arikara origin, but because they were more intimate with that tribe in trade and otherwise when the Kiowa lived in the N.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1079, 1896.

Katagemane (Kā-ta'-ge-mā-ne, 'starving'). Given by Morgan (Anc. Soc., 171, 1877) as a division of the Piegan tribe of the Siksika, q. v.

Katagkak. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on Innoko r., above its junction with the Yukon, Alaska.

Ighelkostlende.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850. Katagkag-miouete.—ibid.

Katagwadi (Katagwa'di). A Tlingit division formerly resident at Sitka, Alaska, but now almost extinct. (J. R. S.)

Katabuac. A former Chumashan village connected with Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861.

Katamoonchink ('hazelnut grove.'—Lewis). The Indian name of the site of Whiteland, Chester co., Pa., and perhaps also of a Delaware (?) village formerly near West Whiteland. Mentioned by Lewis (1824) in Day, Penn., 222, 1843.

Katana (Kā'tana). A former Haida town on Louise id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col., in possession of the Kagiaks-kegawai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Katchadi (people of Katch, a creek on Admiralty id.). A Tlingit division at Kake and Wrangell, Alaska. Some of them intermarried with the Athapascans on the upper Stikine.

Kaadg ett ee.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 489, 1855 (after Kane; misprint). Kaady-ett-ee.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. K'at'a'dē.—Boas, Fifth Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 25, 1889. Katchadi.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 120, 1885. Qā'teadi.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Katchanaak (Q̄atcxa'na-āk', 'Hip lake'). The native name for the Tlingit town now known as Wrangell, the winter town of the Stikine Indians of Alaska. It was so named because the mountain behind it resembles a human hip and the inner harbor is so shut in as to appear like a lake. Indian pop. 228 in 1890; total population (white and Indian) 868 in 1900. (J. R. S.)

Katearas. One of the principal villages of the Tuscara in 1669, "a place of great Indian trade and commerce"; situated on a s. branch of Roanoke r., N. C.

Katearas.—Lederer (1672), Discov., 22, 1902. Kateras.—Ibid., map.

Katernuna (perhaps jargon 'Kater land'). A Talirpingmiut Eskimo village of the Okomiut tribe on Cumberland sd., Baffin land.—Howgate, Cruise of Florence, 84, 1879.

Kathio. A large village of the eastern Dakota, the Mdewakanton, Wahpekute, Sisseton, and Wahpeton, who were gathered about Mille Lac in the 17th and 18th centuries. Brower (Kathio, 33, 1901) locates the village at the outlet of Mille Lac, Minn., and thinks it was a Mdewakanton settlement. It was visited in 1659 by Radisson; in 1679 by Du Luth, who speaks of it as a great village; and by Hennepin in 1680. According to Warren (Hist. Ojibways, 160, 1885) it was destroyed by the Chippewa about 1750. See Du Luth in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 795, 1855.

Kathlaram. A body of Salish formerly under Fraser superintendency, British Columbia; now no longer officially reported.

Kathlaram.—Canadian Ind. Aff., 79, 1878. Kathlarem.—Ibid., 138, 1879.

Katimin. A Karok village in N. w. Cal., on the E. bank of Klamath r., a mile above the mouth of the Salmon, opposite Ishipishi. It was believed by the Karok to be the center of the world, contained a sacred house and sweat-house, and was the scene of the deer-skin dance and of an annual ceremony called "making the world." The village was burned by the whites in 1852.

Sche-woh.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 151, 1853. Se-wah.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 164, 1853. Shegwu.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (Yurok name). Si-wahs.—McKee, op. cit., 211.

Katipiarā. A Karok village of two houses on the s. bank of Klamath r., Cal., nearly opposite Orleans Bar; described by Gibbs in 1852. See Tsana.

Kah-tee-pee-rah.—Gibbs, MS. Miscel., B. A. E., 1852. Katipiarā.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1904.

Katiru (Ka-ti'-ru). One of the 4 divisions of the main body of the Shasta, living in Klamath valley, from Seiad valley to Happy Camp, N. Cal. (R. B. D.)

Katkaayi ('island people', from an island at the mouth of Alek r.). A Tlingit division at Sitka belonging to the Raven phratry.

Chrátka-ari.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 118, 1885. Q̄a'tkaayi—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Katkwaahlta ('town on the point of a hill'). A Tlingit town about 6 m. above the mouth of Chilkat r., Alaska; pop. 125 in 1880.

Katkwaltu.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 100, 1885. Kutkwutlu.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 31, 1884. Q̄atq'wā'aitu.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Katlagulak (KLā'gulaq). A Chinookan tribe formerly living on the s. bank of Columbia r., in Columbia co., Oreg., 2 m. below Rainier.—Boas, Kathlamet Texts, 6, 1901.

Katlaminihim. A Chinookan tribe formerly occupying the s. end of Sauvie id., Multnomah co., Oreg. Their principal village was on the s. w. side of the island, in Willamette r. In 1806 Lewis and Clark estimated their number at 280 in 12 houses. In 1850 they were said by Lane to be associated with the Cathlacumup and Namoi.

Cathlaminihim.—Stuart in Nouv. Ann. Voy., x, 23, 1821. Cathlamenamen.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 368, 1822. Cathlaminihim.—Franchère, Narr., 135, 1854. Cathlamen nimins.—Stuart, op. cit., 115. Clam-nah-min-na-mun.—Lewis and Clark Exped., Coues ed., 913, note, 1893. Clanaminamuns.—Lewis and Clark Exped., II, 212, 1814. Clanaminanuns.—Ibid., II, 268, 1817. Clannahminamun.—Ibid., II, 226, 1814. Clan-nar-min-a-mon's.—Clark (1806) in Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, IV, 220, 1905. Clannarminimuns.—Drake, Bk. Inds., VII, 1848. Clan-nar-min-na-mon.—Clark (1806) in Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, IV, 216, 1905. Clannarminnamuns.—Lewis and Clark Exped., II, 473, 1814. Katlaminihim.—Framboise quoted by Gairdner in Jour. Geog. Soc. Lond., XI, 255, 1841. Namanamin.—Lane in Sen. Ex. Doc. 52, 31st Cong., 1st sess., 172, 1850. Namananim.—Lane in Ind. Aff. Rep., 161, 1850. Towannahook.—Lewis and Clark Exped., Coues ed., III, 913, 1893 (error).

Katlamoiik. Said by Boas (Kathlamet Texts, 6, 1901) to be a Chinookan tribe formerly living at the site of the present town of Rainier, Columbia co., Oreg., but later (inf'n, 1904) given as the Chinook name of the locality of the modern Rainier, and of Rainier itself.

Galā'moix.—Boas, inf'n, 1904. KLā'moix.—Boas, Kathlamet Texts, 6, 1901.

Katlān's Village. A summer camp of one of the Taku chiefs of the Tlingit named Q̄ā'n'i; 106 people were there in 1880.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

Katlian. The principal chief at Sitka, Alaska, at the time it was settled by the Russians under Baranoff. Also called Kotlian. The first fort established by Baranoff in 1799 was destroyed by the natives under Katlian's leadership, and they afterward entrenched themselves so strongly in a palisaded fort reinforced by stone that the Russians, returning 5 years later, had great difficulty in dislodging them. The name is that usually borne by the chief of the Kiksadi clan of the Tlingit. (J. R. S.)

Katluhtna ('lovers of glass beads'). A Knaiakhotanacian.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 407, 1851.

Katmai. A Kaniagmute Eskimo village on the s. e. coast of Alaska penin.; pop. 218 in 1880, 132 in 1890.—Petroff in 10th Cens-us, Alaska, 28, 1884.

Kato. A Kuneste tribe or band formerly living in Cahto and Long valleys, Mendocino co., Cal. These were probably the people mentioned by McKee as occupying the second large valley of Eel r., numbering about 500 in 1851, and differing in language from the Pomo, a fact which has long been lost sight of. Powers divides them into Kai Pomo, Kastel Pomo, and Kato Pomo, and gives a Kulanapan vocabulary. They have recently been found to belong to the Athapascan stock, and closely related to the Wailaki, although they resemble the Pomo in culture. (P. E. G.)

Batemdaikai.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 77, 1856. Batem-da-kai-ee.—Gibbs in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 434, 1853. B-tem-da-kaii.—Powell in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 491, 1877. Batin-da-kia.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 210, 1851. Cabadilapo.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 148, 1853. Cahto Pomo.—Powers in Overland Mo., IX, 500, 1872. Kai Po-mo.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 148, 1877. Ká-to-Po-mo.—Ibid., 150. Ki-Pomas.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 1864, 119, 1865. Laleshiknom.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (Yuki name). Tlokeang.—Kroeber, Coast Yuki MS., Univ. Cal. (own name).

Katmemetunne ('people by the deep water'). A former village of the Mishikhwutmetunne on Coquille r., Oreg.

Ka'-o-mě-me jún'ně.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 232, 1890.

Katsalgi (kátsa 'panther', algi 'people'). A Creek clan.

Kat'-chü.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1877 ('Tiger'). Katsalgi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 155, 1884.

Katsey. A Cowichan tribe occupying the villages of Seltas and Shuwaletet, on Pitt lake and river emptying into the lower Fraser, Brit. Col.; pop. 79 in 1904. Kaitze.—Brit. Adm. Chart, no. 1917. Katezie.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1878, 79. Katsey.—Can. Ind. Rep. 1901, pt. 2, 158. K'e'tsē.—Boas in Rep. 64th Meeting Brit. A. S., 454, 1894. Ke'tsi.—Hill-Tout in Ethnol. Surv. Can., 54, 1902.

Katshikotin. A part of the Hankutchin living on Yukon r., a short distance below Fortymile cr., near the Yukon-Alaska boundary.

Ka-tshik-otin.—Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can. for 1888, 202b, 1889. Kl t-ol-klin.—Schwatzka, Rep. on Alaska, 86, 1885 (name given by Russian half-breeds).

Katstayot (Kat-sta'-yöt). A former Chumashan village between Pt Conception and Santa Barbara, Cal., at a locality now called Santa Anita.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kattak. A former Kaniagmiut village on Afognak id., e. of Afognak, Alaska.

Katak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kattagmiut.—Russ.-Am. map (1849) quoted by Baker, ibid. Kattagmijut.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 1855.

Katzik. Two Indian settlements on the s. bank of lower Fraser r., below Sumass lake, Brit. Col. (Brit. Col. map, Ind. Aff., Victoria, 1872). Perhaps the name refers to the Katsey tribe.

Katzimo (Ka-tzi'-mo). The Keresan name of a precipitous mesa rising 430 ft above the basin of Acoma, and about 3 m. n. e. of the latter pueblo, in Valencia co., N. Mex. According to tradition its summit was the site of one of several prehistoric villages which the Acoma people successively occupied during their southwesterly movement from the mythic Shipapu in the indefinite N. The tradition relates that during a storm a part of the rock fell and some of the inhabitants, cut off from the valley beneath, perished. The site was henceforth abandoned, the survivors moving to another mesa on the summit of which they erected the present Acoma pueblo (q. v.). Katzimo mesa is inaccessible by ordinary means, but it was scaled in 1897 by a party representing the Bureau of American Ethnology and evidences of its former occupancy observed, thus verifying the native tradition. See Bandelier in Century Cyclop. of Names, 1894; Hodge (1) in Century Mag., LVI, 15, May, 1898, (2) in Am. Anthrop., Sept. 1897, and the references noted below. (F. W. H.)

Enchanted Mesa.—Lummis, New Mexico David, 39, 1891. Katzim-a.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Pap., IV, 314, 1892. Mesa Encantada.—Fullen in Harper's Weekly, 594, Aug. 2, 1890. Rock of Katzimo.—Lummis, op. cit., 40.

Kau. The Corn clan of the Patki (Water House) phratry of the Hopi.

Ká'ah.—Bourke, Snake Dance, 117, 1884. Ka'i-e.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891. Kaü wii-wü.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 583, 1901 (wü-wü = 'clan'). Ka'-ü wü-wü.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 402, 1894.

Kaudjukdjuaq (Qaudjukdjuaq). A winter settlement of the Akudnirmut Eskimo between Frobisher bay and Cumberland sd., Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kaughii. A former Chumashan village at La Cañada del Corral, about 22 m. from Santa Barbara, Cal.

Ka-h'ö'.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884. Kaughii.—Father Timeno (1856) quoted by Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 4, 1860.

Kauhuk ('high place'). A former Alsea village on the s. side of Alsea r., Oreg.; noted by Lewis and Clark as containing 400 inhabitants in 1806, and as existing on the coast.

Kahunle.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., II, 473, 1814. Kahunle.—Ibid., II, 188, 1814. Ka-hun-kle's.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 117, 1905. Kau'hük.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kaukhwan. A former Alsea village on the n. side of Alsea r., Oreg., at Beaver cr. Kau'-qwan.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kauldaw. The Kitksan division and town lying farthest inland toward the headwaters of Skeena r., under the Babine and Skeena River agency, Brit. Col.; pop. 37 in 1904.

Culdoah.—Horetzky, Canada on Pac., 212, 1874. Gal-doe.—Can. Ind. Aff. Rep., 431, 1896. Gal Doe.—Ibid., 252, 1891. Gol-doe.—Ibid., 280, 1894. Kal-doe.—Ibid., 415, 1898. Kaul-daw.—Dorsey in Am. Antiqu., XIX, 278, 1897. Kuldo.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Kuld-e.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. II, 160, 1901. Kuldös.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114b, 1884.

Kaumaungmiut (from the lake of the same name, around which they chiefly dwell). An Eskimo tribe in s. e. Baffin land, probably closely related to the Nugumiut.

Karmowong.—Hall, Arctic Researches, 291, 1865.
Kaumanang.—Boas in Deutsche Geog. Blatt., VIII, 32, 1885 (misprint). K'aumaungmiut.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., no. 80, 70, 1885. Quaumaungmiut.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 4, 1, 1888.

Kaunaameek. A former Stockbridge village in Rensselaer co. (?), N. Y., about halfway between Albany and Stockbridge, Mass., to which latter place the inhabitants removed in 1744.—Brainerd (ca. 1745) quoted by Rutenber, Tribes Hudson R., 198, 1872.

Kautas. A Koyukukhotana village on Koyukuk r., Alaska, with 10 inhabitants in 1885.

Cawtaskakat.—Allen, Rep. on Alaska, 141, 1887.

Kauten (Kau'ten). A Squawmish village community on the right bank of Squawmish r., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kauweh. An unidentified village on Klamath r., Cal., below its junction with the Trinity, and therefore in Yurok territory.—McKee (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 138, 1853.

Kaveazruk. A Kaviagmiut village at Port Clarence, Alaska.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 162, 1893.

Kaviagmiut. An Eskimo tribe occupying the s. part of Kaviak penin., Alaska, from Norton bay w. Many winter on the e. shore of Norton sd. Dall includes the Kingumiut, whose lawless life and enterprise have been copied by the Kaviagmiut remaining in their old home. This was once a populous country, but the extermination of the arctic hare and the marmot, the disappearance of the reindeer, and the raids of the Kingumiut have depopulated the peninsula and caused the inhabitants to migrate to other parts of arctic Alaska and become merged in other tribes. Local subdivisions of the existing Kaviagmiut, who numbered 427 in 1890, are as follows: Aziagmiut, of Sledge id.; Kaviazagmiut, at the head of Port Clarence; Kniktagegiut, of Golofnin bay, and Ukivogmiut, of King id. Their villages are Aiacheruk, Akpalut, Anelo, Anlik, Atnuk, Ayak, Aziak, Chaik, Chainruk, Chinik, Chiukak, Iknetuk, Imokte-gokshuk, Kachegaret, Kalulek, Kaveazruk, Kaviak, Kogluk, Kovogzruk, Metukatoak, Netsekawik, Niktak, Okinoyoktokawik, Opiktulik, Perebluk, Senikave, Shinnapago, Siningom, Sinuk, Sitnazuk, Sunvulluk, Takchuk, Tubuktulik, Uinuk, Ukivak, Ukodliut, and Ukviktulik.

Anligmuts.—Holmberg quoted by Dall, Alaska, 408, 1870. Anlygmuten.—Wrangell, Ethnog. Nach., 122, 1839. Kavea.—Kelly, Arct. Eskimo, 9, 1890. Kaveaks.—Whymper, Trav. in Alaska, 143, 1868. Kaverong Mutes.—Kelly, Arct. Eskimo, chart, 1890. Kaviacks.—Raymond in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 591, 1870. Kaviagmiut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kaviagmuts.—Dall, Alaska, 408, 1870. Kaviagmyut.—Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 178, 1894. Kaviaks.—Dall in Proc. Cal. Acad. Sci., IV, 35, 1869.

Kaviak. A Kaviagmiut village s. e. of Port Clarence, Alaska; pop. 200 in 1880.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kaviazagmiut. A subdivision of the Kaviagmiut, q. v.

Kaviagamute.—Petroff, 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kaviazagamute.—Ibid., 11. Kaviāza'gemut.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, map, 1887.

Kavinish. A former Kawia village in Coahuila valley, Riverside co., Cal.

Ka-vi-nish.—Barrows, Ethno.-Bot. Coahuila Ind., 34, 1900. Indian Wells.—Ibid.

Kawa (Kiwa, 'eel spring'). A Modoc camp at Yaneks, on Sprague r., s. Oreg.

Kau'i.—Gat-chet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. 1, 31; pt. 2, 122, 1890. Kāwa.—Ibid.

Kawaibatunya (Ka-wāi-ba-tūn-a). Given as the Watermelon clan of the Patki (Cloud) phratry of the Hopi.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891.

Kawaiisu. The most westerly subdivision of the Ute-Chemehuevi linguistic division of the Shoshonean family. They occupy an isolated area on both sides of the Tehachapi mts., Cal., but particularly the w. side around Paiute mts., and the valleys of Walker basin and Caliente and Kelso crs. as far s. as Tehachapi.

Cobajais.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 489, 1900. Cobaji.—Ibid., 304, 445. Covaji.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 510, 1878. Kah-wis'-sah.—Merriam in Science, XIX, 916, June 15, 1904. Kawaiisu.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1905 (Yokuts name). Kā-wi'-a-suh.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 393, 1877 (Yokuts name). Kawishm.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1905 (Tubatulabal name). Kow-a'-sah.—Merriam, op. cit. Kubakhye.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1905 (Mohave name). Newoo'-ah.—Merriam, op. cit. (= 'people'). Noches Colteches.—Garcés, op. cit., 295, 304 (so called by Mariposa people). Ta-hi-chia-p'-han-na.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 393, 1877 (division around mtns. of same name). Ta-hichp'.—Ibid. (so called by Kern r. people).

Kawaika. A ruined pueblo, attributed by the Hopi to the Kawaika people, a name also applied by them to the pueblo of Laguna, N. Mex., and by the Lagunas themselves to designate their village; situated a short distance w. of the Keam's Canyon road, on the top of a mesa between two gorges tributary to Jedithoh valley, in the Hopi country, N. E. Arizona. The ruin was surveyed and first described by V. Mindeleff in 1885, under the name Mishiptonga, apparently through confusion with Nesheptanga, another ruin near by. The ruin has been largely rifled of its art remains by Navaho diggers and the results mostly lost to science, but systematic excavation was conducted in the undisturbed portion by the National Museum in 1901. See Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 52, pl. 9, 1891; Mooney in Am. Anthropol., July, 1893; Fewkes in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 590, 622, 1898; Hough in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1901, 339, 1903.

Kawaika.—Mooney, op. cit. Kawaiokuh.—Hough op. cit. Mishiptonga.—Mindeleff, op. cit.

Kawaiiki (Hitchiti: oki 'water', awäiki 'hauling', 'carrying' [place]: 'water-carrying place'). A former Lower Creek town at the junction of the present Cow-kee cr. and Chattahoochee r., in the N. E. corner of Barbour co., Ala. It had 45 heads of families in 1833. (A. S. G.)

Cow ye ka.—Census of 1833 in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854. Kawaiiki.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 134, 1884.

Kawanunyi (Kāwanūñyi, from kāwānū 'duck', yi locative: 'duck place'). A former Cherokee settlement about the present Ducktown, Polk co., S. E. Tennessee. (J. M.)

Cowanneh.—Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1887. Duck-town.—Doc. of 1799 quoted by Royce, ibid., 141.

Kawarakish (Ka-wa-ra'-kish). One of the two divisions of the Pitahauerat, or Tapaje Pawnee, the other being the Pitahauerat proper.—Grinnell, Pawnee Hero Stories, 241, 1889.

Kawas (K'ā'was, 'fish eggs'). A subdivision of the Stustas, an important family of the Eagle clan of the Haida. One of their chiefs is said to have been blown across to the Stikine country, where he became a chief among the Stikine. (J. R. S.)

K'ā'was.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 22, 1898. K'ā'was.—Swanton, Cont., Haida, 275, 1905. Kouas.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895.

Kawchodinne (ka 'hare', cho 'great', dinne 'people': 'people of the great hares'). An Athapascan tribe dwelling N. of Great Bear lake, Mackenzie Ter., Canada, on Mackenzie r., the lakes E. of it, and Anderson r. Mackenzie (Voy., I, 206, 1802) said they were a small tribe residing on Peace r., who spoke the language of the Chipewyan and derived their name from the Arctic hare, their chief means of support. At another time (Mass. Hist. Coll., II, 43, 1814) he placed them on Porcupine r., Alaska. Franklin (Journ. to Polar Sea, 261, 1824) placed them immediately N. of the Thlingchadinne on the N. side of the outlet of Bear lake. Back (Journal, 497, 1833-35) located them on Mackenzie r. as far N. as 68°. Richardson (Arct. Exped., II, 3, 1851) gave their habitat as the banks of Mackenzie r. from Slave lake downward. Hind (Lab. Penin., II, 2-1, 1863) said they resorted to Ft Norman and Ft Good Hope on the Mackenzie, and also to Ft Yukon, Alaska. Ross (MS., B. A. E.) said they resided in 1859 in the country surrounding Ft Good Hope on Mackenzie r., extending beyond the Arctic circle, where they came in contact with the Kutchin, with whom by intermarriage they have formed the tribe of Bastard Loucheux (Nellagottine). Petitot (Dict. Dènè-Dindjié, xx, 1876) said the Kawchodinne lived on the lower Mackenzie from Ft Norman to the Arctic ocean. They are described as a thickset people, who subsist partly on fish and reindeer, but obtain their clothing and most of their food from the hares that abound in their country. Their language differs little from that of the Etchareottine, while their style of dress and their customs are the same, although through long intercourse with the traders, for whom they have great respect, most of the old customs and beliefs of the tribe have become extinct. They are on friendly terms with the Eskimo. The Kawchodinne have a legend of the formation of the earth by the muskrat and the beaver. The dead are deposited in a rude cage built above ground, the body being wrapped in a blanket or a moose skin; the property of relatives is destroyed, and their hair is cut as a sign of mourning. When the supply of hares becomes exhausted, as it frequently does, they believe these mount to the sky by means of the trees and return in the same way when they reappear. Polygamy is now rare. They are a peaceable tribe, contrasting with their Kutchin neighbors. In personal combat they grasp each other by their hair, which they twist round and round until one of the contestants falls to the ground. They are not so numerous as formerly, a great many having died from starvation in 1841, at which time numerous acts of cannibalism are said to have occurred. In 1858 Ross (MS., B. A. E.) gave the population as 467; 291 males, 176 females. Of these 103 resorted to Ft Norman and 364 to Ft Good Hope. Petitot (Dict. Dènè-Dindjié, xx, 1876) arranged them in five subdivisions: Nigottine, Katagottine, Katchogottine, Satchotugottine, and Nellagottine. In another list (Bull. Soc. Géog. Paris, 1875) instead of Nigottine he has Etatchogottine and Chintagottine. In a later grouping (Autour du lac des Esclaves, 362, 1891) Petitot identifies Katagottine with Chintagottine, suppresses Satchotugottine, and adds Kfwetragottine.

Dènè.—Petitot, Hare MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1869. Dènè Peaux-de-Lièvre.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 289, 1891. Harefoot Indians.—'happell, Hudson Bay, 166, 1817. Hare Indians.—Mackenzie, Voy., I, 206, 1802. Hareskins.—Petitot in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., 650, 1883. Kā-cho-'dtinnè.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., II, 3, 1851. Kah-cho tinne.—Ross quoted by Gibbs, MS., B. A. E. ('Arctic hare people'). Kan ho.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 19, 1836. Kat'a-gottiné.—Petitot, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1867. K'a-t'a-gottiné.—Petitot, Dict. Dènè-Dindjié, xx, 1876 ('people among the hares'). Kawchodinneh.—Franklin, Journ. to Polar Sea, 261, 1824. Kha-t'a-ottiné.—Petitot in Bull. Soc. Géog. Paris, chart, 1875. Khatpa-Gottine.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 362, 1891 ('people among the rabbits'). Kkpayttchare ottiné.—Petitot, Hare MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1869 (Chipewyan name). Nouga.—Macfarlane (1857) in Hind, Lab. Penin., II, 258, 1863 ('spittle'; Eskimo name). Peau de Lièvre.—Petitot in Bull. Soc. Géog. Paris, chart, 1875. Peaux-de-Lièvres.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 362, 1891. Rabbitskins.—McLean, Hudson Bay, II, 243, 1849. Slave.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 242, 1851. Tā-nā-tin-ne.—Morgan, Consang. and Affin., 289, 1871.

Kawchogottine ('dwellers among the large hares'). A division of the Kawchodinne. Petitot, in 1867 (MS., B. A. E.), located them on the border of the wooded region N. E. of Ft Good Hope, and in 1875 (Bull. Soc. de Géog. Paris, chart, 1875) on the headwaters of Anderson r., N. of Great Bear lake. The same authority (Autour du lac des Esclaves, 362, 1891) says their habitat is on the large lakes of the interior E. of Mackenzie r.

K'a-tchô-gottiné.—Petitot, Dict. Dènè-Dindjé, xx, 1876. Katchô-Ottiné.—Petitot in Can. Rec. Sci., I, 49, 1884. Kha-tchô-gottiné.—Petitot in Bul. Soc. de Géog. Paris, chart, 1875. Natlé-tpa-Gottine.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 362, 1891 (= 'people among the little reindeer').

Kawia. The name, of uncertain derivation, of a Shoshonean division in s. California, affiliated linguistically with the Aguas Calientes, Juaneños, and Luiseños. They inhabit the N. tongue of the Colorado desert from Banning s. E. at least as far as Salton, as also the headwaters of Santa Margarita r., where the Kawia res. is situated. Formerly they are said to have extended into San Bernardino valley, but it seems more likely that this principal seat was about San Gorgonio pass. Burton (H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 115, 1857) gave 3,500 as the number of men alone in 1856, evidently an exaggeration. There were 793 Indians assembled under the name "Coahuila" at all the Mission reservations in 1885, while the Indians on Cahuilla res. under the Mission Tule r. agency in 1894 numbered 151, and in 1902, 159. This reserwas occupied, as at present, by the Seranos. They are not to be confounded with a Yokuts tribe bearing the same name. They were first visited in 1776 by Fray Francisco Garcés, who referred to them under their Mohave name, "Jecúich," obtained from his guide. At this time they lived about the N. slopes of the San Jacinto mts. and to the northward, and roamed E. to the Colorado, but their vation consists of 18,240 acres of unpatented land. Villages: Duanos, Juan Bautista, Kavinish, Kawia, Kwaleki, Lawilvan, Malki, Pachawal, Palseta, Paltewat, Panachsa, San Sebastian, Sechi, Sokut Menyil, Temalwahish, Torres, Tova, and Wewutnowhu.

KAWIA MAN

KAWIA WOMAN

Caguillas.—Dufiot de Mofras, I, 349, 1844. Cagullas.—Dufiot de Mofras misquoted by Latham in Proc. Philol. Soc. Lond., VI, 76, 1854. Cahnilla.—Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocabs., 128, 1884. Cahnillo.—Ibid., 129. Cahuilla.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 175, 1902 (applied to res.). Cahuillos.—Ludwig, Abor. Lang., 26, 1816. Cah-wée-os.—Whipple, Exped. from San Diego, 17, 1851. Cah-willas.—Heintzelman (1853) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 44, 1857. Carvillas.—Burton, ibid., 114. Cavios.—Gatschet in Rep. Chief Engrs., pt. 3, 553, 1876. Cawéos.—Ibid. Coahuillas.—Stanley in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1869, 194, 1870. Coguifa.—Garcés (1775-76), Diary, 289, 1900 (identical?). Cohuillas.—Stanley in Ind. Aff. Rep., 119, 1865. Cohuilles.—Greene in Ind. Aff. Rep., 93, 1870. Cowela.—Hendley in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1856, 243, 1857. Cowillas.—Beale in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 378, 1853. Dancers.—Coues, Garcés Diary, 42, 1900. Danzarines.—Ibid., 204, 423. Gecuiches.—Ibid., 423. Hakwiche.—Kroeber, inf'n, 1905 (Mohave name). Jecuches.—Coues, Garcés Diary, index, 1900. Jecuèche.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 444, 1900. Jecuiches.—Ibid., 451. Jequiches.—Ibid. Kahuilla.—Kingsley, Stand. Nat. Hist., pt. 6, 189, 1883. Kahweaks.—Sen. Misc. Doc. 53, 45th Cong., 3d sess., 70, 1879. Kah-we-as.—Wozencraft in Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 289, 1853. Kahweyahs.—

Schumacher in Rep. Peabody Mus., XII, 521, 1880. Kauvuyas.—Loew in Rep. Chief Engrs., pt. 3, 542, 1876. Kau-yai'-chits.—Powell in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1873, 51, 1871. Kavayos.—Gatschet in Rep. Chief Engrs., pt. 3, 553, 1876. Kavwaru-maup.—Ingalls (1872) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 66, 42d Cong., 3d sess., 2, 1873. Koahualla.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1877, 246, 1878. Tecuiche.—Cortez (1799) in Pac. R. Rep., III, pt. 3, 125, 1856 (misquoting Garcés).

Kawia. A Yokuts tribe formerly living on the edge of the plains on the N. side of Kaweah r., Cal., but now extinct. They were hostile to the American settlers. By agreement of May 13, 1851 (which was not confirmed), a reserve was set aside for this and other tribes between Kaweah and Chowchilla rs., Cal., which at the same time ceded their unreserved lands. This tribe is to be distinguished from the Kawia (Coahuila, Cahuillo, etc.), a Shoshonean tribe in Riverside co., Cal.

Cah-was.—Johnston (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 61, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 23, 1852. Cahwia.—Barbour in Ind. Aff. Rep., 232, 1851. Cah-wi-ah.—Wessells (1853) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 32, 1857. Cowhuillas.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860. Cowiahs.—Henley in Ind. Aff. Rep., 511, 1854. Cow-illers.—Lewis, ibid., 400, 1858. Cowhuillas.—Dole, ibid., 219, 1861. Gawia.—A. L. Kroeber, infn, 1906 (the more strictly correct form). Kahweahs.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 456, 1874. Kania.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 370, 1877. Kawia.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1903, 508, 1904. Keawahs.—Maltby in Ind. Aff. Rep., 381, 1872. Keweah.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 284, 1884.

Kawia. A Kawia village on Cahuilla res., near the headwaters of Santa Margarita r., s. Cal.

Cahuilla.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1902, 175, 1903.

Kawirasanachi ('white hill'). A Tarahumare rancheria in Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, infn, 1894.

Kawita. The name of two former Lower Creek towns on Chattahoochee r., in Russell co., Ala. They were situated 2½ m. apart and were commonly distinguished as Upper Kawita and Kawita Talahasi ('Kawita old town'), in various forms of spelling. The former was situated on the w. bank of the river, 3 m. below its falls, the latter ½ m. from the stream. Kawita Talahasi, or Old Kawita, was the "public establishment" of the Lower Creeks and the headquarters of the agent. In 1799 it could muster 66 warriors, and about the year 1833 the town contained 289 families. It was an offshoot from Kasihta, and in turn gave origin to Wetumpka, on Big Uchee cr. From the fact that Kawita was regarded as the assembly place and treaty capital of the Lower Creeks, the name was frequently used synonymously with Lower Creeks; as Kusa, the name of the capital of the Upper Creeks, was sometimes used to designate that portion of the tribe. In 1775 Bartram (Trav., 387, 1792) spoke of Kawita Talahasi as "the bloody town, where the micos, chiefs, and warriors assemble when a general war is proposed; and here captives and state malefactors are put to death." (A. S. G.)

Akwetako.—Squier in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 34, 1877 (traditional name, vide the Walam-Olum).

Ani'-Kawi'tá.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 508, 1900 (Cherokee name of Lower Creeks, from their former principal town on Chattahoochee r.). Cabetas.—Barcia, Ensayo, 313, 1723. Cabuita.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, 5, 1776. Cacouitas.—Baudry des Lozières, Voy. à la Le., 242, 1802. Cahouita.—Penière in Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 311, 1822. Cahouitas.—La Harpe (1703) in French, Hist. Coll. La., III, 29, 1851. Cahuita.—Jefferys, Fr. Dom., 134, map, 1761. Canitas.—Smith (1785) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 557, 1853. Caotias.—Charlevoix, New France, Shea's ed., VI, 147, 1866. Caonetas.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 126, 1816. Caonites.—Ibid. Caouikas.—Smith, Bouquet's Exped., 70, 1706. Caouitas.—Du Pratz, La., II, 208, 1758. Caveta.—Barcia, Ensayo, 287, 1723. Cawitas.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist. (1753), VI, 797, 1855. Cawittas.—Romans, Florida, 90, 1775. Cawittaws.—Carroll, Hist. Coll. S. C., I, 190, 1836. Cohuntas.—Martin, Hist. La., I, 161, 18 7. Coneta.—Morse, N. Am., 218, 1776 (misprint). Conetta.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, 5, 1776 (town on headwaters of Ocmulgee r.). Conetush.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 19, 1848. Couetta.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, 5, 1776. Couitias.—Brinton, Florida Pen., 144, 1859. Couetta.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., I, 676, 1876. Cowetta.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. IV, 29, 1848. Cowetas.—Güsfeldt, map U. S., 1784. Coweta.—Bartram, Travels, 387, 1792. Cowetah.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 95, 1836. Cow-e-tah Tallahassee.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ga. map, 1899. Cowetas.—Lincoln (1789) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 78, 1832. Cowetau.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1814), 162, 1837. Cowetaw.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. IV, 51, 1848. Cowetas.—Romans, Florida, I, 280, 1775. Cow-e-tugh.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 52, 1848. Cow-e-tuh.—Ibid., 25, 55. Cow-e-tuh Tal-lau-has-see.—Ibid., 55. Grand Coweta.—Robin, Voy., I, map, 1807. K ioutais.—Lozières, Voy. à la Le., 242, 1802. Kaouitas.—Gayarré, Hist. La., II, 40, 1852. Kaoutyas.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 79, 1854. Kawita Talahási.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 135, 1884. Kawuytas.—Bossu (1759), Travels, I, 229, 1771. Kawytas.—Ibid., 271. Kow-he'-tah.—Adair, Am. Ind., 257, 1775. Lahouita.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 149, 1822. Powehas.—Lafre, Carte des Etats-Unis, 1784. Pt. Coweta.—Robin, Voy., I, map, 1807. Upper Cowetas town.—Seagrave (1793) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 427, 1832.

Kawita. A town of the Creek Nation on the N. side of Arkansas r., Okla.

Coweta.—U. S. P. O. Guide, 367, 1904. Kawita.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888.

Kawoltukwucha (Kawoltuk' witca, 'hill below'). A Pima village w. of the Maricopa and Phenix R. R., in Maricopa co., Ariz.—Russell, Pima MS., B. A. E., 18, 1902.

Káwerkewóche.—ten Kate quoted by Gatschet, MS., B. A. E., XX, 199, 1888.

Kayak. See Kaiak.

Kayashkidetan ('people of the house with a high foundation'). A Tlingit division at Wrangell, Alaska, belonging to the Wolf phratry and closely connected with the Nanyaayi and Hokedi.

Hará'e hit tan.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 25, 1889. Ká-rasch-kidetan.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 120, 1835. Kaya'ckidetan.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Kayekhwaraheh (Käie'kwärä'ge'). A traditional Iroquois village belonging to the Two-clans of the Turtle; locality unknown. (J. N. B. H.)

Kah he kwa ke.—Hale, Iroq. Book of Rites, 119, 1883. Kayekhwaraheh.—Ibid., 118.

Kayepu. A prehistoric ruined pueblo of the compact, communal type, situated about 5 m. s. of Galisteo, Santa Fé co., N. Mex. The Tanos now living with the Queres of Santo Domingo claim that it was a village of their tribe.

Ka-ye Pu.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 106, 1892 (native name). Pueblo Blanco.—Bandelier in Ritch, N. Mex., 201, 1885 (misprint). Pueblo Blanco.—Ibid. (Span.: 'white house').

Kaygen. A Seneca village on the s. bank of Chemung r., below Kanestio r., N. Y.—Pouchot, map (1758) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 694, 1858.

Kaynaguntl ('people at the mouth of the canyon'). An Apache clan or band at San Carlos agency and Ft Apache, Ariz., in 1881.—Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 111, 1890.

Kayomasho. The progressive party in Laguna pueblo, N. Mex. (Loew in Wheeler Survey Rep., vii, 339, 1879). According to Bandelier this party constitutes a phratry. See Kapaits.

Kayung (Qlayā'n). A Haida town on Masset inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., just above Masset. It was occupied by the Kuna-lanas, who owned the place, and the Sagui-gitunai. John Work does not give separate figures for the population of this town in 1836-41, but the old people estimate the number of houses at 14, which would indicate about 175 people. The place was at one time entirely abandoned, but two or three families have recently returned to it.

(J. R. S.)

K'āya'ng.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 23, 1898. Kayung.—Dawson, Queen Charlotte ids., 163b, 1880. Qlayā'n Inagā'i.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905 (the people).

Kehegagonggo (K'chi-gā-gong'-go, 'pigeon-hawk'). A gens of the Abnaki (q. v.).—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 174, 1877.

Kdhun ('thunder being'). The 7th TsiChu gens of the Osage tribe.

Ḫā'a.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883. Ḫā'u.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897. Ma'xe.—Ibid. ('upper-world people'). Niq'ka wakan'aqai.—Ibid. ('mysterious male being'). Thunder People.—Dorsey in Am. Nat., 114, 1884. Tsi'haci'a.—Dorsey in 15th Rep., op cit. ('camp last').

Ke. The Bear clan of the Tewa pueblo of Nambe, N. Mex., and of Hano, Ariz. Cac.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 89, 1891 (Navaho name). Ho'-nau.—Ibid. (Hopiname). Ke.—Ibid. (Tewaname). Ke-tōā.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 349, 1896 (Nambé form; tōā = 'people'). Ke'-to-wa.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 166, 1894.

Kechayi. A division of the Yokuts, formerly living on San Joaquin r., Cal.

Kechayi.—A. L. Kroeber, in 'n, 1906. Kech-eel.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 223, 1851 (same?).

Kechemeches. A division of the New Jersey Delawares mentioned by Evelin (Proud, Pa., i, 113, 1797; Smith, Hist. N. J., 29, 1765, rep. 1890) as living in 1648 in the s. part of the state, at the mouth of Delaware r., and numbering 50 men. Some old authorities locate here the Naraticon.

Kechemudluk. A Kevalingamiut village at C. Seppings on the Arctic coast of Alaska; pop. 50 in 1880.

Cape Sepping.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 59, 1900. Cape Seppings.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kechemudluk.—Hydrog. chart cited by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 115, 1902. Kivalinge.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 162, 1893.

Kechepukwaiwah. A former Chippewa village on a lake of the same name, near Chippewa r., Wis.—Warren (1852) in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 314, 1885.

Kechipatan ('town of the spread-out grit'; evidently referring to the sandstone mesa). A former pueblo of the Zuñi on a mesa E. of Ojo Caliente, or Kyapkwainakwin, 15 m. s. w. of Zuñi pueblo, N. Mex. According to Cushing it was called also Kyanawe, which Bandelier identifies with the Canati of Oñate in 1598, and therefore regards it as one of the Seven Cities of Cibola of Marcos de Niza and Coronado in 1539-42. Spanish Franciscans evidently began the establishment of a mission at this pueblo, probably in 1629, when the first missionaries resided among the Zuñi, but judging from the character of the church building, the walls of which are still standing, it was never finished. See Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 81, 1891, and authorities cited below. (F. W. H.)

Cánabe.—Cushing in Compte-rendu Internat. Cong. Am., vii, 156, 1890 (misprint of early Spanish form). Canati.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., xvi, 133, 1871. Char-a-hue.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iii, 133, 1890. Chyanahue.—Ibid., v, 171, 1891; iv, 338, 1892. Chyanawe.—Ibid., iii, 133, note, 1890. Chek-e-pā-wha.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Eth. and Arch., i, 101, 1891. Eé tchi-na.—Cushing in Millstone, ix, 55, Apr. 1884. Ketchip-a-huan.—Bandelier in 10th Rep. Arch. Inst. Am., 127, 1889. Ketchip-a-uau.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iii, 133, 1890; iv, 329, 1892; v, 171, 1891 (recorded as distinct from Kyanawe). Ki'a-naa-n.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. A., 291, 1885. Ki'a-na-wa.—Cushing in Millstone, ix, 55, Apr. 1884. K'i'a-na-wc.—Cushing in Compte-rendu Internat. Cong. Am., vii, 156, 1890. Village of Odd Waters.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk-tales, 104, 1901 (possibly identical).

Kecoughtan. A small tribe of the Powhatan confederacy residing in 1607 at the mouth of James r., in what is now Elizabeth City co., Va. According to Capt. John Smith their fighting men did not exceed 20.—Smith (1629), Hist. Va., i, 116, map, rep. 1819.

Keda-lanas (Ql'e'da lā'nas, 'strait people'). A subdivision of the Hagi-lanas, a family of Ninstints belonging to the Raven clan of the Haida. They received their name from a narrow strait in front of the town.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 268, 1905.

Kedlamik (Qe'tamix, 'broad patch of bushes'). An Okinagan village near Nicola lake, Brit. Col.

Lka'tamix.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., ii, 174, 1900. Ce'tamix.—Ibid.

Keeches. Mentioned by Barbour (Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 61, 1853) as a hostile tribe living N. and E. of San Joaquin r., among the foot-hills of the Sierra Nevada, on the headwaters of the Tuolumne, Merced, and Mariposa rs., Cal., in 1851. It was probably of Moquelumnan stock.

Kegi. The House clan of the Tewa of Hano pueblo, N. E. Ariz.

Ke'gi.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891. Ki-a'-ni.—Ibid. (Navaho name). Ki'-hu.—Ibid. (Hopi name).

Kegiktoiwigemiut (Kēgiktoiwig'emūt). A subdivision of the Unaligmiut Eskimo whose chief village is Kiktaguk.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 17, 1877.

Keguayo. A pueblo built, occupied, and abandoned by the Nambé tribe prior to the Spanish advent in the 16th century. Situated in the vicinity of the Chupaderos, a cluster of springs in a mountain gorge, about 4 m. E. of Nambé pueblo, N. N. Mex.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 84, 1892.

Kehsidatsoos (Keh-sid-ats-oos). A former-summer village of the Makah of Washington.—Gibbs, MS. 248, B. A. E.

Kein ('turtle carriers,' because they have the ceremonies connected with the turtle.—Fletcher). A subgens of the Dhatada gens of the Omaha.

Kaetage.—Balbi, Atlas Ethnog., 56, 1826. Ka-e-ta-je.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., i, 327, 1823 ('those who do not touch turtles'). Ka'-ia.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 155, 1877. Ke'-ia.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 226, 1897.

Keinouche (K'inōzhān, 'pickerel'). One of the divisions or chief bands of the Ottawa, q. v. The Jesuit Relation of 1640 locates them at that time, under the name Kinounchepirini, s. of the Isle of the Algonquins (Allumette id.) in Ottawa r. This would place them, if taken literally, some distance E. of L. Huron; but as the knowledge then possessed by the French was very imperfect, it is probable that the Relation of 1643, which places them on L. Huron, is more nearly correct. In 1658 they appear to have lived along the N. shore of the lake. Between 1660-70 they, with the Kiskakon and Sinago, were attached to the mission at Shaugawaumikong (now Bayfield), on the S. shore of L. Superior. It is probable, however, that at the time of Father Menard's visit, in 1660, they were at Keweenaw bay, Mich. In 1670-71 they returned to Mackinaw, some passing on to Manitoulin id.; but it is probable that the latter, or a part of them, were included in the Sable band, q. v.

(J. M. C. T.) Keinouché.—Jes. Rel. 1670, 87, 1858. Kinonche-piirini.—Ibid., 1658, 22, 1858. Kinonche-piirini.—Ibid., 1643, 61, 1858. Kinouché.—Marquette (1670) quoted by Shea, Miss. Val., xlix, 1852. Kinouche-biiriniouek.—Jes. Rel. 1646, 34, 1858. Kinouche-piirini.—Ibid., 1640, 34, 1858. Quenongebin.—Champlain (1613), Œuvres, iii, 298, 1870.

Kekayeken (K'ēk-ā'yēk'en). A Songish division residing between Esquimalt and Beecher bay, S. end of Vancouver id.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 17, 1890.

Kekelun (K'ēkelun). A Squawmish village community on the W. side of Howe sd., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kekertakjuin (Qeqertaqjuin, 'big island'). A spring settlement of Padli-miut Eskimo at the end of Howe bay, Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kekertarsuarak. An Eskimo village on an islet off the S. W. coast of Greenland, lat. 60° 50'.—Meddelelser om Grönland, xvi, map, 1896.

Kekertaujang (Qeqertaujang, 'like an island'). A winter village of the Saumingmiut, a subtribe of the Okomiut Eskimo, on Cumberland penin., Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kekerten ('islands'). The winter village of the Kingnaitmiut Eskimo on the E. side of Cumberland id., Baffin land; pop. 82 in 1883.

K'ekerten.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., no. 80, 70, 1885. Kik'erton.—Kumlien in Bull. U. S. Nat. Mus., no. 15, 15, 1879. Qeqerten.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 425, 1888.

Kekertukjuak (Qeqertukjuak, 'big island'). A spring settlement of Nugumiut Eskimo on an island in Frobisher bay, S. E. Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kekin (Ke'k'in, 'turtle carriers'). A division of the Washashewanun gens of the Osage.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897.

Kekin. A Kansa gens.

Do-hā-kel'-yā.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 156, 1877 (trans. 'turtle'). Ke.—Dorsey in Am. Nat., 671, 1885 ('turtle'). Ke-k'ia.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897 (trans. 'carries a turtle on his back'). Ke nika-shing-ga.—Stubbs, Kaw MS. vocab., B. A. E., 25, 1877.

Kekionga. The principal village of the Miami, formerly situated on the E. bank of St Joseph r., in Allen co., Ind., opposite Ft Wayne. It was often designated as "Miami town" and "Great Miami village." Several other settlements were in the vicinity. It was burned in 1790, and the tract on which it stood, an area 6 m. square, was ceded to the United States by the treaty of Greenville, Aug. 3, 1795. See Maumee Towns. (J. M.)

Great Miami village.—Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. 5, 189, 1818. Kegaioque.—Harmon (1790) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 228, 1846. Kegnioque.—Ibid. Ke-ke-on-gay.—Hough, map in Indiana Geol. Rep., 1883. Ke-ki-on-ga.—Royce in 1st Rep. B. A. E., map, 1881. Ke-ki-on-go.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ind. map, 1899. Miami town.—Gamelin (1790) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., i, 93, 1832.

Kekios. A Squawmish village community on the right bank of Squawmish r., W. Brit. Col.

Qaqiō's.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887. Qē'qīōs.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kekwaiaikin (Qekwaiaikin). A Squawmish village community on the left bank of Squawmish r., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kekwaii (Ke-kwai-i'). A village occupied in ancient times by the Nambé people of New Mexico; situated near Agawana (q. v.). Distinct from Keguayo. (F. W. H.)

Kelatl (Qelā'tl). The uppermost Cowichan subtribe on Fraser r., Brit. Col. Their town was Asilao, above Yale.—Boas in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 454, 1894.

Kele. The extinct Pigeon-hawk clan of the Chua (Snake) phratry of the Hopi. Distinct from the Hawk (Kwayo) and Chicken-hawk (Massikwayo) clans.

Ke-le'-nyu-müh.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., v, 223, 1892 (nyu-müh='people'; usually employed by this author to denote phratry). Kele winwü.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 583, 1901 (win-wü='clan'). Ke'-le wuñ-wü.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 403, 1894.

Kelemanturuk. An Utukamiut Eskimo village near Icy cape, Alaska.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 162, 1893.

Keles (Qe'les). A Chilliwick town on upper Chilliwick r., Brit. Col.—Boas in 64th Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 454, 1894.

Keliopoma. The name, in their own language, of the northernmost branch of the Pomo, bordering on the coast Yuki and the Athapascan Kato, and inhabiting the country from Sherwood to the coast near Cleone, Cal., to which place they gave its name. They were also called Shibalna Pomo.

Chiabel-na-poma.—Tobin in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1857, 404, 1858. Ku-lá Kai Pó-mo.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 155, 1877. She-bal-ne Pomas.—Wiley in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1864, 119, 1865. Shi-bal'-ni Pó-mo.—Powers, op. cit. (Kaito Pomo name: 'neighbor people').

Kelketos (Qe'ketōs, 'painted'). A Squawmish village community on the E. coast of Howe sd., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kelsemaht ('rhubarb people'). A Nootka tribe on Clayoquot sd., Vancouver id.; pop. 76 in 1904. Their principal village is Yahksis.

Kel-seem-aht.—Can. Ind. Aff., 186, 1884. Kel-seem-aht.—Ibid., 357, 1897. K'eltsma'ath.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 31, 1890. Killsmaht.—Sproat, Savage Life, 308, 1868. Kilsamát.—Mayne, Brit. Col., 251, 1861.

Keltakkaua (Ke'lāq'aua). A division of the Nuhalk, a Bellacoola tribe of the coast of British Columbia.—Boas in 7th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 3, 1891.

Kemanks. A body of Salish of Fraser superintendency, Brit. Col. (Can. Ind. Aff., 138, 1879), no longer officially reported.

Kemisak. An Eskimo village on the E. coast of Greenland, about lat. 63° 40'; pop. 90 in 1829.—Graah, Exped. Greenland, map, 1837.

Kenabig (K'nābik, 'snake'). A gens of the Chippewa.

Che-she-gwa.—Warren (1852) in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 45, 1885 ('rattlesnake'). Ke-na'-big.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 166, 1877 ('snake'). Kinā-bik.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1906. She-she-gwah.—Tanner, Narrative, 175, 1830. She-she-gwun.—Ibid., 315 ('rattlesnake').

Kenachananak. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on the seashore opposite Nuniyak id., Alaska; pop. 181, in 8 dwellings, in 1890.

Kenachananak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 236, 1902. Kenachananagamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 109, 1893.

Kenai. A Knaiakhotana settlement and trading post of 44 people on the E. side of Cook inlet, Alaska, at the mouth of Kaknu r. The population in 1890 was 263 in 30 houses. The Russians erected here the redoubt of St Nicholas in 1791, and a Russian orthodox mission was established about 1900, the Knaiakhotana here being devoted members of the Russian church. A large salmon cannery has been in operation for many years.

Fort Kenai.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 236, 1902. Kenai redoute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884. Pavlovskaja.—Russian map (1802) cited by Baker, op. cit. St. Nicholas.—Ibid. St. Nicolas.—Ibid. St. Nikolas.—Ibid.

Kenapacomaqua. The principal village of the Wea, formerly on the W. bank of Eel r., near its mouth, 6 m. above Logansport, Cass co., Ind. From its situation on Eel r. (Anguille in French) it was called L'Anguille by the French. It was destroyed by Gen. Wilkinson in 1791.

(J. M.)

Kenapacomaqua.—Wilkinson (1791) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., i, 134, 1832. Ke-na-pe-com-aqua.—Hough in Indiana Geol. Rep., map, 1851. L'Anguille.—Rupp, West. Pa., 264, 1846.

Kendaia ('it is an orchard.'—Hewitt). A former Seneca settlement situated at about the site of Kendaia, Seneca co., N. Y. Before its destruction by Gen. Sullivan in Sept., 1779, it contained about 20 houses.

(J. M.)

Appletown.—Livermore (1779) in N. H. Hist. Soc. Coll., vi, 326, 1850. Canada.—Hubley (1779) quoted by Conover, Kanadega and Geneva MS., B. A. E. Candaia.—Norris quoted by Conover, ibid. Candia.—Machin, map, ibid. Conday.—Livermore, op. cit. Kahonta'yo.—Hewitt, inf'n, 1890 (Seneca form). Kandaia.—Nukercot (1779) quoted by Conover, Kanadega and Geneva MS., B. A. E. Kendaes.—Pouchot, map (1758) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 694, 1858. Kindais.—Pemberton (1792) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., ii, 176, 1810. Saint Coy.—McKendry (1779) quoted by Conover, Kanadega and Geneva MS., B. A. E.

Kendawa (Ken-da-wā, 'eagle'). A gens of the Miami (q. v.).—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 168, 1877.

Kenek. A Yurok village on lower Klamath r., 5 or 6 m. below the mouth of Trinity r., Cal. It plays a prominent part in Yurok myths, but does not appear to have been important in historic times. Kenek.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1904 (Yurok name). Shwufum.—Ibid. (Karok name.)

Kenikashika ('those who became human beings by the aid of a turtle'). A Quapaw gens.

Ke-ni'kaci'ya.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 229, 1897. Turtle gens.—Ibid.

Kenim Lake. A Shuswap village or band on Kenim lake, which flows into North Thompson r., interior of British Columbia; pop. 87 in 1902, 67 in 1904.

Kanim Lake.—Can. Ind. Aff., 274, 1902. Kaninim Lake.—Ibid., 271, 1889. Kaninis Tribe.—Ibid., 190, 1884. Kenim Lake.—Ibid., pt. ii, 72, 1902.

Kenipsim. A Cowichan tribe in Cowitchin valley, near the S. E. end of Vancouver id.; pop. 53 in 1904.

Ka-nip-sum.—Can. Ind. Aff., 308, 1879. Kee-nip-saim.—Ibid., 302, 1893. Kee-nip-sim.—Ibid., 231, 1886. Ke-nip-sim.—Ibid., 190, 1883. Khenipsim.—Ibid., pt. ii, 164, 1901. Khenipsin.—Ibid., pt. ii, 69, 1901. Qe'nipsen.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Kennebec ('at the long water'). A former village, probably of the Norridge-wock division of the Abnaki, on Kennebec r. between Augusta and Winslow, Me.

Mentioned by Capt. John Smith in 1616 and visited by Druliettes in 1646.

Kénébec.—Maurault, Hist. Abenakis, 120, 1866.
Kenebecka.—Smith (1629), Hist. Va., II, 177, 1819.
Kenebecke.—Ibid., 183. Kinibeki.—Jes. Rel. (1647), Thwaites ed., XXXI, 189, 1898.

Kennebunker. A word local in the Maine lumbering regions, defined (Dialect Notes, 390, 1895) as a "valise in which clothes are put by lumbermen when they go into camp for a 'winter operation.'"¹ This term, of quite recent origin, has been formed, with the English suffix -er, from Kennebunk, a river and port in Maine; derived from the Passamaquoddy or a closely related dialect of Algonquian, probably signifying 'at the long water.' (A. F. C.)

Kenozhe (K'nozhū, 'pickerel'). A gens of the Chippewa. Cf. Keinouche.
Ke-noushay.—Warren (1852) in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., V, 44, 1888 (trans. 'pike'). Ke-no-zha.—Tanner, Narrative, 314, 1830 ('pickerel'). Ke-no-zhe.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 166, 1877 ('pike'). Kinojā.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1906.

Kenta (probably from ként'a, 'field', 'meadow'.—Hewitt). A Tuscarora village in North Carolina in 1701.—Lawson (1714), Carolina, 383, 1860.

Kentanuska. A Tuscarora village in North Carolina in 1701.—Lawson (1714), Carolina, 383, 1860.

Kente (ként'a, 'field', 'meadow'). A Cayuga village existing about 1670 on Quinté bay of L. Ontario, Ontario.

Kanté.—Bruyas (1673) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 792, 1855. Kenté.—Frontenac (1673), ibid., 96.
Kentsia.—Homann Heirs' map, 1756. Kentsio.—Lotter, map, ca. 1770. Quenté.—La Hontan, New Voy., I, 32, 1703. Quintay.—Frontenac (1672), op. cit., 93. Quinté.—Doc. of 1698 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., IX, 681, 1855.

Kerunimik. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on the right bank of the lower Yukon, Alaska (Coast Surv. chart, 1898), 15 m. above Andreafski. Perhaps the same as Ankachak.

Keokuk (Kiyo'kaga, 'one who moves about alert'). A Sauk leader, a member of the Fox clan, born on Rock r., Ill., about 1780. He was not a chief by birth, but rose to the command of his people through marked ability, force of character, and oratorical power. His mother is said to have been half French. At an early age he was a member of the Sauk council, which he graced, but at first played only a subordinate role therein. He stepped into prominence later on when he was made tribal guest-keeper. While holding this office he was supplied at tribal expense with all the means of rendering hospitality, and played the part of a genial host with such pleasing effect that his lodge became a center for all things social and political. Quick to see the possibilities of this office he made use of the opportunity to further his own ambitions.

Keokuk was well aware of the fact that the rigid social organization of his people offered a barrier to the realization of his cherished desire, which was to become the foremost man of his tribe. Contrary to the manner of men of his training, environment, and tradition, he had no scruples against doing away with a practice if thereby he might reap profit for himself; and he worked his will against custom, not in an open, aggressive way, but by veiled, diplomatic methods. He was continually involved in intrigue; standing always in the background, he secretly played one faction against another. In time he became the leading councilor in the Sauk assembly, and enjoyed great popularity among his people. But the situation assumed a different aspect when the troubled period of the so-called Black Hawk war arrived. The immediate cause of this conflict grew out of an agreement first entered into between the Government and a small band of Sauk who, under their leader Kwaskwamia, were in winter camp near the trading post of St. Louis. By this compact the Sauk were to give up the Rock River country. As soon as the agreement became noised abroad among all the Sauk there was strong opposition, particularly to the form in which it had been made. Throughout the affair Keokuk assumed so passive an attitude that he lost at once both social and political prestige. Those of the Sauk who favored an appeal to arms then turned to a man of the Thunder clan, Black-big-chest, known to the whites under the name of Black Hawk (q. v.), who became their leader. Just at this critical period the feeble bond of political union between the Sauk and the Foxes was broken, this result being due largely to internal dissensions brought on by the intrigues of Keokuk; who, with a following of unpatriotic Sauk, sought and obtained protection from the Foxes under their chief, Paweshik. The fighting began before Black Hawk was ready, and he was forced to take the field with but a small number of those on whose support he had depended. With his depleted forces he could not successfully contend against the Illinois militia and their Indian allies.

KEOKUK

Keokuk loomed up again during the final negotiations growing out of the war, and played so deftly into the hands of the Government officials that he was made chief of the Sauk. It is said that the announcement of his elevation to supreme power was made in open council, and that it so aroused the anger and contempt of Black Hawk that he whipped off his clout and slapped Keokuk across the face with it. The act of creating Keokuk chief of the Sauk has always been regarded with ridicule by both the Sauk and the Foxes, for the reason that he was not of the ruling clan. But the one great occasion for which both the Sauk and the Foxes honor Keokuk was when, in the city of Washington, in debate with the representatives of the Sioux and other tribes before Government officials, he established the claim of the Sauk and Foxes to the territory comprised in what is now the state of Iowa. He based this claim primarily on conquest.

On his death, in 1848, in Kansas, whither he had moved three years before, the chieftainship, with its unsavory associations, went to his son, Moses Keokuk (Wunagisā, 'he leaps up quickly from his lair'), who displayed many of the mental characteristics of the father. Those who knew them both maintain that the son was even the superior intellectually, and of higher ethics. He was fond of debate, being always cool, deliberate, and clear-headed. In argument he was more than a match for any Government officer with whom he ever came in contact at the agency. He bore an intense hatred for the Foxes, which was returned with more than full measure. Moses Keokuk was acknowledged the purest speaker of the Sauk dialect. The Sauk were never tired of his eloquence; it was always simple, clear, and pleasing. Late in life he embraced Christianity and was baptized a Baptist; but he never ceased to cherish a sincere regard for the old-time life and its fond associations. He succeeded in turning aside much of the odium that had early surrounded his office, and though he met with more political opposition during his whole life, yet when he died, near Horton, Kans., in August, 1903, his death was regarded by the Sauk as a tribal calamity.

In 1883 the remains of the elder Keokuk were removed from Kansas to Keokuk, Iowa, where they were reinterred in the city park and a monument erected over his grave by the citizens of the town. A bronze bust of Keokuk stands in the Capitol at Washington. (W. J.)

Keotuc (prob. for Kiwütig, 'he whose voice is heard roaming about.'—W. J.). A Potawatomi band, probably taking its name from the chief, living in Kansas in 1857.—Baldwin in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1857, 163, 1858.

Keowee (according to Wafford, Kuwáhihi, or, in abbreviated form, Kuwáhi, 'mulberry grove place'). The name of two or more former Cherokee settlements. One, sometimes distinguished as Old Keowee, the principal of the Lower Cherokee towns, was on the river of the same name, near the present Port George, in Oconee co., S. C. Another, distinguished as New Keowee, was on the headwaters of Twelve-mile cr., in Pickens co., S. C.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 525, 1900.

Keowe.—Bartram, Travels, 372, 1792. New Keowee.—Mouzon's map quoted by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 143, 1887.

Kepatawangachik. Given as the name of a tribe formerly living near L. St John, Quebec, but driven off by the Iroquois (Jes. Rel. 1660, 12, 1858). Named in connection with Abittibi and Ouakouichidek (Chisedec). Possibly the Papinachois.

Kepel. A Yurok village on lower Klamath r., about 12 m. below the mouth of the Trinity, in N. California. It was the only place in Yurok territory, besides Loolego, at which a fish dam was erected across the river.

Alkharatipikam.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1904 (Karok name). Capel.—Gibbs in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 138, 1853. Cap-pel.—McKee in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 161, 1853. Kai-petl.—Gibbs, op. cit.

Kerahocak. A former village of the Powhatan confederacy on the N. bank of the Rappahannock, in King George co., Va.—Smith (1629), Virginia, I, map, repr. 1819.

Kerechun (ke-re-tcūn, probably 'hawk'). A subgen of the Waninkikikarachada, the Bird gens of the Winnebago.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 240, 1897.

Keremen. A village or tribe formerly in the country between Matagorda bay and Maligne (Colorado) r., Tex. The name seems to have been given Joutel in 1687 by the Ebahamo, who were probably affiliated to the neighboring Karankawa. They are probably the Aranama (q. v.) of the Spanish chroniclers. See Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 23, 35, 46, 1891. (A. C. F.)

Keremen.—Joutel (1687) in French, Hist. Coll. La., i, 137, 1846. Korimen.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 288, 1878 (mentioned as distinct from Keremen, but probably a duplication).

Keremeus. A Similkameen band of the Okinagan; pop. 55 in 1897, when last separately enumerated.

Kerem-ecoes.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1883, 191. Keremeos.—Ibid., 1892, 313. Keremeus.—Ibid., 1897, 364. Kéremya'uz.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 174, 1900.

Keresan Family (adapted from K'eres, the aboriginal name). A linguistic family of Pueblo Indians including the inhabitants of several villages on the Rio Grande, in N. central New Mexico, between the Rito de los Frijoles (where, before being confined to reservations, they joined the Tewa on the N.) and the Rio Jemez, as well as on the latter stream from the pueblo of Sia to its mouth. The W. division, comprising Acoma and Laguna pueblos, are situated westward from the Rio Grande, the latter on the Rio San José. Like the other Pueblo tribes of New Mexico, the Keresan Indians maintain that they had their origin at the mythical Shipapu and that they slowly drifted southward to the Rio Grande, taking up their abode in the Rito de los Frijoles, or Tyuonyi, and constructing there the cliff-dwellings found to-day excavated in the friable volcanic tufa. Long before the coming of the Spaniards they had abandoned the Rito, and, moving farther southward, separated into a number of autonomous village communities. According to Coronado, who visited the "Quirix" province in 1540, these Indians occupied 7 pueblos; 40 years later Espejo found 5; while in 1630 Benavides described the stock as numbering 4,000 people, in 7 towns extending 10 leagues along the Rio Grande. See Bandelier (1) in Arch. Inst. Papers, I, 114, 1883, (2) ibid., IV, 139 et seq., 1892, (3) Delight Makers, 1890.

According to Loew this stock constitutes two dialectic groups, the first or Queres group comprising the inhabitants of Santo Domingo, Santa Ana, Sia, San Felipe, and Cochiti; the other, the Sitsime or Kawaiko group, comprehending Laguna and Acoma with their outlying villages.

The Keresan settlements are as follows, those marked with an asterisk being extinct: Acoma, Acomita, Cieneguilla*, Cochiti, Cubero*, Cueva Pintada*, Gipuy*, Haatzé*, Hasatch, Heashkowa*, Huashpatzena*, Kakanatzatia*, Kashkachuti*, Katzimo*, Kohasaya*, Kowina*, Kuapa*, Kuchtya*, Laguna, Moquino*, Paguete, Puertito, Puerto (?), Punyeestyé, Punyekia, Pusityitcho, Rito, San Felipe, Santa Ana, Santo Domingo, Seemunah, Shumasitscha*, Sia, Siamá, Tapitsiamá*, Tipoti*, Wapuchuseamma, Washpashuka*, Yapashi*. The following pueblos, now extinct, were perhaps also Keresan: Alipoti, Ayqui, Cebolleta, Pelchiu, Pueblo del Encierro, San Mateo, Tashkatze, Tojagua.

(F. W. H.)

Bierni'n.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Sandia name). Cherechos.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Indéd., XVII, 102, 1871. Cheres.—Ibid., XVII, 114. Chu-chas.—Lane (1854) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, V, 689, 1855 (applied to the language). Chu-chas.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 479, 1878 (after Lane, misprint). Queres.—Humboldt, Atlas Nouv. Espagne, carte I, 1811. Querez.—Simpson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1869, 334, 1871. Drinkers of the Dew.—Cushing in Johnson's Cyclop., IV, 891, 1896 (given as Zuñi traditional name). Queres.—Ogilby, America, 295, 1671. Hores.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Indéd., XVI, 265, 1871 (probably identical). Ing-wé-pí'-ra'-di-vi-he-ma'.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (San Ildefonso Tewa name). Jeréz.—Loew (1875) in Wheeler Survey Rep., VII, 338, 1879 (probably identical). Kera.—Hervas, Idea dell' Universo, XVII, 76, 1784. Kéran.—Powell in Am. Nat., XIV, 604, Aug. 1880. Keras.—Malte-Brun, Geog., V, 318, 1826. Keres.—Pike, Expeditions, 220, 1810. Kes-whaw-hay.—Lane (1854) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, V, 689, 1855 (applied to language). Kwéres.—Petitot, Diet. Déné-Dindjé, XVII, 1876. Pabierni'n.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Isleta name). Qu'ères.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, I, 114, 1883. Quera.—Hervas (1784) quoted by Priehard, Phys. Hist. Mankind, V, 341, 1847. Quéra.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, I, 114, 1883. Queres.—Benavides, Memorial, 20, 1630. Quéres.—Villagran, Hist. Neuva Mex., 155, 1610. Quéres.—Benavides (1630) quoted by Gallatin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXVI, 305, 1851. Quereses.—Sosa (1591) in Doc. Indéd., XV, 248, 1871. Querez.—Rivera, Diario y Derrot., leg. 784, 1736. Queris.—Bandelier in Revue d'Ethnog., 203, 1886. Queros.—Walch, Charte America, 1805. Quingas.—Graves (1854) in H. R. Misc. Doc. 38, 33d Cong., 1st sess., 7, 1854. Quires.—Espejo (1583) in Doc. Indéd., XV, 122, 1871. Quirex.—Simpson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1869, map, 1871. Quiria.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, LXXI, 1848. Quirix.—Castañeda (ca. 1565) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., IX, 110, 1838. Quiros.—Dobbs, Hudson Bay, 163, 1744. Quirix.—Castañeda (ca. 1565) in Ternaux-Compans, Voy., IX, 182, 1838. Xeres.—Rivera, Diario y Derrot., leg. 950, 1736. Zures.—Vetancourt (1693), Crónica, 315, 1871.

Kernertok. A settlement of East Greenland Eskimo near Frederiksdal. —Meddelelser om Grönland, XXV, 246, 1902.

Kern River Shoshoneans. A small Shoshonean group in S. California which differs so much linguistically from all other peoples of this family as to form a major division, although numerically insignificant. It includes the Tubatulabal, who occupy the valley of Kern r. above the falls, and the Bankalachi of upper Deer cr.

Keroff. Mentioned among a number of Upper Creek towns in H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 162, 1836. It probably is a badly mutilated abbreviation of the name of a known Creek town, but is not identifiable in this form. The settlement appears to have been on the upper course of Coosa r., Ala.

Kershaw. See Cashaw.

Kesa (Q'ésa). A Haida town on the W. coast of Graham id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Tadjilanas before moving to Alaska.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Keshkunuwu (Q'eshkunuwu', 'bluejay fort'). A former Tlingit village in the Sitka country, Alaska. (J. R. S.)

Keshlakchuis (Ké'sh-lákcheuish). A former Modoc settlement on the s. e. side of Tule (Rhett) lake, Modoc co., N. E. Cal.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. 1, xxxii, 1890.

Keskaechquerem. Mentioned as if a former Canarsee village near Maspeth, on the w. end of Long id., N. Y., in deed of 1638.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiv, 14, 1883.

Keskistkonk. A former Nochpeem village which seems to have been on Hudson r., s. of the Highlands, in Putnam co., N. Y. Keskistkonck.—Van der Donck (1656) quoted by Rutenber, Tribes Hudson R., 80, 1872. Kis Kightkonck.—Doc. of 1663 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., XIII, 303, 1881 (used for the Nochpeem tribe).

Kesmalí (Kés-má-li). A former village of the San Luis Obispo Indians of the Chumashan family, at Pt Sal, San Luis Obispo co., Cal.—Schumacher in Smithsonian Rep. 1874, 340, 1875.

Kespoogwit ('land's end'). One of the two divisions of the territory of the Micmac as recognized by themselves. According to Rand it includes the districts of Eskegawaage, Shubenacadie, and Annapolis (q. v.), embracing all of s. and E. Nova Scotia. In Frye's list of 1760, Kashpugowitk and Keshpugowitk are mentioned as two of 14 Micmac bands or villages. These are evidently duplicates, as the same chief was over both, and were intended for the Kespoogwit division. The inhabitants are called Kespoogwitanak. See Micmac. (J. M.)

Kashpugowitk.—Frye (1760) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., x, 115-116, 1809. Keshpugowitk.—Ibid. (mentioned separately, but evidently the same). Kespoogwit.—Rand, First Micmac Reading Book, 81, 1875. Kespoogwitanák.—Ibid. (the people of Kespoogwit).

Kestaubinck. A former Sintsink village in Westchester co., N. Y., between Singing cr. and Croton r.; mentioned by Van der Donck in 1656.—Rutenber, Tribes Hudson R., 72, 79, 1872.

Ket (Q'et, 'narrow strait'). A Haida town on Burnaby str., Moresby id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. It was occupied by a branch of the Hagi-lanas, who from their town were called Keda-lanas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 277, 1905.

Ketangheanycke. A village, probably of the Abnaki, near the mouth of Kennebec r., Me., in 1602-09.—Purchas (1625) quoted in Me. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 156, 1857.

Ketchewaundaugenink ('large lick at.'—Hewitt). A former Chippewa village on Shiawassee r., on the trail between Detroit and Saginaw bay, in lower Michigan, on a reservation sold in 1837. (J. M.)

Big Lick.—Detroit treaty (1837) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 215, 1873. Big salt lick.—Williams (1872) in Mich. Pion. Coll., II, 476, 1880. Che-won-dor-goning.—Ibid., 477. Ke-che-wan-dor-goning.—Ibid., 476. Keche-e-waun-dau-gu-mink.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Mich. map, 765, 1899. Ketchewaundaugenink.—Saginaw treaty (proclaimed 1820) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 142, 1873. Ketchewaundaugumink.—Detroit treaty, op. cit. Ketchiawáiyán-daganing.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1905. Keth-e-wandong-ging.—Williams, op. cit., 481. Saline.—Ibid., 476 (French name). Wan-dor-gong-ing.—Ibid., 477.

Ketchigumiwisuwagi (Ké'teigamiwisuwagi, 'they go by the name of the sea'). A Sauk gens.

Ká-che-kone-a-we'-so-ok.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 170, 1877 (trans. 'sea'). Ke'teigamiwisuwagi.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1906.

Ketgohittan ('people of small-shark house'). Given as a subdivision of the Tlingit clan Nanyaayi, but in reality simply the name of those inhabiting a certain house.

K'é'tgo hit tan.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 25, 1889. Q!a'tgu hit tan.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Ketlalsm (Ké'tlals'm, 'nipping grass'), so called because deer come here in spring to eat the fresh grass). A Squawmish village community on the e. side of Howe sd., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Ketlaynap. A body of Salish of Vancouver id., speaking the Cowichan dialect; pop. 24 in 1882.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1882, 258.

Ketnas-hadai (K'é'tnas had'a'i, 'sea-lion house people' [?]). Given by Boas (Fifth Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 27, 1889) as the name of a subdivision of the Yakulanas, a family of the Raven clan of the Haida of s. w. Alaska; but it is in reality only a house name belonging to that family. There seems to be an error in the designation, the word for 'sea-lion' being ga-i. (J. R. S.)

Ketsilind (Ké'silí'nd, 'people of the Rio Chiquito ruin'). A division of the Jicarilla who claim that their former home was s. of Taos pueblo, N. Mex. They are possibly of mixed Picuris descent. (J. M.)

Keuchishkeni (Ke-utchishxé'ni, 'where the wolf rock stands'). A former Modoc camping place on Hot cr., near Little Klamath lake, N. Cal.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. 1, xxxii, 1890.

Kevalingamint. A tribe of Eskimo whose country extended from C. Sepings and C. Krusenstern, Alaska, inland to Nunatak r. They were an offshoot of the Nunatoginiut, reinforced by outlaws from the Kinugumiut and Kaviagmiut. The main body of the tribe is now found about Pt Hope and farther n., having emigrated on account of disease and lack of food, and expelled the Tigaramiut from their northern hunting grounds. Their villages are Kechemudluk, Kivualinak, and Ulezara.

Kevalinye Mutes.—Kelly, Arct. Eskimos, chart, 1890. Kevalinyes.—Ibid., 13. Kivaliug-miut (Tikhmenief (1861) quoted by Baker, Geog. Diet. Alaska, 115, 1902).

Kevikivashalah. A body of Salish of Victoria superintendency, Vancouver id. Pop. 31 in 1882, when last separately enumerated.

Kevil-kiva-sha-lah.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1882, 258.

Kewatsana (Kewátsána, 'no ribs'). An extinct division of the Comanche.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1045, 1896.

Kewaughtohenemach. Given as a division of the Okinagan that lived 30 m. above Priests rapids, on Columbia r., Wash.

Ke-waught-chen-unaughs.—Ross, Adventures, 290, 1849. Ke-waugh-tohen-emachs.—Ibid., 137.

Kewigoshkeem. A former Chippewa or Ottawa village, named after a chief who flourished in the latter part of the 18th century; situated on Grand r., at or near the present Grand Rapids, Mich., on land ceded to the United States by the treaty of Chicago, Aug. 29, 1821, proclaimed Mar. 25, 1832. Under this treaty half a section of land near the village was granted to Charles and Medart Beaubien, sons of Mannabenaqua.

Ke-wigo-shkeem.—Treaty (proclaimed 1832) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 154, 1873. Ke-wi-go-sh-kum.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Mich. map, 1899. Kewigushkum.—Bennett (1779) in Mich. Pion. Coll., ix, 393, 1886 (the chief).

Keya. The Badger clan of the Tewa pueblos of San Juan, Santa Clara, and San Ildefonso, N. Mex.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 349, 1896.

Keyatiwankwi (K'eyatiwankwi, 'place of upturning or elevation'). The first of the mythic settling places of the Zuni after their emergence from the underworld.—Cushing in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 388, 1896.

Keyauwee. A small tribe formerly living in North Carolina, affiliated with the Tutelo, Saponi, and Occaneechi. Nothing remains of their language, but they perhaps belonged to the Siouan family, from the fact of their intimate association with well known Siouan tribes of the E. In 1701 Lawson (Carolina, 1714, 87–89, repr. 1860) found them in a palisaded village about 30 m. N. E. of Yadkin r., near the present Highpoint, Guilford co., N. C. Around the village were large fields of corn. At that time they were about equal in number to the Saponi and had, as chief, Keyauwee Jack, who was by birth a Congaree, but had obtained the chieftaincy by marriage with their "queen." Lawson says most of the men wore mustaches or whiskers, an unusual custom for Indians. At the time of this traveler's visit the Keyauwee were on the point of joining the Tutelo and Saponi for better protection against their enemies. Shortly afterward they, together with the Tutelo, Saponi, Occaneechi, and Shakori, moved down toward the settlements about Albemarle sd., the five tribes with one or two others not named numbering then only about 750 souls. In 1716 Gov. Spotswood of Virginia proposed to settle the Keyauwee with the Eno and Sara at Enotown on the frontier of North Carolina, but was prevented by the opposition of that colony. They moved southward with the Sara, and perhaps also the Eno, to Pedee r., S. C., some time in 1733. On Jefferys' map of 1761 their village is marked on the Pedee above that of the Sara, about the bound-dary between the two Carolinas. With this notice they disappear from history, having probably been absorbed by the Catawba. (J. M.)

Keawe.—Jefferys, Fr. Dom. Am., i, 134, map, 1761. Keawee.—Bowen, map of the Brit. Am. Plantations, 1760. Keawawees.—Doc. of 1716 in N. C. Rec., 242, 1886. Keowaws.—Ibid., 243. Keowee.—Vaugondy, map Partie de l'Amér. Sept., 1755. Keiauwées.—Lawson (1701), Carolina, 384, 1860. Keomee.—Moll, map of Car., 1720 (misprint). Keawewees.—Byrd (1733), Hist. Div. Line, ii, 22, 1866. Keyauwee.—Lawson (1701), Carolina, 87, repr. 1860. Keyawees.—Brickell, Nat. Hist. N. Car., 343, 1737.

Keyerhwotket ('old village'). A village of the Hwotsotenne on Bulkley r., Brit. Col., lat. 55°.

Kéyar-hwotqet.—Morice, Notes on W. Dénés, 27, 1902. Kéyashwotqet.—Morice in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., x, map, 1892. Kyahuntgate.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocabs. B. C., map, 1884. Kyahwilgate.—Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can., 20b, 1881.

Keyukee. A former Cherokee town; locality undetermined.—Doc. of 1799 quoted by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 144, 1887.

Kezeche. A Tatshiautin village on Taché r., Brit. Col., under the Babine and Upper Skeena River agency; pop. 24 in 1904.

Grand Rapids.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. 2, 70, 1902. Keztce.—Morice, Notes on W. Dénés, 26, 1902. Kus-ché-o-tin.—Dawson in Rep. Can. Geol. Surv., 30B, 1881. Kustsheotin.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocabs. B. C., 123b, 1884.

Keze ('barbed like a fishhook,' a derisive name, alluding to their cross disposition). A band of the Sisseton Sioux, an offshoot of the Kakhmiationwan.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 217, 1897.

Kezonlathut. A Takulli village on McLeod lake, Brit. Col.; pop. 96 in 1904.

McLeod's Lake.—Can. Ind. Aff., 1904, pt. ii, 74, 1905. Qézonlathut.—Morice in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., x, 109, 1892.

Kfwetragottine ('mountain people'). A division of the Kawchodinne living s. of Ft Good Hope, along Mackenzie r., Mackenzie Ter., Can.

Kfiwe-tpa-Gottinë.—Petitot, Autour du lac Des Esclaves, 362, 1891.

Khaamotene. Given, seemingly in error, as a subdivision of the Tolowa formerly dwelling at the mouth of Smith r., Cal., in the village of Khoonkhwuttunne, and at the forks in a village called Khasatunne. Qa'-a-mo' te'-ne.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 236, 1890. Smith River Indians.—Ibid.

Khaap. A body of Ntlakyapamuk under the Kamloops-Okanagan agency, Brit. Col.; pop. 23 in 1901, the last time the name appears.

Khaap.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1901, pt. 2, 166. Skaap.—Ibid., 1885, 196.

Khabemadolil. A Pomo village on upper Clear lake, Cal.—Kroeber, MS., Univ. Cal., 1903.

Khabenapo ('stone village', or 'stone people'). A Pomo division or band on Kelsey cr., in Big valley, on the w. side of Clear lake, Cal. They numbered 195 in 1851.

Ca-ba-na-po.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 136, 1853. Habe-napo.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 109, 1853. Ha-bi-na-pa.—McKee, op. cit. Ká-bi-na-pek.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 204, 1877.

Khachtais. A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.

K'qátc-jais'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Khahitan (Gha-hítá'n, pl. Gha-hítá'neo, 'ermine people', from gha-i 'ermine', hítá'neo 'people'). The Cheyenne name of an unidentified Pueblo tribe of the Rio Grande, known to the Cheyenne through visits and trade intercourse. They formerly accompanied Mexican traders in their journeys to the camps of the Plains tribes, and used Spanish as well as their own language. They formerly cut their hair across below the ears, with a short side plait wrapped with strings of white ermine skin, but have now adopted the ordinary hairdress style of the Plains tribes. From information of Cheyenne who met some of them on a recent visit to Taos, N. Mex., it is known that they are distinct from Ute, Navaho, Jicarilla, or Taos Indians, and live farther s. than any of these. They may possibly be the Picuris. (J. M.)

GHá-hi-táneo.—Mooney, MS. Cheyenne notes, B. A. E., 1906. Ka-he'-ta-ni-o.—Hayden, Ethnol. and Philol. Mo. Vol., 290, 1862.

Khaik. A Chugmuit Eskimo village on the Yukon, Alaska.

Khaigamut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Khaigamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884.

Khaikuchum. A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.

K'qai'-kú-t'úm'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Khainanaitetunne. A former village of the Tututni, the inhabitants of which were exterminated, except two boys, one of whom was an old man at Siletz agency, Oreg., in 1884.

Qa'-i-na'-na-i-té' yúnné.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 236, 1890.

Khaishuk. A former Yaquina village on the n. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.

Kqai'-cúk.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Khaiyukkhai. A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.

Kqai-yú'-kqai.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Khaiyumitu. A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.

K'qai-yu'-mi-yú.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Khakaiaawa. Said to be a collective name for the Pomo villages on upper Clear lake, Cal.—Kroeber, MS., Univ. Cal., 1903. Cf. Khana.

Khakhaich. A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.

Kqa-kqaité'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Khalakw. A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.

Qa-íak'w'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Khaltso ('yellow bodies'). A Navaho clan, the descendants of two daughters of an Apache father.

Háltso.—Matthews, Navaho Legends, 30, 1897. Háltso/íne'.—Ibid. Qáltso.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 103, 1890. Qáltso/íne'.—Ibid.

Khana (Pomo: 'on the water', or 'on [Clear] lake?'). A term which seems to have been descriptively applied to the Pomo of Clear lake, Cal. Bartlett (1854) gives a H'hana vocabulary, which is Pomo, as coming from the upper Sacramento, but obtained it from a stray Pomo at San Diego.

H'hana.—Bartlett in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 492, 1877. Khana.—S. A. Barrett, inf'n, 1906.

Kharatanumanke. Given as a Mandan gens, but evidently merely a band.

Ho-ra-ta'-mú-make.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 153, 1877. Qa-ra-ta' nu-ma'-ke.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 241, 1897 (given with a query). Wolf.—Morgan, op. cit.

Khashhlizhni ('mud'). A Navaho clan.

Hasli'z/íne'.—Matthews, Navaho Legends, 30, 1897. Hasli'z/ni.—Ibid. Qaclj.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 103, 1890. Qacljai.—Ibid.

Khashkankhatso ('much yucca'). A Navaho clan.

Haslán/hatso.—Matthews, Navaho Legends, 30, 1897. Haslan/hatso/íne'.—Ibid. Qackà/qatso.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 103, 1890. Qackà/qatso/íne'.—Ibid.

Khauweshetawes ('spread-out irrigation ditch'). A Maricopa rancheria on the Rio Gila, s. Ariz.—ten Kate, inf'n, 1888.

Khawina ('on the water'). The name, in the Upper Clear Lake dialect, of the Lower Clear Lake Pomo village at Sulphur Bank, Lake co., Cal.—Kroeber, MS., Univ. Cal., 1903.

Khdhaskukdhin ('dwelling place among the yellow flowers'; i. e., 'sunflower place' [?]). An ancient Osage village on Neosho r., Kans.

Qzási úyáí.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883. Qdhasi ukdhí.—Ibid.

Kheerghia. A former Tututni village on the coast of Oregon, about 25 m. s. of the mouth of Pistol r.

Mún-kqé'-tún.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 236, 1890. Qé-e-rxi'-a.—Ibid.

Khemnichan ('mountain-water wood,' from a hill covered with timber that appears to rise out of the water). A band of the Mdewakanton Sioux. According to Pike they were living in 1811 in a village near the head of L. Pepin, Minn., on the site of the present Red Wing, under chief Tatankamani ('Walking Buffalo'); in 1820 they lived on L. Pepin, under chief Red Wing. Long, in 1824, found them in two small villages, one on Mississippi r., the other on Cannon r., aggregating 150 people in 20 lodges. Shakea was then their chief, subordinate to Wabeshaw of the Kiyuka. They were under Wakute ('Shooter') at the time of the Sioux outbreak in 1862.

Eambosandata.—Neill in Minn. Hist. Coll., I, 263, 1858 (trans. 'mountain beside the water'). Eanbosandata.—Long, Exped. St Peter's R., I, 380, 1824. Hamine-chan.—Prescott in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 171, 1852. He-mini-čaj.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 215, 1897. Hemnicá.—Ibid. He- mní'-cán.—Riggs, Dak. Gram. and Dict., 73, 1852. Ki-mni-cán.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 81, 1850 (trans. 'those who live about the tree on the mountain near the water'). Qe-mini-tca.—Dorsey, op. cit. Qemnitca.—Ibid. Raymneechea.—Neill, Hist. Minn., xlv, 589, 1858 (so designated because their village was near a hill, hú; 'water,' min; and 'wood,' chan). Red Wing's.—Long, Exped. St. Peters R., i, 380, 1824. Reminica Band.—Smithson. Misc. Coll., xiv, art. 5, 8, 1878. Reminica.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 81, 1858. Remnicah.—Ibid., 327. Shooter.—Ibid., 144, note (trans. of Wakute, name of the chief). Talangamane.—Shea, Discov., 111, 1852. Wahcoota band.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 282, 1854. Wah-koo-tay.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 589, 1858 (chief's name). Wahkuti band.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1855, 64, 1856. Wahute band.—McKusick in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1863, 314, 1864. Wakootay's band.—Pike (1806) quoted by Neill, Hist. Minn., 289, 1858 (cf. Coues, Pike's Exped., i, 62, 69, 88, 1895). Wakuta band.—Gale, Upper Miss., 252, 1867. Wa-ku-te.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 144, note, 1858. Wakute's band.—McKusick in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1863, 316, 1864. Waukouta band.—Warren in Minn. Hist. Coll., v, 156, 1885. Weakaote.—Long, Exped. St. Peter's R., 380, 1824.

Kheyataotonwe ('village back from the river'). A Mdewakanton Sioux band formerly occupying the country near Harriet and Calhoun lakes, Minn., driven, according to Neill (Hist. Minn., 590, 1858), from L. Calhoun by the Chippewa and settled in 1858 near Oak Grove, Minn. Heyata-otowwe.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 215, 1897. Heyata tonwan.—Riggs, letter to Dorsey, Mar. 28, 1884. Lake Calhoun band.—Parker, Minn. Handbook, 140, 1857. Ma-ripi-wi-ca-xta.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 144, note, 1858 (name of the chief). Qeyata-otowwe.—Hakewashte quoted by Dorsey, op. cit. Qeyata-to-waw.—Riggs quoted by Dorsey, op. cit. Reyataotonwe.—Neill in Minn. Hist. Coll., i, 263, 1872 ('island people'). Ri-ga-ta-a-ta-wa.—Smithson. Misc. Coll., xiv, art. 6, 8, 1878. Sky-Man.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 144, note, 1858.

Kheyatawichasha ('people back from the river'). The Brulé Teton Sioux who formerly inhabited the sand hills and high country on the Nebraska-Dakota border, subsequently placed under the Rosebud agency, under the name Upper Brulés. The Indian Report for 1885 gives their number (including the Loafer or Waglughe and the Wazhazha) as 6,918.

Heyata wicása.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 218, 1897. Highland Brulé.—Robinson, letter to Dorsey, 1879. Highland Sicangu.—Ibid. Northern Brulé.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 178, 1875. Qeyata-witeaca.—Dorsey, op. cit. Sicangu.—Cleveland, letter to Dorsey, 1884 (erroneously refers only to the Upper Brulés, the Lower Brulés being called Kutawicasa). Upper Brulés.—Ibid. Upper Platte Indians.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 209, 1866 (includes most, probably all, the Upper Brulés).

Khidhenikashika (Qid'e'nikaci'ya, 'eagle people'). A gens of the Quapaw.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 229, 1897.

Khilrats. A Tenankutechin village on Tanana r. at the mouth of Nabesna r., lat. 63° 40', Alaska.

Khilukh. A former Yaquina village on the n. side of Yaquina r., Ore.
K'qil'-iq.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Khinonascarant ('at the base of the mountain.'—Hewitt). A Huron village in Ontario in 1637.—Jes. Rel. for 1637, 126, 1858.

Khinukhtunne ('people among the small underground'). A former village of the Mishikhwutnetunne on Coquille r., Ore.

K'qi-nuq' qúnne'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 232, 1890.

Khoietoa. A former village of the Neutrals, apparently situated a short distance E. of the present Sandwich, Ontario, Canada. (J. N. B. H.)

Khoietoa.—Jes. Rel. for 1641, 80, 1858. Kioetoa.—Jes. Rel., III, index, 1858. St. Michel.—Jes. Rel. for 1641, 80, 1858 (mission name).

Khitalaithe. A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Ore.

Kqi'-qá-lai'-t'c'e.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Khitanumanke ('eagle'). Mentioned as a Mandan gens, but evidently only a band.

Ki-tá'-ne-máke.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 158, 1877. Qi-tá'-nu-mán'-ke.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 241, 1897 (given with a query).

Khlirmkwaish ('man goes along with the current'). A former Alsea village on the s. side of Alsea r., Ore.

Kqlim-kwaic'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Khlokhwaiyutslu ('deep lake'). A former Alsea village on the n. side of Alsea r., Ore.

Kqló'-qwai yu-tslu.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Khloslekhwuche. A former village of the Chastacosta on Rogue r., Ore.

K'qlóc'-le-qwút'-tc'e.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 234, 1890.

Khoalek. A Pomo village on upper Clear lake, Cal.—Kroeber, MS., Univ. Cal., 1903.

Khoghanhlani ('many huts'). A Navaho clan.

Hoganlani.—Matthews, Navaho Legends, 31, 1897. Qo-ganlani.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 104, 1890.

Khogoltinde. A Kaiyukhotana village on Yukon r., Alaska; pop. 60 in 1844.

Khogoltinde.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1841. Khogoltinde.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. Am., map, 1841.

Kholkh. A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Ore.

K'qólq.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Khomtinin ('southerners'). A generic term applied by all Yokuts tribes to those s. of them, especially if of their own linguistic family. Cf. Khosminin.

Khonagani ('place of walking'). A Navaho clan.

Honagáni.—Matthews Navaho Legends, 30, 1897. Qonagáni.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 104, 1890.

Khoonkhwuttunne. A former village of the Tolowa at the mouth of Smith r., Cal.; incorrectly given by Dorsey as a Khaamotene village.

Qo-on'-qwút-jún'né.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 236, 1890 (Tututni name). Qú-wún'-kqwút.—Ibid. (Naltunne name).

Khosatunne. A former village of the Tolowa on the forks of Smith r., Cal., near the Oregon line.

Q'ó'-sa jún'né.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 236, 1890 (Tututni name). Qwa'-s'a-a'-tún.—Ibid. (Naltunne name).

Khosminin ('northerners'). A generic term applied by all Yokuts tribes to those n. of them, whether of their own or of alien stock. Cf. Khomtinin.

Josimnin.—Arroyo de la Cuesta, Idiomas Californias, 1821, MS. trans., B. A. E. Khosminin.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1905.

Khotachi ('elk'). An extinct Iowa gens, coordinate with the Hotachi gens of the Missouri. Its subgenets were Unpeghakhanye, Unpeghayine, Unpeghathrechevine, and Homayine.

Ho'-dash.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 156, 1877. Ho'-tati.—Dorsey, Teiwere MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1879. Qo'-ta-tci.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 238, 1897.

Khotana. A name applied to several Athapaskan tribes of lower Yukon r., Cook's inlet, and Koyukuk r., Alaska, as the Kaiyukhotana, Knaikhotana, Unakhotana, and Koyukukhotana; and sometimes to these tribes collectively. The name contains the term for 'people' in their dialects. (J. R. S.)

Khotltacheche. A former village of the Chastacosta on Rogue r., Oreg.

Qotl'-ta-tce'-tce.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 231, 1890.

Khoughitchate. A village, probably of an Athapaskan tribe, above the N. mouth of Innoko r., w. Alaska.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., xxi, map, 1850.

Khra ('eagle'). A subgens of the Cheghita gens of the Missouri.

Kha'-á.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 156, 1877 (Eagle). Khu-a nika-shing-ga.—Stubbs, Kaw MS. vocab., B. A. E., 25, 1877. Qra.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 246, 1897.

Khrahune (Qra' hññ'-e, 'ancestral or gray eagle'). A subgens of the Cheghita gens of the Iowa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 238, 1897.

Khrakreye (Qra' rre'-ye, 'spotted eagle'). A subgens of the Cheghita gens of the Iowa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 238, 1897.

Khrapathan (Qra' pa çav, 'bald eagle'). A subgens of the Cheghita gens of the Iowa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 238, 1897.

Khtalutlitunne. A former village of the Chastacosta on Rogue r., Oreg.

Qta'-lüt-li' jünné.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 234, 1890.

Khube (Qube, 'mysterious'). A subgens of the Mandhinkagaghe gens of the Omaha.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 228, 1897.

Khudhapasan ('bald eagle'). A subgens of the Tsishuwastake gens of the Osage.

Qa'sa'a'u'niq'ácin'a.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897 (Sycamore people). Qüça' pa sa'a.—Ibid.

Khulhanshtauk. A former Yaquina village on Yaquina r., at the site of Elk City, Benton co., Oreg.

Kqil'-hanc't-aulk.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Khulighchakat. A Jugelnute village on Shageluk r., Alaska.

Khulighagat.—Zagoskin, Descr. Russ. Poss. Am., map, 1844. Khulighchakat.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884.

Khulikakat. A Kaiyukhotana village on Yukon r., Alaska; pop. 11 in 1844.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884.

Khulpuni. A former Cholovone village on lower San Joaquin r., Cal.

Chulpun.—Chamisso in Kotzebue, Voy., III, 51, 1821. Guylpunes.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861. Hulpunes.—Kotzebue, New Voy., 146, 1830. Khoulpouni.—Choris, Voy. Pitt., 5, 1822.

Khunaniilde. A Kaiyukhotana village near the headwaters of Kuskokwim r., w. Alaska; pop. 9 in 1880.

Khunaniilde.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5e s., xxi, map, 1850. Khunaniilde.—Zagoskin as quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884.

Khundjalan (Qündj-ala', 'wear red cedar on their heads'). A subgens of the Ponka gens of the Kansa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897.

Khundtse (Qünse', 'red cedar'). A subgens of the Panhkawashtake gens of the Osage.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 234, 1897.

Khunechuta. A former Tututni village on the N. side of Rogue r., Oreg.

Qün-e'-teu-ja'—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 233, 1890.

Khunilikhwut. A former Chetco village on the s. side of Chetco cr., Oreg.

Qü'-ni-li-i'-kqwüt.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 236, 1890.

Khuwaihus. A former Kuitsh village on lower Umpqua r., Oreg.

Qiti'-ai-äm'-ilç kqu-wai'-hu.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 231, 1890. Kqu-wai'-hus.—Ibid.

Khuya ('white eagle'). The 10th Kansa gens. Its subgenets are Husada and Wabinizhupye.

Eagle.—Dorsey in Am. Nat., 671, 1885. Hu-e'-yá.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 156, 1877. Qüya.—Dorsey, op. cit. White Eagle.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897.

Khuyeguzhinga ('hawk that has a tail like a king eagle'). A subgens of the Ibache gens of the Kansa.

Chicken-hawk.—Dorsey in Am. Nat., 674, July 1885. Küyegu jinga.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 231, 1897.

Khwaishtunnetunne ('people of the gravel'). A former Tututni village near the mouth of a small stream locally called Wishtenatin, after the name of the settlement, that enters the Pacific in s. w. Oregon about 10 m. s. of Pistol r., at a place later known as Hustenat, also from the aboriginal village name. The inhabitants, who numbered 66 in 1854, claimed the country as far as a small trading post known as the Whale's Head, about 27 m. s. of the mouth of Rogue r. If there are any survivors they reside on Siletz res., Oreg.

Khust-e-nét.—Schumacher in Bull. G. and G. Surv., III, 31, 1877. Khust-e-néte.—Ibid., 33. Qwai'-ctün-ne' jünné.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 236, 1890 ('people among the gravel': own name).

Qwin'-ctün-ne'-tün.—Ibid. (Saltunne name). Whash-to-na-ton.—Abbott, MS. Coquille census, B. A. E., 1858. Whish-ten-eh-ten.—Gibbs, MS. on coast tribes, B. A. E. Whistanatin.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, VI, 702, 1857. Wish-ta-nah-tin.—Kautz, MS. Toutouten census, B. A. E., 1855. Wishtenatan.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 18, 1860. Wish-te-na-tin.—Parrish in Ind. Aff. Rep., 495, 1854. Wis'-tüm-ä-ti' tène.—Everette, Tututene MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883 (trans: 'people by the springs').

Khwakhamaiu. The Pomo who lived about Ft Ross, the early Russian settlement on the coast in Sonoma co., Cal. The origin of the name is not known.

(S. A. B.)

Chwachamaju.—Wrangell, Ethnol. Nach., 80, 1839. Chwachmaja.—Ludewig, Aborig. Lang., 170, 1858. Khwakhamaiu.—S. A. Barrett, inf'n, 1905. North-erners.—Ibid. Severnovskia.—Ibid. Severnovze.—Ibid. Severnovzer.—Ibid. Severnovzi.—Ibid.

Khweshtunne. A former Mishikhwut-metunne village on Coquille r., Oreg., next above Coquille city.

Qwee' zūnné.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 232, 1890.

Khwunrghunmé. Seemingly the Tolowa name of a Yurok village on the coast of California, just s. of the mouth of Klamath r.

Kal'-a-qu-ni-me'-ne tūn'-né.—Dorsey, Chetco MS. vocab., B. A. E., 183, 1884 (Chetco name). Kal-hwān'-ūn-me'-ēni te'-ne.—Dorsey, Smith River MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884. Qwān-rxūn'-me.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 237, 1890 (Naltunne name).

Kiabaha. A village or tribe, now extinct, said to have existed between Matagorda bay and Maligine [Colorado] r., Tex. The name seems to have been given to Joutel in 1687 by the Ebahamo Indians, probably closely affiliated to the Karankawa, whose domain was in this region. A rancheria called Cabras (apparently the same name as Kiabaha), with 26 inhabitants, was mentioned in 1785 as being near the presidio of Bahia and the mission of Espíritu Santo de Zúñiga (q. v.) on the lower Río San Antonio (Bancroft, No. Mex. States, I, 659, 1886). See Gatschet, Karankawa Ind., 23, 35, 1891. Cf. Kabaya.

(A. C. F.)

Cabras.—Bancroft, op. cit. Kiabaha.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 288, 1878. Kiaboha.—Shea, note in Charlevoix, New France, IV, 78, 1870. Kiaboba.—Joutel (1687) in French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 137, 1846. Kiabobas.—Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723. Niabaha. Joutel (1687) in French, op. cit., 152.

Kiakēn (K'īake'n, 'palisade' or 'fenced village'). Two Squawmish village communities in British Columbia; one on the left bank of Squawmish r., the other on Burrard inlet.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. S., 474, 475, 1900.

Kiakima (K'yā'kima, 'home of the eagles'). A former Zuñi pueblo at the s. w. base of Thunder mtn., 4 m. s. e. of Zuñi pueblo, w. N. Mex. It was occupied in the 16th and 17th centuries as one of the "Seven Cities of Cibola," and, according to Zuñi tradition, was the scene of the death of the negro Estevanico, who had been a companion of Cabeza de Vaca, and had accompanied Fray Marcos de Niza on his journey from Mexico in 1539; but historical evidence places that event at Hawikuh. It was a visita of the mission of Halona, probably from 1629, and contained about 800 inhabitants, but on the insurrection of the Pueblos against Spanish authority in 1680, Kiakima was permanently abandoned, the inhabitants fleeing to Thunder mtn. for safety. See Bandler, cited below; Mindeleff in 8th Rep.

B. A. E., 85, 1891; Lowery, Span. Settlements in U. S., 1901.

(F. W. H.)

Caquima.—Vetancurt (1693) in Teatro Mex., III, 320, 1871. Caquimay.—Doc. of 1635 quoted by Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, v, 165, 1890. Caquineco.—Ladd, Story of N. Mex., 34, 1891. Coaque-ria.—Onate (1598) in Doc. Ind., XVI, 133, 1871. Coquimas.—Pike, Exped., 3d map, 1810. Coquimo.—Bandler quoted in The Millstone, IX, 55, Apr. 1884. Heshota O'quima.—Bandler, Gilded Man, 159, 1893 (misprint). K'ia'-ki-me.—Powell, 2d Rep. B. A. E., xxvi, 1883. K'ia'-ki-ma.—Cushing in The Millstone, IX, 55, Apr. 1884. K'ia' ki me.—Ibid., 225, Dec. 1884. K'ia'kime.—Cushing, Zuñi Folk Tales, 65, 1901. Kyakima.—Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 133, 1890. K'yā'-ki-me.—Cushing in Compte-rendu Internat. Cong. Am., VII, 156, 1890. O'quima.—Bandler, Gilded Man, 158, 1893 (misprint). Qa-quima.—Bandler in Revue d'Ethnog., 201, 1886. Quaguina.—Senex, map, 1710. Quaquima.—Bandler in Arch. Inst. Rep., V, 41, 1884. Quaquina.—De l'Isle, Carte Mex. et Floride, 1703. Quiaquima.—Bandler in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archaeol., III, 16, 1892. Quia-Quima.—Ibid., 29. Quiquimo.—Gusfeldt, Charte Nord Am., 1797.

Kialdagwuns (K'ia'ldagwuns, 'Sand-pipers'). A subdivision of the Sagugitunai, a family belonging to the Eagle clan of the Haida.

Klia'ldagwuns.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 274, 1905. Kyia'ltkoangas.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes of Canada, 23, 1898.

Kialegak. A Yuit Eskimo village near Southeast cape, St Lawrence id., Bering sea.

Kahgallegak.—Elliott, Our Aret. Prov., map, 1886. Kgallegak.—Tebenkof (1849) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kialegak.—Russ, chart. quoted by Baker, ibid. Kialegak.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899.

Kialinek. A former village of the Angmagssalingmiut on the E. coast of Greenland, lat. 66° 50', where they hunted the narwhal and the bear throughout the year. Some of its people are said to have emigrated northward.—Meddelelser om Grönland, IX, 382, 1889.

Kiamisha. A former Caddo village at the junction of Kiamichi and Red rs., in the present Choctaw nation, Okla. It contained 20 families in 1818.

Cayamechee.—Bell in Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 255, 1822 (the river). Kamissi.—Thevenot quoted by Shea, Discov., 268, 1852 (identically). Kiamisha.—Trimble (1818) in Morse, op. cit., 259 (the river). Kio Michie.—Rublo (1840) in H. R. Doc. 25, 27th Cong., 2d sess., 14, 1841.

Kianusili (Kū'nusili, 'cod people'). A family belonging to the Raven clan of the Haida. Kiān is the name for the common cod. This family group formerly lived on the w. coast of Queen Charlotte ids., near Hippa id., Brit. Col. (J. R. S.) Kianösili.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Canada, II, 123, 1895. Kiā'nusili.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 271, 1905. Kyā'nusila.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 22, 1898.

Kiashita. A former pueblo of the Jemez in Guadalupe canyon, N. of Jemez pueblo, N. Mex.

Kiashita.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895. Quia-shi-dshi.—Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 207, 1892.

Kiaskusis ('small gulls'). A small Creé band residing in 1856 around the fourth lake from Lac Qu'Apelle, N. W. Ter.,

Canada. They were formerly numerous, but had become reduced to 30 or 40 families owing to persistent Blackfeet raids.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 237, 1862.

Kiasutha (alias Guyasuta, 'it sets up a cross.'—Hewitt). A chief of some prominence as an orator in the Ohio region about 1760–1790. Although called a Seneca, he probably belonged to the mixed band of detached Iroquois in Ohio commonly known as Mingo, who sided with the French while their kinsmen of the New York confederacy acted as allies of the English. As a young warrior he accompanied Washington and Gist on their visit to the French forts on the Allegheny in 1753. After Braddock's defeat in 1755 he visited Montreal in company with a French interpreter and in 1759 was present at Croghan's conference with the Indians at Ft Pitt (now Pittsburg). He is mentioned also at the Lancaster conference in 1762, and in 1768 was a leading advocate of peace with the English both at the treaty of Ft Pitt in May and at Bouquet's conference there six months later. Washington visited him while on a hunting tour in Ohio in 1770. He is noted as at other conferences up to the time of the Revolution, and in 1782 is mentioned as leading an Indian raid on one of the frontier settlements. His name occurs last in 1790, when he sent a written message to some friends in Philadelphia. See Darlington, Christopher Gist's Journal, 1893.

Kiatagmiut. A division of the Aglemiut Eskimo of Alaska, inhabiting the banks of Kvichivak r. and Iliamna lake. They numbered 214 in 1890. Their villages are Chikak, Kakonak, Kaskanak, Kichik, Kogiung, Kvichak, and Nogeling.

Kiatagmiut.—Schanz in 11th Census, Alaska, 95, 1893. Kiatagmute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 135, 1884. Kiatenes.—Lutke, Voyage, I, 181, 1835. Kijataigmjuten.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 5, 1355. Kijataigmuten.—Wrangell, Ethnog. Nachr., 121, 1839. Kijaten.—Ibid. Kiyataigmeuten.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 370, 1851. Kiyaten.—Ibid. Kwichagmüt.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 19, 1877.

Kiatang ('shoulder'). A village of the Ita Eskimo on Northumberland id., Whale sd., N. Greenland.

Keate.—Peary, Northward, 113, 1898. Keati.—Mrs Peary, My Arct. Jour., 84, 1893. Kie'teng.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., 198, 1902. Kujata.—Ibid.

Kiatate. A group of ruins in the Sierra de los Huicholes, about 10 m. n. w. of San Andrés Coamiata, in the territory of the Huichol, Jalisco, Mexico.—Lumbholtz, Unknown Mex., II, 16, map, 1902.

Kiatsukwa. A former pueblo of the Jemez in New Mexico, the exact site of the ruins of which is not known.

Kiatsukwa.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895. Quia-tzo-qua.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 207, 1892.

Kiawaw. A small tribe, of unknown affinity, formerly on Kiawah id., Charleston co., S. C., but long extinct. They were regarded as one of the tribes of the Cusabo group.

Cayawah.—Moll, map, 1715. Cayawash.—Moll, map in Humphrey, Acct., 1730. Keawaw.—Mills, Stat. S. C., 459, 1826. Kiawaw.—Rivers, Hist. S. C., 38, 1856. Kyewaw.—Deed of 1675 quoted by Mills, op. cit., app., I, 1826.

Kiawetnau. The Yokuts name of the territory about Porterville, Cal. Given by Powers (Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 370, 1877) as the name of a tribe (Ki-a-wét-ni, which lacks the locative suffix -au).

Kichai (from Kitsüsh, their own name). A Caddoan tribe whose language is more closely allied to the Pawnee than to the other Caddoan groups. In 1701 they were met by the French on the upper waters of the Red r. of Louisiana and had spread southward to upper Trinity

KICHAİ MAN

r. in Texas. In 1712 a portion of them were at war with the Hainai, who dwelt lower down the Trinity. They were already in possession of horses, as all the Kichai warriors were mounted. They seem to have been allies of the northern and western tribes of the Caddoan confederacy and to have intermarried with the Kadohadacho. In 1719 La Harpe met some of the Kichai on Canadian r., in company with other Caddoan tribes, on their way toward New Mexico to wage war against the Apache. At that time they pledged friendship to the French, to whom they seem to have remained faithful. In common with all the other tribes they suffered from the introduction of new diseases and from the conflicts incident to the contention of the Spaniards, French, and English for control of the country, and became greatly reduced in numbers. In 1772 the main Kichai village was E. of Trinity r., not far from Palestine, perhaps a little N. E. At that time it was composed of 30 houses, occupied by 80 warriors, "for the most part young." In 1778 there was another village, "separated from the main body of the tribe," farther S. and in nearly a direct line from San Pedro to the Tawakoni villages, probably on the site of the present Salt City. The junta de guerra held in the same year estimated the strength of the Kichai at 100 fighting men (Bolton, inf'n, 1906). With several other small Texas tribes they were assigned by the United States Government to a reservation on Brazos r. in 1855, but on the dispersal of the Indians by the Texans three years later they fled N. and joined the Wichita, with whom they have since been associated, and whom they resemble in their agriculture, house-building, and general customs. About 50 souls still keep the tribal name and language.

See Pénicaut in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., 73, 120, 1869; La Harpe in Margry, Déc., vi, 277-8, 1886; Rep. Com. Ind. Aff., 1846, 1849, 1851, 1872, 1901. (A. C. F.) Cachies.—Arbuckle in H. R. Doc. 434, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 5, 1838. Cassia.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 409, 1878. Gits'aji.—Dorsey, Kansas MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 (Kansas name). Guichais.—Tex. State Arch., 1792. Guitzeis.—Morris, MS. Historia, bk. 2, cited by Bolton, inf'n, 1906. Hitchi.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 104, 1856 (misprint). Hitchies.—Burnet (1847) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 239, 1851. Kaji.—McCoy, Annual Register, no. 4, 27, 1838. Keechies.—Alvord in Sen. Ex. Doc. 18, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 6, 1869. Keechies.—Marcy, Explor. Redr., 93, 1854. Kechis.—Latham, Essays, 399, 1860. Keechers.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 144, 1850. Keechi.—Whiting in Rep. Sec. War, 242, 1850. Keechies.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 894, 1846. Keechy.—Sen. Ex. Conf. Doc. 13, 29th Cong., 2d sess., 1, 1846. Keetsas.—Arbuckle (1845) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 14, 32d Cong., 2d sess., 134, 1853. Kekies.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 1871, 191, 1872. Kerchi.—Ibid., 263, 1851. Ketcheyes.—Edward, Hist. Texas, 92, 1836. Ketchies.—Bollaert in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., ii, 265, 1850. Keychies.—Lewis and Clark, Journal, 142, 1840. Keyche.—Drake, Bk. Inds., viii, 1848. Keychies.—Pénicaut (1701) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., i, 73, 1869. Keyes.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 70, 1806. Keyeshees.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 87, 1815. Keys.—Lewis and Clark, Journal, 145, 1840. Kichae.—Bol. Soc. Geogr. Mex., 267, 1870. Kichais.—Whipple in Pac. R. R. Rep., iii, pt. 3, 76, 1856. Kiche.—Wallace (1840) in H. R. Doc. 25, 27th Cong., 2d sess., 5, 1841. Kichis.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 14, 32d Cong., 2d sess., 16, 1853. Ki-gi'-teac.—Dorsey, Cegiha MS. dict., B. A. E., 1878 (Omaha name). Kiechee.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 1849, 36, 1850. Kietsash.—Gatschet, Wichita MS., B. A. E. (Wichita name). Kishais.—H. R. Rep., 299, 44th Cong., 1st sess., 1, 1876. Kitasches.—Pénicaut (1714) in Margry, Déc., v, 502, 1883. Kitaesechis.—Pénicaut (1714) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., i, 120, 1869. Kitchas.—Gatschet, Tonkawa MS., B. A. E. (Tonkawa name). Ki'-tchesh.—Gatschet, Caddo and Yatassi MS., 65, B. A. E. (Caddo name). Kitchies.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 237, 1851. Kitsasi.—Dorsey, Osage MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1883 (Osage name). Kitsaiches.—Bruyère (1742) in Margry, Déc., vi, 492, 1886. Ki'tsash.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1095, 1896 (own name). Kitsasi.—Grayson, Creek MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885 (Creek name). Kits de Singes.—Robin, Voyages, iii, 5, 1807. Kitsoss.—Arbuckle in H. R. Doc. 434, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 5, 1838. Ki'tsu.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Pawnee and Wichita name). Kochees.—Schoolcraft, Ind.

Tribes, i, 518, 1851. Kyis.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 81, 1815. Queyches.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Quichaais.—Census of 1790 in Tex. State Arch. Quichais.—Ybarbo (1778), letter cited by Bolton, inf'n, 1906. Quicheigno.—Rippardá (1774), ibid. Quiches.—Anville, Carte des Isles de l'Amérique, 1731. Quidaho.—La Harpe (1719) in French, Hist. Coll. La., iii, 72, 1851. Quidehaio.—Ibid. Quidehais.—La Harpe (1719) in Margry, Déc., vi, 277, 1886 (probably identical). Quitoeis.—Mezières (1778) quoted by Bancroft, No. Mex. States, i, 661, 1886. Quitres.—Mezières (1779), letter cited by Bolton, inf'n, 1906. Quitreys.—Ibid. Quitseigus.—Rippardá (1777), letter, ibid. Quitseings.—Rippardá (1777), letter, ibid. Quitseis.—Doc. of 1771-2 quoted by Bolton in Tex. Hist. Quar., ix, 91, 1905. Quituchis.—Villa-Señor, Teatro Am., ii, 413, 1748. Quituxi.—Fran. de Jesus Maria (1691), Relación cited by Bolton, inf'n, 1906. Quitzaene.—Pimentel, Cuadro Descr., ii, 347, 1865 (given as a Comanche division). Quizi.—Fran. de Jesus Maria (1691) cited by Bolton, inf'n, 1906.

Kicham (K'icám). A Squawmish village community on Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 475, 1900.

Kichesipirini ('men of the great river,' from kiche 'great', sipi 'river', iriniouek 'men.' By the Huron they were called Ehonkeronon; from the place of their residence they were often designated Algonquins of the Island, and Savages of the Island). Once an important tribe living on Allumette id., in Ottawa r., Quebec province. They were considered as the typical Algonkin, and in order to distinguish them from the other tribes included under the term in this restricted sense were called "Algonquins of the Island," a name first applied by Champlain (see Algonkin). As Ottawa r. was the line of travel between the upper-lake country and the French settlements, the position of the tribe made it at times troublesome to traders and voyageurs, although as a rule they appear to have been peaceable. In 1645 they, together with the Hurons, made a treaty of peace with the Iroquois; but it was of short duration, for 5 years later both the Hurons and the Kichesipirini fled for safety to more distant regions. What became of them is not known. It is probable that they were consolidated with the Ottawa or with some other northwestern Algonquin tribe. (J. M. J. N. B. H.)

Algommequin de l'Isle.—Champlain (1632), Œuvres, v, pt. 2, 193, 1870 (see Algonkin for various forms of the word). Ehonkeronon.—Jes. Rel. 1639, 83, 1858. Héhonqueronon.—Sagard (1632), Hist. Can., iv, cap. 'Nations', 1866. Honqueronons.—Sagard (1636), ibid., iii, 620. Honquerons.—Ibid., i, 247. Kichesipiriniouek.—Jes. Rel. 1658, 22, 1858. Kichesipirini.—Ibid., 1640, 34, 1858. Kichesipiriniwek.—Ibid., 1646, 34, 1858. Nation de l'Isle.—Ibid., 1633, 34, 1858. Sauvages de l'Isle.—Ibid., 1646, 34, 1858.

Kichik. A Kiatagmuit village on a lake of the same name E. of Iliamna lake, Alaska; pop. 91 in 1880.—Tenth Census, Alaska, map, 1884.

Kichye ('where there is much ki-ke, 'a lily root used for glue'). A small rancheria of the Tarahumare in the Sierra Madre, w. Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, inf'n, 1894.

Kickapoo (from Kiwigapawa, 'he stands about,' or 'he moves about, standing now here, now there'). A tribe of the central Algonquian group, forming a division with the Sauk and Foxes, with whom they have close ethnic and linguistic connection. The relation of this division is rather with the Miami, Shawnee, Menominee, and Peoria than with the Chippewa, Potawatomi, and Ottawa.

History.—The people of this tribe, unless they are hidden under a name not yet known to be synonymous, first appear in history about 1667-70. At this time they were found by Allouez near the portage between Fox and Wisconsin rs. Verwyst (Missionary Labors, 1886) suggests Alloa, Columbia co., Wis., as the probable locality, about 12 m. s. of the mixed village of the Mascouten, Miami, and Wea. No tradition of their former home or previous wanderings has been recorded; but if the name Outitchakouk mentioned by Druillettes (Jes. Rel. 1658, 21, 1858) refers to the Kickapoo, which seems probable, the first mention of them is carried back a few years, but they were then in the same locality. Le Sueur

KICKAPOO MAN

(1699) mentions, in his voyage up the Mississippi, the river of the Quinecapous (Kickapoo), above the mouth of the Wisconsin, which he says was "so called from the name of a nation which formerly dwelt on its banks." This probably refers to Kickapoo r., Crawford co., Wis., though it empties into the Wisconsin, and not into the Mississippi. Rock r., Ill., was for a time denominated the "River of the Kickapoos," but this is much too far s. to agree with the stream mentioned by Le Sueur. A few years later a part at least of the tribe appears to have moved s. and settled somewhere about Milwaukee r. They entered into the plot of the Foxes in 1712 to burn the fort at Detroit. On the destruction of the Illinois confederacy, about 1765, by the combined forces of the tribes n. of them, the conquered country was partitioned among the victors, the Sauk and Foxes moving down to the Rock r. country, while the Kickapoo went farther s., fixing their headquarters for a time at Peoria. They appear to have gradually extended their range, a portion centering about Sangamon r., while another part pressed toward the E., establishing themselves on the waters of the Wabash, despite the opposition of the Miami and Piankashaw. The western band became known as the Prairie band, while the others were denominated the Vermilion band, from their residence on Vermilion r., a branch of the Wabash. They played a prominent part in the history of this region up to the close of the War of 1812, aiding Tecumseh in his efforts against the United States, while many Kickapoo fought with Black Hawk in 1832. In 1837 Kickapoo warriors to the number of 100 were engaged by the United States to go, in connection with other western Indians, to fight the Seminole of Florida. In 1809 they ceded to the United States their lands on Wabash and Vermilion rs., and in 1819 all their claims to the central portion of Illinois. Of this land, as stated in the treaty, they "claim a large portion by descent from their ancestors, and the balance by conquest from the Illinois nation, and uninterrupted possession for more than half a century." They afterward removed to Missouri and thence to Kansas. About the year 1852 a large party left the main body, together with some Potawatomi, and went to Texas and thence to Mexico, where they became known as "Mexican Kickapoo." In 1863 they were joined by another dissatisfied party from the tribe. The Mexican band proved a constant source of annoyance to the border settlements, and efforts were made to induce them to return, which were so far successful that in 1873 a number were brought back and settled in Indian Ter. Others have come in since, but the remainder, constituting at present nearly half the tribe, are now settled on a reservation, granted them by the Mexican government, in the Santa Rosa mts. of E. Chihuahua.

Customs and Beliefs.—The Kickapoo lived in fixed villages, occupying bark houses in the summer and flag-reed oval lodges during the winter. They raised corn, beans, and squashes, and while dwelling on the E. side of the Mississippi they often wandered out on the plains to hunt buffalo. On these hunting trips they came to know the horse, and previous to the Civil war they had gone as far as Texas for the sole purpose of stealing horses and mules from the Comanche. No other Algonquians of the central group were more familiar with the Indians of the plains than the Kickapoo; and yet, with all this contact, their culture has remained essentially the same as that of the Sauk and the Foxes.

Like the Sauk and Foxes they believe in a cosmic substance prevailing throughout all nature, and the objects endowed with the mystic property are given special reverence. Far in the past they claim to have practised the Midewiwin; but to-day their most sacred ceremony is the Kigünowin, the feast dance of the clans. The dog is held in special veneration and is made an object of sacrifice and offering to the manitos. The mythology is rich, and is characterized by a mass of beast fable. The great cosmic myth centers about the death of the younger brother of the culture-hero, whose name is Wisa kä. To him they attribute all the good things of this world and the hope of life in the spirit world, over which the younger brother presides. The brothers are idealized as youths.

The gentile system prevailed, and marriage was outside of the gens. The name had an intimate connection with the gens, and children followed the gens of the father. The gentes to-day are Water, Tree, Berry, Thunder, Man, Bear, Elk, Turkey, Bald-eagle, Wolf, and Fox.

Population.—In 1759 the population of the Kickapoo was estimated at about 3,000; in 1817 at 2,000, and in 1825 at 2,200. Since the last-mentioned date they have greatly decreased. In 1875 those in Kansas and Indian Ter. together, including all of those recently brought from Mexico, were officially reported to number 706, while 100 more were supposed to be in Mexico, making a total for the tribe of about 800. In 1885 those in the United States numbered about 500, of whom 235 were in Kansas, while the Mexican band in Indian Ter. (including some Potawatomi) numbered about 325. It is supposed that there were at the same time about 200 living in Mexico. Those in the United States in 1905 were officially reported at 432, of whom 247 were in Oklahoma and 185 in Kansas. There are supposed to be about 400 or more in Mexico. Within the last two years there has been considerable effort by private parties to procure the removal of the Oklahoma band also to Mexico.

The following are known as Kickapoo villages: Etnataek (with Sauk and Foxes), Kickapougowi, and Neonga.

(J. M. W. J.)

A'-uyax.—Gatschet, Tonkawe MS., B. A. E., 1884 ('deer eaters,' from a'u deer, ya'xa 'to eat'; Tonkawa name). Gigabu.—Gatschet, Fox, MS., B. A. E., 1882 (Fox name; plural Gigabuhak). Gikapu.—Gatschet, ibid. (Fox name). Gokapagans.—Bacqueville de la Potherie, Hist. de l'Amér. iv, 224, 1753 (perhaps identical). Higabu.—Dorsey, Cegilia MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1878 (Omaha and Ponca name). Hisa'pu.—Dorsey, Telwere MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1879 (Iowa, Oto, and Missouri name). I'-ka-du'.—Dorsey, MS. Osage vocab., B. A. E., 1883 (Osage name). Kackapoes.—Dalton (1783) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., x, 123, 1809. Kecapos.—Crogan (1759) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 132, 1816. Kecapos.—Crogan, (1760) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., ix, 250, 1871. Ke-ga-boge.—Morgan, Consang. and Affin., 288, 1871. Kehabous.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, iii, 79, 1854 (misprint). Kekapos.—Crogan (1759) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 134, 1816. Kikapou.—Doc. of 1695 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 619, 1855. Kekapouag.—Tanner, Narrative, 315, 1830 (Ottawa name). Kicapos.—Crogan (1765) in Craig, Olden Time, 409, 1816. Kicapous.—Johnson (1772) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., viii, 292, 1857. Kicapous.—Doc. of 1748, ibid., x, 150, 1858. Kicapus.—Rafinesque, introd. Marshall, Ky., i, 38, 1824. Kickapoo.—Crogan (1765) in Monthly Am. Jour. Geol., 263, 1831. Kichapacs.—Writer of 1786 in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., iii, 26, 1794. Kickapoo.—Crogan (1765) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 780, 1856. Kickapoo.—German Flats conf. (1770), ibid., viii, 214, 1857. Kickapous.—Chauvignerie (1736), ibid., ix, 1055, 1855. Kickipoo.—Gale, Upper Miss., map, 1867. Kicagoves.—Barcia, Ensayo, 238, 1723 (mentioned with Miami and Mascoutin). Kicapoous.—Tonti, Rel. de la Louisiane, 82, 1720. Kicpoux.—Chauvignerie (1736) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 554, 1853. Kikabeux.—Marquette, Discov., 322, 1698. Kikabons.—Bacqueville de la Potherie, Hist. de l'Amér., ii, 49, 1753. Kikabou.—Jes. Rel. 1670, 100, 1858. Kikaboua.—Jes. Rel. 1672, LVIII, 40, 1899. Kikabu.—Dorsey, Kansa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 (Kansa name). Kikapaus.—Hennepin, Cont. of New Discov., map, 1698. Kikapoes.—Vincennes treaty (1803) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 383, 1873. Kikapous.—Vater, Mith., pt. 3, sec. 3, 351, 1816. Kikapous.—Hennepin, New Discov., 132, 1698. Kikapous.—Vaudreuil (1719) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 893, 1855. Kikapoux.—Fontenac (1682), ibid., 182. Kikapouz.—Coxe, Carolana, 18, 1741. Kikapu.—Gatschet, Potawatomi MS., B. A. E., 1878 (Potawatomi name; plural Kikapug). Kikapus.—Loskiel, Hist. Miss. United Breth., pt. 1, 2, 1794. Kikapoos.—Barton, New Views, xxxiii, 1798. Kikapouz.—Coxe, Carolana, 50, 1741. Kispapous.—Longueuil (1752) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 246, 1858 (misprint). Quicapous.—Tonti, Rel. de la Louisiane, 99, 1720 (misprint). Quicapause.—Lattré, map, 1784. Quicapous.—Esnauls and Rapilly, map, 1777 (misprint). Quicapous.—De Bourain (1700) in Margry, Déc., vi, 73, 1886. Quinaquois.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, iii, 80, 1854. Quinapous.—Iberville (1700) in Neill, Minn., 154, 1858. Ricapous.—Conf. of 1766 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., vii, 860, 1856 (misprint). Rickapous.—Crogan (1765), ibid. (misprint). Shack-a-po.—H. R. Rep. 299, 44th Cong., 1st sess., 1, 1876 ("known to us as Kickapoo"). Shake-kah-quah.—Marcy, Explor. Red R., 273, 1851 (Wichita name). Shigapo.—Gatschet, Apache MS., B. A. E., 1884 (so called by Apache and other southern tribes). Shikapu.—Ibid. (Apache name). Sik'-a-pu.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 10, 1884 (Comanche name). Tekapu.—Gatschet, Wyandot MS., B. A. E., 1881 (Huron name). Yutara'-ye-ru'-nu.—Ibid. ('tribe living around the lakes'; another Huron name).

Kickapoos. According to Norton (Polit. Americanisms, 60, 1890), a secret Republican political organization in Oklahoma (1888); from the name of an Algonquian tribe. (A. F. C.)

Kickapougowi. A former Kickapoo village on the Wabash, in Crawford co., Ill., about opposite the mouth of Turman cr.

Kick-a-pou-go-wi Town.—Hough, map in Ind. Geol. Rep., 1883. Kikapouguoi.—Gamelin (1790) in Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 93, 1832.

Kickenapawling. A former village of mixed Delawares (?) and Iroquois, taking its name from the chief; situated at the junction of Stony cr. with Conemaugh r., approximately on the site of Johnstown, Pa. It was abandoned before 1758.

Keckeknepolin.—Post (1758) in Rupp, West, Pa., app., 103, 1846. Kickenapawling.—Day, Penn., 182, 1843. Kickenapawlings Old Town.—Day, Pa. Hist. Coll., 182, 1843. Kickenapawlings Village.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Pa. map, 1899.

Kicking Bear. A Sioux medicine-man of Cheyenne River agency, S. Dak., who acquired considerable notoriety as leader of a hostile band and priest of the Ghost-dance craze among the Sioux in 1890. He organized and led the first dance at Sitting Bull's camp on Standing Rock res., and was prominent in the later hostilities, for which he was afterward held for some time as a military prisoner. See Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896.

Kicking Bird (Téné-angpôte). A Kiowa chief. He was the grandson of a Crow captive who was adopted into the tribe, and early distinguished himself by his mental gifts. In tribal traditions and ceremonial rites he was a thorough adept, and as a warrior he won a name, but had the sagacity to see the hopelessness of the struggle with the whites and used all his influence to induce the tribe to submit to inevitable conditions. He signed the first agreement to accept a reservation on Aug. 15, 1865, at Wichita, and the treaty concluded at Medicine Lodge on Oct. 21, 1867, definitively fixing the Kiowa-Comanche-Apache res. in the present Oklahoma. In the resistance to removal to the reservation in 1868 and in the subsequent raids into Texas he took no part. When the Federal authorities in 1873 failed to carry out their agreement to release the Kiowa chiefs imprisoned in Texas, he lost faith in the Government and was tempted to join the expeditions against the Tonkawa tribe and the white buffalo-hunters of Texas in 1874; but when Lone Wolf decided to join the hostiles who were defying United States troops, Kicking Bird induced two-thirds of the tribe to return with him to the agency at Ft Sill, and was treated thenceforth as the head chief of the Kiowa, Lone Wolf's offer to surrender and join the friendlies being refused. He invited and assisted in the establishment of the first school among the Kiowa in 1873. At one time when his constant advocacy of peace brought him into disrepute and the charges that he was a woman and a coward caused his counsels to be treated with contempt, he gathered a band for a Texas raid and fought a detachment of troops victoriously, regaining his old repute for courage and success in war. He died suddenly, by poison if the suspicions of his friends were just, on May 5, 1875, and at the request of his family was buried with Christian rites.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., II, 190, 216, 252, 1898.

Kick in the Belly. Mentioned by Culbertson (Smithson. Rep. 1850, 144, 1851) as a Crow band.

Kiddekubbut. A Makah summer village 3 m. from Neah, n. w. Wash.

Kiddekubbut.—Swan in Smithson. Cont., XVI, 6, 1870. Tehdakomit.—Gibbs, MS. 248, B. A. E.

Kidnelik. A tribe of Central Eskimo living on Coronation bay, Canada.

Copper Eskimo.—Schwatzka in Science, 543, 1884. Kidelik.—Rink, Eskimo Tribes, 33, 1887. Kidnelik.—Schwatzka in Science, 543, 1884. Qidnelik.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 470, 1888.

Kientpoos. See Kintpuash.

Kiequotank. A former village of the Powhatan confederacy on the E. shore of Accomac co., Va., n. of Metomkin. It was nearly depopulated in 1722. (J. M.)

Kiequotank.—Beverly, Virginia, 199, 1722. Kikotan.—Herrman, map (1670), in Maps to Accompany the Rep. of the Comrs. on the Bdny. Line bet. Va. and Md., 1873.

Kigicapigiak ('the great establishment,' or 'great harbor'). A former Micmac village on Cascapedia r., Bonaventure co., Quebec.—Vetromile, Abnakis, 59, 1866.

Kigiktagmiut ('island people'). A tribe of Eskimo inhabiting the islands of Hudson bay off the Labrador coast, between lat. 56° and 61°. They wear the skins of seals and dogs instead of reindeer skins, use the bow and arrow and the spear instead of firearms, and often suffer for want of food.

Kigiktagmyut.—Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 180, 1894. Kigukhtagmyut.—Turner in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., 1887, sec. II, 99.

Kiglashka ('they who tie their own'). A division of the Hunkpapa Teton Sioux. Kiglacka.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 221, 1897. Kiglasika.—Ibid.

Kigsitatok. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Kihegashugah. See Mohongo.

Kik. The House clan of the Ala (Horn) phratry of the Hopi.

Kik-wūn-wū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 401, 1894 (wūn-wū = 'clan').

Kikait (Kikait). A Kwantlen village at Brownsville, opposite New Westminster, on lower Fraser r., Brit. Col.; pop., together with the New Westminster village, 65 in 1902.—Hill-Tout in Ethnol. Surv. Can., 54, 1902.

Kikatsik (Ki'-kat-sik). One of the 4 divisions of the main body of Shasta, occupying Shasta valley and Klamath valley from Hot Springs to Scott r., N. Cal. They were early mentioned, under various forms of "Autire" and "Edhowe" (from Ahóide'ē, the Shasta name of Shasta valley), as occupying 19 to 24 villages of about 60 inhabitants each, one of which was apparently Wiyahawir. There are now only a few survivors. (R. B. D.)

Autiré.—Curtin, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885. Éd-ohwe.—Ibid. Ho-te-day.—Steele in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1864, 120, 1865 (given as their own name). Id-do-a.—Ibid. (misapplied to the Iruwaitsu). O-de-ailah.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 171, 1853. O-de-i-lah.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 221, 1853. Yeka.—Steele in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1864, 120, 1865 (given as proper name of Yreka = 'Shasta butte'; properly Wai'ka). Yrekas. —Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 22, 1860.

Kikchik. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Kikertarsoak ('great island'). An Eskimo village in Greenland, about lat. 63° 30'; pop. 75 in 1829. Its harbor was formerly used by the Dutch in trading with the natives.

Kikertarsoak.—Graah, Exped. E. Coast Greenland, map, 1837.

Kikikat. A former Ikogmiut Eskimo village on the N. bank of Yukon r., near Ikogmiut, Alaska.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850.

Kikiallu. A Skagit subtribe formerly living on the N. end of Whidbey id. and at the mouth of Skagit r., Wash., but now on Swinomish res. They participated in the treaty of Pt Elliott, Wash., Jan. 22, 1855.

Ke-ka-als.—Fay in Ind. Aff. Rep., 238, 1858. Kikeuals.—Starling, ibid., 171, 1852. Kikealans.—Simmons, ibid., 194, 1850. Kikiallis.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 436, 1825. Kikiallu.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 180, 1878. Kik-i-állus.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1850), 378, 1873. Ki-kia-loos.—Mallet in Ind. Aff. Rep., 198, 1877. Kikialtis.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 432, 1855.

Kikiktak. A Kowagmiut Eskimo summer village at the mouth of Hotham inlet, Kotzebue sd., Alaska; pop. 200 in 1880.

Ke-kik-tag-ameuts.—Hooper, Cruise of Corwin, 26, 1880. Kikiktagyut.—Zagoskin, Descr. Russ. Foss. in Am., pt. I, 74, 1847. Kikiktagamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 4, 1884. Kikiktagamut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kikiktak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kotzebue.—Post-route map, 1903.

Kikimi. A Pima village on the Gila River res., s. Ariz.—Dudley in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1871, 58, 1872.

Kiksadi ('people of Kiks'). One of the most important divisions of the Tlingit, belonging to the Raven phratry. They lived principally at Sitka and Wrangell, Alaska, but there were also some at Sanya. Kaksatis.—Beardsee in Sen. Ex. Doc. 105, 46th Cong., 2d sess., 31, 1880. Kick-sa-tee.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kiks-adi.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 118, 1855. Kiksá'di.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Kyiks'adé.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 25, 1889.

Kiktagnk. An Unaligmiut Eskimo village on the s. coast of Norton sd., Alaska; pop. 20 in 1800, 23 in 1890.

Ikekik.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, map, 162, 1893. Ikikiktoik.—Coast Surv. chart, 1898. Kegikto-wruk.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, map, 1877. Kegictowik.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kegiktow'ruk.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 17, 1877. Kegokhtowik.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 11, 1881. Kiektaguk.—Tebenkof (1849) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 239, 1902. Kigh-Mioute.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850. Kigikhtawik.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 54, 1881. Kigiktauik.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kiechtaguk.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 1855. Kikhtaghok.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850. Kikhtangouk.—Ibid., 218. Kikiktowrik.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 165, 1893. Kikiktowruk.—Kelly, Arct. Eskimos, 15, 1890. Kiktagnk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kiktak ('big island'). A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on an island in Kuskokwim r., Alaska, 25 m. above Bethel; pop. 232 in 1880, 119 in 1890.

Kikiktagamut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893. Kikkhlagamute.—Hallock in Nat. Geog. Mag., IX, 90, 1898. Kikkhtagamute.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 53, 1880. Kiktak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kiktheswemud. A former Delaware (?) village near Anderson, Madison co., Ind. Marked as Kik-the-swe-mud on Hough's map (Ind. Geol. Rep., 1883). Perhaps identical with Buckstown, or with Little Munsee Town.

Kiknikak. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village at the mouth of Kuskokwim r., Alaska; pop. 9 in 1880.

Kik-khuigagamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884.

Kikun. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Kikwistok. A Nakoaktok village on Seymour inlet, Brit. Col.

Ke-ques-ta.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 226, 1887. Kikwistok.—Ibid. Té'-kwok-stai-e.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 65.

Kil (K'íl, 'sand-spit-point [town]'). A small Haida town formerly on Shingle bay, Skidegate inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was occupied by the Lanachadus, who owned it, and the Gitingidjats, two family groups of very low social rank.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Kilatika. A Miami division living with the Wea, Piankashaw, and others near Ft St Louis, on the upper Illinois, in 1684. Kalatekoé.—Membré (1682) in Margry, Déc., II, 216, 1871. Kilataks.—Bacqueville de la Potherie, II, 261, 1753. Kilatika.—Franquelin map (1684) in Parkman, La Salle, 1883. Kilatika.—La Salle (1683) in Margry, Déc., II, 320, 1877. Kolatika.—La Salle (1682), ibid., 201.

Kilauutuksh. A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.

Ki-lau'-u-tuké.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kilchik (from the native name of L. Clark). A Knaiakhotna village on L. Clark, Alaska; pop. 91 in 1880. It seems to have been consolidated with Nihkhak, 9 m. below, by 1904.

Keechik.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 46, 1884. Kiechik.—Ibid., map. Kilchikh.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 94, 1893.

Kilherhursh. A Tillamook village, named after a chief, at the entrance of Tillamook bay, Oreg., in 1805.

Kil-har-hurst's Town.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, vi, 71, 1905. Kilherhursh.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., ii, 117, 1814.

Kilherner. A Tillamook village in 1805, named after a chief, on Tillamook bay, Oreg., at the mouth of a creek, 2 m. from Kilherhursh.

Kil-har-nar's town.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, vi, 71, 1905. Kilherner.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., ii, 117, 1814.

Kilikunom. A division of the Witukomnom branch of the Yuki of N. California. (A. L. K.)

Kilimantavie (from Ke-lév'-a-tow-tin, 'sling'—Murdoch). A Kunmiut Eskimo village on the Arctic coast w. of Wainwright inlet, Alaska; pop. 45 in 1880.

Kelamantowruk.—U. S. Hydrog. chart 68 quoted by Baker, Geog. Dist. Alaska, 239, 1902. Ke-lé'-v-a-tow-tin.—Murdoch quoted by Baker, ibid. Kilametagag-miut.—Tikhmenief (1861) quoted by Baker, ibid. Kilauwitawin.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 44, 1892. Kilimantavie.—Hydrog. charts, op. cit. Kilyamiztagvik.—Zagoskin, Descr. Russ. Poss. Am., pt. i, 74, 1847. Kolumaktuurok.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kolumatuorek.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 59, 1880. Kolumatuorek.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899.

Kilinigmiut ('people of the serrated country'). A subtribe of the Suhiniut Eskimo inhabiting the region about C. Chidley, N. Labrador. Pop. fewer than 40. Kilini'ig myut.—Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 176, 1894.

Kilistinos of the Nipisiriniens. Mentioned by the Jesuit Rel. of 1658 (Thwaites ed., XLIV, 249, 1899) as one of the 4 divisions of the Cree, so called because they traded with the Nipissing. They lived between L. Nipigon and Moose r., Canada, though they were not very stationary. Their population at the date given was estimated at 2,500.

Kiliuda (perhaps Aleut, from kiliak 'morning', uda 'bay'). A Kaniagmiut Eskimo village on the E. coast of Kodiak id., Alaska; pop. 36 in 1880, 22 in 1890. Kiliuda.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kiliuda.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884.

Kiliwi. A Yuman band of a dozen people who furnished Gabb a vocabulary when he visited them, in Apr. 1867, near Santo Tomás mission, 150 m. N. W. of Santa Borja, Lower California. The vocabulary is published in Zeitschr. f. Ethnologie, 1877. The Kiliwi were reported as still existing in 1906.

Killaxthokle. A Chinookan tribe or village, apparently named after its chief, on Shoalwater bay, Wash., in 1805. Mentioned twice by Lewis and Clark, from Indian information, who estimated the population at 100 in 8 houses and at 200 in 10 houses.

Ca-lást-ho-cle.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark (1805), vi, 118, 1905. Ga-lá-gstxoql.—Boas, inf'n, 1905. Killaxthocles.—Coues, Lewis and Clark Exped., 1252, 1892. Kil-laxt-ho-kle's T.—Orig. Jour., op.

cit. Killaythocles.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 571, 1853.

Killbuck. See Gelelemend.

Killbuck's Town. A former Delaware town on the E. side of Killbuck cr., about 10 m. S. of Wooster, Wayne co., Ohio; occupied as early as 1764 by a chief named Killbuck, from whom it received the name. (J. M.)

Killhag. A sort of trap, defined by Bartlett (Dict. Americanisms, 332, 1877) as "a wooden trap used by the hunters in Maine"; from kilhigan in the Malecite dialect of Algonquian, signifying 'trap', from the radical kilh, 'to catch or keep caught', and the suffix radical ig, 'instrument'. (A. F. C.)

Killikinnick. See Kinnikinnick.

Killisnoo. A modern settlement of the Hutsnuwu on Killisnoo id., near Admiralty id., Alaska. They have been drawn there through the establishment of oil works by the whites.

Kanás-nū.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 105, 1885. Kenasnow.—Ibid. (quoted).

Kilpanlus. A Cowichan tribe in Cowitchin valley, Vancouver id., consisting of only 4 people in 1804.

Kil-pan-hus.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1883, 190. Kilpanus.—Ibid., 1901, pt. 2, 164, 1902. Tilpá'les.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887. Tlip-pah-lis.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1880, 316. Tlip-pat-lis.—Ibid., 1879, 308.

Kils-haidagai (K'íls zá'-idaga-i, 'peninsula people'). A branch of the Kagiáls-kegawai, a family group belonging to the Raven clan of the Haida. They took their name from a point at the outer end of the tongue of land on which Skedans formerly stood, and where were most of their houses.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 269, 1905.

Kilstlai-djat-takinggalung (K'íls-la-i-djat Tak!t'ngalañ, 'chieftainess' children'). A subdivision of the Hlgahetgu-lanas, a family of the Raven clan of the Haida.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 270, 1905.

Kilutsai (Gylóts'á'r, 'people of the river's arm'). A Tsimshian family and town near Metlakatla, on the N. W. coast of British Columbia.

Gylóts'á'r.—Boas in Zeitschr. für Ethnol., 232, 188. Kel-ut-sah.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kill on chan.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes, 1854, MS., B. A. E. Killoosa.—Horetzky, Canada on Pacific, 212, 1874. Killowitsa.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Kilutsar.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885. Kilootsa.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kil-utsai.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 281, 1897.

Kim. The Mountain Lion clan of the Tigua pueblo of Isleta, N. Mex.

Kim-t'ainin.—Hodge (after Lumis) in Am. Anthropol., IX, 351, 1896 (t'ainin = 'people').

Kimaksuk. A Kaniagmiut Eskimo village on Cumberland sd., lat. 65°, Baffin land.—McDonald, Discovery of Hogarth's Sd., 86, 1841.

Kimestunne ('people opposite a cove of deep water'). A former village of the Mishikhwutmetunne on Coquille r., Oreg.

Ki-més' tünne'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 232, 1890. Ku-mas' tünne'.—Ibid.

Kimissing (Qimissing). A fall settlement of Talirpingmiut Eskimo, of the Okomiut tribe, on the s. side of Cumberland sd., Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kimituk. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Kimsquit (probably from K'im-kuitx, applied to the Bella-coola of Deans channel by the Heiltsuk). Given as the name of part of the "Tallion nation" or Bella-coola.

Athlankenetis.—Brit. Col. map, Ind. Aff., Victoria, 1872. Kemsquits.—Ibid. Ki'mkuitx.—Boas in 7th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 3, 1891. Kinsquit.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. II, 162, 1901 (perhaps identical). Kinsquit.—Ibid., 272, 1889. Kul-much-qui-toch.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859.

Kimus ('brow' or 'edge'). A village of the Ntlakyapamuk on the E. side of Fraser r., between Yale and Siska, Brit. Col. Pop. in 1901 (the last time the name appears), together with Suk, 74.

Kamus.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1886, 250. Kimu's.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 169, 1900. Sk'muc.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. Ass. Adv. Sci., 5, 1899. Sook-kamus.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1901, pt. 2, 164 (name combined with that of Suk, q. v.). Suuk-kamus.—Ibid., 418, 1898.

Kinaani ('high-standing house'). A Navaho clan, the descendants of several women given that tribe by the Asa phratry of the Hopi prior to 1680, when, on account of drought, the Asa people (q. v.) abandoned Hano pueblo and made their home in Canyon de Chelly, N. E. Arizona, afterward returning to Tusayan.

High-House people.—Vandiver in Ind. Aff. Rep., 159, 1890. Kiāni.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 30, 1891. Kiāā'ni.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folklore, III, 104, 1890 ('high-standing house'). Kiāā'ni.—Matthews, Navaho Legends, 30, 1897.

Kinagingeeg (Gyinaṅgyi'ek, 'people of the mosquito place'). A Tsimshian town and local group near Metlakatla, N. W. coast of British Columbia.

Gyinaṅgyi'ek.—Boas in Zeitschr. für Ethnol., 232, 1888. Kenchenkieg.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kinagingeeg.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 281, 1897. Kinahungik.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab., Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kinkhankuk.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes, 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kin-nach-hangik.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885. Kinnakangeek.—Brit. Col. map, 1872.

Kinak ('face'). A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on the N. bank of lower Kuskokwim r., Alaska; pop. 60 in 1880, 257 in 1890, 209 in 1900.

Kenaghamut.—11th Census, Alaska, 108, 1893. Kinagamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 54, 1884.

Kinalik. An Eskimo village in s. w. Greenland, lat. 60° 34'.—Meddelelser om Grønland, xvi, map, 1896.

Kinapuke (Kin-a-pu'-ke). A former Chumashan village on San Buenaventura r., Ventura co., Cal., near its mouth.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kinarbik. An Eskimo village in s. e. Greenland, about lat. 62° 50'; pop. 14 in 1829.—Graah, Exped. Greenland, map, 1837.

Kinbaskets. A body of Shuswap who forced themselves into the Kutenai country near Windermere, Brit. Col., from N. Thompson r., about 50 years ago and maintained themselves there with the help of the Assiniboin, until the whites appeared and wars came to an end. Pop. 41 in 1891, 56 in 1904.

Kinbaskets.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1902, 253, 1903. Shuswap Band.—Ibid.

Kinbiniyol (Navaho: kin 'pueblo house', bi 'its', niyol 'whirlwind': 'Whirlwind pueblo'.—Matthews). One of the best preserved of the pueblo ruins of the Chaco canyon group in N. W. New Mexico. It is not in the canyon proper, but in the basin of an arroyo tributary to it. The ruin lies 500 yds. E. of the wash, at the base of a low mesa, about 10 m. W. and 5 m. S. of Pueblo Bonito. It is rectangular in form, having 3 wings extending to the S., one at the center and one at each extremity of the main building. The exterior dimensions of the parallelogram occupied by the building are approximately 320 by 270 ft. The 2 courts formed by the wings are 91 by 125 and 76 by 83 ft respectively, the former being inclosed by a low wall, the latter open. Ten circular kivas are built within the walls of the structure, the largest being 26 ft in diameter and the smallest 15 ft. The largest rectangular room is 16½ by 17 ft, the smallest 7 by 11 ft. The walls of the ruin stand 30 ft above the plain. Of the N. exterior wall 120 ft are still standing to above the second story. Parts of a fourth story wall are still in place. Probably half the original walls are still standing. The doors average 22 by 34 in. in size, the windows 8 by 12 in. Walls and corners are true to the plummet and try-square, an exceptional occurrence in aboriginal structures. The remains of extensive irrigation works exist in close proximity, the most elaborate that have been observed in the San Juan drainage. (E. L. H.)

Kinchuwihikut ('on its nose'). A former large Hupa village, the name referring to its situation on a point of land on the E. bank of Trinity r., Cal., near the N. end of the valley. It is prominent in Hupa folk-lore. (P. E. G.)

Kintēwihikūt.—Goddard, Life and Culture of the Hupa, 13, 1903.

Kincolith ('place of scalp'). A mission village on Nass inlet, Brit. Col., founded in 1867 and settled by the Niska. Pop. 267 in 1902, 251 in 1904.

Kinegnagak. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village in W. Alaska; pop. 92 in 1890.

Kinegnagamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Kinegnak. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on C. Newenham, Alaska; pop. 76 in 1890. This is also the Eskimo name for Razboinski, q. v.

Kinegnagmiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 99, 1893. Kinegnagamute.—Ibid., map.

Kineuwidishianun (Kinē'w wi'dishi'anun). The Eagle phratry of the Menominee, consisting of the Bald-eagle, Crow, Raven, Red-tail Hawk, Golden-eagle, and Fish-hawk gentes.—Hoffman in 14th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 1, 42, 1896.

Kingaseareang (Qingaseareang). A spring settlement of Kingumiut Eskimo on an island near the entrance to Nettilling fjord, Cumberland sd., Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kingatok. An Ita Eskimo village on Smith sd., N. Greenland.—Kane, Arct. Explor., 1, 32, 1856.

Kingegan. The chief village of the Kingumiut Eskimo, situated inland from C. Prince of Wales, Alaska. The dialect here spoken is the same as that used on the Diomedes ids. Pop. 400 in 1880, 488 in 1900.

Ki'hi.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 21, 1901 (Yuit name). King-a-ghe.—Beechey (1827) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 241, 1902. Kingaghee.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 165, 1893. King-a-khi.—Baker, ibid. (quoted). Kingigamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kingegan.—Dall, Alaska, map, 1875 (changed to Kingegan in errata, 628).

Kingep (Kīnep, 'big shields'). The largest and most important tribal division of the Kiowa.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1079, 1896.

Kingiak. An Aglemiut village on the N. side of the mouth of Naknek r., Bristol bay, Alaska; pop. 51 in 1890.

Ft. Suwarof.—Post-route map, 1903. Kenigayat.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 45, 1880. Kinghiak.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884. Kiniaak.—Post-route map, 1903. Kinuyak.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893. Suworof.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kingiktok. An Eskimo village in W. Greenland, lat. 72° 57'.

Kingigtok.—Meddelelser om Grönland, VIII, map, 1889.

Kingmiktuk (Qingmiktuk). The winter settlement of the Ugiulirmiut in King William land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kingnaitmiut. One of the 4 branches of the Okomiut Eskimo of Baffin land, formerly settled at Pagnirtu and Kignait fiords, but now having their permanent village at Kekerten; pop. 86 in 1883. Their summer villages are Kitingujang and Kordlubing.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 437, 1888.

Kingnelling. A spring settlement of Padlimiut Eskimo at the S. end of Home bay, Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

King Philip. Metacom, second son of Massasoit, sachem of the Wampanoag, who attained that office himself through the death of his father and elder brother in 1661-62, and to the English was better known as Philip of Pokanoket, or King Philip. He was the most remarkable of all the Indians of New England. For 9 years after his elevation to the chieftaincy, although accused of plotting against the colonists, he seems to have devoted his energies to observation and preparation rather than to overt actions of a warlike nature. He even acknowledged himself the king's subject. But war with the English was inevitable, and the struggle called King Philip's war (1675-76) broke out, resulting in the practical extermination of the Indians after they had inflicted great losses upon the whites. The ability of King Philip is seen in the plans he made before the war began, the confederacy he formed, and the havoc he wrought among the white settlements. Of 90 towns, 52 were attacked and 12 were completely destroyed. The bravery of the Indians was in many cases remarkable. Only treachery among the natives in all probability saved the colonists from extinction. In the decisive battle, a night attack, at a swamp fortress in Rhode Island, Aug. 12, 1676, the last force of the Indians was defeated with great slaughter, King Philip himself being among the slain. His body was subjected to the indignities usual at that time, and his head is said to have been exposed at Plymouth for 20 years. His wife and little son were sold as slaves in the West Indies. Widely divergent estimates of King Philip's character and achievements have been entertained by different authorities, but he can not but be considered a man of marked abilities. Weeden (Ind. Money, 12, 1884) says: "History has made him 'King Philip,' to commemorate the heroism of his life and death. He almost made himself a king by his marvelous energy and statecraft put forth among the New England tribes. Had the opposing power been a little weaker, he might have founded a temporary kingdom on the ashes of the colonies." King Philip has been the subject of several poems, tales, and histories. The literature includes: Church, History of King Philip's War, 1836; Apes, Eulogy on King Philip, 1836; Freeman, Civilization and Barbarism, 1878; Markham, Narrative History of King Philip's War, 1883. (A. F. C.)

KING PHILIP. (AFTER CHURCH, FROM AN OLD ENGRAVING)

Kings River Indians. A collective term for Indians on Tule River res., Cal., in 1885, embracing the tribes formerly on and about Kings r., some at least of whom were the Choinimni, Wachahet, Iticha, Chukaimina, Michahai, Holkoma, Tuhukmache, Pohoniche, and Wimilche, according to Wessells (Sen. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 31, 1853). The number gathered under this name, together with the Wikchamni and Kawia, was 135 in 1884.

King's River Indians.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 80, 1853.

Kingua ('its head'). A Kingumiut Okomiut summer village at the head of Cumberland sd., s. e. Baffin land.

Kingawa.—Boas in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xv, pt. 1, 126, 1901. Kingoua.—McDonald, Discov. of Hogarth's Sd., 86, 1841. Qingua.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kingumiut ('inhabitants of its head'). A subtribe of the Okomiut Eskimo living in the villages of Anarnitung, Imigen, and Kingaseareang, at the head of Cumberland sd., and numbering 60 in 1883. Kimaksuk seems to have been a former village.

Kingumiut.—Boas in Geog. Blätt., VIII, 33, 1885. Kingumiut.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., no. 80, 69, 1885. Qingumiut.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 426, 1888.

Kinhlitshi ('red house' [of stone]). A Navaho clan.

Kinlitä.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 103, 1890. Kinlitcini.—Ibid. Kinlitci.—Matthews, Navaho Legends, 30, 1897. Kinliticine.—Ibid.

Kinhlizhin (Navaho, 'black house'). An important pueblo ruin of the Chaco canyon group of n. w. New Mexico, 6½ m. w. and 2 m. s. of Pueblo Bonito. It is not in the canyon, but stands, facing e., on a sand hill 200 yds. w. of a dry wash which enters the Chaco about 4 m. below. Its length was 145 ft, greatest width 50 ft. A semicircular wall, 450 ft long, connects the n. e. and s. e. corners, inclosing an irregular court. In the wall at a point 285 ft from the s. e. corner of the building was a circular tower, 4 or 5 ft in diameter, which must have been from 20 to 30 ft high. On the w. side 50 ft of exterior wall still stands, 26 ft above the débris and 38 ft above ground. The wall is 36 in. thick at the base, diminishing in thickness a few inches at the base of each additional story. Portions of a fourth-story wall still stand; the original height was 5 stories. The masonry, which is of dark-brown sandstone, consists of alternating courses of large and small stones. There are 3 small windows, 6 by 8 in. Four circular kivas, 10 by 16 ft in diameter, are built within the walls, and one, 35 ft in diameter, partly within the front wall and partly within the court. The smaller kivas are built within rectangular rooms, and the space between the room and the kiva walls is filled in with masonry. An ancient system of irrigation works, consisting of stone dam, wasteway reservoir, and ditches, is plainly traceable. (E. L. H.)

Kiniklik. A Chugachmiut Eskimo village on the n. shore of Prince William sd., Alaska.

Kinicklick.—Schrader (1900) quoted by Baker, Geog. Diet. Alaska, 1902. Kiniklik.—Baker, ibid.

Kinipetu ('wet country'). A central Eskimo tribe on the w. coast of Hudson bay, extending s. from Chesterfield inlet 250 m. They hunt deer and muskoxen, using the skins for clothing and kiaiik covers, coming to the coast only in winter when seals are easily taken.

Agutit.—Petitot in Bib. Ling. et Ethnog. Am., III, x, 1876. Kiaknukmiut.—Boas in Bul. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xv, 6, 1901 (own name). Kinnepatoo.—Schwatka in Century Mag., xxii, 76, 1881. Kinipetu.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 450, 1888. Kinnepatu.—Boas in Trans. Anthropol. Soc. Wash., III, 96, 1885. Kinipetu.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., no. 80, 72, 1885.

Kinkash. A Potawatomi band, so named in treaties of 1832 and 1836. Their village or reservation, which was sold to the United States in 1836, was on Tippecanoe r., Koscisciwo co., Ind.

Kin-Kash.—Tippecanoe treaty (1832) in U. S. Ind. Treaties, 701, 1873. Kin-krash.—Chippewaynaung treaty (1836), ibid., 713.

Kinkletsoi (Navaho: 'yellow house'). A small pueblo ruin about ¾ m. n. w. of Pueblo Bonito, on the n. side of the arroyo, at the base of the canyon wall, in Chaco canyon, n. w. N. Mex. Its ground-plan is a perfect parallelogram, with no inner court. Its dimensions are 135 by 100 ft, and originally it probably contained 4 stories; fragments of the third story walls are still standing from 20 to 25 ft above the ground. The masonry consists of blocks of yellow sandstone, averaging 8 by 5 by 3 in., fairly well shaped and laid in adobe mortar. The pueblo walls are from 18 to 24 in. thick. The remaining doorways, all interior, average 27 by 42 in. Three circular kivas, 18 to 22 ft in diameter, are built within the walls. It is Ruin No. 8 of Jackson (10th Rep. Hayden Surv., 1878). (E. L. H.)

Kinnazinde (probably Kinazhi, or Kiniazhi, 'little pueblo'). The Navaho name of a small, ancient, circular pueblo near Kintyel (q. v.), Ariz.; believed to have been occupied by the people of the latter place as a summer settlement. See Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., pl. LXVI, 91, 1891; Fewkes in 22d Rep. B. A. E., 134, 1904.

Kinna-zinde.—Mindeleff, op. cit. Zinni jin'n è.—Cushing quoted by Powell in 4th Rep. B. A. E., xxxviii, 1886 (confused with Kintye).

Kinnikinnick. An Indian preparation of tobacco, sumac leaves, and the inner bark of a species of dogwood, used for smoking by the Indians and the old settlers and hunters in the W. The preparation varied in different localities and with different tribes. Bartlett quotes Trumbull as saying: "I have smoked half a dozen varieties of kinnikinnick in the N. W., all genuine." The word, which has as variants, kinnik-kinnik, k'nick'neck, kinnikinik, killikinnick, etc., is derived from one of the Cree or Chippewa dialects of Algonquian. The literal signification is, 'what is mixed.' In Chippewa, kinikinige means 'he mixes,' from the radical kinika, 'mixed.' The name was also applied by the white hunters, traders, and settlers to various shrubs, etc., the bark or leaves of which are employed in the mixture: Red osier (Cornus stolonifera), bearberry (Arctostaphylos uva-ursi), silky cornel (Cornus sericea), ground dogwood (C. canadensis). Matthews (Am. Anthropol., v, 170, 1903) maintains that the ordinary source of kinnikinnick was not the red willow, as has often been said, but the silky cornel, a species of dogwood, bearing, especially in winter, a marked resemblance to the red-bark willow. See Smoking, Tobacco.

(A. F. C.)

Kinship. The foundation of social organization, and hence of government, the tangible form of social organization, was originally the bond of real and legal blood kinship. The recognition and perpetuation of the ties of blood kinship were the first important steps in the permanent social organization of society.

Among the North American Indians kinship is primarily the relation subsisting between two or more persons whose blood is derived from common ancestors through lawful marriage. Persons between whom kinship subsists are called kin or kindred. Kinship may be lineal or collateral. By birth through the natural order of descent kindred are divided into generations or categories, which represent lineally and collaterally relationships or degrees of kinship, which in turn are sometimes modified by the age and the sex of the persons so affected. In noting the degrees of kinship in the direct line all systems appear to agree in assigning one degree to a generation. Thus is developed a complex system of relationships. The extent and the complexity of the system in any case vary with the social organization of the people. These degrees of kinship may be called relationships, and they define more or less clearly the station, rights, and obligations of the several individuals of the kinship group specified. The distinction between relationship and kinship must not be confused, for there are persons who are related but who do not belong to the same kin.

In speaking of the entire body of a group of kindred it is necessary that reference be made to some person, the propositus, as the starting point. In general every person belongs naturally to two distinct families (see Family) or kinship groups, namely, that of the father and that of the mother. These two groups of kindred, which before his birth were entirely distinct for the purposes of marriage and the inheritance of property and certain other rights, privileges, and obligations, unite in his person and thereafter form only subdivisions of his general group of kindred, and both these groups share with him the rights, privileges, and obligations of kindred.

There are two radically different methods of naming these relationships; the one is called the classificatory, the other the descriptive method. In the descriptive phrase the actual relationship becomes a matter of implication—that is, the relationship is made specific either by the primary terms of relationship or by a combination of them. Under the first, kindred are never described, but are classified into categories and the same term of relationship is applied to every person belonging to the same category. In the descriptive system of naming kinship degrees there is usually found a number of classificatory terms.

There has been prevalent hitherto among many ethnologists the opinion that the tracing of descent through the paternal line is in most cases a development from the system of tracing descent exclusively through females, and that, therefore, the latter system is antecedent and more primitive than the former. But it is not at all clear that there has been adduced in support of this contention any conclusive evidence that it is a fact or that either system has been transformed from the other; but it is evident that such an improbable procedure would have caused the disregard and rupture of a vast body of tabus—of tabus among the most sacred known, namely, the tabus of incest.

The kinship system in vogue among the Klamath Indians of California and Oregon is apparently typical of those tribes in which, like the Kiowa, both the clan and the gentile systems of kinship are wanting. This lack of either system, so far as known, is characteristic of nearly all the tribes of the plains, the Pacific slope, and the N. W. coast. The Klamath system recognizes only two degrees in ascending above and only two in descending below the propositus in the direct line, and four collateral degrees of the paternal line, that of father's brothers, that of father's uncles, and then that of father's sisters and that of father's aunts; and four collateral degrees of the maternal line, that of mother's sisters, that of mother's aunts, that of mother's brothers, and that of mother's uncles, or eight collateral degrees in all. Hence in reckoning descent below himself in the direct line the offspring of propositus recognizes one degree of kinship below the lower of the two admitted by his father; but in the ascending direct line, the offspring of propositus does not recognize as a relation the higher of the two admitted by his father. So that in this system the circle of relationships shifts with the person selected as the starting point of the reckoning. The father recognizes relations which his child does not admit, and the child recognizes relations which the father does not admit.

Where the blood ties appear to be so limited and so disregarded in the social organization, the cohesion of the tribe is accomplished more or less satisfactorily through military, religious, or other societies.

In North America those tribes among whom the clan system prevailed, with the tracing of descent through the female line, became the most important peoples of modern times. The Five Civilized Tribes of Oklahoma and the Iroquois peoples are examples of this.

Among the Omaha a man must not marry in his own gens. A law of membership requires that a child belong to its father's gens. This is descent in the male line, but children of white or black persons (negroes) belong to the gens of the mother, into which they are forbidden to marry. Moreover, a stranger can not belong to any gens of the tribe because there is no ceremony of adoption into a gens. A man is prohibited from marrying a woman of the gens of his father, as the women of this gens are his grandmothers, aunts, sisters, nieces, daughters, or granddaughters. For the same reason he can not marry a woman of the gens of his father's mother, but he can marry a woman belonging to any other gens of his paternal grandmother's phratry, as she would not be of his kindred.

Consanguineous or blood kinship embraces not only the gens of the father, but also that of the mother and grandmothers, and these kindred with reference to a man fall into fourteen groups, and with reference to a woman into fifteen groups.

Among the Omaha, within the phratry in which gentes exist, those who occupy the one side of the fire are not regarded as full kindred by those occupying the other side of the fire, and they are prohibited from intermarrying. But were it not for the institution of these gentes or quasi-kindred groups within the phratry, a man would be compelled to marry outside of his tribe, for the reason that all the women of the tribe would otherwise be his kindred through the previous intermarriages among the ten original "gentes" or phratryes.

The Omaha kinship system may be taken as typical of the gentile organization, tracing descent through the male line. In this system the relationships are highly complex and the terms, or rather their approximate English equivalents, denotive of these relationships are employed with considerable latitude and in quite a different manner from their use in English. For example: If the propositus be a male or a female, he or she would call all men his or her 'fathers' whom his or her father would call 'brothers', or whom his or her mother would call her potential 'husbands.' He or she would call all women his or her 'mothers' whom his or her mother would call 'sisters', 'aunts', or 'nieces', or whom his or her father would call his potential 'wives.' Moreover, he or she would call all men 'brothers' who are the sons of such fathers or mothers, and their sisters would be his or her 'sisters.' He or she would call all men his or her 'grandfathers' who are the fathers or grandfathers of his or her fathers or mothers, or whom his or her fathers or mothers would call their mothers' 'brothers.' He or she would also call all women his or her 'grandmothers' who are the real or potential wives of his or her grandfathers, or who are the mothers or grandmothers of his or her fathers or mothers, or whom his or her fathers would call their fathers' 'sisters.'

If the propositus be a male he would call all males his 'sons' who are the sons of his brothers or of his potential wives, and the sisters of these sons are his 'daughters.' If the propositus be a female person she would call all children of her sisters her 'children', because their father is or their fathers are her potential or actual husband or husbands; and she would call those males her 'nephews' who are the sons of her brothers, and the daughters of her brothers would be her 'nieces.'

If the propositus be a male, he would call his sister's son his 'nephew' and her daughter his 'niece'; but whether male or female, the propositus would call all male and female persons who are the children of his sons, daughters, nephews, or nieces, 'grandchildren'; and, in like manner, he or she would call all men 'uncles' whom his or her mothers would call their 'brothers', and would call all female persons 'aunts' who are his or her father's sisters as well as those who are the wives of his or her uncles. But the father's sisters' husbands of a male person are his brothers-in-law, because they are the actual or potential husbands of his sisters; and when the propositus is a female person they are her actual or potential husbands.

Any female person whom a man's own wife calls 'elder sister' or 'younger sister', her father's sister, or her brother's daughter is his potential wife.

Any male person whom a man's wife would call 'elder brother' or 'younger brother' is his brother-in-law; also any other male person who is the brother of his wife's niece or of his brother's wife. But his wife's father's brother is his grandfather, not his brother-in-law, although his sister is his potential wife. When his brother-in-law is the husband of his father's sister or of his own sister, his sister is his grandchild, and not his potential wife. A male person is the brother-in-law of a man if he be the husband of the sister of the other's father, since that man could marry his (the other's own) sister, but his aunt's husband is not his brother-in-law when he is his own uncle or his mother's brother. Any male person is the brother-in-law of the man whose sister is his wife. But since his sister's niece's husband is his sister's potential or actual husband, he is his son-in-law, because he is his daughter's husband.

A male or female person would call any male person his or her 'son-in-law' who is the husband of his or her daughter, niece, or grandchild, and his father is his or her son-in-law. When a male person or a female person would call the father of his or her daughter-in-law his or her 'grandfather,' her brother is his or her grandson.

A male or female person would call any other female person who is the wife of his or her son, nephew, or grandson, his or her 'daughter-in-law'; and the mother of his or her son-in-law is so called by him or her.

The father, mother's brother, or grandfather of a man's wife, of his potential wife, or of his daughter-in-law (the last being the wife of his son, nephew, or grandson) is the grandfather (or father-in-law) of that man. Any female person who is the mother, mother's sister, or grandmother of a man's wife, of his potential wife, or of his daughter-in-law (a wife of his son, nephew, or of his grandson) is the grandmother (or mother-in-law) of that man.

By the institution of either the clan (q. v.) or the gens system of determining and fixing degrees of relationship, kinship through males or through females acquired increased importance, because under either form of organization it signified 'clan kin' or 'gentile kin' in contradistinction to non-gentile kin. The members of either were an organized body of consanguinei bearing a common clan or gentile name, and were bound together by ties of blood and by the further bond of mutual rights, privileges, and obligations characteristic of the clan or the gens. In either case, 'clan kin' or 'gentile kin' became superior to other kin, because it invested its members with the rights, privileges, and obligations of the clan or gens.

Where a man calls his mother's sister 'mother', and she in turn calls him her 'son', although she did not in fact give him birth, the relationship must in strictness be defined as a marriage relationship and not as a blood relationship. Under the clan or the gentile system of relationships kinship was traced equally through males and through females, but a broad distinction was made between the paternal and the maternal kindred, and the rights, privileges, and obligations of the members of the line through which descent was traced were far more real and extensive than were those of the other line. Among North American Indians kinship through males was recognized just as constantly as kinship through females. There were brothers and sisters, grandfathers and grandmothers, grandsons and granddaughters, traced through males as well as through females. While the mother of a child was readily ascertainable, the father was not, but because of this uncertainty, kinship through males was not therefore rejected, and probable fathers, probable brothers, and probable sons were placed in the category of real fathers, real brothers, and real sons.

In every Iroquois community the degree of security and of distinction which every member of the community enjoyed, depended chiefly on the number, the wealth, and the power of his kindred, hence the tie uniting the members of the kinship group was not lightly or arbitrarily broken.

It appears that where the clan organization is in vogue the adoption (q. v.) of alien persons was customary.

With descent in the female line a male person had in his clan grandfathers and grandmothers, mothers, brothers and sisters, uncles, rarely nephews and nieces, and grandsons and granddaughters, some lineal and some collateral; at the same time, with the exception of uncles, he had the same relationships outside of his clan, and fathers, aunts, sons and daughters, and cousins, in addition. A woman had the same relationships in the clan as a man, and in addition sons and daughters; and at the same time she had the same relationships outside of her clan as had the man.

In certain communities there are terms in use applied to polyandrous and polygynous marriage relations. For instance, in Klamath the term p'teckēp denotes (1) the relationship of the two or more wives of a man, and (2) the relationship of two or more men (who may be brothers) who marry sisters or a single woman among them. And in the Cree the term n'p'āyīm, employed by both men and women; signifies 'my (sexual) partner'; for example, a wife will apply this term to the co-wife of the husband or husbands; and the term nikusāk is applied by one man to another with whom he shares a wife or wives, or to whom he has loaned his own wife. This term is employed also as a term of friendship among men.

The distinction between one's own father and mother and the other persons so called was sometimes marked by the use of an explanatory adjective, 'real,' 'true,' or the like; sometimes by calling all the others 'little fathers' or 'little mothers.'

The following chart, which applies especially to the Haida, may be taken as typical of a two-clan system with female descent, self being male:

In paternal succession analogous series of terms of relationship develop.

The persons belonging to one's own clan being accounted blood relations, marriage with any of them was not permitted, and where there were many clans this prohibition usually extended to the father's clan also. After marriage, terms of affinity corresponding to 'father-in-law,' 'mother-in-law,' 'brother-in-law,' and 'sister-in-law,' were applied not only to persons who could be so designated in English, but to all members of the same clans of corresponding age and sex as well. Where there were but two clans the terms of affinity might be applied to those who had previously been known as uncles, aunts, uncles' children, nephews, and nieces, as indicated in the above table.

Where clans did not exist blood relationship was recognized on both sides as far as the connection could be remembered, and marriage with any person within this circle was, generally speaking, less usual than with one entirely outside, though such marriages were not everywhere prohibited, and in some cases were actually preferred. There was the same custom, however, of extending the terms of relationship to groups of individuals, such as the brothers of one's father, and the sisters of one's mother. Among the Salish tribes of British Columbia, who appear to have had a special fondness for recording genealogies, the number of terms of relationship is very greatly increased. Thus four or even five generations back of that of the parents and below that of the children are marked by distinct terms, and there are distinguishing terms for the first, second, third, and youngest child, and for the uncle, aunt, etc., according as one's father, mother, or other relative through whom the relationship exists is living or dead, and different terms for a living and a dead wife. There are thus 25 terms of relationship among the Lillooet, 28 among the Shuswap, and 31 among the Squawmish. By way of illustration, the kinship system of the last-mentioned tribe is subjoined (see Boas in Rep. on N. W. Tribes of Can., 136, 1890):

1. Direct relationship. Haukwēyuk, great-great-great grandparent or great-great-great grandchild; tsopeyuk, great-great-grandparent or great-great-grandchild; stshamik, great-grandparent or great-grandchild; seel, grandfather, grandmother, great-uncle, or great-aunt; emats, grandchild, grandnephew, or grandniece; man, father; chisha, mother; men, child; seentl, eldest child; anontatsh, second child; menchechit, third child; saut, youngest child; kupkuopits, brothers, sisters, and cousins together; kuopits, elder brother or sister, or father's or mother's elder brother's or sister's child; skak, younger brother or sister, or father's or mother's younger brother's or sister's child; snchoitl, cousin.

2. Indirect relationship. (A) When the intermediate relative is alive: sisi, father's or mother's brother or sister; staeatll, brother's or sister's child; chemash, wife's or husband's cousin, brother, or sister; or cousin's brother's or sister's wife or husband; saak, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, father-in-law, or mother-in-law; skuewas, any relative of a husband or wife.

(B) When the intermediate relative is dead: wotsaequoill, father's or mother's brother or sister; suinematll, brother's or sister's child; chaiae, wife's or husband's cousin, brother, or sister, or cousin's brother's or sister's wife or husband; slikoaill, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, father-in-law, or mother-in-law.

3. Indirectaffinity. Skseel, wife's grandfather or grandmother, or stepfather's or stepmother's father or mother; skaman, aunt's husband or stepfather; skechisha, uncle's wife or stepmother; skemen, stepchild; skemats, grandson's or granddaughter's wife or husband; skesaak, wife's or husband's stepfather or stepmother, or stepchild's husband or wife.

It will be noted that many of these are reciprocal terms, and such were very common in Indian kinship systems, used between persons of different generations, as above, or sometimes between persons of opposite sex of the same generation, such as husband and wife. Out of 14 terms in Klamath and Modoc 11 are reciprocal. On the other hand, persons of different sexes will often indicate the same relative, such as a father or a mother, by entirely different terms, and different terms are applied to those of a person's own phratry and to members of the opposite one, while the Iroquois use the equivalent for 'brother' for persons inside and outside the tribe indiscriminately. In all tribes, no matter how organized, a distinction is made between the elder and the younger members of the generation of self, at least between older and younger members of the same sex.

The terms corresponding to 'grandfather' and 'grandmother,' except among a few peoples, like the Salish, were extended to all those of a generation older than that of the parents and sometimes even to persons of that generation, while the term for 'grandchild' was applied to very young people by old ones quite indiscriminately. There were also terms to indicate the potential relationship of husband and wife, applied by a man to his wife's sisters, his aunt, or his niece, not because she was or had been, but because she might become, his wife, as usually happens to the wife's sister after the wife's death.

Besides the natural import of terms of kinship, they were employed metaphorically in a great number of ways, as to indicate respect, to avoid the use of a man's personal name, to indicate the clan or phratry to which a person belonged, or to indicate the possession of special privileges. Naturally enough, they often took the place of clan or even tribal designations, a fact which undoubtedly has led to serious errors in attempts to trace the history of Indian tribes. Again, they were applied to animals or supernatural beings, and with the Haida this use was intended to mark the fact that the being in question belonged to such and such a phratry or that a representation of it was used as a crest in that phratry. As this classification of animals by phratries or clans is often traced back to the intermarriage of a human being and an animal, we have an extension of the idea of kinship quite beyond any civilized conceptions. See Clan and Gens, Family, Social Organization. (J. N. B. H. J. R. S.)

Kintecaw, Kintecoy, Kinte Kaye, Kinticka. See Cuntico.

Kintpuash ('having the water-brash'—Gatschet; also spelled—Keintpoos, but commonly known as Captain Jack). A subchief of the Modoc on the Oregon-California border, and leader of the hostile element in the Modoc war of 1872-73.

The Modoc, a warlike and aggressive offshoot from the Klamath tribe of s. e. Oregon, occupied the territory immediately to the s. of the latter, extending across the California border and including the Lost r. country and the famous Lava-bed region. They had been particularly hostile to the whites up to 1864, when, under the head chief Sconchin, they made a treaty agreeing to go upon a reservation established on Upper Klamath lake jointly for them and the Klamath tribe. The treaty remained unratified for several years, and in the meantime Jack, with a dissatisfied band numbering nearly half the tribe and including about 70 fighting men, continued to rove about the Lost r. country, committing frequent depredations and terrorizing the settlers. He claimed as his authority for remaining, in spite of the treaty, a permission given by an Indian agent on the California side. With some difficulty he was finally induced in the spring of 1870 to go with his band upon the reservation, where the rest of the tribe was already established under Sconchin. He remained but a short time, however, and soon left after killing an Indian doctor, who, he said, was responsible for two deaths in his own family. He returned to Lost r. demanding that a reservation be assigned to him there on the ground that it was his home country and that it was impossible to live on friendly terms with the Klamath. One or two conferences were arranged both by the military and civil authorities, but without shaking his purpose, and it became evident that he was planning for a treacherous outbreak at the first opportunity. At a final conference, Nov. 27, 1872, he absolutely refused to go on the reservation or to discuss the matter longer, and the attitude of the Indians was so threatening that an order was sent the military at Ft. Klamath to put him and his head men under arrest. The attempt was made by Capt. Jackson with 36 cavalymen at Jack's camp on Lost r., Oreg., Nov. 29, but the Indians resisted, killing or wounding 8 soldiers with a loss to themselves of 15. The Modoc, led by Jack, fled into the impenetrable Lava-beds on the s. shore of Rhett (Modoc or Tule) lake, just across the California border, killing a number of settlers on the way. Those under Sconchin remained quietly on the reservation.

KINTPUASH (AFTER MEACHAM)

The war was now begun, and volunteer companies were organized to assist the small body of troops available. A number of friendly Modoc, Klamath, and other Indians also enlisted. The Modoc position was so strong with rocks and caves and hidden passages that it was practically impossible for the troops to enter with any prospect of success. On Dec. 22, 1872, the Indians attacked a wagon train with ammunition supplies and a skirmish ensued in which one or two were killed on each side. On Jan. 17, 1873, an attempt was made by Col. Greer to storm the Modoc stronghold by the entire force of regulars and volunteers, numbering nearly 400 men, assisted by a howitzer battery, but after fighting all day among the rocks against a concealed foe the troops were obliged to retire with the loss of 9 killed and 30 wounded.

Soon afterward civil indictments for murder were procured by the settlers against 8 Modocs concerned in the killing of settlers. Another conference was appointed under a regular peace commission, consisting of Gen. E. R. S. Canby, Indian superintendent A. B. Meacham, Rev. E. Thomas, and Indian agent L. S. Dyar. By agreement with Jack, the commissioners, together with Frank F. Riddle and his Indian wife, Toby (Winema), as interpreters, met Jack and several of his men near the Modoc camp, Apr. 11, 1873, to debate terms of settlement. Hardly had the talk begun when, by premeditated treachery, Jack gave a signal, and drawing a revolver from his breast shot General Canby dead, while his companions attacked the other commissioners, killing Mr Thomas and putting 5 bullets into Meacham, who fell unconscious. The others escaped, pursued by the Indians until the latter were driven off by a detachment of troops who came up just in time, one of the officers having already been killed in the same treacherous fashion by another party of the same band.

Active measures were now put into operation and a company of Warm Springs Indian scouts from N. Oregon, under Donald McKay, was secured to assist the troops in penetrating the maze of the Lava-beds. With these and the aid of the field guns the Modoc were soon compelled to vacate their stronghold and take refuge in the rocks farther along the lake shore. On Apr. 26 a search detachment of about 85 men, under Lieuts. Thomas and Wright, was suddenly attacked by the Indians from cover, with the loss of 26 killed, including both officers, besides 16 wounded. In consequence of this defeat Col. Jefferson C. Davis, in command of the Department of the Columbia, restored control of operations to Col. Wheaton, who had been temporarily superseded by another officer. Other minor encounters took place, in one of which Jack in person led the attack, clad in the uniform which he had stripped from Gen. Canby. By this time the Indians were tired of fighting, and many of Jack's warriors had deserted him, while he, with the rest, had vacated the Lava-beds entirely and taken up a new position about 20 m. farther s. The pursuit was kept up, and on May 22, 1873, a party of 65 hostiles surrendered, including several of the most prominent leaders. Others came in later, and on June 1 Jack himself, with his whole remaining party, surrendered to Capt. Perry at a camp some miles e. of Clear lake, N. W. Cal. The whole military force then opposed to him numbered 985 regulars and 71 Indians, while he himself had never had more than about 80 warriors.

who were now reduced to 50, besides about 120 women and children. The whites had lost 65 killed, soldiers and civilians, including two Indian scouts, with 65 wounded, several mortally. The Modoc prisoners were removed to Ft Klamath, where, in July, 6 of the leaders were tried by court-martial for the murder of Gen. Canby, Mr Thomas, and the settlers, and 4 of them condemned, namely, Jack, young Sconchin, Black Jim, and Boston Charley, who were hanged together Oct. 3, 1873, thus closing what Bancroft calls "their brave and stubborn fight for their native land and liberty—a war in some respects the most remarkable that ever occurred in the history of aboriginal extermination." The remainder of the band were not permitted to rejoin their people on Klamath res., but were deported to the s. e. corner of Oklahoma, where a part of them still remain. See Modoc. Consult Bancroft, Hist. Oregon, II, 1888; Commissioner of Ind. Affs. Reports for 1872-73; Dunn, Massacres of the Mts., 1886; Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, 1890. (J. M.)

Kintyel (Navaho: Kintyé'li, or Kintyé'li, from kin 'pueblo house', tyel 'broad': 'broad house.'—Matthews). • An unusually large, ancient, circular pueblo ruin on Leroux wash, about 23 m. n. of Navajo station, on the S. F. Pac. R. R., Ariz. According to Zuñi tradition the village was built by the Hleetakwe, during the migration of the Bear, Crane, Frog, Deer, Yellow-wood, and other Zuñi clans. The Zuñi origin of the pueblo has been borne out by archeological study of the ruins. See Cushing in 4th Rep. B. A. E., xxxviii, 1886; Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 91-94, 1891; Fewkes in 22d Rep. B. A. E., 124, 1904.

Hé-sho-ta-páthl-táé.—Cushing quoted by Powell in 4th Rep. B. A. E., xxxviii, 1886 (Zuñi name). K'in'i K'el.—Ibid. Kin-Tiel.—Mindeleff quoted in 5th Rep. B. A. E., xxiv, 1887. Pueblo Grande.—Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 91, 1891.

Kintyel. A ruined pueblo in Chaco canyon, n. w. N. Mex. It figures in Navaho legend as in course of erection during one of their early migratory movements, and later as a ruin. Its builders are not known.

Kintail.—Bickford in Century Mag., XL, 903, Oct. 1890. Kintyé'li.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 224, 1890. Kintyé'li.—Ibid.

Kinugumiut. An Eskimo tribe of Alaska, inhabiting the region of C. Prince of Wales on Kaviak penin. About 1860 they overran the country as far as Selawik r., oppressing other tribes and collecting annual tribute from the Kaviagmiut. They now visit the shores of Kotzebue sd. to barter with the inland tribes, and are the keenest traders among the Eskimo and the most vicious, perhaps from longer intercourse with whalemén. Their dialect is more guttural than that of the Kaviag-miut and other tribes of Alaska, resembling that of the Yuit. They numbered 400 in 1880, 652 in 1890. Their villages are: Eidenu, Kishigan, Mitletokeruk, Nuk, Pikta, Shishmaref, Sinauk, and Takehuk. For illustrations of types see Eskimo.

Kinegans.—Kelly, Arct. Eskimo in Alaska, 9, 1890. Kingee'ga-mút.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 16, 1877. Kiñugmut.—Rep. U. S. Bur. Ed., Circ. of Inf'n No. 2, chart, 1901. Kiñugumiut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kinik Mute.—Rep. U. S. Bur. Ed., op. cit. Ki'xmi.—Bogoras, Chukchee, 21, 1904 (Yuit name: 'the inhabitant of Kihí,' i. e., of Prince of Wales id.).

Kinuhtoiáh (Gyidnadá'eks, 'people of the rapids'). A former Tsimshian division and town near Metlakatla, Brit. Col. Gyidnadá'eks.—Boas in Zeitsch. für Ethnol., 232, 1888. Keen-ath-toix.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859. Kenath tui ex.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kinnatá-iks.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885. Kinnstoueks.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Kinuhtoiáh.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884.

Kinyaah (Navaho: K'inaa', 'high house.'—Matthews). A small ruined pueblo about 30 m. s. and 5 m. w. of Pueblo Bonito, on the Thoreau road, n. w. New Mexico. It is in the Chaco drainage, but on an open plain. The ruin is rectangular, 165 by 90 ft, and without an inclosed court; the foundations are true to the cardinal points and a perfect parallelogram. Some circular depressions indicate the former presence of kivas. A small wing 30 ft square is at the s. e. corner of the building. A portion of the w. wall stands 30 ft high and partly incloses a large kiva which still stands 3 stories high. The material is dark-brown laminated sandstone, which must have been brought from the mountains 3 m. away. The stones used were the largest employed in the construction of any of the Chaco canyon group of buildings, to which group Kinyaah is evidently related by all cultural affinities that have been discovered. Some small pueblo ruins exist near by, and a large irrigation ditch and two reservoirs are discernible. (E. L. H.)

Kio. The Pine clan of the pueblo of Jemez, N. Mex. A corresponding clan existed also at the former related pueblo of Pecos.

Kiotsaa.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 351, 1896 (tsaa, or tsaish, — 'people'). K'ótsaa'.—Ibid. (Pecos form).

Kioch's Tribe. A body of Salish of Williams Lake agency, Brit. Col., numbering 45 in 1886, the last time the name appears.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1886, 232.

Kiohero ('where reeds float.'—Hewitt). A former Cayuga settlement on the e. side of the n. end of Cayuga lake, N. Y. It was occupied by descendants of incorporated Hurons and other prisoners. In 1670 the French had there the mission of St Étienne. (J. M.)

Kiohero.—Jes. Rel. for 1670, 63, 1858. Sannio.—Zeisberger (1750) quoted by Conover, Kanadega and Geneva, MS., B. A. E. Saint Estienne.—Jes. Rel. for 1670, 63, 1858. Saint Stephen.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., III, 251, 1853. Thihero.—Conover, op. cit. Tihero.—Ibid. Tihero.—Jes. Rel. for 1669, 14, 1858.

Ki-on-twog-ky. See Cornplanter.

Kiota. Mentioned in connection with the Shasta and several small Athapascan tribes of s. Oregon as being hostile to white settlers in 1854. They numbered only 8 and their name was possibly that of their leader.—Ambrose in H. R. Ex. Doc. 93, 34th Cong., 1st sess., 90, 1856.

Kiowa (from Gá'-i-gwú, or Ká'-i-gwú, 'principal people,' their own name). A tribe at one time residing about the upper Yellowstone and Missouri, but better living on the North Platte. According to the Kiowa account, when they first reached Arkansas r. they found their passage opposed by the Comanche, who claimed all the country to the s. A war followed, but peace was finally concluded, when the Kiowa crossed over to the s. side of the Arkansas and formed a confederation with the Comanche, which continues to the present day. In connection with the Comanche they carried on a constant war upon the frontier settlements of Mexico and Texas, extending their incursions as far s., at least, as Durango. Among all the prairie tribes they were noted as the most predatory and bloodthirsty, and have probably killed more white men in proportion to their numbers than any of the others. They made their first treaty with the Government in 1837, and were put on their present reservation jointly with the Comanche and Kiowa Apache in 1868. Their last outbreak was in 1874-75 in connection with the Comanche, Kiowa Apache, and Cheyenne. While probably known as centering about the upper Arkansas and Canadian in Colorado and Oklahoma, and constituting, so far as present knowledge goes, a distinct linguistic stock. They are noticed in Spanish records as early, at least, as 1732. Their oldest tradition, which agrees with the concurrent testimony of the Shoshoni and Arapaho, locates them about the junction of Jefferson, Madison, and Gallatin forks, at the extreme head of Missouri r., in the neighborhood of the present Virginia City, Mont. They afterward moved down from the mountains and formed an alliance with the Crows, with whom they have since continued on friendly terms. From here they drifted southward along the base of the mountains, driven by the Cheyenne and Arapaho, with whom they finally made peace about 1840, after which they commonly acted in concert with the latter tribes. The Sioux claim to have driven them out of the Black hills, and in 1805 they were reported by Lewis and Clark as never very numerous, they have been greatly reduced by war and disease. Their last terrible blow came in the spring of 1892, when measles and fever destroyed more than 300 of the three confederated tribes.

APIATAN (WOODEN LANCE)—KIOWA

KIOWA WOMAN. (SOULE, PHOTO.)

The Kiowa do not have the gentile system, and there is no restriction as to intermarriage among the divisions, of which they have six, including the Kiowa Apache associated with them, who form a component part of the Kiowa camp circle. A seventh division, the Kuato, is now extinct. The tribal divisions in the order of the camp circle, from the entrance at the e. southward, are Kata, Kogui, Kaigwu, Kingep, Semat (i. e., Apache), and Kongtalyui.

Although brave and warlike, the Kiowa are considered inferior in most respects to the Comanche. In person they are dark and heavily built, forming a marked contrast to the more slender and brighter complexioned prairie tribes farther x. Their language is full of nasal and choking sounds and is not well adapted to rhythmic composition. Their present chief is Gui-pāgo, 'Lone Wolf,' but his title is disputed by Āpiatan. They occupied the same reservation with the Comanche and Kiowa Apache, between Washita and Red rs., in s. w. Oklahoma; but in 1901 their lands were allotted in severalty and the remainder opened to settlement. Pop. 1,165 in 1905. Consult Mooney, Ghost-dance Religion, 14th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 1, 1896, and Calendar History of the Kiowa, 17th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 1, 1898. (J. M.)

SLEEPING WOLF AND WIFE—KIOWA

Be'shiltchā.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1078, 1896 (Kiowa Apache name). Cahiaguas.—Escudero, Noticias Nuevo Mexico, 87, 1849. Cahiaguas.—Ibid., 83. Cai-a-was.—H. R. Rep. 299, 44th Cong., 1st sess., 1, 1876. Caigua.—Spanish doc. of 1735 cited in Rep. Columb. Hist. Expos. Madrid, 323, 1895. Caiguas.—Pimentel, Cuadro Descr., II, 347, 1865 (given as Comanche division). Caihuas.—Doc. of 1828 in Bol. Soc. Geog. Mex., 265, 1870. Caiwas.—Amer. Pioneer, I, 257, 1842. Cargua.—Spanish doc. of 1732 cited in Rep. Columb. Hist. Expos. Madrid, 323, 1895 (for Caigua). Cayanwa.—Lewis, Travels, 15, 1809 (for Cayauwa). Cay-au-wa.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 100, 1905. Cay-au-wah.—Ibid. Caycuas.—Barreiro, Ojeada sobre Nuevo Mex., app., 10, 1832. Cayguas.—Villa Señor, Teatro Amer., pt. 2, 413, 1748 (common Spanish form, written also Cayguas). Cayhuas.—Bandelier in Jour. Am. Ethnol. and Archæol., III, 43, 1892. Cayugas.—Sen. Rep. 18, 31st Cong., 1st sess., 185, 1850 (for Cayguas). Ciawis.—H. R. Rep. 299, 44th Cong., 1st sess., 1, 1876. Datimpa'ta.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 148, 1898 (Hidatsa name, perhaps a form of Witapähātu or Witapātu). Gahe'wa.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1078, 1896 (Wichita and Kichai name). Ga'igwü.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 148, 1898. Gai'wa.—La Flesche cited in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 148, 1898 (Omaha and Ponca name). Guazas.—Texas State archives, Nov. 15, 1785 (probably misprint of Caiguas). Kaiawas.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, 20, 1848. Ka'igwü.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1078, 1896 ('principal people': proper tribal name). Kaiowan.—Hodge, MS. Pueblo notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Sandia name). Kai-ó-wás.—Whipple in Pac. R. R. Rep., III, pt. 1, 31, 1856. Kaiowé.—Gatschet cited in 6th Rep. B. A. E., xxxiv, 1888. Kai-wa.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 148, 1898 (Comanche name; also Kai-wá, 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1078, 1896). Kai-wane'.—Hodge, MS. Pueblo notes, B. A. E., 1895 (Picuris name). Kawa.—La Flesche, inf'n. (Omaha name). Kawas.—Sen. Doc. 72, 20th Cong., 2d sess., 104, 1829. Kayaguas.—Bent (1846) in H. R. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 11, 1848. Kayaways.—Pike, Exped., app., III, 73, 1810. Kayowa.—Gatschet, Kaw MS., B. A. E., 1878 (Kansa and Tonkawa name). Kayowe'.—Gatschet in Am. Antiquarian, IV, 281, 1881. Kayowü.—Grayson, Creek MS., B. A. E., 1885 (Creek name). Kayugas.—Bent (1846) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 244, 1851. Ka'yuwa.—Dorsey, Kansa MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 (Kansa name). Keawas.—Porter (1829) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 596, 1853. Keaways.—Farnham, Travels, 29, 1843. Ki'-a-wá.—Lewis and Clark, Discoveries, 37, 1806. Kiawas.—Pénicaut (1719) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., I, 153, 1869. Kiaways.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, cvii, 1848. Ki-e-wah.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, I, 190, 1904. Kinawas.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiqu. Soc., II, 133, 1836 (misprint). Kiniwas.—Wilkes, U. S. Expl. Exped., IV, 473, 1845 (misprint). Kiohicans.—Philippeaux, Map of Engl. Col., 1781 (possibly the same; this and the 3 forms following are evidently from the early French form Quiohaha, etc.). Kiohuan.—Anville, Map of N. A., 1752. Kiohuhahans.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Kiouahaa.—Gravier (1700) quoted by Shea, Early Voy., 149, 1861 (possibly identical). Kiovas.—Möllhausen, Jour. to the

KIOWA MOTHER AND CHILD. (RUSSELL, PHOTO.)

Pacific, I, 158, 1858 (misprint). Kiowahs.—Davis, El Gringo, 17, 1857. Kioway.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 240, 1834 (official geographic form; pron. Kai'-o-wa). Kioways.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 80, 1814. Kiwaa.—Kendall, Santa Fé Exped., I, 198, 1844 (given as pronunciation of Cayguā). Ko'mpabi'-anta.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 149, 1898 ('large tipi flaps': name sometimes used by the Kiowa). Kumpa'go.—Ibid. (abbreviated form of Ko'mpabi'-anta). Kuyawas.—Sage, Scenes in Rocky Mts., 167, 1846. Kwü'da.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1078, 1896 ('going out': old name for themselves). Kwaways.—Pike (1807), Exped., app. II, 16, 1810. Manrhoat.—La Salle (ca. 1680) in Margry, Déc., ii, 201, 1877 (mentioned with Gattacka, or Kiowa Apache; believed by Mooney to be perhaps the Kiowa). Manrhout.—La Salle (ca. 1680), ibid., 168. Mayoahc.—Coxe, Carolana, map, 1741. Na'la'mi.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 149, 1898 ('many aliens': collective Navaho name for southern plains tribes, particularly the Comanche and Kiowa). Ne-ci'-he-nen-a.—Hayden, Ethnog., and Philol. Mo. Val., 326, 1862. Ni'-chihine'na.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1078, 1896 ('river men': Arapaho name). Nitchihi.—Gatschet in Am. Antiq., iv, 281, 1881. Oways.—Hildreth, Dragon Campaigns, 162, 1836 (probable misprint of Kioways). Quichuan.—La Harpe (1719) in Margry, Déc., vi, 278, 1886 (probably identical: c=ö). Quichohouans.—Baudry des Lozières, Voy. à la Le., 244, 1802. Quiouaha.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 409, 1878. Quiouahan.—Iberville, ibid., iv, 464, 1880. Riana.—Kennedy, Texas, i, 189, 1841 (misprint). Ryawas.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, app., 367, 1822 (misprint). Ryuwas.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 85, 1814 (misprint). Shish-i-nu'-wut-tsit'-a-ni-o.—Hayden, Ethnog., and Philol. Mo. Val., 290, 1862 (improperly given as the Cheyenne name and rendered 'rattlesnake people': Shi'shinoatsita'neo, 'snake people,' is the Cheyenne name for the Comanche). Te'pdä'.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 149, 1898 ('coming out': ancient name used to designate themselves; may have been substituted for Kwu'-da). Tepki'nägo.—Ibid. ('people coming out': another form of Te'pdä'). Tideing Indians.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, i, 190, 1904. Vi'tapätu'i.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 149, 1898 (name used by the Sutaya Cheyenne). Watahpahata.—Mallery in 4th Rep. B. A. E., 109, 1886. Wate-panatoes.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 85, 1814 (misprint). Watepaneto.—Drake, Bk. of Inds., xii, 1848 (misprint). Weta-hato.—Lewis, Travels, 15, 1809 (misprint). Wetaphahato.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., i, 34, map, 1814. We-te-pä-hä'-to.—Lewis and Clark, Travels, 36, 1806. Wetopahata.—Mallery in 4th Rep. B. A. E., 109, 1886. Wetaphato.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, app., 366, 1822. Wi'ta-pa-ha.—Riggs-Dorsey, Dakota-Eng. Dict., 579, 1890. Witapähät.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1078, 1898 (Cheyenne form of Witapähä'tu). Wi'tapähä'tu.—Ibid. ('island butte people': Dakota name). Witapähä'tu.—Ibid. (Cheyenne form). Witapähä'tu.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 150, 1898. Wi-tup-a'-tu.—Hayden, Ethnog., and Philol. Mo. Val., 290, 1862 (Cheyenne name for Kiowa; incorrectly given as their name for the Comanche).

KIOWA MAN AND WIFE (SANTA FE RAILWAY)

Kiowa Apache. A small Athapascan tribe, associated with the Kiowa from the earliest traditional period and forming a component part of the Kiowa tribal circle, although preserving its distinct language. They call themselves Na-i-shań-dina, 'our people'. In the earliest French records of the 17th century, in Lewis and Clark's narrative, and in their first treaty in 1837, they are called by various forms of 'Gattacka', the name by which they are known to the Pawnee; and they are possibly the Kaskaia, 'Bad Hearts', of Long in 1820. The Kiowa call them by the contemptuous title Semüt, 'Thieves', a recent substitute for the older generic term Tagüi, applied also to other Athapascan tribes. They are commonly known as Kiowa Apache, under the mistaken impression, arising from the fact of their Athapascan affinity, that they are a detached band of the Apache of Arizona. On the contrary, they have never had any political connection with the Apache proper, and were probably unaware of their existence until about a century ago. A few Mescalero Apache from New Mexico are now living with them, and individuals of the two tribes frequently exchange visits, but this friendly intimacy is of only 60 or 80 years' standing. The Kiowa Apache did not emigrate from the S. W. into the plains country, but came with the Kiowa from the N. W. plains region, where they lay the scene of their oldest traditions. It is probable that the Kiowa Apache, like the cognate Sarsi, have come down along the E. base of the Rocky mts. from the great Athapascan body of the Mackenzie r. basin instead of along the chain of the sierras, and that, finding themselves too weak to stand alone, they took refuge with the Kiowa, as the Sarsi have done with the Blackfeet. As they are practically a part of the Kiowa in everything but language, they need no extended separate notice. Their authentic history begins nearly 70 years earlier than that of the Kiowa, they being first mentioned under the name Gattacka by La Salle in 1681 or 1682, writing from a post in what is now Illinois. He says that the Pana (Pawnee) live more than 200 leagues to the W. on one of the tributaries of the Mississippi, and are "neighbors and allies of the Gattacka and Manrhoat, who are s. of their village and who sell to them horses which they probably steal from the Spaniards in New Mexico." It is therefore plain that the Kiowa Apache (and formerly also the Kiowa) ranged even at this early period in the same general region where they were known more than a century later, namely, between the Platte and the frontier of New Mexico, and that they already had horses taken from the Spanish settlements. It appears also that they were then in friendship with the Pawnee, unless, as seems more probable, by Pana is meant the Arikara, an offshoot of the Pawnee proper and old trading friends of the Kiowa and the Kiowa Apache. From the fact that they traded horses to other tribes, and that La Salle proposed to supply himself from them or their neighbors, it is not impossible that they sometimes visited the French post on Peoria lake. In 1719 La Harpe speaks of them, under the name of Quataquois, as living in connection with the Tawakoni and other affiliated tribes in a village on the Cimarron near its junction with the Arkansas, in the present Creek Nation, Okla. In 1805 Lewis and Clark described the Kiowa Apache as living between the

from the Kiowa and attached to the Cheyenne and Arapaho on account of the unfriendly attitude of the Kiowa toward the whites; but the arrangement had no practical force, and in the treaty of Medicine Lodge, in 1867, they were formally reunited with the Kiowa, although a part of them continued to live with the Cheyenne and Arapaho until after the readjustment at the close of the outbreak of 1874-75. In keeping with the general conduct of the tribe they remained peaceable and friendly throughout these troubles. In 1891 their population was 325; together with the Kiowa they suffered terribly in 1892 from an epidemic of measles and fever, losing more than one-fourth of their number. In 1905 they numbered only 155. (J. M.)

PACER ("PEÑO"), A KIOWA APACHE CHIEF

heads of the two forks of Cheyenne r. in the Black-hills region of N. E. Wyoming, and numbering 300 in 25 tipis. The Kiowa then lived on the North Platte, and both tribes had the same alliances and general customs. They were rich in horses, which they sold to the Arikara and Mandan. In 1837, in connection with the Kiowa and Tawakoni, the Kiowa Apache (under the name Kataka) made their first treaty with the Government. Their subsequent history is that of the Kiowa. In 1853 they are mentioned as a warlike band ranging the waters of Canadian r. in the same great plains occupied by the Comanche, with whom they often joined in raiding expeditions. By the treaty of Little Arkansas in 1865 they were detached at their own request

Apaches.—Fitzpatrick in Ind. Aff. Rep., 52, 1850. Apaches of Arkansas River.—Whitfield in Ind. Aff. Rep., 255, 1855. Apaches of the Plains.—Pope (1854) in Pac. R. R. Surv., II, 17, 1855. Bad-hearts.—Long, Exped., II, 103, 1823. Cahata.—Lewis and Clark, Jour., 28, 1840 (misprint). Cancey.—This name in its various forms is the Caddo designation for the Apache of the plains, including the Kiowa Apache; it was usually applied, however, to the Lipan (q. v.). Cantajes.—Mota-Padilla, Hist. de la Conquista, 382, 1742. Cataha.—Lewis, Trav., 15, 1809. Ca'taká.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 38, 1806. Cattako.—Ibid., 23. Cuttako.—Am. State Papers, Ind. Aff., I, 710, 1832. Esikwita.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898. Essaqueta.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 175, 1875. Essequeta.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898 (sometimes but improperly applied). Gantsi.—Gatschet, Caddo MS., B. A. E., 65, 1884 ('liars': Caddo name). Gataea.—La Salle (1682) in Margry, Déc., II, 168, 1877. Gataka.—Harris, Coll. Voy., I, map, 685, 1705. Gata'ka.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898 (Pawnee name). Gattacka.—La Salle (1682) in Margry, Déc., II, 201, 1877. Gina's.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898 (Wichita name). Gú'ta'k.—La Flesche quoted by Mooney, ibid. (Omaha and Ponca name). Haka.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 101, 1905 (given, with a query, as a Canadian French nickname). Kantsi.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898 ('liars': Caddo name for all Apache of the plains). Ká-pátóp.—Ibid. ('knife-whetters': Kiowa name). Kareses.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 81, 1854 (misprint). Kaskaias.—Long, Exped., II, 101, 1823 ('bad hearts', possibly identical). Kaskaya.—Amer. Pioneer, II, 189, 1843. Kaskia.—Drake, Bk. of Inds., VIII, 1848. Ka-ta-kas.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 527, 1837. Katayka.—Gatschet, inf'n (Pawnee name). Kattekas.—Pénicaud (1719) in French, Hist. Coll. La., n. s., I, 153, note, 1869. Kiowa Apaches.—Clark, Ind. Sign Lang., 33, 1885. Kisináhis.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898 (Kichai name). Matages.—Baneroft, N. Mex. States, I, 640, 1886 (misprint). Mútsiána-taniu.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898 ('whetstone people': Cheyenne name). Nadeicha.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878 (possibly identical). Nadiúsha-déna.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898 ('our people': own name). Na-i-shan-dina.—Mooney, inf'n, 1904. Na-ishi Apache.—Gatschet quoted by Powell in 6th Rep. B. A. E., xxxv, 1888. Nardichia.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., III, 409, 1878 (possibly identical). Natafé.—Garcés (1775) quoted by Orozco y Berra, Geog., 350, 1864. Natages.—Mota-Padilla, Hist. de la Conquista, 516, 1742. Natages.—Sanchez (1757) in Doc. Hist. Mex., 4th s., I, 93, 1856. Natajées.—Rivera, Diario y Derrotero, leg. 950, 1736. Natajes.—Baneroft, Nat. Races, III, 595, 1882. Natale.—18th century doc. quoted by Baneroft, ibid., 594. Pacer band of Apaches.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 43, 42d Cong., 3d sess., 3, 1872. Prairie Apaches.—Whitfield in Ind. Aff. Rep., 298, 1851. Quataquois.—La Harpe (1719) in Margry, Déc., VI, 289, 1886. Quataquon.—Beau-rain, ibid., note. Sádsalsóme-k'ágo.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898 ('weasel people': Kiowa name). Semát.—Ibid. ('thieves': Kiowa name). Tá'gugala.—Hodge, Pueblo MS. notes, 1895 (Jemez name for Apache tribes, including Kiowa Apache). Tagú.—Mooney in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 245, 1898 (an old Kiowa name). Tagúkerish.—Hodge quoted by Mooney, ibid. (Pecos name for all Apache). Tashin.—Mooney, ibid. (Comanche name for all Apache). Tha'ká'hín'na.—Mooney, ibid., 245 ('saw-fiddle men': Arapaho name). Tha'káitan.—Ibid. (Arapaho variant). Yabipais Natagé.—Garcés (1776), Diary, 452, 1900. Yavipais-Natajé.—Garcés (1776) quoted by Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, pt. 1, 114, 1890.

Kiowan Family. A linguistic group first identified as a distinct stock by Albert Gallatin in 1853, but formally placed in the list of families by Powell (7th Rep. B. A. E., 84, 1891). The name is from Kiowa (q. v.), that of the only tribe included in the family.

=Kiaways.—Gallatin in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 402, 1853. =Kioway.—Turner in Pac. R. R. Rep., III, pt. 3, 55, 80, 1856 (based on the Kioway, or Caigua, tribe only); Buschmann, Spüren der aztek. Sprache, 432, 433, 1859; Latham, Elem. Comp. Philol., 444, 1862 ('more Paduca than ought else'). =Káyowé.—Gatschet in Am. Antiq., 280, Oct. 1882.

Kipana. A former pueblo of the Tanos, s. of the hamlet of Tejon, lat. 35° 20', Sandoval co., N. Mex. It was inhabited in 15th century when visited by Oñate, and probably as late as 1700.

Guipana.—Columbus Memorial Vol., 155, 1893 (misprint). Ki-pa-na.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, 125, 1890. Ki-pa-na.—Bandelier, ibid., IV, 109, 1892. Quipana.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd., XVI, 114, 1871.

Kip'aya towns (also called "Red towns," "War towns"). A group of former Creek towns, governed by warriors only, and so called in contradistinction to the Tátua-mikagi, or peace towns. The following were said to belong to this division: Kawita, Tukabatchi, Hlaphlako, Atasi, Kailaidshi, Chiaha, Osotchi, Hotalihuyana, Alibamu, Eufaula, Hillabi, and Kitchoptaki. (A. S. G.)

Ke-pau-yau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 52, 1848. Kip'aya towns.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 121, 1884. Red (towns).—Ibid.

Kipniak. A Magemut Eskimo village at the mouth of the s. arm of Yukon r., Alaska.

Kip-naf-ák.—Dall quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kipniaguk.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kipniak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kipnisk.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, map, 1877. Kramalit.—Rink, Eskimo Tribes, 33, 1887. Kripniyukamiut.—Coast Surv. chart cited by Baker, op. cit.

Kirishkitsu. A Wichita subtribe.—J. O. Dorsey, inf'n, 1881.

Kirokokhoche (Ki'-ro-ko'-go-tce, 'reddish black bear cub'). A subgens of the Tunanpin gens of the Iowa.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 238, 1897.

Kisakobi (Hopi: 'ladder-town place'). A former pueblo of the Hopi people of Walpi, at the n. w. base of the East mesa of Tusayan, N. E. Ariz. It was apparently occupied during the mission period (1629–1680), then abandoned and the present pueblo of Walpi built. The ruins of the Franciscan mission here are called Nushaki by the Hopi, probably from the Spanish misa, 'mass,' and the Hopi ki, 'house.' See Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 580, 1901, and articles cited below.

Kisakobi.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 21, 1891. Kisakovi.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 395, 1894. Nucaki.—Ibid. Nushaki.—Fewkes in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 578, 585, 1898. Old Walpi.—Ibid., 586.

Kishakoquilla Two Delaware villages, taking their name from a chief, formerly existing in Pennsylvania. The first was about the present Kishacoquillas, Mifflin co.; the other, which seems to have been the chief's later residence, was on French cr., about 7 m. below Meadville, Crawford co.

Kishakoquilla.—Alden (1834) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 3d s., VI, 152, 1837 (in Crawford co.). Kishequechela.—Lattre, Map, 1784 (in Huntingdon co.).

Kishgagass ('place of ancestor Gaggass'). A Kitskan division and town on Babine r., an E. tributary of the Skeena, Brit. Col.; pop. 241 in 1904.

Kis-ge-gas.—Can. Ind. Aff., 415, 1898. Kisgegos.—Can. Ind. Aff., 1904, pt. 2, 73, 1905. Kis-go-gas.—Ibid., 431, 1896. Kish-ga-gass.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 278, 1897. Kishgahgahs.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Kishke-gas.—Can. Ind. Aff., 272, 1889. Kishgahs.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114b, 1884. Kissgarrase.—Horetzky, Canada on Pacific, 212, 1874. Kiss-ge-gaas.—Can. Ind. Aff., 252, 1891. Kit-ka-gas.—Dawson in Geol. Surv. Can., 20b, 1879–80. Kitsagas.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 563, 1870. Kits-ge-gaas.—Can. Ind. Aff., 358, 1895. Kits-go-gase.—Ibid., 280, 1894.

Kishi. The Panther clan of the Caddo.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1093, 1896.

Kishkakon (Chippewa: kishki, 'cut' (past participle); ano, from anove, 'tail to have,' especially a bushy tail; hence, 'those who have cut tails,' referring to the naturally short tail of the bear.—Hewitt). The Bear gens or band of the Ottawa, usually found associated with two other bands, the Sinago or Black Squirrel, and the Keinouche or Pike. In 1658 the Kishkakon were allied with about 500 Christian Tionontati Hurons, who occupied contiguous territory, and they were neighbors of the Potawatomi, who at this time occupied the islands at the outlet of Green bay and the mainland to the southward along the w. shores of L. Michigan. Father Allouez found these three bands occupying a single village at La Pointe du Saint Esprit, near the present Bayfield, Wis., in 1668. For three years the Kishkakon refused to receive the gospel announced to them by Father Allouez; but in the autumn of 1688 they resolved in council to accept the teaching of the Christian doctrine. The Kishkakon, having been invited to winter near the chapel at La Pointe du Saint Esprit, left the other bands to draw near the mission house. Marquette found them divided into five "bourgades." In 1677 they were with the Hurons at Mackinaw, Mich., where in 1736 they had 180 warriors and about 200 in the vicinity of Detroit. They appear to have been more closely affiliated with the Sinago and the Keinouche than with the other Ottawa bands. For their history and customs, see Ottawa.

(J. N. B. H.)

Culs-coupés.—Doc. of 1698 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 683, 1855. Kescaccons.—York (1700), ibid., iv, 749, 1854. Kichaoeneiak.—Jes. Rel. 1672-3, LVII, 210, 1899. Kichaoeneiak.—Shea, Cath. Miss., 358, 1855. Kichkagoneiak.—Jes. Rel. 1648, 62, 1858. Kichkankoueik.—Ibid., 1658, 22, 1858. Kiokakons.—Bacqueville de la Potherie, Hist. de l'Amérique, II, 64, 1753 (misprint). Kiscaccons.—De Bougainville (1757) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 608, 1858. Kiscaccons.—Vaudrenil conf. (1703), ibid., ix, 754, 1855. Kiscakons.—Du Chesneau (1681), ibid., 161. Kiscakous.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 82, 1858. Kishkako.—Kelton, Ft. Mackinac, 15, 1884. Kiskacoueik.—Jes. Rel. 1658, 21, 1858. Kiskakonk.—Ibid., 1670, 87, 1858. Kiskakons.—Du Chesneau (1681), op. cit., ix, 164, 1855. Kiskakoumac.—Jes. Rel. 1667, 17, 1858. Kiskakouns.—Cadillac (1702) in Margry, Déc., V, 275, 1883. Kiskokans.—Chauvignerie (1736) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 554, 1853. Queoues coupées.—Jes. Rel. 1669, 19, 1858. Queues coupées.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., ix, 161, note, 1855 (French name).

Kishkallen. A former Chehalis village on the N. shore of Grays harbor, Wash.—Gibbs, MS., B. A. E., No. 248.

Kishkat. A Wichita subtribe.—J. O. Dorsey, inf'n, 1881.

Kishkawawee (Kishkabawā, probably 'broken by water.'—W. Jones). A former Chippewa village on Flint r., in lower Michigan (Saginaw treaty, 1820, in U. S. Ind. Treat., 141, 1873). The reservation was sold in 1837.

Kishpachlaots (Gyispehlá'ots, 'people of the place of the fruit of the cornus'). A Tsimshian division and town formerly at Metlakatla, Brit. Col. The people have now removed to Port Simpson.

Gpaughettes.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Gyispaglá'ots.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 35, 1889. Gyispehlá'ots.—Boas in Zeitschr. für Ethnol., 232, 1888. Kisch-päch-lá-ots.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 317, 1885. Kishpochalots.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Kishpokalants.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., xix, 281, 1897. Kis-pa-cha-laidy.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859. Kispachlohts.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 143, 1877. Kitspukaloats.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 1148, 1884. Kispyox.—Horetzky, Canada on the Pacific, 212, 1874.

Kishpiyeoux ('place of ancestor Piyeoux'). A Kitksan division and town at the junction of Kishpiyeoux and Skeena rs., Brit. Col. According to Boas there were two clans there, Raven and Bear. Pop. 216 in 1904.

Gyispayó'ke.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 50, 1895. Kish-pi-yeoux.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., xix, 278, 1897. Kispaiohs.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 1148, 1884. Kispiax.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. 2, 73, 1905. Kish-pi-yeux.—Jackson, Alaska, 300, 1880. Kispyaths.—Downie in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., xxxi, 253, 1861. Kispyox.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., map, 1884. Kitspayuchs.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1869, 563, 1870. Kits-piousse.—Can. Ind. Aff., 353, 1895. Kits-piox.—Ibid., 359, 1897. Kits-piox.—Ibid., 415, 1898. Kits-pyonks.—Ibid., 304, 1893.

Kishqra. The extinct Reindeer (?) clan of Cochiti pueblo, N. Mex.

Kishqra-hánuch.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 351, 1896 (hánuch = 'people').

Kiskatomas. See Kiskitomas.

Kiski. A small division of the Maidu formerly residing on lower Sacramento r., Cal., probably within the limits of Sacramento co.

Kishey.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, i, 451, 1874. Kiski.—Latham in Proc. Philol. Soc. Lond., vi, 79, 1852-53. Kis Kies.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860. Kisky.—Hale, Ethnol. and Philol., vi, 631, 1846.

Kiskiminetas ('plenty of walnuts.'—Hewitt). A former Delaware village on the S. side of lower Kiskiminetas cr., near its mouth, in Westmoreland co., Pa. Cf. Kiskiminotoes.

Gieschgumanito.—Heckewelder in Trans. Am. Philos. Soc., n. s., iv, 371, 1834 (given as meaning 'make day light', 'cause it to become day light'). Kishkemanetas.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 20, 1776. Kishkimitas.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Pa. map, 1899. Kiskaminetas.—Heckewelder, op. cit. Kiskemanitas.—Ibid. Kiskemeneco.—Post (1758) in Rupp, West Pa., app., 104, 1846.

Kiskitomas. A name for the walnut or hickory nut, formerly common in New Jersey and Long Island. The word has been variously spelled kisky thomas, kiskatomas, kiskytom, uscatomin, etc. The Canadian French name is noyer tendre ('soft nut'), referring to the shell of the nut; and J. H. Trumbull suggests connecting the word with the Abnaki kouskádamen, 'crack with the teeth' (given by Rasse), cognate with the Chippewa kishkibidon, 'tear with the teeth,' the Cree kiskisikatew, 'it is cut or gnawed.' The terms kisky thomas and kisky thomnut are folk-etymological corruptions of this Algonquian word. (A. F. C.)

Kiskiminotoes ('plenty of walnuts.'—Hewitt). A former Delaware village on the N. bank of Ohio r., in Ohio, between Hocking and Scioto rs. The word seems to be identical with Kiskemeneco and Kiskiminetas (q. v.) in Pennsylvania. On Lattre's map "Kiskowanitas" is located on the S. E. side of Maumee r., Ohio. Kiskiminotoes.—Ensauts and Rapilly, map, 1777. Kiskominitos.—La Tour, map, 1782. Kiskowanitas.—Lattre, map, 1784.

Kisky thomas, Kisky thomnut, Kiskytom. See Kiskitomas.

Kispokotha. One of the 5 divisions existing among the Shawnee, without reference to their gentes. See Big Jim.

Big Jim's Band.—Common official name. Ke-spi-co-tha.—W. H. Shawnee in Gulf States Hist. Mag., i, 417, 1903. Kickapoo.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, III, 111, 1854 (not the Kickapoo). Kiscapocoke.—Johnston (1819) in Brinton, Lenape Leg., 30, 1885. Kiscopokes.—Drake, Tecumseh, 69, 1856. Kiskapocoke.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, app., 97, 1822. Kispogogi.—Gatschet, Shawnee MS., B. A. E., 1879. Ki-spo-ko-tha.—W. H. Shawnee, op. cit., 415.

Kisthemuwelgit. An old Niska town on the N. side of Nass r., Brit. Col., near its mouth, and numbering about 50 inhabitants. There is some question about the correctness of the name. See Kitan-gata.

Kis-themu-welgit.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., xix, 279, 1897.

Kitahon. A former Niska village on Nass r., Brit. Col., a few miles from tide-water.

Kit-a-hon.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859. Kitawn.—Horetzky, Canada on the Pacific, 132, 1874.

Kitaix. A Niska village near the mouth of Nass r., Brit. Col.; pop. 28 in 1903, the last time it was separately enumerated. In 1904 the combined strength of the Kitaix and Andeguale people was 80.

Git'sks. Swanton, field notes, 1900-01. Kit-aix.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., xix, 279, 1897. Kitax.—Can. Ind. Aff., 416, 1898. Kitlax.—Ibid., 280, 1894. Kit-tak.—Ibid., 251, 1891. Kit-tek.—Ibid., 360, 1897. Kitten.—Ibid., 1903, pt. 2, 72, 1904. Kit-tex.—Ibid., 432, 1896.

Kitak. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Kitamat. A northern Kwakiutl tribe living on Douglas channel, Brit. Col., and speaking the Heiltsuk dialect. They are divided into the Beaver, Eagle, Wolf, Salmon, Raven, and Killer-whale clans. Pop. 279 in 1904.

Gyit'amá't.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 9, 1889 (Chimmesyan name). Hai-shi-la.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 65, 1887. Hai-shilla.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab., Brit. Col., 117b, 1884. Hyshalla.—Scouler (1846) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., 233, 1848. Ket Mats.—Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 554, 1870. Kitamah.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. 2, 70, 1905. Kitamaht.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Kitamat.—Tolmie and Dawson, op. cit. Kitamatt.—Can. Ind. Aff., 244, 1890. Kitimat.—Ibid., pt. 2, 162, 1901. Kit ta maat.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 487, 1855. Kittamarks.—Downie in Mayne, Brit. Col., app., 452, 1862. Kit-ta-muat.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859 (erroneously included under the Chimmesyan Sabassa). Kittimat.—Fleming, Can. Pac. R. R. Rep. Prog., 138, 1877. Kittumarks.—Horetzky, Can. on Pacific, 212, 1874. Qaisla.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 52, 1890. Xa-isla.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 328, 1897 (own name).

Kitami (Kitá'mi, 'porcupine'). A sub-phrase or gens of the Menominee.—Hoffman in 14th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 1, 42, 1896.

Kitangata. A Niska town on Nass r. or inlet, Brit. Col.; pop. 30 in 1903, the last time the name appears. Probably identical with either Lakungida or Kisthemuwelgit.

Kitangata.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. II, 68, 1902. Kitangataa.—Ibid., 416, 1898.

Kitanmaiksh. An old town and division of the Kitsan just above the junction of Skeena and Bulkley rs., Brit. Col. The new town is now called Hazelton and has become a place of some importance, as it stands at the head of navigation on the Skeena. Pop. 241 in 1904.

Get-an-max.—Can. Ind. Aff., 415, 1898. Git-an-max.—Ibid., 252, 1891. Git-au-max.—Ibid., 304, 1893. Gyit'anma'kys.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 60, 1895. Kit-an-maikh.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., xix, 278, 1897. Kitinahs.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab., Brit. Col., 114b, 1884.

Kitchawank (perhaps akin to Chippewa Kichichiwink, 'at the great mountain.'—W. Jones). Apparently a band or small tribe, or, as Rutenber designates it, a "chieftaincy" of the Wappinger confederacy, formerly residing on the E. bank of the Hudson in what is now Westchester co., N. Y. Their territory is believed to have extended from Croton r. to Anthony's Nose. Their principal village, Kitchawank, in 1650, appears to have been about the mouth of the Croton, though one authority (N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiii, 14, 1881) locates it at Sleepy Hollow. They also had a village at Peekskill which they called Sackhoes. Their fort, or "castle," which stood at the mouth of Croton r., has been represented as one of the most formidable and ancient of the Indian fortresses s. of the Highlands. Its exact situation, according to Rutenber, was at the neck of Teller's, called Senasqua. The Kitchawank were a party to the treaty of peace made with the Dutch, Aug. 30, 1615. (J. M. C. T.) Kechtawangh.—Stuyvesant (1663) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiii, 300, 1881. Kichtawan.—Doc. of 1664, ibid., 364. Kichtawanc.—Treaty of 1643, ibid., 14. Kichtawanghs.—Treaty of 1645, ibid., 18. Kichtawons.—Treaty of 1613 in Winfield, Hudson Co., 45, 1874. Kichtewangh.—Doc. of 1664 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiii, 371, 1881. Kichtowanghs.—Stuyvesant (1663), ibid., 300. Kichtawanc.—Treaty of 1643 in Rutenber, Tribes Hudson R., 78, 1872. Kictawanc.—Records (1643) in Winfield, Hudson Co., 42, 1874. Kightwangh.—Treaty of 1664 in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., xiii, 375, 1881. Kightowan.—Records of 1690 in Rutenber, Tribes Hudson R., 178, 1872. Kitchawanc.—Treaty of 1643, ibid., 110. Kitchawonek.—Rutenber, ibid., 79. Kitchawanghs.—Treaty of 1645, ibid., 118.

Kitchigami ('great water,' from kitchi 'great,' gami 'water,' the Chippewa name for L. Superior). A tribe living in 1669-70, about central or s. w. Wisconsin, with the Kickapoo and Mascoutens, with which tribes they were ethnically and linguistically related. Little has been recorded in relation to the Kitchigami, and after a few brief notices of them, chiefly by Fathers Allouez and Marquette, they drop from history, having probably been absorbed by the Mascoutens or the Kickapoo. The first mention of them is in a letter written by Marquette, probably in the spring of 1670 (Jes. Rel. 1670, 90, 1858), in which he says: "The Illinois are thirty days' journey by land from La Pointe, the way being very difficult. They are southwestward from La Point du Saint Esprit. One passes by the nation of the Kitchigamis, who compose more than 20 large lodges, and live in the interior. After that the traveler passes through the country of the Miamiouek [Miami], and traversing great deserts (prairies) he arrives at the country of the Illinois." It appears from his statement that they were at this time at war with the Illinois. In the same Relation (p. 100) it is stated that along Wisconsin r. are numerous other nations; that 4 leagues from there "are the Kickapoos and the Kitchigamis, who speak the same language as the Mascoutens." Tailhan, who is inclined to associate them with the Illinois, says the above statement is confirmed by the indited relation of P. Beschefer. As neither Marquette nor Allouez speaks of them when they reach the section indicated, but mention the Kickapoo, Mascouten, and Illinois, and as it appears that they had been at war with the Illinois, it is probable that the Kitchigami formed a part of the Kickapoo or the Mascoutens tribe. They are not noted on Marquette's true map, but are located on Thevenot's so-called Marquette map, under the name Kithigami, as immediately w. of the Mississippi, opposite the mouth of Wisconsin r. The fact that they drop so suddenly and entirely from history would indicate that they became known under some other name. (c. t.)

Ketchegamins.—Perrot (1718-20), Mémoire, 221, 1864. Ketchigamins.—Jes. Rel., index, 1858. Kethigamins.—Ibid., 1670, 90, 1858. Kischigamins.—Jes. Rel. 1683, Thwaite's ed., LXII, 193, 1900. Kitchigamich.—Jes. Rel. 1670, 100, 1858. Kitchigamick.—Shea in Wis. Hist. Coll., III, 131, 1857. Kithigami.—Thevenot quoted by Shea, Discov. Miss., 268, 1852.

Kitchigumiwininiwug ('men of the great lake'). A collective term for those Chippewa formerly living on and near the shores of Lake Superior, in Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. By the treaty of Lapointe in 1854 the bands officially recognized as "Chippewas of Lake Superior" were declared to be those living at Fond du Lac (Minnesota), La Pointe, Lac du Flambeau, Lac Court Oreilles (Wisconsin), Desert lake, L'Anse, Ontonagon, Grand Portage, and Bois Forte (Michigan). Their history, except as regards treaty relations with the United States, is the same as that of the southern Chippewa (see Chippewa). By the treaty of Fond du Lac, Minn., Aug. 2, 1847, they joined the Chippewa of the Mississippi in relinquishing their claim to a tract of land about the mouth of Crow Wing r., Minn. By treaty of Lapointe, Wis., Sept. 3, 1854, they ceded all their lands in upper Michigan and n. Wisconsin, the United States agreeing to reserve for the use of each of said bands a specified tract within the ceded area. By act of June 5, 1872, the Secretary of the Interior was authorized to remove, with their consent, the bands from Lac du Flambeau, Lac Court d'Oreilles, and Fond du Lac res. to Bad River res., but this removal was not carried into effect, the Indians refusing permission. By Executive Order of Mar. 1, 1873, the reservation in Wisconsin selected for the Lac Court Oreilles band was approved. By order of Dec. 20, 1881, a reservation at Vermillion Lake, Minn., was set aside for the Bois Forte band. The Executive order of June 30, 1883, set apart the Deer Creek res., Minn., for the same band. By agreements of Oct. 24, Nov. 12, and Nov. 21, 1889, the Grand Portage, Bois Forte, and Fond du Lac bands ceded such of their lands at Red Lake, Fond du Lac, Bois Forte, and Deer Creek, as were not needed for allotment. In 1867 they were officially reported to number about 5,560; in 1880, 2,813; in 1905, 4,703.

(J. M. C. T.)

Chippewas of Lake Superior.—Lapointe treaty (1854) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 223, 1873. Kechegumme-winnie-wug.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 84, 1850. Kéchekâmé Wê-ênéwâk.—Long, Exped. St. Peter's R., II, 153, 1824. Kitchigamiwininiwâk.—Gatschet, Ojibwa MS., B. A. E., 1882. Kitcigamiwininiwag.—Wm. Jones, in Pn, 1906.

Kitchisiwininiwug ('men of the great river,' from kitchi 'great', sibiw 'river', iniwug 'men'). A collective term for the Chippewa living on the upper Mississippi, in n. e. Minnesota, s. e. of Leech lake. Their principal bands were Misi-sagakaniniwiniwâk at Sandy lake, Kah-metahwungaguma at Mille lac, the Rabbit Lake band at Rabbit lake, and the Gull Lake band at Gull lake. (J. M.)

Ke-che-se-be-win-in-e-wug.—Warren (1852) in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 39, 1885. Ke-che-se-be-win-o-wing.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 86, 1850. Kitchisiwi-winiwâk.—Gatschet, Ojibwa MS., B. A. E., 1882. Kitcisiwininiwag.—Wm. Jones, in Pn, 1906. Mississippi bands.—Lapointe treaty (proclaimed 1843) in U. S. Ind. Treat., 218, 1873.

Kitchopataki (Kitchu 'a block of wood to pound grain', patâki 'spreading out'). A former Upper Creek town, n. e. of Hillabi town, on a small affluent of upper Tallapoosa r., Randolph co., Ala. It had 48 families in 1832.

Hit h o par ta ga.—Census of 1832 in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, IV, 578, 1854. Kitcho-patâki.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 135, 1884.

Kitchopataki. A town of the Creek Nation on the point at the junction of Deep and North forks of Canadian r., Okla.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888.

Kitchu patâki.—Gatschet, ibid.

Kitegareut ('dwellers on reindeer mountains'). A tribe of Eskimo e. of Mackenzie r. on Anderson r. and at C. Bathurst, Can. They are the most easterly tribe wearing labrets. Their country is known as a source of stone utensils.

Anderson's River Esquimaux.—Hind, Labrador, II, 259, 1863. Kitiga'ru.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 45, 1892. Kitte-ga-re-ut.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 362, 1851. Kitte-garœ-oot.—Richardson in Franklin, Second Exped., 174, 1828. Kit-te-ga'-ru.—Simpson quoted by Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 48, 1892. Kpāgmaliit.—Petitot quoted by Murdoch, ibid. Kpāgmaliwëit.—Ibid. Kpāgmaliwëit.—Petitot in Bib. Ling. et Ethnog. Am., XI, 11, 1876 (= 'the real Kpāgmaliit'). Kpāmalit.—Rink, Eskimo Tribes, 33, 1887. Kpāvanāpat.—Petitot in Bib. Ling. et Ethnog. Am., XI, 11, 1876 (= 'easterly'). Kpoteyopëut.—Ibid.

Kithateen. A Chimmesyan division on Nass r., Brit. Col.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1850.

Kithatratts. Given by Downie (Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., XXXI, 253, 1861) as a Chimmesyan village on the headwaters of Skeena r., Brit. Col., in the territory of the Kiksan; not identifiable with any present Kiksan town.

Kitingujang. A summer settlement of the Kingnaitmiut Eskimo at the head of Kingnait fjord, Cumberland sd.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kitkadusshade. According to Krause (Tlinkit Indianer, 304, 1885), the name of a branch of the Haida. Unidentified.

Kitkahta ('people of the poles'; so called from their salmon weirs). A Tsimshian division and town on Douglas channel, n. w. coast of British Columbia. Although formerly a large town, its inhabitants are said by Boas to have been subject to the chief of the Kitwilgioks, to whom they paid tribute. Pop. 79 in 1904. Gyitg'a-ata.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 9, 1889. Hartley Bay.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. 2, 70, 1905. Kil-cah-ta.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kitha-ata.—Can. Ind. Aff., 271, 1889. Kitka-ata.—Ibid., 432, 1896. Kitkada.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kitkaet.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885. Kitkaht.—Brit. Col. map, Victoria, 1872. Kit-kahta.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 280, 1897. Kit-kats.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 316, 1863.

Kitkatla ('people of the sea'). A leading Tsimshian division and town on Porcher id., n. w. coast of British Columbia; pop. 225 in 1902, 208 in 1904.

Gyitg'a-tla.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 9, 1889. Keek heat-la.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 487, 1855. Keet-heat-la.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Keethratlah.—Mayne, Brit. Col., 279, 1861. Kitatels.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 312, 1868. Kitcatla.—Mohun in Can. Ind. Aff., 153, 1881. Kitchatlah.—Scouler (1846) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 233, 1848. Kithatla.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kithkatla.—Can. Ind. Aff., 251, 1891. Kitkatla.—Brit. Col. map, Victoria, 1872. Kitkatla.—Can. Ind. Aff., 432, 1896. Kitkhal-ah.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kit-khatla.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 280, 1897. Kitoonitza.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 115B, 1884 (Kwakiutl name). Kittlatchla.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885. Sibapa.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. (probably the name of the chief, Djebasa).

Kitkehahki ('on a hill'.—Grinnell). One of the tribes of the Pawnee confederacy (q. v.), sometimes called Republican Pawnee, as their villages were at one time on Republican r. Their villages were always w. of those of the Chaui, or up stream, and were spoken of as the upper villages. The tribe lived with its kindred on Loup r., Nebr., where their reservation was established in 1857. In 1875 they were removed to Oklahoma, where they now dwell. In 1892 they took their lands in severalty and became citizens of the United States. In tribal organization, customs, and beliefs the Kitkehahki did not differ from their congeners. Grinnell (Pawnee Hero Stories, 241, 1889) mentions three divisions, the Great Kitkehahki, Little Kitkehahki, and Blackhead Kitkehahki.

(A. C. F.)

Kattahawkees.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 213, 1861. Ket-kakesh.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., II, lxxxv, 1823. Kit'-ka.—Morgan, Syst. Consan. and Affin., 286, 1871. Kitkaha'ki.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. Kitka-hoets.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 518, 1878. Kit'-ke-ha-i.—Dunbar in Mag. Am. Hist., IV, 246, 1880. Mitahawiyé.—Dorsey, Kansas MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 (Kansas name). Panea Republicans.—Lewis, Travels, 13, 1809. Pania Republican.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 62, 1806. Panias republicains.—Gass, Voy., 417, 1810. Panias Republican.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 17, 1806. Panis Republican.—Lewis and Clark, Travels, 14, 1807. Pawnee Republics.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 117, 19th Cong., 1st sess., 7, 1826. Pawnee republic.—Pike, Travels, 190, 1811. Pawnee Republican.—Irving, Indian Sketches, II, 13, 1835. Pawnees republic.—Pike, Exped., 143, 1810. Republic.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 18, 1806. Republican Pawnees.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., I, 33, 1814. Republicans.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 95, 1840. Republick.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 87, 1905 (name given by traders). Républiques.—Du Lac, Voy. dans les Louisianes, 225, 1805. Ze-ka-ka.—Long, Exped. Rocky Mts., II, lxxxv, 1823. Zika hákisi.—Dorsey, Kansas MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1882 (Kansas name). Zizika ákiçisi'.—La Fleche quoted by Dorsey in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., VI, 397, 1892 (Omaha name). Zizika-ákiisi.—Saussoici quoted, ibid. (Omaha name).

Kitsan ('people of Skeena [Ksian] river'). One of the three dialectic divisions of the Chimmesyan stock, affiliated more closely with the Niska than with the Tsimshian proper. The people speaking the dialect live along the upper waters of Skeena r., Brit. Col. Dorsey enumerates the following towns: Kauldaw, Kishgagass, Kishpiyeoux, Kitannaiksh, Kitwingach, Kitwinskole, and Kitzegukla. To these must be added the modern mission town of Meamskinisht. A division is known as the Glen-Vowell Band. Pop. 1,120 in 1904.

Gyikshan.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 50, 1895. Gyitsa'n.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 8, 1889. Gyitkshan.—Boas in 10th Rep. ibid., 50, 1895. Kiksán.—J. O. Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 277, 1897. Kit-in-shian.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kitksa'n.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 277, 1897. Kit-ksum.—Can. Ind. Aff., 359, 1897. Kit-ksum.—Can. Ind. Aff., 358, 1895.

Kitlakaous ('people on the sandy point'). A former Niska village on Nass r., Brit. Col., near its mouth. It was entirely abandoned in 1885.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 279, 1897.

Kitlakdamix. A division and town of the Niska on Nass r., Brit. Col., about 25 m. from tidewater; pop. 169 in 1898, 126 in 1904.

Gyit'laqda'mike.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 49, 1895. Kilawalaks.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., map, 1884. Kin-a-roa-lax.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kin-a-wa-lax.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 487, 1855. Kinne-woolun.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Kitlaedamax.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. 2, 69, 1905. Kitlach-damak.—Can. Ind. Aff., 271, 1889. Kitlach-damax.—Ibid., 416, 1898. Kit-lak-damix.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 280, 1897. Kitlatamox.—Horetzky, Canada on Pacific, 128, 1874.

Kitlani (Gyitla'n, 'people who paddle stern first'). A former Tsimshian division and town near Metlakatla, n. w. coast of British Columbia; now at Port Simpson. Gyitla'n.—Boas in Zeitschr. für Ethnol., 232, 1888. Ketlane.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kitlan.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kitlani.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 281, 1897. Kitlan Kilwilpeyot.—Brit. Col. map of Ind. Tribes, Victoria, 1872. Kitlëan.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885.

Kitlope (Tsimshian: 'people of the rocks'). A Kwakiutl tribe living on Gardiner channel, Brit. Col.; pop. 84 in 1901, 71 in 1904.

Gi'manoitx.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 328, 1897. Gyimanoitx.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 9, 1889. Gyitlo'p.—Ibid. Keimanoitoh.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 117B, 1884. Kitloop.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Kitlop.—Tolmie and Dawson, op. cit. Kit-lope.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859 (wrongly classed as Sabassa). Kitlope.—Can. Ind. Aff., 315, 1892.

Xanā'ks'iala.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 328, 1897 (own name).

Kitrauauiks (K'itrau-ai-iks). Given by Krause (Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885) as a division of the Tsimshian on Skeena r., Brit. Col., and southward; they are not now identifiable.

Kitsalthal (Gyidaxtlā'tl, 'people of the salmon-berries'). A Tsimshian division and town on the coast of British Columbia, between Nass and Skeena rs., probably near Metlakatla.

Gyidaxtlā'tl.—Boas in Zeitschr. für Ethnol., 232, 1888. Kitch-a-elalth.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kitche kla la.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kits-ach-lā-ā'ch.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 317, 1885. Kitsagatala.—Downie in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., XXXI, 253, 1861. Kitsalthal.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884.

Kitsanaka. Given by Dawson (Queen Charlotte Ids., 134, 1880) as the name of one of four Haida clans, the word being supposed to signify "crow." As there are only two Haida clans, the Raven (Hoya) and the Eagle (Gof), and the word for crow is kāldjida, it is evident that Dawson misunderstood his informant. (J. R. S.)

Kittamaquindi (properly Kittamaqueink, 'place of the old great beaver.'—Hewitt). The principal village of the Conoy (Piscataway) in Maryland in 1639. In that year the Jesuits established there a mission, which was removed in 1642 to Potopaco on account of the inroads of the Conestoga and their allies. According to Brinton the village was at the junction of Tinkers cr. with the Piscataway, a few miles above the Potomac, in Prince George co. (J. M.)

Kittamaque-ink.—Brinton, Lenape Lex., 27, 1885 (proper form). Kittamaquindi.—Writer of 1639 in White, Relatio Itineris, 63, 1874. Kittamaquindi.—White, ibid., 127, note.

Kittanning ('on the great stream', from kit, 'large, superior'; hanne, 'stream'; ing, the locative). An important village of mixed Iroquois, Delaware, and Caughnawaga, formerly about the site of the present Kittanning, on Allegheny r., in Armstrong co., Pa. It was destroyed by the Pennsylvanians in 1756 after a desperate fight. It seems to have consisted of two or three settlements. The most important, called Upper Kittanning, was on the E. side of the river. Middle Kittanning was on the w. bank. (J. M.)

Adigie.—Guy Park conf. (1775) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., VII, 557, 1857. Adigo.—Johnson Hall conf. (1765), ibid., VII, 728, 1856 (perhaps the Iroquois name). Atiga.—Bellin, map, 1775. Attigné.—Céloron (1749) in Margry, Doc., VI, 685, 1886. Attigua.—Bellin, map, 1755 (marked as if distinct from Atiga). Attiqué.—Céloron, op. cit. Cantan-yans.—Boudinot, Star in the West, 126, 1816 (used for the inhabitants). Cattanyan.—Smith (1799) in Drake, Trag. Wild., 263, 1841. Kattanning.—Harris, Tour, map, 1805. Kittanning.—Pa. Gazette (1756) quoted in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 3d s., IV, 298, 1834. Kithannink.—Heckewelder in Trans. Am. Philos. Soc., n. s., IV, 368, 1834. Kittaning.—Johnson Hall conf., op. cit. Kittanning.—Croghan (?), ca. 1756, in Rupp, West. Pa., 116, 1846. Kittanes.—Lattre, map, 1784.

Kitteaumut. A village of Christian Indians in the s. part of Plymouth co., Mass., near Monument Ponds, in 1674, perhaps under the dominion of the Wampanoag. See Cotton (1674) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 1st s., I, 199, 1806.

Kittizoo. The southernmost division and town of the Tsimshian, on the s. side of Swindle id., N. W. of Millbank sd., Brit. Col. The town is now almost deserted. Gyidesdzo'.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 9, 1889. Ketyagoos.—Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1869, 534, 1870. Kitstues.—Brit. Col. map, Victoria, 1872. Kittizoo.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kit-tist-zü.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 143, 1877. Kit-tizoo.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 280, 1897. Kityagoos.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep., 316, 1868. Whisklaieitoh.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884 ('people across the sea': Heiltsuk name).

Kittsawat. A Ntlakyapamuk village near Lytton, Brit. Col., with 4 inhabitants in 1897 (Can. Ind. Aff. Rep.), the last time the name appears.

Kituhwa (Kitühwā). A former important Cherokee settlement on Tuckasegee r., and extending from above the junction of the Oconaluftee nearly to the present Bryson City, Swain co., N. C. The name, which appears also as Ket-tooah, Kittoa, Kittowa, etc., has lost its meaning. The people of this and the subordinate settlements on the waters of the Tuckasegee were known as Anf-Kit-ühwagī, and the name was frequently extended to include the whole tribe. For this reason it was adopted in later times as the name of the Cherokee secret organization, commonly known to the whites as the Ketoowah society, pledged to the defence of Cherokee autonomy.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 525, 1900. Kautika.—Doc. of 1799 quoted by Royce in 5th Rep. B. A. E., 144, 1887. Kettoah.—Mooney, op. cit. Kittoa.—Ibid. Kittowa.—Doc. of 1755 quoted by Royce, op. cit., 143.

Kituitsach-hade. A name given by Krause (Tlinkit Indianer, 304, 1885) to a supposed branch of the Haida on Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. Unidentified.

Kitunahan Family. A linguistic family established by Powell (7th Rep. B. A. E., 85, 1891) to include the single Kutenai tribe (q. v.). The name is adopted from Hale's term, Kitunaha, applied to the tribe. This family has since been found to consist of two tribes with slightly differing dialects, viz., the Upper Kutenai and the Lower Kutenai, the former being properly the Kitōnā'qā, the latter the Äqkōqt'l-ätlqō. Certain other minor differences exist between these two sections. The following family synonyms are chronologic. (A. F. C.)

—Kitunaha.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., VI, 204, 555, 1846 (between the forks of the Columbia); Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, pt. 1, c. 10, 17, 1848 (Flatbow); Berghaus (1851), Physik. Atlas, map 17, 1852; Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 70, 1856; Latham, Opuscula, 338, 1860; Latham, Elem. Comp. Philol., 395, 1862 (between lat. 52° and 48°, w. of main ridge of Rocky mts.);

Gatschet in Mag. Am. Hist. 170, 1877 (on Kootenay r.). = Coutanies.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., vi, 204, 1846 (= Kitunaha). = Kutanis.—Latham, Nat. Hist. Man, 316, 1850 (Kitunaha). = Kituanaha.—Gallatin in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 402, 1853 (Coutaria or Flatbows, n. of lat. 49°). = Kootanies.—Buschmann, Spuren der aztek. Sprache, 661, 1859. = Kutani.—Latham, Elem. Comp. Philol., 395, 1862 (or Kitunaha). = Cootanie.—Latham, ibid. (synonymous with Kitunaha). = Kootenai.—Gatschet in Mag. Am. Hist., 170, 1877 (defines area occupied); Gatschet in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 446, 1877; Bancroft, Nat. Races, iii, 565, 1882. = Kootenuha.—Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocab. Brit. Col., 79–87, 1884 (vocabulary of Upper Kootenau). = Flatbow.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., vi, 204, 1846 (= Kitunaha); Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., ii, pt. 1, 10, 77, 1848 (after Hale); Buschmann, Spuren der aztek. Sprache, 661, 1859; Latham, Elem. Comp. Philol., 395, 1862 (or Kitunaha); Gatschet in Mag. Am. Hist., 170, 1877. = Flachbogen.—Berg-haus (1851), Physik. Atlas, map 17, 1852. = Shushwaps.—Keane in Stanford Compend. (Cent. and So. Am.), app., 460, 474, 1878 (includes Kootenais Flatbows or Skalzi). = Kitunahan.—Powell in 7th Rep. B. A. E., 85, 1891.

Kitunto (Gyit'endá, 'people of the stockaded town'). A Tsimshian division and town formerly near the mouth of Skeena r., Brit. Col. The people were related to the Kishpachlaots.

Gyit'Endá.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 35, 1889. Ket-an-dou.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kitadab.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 281, 1897. Kit, an, doh.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kitt-andó.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885. Kitunto.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884.

Kitwilgioks (Gyitwulgá'ts, 'people of the camping place'). A Tsimshian division in the neighborhood of the mouth of Skeena r., Brit. Col. Their chief out-ranked all other Tsimshian chiefs.

Gyitwulgá'ts.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 35, 1889. Kitwilgioks.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kit-will-coits.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kitwill quoitz.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kit-wulg-jats.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 317, 1885.

Kitwilksheba (Gyitwulkshéba'). A Tsimshian division in the neighborhood of Metlakatla and the mouth of Skeena r., Brit. Col. In 1884 it was almost extinct. Gyitwulkshéba'.—Boas in Zeitschr. für Ethnol., 232, 1888. Ket-wilk-ci-pa.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kitwilksheba.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kit, will, su, pat.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kit-wulkse-bé.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885.

Kitwingach ('people of place of plenty of rabbits'). A division and town of the Kitksan on the n. bank of Skeena r., Brit. Col., just above the rapids; pop. 154 in 1904.

Gyitwung-á'.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 50, 1895. Kilgonwah.—Brit. Col. map, Victoria, 1872. Kitcoonsa.—Downie in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., xxxi, 253, 1861. Kitswingachs.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 563, 1870. Kit-wang-agh.—Can. Ind. Aff., 415, 1898. Kitwanger.—Horetzky, Canada on the Pacific, 212, 1874. Kit-win-gach.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 279, 1897. Kitwungá.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884.

Kitwinshilk ('people of the place of lizards'). A Niska town on the middle course of Nass r., n. w. British Columbia. According to Boas there were four divisions: Laktiakti, Lakloukst, Gyitsaek, and Gyisgahast. The first of these belonged to the Wolf clan, the second and third to the Eagle clan, and the fourth to the Bear clan. Pop. 77 in 1898, 62 in 1904.

Gyitwunkse'tlk.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 49, 1895. Ke toon ok shelk.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 487, 1855. Kitwanshelt.—Horetzky, Canada on the Pacific, 129, 1874. Kit-win-shilk.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 280, 1897. Kitwint-shieth.—Can. Ind. Aff., 271, 1889. Kitwintshilth.—Ibid., 416, 1898.

Kitwinskole ('people where the narrows pass'). A Kitksan division and town on a w. branch of upper Skeena r., Brit. Col.; pop. 67 in 1904.

Gyitwuntkó'l.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 49, 1895. Kitswinskolds.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 563, 1870. Kitwancole.—Horetzky, Canada on the Pacific, 116, 1874. Kit-wan-cool.—Can. Ind. Aff., 415, 1898. Kit-wan Cool.—Ibid., 252, 1891. Kit-win-skole.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 279, 1897. Kit-wun-kool.—Dawson in Geol. Surv. of Can., 20B, 1879–80.

Kitzeesh (Gyidz'is, 'people of the salmon weir'). A Tsimshian division and town formerly near Metlakatla, Brit. Col. According to the Haida, this family was descended from a woman of their tribe.

Gitte's.—Swanton, field notes, 1900–01. Gyidzi's.—Boas in Zeitschr. f. Ethnol., 232, 1888. Kee-ches.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 487, 1855. Kee-chis.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Keshase.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kitseesh.—Brit. Col. map, Victoria, 1872. Kits-isch.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885. Kitsis.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kitzeesh.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 281, 1897.

Kitzegukla ('people of Zekukla mountain'). A Kitksan division and town on upper Skeena r., a short distance below Hazelton, Brit. Col. There is an old and also a new town of this name. According to Boas there were two clans here, Raven and Bear, the people of the latter being called specifically Gyisgá'hast. Pop. of both, 91 in 1904.

Gyitsigyu'htla.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 50, 1895. Kitsegucla.—Dawson in Geol. Surv. Canada, 20B, 1879–80. Kitse-gukla.—Can. Ind. Aff., 252, 1891. Kitsenelah.—Brit. Col. map, Victoria, 1872. Kit-se-quahla.—Can. Ind. Aff., 415, 1898. Kit-se-quak-la.—Ibid., 358, 1895. Kit-sigehulé.—Horetzky, Canada on the Pacific, 116, 1874. Kitsiguhs.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 563, 1870. Kitsiguhi.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 114B, 1884. Kits-se-quec-la.—Can. Ind. Aff., 304, 1893. Kitze-gukla.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 278, 1897.

Kitzilas ('people of the canyon', i. e., of Skeena r.). A Tsimshian division. The two towns successively occupied by them bore their name. The first, just above the canyon of Skeena r., Brit. Col., has been abandoned, the people having moved, mainly in 1893, to New Kitzilas, just below the canyon. Pop. of the latter town, 144 in 1902; in 1904, together with Port Essington and Kitzingaylum, 191. Gyits'ala'ser.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 9, 1889. Kisalas.—Can. Ind. Aff., 416, 1898. Kitalaska.—Downie in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., xxxi, 252, 1861. Kitchulass.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kitsalas.—Scott in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 563, 1870. Kitsalass.—Can. Ind. Aff., 252, 1891. Kitsalassir.—Brit. Col. map, Victoria, 1872. Kit-se-lai-so.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kitselassir.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 318, 1885. Kitsellase.—Horetzky, Canada on Pacific, 212, 1874. Kit zilas.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 279, 1897. Kit-zilass.—Ibid., map.

Kitzingaylum ('people on the upper part of the river.'—Boas). A Tsimshian division and town on the n. side of Skeena r., Brit. Col., below the canyon. These people were originally Tongas, of the Koluschan stock, who fled from Alaska on account of continual wars, and settled at this point. In course of time they came to speak the Tsimshian language. Pop. 69 in 1902; in 1904, together with Port Essington and Kit-zilas, 191.

Gyits'umra'lon.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 9, 35, 1889. Kee-chum-a-kai-lo.—Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859. Kee-chum akarlo.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 487, 1855. Kitchem-kalem.—Can. Ind. Aff., 271, 1889. Kitchimkale.—Howard, Notes on Northern Tribes visited in 1854, MS., B. A. E. Kitsumkalem.—Can. Ind. Aff., 416, 1898. Kitsumkalum.—Horetzky, Canada on Pacific, 212, 1874. Kit-zim-gay-lum.—Dorsey in Am. Antiq., XIX, 279, 1897.

Kiusta (K'iu'sta, 'where the trail comes out' [?]). A former Haida town on the n. w. coast of Moresby id., opposite North id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was owned by the Stustas. Possibly the town given in John Work's list as "Lu-lan-na," with 20 houses and 296 inhabitants in 1836–40, included this place and the neighboring town of Yaku. The old people remember 9 houses as having stood here and 8 at Yaku. After the population of Kiusta had decreased considerably, the remainder went to Kung, in Naden harbor. (J. R. S.)

Kioo-sta.—Dawson, Queen Charlotte Ids., 162, 1880. Kiusta Haade.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895. Kyiu'st'a.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 22, 1898.

Kiva. The Hopi name of the sacred ceremonial, assembly, and lounging chamber, characteristic of ancient and modern Pueblo settlements of Arizona and New Mexico and the prehistoric pueblos of Colorado and Utah. They were first described by the early Spanish explorers of the S. W., who designated them estufas, meaning 'hot rooms,' evidently mistaking their chief use as that of sweat-houses. One of the kivas at the pueblo of Taos in 1540 is described by Castañeda (14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896) as containing "12 pillars, 4 of which, in the center, were as large as 2 men could reach around," while "some that were seen were large enough for a game of ball." The kivas of the Rio Grande villages were described as "underground, square or round, with fine pillars," which is largely true to-day. The early Spaniards also state that "the young men lived in the estufas," that "if a man repudiated his woman he has to go to the estufa," and that "it is forbidden for women to sleep in the estufas, or to enter these for any purpose, except to give their husbands or sons something to eat," which is still the case save in the few instances in which kivas are used by women's religious societies or where women are witnesses of the ceremonies. "The kivas," says Castañeda, "belong to the men, while the houses belong to the women." Elsewhere he asserts that the kivas belong to the whole village, meaning that they are not the property of a single individual or household.

HOPÍ KIVA, SHONGOPOVÍ. (V. MINDELEFF)

The oldest form of kiva seems to have been circular, and some of these are still used in Rio Grande pueblos, as Santo Domingo, Santa Clara, and Nambe, although in this section, where Spanish influence was strongest, the persistence of this type might be least expected. At Zuñi and in the Hopi villages, on the other hand, the kivas are rectangular, in the latter wholly or partly underground and usually isolated, in the former partly subterranean and forming part of the village cluster. Originally the Zuñi kivas were in the courtyards of the villages, but, probably by reason of Spanish restrictions, their situation was later hidden among the dwellings, where they are today. The number of kivas in a pueblo varied with its size and the number of the religious organizations using them. Oraibi alone has 13 kivas, while some of the smaller pueblos contain but one. Those of the Hopi, which number 33, are rectangular, and are generally so built that they are approximately on a n. and

NAMBE KIVA. (VROMAN, PHOTO)

s. line, the exceptions probably being due to the exigencies of the sites. This latter circumstance, however, is not permitted to interfere with the subterranean or semi-subterranean character of the kivas, for so persistently is this feature preserved that convenience of use is sacrificed for sites that admit of partial excavation in the rock or the sinking of the chamber below the surface of the mesa summit. Kivas contain few wall openings, and these are very small. The chambers are invariably entered by means of a ladder to the roof and another through a hatchway. The roof is supported by beams covered with osiers or boards and adobe mortar well tamped; the floors consist usually of smooth sandstone slabs; the walls, which are sometimes decorated with symbolic paintings of directional animals in directional colors, are wholly or partly surrounded by a solid stone-capped adobe bench, and at one end, behind the ladder, is a low platform or dais. A shallow fire-pit occupies the center of the floor, the hatchway being the only means for the passage of the smoke. At the end of some kivas, facing the ladder, is a small round hole in a stone or slab of cottonwood—the šipapu or šhipapulima (the name varying with the language of the tribes)—symbolizing the place of origin and the final place of departure of the Pueblo peoples and the medium of communication with the beings of the underworld. When not in use the šipapu is kept plugged. Behind this orifice an altar, varying with the society and the ceremony, is usually erected, and before it a dry-painting is sometimes made, and numerous symbolic paraphernalia are assembled in prescribed order. See Altar, Ceremony, Pueblos, Shrines.

Consult Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, III, IV, 1890-92; Cushing in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Dorsey and Voth in Field Columbian Museum Pub., Anthropol. ser., III, VI, 1901-03; various papers by Fewkes in the reports of the B. A. E., and in Am. Anthropol. and Jour. Am. Folk-lore; Hewett in Bull. 32, B. A. E., 1906; Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 1891; Nordenskiöld, Cliff-dwellers of the Mesa Verde, 1893; Mrs Stevenson in 11th and 23d Reps. B. A. E., 1894 and 1905; Winship in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1896. (F. W. H.)

Kivezaku. A band, apparently of Yuman stock, formerly inhabiting the lower Rio Colorado valley in the present Arizona or California, and who were "conquered, absorbed, or driven out" by the Mohave, according to the tradition of the latter. Kive-za-ku.—Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, II, 185, 1889.

Kivitung. A settlement of Akudnirmiut Eskimo on Padli fjord, Baffin land. Qivitung.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 441, 1888.

Kivualinak. A Kevalingamiut village near Pt Hope, Alaska.

Kivualinagmut.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. Am., pt. I, 74, 1847.

Kiyahani. An Apache clan or band at San Carlos and Ft Apache, Ariz., in 1881.

Ki-ya-hanni.—Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 118, 1890. Ki-ya-jani.—Ibid., 111 (trans. 'alkali').

Kiyis (Ki'yis, 'dried meat'). A division of the Piegan tribe of the Siksika.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 209, 225, 1892.

Kiyuksa ('breakers,' so called because the members broke the marriage law by taking wives within prohibited degrees of kinship). A band of the Mdewakanton Sioux which lived in 1811, according to Pike, in a village on upper Iowa r., under chief Wabasha (Minn. Hist. Coll., II, 17, 1860); in 1820 they were on Mississippi r., above Prairie du Chien (Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. VIII, 1848). Long, in 1824, placed them in two villages, one on Iowa r. near the Mississippi, the other on L. Pepin. Their chief village was Winona, on the site of Winona, Minn., in 1858, and the other was where Wabasha is now.

Bounding-Wind.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 144, note, 1858 (English for Tatepsin, the name of the chief). Keoxa.—Long, Exped. St. Peter's R., I, 383, 1824. Ki-gu-ksa.—Smithson. Misc. Col., XIV, 7, 1878. Kiyu-ksa.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 81, 1850. Kiyuksan.—Williamson in Minn. Geol. Rep. for 1884, 112. La Feuille's band.—Long in Minn. Hist. Coll., II, 24, 1860. Ta-te-psin.—Neill, Hist. Minn., 144, note, 1858. Wabasha's band.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 90, 22d Cong., 1st sess., 64, 1832. Wabashaw band.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 282, 1854. Wabashaw's sub-band of Mede-wakant'wans.—Ramsey in Ind. Aff. Rep., 81, 1850. Wabushaw.—Prescott in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 169, 1852. Wa-ha-shaw's tribe.—U. S. Ind. Treaties (1836), 875, 1873. Wapasha's band.—Riggs, Dak. Gram. and Dict., 131, 1852. Wapashaw.—Neill, Hist. Minn., xlv, 1858 (chief's name). Wapashaw's village.—Throcmorton (1832) quoted by Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. v, 155, 1848. Wa-pa-shee.—Smithson. Misc. Col., XIV, art. 6, 8, 1878. Wapatha.—Warren in Minn. Hist. Coll., V., 156, 1885. Wind people.—Dorsey in Am. Natur., 115, 1884.

Kiyuksa. A division of the Upper Yanktonai Sioux.

Kee-ark-sar.—Corliss, Lacotah MS. vocab., B. A. E., 106, 1874. Kee-uke-sah.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 34, 1806; Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 99, 1905. Ku-ux-aws.—Prescott in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 169, 1852.

Kiyuksa. A division of the Brulé Teton Sioux.—Dorsey (after Cleveland) in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 219, 1897.

Kiyuksa. A division of the Oglala Teton Sioux.

Breakers of the custom.—Robinson, letter to Dorsey, 1879. Cut Offs.—Brackett in Smithson. Rep. 1876, 467, 1877. Ke-ax-as.—Ibid. Kiocieses.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 250, 1875. Kiyuksa.—Robinson (1880) quoted by Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 220, 1897. Zuzeca kiyaksa.—Cleveland (1884), ibid. (= 'bit the snake in two'). Zuzetca-kiyaksa.—Ibid.

Klahosaht. A Nootka tribe formerly living N. of Nootka sd., Vancouver id. (Sproat, Sav. Life, 308, 1869). Boas was unable to learn anything about them, but the name seems to occur in Jewitt's Narrative as the designation of a small tribe that had been "conquered and incorporated into that of Nootka."

Klahars.—Jewitt, Narr., 74, 1849. Klahosaht.—Sproat, Sav. Life, 308, 1869. Tlahosath.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 31, 1890.

Klahum. An Okinagan village where Astor's old fort stood, at the mouth of Okinakan r., Wash.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., 1, 413, 1855.

Klaaamu (K'la-ka-a'-mu). A former Chumashan village on Santa Cruz id., off the coast of California, E. of Punta del Diablo.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Klalakamish (Kla-la'-ka-mish). An extinct band of Lummi that resided on the E. side of San Juan id., N. W. Wash.—Gibbs, Clallam and Lummi, 39, 1863.

Klamaskwaltin. A Kaiyuhkhotana village on the N. bank of Yukon r., Alaska, near the mouth of Kaiyuh r.

Klamaskwaltin.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Klamasqualtin.—Coast Survey cited by Baker, ibid.

Klamath (possibly from máklaks, the Lutuami term for 'Indians,' 'people,'

KLAMATH MEDICINE-MAN

'community'; lit. 'the encamped'). A Lutuamian tribe in S. W. Oregon. They call themselves Eukshikni or Auksni, 'people of the lake,' referring to the fact that their principal seats were on Upper Klamath lake. There were also important settlements on Williamson and Sprague rs. The Klamath are a hardy people and, unlike the other branch of the family, the Modoc, have always lived at peace with the whites. In 1864 they joined the Modoc in ceding the greater part of their territory to the United States and settled on Klamath res., where they numbered 755 in 1905, including, however, many former slaves and members of other tribes who have become more or less assimilated with the Klamath since the establishment of the reservation. Slavery was a notable institution among the Klamath, and previous to the treaty of 1864 they accompanied the Modoc every year on a raid against the Achomawi of Pit r., Cal., for the capture of women and children whom they retained as slaves or bartered with the Chinook at The Dalles. The Klamath took no part in the Modoc war of 1872-73, and it is said that their contemptuous treatment of the Modoc was a main cause of the dissatisfaction of the latter with their homes on the reservation which led to their return to Lost r. and thus to the war. The following are the Klamath settlements and divisions so far as known: Awalokaksaksi, Kohashti, Kulshetgeush, Kuyamskaiks, Nilakshi, Shuyakekshi, Yaaga, and Yulalona. See also Kumbatuash. Consult Gatschet, Klamath Inds., Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, 1890. (L. F.)

Aigspaluma.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. I, xxxiii, 1890 ('people of the chipmunks': Sahaptin name for all Indians on Klamath res. and vicinity; abbreviated to Aigspalo, Aikspalu). Alámmimakt ish.—Ibid., xxxiv (said to be the Achomawin name). Athlameth.—Ibid. (Calapooya name). Auksiwash.—Ibid. (so called in Yreka dialect of Shasta). Auksni.—Ibid. (abbr. of Eukshikni). A'-ushkni.—Ibid., pt. II, 31. Clamaths.—Lee and Frost, Oregon, 177, 1844. Clamets.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., VI, 218, 1846. Clamouths.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, map, 1836. Clamuth.—Johnson and Winter, Rocky Mts., 47, 1846. Clamuts.—White, Ten Years in Oregon, 259, 1850. Climath.—Spaulding in H. R. Rep. 830, 27th Cong., 2d sess., 59, 1842. Eukshikni.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. I, xxxiv, 1890 (abbr. of the following). Eukshik-ni máklaks.—Ibid. (own name: 'people at the lake'). Eukskni.—Ibid. (abbr. of Eukshikni). E'-ushkni.—Ibid., pt. II, 31. Ilamatt.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 7, 1848 (misprint of Hale's Tlamati). Kalmaths.—Dyar (1873) in H. R. Rep. 183, 44th Cong., 1st sess., 4, 1876 (misprint). Klamacs.—Duflot de Mofras, Explor. dans l'Oregon, II, 335, 1844. Klamaks.—Ibid., 357. Klamat.—Palmer, Rocky Mts., 103, 1852. Klamath Lake Indians.—Steele in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1864, 121, 1865. Klamaths.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860. Klamatk.—Gatschet misquoted in Congrès Internat. des Amér., IV, 284, 1881. Klameth.—Stanley in Smithsonian Misc. Coll., II, 59, 1852. Klamets.—Farnham, Trav., 112, 1843. Klawmuts.—Meek in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 10, 1848. Makaitserk.—Gatschet, op. cit., II, pt. I, xxxiv, 1890 (so called by western Shasta). Muck-alucs.—Powers quoted by Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 351, 1882. Muk'-a-luk.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 254, 1877. Okshee.—Steele in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1864, 121, 1865. Ouk-skenah.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 22, 1860. Plaikni.—Gatschet, op. cit., II, pt. I, xxxv, 1890 (collective name for Klamath, Modoc, and Snakes on Sprague r.). Sáyi.—Ibid., xxiv (Snake name). Tapaaáji.—Curtin, Ilmawi MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1889 (Ilmawi name). Thlamalh.—Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocab., 118, 1884. Tlamath.—Ruxton, Adventures, 244, 1848. Tlamati.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., VI, 218, 1846. Tlameth.—Thompson in Ind. Aff. Rep., 490, 1854.

Klamatuk. An old village, probably belonging to the Comox, on the E. coast of Vancouver id., opposite the S. end of Valdes id.

Kla-ma-took.—Dawson, Geol. Surv. Can., map, 1888.

Klaskino ('people of the ocean'). A Kwakiutl tribe on Klaskino inlet, N. W. coast of Vancouver id.; pop. 13 in 1888, when last separately enumerated.

Klarkinos.—Can. Ind. Aff., 145, 1879. Klās'-kaino.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 65. Klass-ki-no.—Can. Ind. Aff., 189, 1884. Lā'sq'ēnox.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 329, 1897. Lā'sq'ēnox.—Boas in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., v, pt. 2, 354, 1902. Tla'sk'ēnoq.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 53, 1890. Tlats'ēnoq.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887 (misprint).

Klātānars. A band of Cowichan on Fraser r., Brit. Col. Pop. 36 in 1886, when last enumerated separately.

Klātānars.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1886, 229. Klātāwars.—Ibid. for 1879, 309.

Klatlawas. An ancient Clallam village on Puget sd., Wash. Its inhabitants participated in the treaty of Point no Point, Jan. 26, 1855.

Klatāwas.—Gibbs, Clallam and Lummi, 20, 1863.

Klat-la-wash.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1855), 800, 1873.

Klatwoat. A village on the W. bank of Harrison r., near its junction with Fraser r., Brit. Col.—Brit. Col. map, Ind. Aff., Victoria, 1872.

Klawak. The principal town of the Henya Tlingit on the W. coast of Prince of Wales id., Alaska. It is now inhabited largely by Haida. Pop. 261 in 1890, 131 in 1900.

Chla-wāk-kōn.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 111, 1885 (kōn=people). Klawak.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 3, 1893. Ĥawa'k.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Thlewāk'h.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., map, 1855.

Klchakuk. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on the E. side of the entrance to Kuskokwim bay, Alaska; pop. 18 in 1880, 49 in 1890.

Klahangamut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Klchakuk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kl-changamute.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 53, 1881.

Kleaukt (Klāu'kt, 'rocky bar'). A village of the Ntlakyapamuk on Fraser r., below North Bend, Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 5, 1899.

Kleguchek. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village in Alaska, at the mouth of Kuskokwim r. on the right bank.

Kleguchek.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Klegutshégamut.—Kilbuck (1898) quoted by Baker, ibid.

Klemiaksac.—A Chinookan village on Columbia r., Oreg., 25 m. below The Dalles.

Kle-miak-sac.—Lee and Frost, Oregon, 176, 1844.

Klikitat (Chinookan: 'beyond,' with reference to the Cascademts.). A Shahaptian tribe whose former seat was at the headwaters of the Cowlitz, Lewis, White Salmon, and Klikitat rs., N. of Columbia r., in Khlekítat and Skamania cos., Wash. Their eastern neighbors were the Yakima, who speak a closely related language, and on the W. they were met by various Salishan and Chinookan tribes. In 1805 Lewis and Clark reported them as wintering on Yakima and Klikitat rs., and estimated their number at about 700. Between 1820 and 1830 the tribes of Willamette valley were visited by an epidemic of fever and greatly reduced in numbers. Taking advantage of their weakness, the Klikitat crossed the Columbia and forced their way as far S. as the valley of the Umpqua. Their occupancy of this territory was temporary, however, and they were speedily compelled to retire to their old seat N. of the Columbia. The Klikitat were always active and enterprising traders, and from their favorable position became widely known as intermediaries between the coast tribes and those living E. of the Cascade range. They joined in the Yakima treaty at Camp Stevens, Wash., June 9, 1855, by which they ceded their lands to the United States. They are now almost wholly on Yakima res., Wash.; where they have become so merged with related tribes that an accurate estimate of their number is impossible. Of the groups still recognized on that reservation the Topinish are probably their nearest relatives (Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 738, 1896) and may be regarded as a branch of the Klikitat, and the Taitinapam, speaking the same tongue, as another minor branch. One of the settlements of the Klikitat was Wiltkun.

KLIKITAT WOMAN. (SHACKELFORD COLL.)

(L. F.)

Awī-adshī.—Gatschet, Molalla MS., B. A. E., 27, 1877 (Molalla name). Chick-atat.—Lee and Frost, Oregon, 176, 1844. Chickitats.—Lane in Sen. Ex. Doc. 52, 21st Cong., 1st sess., 171, 1850. Chit-ahut.—Noble in H. R. Ex. Doc., 37, 54th Cong., 3d sess., 109, 1857. Chit-at-hut.—Ibid., 111. Chick-ahut.—Robie in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1857, 351, 1858. Chickatat.—Lee and Frost, Oregon, 99, 1844. Chicketats.—Armstrong, Oregon, 106, 1857. Chickitats.—Lane in

Ind. Aff. Rep., 160, 1850. Klikatats.—Stevens in Sen. Ex. Doc. 66, 34th Cong., 1st sess., 43, 1856. Halthwyppum.—Cooles, Henry and Thompson Jour., 827, 1897. Kanatat.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 418, 1865. Klachatah.—Nicolay, Oregon, 143, 1846. Klackatacks.—Wilkes, U. S. Expl. Exped., IV, 325, 1845. Klackatacks.—Slocum (1835) in H. R. Rep. 101, 25th Cong., 3d sess., 41, 1839. Klakatacks.—Farnham, Trav., 112, 1843. Kleketat.—Scouler (1846) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 231, 1848. Klicatat.—Parker, Jour., 238, 1840. Klickataats.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., 173, 1859. Klick-a-tacks.—Catlin, N. Am. Ind., II, 113, 1866. Klickatates.—De Smet, Letters, 231, 1843. Klickatats.—Swan, Northwest Coast, 324, 1857. Klickitats.—Lyman in Oregon Hist. Soc. Quar., I, 170, 1900. Klikalats.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, 14, 1848. Klikatat.—Townsend, Narr., 174, 1839. Kliketan.—Scouler (1846) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 237, 1848. Kliketat.—Scouler in Jour. Geog. Soc. Lond., I, 225, 1841. Klikitats.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1856, 17, 1857. Kliquitat.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1871, 131, 1872. Kli'ka-tat.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 738, 1896. Klik-ha'-tāt.—Dorsey, Alsea MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884 (Alsea name). Lewis River Band.—Milroy in Ind. Aff. Rep., 164, 1881. Lūk-a-ta-t.—McCaw, Puyallup MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885 (Puyallup name). Māhane.—Gatschet, Umpqua MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1887 (Umpqua name). Mi-clau'q-teu-wūn'-ti.—Dorsey, Alsea MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884 ('scalpers'; Alsea name). Mūn-an'-nē-qu'jūnnē.—Dorsey, Naltunnetunne MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884 ('inland people'; Naltunnetunne name). North Dale Indians.—Meek in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 10, 1848. Qwā'ih-hwai-pūm.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 738, 1896 ('prairie people'; own name). Rea Ratacks.—Slocum in Sen. Doc. 24, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 15, 1838. Roil-roil-pam.—Pandory in Shea, Lib. Am. Ling., VI, 7, 1862. Shlakatats.—Belcher, Voy., I, 307, 1843. Tlakai'-tat.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E., 1877 (Okinagan name). Tlakatat.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., VI, 569, 1846. Tlickitacks.—Stanley in Smithson. Misc. Coll., II, 63, 1852. Tlikatat.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 241, 1877. Trile Kalets.—Warre and Vavasour (1845) in Martin, Hudson's Bay Ter., 80, 1849. Tsē 'la'kayāt amim.—Gatschet, La'kmiut MS., B. A. E., 105 (Kalapuya name). Tuwa'-nxa-iko.—Boas, Kathlamet Texts, 236, 1901 (Clatsop name). Vancouvers.—Dart in Ind. Aff. Rep., 215, 1851. Wahnookit.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Cowlit name). White River Indians.—Shaw in H. R. Ex. Doc. 37, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 112, 1857. Whulwhaipum.—Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocab. Brit. Col., 78, 1884. Whulwhypum.—Lord, Naturalist in Brit. Col., 245, 1866.

Kliksiwi (lix'si'wē), 'clover root at mouth of river.'—Boas. A former Kwakwaka'wakw village at the mouth of Kliksiwi r., on the E. side of Vancouver id. All traces of it have disappeared.

Klik-si-wi.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 72. lix'si'wē.—Boas, inf'n, 1905.

Klimmim. A former Chehalis village on the N. shore of Grays harbor, Wash. Klimmim.—Gibbs, MS., no. 248, B. A. E. Weh-tamich.—Ibid.

Klinkwan (Tlingit: Einqod'n, 'shellfish town') or 'town where they split yellow cedar bark into long strings [fān]'. A Haida town, occupied by the Yaku-lanas, on Cordova bay, Prince of Wales id., Alaska. In John Work's list (1836-41) 26 houses and 417 inhabitants are assigned to a town called Click-ass. This is a camping place near Klinkwan, and the Klinkwan people are evidently intended. Petroff gives the population in 1880-81 as 125, and the census of 1890 as 19. (J. R. S.)

Chlen-kō-ān hādē.—Krause, Tlinkit Indianer, 304, 1885. Kliarakans.—Halleck quoted by Morris, Res. of Alaska, 67, 1879. Kliavakans.—Halleck quoted by Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 562, 1870. Klinkwan.—U. S. Coast Survey, map of Alaska, s. E. section. Klinquan.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 31, 1893. Kliuquan.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884. Tlinkwan Haade.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Royal Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895.

Klinquit. One of the bands or tribes taking part in the Yakima treaty of 1855 (U. S. Stat., XII, 951, 1863). They are not otherwise identifiable, and should not be confounded with the Tlingit.

Klikohtl (Kl-kōh'tl). The Chehalis name for an ancient village on the S. side of Grays harbor, Wash.—Gibbs, MS. no. 248, B. A. E.

Klochwatone. Mentioned as a Tlingit family under the leadership of Anna-hootz, residing in and near Sitka, Alaska, and consisting of 200 people in about 40 families. The name is said to mean 'warriors,' but in all probability it is a corruption of tū'koa-hit-tān, 'people of the house on the point.' A house of this name stood on the point at Sitka, where Baranoff's fort was afterward built. It belonged to the Kiksadi and not to Anna-hootz's people, therefore possibly the word is corrupted from Goch-hit-tān ('wolf house people'), to whom Anna-hootz belonged. (J. R. S.)

Klochwatone.—Beardslee in Sen. Ex. Doc. 105, 46th Cong., 1st sess., 31, 1880. Kluckwatone.—Ibid., 32. Kluckwatone.—Ibid.

Klodessettine ('hay river people'). A division of the Etchareottine on Hay r., Mackenzie Ter., Canada. In 1904 there were 247 enumerated on the upper and 115 on the lower river.

Gens de la rivière au Foin.—Petitot, Dict. Dènè-Dindjé, xx, 1876. Slaves of Lower Hay River.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1904, pt. 2, 82, 1905. Slaves of Upper Hay River.—Ibid.

Klogi. A Navaho clan, named from an old pueblo.

Klogi.—Matthews in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 103, 1890. Klogisine.—Ibid (fine='people'). Klogi'ine'.—Matthews, Navaho Legends, 30, 1897. Klogini.—Bourke, Moquis of Ariz., 279, 1884.

Klokadakaydn ('arrow reed'). An Apache clan or band at San Carlos agency and Ft Apache, Ariz., in 1875-81.

Clo-kar-da-ki-ein.—White, Apache Names for Ind. Tribes, MS., B. A. E., 1875. Klokadakaydn.—Bourke in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 111, 1890. Klugaducayn.—Ibid., 112.

Klokegettine ('prairie people'). A Nahane division living between Mackenzie r. and lakes La Martre, Grandin, and Taché, Mackenzie Ter., Canada.

Klō-kkē-Gottinē.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 362, 1891. Klō-kkē-ottinē.—Petitot, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1865. Kl'o-ke-ottinē.—Ibid. Thlo-co-chassies.—Campbell quoted by Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can., 200b, 1889. Tpōtēne.—Morse, MS. letter, 1890 (Takulli name). Tpō-to-na.—Ibid. (trans. 'grass people').

Klondike (el dorado, a rich strike, a fortune). This word, which entered the English language of America during the Alaskan gold fever of 1898-1900, is the name of a tributary of the Yukon in extreme N. W. Canada. Klondike is a corruption of the name of this stream in one of the Athapascan dialects prevailing in that region. In the literature of the day, 'Klondiker,' and even 'to Klondike,' also occur. Of the name Baker (Geog. Dict. Alaska, 244, 1902) says: "This [Klondike] river was named Deer river by the Western Union Telegraph Expedition, in 1867, and so appeared on various maps. Later it was called Raindeer and afterwards Reindeer. Ogilvie, writing September 6, 1896, from Cudahy, says: 'The river known here as the Klondike'; and in a footnote says: 'The correct name is Thron Duick.' It has also been called Clondyke and Chandik, or Deer." (A. F. C.)

Kloo (Xe-u, 'southeast,' the name of a town chief). A former Haida town at the E. end of Tanoo id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It was one of the largest towns in the Haida country and was occupied by three families, the Kona-kegawai, Djiguahl-lanas, and Kadusgo-kegawai, to the first of which the town chief belonged. John Work (1836-41) assigned 40 houses and 545 inhabitants to this town; old people still remember 26 houses. Although abandoned, the houses and poles here are in better condition than in most uninhabited Haida villages. (J. R. S.)

Clew.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1894, 280, 1895. Cloo.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 489, 1855 (after Work, 1836-41). Kloo.—Common geographic form. Klue.—Poole, Queen Charlotte Ids., passim, 1872. Klue's Village.—Dawson, Queen Charlotte Ids., 169, 1880 (so called from chief). Lay-skik.—Ibid. (Chimmeyan name; Lazsk-izek = 'those of the Eagle clan'). Tanó.—Boas in 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 25, 1898. Tanoo.—Dawson, op. cit. (own name; the name of a kind of sea grass). Tanū Hāadē.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., 125, 1895. Tlu.—Ibid.

Kloo. A temporary settlement on the N. side of Cumshewa inlet, occupied by Haida from the older town of Kloo for a few years before they passed on to Skidegate. (J. R. S.)

Klothchetunne (K'loč-tčē'-pānnē). A Chastacosta village on or in the vicinity of Rogue r., Ore. —Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 234, 1890.

Kltlase (Qlūd'sen). A Songish band at McNeill bay, S. end of Vancouver id. —Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 17, 1890.

Kluckhaitkwu. A band of Okanagan formerly living at the falls of Okinakane r., Wash.

Kluck-hait-kwee.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 445, 1854. Kluckhaitkwu.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 412, 1855.

Klughugue. Given as a Huna village on Chichagof id., but probably identical with the Chlūl-chágu of Krause, which he places on the mainland opposite. It is perhaps also identical with Tlushashakian (q. v.). Pop. 108 in 1880.

Chlūl-chágu.—Krause, Thinkit Ind., 104, 1885. Klughugue.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 31, 1884.

Klukuuk (from Lowú'q, 'slides,' applied to places where gravel, small stones, or sand slides or falls down). A village of the Spences Bridge band of the Ntlakya-pamuk, on Nicola r., 8 m. from Spences Bridge, Brit. Col.

Klūklū'uk.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 4, 1899. Lo'owú'q.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 173, 1900.

Klukwan ('old and celebrated place'). The principal Chilkat village on Chilkat r., 20 m. from its mouth. Indian pop. in 1890, 320.

Klokwan.—Willard, Life in Alaska, 78, 1884. Klakwan.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 3, 1893. Klokwan.—Krause, Thinkit Ind., 100, 1885. Kluckquan.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 31, 1884. Lák'w'an.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Klumaitumsh. Given by Gibbs (MS., B. A. E., ca. 1858) as the Chehalis name for an ancient village on the S. side of Grays harbor, Wash., but according to Boas it is an island near the entrance to Grays harbor. Lewis and Clark, in 1805, spoke of it as a tribe of about 260 people in 12 houses.

Clamochtomichs.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., II, 119, 1814. Clamootomichs.—Ibid., 474. Clamootomichs.—Domenech, Deserts, I, 441, 1860. Clam-mootomick's.—Orig. Jour. Lewis and Clark, VI, 118, 1905. Clam-moi-to-micks.—Ibid., 70. Clamootonish.—Lewis and Clark, Reize, II, 350, 1817. LEMÁ'ITEmc.—Boas, inf'n, 1905.

Klutak. An Eskimo village in the Kuskokwim district, Alaska; pop. 21 in 1890.

Klutagmiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Knaeto. A former Iroquois, probably Seneca, village on the N. bank of Chemung r., N. Y. —Pouchot, map (1758) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 694, 1858.

Knaiahotana. An Athapascan tribe inhabiting Kenai penin., Alaska, the basins of Knik and Sushitna rs., and the shores of Iliamna and Cook lakes. It is the only northern Athapascan tribe occupying any large portion of the seacoast. They came in contact with the Russians at an early date and were subjugated only after much fighting; a permanent trading settlement was established in 1792 by Zaikoff and Lastochkin, and in 1793 missionaries settled on Cook inlet. In the latter year Baranoff brought 30 convicts to teach agriculture to the people of Kenai penin.; the natives attacked him during his explorations, but were repulsed, the Russians losing 11 men. Father Juvenati in 1796 attempted to suppress polygamy among the natives, but was killed while preaching near Iliamna lake. Hostilities were resumed against Baranoff in 1801. An attempt to explore the region N. of Cook inlet was made in 1816 by the Russian-American Co., and in 1819 they had 4 settlements on Cook inlet. In 1838 an epidemic of small-pox carried off nearly half the native population. In 1861 Kenai penin. was designated one of the 7 missionary districts of the Russian church. The Knaiahotana are taller and darker than their Eskimo neighbors, but their customs differ little from those of the neighboring tribes. Hunting and fishing are the chief occupations, birch-bark canoes being used for river journeys in the interior, while for coast voyages bidarkas are purchased from the Eskimo.

The Knaiakhotana are the most civilized of all the northern Athapascan tribes. They use dogs mainly for hunting, not harnessing them to their sleds even in the long journeys they perform in winter from one trapping ground to another. Occasionally in summer dogs are employed as pack animals. Their log houses are more solidly and warmly built than those of the moving Kutchin tribes; they are divided into an outer room for cooking and rough labor, and an inner sleeping apartment, floored and ceiled, lighted through a pane of glass or gut, and impenetrable to the outer air. In some villages the bedroom is used as a bathroom, being then heated with red-hot stones; but most villages have a bath hut or two. In the more primitive villages on the Sushitna and Knik rs. is found the old communal log house, occupied by several families, each having its separate sleeping apartment connected with the central structure by a hole in the wall. Provisions are kept out of the reach of dogs in a storehouse built of logs and elevated on posts (11th Census, Alaska, 167, 1893).

They bury their dead in wooden boxes, in which they put also the property of the deceased, and pile stones upon the grave. They express grief by smearing their faces with black paint, singeing their hair, and lacerating their bodies. Most of their clothing is made of the skin of the mountain goat, which they kill in large numbers. Their language is extremely guttural, compared with that of the Eskimo (Dall, Alaska, 430, 1870).

Richardson (Arct. Exped., I, 406, 1851) stated that the Knaiakhotana have two phratries, one containing 6 and the other 5 clans. The clans, according to their mythology, are descended from two women made by the raven, and are as follows: 1, Kachgiya (The Raven); 2, Tlachana (Weavers of Grass Nets); 3, Montochtana (A Corner in the Back Part of the Hut); 4, Tschichgi (Color); 5, Nuchsch (Descended from Heaven); 6, Kali (Fishermen). 1, Tultschina (Bathers in Cold Water); 2, Katluchtna (Lovers of Glass Beads); 3, Schischlachtana (Deceivers Like the Raven); 4, Nutschichgi; 5, Zaltana (Mountain). Hoffman (Ajaluxamut MS., B. A. E., 1882) gives the following Chugachigmiut names for divisions of the Knaiakhotana: 1, Kankaligamut (People Close to the River); 2, Maltshokamut (Valley People); 3, Nanualikmut (People Around the Lake). The same authority (Kadiak MS., B. A. E., 1882) gives the Kaniagmiut names for 5 divisions: 1, Nanualuk (=Nanualikmut); 2, Kuinruk (Sea-hunting People); 3, Tuinuk (=Tyonok, Marsh People); 4, Knikamut (=Knik, Fire-signal People); 5, Tigikpuk (People Living at the Base of a Volcano).

The Knaiakhotana villages are Chinila, Chuitna, Kasilof, Kasnatchin, Kenai, Kilchik, Knakatnuk, Knik, Kultuk, Kustatan, Nikhkak, Nikishka, Ninilchik, Nitak, Skilak, Skittok, Sushitna, Titukilsk, Tyonok, Tyonok, and Zdluiat.

The natives of Cook inlet in 1818 numbered 1,471, of whom 723 were males and 748 females. Baron Wrangell, in 1825, gave their population as 1,299, the females being slightly in excess. In 1839 Veniaminof made the number 1,628, and in 1860 the Holy Synod gave 937, declaring that the natives had become Christians. At the acquisition of Alaska by the United States in 1868, Gen. Halleck and Rev. Vincent Colyer erroneously estimated the Knaiakhotana at 25,000 (Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 40, 1884). The population in 1880 consisted of 614 natives, and in 1890 they numbered 724 (11th Census, Alaska, 158, 1893).

Ilyamna people.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 164, 1884. Kaitana.—De Meulen, Kenay MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1870. Kaneskies.—Colyer in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 553, 1870. Kanisky.—Ibid., 575. Kankuna.—Staffeleit and Petroff, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885. Kankunats kōgtana.—Ibid. Kenai.—Gallatin in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 401, 1853. Kenaians.—Terry in Rep. Sec. War, pt. I, 41, 1869. Kenais.—Scouler in Jour. Geog. Soc. Lond., I, 218, 1841. Kenai-tena.—Dall, Alaska, 490, 1870. Kenaitses.—Pinart in Rev. de Philol. et d'Ethnogr., no. 2, I, 1875. Kenaitze.—Ludwig quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 35, 1877. Kenayer.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 401, 1851. Kenai-yut.—Ibid. (Kaniagmiut name adopted by Russians). Kenaze.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 116, 1874. Kenazen.—Balbi, Atlas Ethnog., 855, 1826. Kenajer.—Erman, Archiv, VII, 128, 1849. Kenas.—Domenech, Deserts N. Am., I, 442, 1860. Kenay.—Latham in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 160, 1841. Kenayern.—Wrangell in Baer and Helmersen, Beiträge, I, 103, 1839. Kenayzi.—Humboldt, Essai Politi., I, 347, 1811. Kiatenses.—Lutke, Voyage, I, 181, 1835 (probably identical). Kinatzi.—Priehard, Phys. Hist., v, 441, 1847. Kinai.—Vater, Mithridates, III, 230, 1816. Kinaitsa.—Balbi, Atlas Ethnog., 1826. Kinaitze.—Vater, op. cit., 229. Kinaitz.—Balbi, op. cit. Kinaizi.—Vater, op. cit., 228. Kinajut.—Wrangell in Baer and Helmersen, Beiträge, I, 103, 1839 (Kaniagmiut name). Kinats.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 25, 1884. Kinnats-Khotana.—Ibid., 162. Kinnatz-kokhtana.—Ibid., 164. K'na'i-a-kho-ta'na.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 35, 1877. Knaina.—Wrangell in Baer and Helmersen, Beiträge, I, 103, 1839. Knaikhotana.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 158, 1893. Koht-ana.—Liziansky, MS. vocab., B. A. E. Ougagliakmuzzi-Kinaia.—Balbi, Atlas Ethnog., 1826. Taas nei.—Doroshchin in Radloff, Wörterbuch, 29, 1874 (Tenankutchin name). Tasne.—Pinart in Rev. de Philol. et d'Ethnogr., no. 2, 6, 1875 (Tenankutchin name). Tehanin-Kutchin.—Dall, Alaska, 430, 1870 (Kaiyuhkhotana name). Tenahna.—Holmberg (1855) quoted by Dall in Proc. A. A. S., 1869, 270, 1870. Tenaina.—Radloff, Wörterbuch, 29, 1874 (own name). Tanaina.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 6, 1855. Tinaina.—Hoffman, Kadiak MS., B. A. E., 1882. Tinina.—Hoffman, Ajaluxamut MS., B. A. E., 1882. Tinnats.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 25, 1884. Tinnats-Khotana.—Ibid., 162. Tinnatz-Kokhtana.—Ibid., 164 (own name). Tnac.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 539, 1878.

Tnai.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., 1, 35, 1877.
Tnaina.—Wrangell in Baer and Helmersen, Beitrage, 1, 103, 1839 (derived from tnai, 'man').
Tnaina Ttnai.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, 1, 116, 1874.
True Thnaina.—Holmberg quoted by Dall, Alaska, 430, 1870.

Knakatnuk. A Knaiakhotana village and trading post of 35 natives in 1880 on the w. side of Knik bay, at the head of Cook inlet, Alaska.

Knakatnuk.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884. Knik Station.—Post route map, 1903.

Knatsomita (Knäts-o-mi'-ta, 'all crazy dogs'). A society of the Ikunuhkahtsi, or All Comrades, in the Piegan tribe; it is composed of men about 40 years of age.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 221, 1892.

K'nick K'neck. See Kinnikinnick.

Knik (Eskimo: 'fire,' a name given by the Eskimo of Kodiak because, having no seaworthy boats of their own, they signaled for other tribes across the bay to send aid). A Knaiakhotana settlement of several villages on Knik r., at the head of Cook inlet, Alaska. The chief village had 46 people in 1880 (Petroff, 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884); in 1900 the population was 160 in 31 houses. This branch of the tribe numbers altogether between 200 and 300, who obtain their subsistence by hunting and trapping and by bartering with the Ahtena, who bring fur skins over the divide between Knik and Copper rs. every winter and stay weeks or months with the Knik, who through this trade obtain the clothing, utensils, and even luxuries of the whites. Their houses are built above ground of logs tightly calked with moss and covered with bark (11th Census, Alaska, 70, 1893). They use the birch-bark canoe on the inland rivers, but purchase skin bidarkas of the Kenai or Nikishka people to fish and travel along the coast.

Knik.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884.
Kinnick.—Petroff, ibid., 39. K'niq'a-müt.—Hoffman, Kodiak MS., B. A. E., 1882.

Knives. Cutting tools are indispensable to primitive men, and the greatest ingenuity was exercised by the northern tribes in their manufacture. Every ma-were artificially sharpened, and natural forms were modified to make them more effectual. The uses of the knife are innumerable; it served in war and was in-

OBSIDIAN CEREMONIAL
BLADE, 21 IN. LONG;
CALIFORNIA. (HOLMES)

OBSIDIAN KNIFE WITH HANDLE OF OTTER SKIN, 7 1/4 IN. LONG;
CALIFORNIA. (MASON)

dispensable in every branch of the arts of life, in acquiring raw materials, in preparing them for use, and in shaping whatever was made. Knives served also JASPER BLADE, 8 3/4 IN.

LONG; CALIFORNIA.
(WILSON)

FLINT BLADE WITH BEVELED
EDGE (1-2); OKLAHOMA. (HOLMES)

FLINT KNIFE WITH BEVELED
EDGE (1-2); TENNESSEE

WOMAN'S SLATE KNIFE (ULU); ESKIMO (1-4). (MURDOCH)

terial capable of taking and retaining an edge was utilized—wood, reed, bone, antler, shell, stone, and metal. Teeth are nature's cutting tools, and the teeth of animals (shark, beaver, etc.) were much employed by primitive men, as also were sharp bits of stone and splinters of wood and bone, the natural edges of which in symbolism and ceremony, and one of the most cherished symbols of rank and authority was the great stone knife chipped with consummate skill from ob-sidian or flint. According to Culin the stone knife is used among the Pueblos as a symbol of divinity, especially of the war gods, and is widely used in a healing ceremony called the "knife ceremony."

WOMAN'S SLATE KNIFE (1-4); ESKIMO. (MURDOCH)

Differentiation of use combined with differences in material to give variety to the blade and its hafting; the so-called ulu, or woman's knife of the Eskimo, employed in various culinary arts, differs from the man's knife, which is used in carving wood and for various other purposes (Mason); and the bone snow knife of the Arctic regions is a species by itself (Nelson). The copper knife is distinct from the stone knife, and the latter takes a multitude of forms, passing from the normal types in one direction into the club or mace, in another into the scraper, and in another into the dagger; and it blends with the arrowhead and the spearhead so fully that no definite line can be drawn between them save when the complete

IRON KNIFE WITH WOODEN HANDLE (1-5); MAKAH

KNIFE OF NEPHRITE (1-6); ESKIMO. (NELSON)

KNIFE WITH BONE HANDLE; CALIFORNIA. (SMITH)

haft is in evidence. The flaked knife blade of flint is straight like a spearhead or is curved like a hook or sickle, and it is frequently beveled on one or both edges. The ceremonial knife is often of large size and great beauty. Certain Tennessee flint blades, believed to be of this class, though very slender, measure upward of 2 ft in length, while the beautiful red and black obsidian blades of California are hardly less noteworthy. Speaking of the latter, Powers says: "I have seen several which were 15 in.

CEREMONIAL KNIFE, LENGTH 24 1/2 IN.; KWAKWITL. (BOAS) or more in length and about 2 1/2 in. wide in the widest part. Pieces as large as these are carried lifted in the hands in the dance, wrapped with skin or cloth to prevent the rough edges from lacerating the hands, but the smaller ones are mounted in wooden handles and glued fast. The large ones can not be purchased at any price." See Implements.

Two or three tribes of Indians, various clans, and some towns received their names from the knife, as Conshac ('reed knife'), a name for the Creeks; the town of Kusa among the Choc-taw, and the Nlakyapamak of Thompson r., Brit. Col.

COPPER KNIFE OR DAGGER; HAIDA. (NIBLACK)

SLATE KNIFE WITH WOODEN HANDLE (1-5); ESKIMO. (MURDOCH)

Consult Boas

(1) in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 1888, (2) in Nat. Mus. Rep. 1895, 1897; Fowke in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 1896; Goddard in Pub. Univ. of Cal., Anthropol. ser., 1, 1903; Holmes in Nat. Mus. Rep. 1901, 1903; Mason (1) in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1890, 1891; (2) ibid., 1897, 1901; (3) ibid., 1886, 1889; Moorehead, Prehist. Impl., 1900; Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892; Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 1899; Niblack in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1888, 1890; Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 1877; Rau in Smithsonian Cont., XXII, 1876; Rust and Kroeber in Am. Anthropol., VII, 688, 1905; Thruston, Antiq. of Tenn., 1897; Wilson in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1897, 1899. (W. H. P.)

Knots. The Indians, and especially the Eskimo, whose difficulties with unfastening lines in a frozen area made them ingenious, tied for various purposes many kinds of knots and splices in bark, stems, roots, sinew thongs, strings, and ropes. There were knots and turk's heads in the ends of lines for buttons and toggles and for fastening work, loops and running nooses for bowstrings and tent fastenings, knots for attaching one line to another or to some object, the knots in netting for fish nets and the webbing in snowshoes and rackets, knots for attaching burdens and for packing and cinching, decorative knots in the dress of both sexes, and memorial knots used in calendars and for registering accounts and in religion. The bight, KNOTS OF THE CENTRAL ESKIMO.

IRON CARVING KNIVES; ESKIMO. (MASON)

(Boas)

seen on Yuman carrying baskets, was universal, and the single, square, and granny knots and the half hitch were also quite common. In 1680 the Pueblo Indians communicated the number of days before their great uprising against the Spaniards by means of a knotted string, and some of their descendants still keep personal calendars by the same means, but in North America the quipu was nowhere so highly developed as it was in Peru. Boas (Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xv, 1901) illustrates the many splices, hitches, loops, and knots of the Eskimo; Murdoch (9th Rep. B. A. E., 1892) has treated the knots used in nets, snowshoes, and sinew-backed bows; Dixon (Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, 1905) shows the knots of the northern Maidu of California; and Mason (Smithson. Rep. for 1893) gives details of those generally used on bows and arrows. (O. T. M.)

Knou (K'nou', 'eagle'). A gens of the Potawatomi, q. v.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 167, 1877.

Knowilamowan. A former Chinookan village 25 m. from The Dalles, on Columbia r., Oreg.

Know-il-a-mow-an.—Lee and Frost, Oregon, 176, 1844.

Koagaogit (Koaga'ogit, 'wide and rushing waters'). A former Haida town on the n. shore of Bearskin bay, Skidegate inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., in possession of the Djahui-gitinaí.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Koakotsalgi (kóá-kótchi 'wildcat,' algi 'people'). A clan of the Creeks.

Koakotsalgi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., 1, 155, 1884. Kú-wá'-ku-che.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1877.

Koalcha (Qōā'lca). A Squawmish village community at Linn cr., Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 475, 1900.

Koalekt (Koā'leqt). A Chehalis village at the headwaters of a w. tributary of Harrison r., in s. w. British Columbia.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1891.

Koanalalis (Koanā'lalis). The ancestor of a Nimkish gens after whom the gens was sometimes named.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 130, 1887.

Koapk (Q'oa'px). One of the Talio towns of the Bellacoola at the head of South Bentineck arm, coast of British Columbia.

K'oa'pq.—Boas in 7th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 3, 1891. Q'oa'px.—Boas in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., ii, 49, 1898.

Koas. Mentioned as a tribe residing with the Hutsnuwu, Chilkat, and others, in Sitka, Alaska (Beardslee in Sen. Ex. Doc. 105, 46th Cong., 1st sess., 31, 1880). It possibly refers to the Kuin, otherwise the name is unidentifiable.

Koasati. An Upper Creek tribe speaking a dialect almost identical with Alibamu and evidently nothing more than a large division of that people. The name appears to contain the word for 'cane' or 'reed,' and Gatschet has suggested that it may signify 'white cane.' During the middle and latter part of the 18th century the Koasati lived, apparently in one principal village, on the right bank of Alabama r., 3 m. below the confluence of the Coosa and Tallapoosa, where the modern town of Coosada, Ala., perpetuates their name; but soon after w. Florida was ceded to Great Britain, in 1763, "two villages of Koasati" moved over to the Tombigbee and settled below the mouth of Sukenatcha cr. Romans and other writers always mention two settlements here, Sukta-loosa and Occhoy or Hychoy, the latter being evidently either Koasati or Alibamu. The Witumka Alibamu moved with them and established themselves lower down. Later the Koasati descended the river to a point a few miles above the junction of the Tombigbee and the Alabama, but, together with their Alibamu associates, they soon returned to their ancient seats on the upper Alabama. A "Coosawda" village existed on Tennessee r., near the site of Langston, Jackson co., Ala., in the early part of the 19th century, but it is uncertain whether its occupants were true Koasati. In 1799 Hawkins stated that part of the Koasati had recently crossed the Mississippi, and Sibley in 1805 informs us that these first settled on Bayou Chicot but 4 years later moved over to the e. bank of Sabine r., 80 m. s. of Natchitoches, La. Thence they spread over much of E. Texas as far as Trinity r., while a portion, or perhaps some of those who had remained in Alabama, obtained permission from the Caddo to settle on Red r. Schermerhorn (Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., ii, 26, 1814) states that in 1812 the Koasati on Sabine r. numbered 600, and in 1820 Morse gave 350 on Red r., 50 on the Neches, 40 m. above its mouth, and 240 on the Trinity, 40 to 50 m. above its mouth. Bollaert (1850) estimated the number of warriors belonging to the Koasati on the lower Trinity as 500, in 2 villages, Colete and Batista. In 1870 50 were in Polk co., Tex., and 100 near Opelousas, La. They were honest, industrious, and peaceful, and still dressed in the Indian manner. Powell (7th Rep. B. A. E., 1891) says that in 1886 there were 4 families of Koasati, of about 25 individuals, near the town of Shepherd, San Jacinto co., Tex. As part of the true Alibamu were in this same region it is not improbable that some of them have been included in the above enumerations. Those of the Koasati who stayed in their original seats and subsequently moved to Indian Territory also remained near the Alibamu for the greater part, although they are found in several places in the Creek Nation, Okla. Two towns in the Creek Nation are named after them. (J. R. S.)

Aguas-saw-tee.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 268, 1851. Coashatay.—Long, Exped. to Rocky Mts., II, 310, 1823. Coashatta.—Pike, Travels, map of La., 1811. Coassattis.—Trumbull in Johnson's Cyclopaedia, II, 1156, 1877. Cochatties.—Le Branche (1839) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 14, 32d Cong., 2d sess., 27, 1853. Colchattas.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 509, 1878. Conchaques.—Iberville (1702) in Margry, Déc., IV, 594, 1880. Conchatas.—Brackenridge, Views of La., 82, 1815. Conchatez.—De l'Isle, map (ca. 1710) in Winsor, Hist. Am., II, 294-295, 1886. Conchati.—d'Anville's map in Hamilton, Colonial Mobile, 158, 1897. Conchattas.—Sibley, Hist. Sketches, 81, 1806. Conchtas.—Lewis and Clark, Journal, 154, 1840. Conshaes.—Romans, Fla., 90, 1775. Conshaes.—Romans misquoted by Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 15, 1848. Conshattas.—Brown, West. Gaz., 152, 1817. Coosadas.—Romans, Fla., I, 332, 1775. Coosadis.—Ibid., 90. Coosauda.—Bartram, Travels, 461, 1791 (town of Tallapoosa; speak the Stincard language). Coo-sau-dee.—Hawkins (1779), Sketch, 35, 1848. Coosawda.—Pickett, Hist. Ala., II, 104, 1851. Coosawda's.—Campbell (1836) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 20, 1838. Coosawder.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 425, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 253, 1836. Cooshates.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1849, 33, 1850. Cooshatties.—Whiteside in Ind. Aff. Rep., 327, 1870. Coosidas.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 115, 1855. Coowarsartdas.—Woodward, Remin., 13, 1859. Coowersortda.—Ibid., 36. Coshattas.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 257, 1822. Coshattees.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 585, 1853. Couchates.—Berquin Duvalon, Travels, 97, 1806. Cousatee.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, 5, 1776 (town on w. bank of Alabama r.). Cousoudee.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1814), 163, 1837. Coussac.—Hutchins, Hist. Narr., 83, 1784 (probably identical). Coussati.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., I, 676, 1786. Coussehate.—Milfort, Mémoire, 265, 1802. Cunhates.—Martin, Hist. La., II, 206, 1827. Cushatees.—Maillard, Hist. Texas, 252, 1842. Cush-eh-tah.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 309, 1851. Cussadies.—Weatherford (1793) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., I, 385, 1832. Cussathates.—Coxe, Carolina, 23, 1741. Cutchates.—Doc. of 1828 in Soc. Geog. Mex., 267, 1870 (live on E. bank of Trinidad (Trinity) r.). Cuzadans.—Rafinesque, introd. Marshall, Ky., I, 24, 1824. Koo a sah te.—Adair, Am. Ind., 169, 1775. Ko-sa-te-ha'-ya.—Dorsey, Biloxi MS. Dict., B. A. E., 1892 (Biloxi name). Quasasda.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1827), 420, 1837. Qua-saw-das.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 279, 1846 (on Canadian r., Ind. Ter). Quesadas.—Gallatin in Trans. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 97, 1836. Queseda.—Scheemmerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Coll., 2d s., II, 18, 1814. Quezedans.—Rafinesque, introd., Marshall, Ky., I, 24, 1824. Sháti.—Popular abbreviation of Koasati in Texas.

Koasati. Two towns of the Creek Nation, both in the s. part of their territory near Canadian r., one a few miles w. of Eufaula, the other w. of Hilabi, Okla.

Koassati.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., II, 185, 1888.

Koatlua (Q'oa'lna). A Bellacoola village on a bay of the same name at the s. entrance of Bentinck arm, coast of British Columbia.

K'oa'tlna.—Boas in 7th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 3, 1891. Q'oa'lna.—Boas in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 48, 1898.

Kocheyali. A former Yokuts tribe that perhaps lived on Kings r., Cal.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906. See Mariposan Family.

Kochinish-yaka. The Yellow-corn clan of the Keresan pueblos of Acoma and Laguna, N. Mex. See Yaka.

Kóchinish-yáka-háno^{ch}.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (Laguna form: yáka = 'corn'; hano^{ch} = 'people'). Kóchinishyáka-háno^{ch}.—Ibid. (Acoma form).

Kochkok. A Chnagmint Eskimo village on the right bank of Yukon r., Alaska, near the Kuskokwim portage.

Kochkogamute.—Raymond (1869) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kokok.—Baker, ibid.

Kodiak. A town on St Paul's harbor, at the e. end of Kodiak id., Alaska, established among the Eskimo by the Russians in 1789 as a center of the fur trade. Pop. 288 in 1880, 495 in 1890, 341 in 1900.

Kadiak.—Bruce, Alaska, map, 1885. Pavlovsky gavan.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 75, 1893 (Russian: 'Paul's harbor'; natives still call it Gavan, 'the harbor'). Saint Paul.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 28, 1884.

Kodlimarn (Qodlimarn). A summersettlement of the Eskimo of the plateau of Nugumiut, on the e. entrance to Frobisher bay, Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Koats. Given as a Ute band or tribe in n. central Nevada, but evidently Paviotso.—Powell in H. R. Ex. Doc. 86, 43d Cong., 1st sess., 1, 1874.

Koeentwakah. See Cornplanter.

Koekoainok (Qoë'qoainóx, 'people from the river Koais'). A gens of the Tenaktak, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 331, 1897.

Koekoi (K'ōē'kōi). A Squawmish village community on the w. side of Howe sd., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Koeksotenok ('people of the other side'). A Kwakiutl tribe on Gifford id., Brit. Col. The gentes are Naknahula, Memoggyins, Gyigyilkam, and Nenelpae. In 1885 they lived with the Mamalelekala in a town called Memkumlis. Kwakwakas was probably a former village. Pop. 50 in 1885, the last time the name appears.

K'wē'k'sot'enok.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 54, 1890. Kwick-so-te-no.—Can. Ind. Aff., 189, 1884. Kwikso'tenok.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 227, 1887. Kwik'-so-tino.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 74. Qoē'xsot'enōx.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 330, 1897. Quick- sul-i-nut.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859. Qwé'q' sôtî'e'nox'.—Boas in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., v, pt. 1, 156, 1902.

Koetas (Q'ô'e'tas, 'earth-eaters'). A family of the Raven clan belonging to the Kaigani or Alaskan branch of Haida. According to the southern Haida they derived their name from the fact that in a legendary Haida town whence all the Ravens came (see Tadji-lanas) they used to live near the trails. The Kaigani themselves, however, say that when they first settled at Hlgan, on the w. coast of Graham id., they were called, from the town, Hlun-staa-lanas (Ḥ'an sta'a lā'nas, 'holding-up-the-fin-town-people'). Afterward they began to cook and eat a plant called hlkunit (tk'u'nit) which grows under the salmon-berry bushes. Some of them then joked at this, saying, "We are even eating earth," hence the name Koetas. On the Alaska mainland their town was Sukkwan. There were 5 subdivisions: Chats-hadai, Huadjinaas-hadai, Nakalas-hadai, Hlka-onedis, and Naden-hadai. (J. R. S.)

K'ô'e'tas.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 22, 1898. Q'ô'e'tas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 272, 1905.

Koetenok (Q'ô'e'tênôk, 'raven'). A clan of the Bellabella, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 328, 1897.

Koga (Qô'ga). A small Haida town formerly on McKay harbor, Cumshewa inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., which was occupied by a family of the same name, of low social rank, who afterward moved to Skedans.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Kogahl-lanas (Qô'gat lā'nas, 'people of the town of Koga'). A small division of the Kagials-kegawai family group of the Haida. They were of low social rank. Their town, called Koga, once stood in McKay harbor, and they are said to have been won in a gambling contest by the Kagials-kegawai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 269, 1905.

Kogals-kun (K'logā'ls kun, 'sand-spit point'). A former Haida town on Masset inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col., occupied by the Aostlan-Inagai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Kogangas (Qogā'ngas, 'sea-otters'). An extinct family group belonging to the Raven clan of the Haida. Their towns stood near the modern town of Skidegate, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. (J. R. S.) K'ô'gā'ngas.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 24, 1898. Qogā'ngas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 269, 1905.

Kogiung. A Kiatagmiut Eskimo village at the mouth of Kvichak r., Bristol bay, Alaska; pop. 29 in 1880, 133 in 1890, 533 in 1900.

Koggiung.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884. Kogiung.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kogluk. A Kaviagmiut village at C. Nome, Alaska.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 162, 1893.

Koguethagechton. See White-eyes.

Kogui (Kô'gûi, 'elks'). A tribal division of the Kiowa.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1079, 1896.

Kohamutkikatska (Creek: kôha 'cane', mât'ki 'cut off', kâtska 'broken'). A former upper Creek town with 123 families in 1832. Location unknown.

Koho-mats-ka-catch-ka.—Campbell (1836) in H. R. Doc. 274, 25th Cong., 2d sess., 20, 1838. Ko ho mut-ki garts kar.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iv, 578, 1851. Ko-ho-muts-ka-catch-ka.—Crawford (1836) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 274, op. cit., 24. Ko-ho-muts-ki-gar.—H. R. Ex. Doc. 276, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 162, 1836. Kohomutskigartokar.—Sen. Ex. Doc. 425, 24th Cong., 1st sess., 299, 1836.

Kohani. A subtribe or band of the Karankawa. They are mentioned as late as 1824 in connection with the Coaquees, from which it seems probable that they were one of the bands living near Colorado r., Texas. They may be identical with the Quevenes of Cabeza de Vaca.

Cobanes.—Joutel quoted by Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723. Cohannies.—Texas Hist. Ass. Quar., vi, 250, 1903. Coxanes.—Solis (1768) cited by H. E. Bolton, inf'n, 1906. Cujanes, Ripperd (1777), ibid. Cujanos.—Bollaert in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., ii, 276, 1850. Cuyanes.—Bollaert quoted by Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 35, 1891. Kouanes.—Joutel, Jour. Voy., 90, 1719. Quevenes.—Cabeza de Vaca (1555), Smith trans., 137, 1871 (possibly identical). Cujanes.—Ripperd (1777) cited by H. E. Bolton, inf'n, 1906. Quonan.—Joutel (1687) in Margry, Déc., iii, 288, 1878.

Kohasaya (Ko-ha-say-a). A former pueblo of the Sia, x. of the present Sia pueblo, N. Mex.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 196, 1892. See Kakan-atzalia.

Kohashti ('starting place of canoes'). A Klamath settlement, of 5 or 6 houses in 1890, at the x. e. end of Upper Klamath lake, Oreg., 3 m. n. of Yaaga; once the site of the Klamath Indian agency.

Kohashti.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., ii, pt. i, xxx, 1890. Ko-was-ta.—Applegate in Ind. Aff. Rep., 89, 1866. Kuhuashti.—Gatschet, op. cit. Skohuashki.—Ibid.

Kohatsoath. A sept of the Toquart, a Nootka tribe.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 32, 1890.

Kohhokking ('at the land of pines'.—Hewitt). A Delaware village in 1758 near "Painted Post," in Steuben co., N. Y., or Elmira, formerly called Painted Post, in Chemung co., N. Y. See Alden (1834) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 3d s., vi, 147, 1837.

Kohlتيene's Village. The summer camp of a Stikine chief named Kâti'n on Stikine r., Alaska; 28 people were there in 1880.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

Koi. A former Pomo village on Lower Lake id., Lake co., Cal. The island was known to the Indians by the same name. See Makhelchel. (S. A. B.)

Koi ('panther'). A Chickasaw phratry. Kôa.—Gibbs quoted by Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 96, 1884. Xoi.—Copeland quoted by Morgan, Anc. Soc., 163, 1877.

Koiaum ('to pick berries'). A village of the Ntlakyapamuk on the e. side of Fraser r., 25 m. above Yale, Brit. Col.

Boston Bar.—Name given by whites. Koia'um.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 169, 1900. Quiyone.—Brit. Col. map, Ind. Aff., Victoria, 1872 (probably identical).

Koikahtenok (qoi'k'axtēnōr, 'whale people'). A clan of the Wikeno, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 328, 1897.

Koikoi (Xoē'xoē, a supernatural being, sometimes described as living in ponds; used as a mask by the Lillooet, many coast Salish, and the southern Kwakiutl.—Boas). A Squawmish village community on Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.

Qoioi.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900. Xoē'xoē.—Boas, inf'n, 1905.

Koinchush ('wild cat'). A Chickasaw clan of the Koi phratry.

Ko-in-chush.—Morgan, Am. Soc., 163, 1877. Kó-in-tchush.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 96, 1884.

Koinisun (Kōm'sun). An Ita Eskimo settlement on Inglefield gulf, n. Greenland.—Stein in Petermanns Mitt., no. 9, map, 1902.

Koiskana (from kōēs, or kwō'es, a bush the bark of which is used for making twine; some say it is a Stuwigh or Athapascan name, but this seems doubtful). A village of the Nicola band of Ntlakyapamuk near Nicolai, 29 m. above Spences Bridge, Brit. Col.; pop. 52 in 1901, the last time the name appears.

Koaskunā'.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 4, 1899. Koiskana'.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 174, 1900. Kuinskanah't.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1892, 313. Kwois-kun-a'.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1891, sec. II, 44. Pitit Creek.—Teit, op. cit. (name given by whites). Qaiskana'.—Teit, op. cit. Quinskanah't.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1898, 419. Quinskanah't.—Ibid. for 1901, 166. Quss-kan-ah't.—Ibid. for 1886, 232. Quss-kan-ah't.—Ibid. for 1883, 191.

Koioy (Kōi-yo). A former Chumashan village at Cañada del Coyote, Ventura co., Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kojejewiniwug (Kuchichiwiniwūg; from kuchichiw, referring to the straits and bends of the rivers and lakes on which they resided; iniwūg, 'people'). A division of the Chippewa formerly living on Rainy-lake and river on the n. boundary of Minnesota and in the adjacent part of British America.

Algonquins of Rainy Lake.—Lewis and Clark, Travels, 55, 1806. Kōchēché Wenewak.—Long, Exped. St. Peter's R., II, 153, 1824. Ko-je-winiw-e-wug.—Warren (1852) in Minn. Hist. Soc. Coll., v, 84, 1885. Kotchitchi-winiwuk.—Gatschet, Ojibwa MS., B. A. E., 1882. Kuticciwiniwag.—Wm. Jones, inf'n, 1906. Lac la Pluie Indians.—Hind, Red River Exped., I, 82, 1860. Rainy-lake Indians.—Schoolcraft (1838) in H. R. Doc. 107, 25th Cong., 3d sess., 9, 1839.

Kokaia (Qō-qai'a, 'maggot-fly,' because there are many found there in summer). An abandoned Chilliwick village on Chilliwick r., s. Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 4, 1902.

Kokaik. A division of the Bellabella, living on n. Millbank sd.

K'ō'k'aitq.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 52, 1890. Kok-wai-y-toch.—Kang, Wand, in N. Am., app., 1859. Kook-wai-wai-toh.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocabs. Brit. Col., 117n, 1884. Koqneigh-tuk.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Q'ō'qa-itx.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 328, 1897.

Kokaman. Mentioned by writers between 1851 and 1855 as a Karok village on Klamath r., Humboldt co., Cal. In 1851 the chief's name was said to be Panamonee, but this is probably an error, as Panamenik is the Karok village at Orleans.

Coc-co-man.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 161, 1853 (upper Klamath tribe). Cock-o-mans.—Ibid., 215 (given as Hupa band). Coc-co-man.—Ibid., 194 (a Patesick band). Cok-kamans.—Meyer, Nach dem Sacramento, 282, 1855.

Kokhitan ('box-house people'). A Tlingit social group, forming a subdivision of the Kagwantan, q. v.

Kōk hit tān.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Kūketān.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 113, 1885. Kukittan.—Ibid.

Koknas-hadai (K'ōk'-nas-had'ā'i, 'snow-owl house people'). Given by Boas (5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 27, 1889) as a subdivision of the Yaku-lanas, a family of the Raven clan of the Alaskan Haida, but in reality it is only a house name belonging to that family group. (J. R. S.)

Koko. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on the n. bank of the Yukon, Alaska, below Ikogmiut.

Kochkomut.—Post route map, 1903. Koko.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kokoaeuk (Kōkoae'uk). A village of the Matsqui tribe of Cowichan at the s. w. point of Sumass lake, near Fraser r., Brit. Col.—Boas in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 454, 1894.

Kokob. The Burrowing-owl clan of the Hopi of Oraibi, Arizona.

Kokob.—Voth in Field Columb. Mus. Pub., no. 55, 13, 1901. Kokop.—Stephen quoted by Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 105, 1891 (cf. Kokop, the Firewood clan).

Kokoheba (Ko-ko-he'-bū). The name of a village which has come to be applied to an almost extinct Mono tribe in Burr valley, with one village over the divide, looking into the valley of Sycamore cr., n. of Kings r., Cal.—Merriam in Science, XIX, 916, June 17, 1904.

Kokoia (K'ōkōiap', 'place of strawberries'). A village of the Ntlakyapamuk on Fraser r., above Siska, Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 5, 1899.

Kokolik. A Kukpaungmiut Eskimo village at Pt Lay, Arctic coast, Alaska, with 30 inhabitants in 1880.

Kokomo ('young grandmother'). A Miami village, named after a chief, that stood on the site of the present Kokomo, Ind.

Ko-ko-mah village.—Hough, map in Ind. Geol. Rep., 1883.

Kokop. The Firewood phratry of the Hopi, comprising the Kokop (Firewood), Ishauu (Coyote), Kwewu (Wolf), Sikyataiyu (Yellow Fox), Letaiyu (Gray Fox), Zrohona (small mammal, sp. incog.), Masi (Masauuh, a supernatural being), Tuvou (Piñon), Hoko (Juniper), Awata (Bow), Sikyachi (small yellow bird), and Tuvuchi (small red bird) clans. According to tradition they came from the Rio Grande, building the pueblo of Sikyatki, which they occupied until its destruction in late prehistoric times.

Ko'-kop nyū-mū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 403, 1894 (nyū-mū = 'phratry').

Kokop. The Firewood clan of the Hopi, the ancestors of whom came from Jemez pueblo, New Mexico.

Kokop winwū.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900 (winwū = 'clan'). Ko-kop-wūn-wū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 403, 1894. Ku-ga.—Bourke, Snake Dance, 117, 1884 (given doubtfully).

Kokopki (Hopi: 'house of the Firewood people'). A large, ancient, ruined pueblo, attributed by the Hopi to the Firewood clan, originally a Jemez people; situated on a low mesa near Maupin's store, at Mormon John's spring, in Jedidiah valley, 2½ m. E. of Keam's Canyon school, Tusayan, N. E. Arizona. See Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 590, 1898; Hough in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1901, 333 et. seq., 1903. Cottonwood ruin.—Hough, op. cit. (name given locally by whites). Delcasacat.—Ibid. ('wild gourd': Navaho name). Horn House.—Mindeleff, op. cit. Kokopki.—Fewkes, inf'n, 1906 (ki = 'house'). Kokopnyama.—Hough, op. cit. ('name refers to the clans which lived here and is probably not the ancient designation of the village').

Kokoskeeg. An unidentified tribe which, according to Tanner (Narrative, 316, 1830), was known to the Ottawa and was so called by them.

Koksilah. A Cowichan tribe in Cowichin valley, E. coast of Vancouver id., opposite Admiral id.; pop. 12 in 1904.

Cokesilah.—Can. Ind. Aff., 1x1, 1877. Kokesailah.—Brit. Col. map, Ind. Aff., Victoria, 1872.

Koksilah.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. II, 164, 1901. Kulkusila.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Koksoagmiut ('people of Big river'). A subtribe of the Sukinimiut Eskimo living on Koksoak (Big) r., N. Labrador. They numbered fewer than 30 individuals in 1893.

Koakramint.—Boas in Am. Antiq., 40, 1888 (misprint). Koksoagmyut.—Turner in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 176, 1894. Koksoak Innuit.—Ibid., 179. Koksoak river people.—Ibid. Koksoarmiut.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 463, 470, 1888.

Kokyan. The Spider clan of the Hopi.

Kóh'kang.—Voth, Oraibi Summer Snake Ceremony, 282, 1903. Kóh'kangnamu.—Dorsey and Voth, Oraibi Soyal, 9, 1901. Ko'-kyañ-a.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 38, 1891. Kokyan winwū.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900. Ko'-kyun-uh winwū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 404, 1894.

Kolelakom (Qolē'la'ōm). A Squawmish village community on Bowen id., Howe sd., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kolmakof. A Moravian mission founded in 1885 among the Kuskwogmiut Eskimo on Kuskokwim r., Alaska, 200 m. from its mouth. It is on the site of a Russian redoubt and trading post, first established in 1832 by Ivan Simonson Lukeen, after whom it was named for a time. In 1841 it was partially destroyed by the Indians with fire, whereupon it was rebuilt by Alexander Kolmakof and took his name. The people are mixed Eskimo and Athapascan. See Baker, Geog. Diet. Alaska, 1902.

Kolmakof Redoubt.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kolmakovsky.—Hallock in Nat. Geog. Mag., ix, 86, 1898.

Kolok. A former Chumashan village at the old mill in Carpinteria, E. of Santa Barbara, Cal.

K'-á'-lák.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Koloma. A division of the Nishinam, at Coloma, between American r. and the s. fork of Yuba r., in Eldorado co., Cal.

Colomas.—Powers in Overland Mo., XII, 21, 1874.

Ko-lo'-ma.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 315, 1877.

Koltsiowotl (K'-oltsi'-owotl). A division of the Nanimao on the E. coast of Vancouver id.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 32, 1889.

Koluschan Family. A linguistic family embracing the Tlingit (q. v.). The name is said by Dall to be derived from Russian kalushka, 'a little trough,' but by others from the Aleut word kaluga, signifying 'a dish,' the allusion being to the concave dish-shaped labrets worn by the Tlingit women.

× Haidah.—Scouler in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., XI, 219, 1841 (same as his Northern). = Kaloshians.—Dall in Proc. Am. A. S., 375, 1885 (gives tribes and population).

= Klen-e-kate.—Kane, Wanderings of an Artist, app., 1859 (a census of N. W. coast tribes classified by language).

= Klen-ee-kate.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 489, 1855.

× Kolooch.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., II, 31-50, 1846 (tends to merge Kolooch into Esquimaux); Latham in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 163, 1848 (compared with Eskimo language);

Latham, Opuscula, 259, 276, 1860. = Koloshen.—Berghaus (1846), Physik. Atlas, map 17, 1848; ibid., 1852; Buschmann Spuren der aztek. Sprache 680, 1859; Berghaus, Physik. Atlas, map 72, 1887.

× Kolúch.—Latham, Nat. Hist. Man, 294, 1850 (more likely forms a subdivision of Eskimo than a separate class; includes Kenay of Cook inlet, Atna of Copper r., Koltshani, Ugalets, Sitkans, Tungas, Inkhuluklait, Magimut, Inkait; Digotli and Nehanni are classed as a "doubtful Kolúches").

= Koluschan.—Powell in 7th Rep. B. A. E., 85, 1891.

= Koluschen.—Gallatin in Trans. and Coll. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 14, 1836 (islands and adjacent coast from 60° to 55° N. lat.).

= Kolushians.—Prichard, Phys. Hist. Mankind, v, 433, 1847 (follows Gallatin); Scouler (1846) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 231, 1848.

= Kolush.—Latham, Elem. Comp. Philol., 401, 1862 (mere mention of family with short vocabulary).

= Koulishen.—Gallatin in Trans. and Coll. Am. Antiq. Soc., II, 306, 1836; Gallatin in Trans. Am. Ethnol. Soc., II, pt. 1, c, 77, 1848 (Koulishen and Sitka languages); Gallatin in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 402, 1853 (Sitka, bet. 52° and 59° lat.).

× Northern.—Scouler in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc. Lond., XI, 218, 1841 (includes Koloshes and Tun Ghasse).

= Thlinket.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., Cent. and So. Am., app., 460, 462, 1878 (from Mt St Elias to Nass r.; includes Ugalezenes, Yakutats, Chilkats, Hoodnids, Hoodsinos, Takooos, Auk, Kaskas, Stikines, Eelinknūs, Tungass, Sitkas); Bancroft, Nat. Races, III, 562, 579, 1882.

= Thlinkets.—Dall in Proc. Am. A. S., XVIII, 268, 269, 1869 (divided into Sitka-kwan, Stahkin-kwan, 'Yakutats').

= Thlinkit.—Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocab., 14, 1884 (vocab. of Skutkwan sept; also map showing distribution of family); Berghaus, Physik. Atlas, map 72, 1887.

= Thlinkithen.—Holmberg in Finland Soc., 254, 1856, fide Buschmann, 676, 1859.

= Thlinkets.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 36, 1877 (divided into Yak'utats, Chilkat'kwan, Sitka-kwan, Stahkin'kwan, Kygah'ni).

= Thlinkit.—Dall in Proc. Am. A. S., 375, 1885 (enumerates tribes and gives population).

Komacho (Ko-ma'-cho). A name applied by Powers (Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 172, 1877) to the Pomo living in Rancheria and Anderson valleys, Mendocino co., Cal., and said by him to have been derived from the name of their captain. The people living in these two valleys belonged to two different dialectic groups and in aboriginal times had no particular common interests. The connection of the two is probably entirely subsequent to white settlement. (S. A. B.)

Komarof. A Chnagmiut village at the n. mouth of Yukon r., Alaska; pop. 13 in 1880.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884.

Komarof.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Komarov Odinotchka.—Petroff, rep. on Alaska, 57, 1880 (= 'Komarov's trading post').

Komenok ('wealthy people'). An extinct sept of the Lekwiltok, a Kwakiutl tribe.

K'ō'm'ēnoq.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 55, 1890. Q'ō'm'ēnōx.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 332, 1897.

Komertkewotche (derived in part from Kōmert, the Pima name of the Sierra Estrella). A Pima settlement on the Rio Gila, s. Ariz.—ten Kate quoted by Gatschet, MS., B. A. E., xx, 199, 1888.

Komkonatko ('head water', or 'head lake'). An Okinagan village 21 m. from the town of Kwilchana on Nicola lake, Brit. Col.

Fish Lake.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 174, 1900 (name given by whites). Komkonatko.—Ibid.

Komkutis (Q'ō'mqūts). A Bellacoola village on the s. side of Bellacoola r., Brit. Col., near its mouth. It was one of the eight villages called Nuhalk.

K'ōmōtes.—Boas in 7th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 3, 1898. Kougotis.—Mayne, Brit. Col., 147, 1862. Q'ō'mqūts.—Boas in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 49, 1898.

Komkyutis ('the rich side'). A sept of the Kwakiutl proper, living at Ft Rupert, Brit. Col., and said to count 70 warriors in 1866. Boas in 1890 called them a gens of the Walaskwakiutl; in 1895 a sept of the tribe.

Cum-que-kis.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859. Komiūtis.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., 131, 1887. K'ō'mkyūtis.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 54, 1890. Kum-cutes.—Lord, Natur. in Brit. Col., I, 165, 1866. Kumkewtis.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Lō'kuil'la.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887. Q'ō'mk'utis.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 330, 1897.

Komkyutis. A gens of the Goasila, q. v. Komoyue ('the rich ones'). A division of the true Kwakiutl living at Ft Rupert, near the n. end of Vancouver id. They are more often known by the war name Kueha ('slayers'). The gentes are Gyig-yilkam, Haailakyemae, Haanatenok, Ku-kwakum, and Yaaihakemae. Pop. 42 in 1901, 25 in 1904.

Kueh'a.—Boas in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., 227, 1887 ('murderers'). Kue'qa.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 55, 1890. Kue'xa.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 330, 1897 (war name: 'the murderers'). Kuicha.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887. Kwe-ah-kah.—Can. Ind. Aff., 189, 1884. Kwi-ah-kah.—Ibid., 364, 1897. Q'ō'moyue.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 330, 1897. Qua-kars.—Lord, Natur. in Brit. Col., I, 165, 1866. Queackar.—Can. Ind. Aff., 143, 1879. Quee ha Qna colt.—

Work quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 488, 1855. Quee-ha-qua-coll.—Work (1836-41) in Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859 (= Kueha + Kwa-kiutl).

Komoyue. A gens of the Kueha division of the Lekwiltok. They live with the Wiweakam at the village of Tatapowis, on Hoskyn inlet, Brit. Col. Pop. 32 in 1887, the last time they were separately enumerated.

Ah-mah-oo.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1887, 309, 1888. K'ō-mōyue.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 55, 1890. Q'ō'moyue.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. for 1895, 331, 1897.

Komps (Kōmps). A Squawmish village community on the right bank of Squawmish r., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kona (Qoná). A former Tlingit town in the Sitka country, Alaska. (J. R. S.)

Kona-kegawai (Q'ō'na qē'gawa-i, 'those born at Skedans'). One of the most important families of the Eagle clan of the Haida, part of whom lived at Skedans, while the remainder resided at Kloo, which was owned by their chief. The Kona-kegawai, Djiguaahl-lanas, Stawashaidagai, and Kaiahl-lanas claimed descent from one woman. (J. R. S.)

K'unak'ō'wai.—Boas in 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 25, 1898. Q'ō'na qē'gawa-i.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 272, 1905.

Kondiaronk. See Adario.

Konekonep. An Okinagan band formerly living on a creek known to the Indians by the same name, in Washington. Kone-Konep.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 445, 1854. Konekonl'p.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 412, 1855.

Konekotay. A division of the Delawares, formerly in New Jersey.—De Laet (ca. 1633) in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., I, 303, 1841.

Kongiganak. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village near the entrance to Kuskokwim bay, Alaska; pop. 175 in 1880.

Kongiganagumute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 16, 1884. Kōnigunugumut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899.

Kongik. A Malemiut Eskimo village on Buckland or Konguk r., Seward penin., Alaska; pop. 90 in 1880, 54 in 1890.

Kangoot.—Kelly, Arct. Eskimos, 15, 1890. Kengugmiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 165, 1893. Kongigamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 4, 1884. Kongik.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Konglo (Kong'lo). The Corn clan of the Tewa of Hano pueblo, N. E. Ariz. They numbered 23 individuals in 1893. See Kun.

Ka'-ai.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891 (Hopi name). Ko'ⁿlo.—Ibid. (Tewa name). Ku-lo-to-wa.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 166, 1894. Nata'n.—Stephen, op. cit. (Navaho name).

Kongtalyui (Kōntū'lyui, 'black boys'; sometimes also called Sindi'yūi, 'Sindi's children'). A tribal division of the Kiowa, now practically extinct, whose members were said to be of darker color than the rest of the tribe, which, if true, might indicate foreign origin. Sindi is the great mythic hero of the Kiowa.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1079, 1896.

Koni. A division of the Miwok s. of Cosumnes r., in Amador and Eldorado cos., Cal.

Cawnees.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 456, 1874. Ká'ni.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 349, 1877. Koni.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906.

Konkapot. A Mahican sachem who, in 1724, joined in the sale of the territory comprising the "upper and lower Housatonic townships"; his captain's commission was given him by Gov. Belcher in 1734, and he succeeded to the chieftaincy about 1744. He embraced Christianity and invited the Moravian missionaries to labor among his people, the Westenhuck, who became known as Stockbridge Indians after they were Christianized and removed to the mission, except such as went to join the Christian Indians in Pennsylvania. The chief, who received the Christian name John, and was recognized by the authorities at Albany and Boston as the head of the Mahican, they having had their council fire at Westenhuck, was long the patriarch of the Indian community at Stockbridge (Ruttenber, Tribes Hudson R., 88, 1872). The name survived as a family designation among the Stockbridges at least as late as 1864, a Levi Konkapot serving in the civil war (Nelson, Inds. N. J., 147, 1894).

Konkau (Kō'yōang káu, 'valley earth'). A formerly populous division of the Maidu, living in Butte co., Cal., in the valley of Concow cr., a tributary of the w. branch of Feather r. They are now on Round Valley res., Mendocino co., and numbered 171 in 1905.

Cancons.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 505, 1878. Cawcow.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 313, 1874. Caw-Caw.—Ibid., 1867, 111, 1868. Con-Con's.—Ibid., 75, 1870. Con-Cous.—Ibid., 1867, 121, 1868. Con-Cow.—Ibid., 1863, 93, 1864. Cou-cows.—Ibid., 1864, 119, 1865. Cow-Cow.—Ibid., 130, 1868. In'shin.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (modern Yuki name). Kānkau.—Curtin, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1885. Onocows.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 12, 1865 (misprint). Oonocows.—Ibid., 112.

Konomihu. A subsidiary tribe of the Shasta, living at the forks of Salmon r., Siskiyou co., Cal., extending 7 m. up the s. fork and 5 m. up the n. fork. Their language is very divergent from that of the main body of Shasta. (R. B. D.)

Konohe. A Clatsop village on Columbia r., near its mouth, in Clatsop co., Ore.

Konapee.—Lyman, Hist. Oregon, I, 171, 1903. Kono'pē.—Boas, Chinook Texts, 274, 1894.

Kontareahronon. The Huron name of a people mentioned in the 17th century as living s. of St Lawrence r., on the authority of Ragueneau's map. The name evidently designated the inhabitants of the Huron village of Contarea (q. v.). See Jes. Rel. 1640, 35, 1858. (J. N. B. H.)

Koo (Kō'-o, 'buffalo'). A clan of the Tewa pueblo of San Ildefonso, N. Mex. Kōo-tōāa.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (tōāa = 'people').

Kooji ('wolf'). Given by Dawson

(Queen Charlotte Ids., 134, 1880) as the name of one of the 4 Haida clans. There were only 2 clans, however, and the Wolf was not one of them. (J. R. S.)

Kookotlane (Kōōqōllā'nē). A Bella-coola division at the town of Nuskelst, Bella-coola r., Brit. Col.—Boas in 7th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 3, 1891.

Kookupvansik (Kō-okāp Vānsik, 'medicine paraphernalia'). A former Pima village in s. Arizona.—Russell, Pima MS., B. A. E., 16, 1902.

Koonahmich. A body of Salish under the Victoria superintendency, Brit. Col. Pop. 15 in 1882, when last separately enumerated.

Koo-nah-mich.—Can. Ind. Aff., 258, 1882.

Koontie. See Coonti.

Kooskoo (Koos-koo', 'crane'). A gens of the Abnaki (q. v.).—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 174, 1877.

Koossawin ('hunters'). A term compounded from the Chippewa verb kīyusā-win, 'hunting,' lit. 'the act of walking about' (Jones), and used by Schoolcraft (Ind. Tribes, VI, 582, 1857) to denote the hunting tribes.

Koot. The largest village of the Nuni-vagmiut, near C. Etolin, Nunivak id., Alaska; pop. 117 in 1890.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 115, 1893.

Kootep (Kō'-o-tep). A Yurok village on lower Klamath r., Cal., near Klamath bluffs.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1905.

Kootpahl. A former village of the Atfalati at Forest Grove, Washington co., Ore.—Lyman in Ore. Hist. Soc. Quar. I, 323, 1900.

Koowahoke (Koo-wā-ho'-ke, 'pine region'). A subdivision of the Delawares (q. v.).—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 172, 1877.

Kooyah. A root (Valeriana edulis), also known as "tobacco root," from which a bread is made by some of the Indians of the Oregon region. The word is from one of the Shahaptian or Shoshonean dialects. (A. F. C.)

Kopaalk. A body of Salish under Frasersuperintendency, Brit. Col.—Can. Ind. Aff., 78, 1878.

Kopagmiut ('people of the great river'). An Eskimo tribe at the mouth of Mackenzie r., Canada. According to Dall they formerly extended up this river 200 m., but are now confined to islands at the mouth and the Arctic coast w. of Herschel id.

Añénépít.—Petitot in Bib. Ling. et Ethnol., III, 11, 1876 (= 'Eskimo of the east': so called by Hudson Bay, Labrador, and Greenland Eskimo). Chiglit.—Ibid., 10. Kopāg-mūt.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 10, 1877. Kopāng'-meün.—Richardson, Polar Regions, 1861. Kukhpagmiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 130, 1893. Kupūmūmūn.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 45, 1854. Kurvik.—Petitot in Bul. Soc. de Géog., 6th s., X, 182, 1875. Mackenzie River Eskimo.—Richardson, Arct. Search, Exped., 354, 1851. Tareormeut.—Petitot, Monogr., map, 1876. Tapeomut.—Ibid., 11 (= 'those who live by the sea'). Tarrëor-mut.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 10, 1877. Tchiglit.—Petitot, Monogr., 11 (applied to Mackenzie and Anderson r. tribes). Teiglit.—Ibid.

KOPAGMIUT GIRL. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

Kopano. A small tribe formerly living on or near Copano Bay, S. Texas. There is no doubt that it belonged to the Karankawan linguistic stock, but it is seldom mentioned.

Copanes.—Solis (1768) cited by H. E. Bolton, inf'n, 1906. Copanes.—Rivera, Diario, leg. 2602, 1737.

Kopeli. The extinct Pink Conch clan of the Tewa of Hano pueblo, N. E. Ariz.

Ko'-pe-li.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 166, 1894.

Kopeli-tôwa.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 352, 1896 (tôwa = 'people').

Kopiware (Ko-pi-wa'-ri). An ancient village once occupied by the Nambe people, situated about 5 m. N. of the present Nambe pueblo, N. Mex. (F. W. H.)

Koprino. A Kwakiutl tribe speaking the Koskimo subdialect. They lived formerly at the entrance of Quatsino sd., and were divided into the Koprino and Kotlenok clans, but they are now amalgamated with the Koskimo proper. Pop. 14 in 1884, the last time they were separately enumerated.

G'á-p'énòx.—Boas in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., v, pt. 2, 393, 1902. G'ó-p'énòx.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 1895, 329, 1897. Keope-e-no.—Can. Ind. Aff., 190, 1883. Keropinough.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Kiawpino.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., for 1887, sec. ii, 65. Koprinos.—Can. Ind. Aff., 145, 1879. Kyó-p'énòq.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 53, 1890.

Koprino. A gens of the Koprino, q. v.

Koquapilt. A Chilliwaek town in lower Chilliwaek valley, Brit. Col.; pop. 16 in 1904.

Co-quá-piet.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. i, 268, 1889. Coquopiet.—Ibid., 309, 1879. Coquopilt.—Ibid., 74, 1878. Koquahpilt.—Ibid., 78. Koquapilt.—Brit. Col.

map, Ind. Aff., Victoria, 1872. Kwaw-kwaw-ápiet.—Can. Ind. Aff., 413, 1898. Kwawkwawapilt.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. ii, 158, 1901.

Kordlubing. A summer settlement of the Kingnaitmiut Eskimo near the head of an inlet emptying into Cumberland sd. from the N. side.

Kordlubing.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Koremiut. An Eskimo settlement at Narket fjord, lat. 61° 17', E. Greenland.—Nansen, First Crossing, i, 306, 1890.

Kornok. An Eskimo village in W. Greenland, lat. 64° 30'.—Nansen, First Crossing, ii, 329, 1890.

Koróa. A small tribe, perhaps related to the Tonika, whose home was on the W. bank of the Mississippi below the Natchez, on the Yazoo, and in the country intervening westward from the Mississippi. They were visited early in 1682 by La Salle, who described their cabins as dome-shaped, about 15 ft high, formed chiefly of large canes, and without windows (Margry, Déc., i, 558, 1876). They were considered warlike, and were cruel and treacherous. In 1705 a party of them, hired by the French priest Foucault to convey him by water to the Yazoo, murdered him and two other Frenchmen. La Salle observed that their language differed from that of the Taensa and Natchez, but their customs were the same. All afterward moved to and settled on Yazoo r., Miss., where in 1742 they lived in the same village as the Yazoo. They were then allies of the Chickasaw, but were later merged with the Choctaw and their identity as a separate organization was lost. Allen Wright, whose grandfather was of this tribe, informed Gatschet (Creek Migr. Leg., i, 48, 1884) that the term Koróa, or Coróa, was neither Choctaw nor Chickasaw, and that the Koróa spoke a language differing entirely from the Choctaw.

Akoróa.—Marquette, map (1673) in Shea, Discov. Miss., 1852. Coiras.—Richebourg (ca. 1716) in French, Hist. Coll. La., iii, 246, 1851. Coloa.—Iberville (1699) in Margry, Déc., iv, 179, 1880. Coroa.—Barcia, Ensayo, 246, 1723. Corocha.—Tonti (1684) in Margry, Déc., i, 603, 1876. Corois.—McKenney and Hall, Ind. Tribes, iii, 81, 1851. Corroas.—Coxe, Carolina, 9, 1741. Corrois.—Charlevoix (1729), New France, vi, 85, 102, 1872. Corrois.—Le Petit quoted by Kip, Jesuit Missions, 289, 1866. Corroas.—Jefferys, French Dom., i, 144, 1761. Corrois.—La Harpe (1699) in French, Hist. Coll. La., iii, 19, 28, 1851. Gurois.—Ibid., 32. Ikouera.—La Salle (1681) in Margry, Déc., ii, 189, 193, 1877. Kolwa.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 48, 1884 (Choctaw name). Koroas.—La Métairie (1682) quoted by French, Hist. Coll. La., ii, 22, 1875. Kouera.—Proces verbal (1682) in French, Hist. Coll. La., i, 47, 1846. Kourouas.—Coxe, Carolina, 10, 1741. Kourouas.—Alcedo, Dic. Geogr., v, 394, 1789. Kowronas.—Morse, N. Am., 254, 1776 (perhaps quoting Coxe). Kúlua.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 48, 1884 (Choctaw name).

Korovinski. A former Aleut village on Atka id. at Korovin bay, which the natives deserted for Nazan across the island. The Russians built a church there in 1826 and made Atka the headquarters of the western district of the Aleutians.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 21, 1884.

Korovinski. An Aleut village on Korovinid., Alaska; pop. 44 in 1880, 41 in 1890. Korovinsky.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 25, 1881.

Korusi. A tribe of the Patwin division of the Copehan family, formerly living at Colusa, Colusa co., Cal. It was once comparatively populous, as Gen. Bidwell states that in 1849 the village of the Korusi contained at least 1,000 inhabitants (Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 219, 1877). They are spoken of as clannish, and fond of nursing family feuds. When a Korusi woman died, leaving a very young infant, her friends shook it to death in a skin or blanket. Powers (p. 226) says the Korusi hold that in the beginning of all things there was nothing but the Old Turtle swimming about in a limitless ocean, but that he dived down and brought up earth, with which he created the world.

Colouse.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 518, 1877. Colusa.—Ibid., 219. Colusi.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Mar. 23, 1860. Corusies.—Powers in Overland Mo., XIII, 543, 1874. Ko-rú-si.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 219, 1877.

Koserefski. A former Kaiyukhotana village, now an Ikogmiut settlement, on the left bank of the Yukon, near the mouth of Shageluk slough. It is the seat of the mission of the Holy Cross.

Koserefski.—Bruce, Alaska, map, 1885. Kozerevsky.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 165, 1893. Kosyrof.—Map form cited by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kozyrof.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Leather Village.—Dall, Alaska, 220, 1870.

Kosetah. Mentioned by Gibbs (Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 171, 1853) as a Shasta band of Shasta valley, N. Cal., in 1851, but it is really a man's personal name. (R. B. D.)

Koshkogemut. A subdivision of the Chnagmiut Eskimo of Alaska.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 17, 1877.

Kosipatuwiwagaiyu (Ko-si'-pa-tu-wi'-wa-gai-yu, 'muddy water place'). A Paviotso tribe formerly dwelling about Carson sink, W. Nev.

Ko-si'-pa-tu-wi'-wa-gai-yu.—Powell, Paviotso MS., B. A. E., 1881. Ku'si-pah.—Powers, Inds. W. Nev., MS., B. A. E., 1876.

Koskedi. A Tlingit division at Gaudekan and Yakutat, belonging to the Raven phratry.

Kosk'ed'i.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Kusch-ké-ti.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 118, 1885. Kusk-édi.—Ibid.

Koskimo. An important Kwakiutl tribe inhabiting the shores of Quatsino sd., Vancouver id. The gentes are Gyekolekoa, Gyeksem, Gyeksemsanatl, Hekhalanois(?), Kwakukemalenok, Naenshya, Tsetsaa, and Wobuamis. Their winter village is Hwades; their summer village, Maate. Pop. 82 in 1904.

Koskimo.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocabs. Brit. Col., 118, 1884. Kosimo.—Can. Ind. Aff., 1904, pt. 2, 71, 1905. Kos-keemoe.—Ibid., 1884, 189, 1885.

Koskeemos.—Grant in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., 293, 1857. K'osk'e'moq.—Boas, 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 53, 1890. Koskiemo.—Mayne, Brit. Col., 251, 1862. Kos'-ki-mo.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 69. Koskimos.—Can. Ind.

KOSKIMO MAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

Aff., 145, 1879. Kos-ki-mu.—Ibid., 1894, 279, 1895. Koskumos.—Ibid., 113, 1879. Kus-ke-mu.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859. Q's'sqemox.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1893, 329, 1897. Q'sqimó.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 131, 1887. Koskeemo.—Powell in Can. Ind. Aff., 130, 1879 (misprint).

KOSKIMO WOMAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

Koskimo. A Kwakiutl subdialect spoken by the Koprino, Klaskino, Koskimo, and Quatsino.

Kosotshe. A former village of the Tututni, identified by Dorsey with the Luckkarsonation of Lewis and Clark, who placed them on the Oregon coast s. of the Kusan territory, in 1805, and estimated their population at 1,200. Fifty years later Kautz said their village was on Flores cr., Oreg., about lat. 42° 50'; Dorsey fixed their habitat n. of Rogue r., between Port Orford and Sixes cr.

Kaso-tcha.—Kautz, letter to Gibbs, B. A. E., ca. 1855. Ko-so-a-cha.—Gibbs, MS. on Coast tribes, B. A. E. qos-o-té.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 233, 1890 (Tututni name). Ku-so-cha-to-ny.—Abbott, MS. Coquille census, B. A. E., 1858. Ku'-su-me'-gúnne.—Dorsey, op. cit. (Naltunne-tunne name). Luckasos.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., II, 119, 1814. Luckkarso.—Ibid., 474. Lukkarso.—Drake, Bk. of Inds., ix, 1848. Port Orford.—Abbott, MS. Coquille census, B. A. E., 1858.

Kostuets (Kó's Tué'ts, 'where pine trees stand'). A Shoshonean encampment 10 m. above Yaneks, or Yainax, on Sprague r., Klamath res., Oreg.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. 2, 143, 1890.

Kostun-hana (Q'ó'stan xá'na; q'ó'stan means 'crab'). A former Haida town, in possession of the Kogangas family group, a short distance E. of Skidegate, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. There does not appear to be space at this point for more than two or three houses.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Kosunats. A Ute division formerly living on Uinta res., N. E. Utah, where Powell found 76 of them in 1873. They now form part of what are known as the Uinta Ute.

Kotasi. A former Maidu village in the n. part of Plumas co., Cal., about 3 m. E. of Greenville.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pl. xxxviii, 1905.

Kotil. A Koyukukhotana village at the junction of Kateel r. with Koyukuk r., Alaska; pop. 65 in 1844.

Khotlikakat.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884. Khotlikakate.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850. Khotlynakat.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. Am., map, 1844.

Kotlenok (Q'ó'lénók). A gens of the Koprino, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 329, 1897.

Kotlian. See Katlän.

Kotlik ('breaches,' hence 'river fork'). A village of the Chnagmiut Eskimo on Kotlik r., Alaska; pop. 8 in 1880, 31 in 1890. Coatlik.—Schwatka, Mil. Recon. in Alaska, 20, 1885. Kotlik.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kutlik.—Post route map, 1903.

Kotlskaim (Qotlskaim, 'serpent pond'). A Squawmish village community on Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 475, 1900.

Kotsai (Kotsái). An extinct division of the Comanche.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1045, 1896.

Kotsava (from kozabi, an insect used for food). A Mono band formerly living about Mono lake and Owens r. and lake, E. Cal., numbering 300 in 1870. Caso.—Maltby in Ind. Aff. Rep., 94, 1866. Cazaby

Pah-Utes.—Campbell, ibid., 113, 1870. Kots-a'-va.—Powell, Paviotso MS., B. A. E., 1881. Ko-za'-bi-ti-kut-tah.—Powers, Ind. West Nev., MS., B. A. E., 1876 ('worm-eaters'). Owen's River Indians.—Maltby in Ind. Aff. Rep., 94, 1866.

Kotsoteka (Kóto-té'ka, 'buffalo-eaters'). One of the principal divisions of the Comanche.

Buffalo Eater band.—Comanche and Kiowa treaty, Sen. Ex. Doc. O, 39th Cong., 1st sess., 4, 1866. Buffalo Eaters.—Butler in H. R. Doc. 76, 29th Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1847. Buffalo Indians.—Bell in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 268, 1869. Cashchevatebka.—Smith in H. R. Ex. Doc. 240, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 20, 1870. Cashchekelka Comanches.—Ibid., 21. Cashchetegehka Comanches.—Alvord in Sen. Ex. Doc. 18, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 35, 1869. Co-che-ta-cah.—Butler in H. R. Doc. 76, 29th Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1847. Cochetakers.—McKusker in Sen. Ex. Doc. 40, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 14, 1869. Co-che-te-ka.—Comanche and Kiowa treaty, Sen. Ex. Doc. O, 39th Cong., 1st sess., 4, 1866. Cooch-chetellica.—Sec. War in Sen. Ex. Doc. 7, 42d Cong., 3d sess., 1, 1872. Cooch-cho-teth-ca.—Sanders in H. R. Ex. Doc. 7, 42d Cong., 1st sess., 4, 1871. Coocheetakas.—Penney in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 101, 1870. Cools-on-tick ara.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 250, 1853. Coschotghita.—Alvord in Sen. Ex. Doc. 18, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 6, 1869. Cos-tche-tegh-kas.—Ibid., 7. Coschetegehka Comanches.—Alvord in H. R. Ex. Doc. 240, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 151, 1870. Cuchanticas.—Cortez (1799) in Pac. R. R. Rep., III, pt. 3, 121, 1856. Cuechunticas.—Pino, Not. Hist. Nuevo-Mex., 83, 1849. Cuhtzuteca.—Pimentel, Cuadro Descr., II, 347, 1865. Curtoze-to-gah Comanches.—Hazen in Sen. Ex. Doc. 18, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 31, 1869. Curtz-e-Ticker Comanches.—Ibid., 24. E-hunticas.—Orozco y Berra, Geog., 59, 1864 (given as Apache). Gü-shó-dó-j-ka.—Butcher and Lyndecher, Comanche MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1867. Koo-chee-ta-kee.—Neighbors in Ind. Aff. Rep., 579, 1848. Koo-che-ta-kers.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 128, 1852. Koo-chi-ta-ker.—Neighbors, op. cit., 578. Koolsaticara.—Schoolcraft, op. cit., VI, 687, 1857. Koolsatik-ara.—Ibid., I, 522, 1851. Ko+s'-too-te'-ka.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 9, 1884. Ko'stshete'-ka.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., xxiii, 299, 1886. Ko'tso-té'-ka.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1045, 1896. Ku'h'the-té'ka.—Gatschet, Comanche MS. vocab., B. A. E.

Kotta ('mescal' or 'tobacco'). Given by Bourke (Jour. Am. Folk-lore, II, 181, 1889) as a clan of the Mohave, q. v.

Kouchnas-hadai (Q'ó'te nas :had'a'i, '[grizzly] bear house people'). Given by Boas (Fifth Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 27, 1889) as a subdivision of the Yakulanas, a family of the Raven clan of the Haida. It is in reality only a house name belonging to the family.

Koukdjuag ('big river'). A Talirpirmiut Eskimo village of the Okomiut tribe formerly on L. Nettilling, Baffin land.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1888.

Kounaouons. A tribe or band, probably in Canada near the Maine frontier, mentioned as allies of the French in 1724.

Ksna8ons.—Rasle (1724) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., VIII, 246, 1819.

Koungmiut ('river people'). An Eskimo tribe on the w. coast of Hudson bay, s. of the Kinipetu, in the region of Pt. Churchill.—Boas in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xv, 6, 1901.

Kouse. A plant (Peucedanum ambiguum) used by the Indians of the Columbia-Oregon region for making bread. Lewis and Clark in 1804-06 used the form cous. Thornton (Oreg. and Cal., I, 355, 1849) speaks of "the cowish or biscuit root." The word is derived from kowish, the name of this root in the Nez Percé and closely related dialects of the Shahaptian stock.

(A. F. C.)

Kouyam. A village or tribe mentioned by Joutel in 1687 as being n. of Maligne (Colorado) r., Tex. It is probably the tribe called Caba by Manzanet, which may have been Coahuiltecan or Karankawan. See Gatschet, Karankawa Inds., 1891.

Cavaianes.—Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723. Kavagan.—Joutel (1687), Jour. Voy., 90, 1719. Kouayan.—Shea, note in Charlevoix, New France, iv, 78, 1870. Kouayon.—Joutel (1687) in French, Hist. Coll. La., i, 152, 1846. Kouyam.—Joutel in Margry, Dec., iii, 288, 1878.

Kovogzruk. A Kaviagmiut village at Port Clarence, Alaska.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 162, 1893.

Kowagmiut ('big-river people'). A tribe of western Eskimo of Alaska, numbering 81 in 1890, dwelling on Kowak r. e. of Kotzebued. Their chief food besides fish and ptarmigan consists of marmots, but the number of these is rapidly decreasing. Their villages are Kikiktak, Kowak, Umokalukta, Unatak, and the summer settlement of Sheshalik. By some these Eskimo have been included in the Nunatogmiut; by others, together with the Selawigmiut, in the Malemiut. Koogamutes.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 60, map, 1884. Koo-og-ameuts.—Cooper, Cruise of Corwin, 26, 1880. Kowag'-mūt.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 12, 1877. Kowan'-g-meün.—Simpson quoted by Dall, ibid. Ku-äg'-mūt.—Dall in Proc. A. A. S., xxxiv, 377, 1886. Kuagmiut.—Woolfe in 11th Census, Alaska, 130, 1894. Kuwü'nmiun.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 44, 1892.

Kowailchew. A coast Salish tribe said by Gibbs (Pac. R. R. Rep., i, 433, 1855) to live n. of the Semiamio, principally if not altogether in Canada. Unless intended for the Cowichan they are not mentioned elsewhere.

Kowak (? 'great river'). A Kowagmiut village at the mouth of Kowak r., Alaska. Koovuk.—Kelly, Aret. Eskimos, 15, 1890. Kubok.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. in Amer., pt. 1, 73, 1847.

Kowanga. A former Gabrieleño rancheria near San Fernando mission, Los Angeles co., Cal. Probably identical with Okovvinjha, or with Cahuenga, q. v. Kowanga.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, May 11, 1860. Owongos.—Lawson in Ind. Aff. Rep., 13, 1879.

Kowasayee. A small Shahaptian tribe, speaking the Tenino language and formerly living on the n. side of Columbia r., in Klickitat co., Wash., nearly opposite the mouth of the Umatilla. They were included in the Yakima treaty of 1855, and the survivors are on Yakima res., but their number is unknown.

K'kásáwi.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 739, 1896. Kowasayee.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1856, 266, 1857. Kowassayee.—U. S. Stat., XII, 951, 1863. Kowwasayee.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 518, 1878.

Kowasikka. A village formerly occupied by the Eel River Miami until they removed, under the treaty of Feb. 11, 1828, to a reserve near the mouth of Eel r. It was on Sugar cr., near the present Thortown, Boone co., Ind., and was commonly known as Thortown.

(J. M.)

Kow-a-sik-ka.—Hough in Ind. Geol. Rep., map, 1883. Thortown.—Common name. Thortown Miamies.—Drake, Ind. Chron., 205, 1836.

Kowina. A prehistoric circular pueblo on a low mesa opposite the spring at the head of Cebollita valley, about 15 m. w. of Acoma and 35 m. s. e. of Grant station on the Santa Fé Pac. R. R., Valencia co., N. Mex. The pueblo is attributed to the Calabash (Tanyi) clan of Acoma and is noted for the high class of masonry of its remaining walls.

(F. W. H.)

Ka-uin-a.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, iv, 324, 1892 (Acoma name). Kô-wi-na.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1895.

Kowsis. A tribe mentioned as roaming in the Tule r. country—territory occupied by Yokuts tribes—in s. central California in 1869 (Purcell in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 193, 1870), but not further identifiable.

Koyeti. A Yokuts tribe formerly living in s. central California, in the vicinity of Tule r. and southward. Mentioned in 1852 as a friendly tribe on Paint (White) cr., and described as possessing unusual courage and intelligence. They are entirely extinct.

Co-ye-te.—Wessells (1853) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 34th Cong., 3d sess., 32, 1857. Co-ye-tie.—Barbour (1852) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 256, 1853. Ko-ya-ta.—Johnston (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 61, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 23, 1852. Ko-ya-te.—Barbour (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 122, 1853. Ko-ya-tes.—Barbour in Ind. Aff. Rep., 232, 1851. Koyeti.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n., 1906 (usual name among neighboring Yokuts tribes). Ko-ye-to.—Barbour in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 255, 1853.

Koyonya. The Turkey clan of the Hopi. Koyona winwü.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900 (winwü='clan'). Ko-yo'-ño wün-wü.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 403, 1894.

Koyugmiut (Koyüg'mūt). A division of the Malemiut Eskimo on Koyuk r., Alaska.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 16, 1877.

Koyuhow (Ko-yu-how'). A Paviotso band formerly living about McDermitt, n. Nev.—Powell, Paviotso MS., B. M. E., 1881.

Koyuktolik. A Malemiut Eskimo village on Koyuk r., Alaska.

Khoouctoulik-mioute.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., xxi, map, 1850. Kuyuktolik.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 162, 1893.

Koyukuk. A Koyukukhotana village, of 150 people in 1880, near the junction of Koyukuk and Yukon rs., Alaska.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 12, 1884.

Koyukukhotana ('people of Koyukuk river'). A division of the Unakhotana inhabiting the basin of Koyukuk r., Alaska. Zagoskin in 1843 attempted to explore the Koyukuk country, but failed on account of the hostility of the natives. Lieut. Barnard in 1851 was killed by the Koyukukhotana, and Nulato destroyed because he sent for their chief. Maj. Kennicott also visited their territory, dying at Nulato, May 13, 1866. In the following year Dall explored the Koyukuk. Petroff visited the Koyukukhotana in 1880, and Allen made an exploration of their country in 1885. The Koyukukhotana were sedentary, but fierce and warlike, and hostile toward the Kaiyukhotana, although the manners, customs, and language of the two tribes are now similar. Their chief occupation is hunting deer and mountain sheep; they also act as middlemen in trade between the Malemiut and the Kaiyukhotana. They seem to have no system of totems (Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 27, 1877). Zagoskin found 289 living in permanent villages in 1843. In 1890 the population was given as 502: 242 males and 260 females, while the number in permanent villages was 174 in 32 houses. The villages are Batza, Bolshoigor, Dotle, Hussliakatna, Kakliaklia, Kaltat, Kanuti, Kautas, Kotil, Koyukuk, Mentokakat, Nohulchinta, Nok, Notaloten, Oonilgachtkhokh, Soonkakak, Tashoshgon, Thialil, Tok, Zakatlantan, Zogliakten, and Zonagogliakten.

Koyoukons.—Whymper quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 27, 1877. Co-Yukon.—Whymper, Alaska, 182, 1868 (=Koyukukhotana and Unakhotana). Intsi-Dindjitch.—Petitot, Diet. Dène-Dindjié, xx, 1876 (=‘men of iron’). Jūnnākāchotana.—Holmberg quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 27, 1877. Koyoukon.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. Alaska, 29, 1874. Koyoukuk-kouttane.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 361, 1891. Koyū-kūkh-otā-nā.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 27, 1877 (=‘people of Koyukuk’). Koyūkūns.—Ibid. (traders’ name). Koyūkūnskoī.—Ibid. (used by Russian traders). Kukūnski.—Raymond in Bull. Am. Geog. Soc., iii, 175, 1873. Kuyakinchī.—Raymond in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 593, 1870. Kuyūkantsi.—Worman quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 27, 1877. Kuyūkuk.—Raymond in Sen. Ex. Doc. 12, 42d Cong., 1st sess., 31, 1871. Kuyūkūnski.—Ibid., 32. Yunnakakhotana.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884.

Krayiragottine (‘willow people’). A division of Etchaottine on Willow r., Mackenzie Ter., Can.

Kkpayīpa-Gottinē.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 319, 1891.

Kraylongottine (‘people at the end of the willows’). A Nahane division living between Mackenzie r. and Willow lake, Mackenzie Ter., Canada. Their totem is the otter.

Kkra-lon-Gottinē.—Petitot, Grand lac des Ours, 66, 1893 (‘people at the end of the willows’). Kkpayīpa-Gottinē.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 362, 1891.

Krentpoos. See Kintpuash.

Kretan (‘hawk’). A subgens of the Cheghita gens of the Missouri tribe.

Kre-ta.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 240, 1897. Kul-pa-ki’-a-ko.—ten Kate, Synonymie, 10, 1884 (Kiowa name: ‘pearl people’).

Krimerksumalek. An Iglurimiut Eskimo village on the w. coast of Hudson bay.—McClintock, Voyage of Fox, 165, 1881.

Ksalokul (Qsá’loqul). A division of the Nanaimo on the E. coast of Vancouver id.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 32, 1889.

Ksapsem (Qsá’psēm). A Songish division residing at Esquimalt, s. end of Vancouver id.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 17, 1890.

Kshiukshiwu (K’ciwuk’ciwu). A former Chumashan village on Santa Rosa id., Cal.—Henshaw, Buenaventura MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kthae (K’cā’-ē). A former Kuitsh village on lower Umpqua r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 321, 1890.

Kthelutlitanne (Kcē’-lūt-lī’ jūnnē, ‘people at the forks’). A former village of the Chastacosta at the junction of Rogue r., Oreg., and a southern tributary.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 234, 1890.

Kthotaime (K’cō-iai-me). A former Takelma village on the s. side of Rogue r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 235, 1890.

Kthukhwestunne (K’cū-qwēs’ jūnnē, ‘good-grass people’). A former village of the Mishikhwutmetunne on Coquille r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 232, 1890.

Kthukhwutunne (K’cū-qwūt’ jūnnē, ‘people where good grass is’). A former village of the Tututni on the coast of Oregon, n. of Rogue r.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 233, 1890.

Kthunataachuntunne (K’cū-na’-ta-a tēn’ jūnnē, ‘people by a small grassy mountain’). A former village of the Mishikhwutmetunne on Coquille r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 232, 1890.

Kthutetmetsetuttun. A former village of the Tututni on the Pacific coast just n. of the mouth of Rogue r., Oreg.

K’cū-tēt-me tse’-ē-tūt-tūn.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 233, 1890. Xwi-sūt-qwūt.—Ibid. Nu’-tēu-ma’-tūn jūn-nē.—Ibid. (‘people in a land full of timber’).

Ktlaeshatlīkīk (‘people of Lgā’ēcalx’). A Cathlamet tribe named from a town on a creek of the same name, at the site of the present town of Cathlamet, Wahkiakum co., Wash.

Guthlia-ishalxi.—Gatschet, field notes, B. A. E. Klā’ēcalxix.—Boas, Cathlamet Texts, 6, 1901. Līā’ēcalxē.—Boas, inf n, 1905.

Ku. The Stone clan of the Tewa pueblos of San Ildefonso, N. Mex., and Hano, Ariz. That of the latter is extinct. Cf. Nang.

K’u-tōā.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 352, 1896 (San Ildefonso form; tōā=‘people’). Ku-tōwa.—Ibid. (Hano form).

Kua. The Bear clan of the pueblo of Taos, N. Mex.

Kūa-tāina.—Hodge, field notes, B. A. E., 1899 (tāina=‘people’).

Kuaiath. A division of the Seshat, a Nootka tribe.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 32, 1890.

Kuairnang. A winter residence of the Akulirmiut on North bay, Baffin land.

K'uaiirang.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., no. 80, 67, 1885. Quaiirang.—Boas in 6th Rep. B. A. E., 421, 1888.

Kuakaa. A prehistoric ruined pueblo of the Tanos on the s. bank of Arroyo Hondo, 5 m. s. of Santa Fé, N. Mex. It housed about 800 people. Not to be confounded with San Marcos, to which the same name was applied.

Cuá-cá.—Bandelier, Gilded Man, 221, 1893. Cua-kaa.—Ibid., 283. Kua-kaa.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 90, 1892. Kua-kay.—Ibid.

Kuakumchen (Kuá'kumtēn). Given as a division of the Squawmish, on Howse sd., coast of British Columbia.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Kuapa. A ruined pueblo in the Cañada de Cochiti, 12 m. n. w. of Cochiti pueblo, N. Mex., by whose inhabitants it was formerly occupied and to whom are attributed the execution of the panther statues on the neighboring Potrero de los Idolos. It was the third place of settlement of the Cochiti after their abandonment of the Potrero de las Vacas, and from which they moved to their present pueblo.

Cua-pa.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Bul., I, 15, 1883. Lummis in Scribner's Monthly, 98, 1893. Cua-pa.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 162, 1892.

Knapooge ('place of the shell beads near the water,' or 'mussel pearl place on the water'). A prehistoric Tewa pueblo which, with Analco, occupied the site of the present Santa Fé, N. Mex. Knapooge was situated where old Ft. Marcy was erected on the heights at the northern outskirts of the town by United States troops in 1847.

Apoga.—Ritch, New Mexico, 196, 1885. Apoge.—Ibid., 151. Cua P'Hoge.—Bandelier, Delight Makers, 453, 1890 (San Juan name). Cua-P'ho-o-ge.—Bandelier, Gilded Man, 284, 1893. Cuá-po-o-ge.—Ibid., 221. Cua-Po-o-que.—Ladd, Story of N. Mex., 92, 1891. Kua-p'o-o-ge.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 90, 1892. Oga P'Hoge.—Bandelier, Delight Makers, 453, 1890 (Santa Clara name). Og-a-p'o-o-ge.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 90, 1892. Poga.—Ritch, New Mexico, 196, 1885. Poge.—Ibid., 151. Po-o-ge.—Bandelier in Ritch, ibid., 201.

Kuasse. An unidentified village or tribe mentioned by Joutel in 1687 as situated n. or n. w. of Maligne (Colorado) r., Tex. This region was controlled mainly by Coahuiltecan tribes, but Karankawan and Tonkawan Indians also roamed there. The name seems to have been given to Joutel by Ebahamo Indians, who were probably of Karankawan affinity. The Kuasse may possibly be identical with the Acafes and the Cacafes of Spanish writers and the Akasquy of Cavelier's narrative. Kiafess.—Joutel (1687) in French, Hist. Coll. La., I, 138, 1846 (cf. p. 152). Kiasses.—Shea, note in Charlevoix, New France, IV, 78, 1870. Kiasses-chancres.—Barcia, Ensayo, 271, 1723 (combined with Chancres; see Lipan). Kuassé.—Joutel in Margry, Déc., III, 289, 1878.

Kuato (K'uatō, 'pulling up from the ground, or a hole'). An extinct tribal division of the Kiowa, speaking a slightly different dialect, who were exterminated by the Sioux in battle about the year 1780. On this occasion, according to tradition, the Kiowa were attacked by an overwhelming force of Sioux and prepared to retreat, but the chief of the Kuato exhorted his people not to run, "because, if they did, their relatives in the other world would not receive them." So they stood their ground and were killed, while the others of the tribe escaped. Their place in the tribal camp circle is not known.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1080, 1896.

Kuaua. A former Tigua pueblo, the ruins of which lie n. of the bridge across the Rio Grande above Bernalillo, N. Mex. According to Bandelier the main building, which is of adobe, is one of the largest pueblo houses in New Mexico, but whether or not the pueblo is historic is indeterminable. It is also known by the Spanish name Torreon, but should not be confounded with the Torreon E. of the Rio Grande, in lat. 34° 45'.

Kua-ua.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 225, 1892. Torreón.—Ibid.

Kuaut. A Shuswap village at the head of Little Shuswap lake, interior of British Columbia; pop. 83 in 1904.

Knaut.—Can. Ind. Aff. suppl., 60, 1902. Kroaut.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1883, 189. Kualt.—Ibid., 1895, 361. Kuant.—Ibid., 1898, 419. Ku-a-ut.—Ibid., 1885, 196. Kwout.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1891, sec. II, 44, 1892. Little Shuswap.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1878, 74. Little Shuswap Lake.—Ibid., 1882, 259. Little Suswap Lake.—Ibid., 1879, 309. Sushwap.—Ibid., 1878, 78.

Kuchaptüvela ('ash-hill terrace'). A Hopi village, now in ruins, on the terrace of the East mesa of Tusayan, N. E. Arizona, below the present Walpi pueblo. It was occupied by the ancestors of the Hopi of Walpi evidently at the time of the arrival of the Spaniards in 1540. The occupants abandoned it in 1629, or shortly afterward, and moved to Kisakobi, farther up the mesa.

Küchaptüvela.—Fewkes in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 578, 585, 1898. Kwetcap tutwi.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 18, 1891. Old Walpi.—Ibid.

Kuchichi ('the small ones'). A small rancheria of the Tarahumare, not far from Norogachic, w. Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, inf'n, 1894.

Kuchtya. A prehistoric Acoma pueblo which, according to tradition, was the third village built and occupied during the early migration of the tribe.—Hodge in Century Mag., LVI, 15, May 1898.

Kuechic ('small mountain'). A Tarahumare rancheria near Gumisachic, which is 20 m. n. e. of Norogachic, Chihuahua, Mexico.—Lumholtz, inf'n, 1894.

Kueha ('the murderers'). A division of the Lekwiltok living between Bute and Loughborough inlets, Brit. Col. They are divided into three gentes: Wiweakam, Komoyue, and Kueha. Pop. 25 in 1889. The Komoyue sept of the true Kwakiutl have this name for their war name.

Kuē'qa.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 606, 1891. Kwe-ah-kah-Saich-kioie-tachs.—Can. Ind. Aff. 1889, 227, 1890 (=Kueha Lekwiltok). Kwi-ha.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 119B, 1884. Queeakahs.—Brit. Col. map, 1872. Quee-hani-cul-ta.—Work (1836-41) quoted by Kane, Wand. in N. A., app., 1859 (=Kueha Lekwiltok). Quie-ha Ne cub ta.—Work as quoted by Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 488, 1855.

Kugaluk. A Malemiut Eskimo village on Spafarief bay, s. shore of Kotzebue sd., Alaska; pop. 12 in 1880.

Keewalik.—Post-route map, 1903. Kualiug-miut.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 253, 1902 (Russian denotation in 1852). Kualyugmut.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. in Am., pt. I, 73, 1847. Kugaluk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kugalukmut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kugaluk-mute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 4, 1884.

Kugaramiut. A subdivision of the Malemiut Eskimo on the s. shore of Kotzebue sd., Alaska.—Woolfe in 11th Census, Alaska, 130, 1893.

Kuhaia. The Bear clans of the Keresan pueblos of Laguna, San Felipe, Acoma, Sia, and Cochiti, N. Mex. The Bear clan of Laguna claims to have come originally from Acoma.

Ko-hai.—Stevenson in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 19, 1894 (Sia form). Kohaia-hānoq^h.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 349, 1896 (Laguna form). Kōhai-hāno.—Ibid. (San Felipe form; hāno = 'people'; Kohai-hāno is the Sia form). Kohaio.—Bandler, Delight Makers, 253, 1890. Ko-ha-yo.—Bandler in Arch. Inst. Papers, iii, 293, 1890. Kūhaia-hānuch.—Hodge, op. cit. (Cochiti form). Kūwhaia-hānoq^h.—Ibid. (Acoma form).

Kuhinedi ('martin people'). A Tlingit division at Klawak, Alaska, belonging to the Raven phratry.

Kū'xinedi.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904. Uech-ē-neēti.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 120, 1885.

Kuhlaihi (Kā'lahi, 'beech place,' from kā'la 'beech-tree'). A former Cherokee settlement in upper Georgia. (J. M.)

Kuhlanapo (from kuhla, 'yellow water-lily' [Nymphaea polysepala], napo, 'village'). The name of one of the groups of people who formerly occupied Big valley on the s. shore of Clear lake, Lake co., Cal. Theirs was the w. part of the valley, extending from Adobe cr. on the e. into the foothills on the w., and their territory was definitely separated from that of the Khabenapo to the eastward. From this name Powell (7th Rep. B. A. E., 87, 1891) formed the stock name Kulanapan, which he applied to all of the Indians now usually known by the name of Pomo, and living chiefly in Sonoma, Mendocino, and Lake cos., with a small detached area in Colusa and Glenn cos. S. A. B.

Ghula'-napo.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906. Hulanapo.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 109, 1853. Huta-napo.—Ibid., 110 (misprint). Kuhlanapo.—S. A. Barrett, inf'n, 1906 (lit. 'yellow water-lily village'). Kulanapo.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 77, 1856.

Kuhpatikutteh (Kuh'-pat-ti-kut'-teh, 'squirrel-eaters'). A Paviotso band formerly living on Quinn r., w. Nev.—Powells, Inds. W. Nev., MS., B. A. E., 1876.

Kuilitsh (Ku'-i-lit'c). A former Kuitsh village on lower Umpqua r., Ore.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 231, 1890.

Kuilkluk. A Kuskwogniut Eskimo village on the left bank of Kuskokwim r., Alaska; pop. 75 in 1880. Perhaps identical with Quieclohchamiut (pop. 83), or with Quiechohchogamiut (pop. 65) in 11th Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Kuilkhlogamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kuilkluk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 253, 1902. Kulj-khlogamute.—Ibid., 17.

Kuingshtektaken. A Jugelnute Eskimo village on Shageluk r., Alaska; pop. 37 in 1842.

Khuingetakhten.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. Am., map, 1844. Khuingitakhten.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884. Kuingstektaken.—Tikhmenief (1861) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 365, 1900.

Kuinruk (Kuin-rük, 'sea-hunter people'; Kodiak name). An unidentified division of the Knaiakhotana of Cook inlet, Alaska.—Hoffman, Kadiak MS., B. A. E., 1882.

Kuishkoshyaka. The extinct Blue-corn clan of Acoma pueblo, N. Mex. See Yaka.

Kū'ishkōshyāka-hānoq^h.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 349, 1896 (yaka = 'corn', hānoq^h = 'people').

Kuistitiyaka. The extinct Brown-corn clan of Acoma pueblo, N. Mex. See Yaka.

Kū'ishtit'yāka-hānoq^h.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 349, 1896 (yaka = 'corn', hānoq^h = 'people').

Kuitsh. A small Yakonan tribe formerly living on lower Umpqua r., w. Ore. A few survivors are on the Siletz res. According to Dorsey the former villages of the Kuitsh were Tsalia, Misun, Takhaiya, Chukhuiyathl, Chukukh, Thukhita, Tsunakthiamitha, Ntsiyamis, Khuwaihus, Skakhaus, Chupichnushkuch, Kaiyuwuntsunithai, Tsiakhaus, Paiuiyunitthai, Tsethim, Wuituthlaa, Chitlatamus, Kuilitsh, Tkimeye, Mikulitsh, and Kthae.

Gi-sta'-qwit-mé' zūnné.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 231, 1890 (= 'people dwelling on the stream called Shista': Mishikwutmetunne name).

Ku-ite'—Ibid., 230 (own name). Lower Umpqua.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1857, 321, 1858. Tū'kwil-mā'-k'ī.—Dorsey, Alsea MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884 (Alsea name). Umpkwa.—Bissell, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1881. Umpqua.—Ibid.

Kuiu. A Tlingit tribe and town on an island, also called Kuiu, on the Alaskan coast. The town is in Port Beaulerc, and according to Petroff, who erroneously places it on Prince of Wales id. (unless indeed they were then living at Shakan), it contained 60 inhabitants in 1880. There has been no separate census of them since that time. They are said to have intermarried considerably with the Haida. Their social divisions are Kuyedi and Nasedi. (J. R. S.)

Kouyou.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884.

Koyu.—Ibid., map. Kuiu.—Common spelling.

Kuyut-koe.—Veniaminoff, Zapiski, ii, pt. 3, 30, 1840.

Kuikuk. A Kaniagmiut Eskimo village on the s. e. coast of Alaska penin., Alaska; pop. 18 in 1880, 62 in 1890.

Kuyukak.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 28, 1884.

Wrangell bay.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 163, 1893.

Kuiwanva (Kui-wan'-va). A traditionary settlement of the Bear clan of the Hopi, about 1 m. n. w. of Oraibi.—Voth, Traditions of the Hopi, 23, 1905.

Kuiyamu. (Ku-i'-yu'-mu). One of the two former populous Chumashan villages, popularly known as Dos Pueblos, w. of Santa Barbara, Cal. (H. W. H.)

Kukak. A Kaniagmiut Eskimo village on Kukak bay, s. e. coast of Alaska penin., Alaska; pop. 37 in 1880.

Kukak.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 28, 1884.

Toujjajak.—Langsdorff, Voy., II, 235, 1814.

Kukamukamees. A Kyuquot village on Mission id., Kyuquot sd., w. coast of Vancouver id.—Can. Ind. Aff., 264, 1902.

Kukan ('finger-nail'). An Ita Eskimo settlement near McCormick bay, n. Greenland.—Heilprin, Peary Relief Exped., 128, 1893.

Kukanuwu (Ka/kanuwū'). An old Tlingit town in the Huna country on the n. side of Cross sd., Alaskan coast. Distinct from Hukanuwu. (J. R. S.)

Kukinishyaka. The Red-corn clan of Acoma and Laguna pueblos, N. Mex. See Yaka.

Kū'kanis'hyāka-hānoq^{ch}.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (Acoma form; yāka = 'corn', hānoq^{ch} = 'people'). Kū'kinishyāka-hāno^{ch}.—Ibid. (Laguna form).

Kukkuiks (Kūk-kūiks', 'pigeons'). A society of the Iknunukahsiti, or All Comrades, in the Piegan tribe; it is made up of men who have been to war several times.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 221, 1892.

Kukluktuk. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on the left bank of Kuskokwim r., 30 m. below Kolmakof, Alaska; pop. 51 in 1880, 20 in 1890.

Kochlogtogpagamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893. Kokhloktokhpagamiut.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 16, 1884. Kukluktuk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 254, 1902.

Kukoak (Quqōā'g). A Songish division at McNeill bay, s. end of Vancouver id.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 17, 1890.

Kukpaungmiut. An Eskimo tribe that formerly occupied the country between Pt Belcher and C. Beaufort, Alaska, now much dwindled, having a village called Kokolik at Pt Lay with 30 inhabitants in 1880. In 1900 the tribe numbered 52.

Kookpovoros.—Kelly, Arctic Eskimos, 13, 1890. Koopowro Mutes.—Wells and Kelly in Rep. Bur. Ed. 1897, 1242, 1898. Kukpaungmiut.—11th Census, Alaska, 158, 1893.

Kukuch. The Lizard clan of the Hopi. Kókok.—Voth, Oraibi Summer Snake Ceremony, 283, 1903. Kū'-ku-tci.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891. Kukūte winwū.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 583, 1901 (winwū = 'clan'). Kukuts.—Dorsey and Voth, Oraibi Soyal, 13, 1901. Kukutsi.—Voth, Hopi Proper Names, 89, 1905.

Kukuchomo ('footprint mound'). A pueblo ruin, consisting of two conical mounds, on the East mesa of Tusayan, n. e. Arizona. It was built and occupied in prehistoric time by Hopi clans closely related to those of Sikyatki, with whom they are supposed to have removed to Awatobi.—Fewkes in 17th Rep. B. A. E., 587–588, 1898.

Kukulek (Ququ'lek). A Songish division residing at Caddboro bay, s. end of Vancouver id.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 17, 1890.

Kukuliak. A Yuit Eskimo village on the n. shore of St Lawrence id., Bering sea.—Tebenkof (1849) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kukutwom. (K'ukutwō'm, 'waterfall'). A Squawmish village community on the e. side of Howe sd., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kukwakum ('the real Kwakiutl'). A gens of the Kwakiutl proper, consisting of two septes, the Guetela and the Komoyue. K'ēwā'kum.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 54, 1890. Kukwā'kum.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus., 1895, 330, 1897. Kwakoom.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab., Brit. Col., 1188, 1884.

Kulahiyi (Kā'lāhi'yī, or in the lower Cherokee dialect, Kārāhi'yī, from kālā'hī, a plant used as salad by the Cherokee). A former Cherokee town in n. e. Georgia, from which Currahee mtn. takes its name. (J. M.)

Kulaiapto. A former Maidu village between Mooretown and the village of Tsuka, Butte co., Cal.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pl. xxxviii, 1905.

Kulaken (K'u'laqEn). A Squawmish village community on Burrard inlet, Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 475, 1900.

Kulanapan Family. Adopted by Powell (7th Rep. B. A. E., 87, 1891) as the name of a linguistic family in Sonoma, Lake, and Mendocino cos., Cal., comprising the group of tribes generally known as Pomo, q. v. See also Kulhanapo.

× Kula-napo.—Gibbs in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 421, 1853 (the name of one of the Clear Lake bands). > Mendocino (?).—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 77, 1856 (name suggested for Choweshak, Batemdaikai, Kulanapo, Yukai, and Khwaklamayu languages); Latham, Opuscula, 343, 1860; Latham, Elem. Comp. Philol., 410, 1862 (as above). > Pomo.—Powers in Overland Monthly, IX, 498, Dec. 1872 (general description of habitat and of family); Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 146, 1877; Powell, ibid., 491 (vocabularies of Gal-li-nomé-ro, Yo-kai'-a, Ba-tem-da-kaii, Chau-i-shek, Yu-kai, Ku-lai-na-po, H'hana, Venaambakailia, Ka'-bi-na-pek, Chwachamaju); Gatschet in Mag. Am. Hist., 16, 1877 (gives habitat and enumerates tribes of family); Gatschet in Beach, Ind. Miscel., 436, 1877; Keane, in Stanford, Compend., Cent. and So. Am., app., 476, 1878 (includes Castel Pomos, Ki, Cahto, Choam, Chadelá, Matomey Ki, Usal or Calamet, Shebalne Pomos, Gallinomeros, Sanel, Sococas, Lamas, Comachos). < Pomo.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, III, 566, 1882 (includes Ukiah, Gallinomero, Masallamagoon, Gualala, Matole, Kulanapo, Sané, Yonios, Choweshak, Batemdaikae, Chocuyem, Olamentke, Kainamare, and Chwachamaju; of these, Chocuyem and Olamentke are Moquelumnan). = Kulanapan.—Powell in 7th Rep. B. A. E., 87, 1891.

Kulatsen (Ku'latEn). A Squawmish village community on the e. side of Howe sd., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kulchana ('strangers': Ahtena name), A nomadic Athapascan tribe in Alaska.

living about the headwaters of Kuskokwim r., holding little intercourse with neighboring peoples. They are now a remnant, numbering about 300 (11th Census, Alaska, 1866, 1893), but were once formidable enemies of the Russians. Khunanilinde and Tochotno were two of their villages known to Zagoskin in 1843. Calcharnies.—Allen, Rep., 132, 1887. Colcharney.—Ibid., note. Colching.—Mahoney in Ind. Aff. Rep., 1869, 574, 1870. Coltshanie.—Latham in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., i, 183, 1848. Galcini.—Dawydow in Radloff, Wörterb. d. Kinai-Spr., 29, 1874. Galtzanen.—Richardson, Aret. Exped., i, 402, 1851. Galzanen.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 7, 1855. Galzani.—Scouler (1846) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., i, 232, 1848. Ghuil-chan.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 164, 1884 (trans. 'tundra people'). Goltzane.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff, ibid., 37. Golzan.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 68, 1856. Golzanen.—Radloff, op. cit. Kal-chaina.—Dall in Proc. Am. A. S., 378, 1885. Kcal tana.—Dawydow in Radloff, Wörterb. d. Kinai-Spr., 29, 1874. Khuilchan.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 162, 1884. Khuilchana.—Ibid., map. Kolchane.—Ibid., 162. Kolchans.—Scouler in Jour. Geog. Soc. Lond., xi, 218, 1841. Kolchina.—Dall in Proc. Am. A. S., 1869, 270, 1870 (Russian name). Kolshani.—Latham (1845) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., 187, 1848. Koltshanes.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 62, 1881. Koltshane.—Baneroff, Nat. Races, i, 134, 1874. Koltshanen.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 7, 1855. Koltshaner.—Erman, Archiv, vii, 128, 1849. Koltshan.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 63, 1856. Koltshanen.—Richardson, Aret. Exped., i, 402, 1851. Koltshanes.—Baneroff, Nat. Races, i, 116, 1874. Koltshani.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 68, 1856. Koltshany.—Latham (1845) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., i, 190, 1848. Ktzialtana.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 162, 1884. Kuskokwim.—Latham, Essays, 269, 1860. Kuskoquimers.—Ibid., 270. Uitschna.—Wrangell quoted by Baer and Helmerson, Beiträge, i, 110, 1839. Uitzchna.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 164, 1884 (trans. 'slaves').

Kulkumish (Kulkumic). A former Maidu village near Colfax, Placer co., Cal.—Dixon in Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., xvii, pl. xxxviii, 1905.

Kullahan (Kul-la-han, 'stockade'). The site of an old village of the Semiahmoo.—Gibbs, Clallam and Lummi, 37, 1863.

Kulleets. A Cowichan tribe on Chimenes bay, Vancouver id.; pop. 68 in 1904.

Ku-lees.—Can. Ind. Aff. for 1879, 308. Ku-leets.—Ibid., 1880, 316. Kulleets.—Ibid., 1901, pt. ii, 164. Q'ale'ts.—Boas, MS., B. A. E., 1887.

Kulomum (Ku-lo'-mum). A division of Maidu living formerly at Susanville, Lassen co., Cal.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 282, 1877.

Kuloskop. See Nanabozo.

Kulsetsi (Kalsetsi, 'honey-locust place'; but as kalsetsi, the word for honey-locust, is also used for sugar, the local name has commonly been rendered Sugartown by traders). The name of several former settlement places in the old Cherokee country. One was on Keowee r., near the present Fall cr., in Oconee co., S. C.; another was on Sugartown or Cullasagee (Kulséti) cr., near the present Franklin, in Macon co., N. C.; a third was on Sugartown cr. near the present Morganton, in Fannin co., Ga.—Mooney in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 525, 1900.

Culsagee.—Common map form. Kulsage.—Bartram, Travels, 372, 1792.

Kulstgeush ('badger standing in the water'). A Klamath settlement on Willamson r., Lake co., s. w. Oreg.

Kulsam-Tgé-us.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., ii, pt. i, xxix, 1890. Kuls-Tgé-ush.—Ibid.

Kulsua (Kul-swä, 'sun'). A gens of the Miami (q. v.).—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 168, 1877.

Kultuk. A Knaikhotana village, of 17 natives in 1880, on the e. side of Cook inlet, Alaska.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 29, 1884.

Kulukak. A Togiagmiut village on Kulukak bay, Alaska; pop. 65 in 1880.

Kulluk.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884.

Kulul. A former village of the Kalendruk division of the Costanoan family, connected with San Carlos mission, Cal. Culul.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Apr. 20, 1860.

Kulumi. A former small upper Creek town on the right bank of lower Tallapoosa r., in n. Montgomery co., Ala., w. of and contiguous to Fushihatchi. Hawkins, in 1799, saw there a conical mound 30 ft in diameter opposite the town square. A part of the inhabitants had settled on Likasa cr. Remains of "Old Coolome town" were on the opposite side of Tallapoosa r. at the time of Bartram's visit in 1791. After the war of 1813-14 the inhabitants of Kulumi joined the Seminole in a body. (A. S. G.)

Caloumas.—Bartram, Voy., i, map, 1799 (erroneously on the Chattahoochee). Colemmys.—Cornell (1793) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., i, 384, 1832. Collamee.—Jefferys, Am. Atlas, map 5, 1776. Colomga.—Lattre, Carte des Etats-Unis, 1784. Colomiesk.—Robin, Voy., ii, map, 1807. Coolamies.—Swan (1791) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 262, 1855. Coolome.—Bartram, Travels, 394, 395, 448, 461, 1791. Coolooma.—Hawkins (1813) in Am. State Pap., Ind. Aff., i, 854, 1832. Coo-loo-me.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 25, 33, 52, 1848. Culloumas.—Alcedo, Dic. Geog., i, 719, 1786. Cullowes.—Güssefeld, Map of U. S., 1784 (wrongly placed on Chattahoochee). Kulumi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., i, 136, 1884.

Kulushut (Ku-lu'-shut, 'thieving people'; Kaniagmiut name). A division of the Ahtena on Copper r., Alaska, next to the Ikherkhamiut.—Hoffman, MS., B. A. E., 1882.

Kulvagavik. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village on the w. shore of Kuskokwim bay, Alaska; pop. 10 in 1880.

Koolvagavigamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kulvagavik.—Baker, Geog. Dist. Alaska, 1902. Kulwogwigumut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899.

Kumachisi. A former Yokuts (Mariposan) tribe that lived on Tule or Kern r., Cal., or on one of the intervening streams.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1906.

Kumadha (Kum-ad-ha). Given by Bourke (Jour. Am. Folk-lore, ii, 181, 1889) as a clan of the Mohave, q. v.

Kumaini. A village of the Awani formerly at the lower end of the Great Meadow, about a quarter of a mile from Yosemite falls, Mariposa co., Cal.

Coomine.—Powers in Overland Monthly, x, 333, 1874. Ku-mai'-ni.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., iii, 365, 1877.

Kumarmiut. An Angmagsalingmiut Eskimo village on an island at the mouth of Angmagsalik fjord, Greenland, lat. 65° 45'; pop. 28 in 1884.—Meddelelser om Grönland, ix, 379, 1902.

Kumbatuash. The native name of the inhabitants of Kumbat, a rocky tract of land s. w. of Tule or Rhett lake, Cal., extending from the lake shore to the Lavabeds. These people are a mixture of Klamath Lake and Modoc Indians, and are said to have separated from these after 1830.

Cum-ba-twas.—Meacham, Wigwam and Warpath, 577, 1875. Gúmbatkní.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. II, 160 1890. Kúmbatkní.—Ibid. Kúmbatuash.—Ibid. Kúmbatuashkní.—Ibid. Kúmbatwash.—Ibid., pt. I, xxxiv, 1890. Rock Indians.—Meacham, op. cit., 610.

Kumiýus (K'u'-mi-yús'). A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kumkwa (K'ám-kwá'). A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kumsukwum (K'ám'-sü-k'wám). A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kun. The Corn clans of the Tewa pueblos of San Juan and Santa Clara, N. Mex. See Konglo.

Khú-tóá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (Santa Clara form; tóá = 'people'). Kún-tóá.—Ibid. (San Juan form).

Kuna-lanas (Ku'na lá'nas, 'town people of the point'). An important family of the Raven clan of the Haida. According to one story it was so named because its people lived on a point in the legendary town of Skena (see Tadji-lanas); but more probably it refers to the point at Naikun where these people were at one time settled. The Teeskun-Inagai, Hlielung-kun-Inagai, Saguikun-Inagai, and Yagunkun-Inagai were subdivisions. (J. R. S.)

Ku'na lá'nas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 270, 1905. Kún lá'nas.—Boas, 12th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 23, 1898. Kwun Lennas.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Canada, sec. II, 125, 1895.

Kundji (Ku'ndji). A legendary Haida town on the s. shore of Copper bay, Moresby id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. The family living there is said to have been the Daiyuah-lanas. Another town of this name formerly stood on the w. side of Prevost id., in the Ninistints country.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 279, 1905.

Kunechin (Quné'tein). A Seechelt sept which formerly lived at the head of Queen's reach, Jervis inlet, Brit. Col. The founder of this division is said to have come from Ft. Rupert.—Hill-Tout in Jour. Anthr. Inst., 23, 1904.

Kuneste (Wailaki: 'Indian'). The southernmost Athapascan group on the Pacific coast, consisting of several tribes loosely or not at all connected politically, but speaking closely related dialects and possessing nearly the same culture. They occupied the greater part of Eel r. basin, including the whole of Van Duzen fork, the main Eel to within a few miles of Round valley, the s. fork and its tributaries to Long and Cahto valleys, and the coast from Bear River range s. to Usal. Their neighbors were the Wishosh on the N., the Wintun on the W., and on the S. the Yuki, whose territory they bisect at Cahto, where they penetrate to the Pomo country. The Kuneste subdivisions are Lassik, Wailaki, Sinkine, Kato, and Mattole. (P. E. G.)

Ken'-es-ti.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 114, 1877 (own name). Kool.—A. L. Kroeber, inf'n, 1903 (Yuki name). Kuneste.—P. E. Goddard, inf'n, 1904 (Wailaki name).

Kung (Qañ). A former Haida town, owned by the Sakua-lanas, at the mouth of Naden harbor, Graham id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. Possibly this is the place referred to by John Work as Nigh-tasis (q. v.), where there were said to be 15 houses and 280 inhabitants in 1836-41. Old people remember 12 houses there. The inhabitants have all moved to Masset. (J. R. S.)

K'ang.—Boas, Twelfth Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 23, 1898. Nigh-tasis.—Work (1836-41) in Dawson, Q. Charlotte Ids., 173b, 1880. Qañ.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Kungaii. The Sweet-corn clan of San Ildefonso pueblo, N. Mex.

Ku'aii-tóá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (tóá = 'people').

Kungfeti. The Black-corn clan of San Ildefonso pueblo, N. Mex.

Ku'feti-tóá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (tóá = 'people').

Kungga (Qa'nga, 'help received unexpectedly'). A former Haida town, occupied by the Kona-kegawai, on the s. shore of Dog id., Queen Charlotte group, Brit. Col. The inhabitants moved to Kloo.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 278, 1905.

Kungielung (K'u'ngielañ). A former Haida town on the w. side of the entrance to Masset inlet, Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Kungpi. The Red-corn clan of San Ildefonso pueblo, N. Mex.

Ku'pi-tóá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (tóá = 'people').

Kungtsa. The White-corn clan of San Ildefonso pueblo, N. Mex.

Ku'tsa-tóá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (tóá = 'people').

Kungtsi. The Yellow-corn clan of San Ildefonso pueblo, N. Mex.

Ku'tsei-tóá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (tóá = 'people').

Kungtsoa. The Blue-corn clan of San Ildefonso pueblo, N. Mex.

Ku'tsoa-tóá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (tóá = 'people').

Kungugemiut. A division of the Malemiut Eskimo on Buckland r., Alaska.

Kangoot Mutes.—Kelly, Arctic Eskimo, chart, 1890. Kanikgmüt.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. in Am., pt. 1, 73, 1847. Kongigamut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kongigamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 4, 1884. Kotso-khotana.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. in Am., pt. 1, 73, 1847 (Tinneh name). Kungeeg-ameuts.—Hooper, Cruise of Corwin, 26, 1880. Kungügemiut.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., 1, 16, 1877.

Kungya. The Turquoise clans of the Tewa pueblos of San Juan, Santa Clara, San Ildefonso, and Tesuque, N. Mex. See Kuyanwe.

Kunya-tóda.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 352, 1896 (Tesuque form; tóda = 'people'). Kunya-tóda.—Ibid. (San Juan and Santa Clara form). Kurye-tóda.—Ibid. (San Ildefonso form).

Kungyi. The Ant clan of Nambe pueblo, N. Mex.

Kuyi-tóda.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 348, 1896 (tóda = 'people').

Kunhalas (Ku'nzalas). A former Haida town or camp just inside of Cumshewa pt., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col. It belonged to the Kona-kegawai.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 278, 1905.

Kunhittan (Kūn-hittan, 'people of flicker house'). Given by Krause (Tlingit Ind., 120, 1885) as a Tlingit division, but in reality it is merely a name for the inhabitants of a house at Kuui belonging to the Nastedi, q. v.

Kunipalgi (k'uno, k'ono, 'skunk'; algi, 'people'). A Creek clan.

Ku'-mu.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 161, 1877. Kunipalgi.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., 1, 155, 1884.

Kunjeskie. A Tlingit settlement in Alaska; location not given; pop. 150 in 1835, according to Veniaminoff.

Koonjeskie.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. Alaska, 227, 1875 (transl. from Veniaminoff).

Kunkhogliak. A Kaiyukhotana village on Yukon r., Alaska, containing 11 people in 1844.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884.

Kunkia (Q'A'nkia). A former Haida town on the N. coast of North id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Kunmiut ('river people'). An Eskimo tribe living on Kok r. above Wainwright inlet, Alaska. They have been displaced by Nunatogmiut immigrants, and in 1890 had only 3 settlements left, each containing from 1 to 4 families. One of these was Kilimantavie.

Kilauwitawi'nniun.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 44, 1892. Koagomutes.—Elliott, Our Arctic Prov., map, 1886. Koogmutes.—Kelly, Arctic Eskimos, 14, 1890. Kooq Mutes.—Ibid., chart. Kugmiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 162, 1893. Ku'nniun.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 44, 1892.

Kunnas-hadai (Kun-nas-had'a'i, 'whale-house people'). Given by Boas (Fifth Report N. W. Tribes Canada, 27, 1889) as the name of a subdivision of the Yakulanans, a family of the Raven clan of the Haida, but in reality it is only a house name belonging to that group. (J. R. S.)

Kunnesee. See Dragging-canoe.

Kunniwunneme (Kūn-nū-wūn-nē-me). An Oregon tribe E. of the Tillamook (Dorsey, Naltūnnetūnne MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884), identified as in Athapascan territory, but otherwise unknown.

Kunnapiyu (K'ūn-nū'-pi-yu'). A former Yaquina village on the N. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kunstamish (Kun-sta-mish). A village of the Guauaenok Kwakiutl on the E. side of Claydon bay, Wells passage, Brit. Col.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 73.

Kuosugru (Kuosu'gru). A summer village of the Utkiavimmiut Eskimo, on a dry place inland from Pt Barrow, Alaska.—Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 83, 1892.

Kupimithla (Ku-di'-mīl-tā'). A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kuping. The Coral clans of the Tewa pueblos of San Juan, Santa Clara, San Ildefonso, and Tesuque, N. Mex. That of Tesuque is extinct.

Kopi-tóda.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (San Juan form; tóda = 'people'). Kupi-tóda.—Ibid. (San Ildefonso form). Kupi-tóda.—Ibid. (Tesuque form). Kupi-tóda.—Ibid. (Santa Clara form; tóda misprinted for tóda).

Kupkipceock. A village of the Powhatan confederacy on Pamunkey r., King William co., Va., in 1608.

Kaposecocke.—Strachey (ca. 1612), Virginia, 62, 1849. Kupkipceock.—Smith (1629), Virginia, I, map, repr. 1819.

Kuptagok. A former Aleut village on Agattu id., Alaska, one of the Near id. group of the Aleutians, now uninhabited.

Kurni. The Goose clan of the Tigwa pueblo of Isleta, N. Mex.

Kūrnī-t'ainin.—Lummis quoted by Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 350, 1896 (t'ainin = 'people').

Kurts. The Antelope clans of the Keresan pueblos of Laguna, Acoma, Sia, San Felipe, and Cochiti, N. Mex. The Antelope clan of Laguna claims to have come originally from Zuñi and to form a phratry with the Tsits (Water) clan, while that of Acoma forms a phratry with the Water clan of that pueblo. The Antelope clan of Cochiti is extinct. (F. W. H.)

Kūr'ts-hānoqth.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 348, 1896 (Acoma form; hānoqth = 'people'). Kūr'ts-hānoqth.—Ibid. (Laguna form). Kurtz.—Stevenson in 11th Rep. B. A. E., 19, 1894 (Sia name). Kū'ts-hāno.—Hodge, op. cit. (Sia form). Kū'ts-hānuch.—Ibid. (Cochiti form). Kū'ts-hāno.—Ibid. (San Felipe form).

Kusa (Gatschet suggests kósa, the name of a small forest bird resembling a sparrow, or ō'sa, osá, 'pokeweed,' as the origin of the word; but if the people of Kusa are identical with the Conshac of the French, the name would mean 'cane,' 'reed,' or 'reedbrake.' See Conshac). A former town of the Upper Creeks, on the high E. bank of Coosa r., between Columbiana and Talladega, in Talladega co., Ala., between the points where Talladega and Tallahatchie crs. join the Coosa, and on the site of the present Coosa station. The town was once regarded as an important center, a sort of capital. The De Soto expedition of 1540-41 saw it in its flourishing condition, but when Bartram passed it, about 1775, it was mostly in ruins and half deserted, a part of its inhabitants evidently having joined the Abikudshi, while the others went to the nearby Natchez town. Up to 1775, according to Adair, Kusa was a place of refuge for "those who kill undesignedly." The Upper Creeks were frequently called "Coosas," from the name of the town.

Coga.—Gentleman of Elvas (1557) in French, Hist. Coll. La., II, 141, 1850. Cooca.—French, ibid., 2d s., II, 247, 1875. Coosa.—Romans, Fla., 90, 1775. Coosau.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 41, 1848. Coosaw.—Martin, N. C., I, 194, 1829. Coosee.—Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., Ala. map, 1899. Coosis.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1797), 68, 1837. Corsas.—Hawkins (1799), Sketch, 15, 1848. Cosa.—Jefferys, French Dom. Am., map, 134, 1761. Cossa.—Vandera (1567) in Smith, Collec. Doc. Fla., I, 18, 1857. Cousas.—Mitchell, map (1755), cited in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 219, 1858. Coussa.—Coxe, Carolana, map, 1741. Cozas.—Ibid., 25. Curas.—Rafinesque, introd. Marshall, Ky., I, 35, 1824. Cuzans.—Ibid., 24. Koosah.—Adair, Am. Ind., 159, 1775.

Kusan Family. A small linguistic stock formerly occupying villages on Coos r. and bay, and on lower Coquille r., Oreg. (see Powell in 7th Rep. B. A. E., 89, 1891). The name is from that of the tribe, Coos (q. v.) or Kusa, which is said to be taken from one of the Rogue River dialects in which it means 'lake,' 'lagoon,' or 'inland bay.' Within historic times there have been 4 villages in this region in which the Kusan language was spoken. It is probable that at an earlier period the family extended much farther inland along the tributaries of Coos bay, but had been gradually forced into the contracted area on the coast by the pressure of the Athapascan tribes on the s. and e. and the Yakonan on the n. The stock is now practically extinct; the few survivors, for the greater part of mixed blood, are on the Siletz res. in Oreg., whither they went after ceding their lands by (unconfirmed) treaty of 1855. Practically nothing is known of the customs of this people, but there is no reason to suppose that they differed markedly from their neighbors on the n. The social unit was apparently the village, and there is no trace of a clan or gentile system other than the relationships naturally arising in a locally restricted group. It is interesting to note also that the practice of deforming the head was not current among the Kusan, although prevalent among the Yakonan, their northern neighbors. The Kusan villages known to have existed are: Melukitz, n. side of Coos bay; Anasitch, s. side of Coos bay; Mulluk (speaking a different dialect), n. side of Coquille r.; Nasumi, s. side of Coquille r. (L. F.)

Kuseshyaka. The extinct White-corn clan of Acoma pueblo, N. Mex. See Yaka.

Küseshyáka-hánoq^{ch}.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., IX, 349, 1896 (yaka='corn', hánoqch='people').

Kushapokla ('divided people'). One of the two Choctaw phratries, consisting of 4 clans: Kushiksa, Lawokla, Lulakiksa, and Linoklusha.

Kashápokla.—ten Kate, Reizen in N. A., 402, 1885. Kasháp-úkla.—Gatschet, Creek Migr. Leg., I, 104, 1884. Ku-shap'. Ok'-lá.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 162, 1877.

Kushetunne. A former village of the Tututni on the n. side of Rogue r., Oreg. Cosatomy.—Palmer in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1856, 219, 1857. Kas-so-teh-nie.—Gibbs, MS. on coast tribes, B. A. E. Yuc-cé' junné'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 233, 1890. Kwús-se' jún.—Dorsey, Nalutunne jún MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884 (Nalutunne name).

Kushiksa (Kush-ik'-sü). The Reed clan of the Choctaw, belonging to the Kushapokla or Divided people phratry.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 162, 1877.

Kushletata (Küc'-le-ta'-ta). A former Chastacosta village on Rogue r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 234, 1890.

Kushuh ('cottonwood tree'). A former Chitimacha village on L. Mingaluak, near Bayou Chêne, La.

Kúshu'h námu.—Gatschet in Trans. Anthropol. Soc. Wash., II, 152, 1883 (ánmu='village').

Kusilvak. A Chnagmiut Eskimo village and Roman Catholic mission on Kusilvak id., at the mouth of Yukon r., Alaska.

Kusilvak.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kusilvuk.—Bruce, Alaska, 1885.

Kuskok. A Kuskwogniut Eskimo village on Kuskokwim r., Alaska, near its mouth; pop. 24 in 1880, 115 in 1890.

Kuskogamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kuskokkagamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893. Kuskok.—Baker, Geog. Diet. Alaska, 1902. Kuskokvagamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884. Kuskokvagmute.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 74, 1881. Kuskokvagamute.—Hallock in Nat. Geog. Mag., IX, 88, 1898.

Kuskokvak. A (former?) Kuskwogniut Eskimo village on the w. bank of Kuskokwim r., Alaska, near its mouth.

Kuskokvakh.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kuskovak.—Baker, Geog. Diet. Alaska, 1902. Kuskovakh.—Nelson (1879) cited by Baker, ibid.

Kuskunnuk. A Kaialigamiut Eskimo village on Hooper bay, Alaska.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899.

Kuskuski (seemingly from kúshkúsh-kíng, 'hog place'). An important village of mixed Delawares and Iroquois, in 1753-1770, on Beaver cr., Pa., near Newcastle, in Lawrence co. A note in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist. x, 949, says it was at the forks of Beaver cr., in Beaver co. Another authority (Darlington, Gist's Jour., 101, 1898) says it was on the w. bank of Mahoning r., 6 m. above the forks of Beaver cr. and just s. of the present Edinburg, Lawrence co. An older village of the same name had formerly stood on the Shenango, at the site of the present Newcastle. In 1758 Kuskuski was composed of 4 distinct settlements, having a total population of about 1,000 souls. (J. M.)

Cachecachecki.—Vaudrenil (1759) in N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 949, 1858. Cachecachecki.—Ibid. Cas-cagh, sa, gey.—Clinton (1759), ibid., vi, 549, 1855. Coscosky.—Weiser (1748) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 14, 1846. Cuscheuske.—Heckewelder in Trans. Am. Philos. Soc., n. s., iv, 395, 1834. Cuscuskie.—Crogan (1750) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 27, 1846. Cuscaskking.—Pa. Archives, iii, 525, 1853. Cuskuskus.—Rupp., op. cit., 138 (pl. form used for the inhabitants). Cusiskey.—Day, Pa., 62, 1848. Kaschkaschkung.—Leroy and Leininger (1755) in Pa. Mag. Hist. and Biog., xxix, 412, 1905. Kaskaskunk.—Loskiel, Miss. United Breth., pt. 3, 65, 1794. Kaskuskies.—Gist (1753) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 3d s., v, 103, 1836. Kishkuske.—Hutchin's map (1764) in Smith, Bouquet's Exped., 1766. Kshkushking.—Post (1758) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 116, 1846 (u omitted). Kushushkee.—Post (1758) in Drake, Bk. Inds., bk. 5, 39, 1848. Kushkushkee.—Post (1758) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 80, 1846. Kushkushking.—Post (1758) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 103, 1846. Kushuskies.—Smith, Bouquet's Exped., 67, 1766. Kuskuschi.—Heckewelder in Trans. Am. Philos. Soc., n. s., iv, 366, 1834. Kuskuskas.—Washington (1753) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 39, 1846. Kuskuskees.—N. Y. Doc. Col. Hist., x, 949, note, 1858. Kuskuskies.—Lotter, map, ca. 1770. Kuskuskin.—Alden (1834) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 3d s., vi, 144, 1837. Kuskuko Town.—Washington (1753) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 41, 1846. Kuskusky.—Peters (1760) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 4th s., ix, 258, 1871. Murdering town.—Washington (1753) in Rupp, West. Pa., app., 48, 1846. Murthing Town.—Gist (1753) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 3d s., v, 103, 1836.

Kuskussu (Kús-kús-sú). A former Si-uslaw village on Si-uslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 230, 1890.

Kuskwogniut. An Eskimo tribe inhabiting the shores of Kuskokwim bay and the banks of Kuskokwim r. and its tributaries as far as Kolmakof, Alaska. They are the most numerous of the tribes and the least modified through contact with whites. They live in underground huts, with frames of driftwood covered with sods. They hunt the walrus, the beluga, and the hair seal. Sea birds provide them with meat and eggs, and the feathered skins with clothing. The streams and lakes of the interior abound in trout, and herds of reindeer feed on the tundra. Their fuel is driftwood. They drink the foul water of the lagoons, yet are healthy and strong. Every male has a kaiak. Above tide water they use birch-bark canoes. They catch salmon and whitefish in wicker weirs, and trap foxes and otters. There is little that the natives can obtain to sell, and therefore they remain in their aboriginal condition. They are skillful carvers of ivory and wood. The dwellers on the tundra, where wild fowl and berries are plenty, repair with their kaiaks in the summer to trap and dry their winter supply of salmon. Villages on the upper reaches are built of wood, and each has its large ceremonial house in which masked dances take place in winter. Besides the summer houses roofed with sod there are the usual underground winter habitations reached by a tunnel.

The tribe numbered 3,287 in 1899. The Kuskwogniut villages are as follows: Agomekelenanak, Agulakpak, Aguliak, Agumak, Akiachak, Akiak, Aklut, Akmiut, Anagok, Apahiachak, Apokak, Atchaluk, Bethel, Chimiak, Chuarlilitik, Ekaluktaluk, Etoluk, Igiachak, Iliutak, Kahmiut, Kakuaiak, Kakuikak, Kaltshak, Kaluktuk, Kamegli, Kanagak, Kanak, Kenachananak, Kiktak, Kinak, Kinegnagak, Kinegnak, Klechakuk, Kleguchek, Klutak, Kolmakof, Kongiganak, Kuilkluk, Kukulktuk, Kulvagavik, Kuskok, Kuskokvak, Kweleluk, Kwik, Kwikak, Kwilokuk, Kwinak, Lomavik, Mumtrak, Mumtrelek, Nak, Nakolkavik, Napai, Napaikak, Napakiak, Nochak, Novoktolak, Okaganak, Oknagak, Oyak, Papka, Shevenak, Shimiak, Shokiak, Takiketak, Togiariatsorik, Tuklak, Tularka, Tuluksak, Tunagak, Ugovik, Uknavik, Ulolak, Vinasale, and Yakchilak. Agulmüt.—Holmberg quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 18, 1877. Inkaliten.—Wrangell quoted by Dall, ibid. Koskoquims.—Elliott, Cond. Aff. in Alaska, 29, 1875. Kouskokhanttes.—Lutke, Voyage, i, 181, 1835 (seemingly identical). Kuschkukchwak-muten.—Wrangell, Ethnog. Nachr., 127, 1839. Kushokwagmut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kusko küax tana.—Doroschin in Radloff, Wörterb. d. Kinai-Spr., 29, 1874 (Kinai name). Kuskokwagmut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pl. ii, 1899. Kuskokwigmjuten.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 5, 1855. Kuskokwim.—Nelson in Soc. Roy. Belge de Geog., 318, 1901. Kuskokwimer.—Wrangell, Ethnog. Nachr., 121, 1839. Kuskokwigmjuts.—Turner quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 18, 1877. Kuskokwims.—Latham (1845) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., i, 185, 1848. Kuskokwimtsi.—Worman quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 18, 1877. Kuskutshewak.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., i, 364, 1851. Kuskutshewak.—Latham, Elem. Comp. Philol., 386, 1862. Kuskwögmuts.—Dall in Proc. A. A. S., 267, 1869.

Kustahekdaan (Kastaxé-xda-än). A former Tlingit town in the Sitka country, Alaska. (J. R. S.)

Kustatan. A Knaiakhotana village, of 45 natives in 1890, on the w. side of Cook inlet, Alaska.—11th Census, Alaska, 163, 1893.

Kuta. Said to be a clan of the pueblo of Santo Domingo, N. Mex. The name refers to either the sagebrush or the sunflower.—Bourke, Moquis of Arizona, 13, 1884.

Shipi.—Bourke, ibid. (Kuta or).

Kutaiimiks (Kut'-ai-im-iks, 'they do not laugh'). A division of the Piegan tribe of the Siksika, q. v.

Don't Laugh.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 225, 1892. Ká-ti'-ya-ye-mix.—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 171, 1877 (= 'never laugh'). Ko-te'-yi-miks.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 264, 1862 (= 'the band that do not laugh'). Kut'-ai-im-iks.—Grinnell, op. cit., 209. The People that don't laugh.—Culbertson in Smithsonian. Rep. 1850, 144, 1851.

Kutaisotsiman ('no parfleche'). A division of the Piegan tribe of the Siksika. Kut-ai-sot'-si-man.—Grinnell, Blackfoot Lodge Tales, 209, 1892. No Parfleche.—Ibid., 225.

Kutauwa. A former Alsea village on the n. side of Alsea r., Oreg., at its mouth. Kú-tau'-wá.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, iii, 229, 1890. Necketo.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., ii, 118, 1814. Neeketoos.—Ibid., II, 592, 1817. Neeketoos.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 371, 1822. Neeketoos.—Lewis and Clark, Exped., II, 473, 1814.

Kutawichasha ('lowland people'). One of the two chief local divisions of the Brulé Teton Sioux, formerly inhabiting the bottom lands along Missouri r.

Coutah-wee-cha-cha.—Corliss, Lacotah MS. vocab., B. A. E., 106, 1874. Kud-witeaca.—Dorsey in 15th Rep. B. A. E., 218, 1897. Kuta-witeaca.—Ibid. Kunwica'sa.—Iapi Oaye, XII, 12, 1884. Kuta-witeaca.—Dorsey, op. cit. Lower Brulé.—U. S. Stat., XIV, 699, 1868. Lower Brulé.—U. S. Ind. Treat., 892, 1873. Lowland Brulé.—Dorsey, op. cit. Toncas.—Corliss, Lacotah MS. vocab., B. A. E., 106, 1874.

Kutchakutchin ('giant people'). A Kutchin tribe in Alaska, inhabiting both banks of the Yukon from Birch cr. to Porcupine r., including the Ft Yukon district. In 1847 McMurray descended Porcupine r. to the Yukon and built Ft

SAVIAH, CHIEF OF THE KUTCHAKUTCHIN. (FROM RICHARDSON, ARCTIC SEARCHING EXPED., 1851)

Yukon at the confluence. In 1860 Robert Kennicott wintered at Ft Yukon, and in 1866 Ketchum explored the country about the fort. In May, 1867, Dall and Whymper (Dall, Alaska, 277, 1870) visited Ft Yukon, being the first to reach that point by way of the river. The Kutchakutchin are somewhat nomadic, living principally by hunting and trapping the fox, marten, wolf, wolverene, deer, lynx, rabbit, marmot, and moose. They are traders, making little for themselves, but buying from the tribes which use Ft Yukon as a common trading post. Nakieik, their standard of value, consists of strings of beads, each string 7 ft long. A string is worth one or more beaver skins according to the kind of beads, and the whole nakieik is valued at 24 pelts. Their dwellings, shaped like inverted teacups are of sewed deerskins fastened over curved poles. The women are said to perform most of the drudgery, but the men cook. Lacking pottery, their utensils are of wood, matting, sheep horns, or birch bark; their dishes are wooden troughs; and their spoons of wood or horn hold a pint. Kettles of woven tamarack roots are obtained from the Hankutchin. Jones says they are divided into three castes or clans: Tchitcheah (Chitsa), Tengeratsey (Tangesatsa), and Natsahi (Natesa). Formerly a man must marry into another clan, but this custom has fallen into disuse. Polygamy and slavery are practised among them. They formerly burned their dead, but now use a coffin placed upon a raised platform, a feast accompanying the funeral ceremony. Richardson (Arct. Exped., I, 386, 1851) placed the number of men at 90. They have a village at Ft Yukon. Senati, on the middle Yukon, was settled by them. The Tatsakutchin and Tennuthkutchin, offshoots of the main tribe, are extinct. Eert-kai-lee.—Parry quoted by Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 51, 1892. Fort Indians.—Ross, MS. notes on Tinne, B. A. E. Ik-kil-lin.—Gilder quoted by Murdoch in 9th Rep. B. A. E., 51, 1892. Itch-ali.—11th Census, Alaska, 154, 1893. It-kagh-lie.—Lyon quoted by Murdoch, op. cit. It-ka-lyarün.—Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 30, 1877 (Nuwukmiut Eskimo name). It-ka-lyi.—Simpson quoted by Murdoch, op. cit. Itkpe'lit.—Petitot, Vocab. Français-Esquimaux, 42, 1876. Itkpe'leit.—Ibid., xxiv. Itka'dlin.—Murdoch, op. cit. Koo-cha-koo-chin.—Hardisty in Smithsonian Rep., 311, 1866. Kot-à-Kutchin.—Bancroft, Nat. Races, I, 147, 1874. Kotch-à-Kutchins.—Whymper, Alaska, 247, 1869. Kousheà Kouttchin.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 361, 1891. Kutchaa Kutchin.—Petitot, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1865. Kutchaa-kutchi.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., I, 386, 1851. Kutch a Kutchin.—Kirkby (1862) in Hind. Lab. Penin., II, 254, 1863. Kutchia-Kutchin.—Petitot, Diet. Dènè-Dindjié, xx, 1876 ('giant people'). Kutsha-Kutshi.—Latham, Nat. Races, 293, 1854. Lowlanders.—Raymond in Sen. Ex. Doc. 12, 42d Cong., 1st sess., 34, 1871. Lowland people.—Whymper, Alaska, 254, 1869. Na-Kotchpò-tschig-Kouttchin.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 361, 1891 ('people of the river with gigantic banks'). O-tit'-tin.—Dawson in Rep. Geol. Surv. Can., 202B, 1887. Youkon Louchioux Indians.—Ross, MS. notes on Tinne, B. A. E.

Kutchin ('people'). A group of Athapascan tribes in Alaska and British North America, inhabiting the region on the Yukon and its tributaries above Nuklukayet, the Peel r. basin, and the lower Mackenzie valley. They have decreased to half their former numbers owing to wars between the tribes and the killing of female children. Chiefs and medicine-men and those who possess rank acquired by property have two or more wives. They usually live in large parties, each headed by a chief and having one or more medicine-men, the latter acquiring an authority to which even the chiefs are subject. Their dances and chants are rhythmical and their games are more manly and rational than those of their congeners. They have wrestling bouts which are begun by little boys, those next in strength coming on in turn until the strongest or freshest man in the band remains the final victor, after which the women go through the same progressive contest. They are exceedingly hospitable, keeping guests for months, and each head of a family takes his turn in feasting

KUTCHIN WOMAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

KUTCHIN MAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

the whole band, on which occasion etiquette requires him to fast until the guests have departed (Hardisty in Smithsonian Rep. for 1866, 313). The Kutchin tribes are Tenankutchin, Natsitkutchin, Kutachakutchin, Hankutchin, Trotsikkutchin, Tutchonekutchin, Vuntakutchin, Tukuthkutchin, Tatlitkutchin, Nakotchokutchin, and Kwitchakutchin.

Déhkéwi.—Petitot, Kutchin MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1869 (Kawchodinne name). Dendjyé.—Petitot, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1865. Di-go-thi-tinné.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., 1, 378, 1851 (Kawchodinne name). Dindjié.—Petitot in Bul. Soc. de Géog. Paris, chart, 1875. Dindjié.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 361, 1891. Dindjié Loucheux.—Ibid., 289. Erkiléit.—Ibid., 163 (Greenland Eskimo name). Irkéléit.—Ibid. Koochin.—Anderson (1858) in Hind. Lab. Penin. II, 260, 1863. Koo-tchin.—Morgan in N. Am. Rev., 58, 1870. Küchin.—Ibid. Kutchin.—Richardson, Arct. Exped., 214, 1851. Ku-t'gin.—Morice, Notes on W. Dénés, 15, 1893. Kutshi.—Latham, Nat. Races, 293, 1854. Kutshin.—Ibid., 292. Lo-o-choos.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 27, 1852. Loucheux.—Franklin, Journ. Polar Sea, II, 83, 1824 (Canadian French, 'squint-eyes'). Louchioux.—Ross, MS. notes on Tinne, B. A. E. Louchoux.—Ibid. Quarrelers.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, II, 27, 1852. Sharp-eyed Indians.—Richardson in Franklin, Second Exped. Polar Sea, 165, 1828. Squint Eyes.—Franklin, Journ. Polar Seas, II, 83, 1824. Zänker-Indianer.—Buschmann, Spuren der aztek. Sprache, 713, 1859.

Kutchlok. A former Aleut village on Unalaska, Aleutian ids., Alaska.

Ikutchlok.—Coxe, Russ. Discov., 160, 1787. Kutchlok.—Ibid., 158.

Kutek. A settlement of East Greenland Eskimo on the s. e. coast of Greenland, lat. 60° 45'.—Meddelelser om Grönland, x, 24, 1888.

Kutenai (corrupted form, possibly by way of the language of the Siksika, of Kútonága, one of their names for themselves). A people forming a distinct linguistic stock, the Kitunahan family of Powell, who inhabit parts of s. e. British Columbia and n. Montana and Idaho, from the lakes near the source of Columbia r. to Pend d'Oreille lake. Their legends and traditions indicate that they originally dwelt e. of the Rocky mts., probably in Montana, whence they were driven westward by the Siksika, their hereditary enemies. The two tribes now live on amicable terms, and some intermarriage has taken place. Before the buffalo disappeared from the plains they often had joint hunting expeditions. Recollection of the treatment of the Kutenai by the Siksika remains, however, in the name they give the latter, Sahantla ('bad people'). They entertained also a bad opinion of the Assiniboin (Tlutlamaeka, 'cut-throats'), and the Cree (Gutskiawe, 'liars').

The Kutenai language is spoken in two slightly differing dialects, Upper and Lower Kutenai. A few uncertain points of similarity in grammatical structure with the Shoshonean tongues seem to exist. The language is incorporative both with respect to the pronoun and the noun object. Prefixes and suffixes abound, the prefix aq(k)- in nouns occurring with remarkable frequency. As in the Algon-quian tongues, the form of a word used in composition differs from that which it has independently. Reduplication is very rare, occurring only in a few nouns, some of which are possibly of foreign origin. There are a few loan-words from Salishan dialects.

The Upper Kutenai include the following subdivisions: Akiskenukinik, Akamnik, Akanekunik, and Akiyenik.

The Lower Kutenai are more primitive and nomadic, less under the influence of the Catholic church, and more given to gambling. They have long been river and lake Indians, and possess peculiar bark canoes that resemble some of those used in the Amur region in Asia (Mason in Rep. Nat. Mus., 1899). Of late years many of them have taken to horses and are skillful in their management. The Upper Kutenai keep nearer the settlements, often obtaining a living by serving the settlers and miners in various ways. Many of them have practically ceased to be canoe-men and travel by horse. Both the Upper and the Lower Kutenai hunt and fish, the latter depending more on fish for food. Physically, the Kutenai are well developed and rank among the taller tribes of British Columbia. Indications of race mixture seem to be shown in the form of the head. Their general character from the time of De Smet has been reported good. Their morality, kindness, and hospitality are noteworthy, and more than any other Indians of the country they have avoided drunkenness and lewd intercourse with the whites. Their mental ability is comparatively high, and the efforts of the missionaries have been rewarded with success. They are not excessively given to emotional instability, do not lack a sense of interest, and can concentrate attention when necessary. Their social system is simple, and no evidence of the existence of totems or secret societies has been found. The chieftainship, now more or less elective, was probably hereditary, with limitations; slavery of war prisoners was formerly in vogue; and relatives were responsible for the debts of a deceased person. Marriage was originally polygamous; divorced women were allowed to marry again, and adultery was not severely punished. Adoption by marriage or by residence of more than a year was common. Women could hold certain kinds of property, such as tents and utensils. A wergild was customary. Religion was a sort of sun worship, and the belief in the ensoulment of all things and in reincarnation prevailed. The land of the dead was in the sun, from which at some time all the departed would descend to L. Pend d'Oreille to meet the Kutenai then living. In the old days the medicine-men were very powerful, their influence surviving most with the Lower Kutenai, who still paint their faces on dance occasions; but tattooing is rare. Except a sort of reed pipe, a bone flute, and the drum, musical instruments were unknown to them; but they had gambling, dancing, and medicine songs. The Lower Kutenai are still exceedingly addicted to gambling, their favorite being a noisy variety of the widespread guess-stick game. The Kutenai were in former days great buffalo hunters. Firearms have driven out the bow and arrow, save as children's toys or for killing birds. Spearing, the basket trap, and wicker weirs were much in use by the Lower Kutenai. Besides the bark canoe, they had dugouts; both skin and rush lodges were built; the sweat house was universal. Stone hammers were still in use in parts of their country in the last years of the 19th century. The Lower Kutenai are still noted for their watertight baskets of split roots. In dress they originally resembled the Plains Indians rather than those of the coast; but contact with the whites has greatly modified their costume. While fond of the white man's tobacco, they have a sort of their own made of willow bark. A large part of their food supply is now obtained from the whites. For food, medicine, and economical purposes the Kutenai use a large number of the plant products of their environment (Chamberlain in Verh. d. Berl. Ges. f. Anthr., 551-6, 1895). They were gifted also with esthetic appreciation of several plants and flowers. The diseases from which the Kutenai suffer most are consumption and ophthalmic troubles; venereal diseases are rare. Interesting maturity ceremonies still survive in part. The mythology and folklore of the Kutenai consist chiefly of cosmic and ethnic myths, animal tales, etc. In the animal tales the coyote, as an adventurer and deceiver, is the most prominent figure, and with him are often associated the chicken-hawk, the grizzly bear, the fox, the cricket, and the wolf. Other creatures which appear in these stories are the beaver, buffalo, caribou, chipmunk, deer, dog, moose, mountain lion, rabbit, squirrel, skunk, duck, eagle, grouse, goose, magpie, owl, snowbird, tomtit, trout, whale, butterfly, mosquito, frog, toad, and turtle. Most of the cosmogonic legends seem to belong to the N. W. Pacific cycle; many of the coyote tales belong to the cycle of the Rocky mt. region, others have a Siouan or Algonquian aspect in some particulars. Their deluge myth is peculiar in several respects. A number of tales of giants occur, two of the legends, "Seven Heads" and "Lame Knee," suggesting Old World analogies. The story of the man in the moon is probably borrowed from French sources.

While few evidences of their artistic ability in the way of pictographs, birch-bark drawings, etc., have been reported, the Kutenai are no mean draftsmen. Some of them possess an idea of map making and have a good sense of the physical features of the country. Some of their drawings of the horse and the buffalo are characteristically lifelike and quite accurate. The ornamentation of their moccasins and other articles, the work of the women, is often elaborate, one of the motives of their decorative art being the Oregon grape. They do not seem to have made pottery, nor to have indulged in wood carving to a large extent. The direct contact of the Kutenai with the whites is comparatively recent. Their word for white man, Sūy-āpi, is identical with the Nez Percé Suēapo (Parker, Jour., 381, 1840), and is probably borrowed. Otherwise the white man is called Nūtlū'qenē, 'stranger.' They have had few serious troubles with the whites, and are not now a warlike people. As yet the Canadian Kutenai are not reservation Indians. The United States seems to have made no direct treaty with the tribe for the extinguishment of their territorial rights (Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., 856).

Within the Kutenai area, on the Columbia lakes, live a colony of Shushwap (Salishan) known as Kinbaskets, numbering 56 in 1904. In that year the Kutenai in British territory were reported to number 553, as follows: Lower Columbia Lake, 80; Lower Kutenai (Flatbow), 172; St Mary's (Ft Steele), 216; Tobacco Plains, 61; Arrow Lake (West Kutenai), 24. These returns indicate a decrease of about 150 in 13 years. The United States census of 1890 gave the number of Kutenai in Idaho and Montana as 400 to 500; in 1905 those under the Flathead agency, Mont., were reported to number 554. The Kutenai have given their name to Kootenai r., the districts of East, West, and North Kootenay, Brit. Col., Kootenai lake, Brit. Col., Kootanie pass in the Rocky mts., Kootenai co. and the town of Kootenai, Idaho, and to other places on both sides of the international boundary (Am. Anthropol., iv, 348-350, 1902).

Consult Boas, First Gen. Rep. on the Inds. of Brit. Col. in Rep. B. A. A. S., 1889; Chamberlain, Rep. on the Kootenay Inds. in Rep. B. A. A. S., 1892, also various articles by the same author since 1892 in Am. Anthropol., Jour. Am. Folk-lore, and Am. Antiq.; Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., vi, 1846; Maclean, Canadian Savage Folk, 1896; Smet (1) Oregon Missions, 1847, (2) New Indian Sketches, 1863; Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocab. Brit. Col., 1884.

(A. F. C.)

Catanoneaux.—Schermerhorn (1812) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., ii, 42, 1814 (wrongly applied to Piegan; corrupt Indian with French termination). Catawahays.—Moore in Ind. Aff. Rep., 292, 1846, (misprint). Cat-tan-a-hāws.—Lewis and Clark, Discov., 57, 1806 (said to be their own name). Cattanaahāws.—Ibid. (so called by the French). Cattanaahowes.—Mackenzie, Voy., map, 1801. Cautonee.—Harmon, Jour., map, 1820. Cautonies.—Ibid., 313. Contamis.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, i, 457, 1851 (probably a misprint). Contenay.—Lane in Ind. Aff. Rep., 158, 1850. Contonnés.—Catlin, N. Am. Ind., passim, 1844 (said to be French name). Cootanais.—Ross, Advent., 213, 1849. Cootanies.—Parker, Jour., 307, 1840. Cootneys.—Milroy in H. R. Misc. Doc. 122, 43d Cong., 1st sess., 5, 1875. Cootomies.—Wilkes, Hist. Oregon, 44, 1845. Cootonaikoon.—Henry, MS. vocab., 1808 (so called by the Blackfeet). Cootonais.—Cox, Advent., ii, 75, 1831. Cootonay.—Ibid., 154. Cootounies.—Robertson, Oregon, 129, 1846. Cotonés.—Hind, Red River Exped., i, 152, 1860. Cotonnois.—Irving, Rocky Mts., i, 187, 1837. Counarrha.—Vocabulaire des Kootenays Counarrha ou Skalza, 1883, cited by Pilling, Proof Sheets, 1885. Coutanies.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., vi, 204, 1846. Coutaria.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 402, 1853. Cutenay.—Lane (1849) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 52, 31st Cong., 1st sess., 169, 1850. Cootness.—Bonner, Life of Beckwourth, 226, 1856. Coutonais.—Maximilian, Trav., 509, 1843. Cootonnois.—Pendleton in H. R. Rep. 880, 27th Cong., 2d sess., 21, 1842. Coutouns.—Morse, Rep. to Sec. War, 34, 1822. Flatbows.—See Lower Kutenai. Kattanahaws.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 470, 1878 (applies to Upper Kutenai only). Ki'tōnā'qa.—Chamberlain, 8th Rep. N. W. Tribes, 6, 1892. Kit-too-nuh'-a.—Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocab., 124B, 1884 (applied to Upper Kutenai). Kituanaha.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, 402, 1853. Kitunaha.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., vi, 204, 535, 1846. Kitunana.—Stevens, Rep. on N. Pac. R. R., 440, 1854. Kitunāxa.—Ibid., 535. Kodenes.—Meek in H. R. Ex. Doc. 76, 30th Cong., 1st sess., 10, 1848. Koete-nays.—De Smet, Letters, 170, 1843. Kootenais.—Ibid., 183. Kootenay.—Ibid., 203. Kootinays.—De Smet quoted in H. R. Ex. Doc. 65, 36th Cong., 1st sess., 141, 1860. Koo-tames.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., i, 417, 1855. Kootanais.—Mayne, Brit. Col., 298, 1862. Kootanay.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Feb. 27, 1863. Kootamies.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 460, 1854. Kootanie.—Nicolet, Oregon, 143, 1846. Kootenai.—Brown in Beach, Ind. Misc., 77, 1877. Kootenales.—Gibbs in Rep. N. Pac. R. R., 437, 1854. Kootenays.—De Smet, Letters, 37, 1843. Kootenia.—Emerson, Indian Myths, 404, 1884. Kootenuha.—Tolmie and Dawson, Comp. Vocab., 124B, 1884. Koote-nuha.—Ibid., 5B. Kootones.—Henry (1811) quoted by Maclean, Canad. Sav. Folk, 138, 1896. Kootonais.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 461, 1854. Koutaines.—Ibid., 462. Koutanis.—Dufort de Mofras, Explor., ii, 173, 1844. Koutonais.—H. R. Rep. 98, 42d Cong., 3d sess., 429, 1873. Kūspēlu.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Nez Percé name: 'water people'). Kutana'—Maximilian, Reise, ii, 511, 1841. Kutanās.—Maximilian, Trav., 242, 1843. Kutani.—Latham, Elem. Comp. Philol., 895, 1862. Kūtanis.—Latham, Nat. Hist. Man, 316, 1856. Kutenae.—Maclean, Canad. Sav. Folk, 137, 1896 (Siksika name; sing. Kutenack-wan). Kutenai.—Mason in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1899, 529, 1901. Kutenay.—Brinton, Amer. Race, 105, 1891. Kutneha'—Maximilian, Reise, ii, 511, 1841. Kutnehas.—Maximilian, Trav., 242, 1843. Kūtona.—Hayden, Ethnog. and Philol. Mo. Val., 256, 1862. Kutonacha.—Maximilian, Trav., 500, 1843. Kutona'qa.—Boas, 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes, 10, 1889. Kutonās.—Maximilian, Trav., 245, 1843. Skaisi.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, iii, map, 200, 1853. Skalza.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., i, 416, 1855. Skalzī.—De Smet, Letters, 224, 1843. Skalzzy.—Ibid., 203. Skalsā-ulk.—Gatschet, MS., B. A. E. (Salish name: 'water people'). Skolsa.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., i, 416, 1855.

Kutshamakin. One of the Massachusetts sachems who signed the treaties of 1643 and 1645. He was properly the sachem of the country about Dorchester, Mass., part of which he sold to the English. It was his people to whom John Eliot first preached. Though at first opposed to the English, Kutshamakin afterward became Christianized and served them in many ways, particularly as interpreter. To his killing and scalping a Pequot Indian in 1636 has been attributed (Drake, Inds. of N. A., 116, 1880) the outbreak of a horrible war. (A. F. C.)

Kutshittan ('bear house people'). Given as a subdivision of the Tlingit group Nanyaayi (q. v.), but in reality it is merely the name of the occupants of a certain house.

Quts hit tan.—Boas in 5th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 25, 1889. Xuts hit tan.—Swanton, field notes, B. A. E., 1904.

Kutshundika ('buffalo eaters'). A band of the Bannock.

Buffalo-Eaters.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, I, 522, 1853. Kutsh'undika.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., XXXIII, 299, 1886.

Kutshuwitthe (Ku'-wu-wi'-t'çë). A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kutsemhaath (Ku'tsemhaath). A division of the Seshart, a Nootka tribe.—Boas in 6th Rep. N. W. Tribes Canada, 32, 1890.

Kutul. A Kaiyukhotana village on Yukon r., Alaska, 50 m. above Anvik; pop. 16 in 1844.

Hutulkakut.—Raymond in Sen. Ex. Doc. 12, 42d Cong., 1st sess., 25, 1871. Khutulkakat.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884. Kutul.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kuanguala. A former pueblo of the Pecos tribe, more commonly known as Las Ruedas (Span.: 'the wheels'), situated a few miles s.e. of Pecos, near Arroyo Amarillo, at the present site of the village of Rowe, N. Mex. In the opinion of Bandelier it is not unlikely that this pueblo, together with Seyupaella, was occupied at the time of Espejo's visit in 1583.

Ku-uang-u-a.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Papers, IV, 125, 1892. Ku-uang U-a-la.—Ibid., III, 128, 1890. Pueblo de las Ruedas.—Ibid.

Kuu-lana (K'u'u la'na). A Haida town occupied by the Koetas, in Naden harbor, Graham id., Queen Charlotte ids., Brit. Col.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 281, 1905.

Kuyama. A former Chumashan village near Santa Inez mission, Santa Barbara co., Cal.

Cuyama.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, Oct. 18, 1861. Kuyam.—Ibid.

Kuyamskaiks (Kuyám-Skü-iks, 'crawfish trail'). A branch of the Klamath settlement of Yaaga, on Williamson r., Lake co., Oreg.—Gatschet in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., II, pt. I, xxix, 1890.

Kuyanwe. The extinct Turquoise Earpendant clan of the Tewa pueblo of Hano, N. E. Ariz. See Kungya.

Ku-yan-we.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 166, 1894. Kuyanwe-tó-wa.—Hodge, ibid., IX, 352, 1896 (tó-wa = 'people').

Kuyedi ('people of Kuuiu'). A Tlingit division on the Alaskan island which bears their name.

Kujéedi.—Krause, Tlinkit Ind., 120, 1885.

Kuyikanuikpul. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on the right bank of Yukon r., below Koserefski, Alaska.—Raymond (1869) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kuyuidika ('sucker-eaters'). A Paviotso band formerly living near the site of Wadsworth, on Truckee r., w. Nev.

Cog-er-ee.—Campbell in Ind. Aff. Rep., 119, 1866. Gooyuweewit.—Powers in Smithson. Rep., 450, 1876. Ku-yu-i'-di-ka.—Powell, Paviotso Mts. vocab., B. A. E., 1881. Wun-a-muc-a's (the Second) band.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1859, 374, 1860.

Kvichak. An Aglemiut Eskimo village on the river of the same name in Alaska; pop. 37 in 1890.

Kvichakh.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Kvichak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kvigatluk. A Kaialigmiut Eskimo village in the lake district n. w. of Kusko-kwim r., Alaska; pop. 30 in 1880.

Kvigathlogamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kvigatluk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kvigathlogamute.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 54, 1881. Kvigathlogumut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899.

Kvigimpainag. A Jugelnute Eskimo village, of 71 persons in 1844, on the e. bank of the Yukon, 20 m. from Kvikak, Alaska.

Kvigimpainagmute.—Zagoskin quoted by Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 37, 1884 (the people).

Kviguk. A Malemiut Eskimo village at the mouth of Kviguk r., n. shore of Norton bay, Alaska.

Kvig-miut.—Tikhmenief (1861) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kviguk-miut.—Ibid. Kviguk.—Baker, ibid. Kvigukmut.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. Am., pt. I, 72, 1847.

Kvikak. An Ikogmiut Eskimo village on Yukon r., 30 m. above Anvik, Alaska; formerly a Kaiyukhotana village.

Kvikak.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kvigagamut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1900.

Kvinkak. A Malemiut Eskimo village on a river of the same name at the upper end of Norton sd., Alaska; pop. 20 in 1880.

Kvinghak-mioute.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., XXI, map, 1850. Kvinkhakmut.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. Am., pt. I, 72, 1847. Ogowinagak.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Ogowinagak.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 59, 1881.

Kwachelanokumae. The name of an ancestor of a gens of the Mamalelekala, a Kwakiutl tribe; also applied to the gens itself.—Boas in Petermanns Mitt., pt. 5, 130, 1887.

Kwae (Kwā'-e). A summer village of the Tsavatenok at the head of Kingcome inlet, Brit. Col.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 73.

Kwahari ('antelopes'). An important division of the Comanche, whose members frequented the prairie country and Staked plains of Texas, hence the name. They were the last to come in after the surrender in 1874. (J. M.)

Antelope-eaters.—Robinson, letter to J. O. Dorsey, 10, 1879. Antelope Skinners.—Leavenworth in H. R. Misc. Doc. 139, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1870. Kua'hadi.—Hoffman in Proc. Am. Philos. Soc., XXIII, 300, 1886. Kwa'hadi.—Mooney in 14th Rep. B. A. E., 1045, 1896. Kwahare tetchaxane.—Gatschet, Comanche MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884 ('antelope skimmers'). Kwa'hari.—Mooney, op. cit. Llaneros.—Mayer, Mexico, II, 123, 1853. Noonah.—Butler and Lewis (1846) in H. R. Misc. Doc. 76, 29th Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1847 (probably identical). People of the Desert.—Ibid. Quaahda.—Sec. War in Sen. Ex. Doc. 7, 42d Cong., 3d sess., 1, 1872. Quahada Comanches.—Battey, Advent., 83, 1876. Quahadas.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1869, 101, 1870. Quahade-Comanches.—Alvord in Sen. Ex. Doc. 18, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 35, 1869. Quaha-dede-chatz-Kenna.—Ibid., 9 (a careless combination of Kwahari, or Kwahadi, and Ditsakana). Qua-ha-de-dechut-z-Kenna.—Ibid., 6. Quahades.—Ibid., 10. Qua-ho-dahs.—Hazen, ibid., 38. Quarry-dechocos.—Walkley, ibid., 19. Quor-ra-dachor-koes.—Leavenworth in H. R. Misc. Doc. 139, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 6, 1870. Staked Plain Indians.—Ibid. Staked Plains Omאים.—Hazen in Sen. Ex. Doc. 18, 40th Cong., 3d sess., 38, 1869. Staked Plains Onawas.—Hazen (1868) in H. R. Ex. Doc. 240, 41st Cong., 2d sess., 150, 1870.

Kwahlaonan (Kwa-'hldonan). A division of one of the clans of the pueblo of Taos, N. Mex. (F. W. H.)

Kwahu. The Eagle clan of the Pakab (Reed) phratry of the Hopi.

Kuaja.—Bourke, Snake Dance, 117, 1884. Kwa.—Voth, Oraibi Summer Snake Ceremony, 283, 1903. Kwa'-hü.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891. Kwahu wüwü.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900. Kwa'-hü wüwü-wü.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 403, 1894.

Kwaiailk. A body of Salish on the upper course of Chehalis r., above the Satsop and on the Cowlitz, Wash. In 1855, according to Gibbs, they numbered 216, but were becoming amalgamated with the Cowlitz.

Kwai-ailk.—Eells in letter, B. A. E., Feb. 1886 (own name). Kwü-teh-ni.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 172, 1877 (Kwalhioqua name). Nü-so-lupsh.—Ibid. (so called by Sound Indians, referring to the rapids of their stream). Stak-ta-mish.—Ibid. ('forest people'). Staktomish.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 701, 1855. Upper Chihalis.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., I, 435, 1855. Upper Tshialis.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 172, 1877.

Kwaiantikwokets ('on the other side of the river'). An isolated Paiute band, formerly living in N. W. Arizona, E. of Colorado r. Pop. 62 in 1873. They affiliated largely with the Navaho.

Kuraintu-kwakats.—Ingalls in H. R. Ex. Doc. 66, 42d Cong., 3d sess., 2, 1873 (misprint). Kwai-an-ti-twok-ets.—Powell in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1873, 50, 1874.

Kwaitshi (Kwa-ai-'te'i). A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kwaituki. The ruins of a former village of the Hopi, on the w. side of Oraibi arroyo, 14 m. above Oraibi, N. E. Ariz.—Mindeleff in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 57, 1891.

Kwakina ('town of the entrance place'). A ruined pueblo of the Zuñi, 7 m. s. w. of Zuñi pueblo, w. N. Mex. It formed one of the Seven Cities of Cibola, and was possibly the Aquinsa of Oñate, in 1598. The town is mentioned in Zárate-Salmeron's relation, ca. 1629, hence must have been abandoned subsequently to that date and prior to 1680, when but 4 of the cities of Cibola remained. Cf. Pinawan. Aguinsa.—Bancroft, Ariz. and N. Mex., 136, 1889 (misquoting Oñate). Aguinsa.—Oñate (1598) in Doc. Inéd. XVI, 133, 1871. Quakyina.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Pap., III, 133, 1890. Kua-kyi-na.—Ibid., v, 171, 1890. Kwá-ki-na.—Cushing in Comptendu Internat. Cong. Amér., VII, 156, 1890. Kya-kuina.—Bandelier in Arch. Inst. Pap., IV, 339, 1892. Quakyina.—Ibid., III, 133, 1890. Quat-china.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Eth. and Arch., I, 101, 1891.

Kwakinawan ('town of the entrance place'). A former Zuñi pueblo s. s. e. of Thunder mt., which lies about 4 m. e. of Zuñi pueblo, N. Mex. It is distinct from Kwakina, although not unlikely it was built and for a time inhabited by the people formerly occupying the latter village after one of the descents of the Zuñi from their stronghold on Thunder mt. and the abandonment of the Seven Cities of Cibola. (F. H. C.)

KWAKIUTL MAN. (AM. MUS. NAT. HIST.)

Kwakiutl (according to their own folk-etymology the name signifies 'smoke of the world', but with more probability it means 'beach at the north side of the river'). In its original and most restricted sense this term is applied to a group of closely related tribes or septs living in the neighborhood of Ft. Rupert, Brit. Col. These septs are the Guetela, Komkutis, Komoyue, and Walaskwakiutl, and their principal village Tshais, surrounding Ft. Rupert. Other former towns were Kalokwis, Kliksiwi, Noohtamuh, Tsaite, and Whulk, of which the last two were summer villages shared with the Nimkish during the salmon season. Those who encamped at Tsaite belonged to the Komoyue sept. In comparatively recent times a portion of the Kwakiutl separated from the rest and are known as Matilpe. These and the Komoyue are enumerated separately by the Canadian Department of Indian Affairs, thus limiting the term Kwakiutl to the Guetela, Komkutis, and Walaskwakiutl. In one place it is applied to the Guetela alone. The population of the Kwakiutl proper in 1904 was 163.

KWAKIUTL CHIEFTAIN IN CEREMONIAL COSTUME. (Boas)

In more extended senses the term Kwakiutl is applied to one of the two great divisions of the Wakashan linguistic stock (the other being the Nootka), and to a dialect and a subdialect under this. The following is a complete classification of the Kwakiutl divisions and subdivisions, based on the investigations of Boas: Haisla dialect—Kitamat and Kitlope. Heiltsuk dialect—Bellabella, China Hat, Nohuntsik, Somehulitk, and Wikeno. Kwakiutl dialect—Koskimo subdialect—Klaskino, Koprino, Koskimo, and Quatsino. Nawiti subdialect—Nakomgilisala and Tlatlasikoala. Kwakiutl subdialect—Awaitlala, Goasila, Guauaenok, Hahua-mis, Koeksotenok, Kwakiutl (including Matilpe), Lekwiltok, Mamalelekala, Nakoaktok, Nimkish, Tenaktak, Tlauit-sis, and Tsawatenok. The Hoyalas were an extinct Kwakiutl division the minor affinities of which are unknown.

The total population of the Kwakiutl branch of the Wakashan stock in 1904 was 2,173, and it appears to be steadily decreasing.

Consult Boas, Kwakiutl Inds., Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 1897. For further illustrations, see Koskimo. (J. R. S.)

Coquilths.—Dunn, Hist. Oregon, 239, 1844. Fort Rupert Indians.—Scott in H. R. Ex. Doc. 65, 36th Cong., 1st sess., 115, 1860. Kwā'gūt.—Boas in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., v. pt. 2, 271, 1902. Kwagutl.—Eighty-first Rep. Brit. and For. Bib. Soc., 380, 1885. Kwahkewlth.—Powell in Can. Ind. Aff., 119, 1880. Kwakiool.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 118B, 1884. Kwa'kiutl.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 144, 1877. Kwā'kuhl.—Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 118B, 1884. Kwat-kewlth.—Sproat in Can. Ind. Aff., 147, 1879. Kwaw-kewlth.—Can. Ind. Aff., 270, 1889. Kwaw-kwelch.—Ibid., 189, 1884. Qāgūt.—Hall, St. John in Qāgūt, Lond., 1884. Quackeweth.—Can. Ind. Aff., 316, 1880. Quackewlth.—Can. Ind. Aff., 92, 1876. Quackolls.—Grant in Jour. Roy. Geog. Soc., 293, 1857. Qua-colth.—Kane, Wand. in N. Am., app., 1859. Quacós.—Galiano, Relacion, 103, 1802. Quagheuil.—Sculer in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., i, 233, 1848. Quahkeulth.—Can. Ind. Aff., 52, 1875. Qualquilths.—Lord, Natur. in Brit. Col., i, 165, 1866. Quaqiolt.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, July 19, 1862. Quawguults.—Mayne, Brit. Col., 251, 1861. Quoquoulth.—Sproat, Savage Life, 311, 1868.

Kwakokutl (Kwā'kōk'ūl). A gens of the Nakoaktok, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 330, 1897.

Kwakowenok (Kwā'kōwēnōx). A gens of the Guauaenok, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 331, 1897.

Kwakukemlaenok (Kwā'kūqemāl'ēnōx). A gens of the Koskimo, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 329, 1897.

Kwakwakas (Kwa-kwa-kas). A former village on the w. coast of Gilford id., Brit. Col., probably belonging to the Koeksotenok.—Dawson in Can. Geol. Surv., map, 1887.

Kwaleki (Kwā-le-ki). A former Kawia village in the San Jacinto mts., s. Cal.—Barrows, Coahuilla Ind., 27, 1900.

Kwalewia (Qwal'wā; named from a large boulder in the stream close by). A former village or camp of the Pilalt, a Cowichan tribe of lower Chilliwack r., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Ethnol. Surv. Can., 48, 1902.

Kwalhioqua (from Tkuziyo-goā'ike: kulzi, 'at a lonely place in the woods', their Chinook name.—Boas). An Athapascan tribe which formerly lived on the upper course of Willopah r., w. Wash. Gibbs extends their habitat e. into the upper Chehalis, but Boas does not believe they extended e. of the Coast range. They have been confounded by Gibbs and others with a Chinookan tribe on the lower course of the river called Willpah (q. v.). The place where they generally lived was called Nq'lulá'was. The Kwahioqua and Willpah have ceded their land to the United States (Royce in 18th Rep. B. A. E., pt. 2, 832, 1899). In 1850 two males and several females survived. Hale (Ethnog. and Philol., 204, 1846), who estimated them at about 100, said that they built no permanent habitations, but wandered in the woods, subsisting on game, berries, and roots, and were bolder, harder, and more savage than the river and coast tribes.

Gilá'q'lulawas.—Boas, letter, 1904 (from name of the place where they generally lived, Nq'lulá'was). Kivalhioqua.—Buschmann in König. Akad. der Wiss. zu Berlin, III, 546-86, 1860. Kwalhiokwias.—Morice in Trans. Can. Inst., IV, 13, 1893. Kwalhioqua.—Hale, Ethnog. and Philol., 204, 1846. Kwalikwa.—Latham in Trans. Philol. Soc. Lond., 70, 1856. Quillequeaws.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, map, 96, 1853. Owhillapsh.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 164, 1877 (applied erroneously; see Witlopah). Owllapsh.—Gatschet, Kalapuya MS., 280, B. A. E. (erroneously given as Kalapuya name; see Willpah). Qualhioqua.—Keane in Stanford, Compend., 532, 1878. Qualioquas.—Hale, Ethnog. and Philol., 198, 1846. Qualioquua.—Kingsley, Stand. Nat. Hist., pt. G, 142, 1885. Quillequequas.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, map, 200, 1853. Quillequas.—Ind. Aff. Rep., 214, 1851. Quillequegnas.—Pres. Mess. in Ex. Doc. 39, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 5, 1852. Quillequequa.—Dart in Ex. Doc. 53, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 2, 1852. Tilhalumma.—Sculer (1846) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 235, 1848 (probably this tribe). Tkulniyigoa'ikc.—Boas in 10th Rep. N. W. Tribes Can., 67, 1895 (Chinook name). Tkulziyigoa'ikc.—Boas, inf'n, 1901.

Kwalwhut. A rancheria in N. Lower California, whose occupants speak the Hataam dialect of Diegueño.—Henshaw, MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884.

Kwamk (Kwámk'). A former Alsea village on the s. side of Alsea r., Ore.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kwan. The Agave clan of the Patki (Water-house) phratry of the Hopi.

Kwan wíwú.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 583, 1901 (wíwú='clan'). Kwan wuñ-wú.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 402, 1894.

Kwanaken (Kwán'ken, 'hollowinmountain'). A Squawmish village community on Squawmish r., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kwane (Kwá-nē). A former village at C. Scott, n. end of Vancouver id., probably occupied by the Nakomgilsala.—Dawson in Can. Geol. Surv., map, 1887.

Kwantlen. An important Cowichan tribe between Stave r. and the mouth of the s. arm of Fraser r., Brit. Col. Pop. 125 in 1904. Villages: Kikait, Kwantlen, Skaiametl, Skaiets, and Wharnock. Kikait and Skaiametl were the original Kwantlen towns before the advent of the Hudson's Bay Company. (J. R. S.)

Kaitlen.—Dall, after Gibbs, in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., I, 241, 1877. Koa'antel.—Boas in Rep. 64th Meeting B. A. A. S., 454, 1894. Kuóit-e.—Wilson in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., 329, 1860. Kwaht-len.—Gibbs, MS. vocab., B. A. E., no. 281. Kwantlens.—De Smet, Oregon Miss., 58, 1847. Kwa'ntlen.—Hill-Tout in Ethnol. Surv. Can., 53, 1902. Kwantlin.—

Tolmie and Dawson, Vocab. Brit. Col., 120b, 1884. Kwantlum.—Mayne, Brit. Col., 243, 1861. Kwantlun.—Ibid., 295. Quaitlin.—Sculer (1846) in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., I, 234, 1848. Quantlums.—Fitzhugh in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1857, 329, 1858. Qua'tl.—Wilson in Jour. Ethnol. Soc. Lond., 278, 1866.

Kwantlen. The main Kwantlen village, situated at Ft Langley, on lower Fraser r., Brit. Col.; pop. 39 in 1904.

Kwa'ntlen.—Hill-Tout in Ethnol. Surv. Can., 54, 1902. Langley.—Can. Ind. Aff., pt. II, 72, 1902.

Kwapahag. Mentioned in a letter sent by the Abnaki to the governor of New England, in 1721, as one of the divisions of their tribe.

Ksahapag.—Abnaki letter (1721) in Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 2d s., VIII, 262, 1819.

Kwashkinawan ('is-there-no-water town'). A ruined Zuñi pueblo not far from the Manuelito road, 15 m. n. w. of Zuñi pueblo, near the Arizona and New Mexico boundary. (F. H. C.)

Kwatami ('on the gulf'). A subdivision of the Tututni, formerly living on or near Sixes r., Ore., but now on Siletz res. Parker (Jour., 257, 1840) regarded them as a part of the Umpqua. Parrish (Ind. Aff. Rep. 1854, 496, 1855) placed them in 3 villages on the Pacific coast s. of Coquille r., near the mouth of Flores cr., at Sixes r., and at Port Orford. In 1854 they were governed by a principal chief, Hahhultalah, living at Sixes r., and a subchief, Tayonecia, residing at Port Orford. This band claimed all the country between the coast and the summit of the Coast range, from the s. boundary of the Nasumi to Humbug mt., 12 m. s. of Port Orford. In 1854 (Ind. Aff. Rep., 495, 1855) the Kwatami consisted of 53 men, 45 women, 22 boys, and 23 girls; total, 143. In 1877 (Ind. Aff. Rep., 300, 1877) they numbered 72.

Godamyon.—Framboise (1835) quoted by Gairdner in Jour. Geog. Soc. Lond., XI, 256, 1841. Klan-talalas.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 1856, 219, 1857 (possibly identical). Kwa'-ja'-me-júnné.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 233, 1890 ('people on the gulf'). Kwa'-ja'-mi.—Ibid. K'watimati'-téné.—Everett, Tututene MS. vocab., B. A. E., 183, 1882 ('people by the little creek'). Port Orford Indians proper.—Kautz, MS. Census, B. A. E., 1855. Quah-tah-mah.—Ibid. Quah-to-mah.—Parrish in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1854, 495, 1855. Quakoumwahs.—Domench, Deserts N. Am., I, map, 1860. Quakou-wahs.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 96, map, 1853. Quatomah.—Hubbard (1856) in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860. Qua-tou-wah.—Dart (1851) in Ex. Doc. 57, 32d Cong., 1st sess., 59, 1852. Quattamya.—Parker, Jour., 257, 1840. Saguaacha.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, VI, 702, 1857. Sequalchin.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 233, 1890 (popular name). Sequarchin.—Ibid. Se-queh-cha.—Gibbs, MS. on Coast tribes, B. A. E. Shix river.—Abbott in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1854, 482, 1855. Sik'ses-téné.—Everett, Tututene MS. vocab., 183, 1882 ('people by the far north country'). Siquitchib.—Gairdner (1835) in Jour. Geog. Soc. Lond., XI, 256, 1841. Six.—Ind. Aff. Rep. 300, 1877. Sixes.—Abbott, MS. Census, B. A. E., 1858. Suc-qua-cha-to-ny.—Ibid. Súk-kwe'-tcé.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 233, 1890 (Naltunne name). T'é-ja-júnné.—Dorsey, Chetco MS. vocab., B. A. E., 1884 ('northern language': Chetco name).

Kwatanakyanaan (Kwá-tá-na K'ya-na-an, 'town of the cave-enclosed spring'). A ruined pueblo of the Zuñi, about 40 m. s. w. of Zuñi pueblo, N. Mex. (F. H. C.)

Kwatchampedau ('petota [a plant] lying on the ground'). A Maricopa village on the Rio Gila, Ariz.—ten Kate, in'n, 1888.

Kwatsei. The Shell-bead clan of San Ildefonso pueblo, N. Mex.

Kwatsei-tóá.—Hodge in Am. Anthropol., ix, 352, 1896 (tóá = 'people').

Kwatsi. A Kwakiutl village at Pt MacDonald, Knight inlet, Brit. Col., inhabited by the Tenaktak and Awaitlala; pop. 171 in 1885.

Kwātsi.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 65. Qoatse.—Boas in Bul. Am. Geog. Soc., 229, 1887.

Kwaustems (Gwā⁸yasdemsē, 'feasting place'.—Boas). A winter village of the Koekohtenok on Gilford id., Brit. Col.; pop. 263 in 1885.

Gwā⁸yasdemsē.—Boas in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., v, pt. 1, 156, 1902. Kwā-us-tums.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1887, sec. II, 73. Qoaiastems.—Boas in Bul. Am. Geog. Soc., 228, 1887. Qua-ya-stums.—Ibid.

Kwayo. The Hawk clan of the Pakab phratry of the Hopi.

Kwa⁸-yo.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891. Kwayo wūwū.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900 (wūwū = 'clan'). Kwa⁸-yo wūwū-wū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 403, 1894.

Kwazackmash. Mentioned as one of the tribes that participated in the treaty of Pt Elliott, Wash., in 1855. Perhaps the Squamish. They numbered 42 in 1870.

Kwa⁸-zackmash.—Ross in Ind. Aff. Rep., 17, 1870.

Kweakpak. A Magemiut Eskimo village in the tundra s. of the Yukon delta, Alaska; pop. 75 in 1890.

Queakhpaghamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 110, 1893.

Kwehtlmamish. A Salish division on upper branches of Snohomish r., Wash., now officially included under the Snohomish on Tulalip res. Pop. 66 in 1870. Kwehtl-ma-mish.—Gibbs in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 179, 1877. Kwent-le-ah-mish.—Winans in Ind. Aff. Rep., 17, 1870. N⁸Quentl-ma-mish.—U. S. Ind. Treat., 378, 1873. N⁸Quentlmaymish.—Taylor in Sen. Ex. Doc., 4, 40th Cong., spec. sess., 3, 1867. N⁸quutl-ma-mish.—Stevens in Ind. Aff. Rep., 458, 1854. Nugh-Kwetle-babish.—Mallet, ibid., 198, 1877. Qunkma-mish.—Gibbs in Pac. R. R. Rep., i, 436, 1855.

Kwekweakwet ('blue'). A Shuswap village near upper Fraser r., 11 m. above Kelley cr., Brit. Col. Probably the town of the High Bar band, which numbered 54 in 1904.

High Bar.—Can. Ind. Aff., 274, 1902. Kwē-kwē-akwet⁸.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 44, 1891.

Kweleluk. A Kuskwogniut Eskimo village on a small river in the tundra n. of Kuskokwim bay, Alaska; pop. 112 in 1890.

Kweleluk.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Quelelochamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 109, 1893.

Kwengyauinge (Tewa: 'blue turquoise house'). A large pueblo ruin; attributed to the Tewa, situated on a conical hill, about 150 ft high, overlooking Chama r. at a point known as La Puente, about 3 m. below Abiquiu, Rio Arriba co., N. Mex.—Hewett in Bull. 32, B. A. E., 26, 1906.

Kwesh. One of the divisions of the Tonkawa. (A. S. G.)

Kweundlas (Q⁸wē⁸ w⁸anlas, 'muddy stream'). A former Haida town on the w. coast of Long id., Alaska. It appears in John Work's list (1836-41) as Quia-han-less, with 8 houses and 148 people. Petroff gives the number of inhabitants in 1880-81 as 62, but the town site is now used only for potato patches. It was occupied by the Yehl-naas-hadai, a branch of the Yaku-lanas. (J. R. S.)

Gu-ai-hendlas-hādē.—Krause, Thlinkit Indianer, 304, 1885. Koianglas.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 32, 1884. Kwaihantlas Hādē.—Harrison in Proc. and Trans. Roy. Soc. Can., sec. II, 125, 1895. Qui a han less.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, v, 489, 1855 (after Work, 1836-41). Q⁸wē⁸ w⁸anlas.—Swanton, Cont. Haida, 282, 1905.

Kwewu. The Wolf clan of the Hopi. Kwe⁸-wū-ūh wūwū-wū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., vii, 403, 1894 (wūwū = 'clan'). Kwewū wāwū.—Fewkes in 19th Rep. B. A. E., 584, 1900 (misprint).

Kwiahok. A Chnagniut Eskimo village at the s. mouth of the Kwikluak pass of the Yukon, Alaska.

Kwē-ahogemut.—Dall, Alaska, 264, 1870.

Kwichtenem (Kwi⁸tetenem). A Squawmish village community on the w. side of Howe sd., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kwiengomats (Kwi-en⁸-go-mats). A Paiute band, numbering 18 in 1873, at which time they dwelt at Indian spring, s. Nev.—Powell in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1873, 50, 1874.

Kwigunts. A Paiute band in s. Utah.—Ingalls in H. R. Ex. Doc. 66, 42d Cong., 3d sess., 2, 1873.

Kwik ('river'). A Kuskwogniut Eskimo village on the right bank of Kuskokwim r., Alaska, 10 m. above Bethel; pop. 215 in 1880.

Kooigamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884. Kwēgamut.—Kilbuck cited by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kwigamute.—Petroff, op. cit., map. Kwik.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kwik. A Malemiut Eskimo village on a stream near the head of Norton sd., Alaska; pop. 30 in 1880.

Kooigamute.—Petroff, Rep. on Alaska, 53, 1881. Kuikli.—Map cited by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 259, 1902. Kvigmut.—Zagoskin, Desc. Russ. Poss. in Am., pt. 1, 72, 1847. Kvikh.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884. Kviugmioute.—Zagoskin in Nouv. Ann. Voy., 5th s., XXI, map, 1850. Kwik.—Baker, op. cit. Kvikh.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, map, 1884.

Kwik. A Malemiut village on the w. side of Bald Head, Norton bay, Alaska.

Isaacs.—Map cited by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kwik.—Ibid.

Kwik. A Nunivagmiut Eskimo village on the s. shore of Nunivak id., Alaska; pop. 43 in 1890.

Kwēgamute.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, map, 1893. Kwigamiut.—Ibid., 111. Kwik.—Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902.

Kwikak. A Kuskwogniut Eskimo village on upper Kuskokwim r., Alaska; pop. 314 in 1880.

Kwigalogamut.—Nelson in 18th Rep. B. A. E., map, 1899. Kwigalogamute.—Petroff in 10th Census, Alaska, 17, 1884. Kwikagamut.—Geol. Surv. quoted by Baker, Geog. Dict. Alaska, 1902. Kwikak.—Baker, ibid. Queēkagamut.—Kilbuck quoted by Baker, ibid.

Kwikak. A Chnagmiut Eskimo village on the coast of the Yukon delta, s. of Black r., Alaska.

Kwikagamiut.—Coast Surv. (1898) quoted by Baker, Geog. Diet. Alaska, 1902. Kwikak.—Baker, ibid.

Kwikluagmiut. One of the two divisions into which Holmberg divided the Ikogmiut of the Yukon delta; so named because they inhabit Kwikluak slough or pass.

Kwikhluágemut.—Dall, Alaska, 407, 1870. Kwihluág'emüt.—Holmberg quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 17, 1877.

Kwikoanok (Kwi'koaēnōx, 'those at the lower end of the village'). A gens of the Gnauaenok, a Kwakiutl tribe.—Boas in Rep. Nat. Mus. 1895, 331, 1897.

Kwikooi. A Shuswap village at the outlet of Adams lake, at the head of Thompson r., interior of British Columbia; pop., with Slahaltkam (q. v.), 190 in 1904. Adams Lake.—Can. Ind. Aff., 259, 1882. Kwi-kooi'.—Dawson in Trans. Roy. Soc. Can. for 1891, sec. II, 44.

Kwipagmiut. One of the two divisions into which Holmberg divided the Ikogmiut of the Yukon delta, Alaska; so named because they inhabit Kwipak slough or pass. The name has also been applied to the Ikogmiut generally.

Kwipag'emüt.—Holmberg quoted by Dall in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., i, 17, 1877. Kwipag'müt.—Dall, Alaska, 407, 1870.

Kwilaishauk (Kwīl-aiē'-auk). A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kwilchana (Qwiltca'na, sig. doubtful). A village of the Nicola band of the Ntlakyapamuk, on Nicola lake, Brit. Col.; pop. 111 in 1901, the last time the name appears.

Kinsaatin.—Can. Ind. Aff., 302, 1893. Kōiltca'na.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Ethnol. Surv. Can., 4, 1899. Kuisaatin.—Can. Ind. Aff., 313, 1892. Quinshaatin.—Ibid., pt. II, 166, 1901. Qwiltca'na.—Teit in Mem. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., II, 174, 1900.

Kwilokuk. An Eskimo village in the Kuskokwim district, Alaska; pop. 12 in 1890.

Quilochugamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 164, 1893.

Kwilsieton. A division of the Chasta on Rogue r., Oreg., in 1854, which J. O. Dorsey (MS., B. A. E.) thought may be identical with the Kusetunne of the Tututni.

Quil-si-eton.—U. S. Ind. Treat. (1854), 23, 1873.

Kwinak. A Kuskwogmiut Eskimo village and Moravian mission in Alaska, on the e. side of Kuskokwim r., at its mouth; pop. 83 in 1880, 109 in 1890.

Kwinak.—Sarichef (1826) quoted by Baker, Geog. Dist. Alaska, 1902. Kwygyshpainaigmiut.—Holmberg, Ethnog. Skizz., 5, 1855. Quinehaha.—Post-route map, 1903. Quinehaha.—Bruce, Alaska, map, 1885. Quinehahamute.—Petroni, Rep. on Alaska, 53, 1881. Quinhaghamiut.—Eleventh Census, Alaska, 100, 1893.

Kwineekcha (Kwin-eeek'-cha, 'long body'). A subclan of the Delawares (q. v.).—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 172, 1877.

Kwingyap. The Oak clan of the Asaphratry of the Hopi.

Kwi'nobi.—Stephen in 8th Rep. B. A. E., 39, 1891. Kwi'n-yap wūn-wū.—Fewkes in Am. Anthropol., VII, 405, 1894 (wūn-wū='clan'). Quingoi.—Bourke, Snake Dance, 117, 1884.

Kwisaesekeesto (Kwis-aese-kees'-to, 'deer'). A subclan of the Delawares (q. v.).—Morgan, Anc. Soc., 172, 1877.

Kwitchakutchin ('people of the steppes'). A Kutchin tribe inhabiting the country between Mackenzie and Anderson rs., lat. 68°, British America.

Kodhell-vén-Kouttchin.—Petitot, Autour du lac des Esclaves, 361, 1891 (= 'people of the margin of the sterile Eskimo lands'). Kutch'-à kutch'in.—Ross, MS. notes on Timne, B. A. E. (= 'people in a country without mountains'). Kwitcha-Kuttchin.—Petitot, Dict. Dènè-Dindjé, xx, 1876. Kwitchia-Kutchin.—Petitot, in Bul. Soc. de Géog. Paris, chart, 1875.

Kwimpus ('bear river people'). A Paiute tribe formerly living in the vicinity of Beaver, s. w. Utah; pop. 29 in 1873.—Powell in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1873, 50, 1874. Cf. Cumumbah.

Kwohitsauk. See Wovoka.

Kwolan (K'wo'lan, 'ear'). A Squawmish village community on the right bank of Squawmisht r., Brit. Col.—Hill-Tout in Rep. Brit. A. A. S., 474, 1900.

Kwoneatshatka. An unidentified division of the Nootka near the n. end of Vancouver id.—Hale in U. S. Expl. Exped., VI, 569, 1846.

Kworatem. A locality and a camp or village at the confluence of Klamath and Salmon rs., n. w. Cal., on the e. bank of the former and the s. bank of the latter. The name is not Karok, in whose territory the place is situated, but from the Yurok language spoken farther down Klamath r. According to the Yurok custom, Kworatem, being the name of the place nearest the mouth of Salmon r., was used for the river itself, though always with the addition of a term like umernerī, 'stream.' The name Kworatem was erroneously used by Gibbs for the Karok Indians, and was adopted by Powell in the adjectival form Quoratean (q. v.) as the name of the linguistic family constituted by the Karok. (A. L. K.)

Cor-a-tem.—McKee (1851) in Sen. Ex. Doc. 4, 32d Cong., spec. sess., 163, 1853. Quoratean.—Gibbs (1851) in Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, III, 151, 1853. Quoratem—Ibid.

Kwotoa. A division of the Maidu at Placerville, Eldorado co., Cal.

Kwo-to'-a.—Powers in Cont. N. A. Ethnol., III, 315, 1877. Quotoas.—Powers in Overland Mo., XII, 22, 1874.

Kwsichichu (Kwsi'-jci-jcu'). A former Siuslaw village s. of Eugene City, Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kwulaishauk (Kwīl-ai'-cau-ik). A former Yaquina village on the n. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kwulchichicheshk (Kwīl-tci'-tci-tcēck). A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., below Elk City, Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kwulhauunnich (Kwül-hau'-ün-nit'). A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kwulisit (Kwü-li'-sit). A former Alsea village on the s. side of Alsea r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kwullaish (Kwül-laic'). A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 922, 1890.

Kwullakhtauik (Kwül-laq'-l'au'ik). A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kwultsaiya (Kwül-sai'-yā). A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kwunnumis (Kwün-nū-nūs'). A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kwusathlkhuntnne ('people who eat mussels'). A former village of the Tututni. Kautz, in 1855, placed it at the mouth of Mussel cr., 5 m. s. of Mt Humbug, Oreg. In 1854 (Ind. Aff. Rep., 495, 1855) it numbered 27 persons. If any survive they live on Siletz res., Oreg.

Co-soott-hen-ten.—Kautz, MS. Toutouten Census, B. A. E., 1855. Cosotoul.—Palmer in Ind. Aff. Rep., 217, 1856. Cosulhentan.—Schoolcraft, Ind. Tribes, VI, 702, 1857. Cosulhentan.—Taylor in Cal. Farmer, June 8, 1860. Cosuthenten.—Parrish in Ind. Aff. Rep. 1854, 496, 1855. Co-sutt-heu-tun.—Ibid., 495. Ko-sul-te-me.—Gibbs, MS. on coast tribes, B. A. E. Kwüs-ap' qün yünñe'.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 233, 1890.

Kwuskwemus (K'wüs'-k'wé-müs'). A former Siuslaw village on Siuslaw r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 230, 1890.

Kwutichunthe (Kwüt'-ti-teun'-t'čē). A former Yaquina village on the s. side of Yaquina r., Oreg.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kyakali. The Eagle clan of the Zuñi of New Mexico.

K'yä-k'yäli-kwe.—Cushing in 13th Rep. B. A. E., 368, 1896 (kwe = 'people').

Kyalishi-ateuna (K'yälishi-á-teuna, 'those of the westernmost'). A phratry embracing the Suski (Coyote) and Poye (Chaparral-cock) clans of the Zuñi of New Mexico. (F. H. C.)

Kyamaisu (K'yä-mai'-su). A former Alsea village at the mouth of Alsea r., Oreg., on the n. side.—Dorsey in Jour. Am. Folk-lore, III, 229, 1890.

Kyamakyakwe ('snail-shell houses'). A massive ruined pueblo, built of lava blocks, situated 47 m. s. s. w. of Zuñi, N. Mex. According to Zuñi tradition this settlement, together with Pikyiaawan and Kyatsutuma, was the northernmost home of the Snail people, whose dance is annually performed by members of the Black-corn clan of the Zuñi, who claim descent from the Kyamakyakwe people. The towns mentioned formed the northern outposts of the "Kingdom of Marata" (see Matyala), and were conquered by the Zuñi prior to Coronado's visit in 1540, the "Corn captives" being spared on account of their ceremonies and their advancement in agriculture. (F. H. C.) Cha-ma-kia.—Fewkes in Jour. Am. Eth. and Arch., I, 100, 1891. Kyamakyakwe.—Cushing, inf'n, 1892.

